Mind of the Church

Calmet's Dictionary of the Holy Bible, Complete and Unabridged

Volume I: Front Matter, A to I & J

Augustin Calmet, O.S.B. (1672–1757)

Translated from the author's last French edition by Samuel D'Oyly and John Colson (London, 1732); transcribed in full.

This is not a new translation but the English translation of 1732, transcribed in full. Calmet's text is given entire. Of the translators' own notes, their scholarly ones are kept and marked as theirs; the sixty-one in which they argued against Catholic doctrine are omitted, as are three passages of the same kind in their preface. The text has been read against the printed volumes, and what the transcription had dropped restored from them; the printer's list of errata of 1732 is made in the text.

Offered freely, for the glory of God and the good of souls.
mindofthechurch.com/works/calmet-dictionary

The Title Page

THE LAW WAS GIVEN BY MOSES BUT GRACE AND TRUTH CAME BY JESUS CHRIST. John i. v. 17.

AN Historical, Critical, Geographical, Chronological, and Etymological

DICTIONARY
OF THE

HOLY BIBLE,

In THREE VOLUMES.

Wherein are Explained all the PROPER NAMES mentioned in the Old or New Testament, whether of Men, Women, Cities, Countries, Rivers, Mountains, &c.

AS ALSO
Most of the Significant and Remarkable APPELLATIVES that any where occur therein.

With ACCOUNTS of
All the NATURAL PRODUCTIONS, as Animals, Vegetables, Minerals, Stones, Gems, &c.

The Whole digested into Alphabetical Order, and Illustrated with above
ONE HUNDRED AND SIXTY COPPER-PLATES.
Representing the Antiquities, Habits, Buildings, Sepulchres, and other Curiosities of the JEWS.

To which is annexed,
BIBLIOTHECA SACRA, or a Copious CATALOGUE of the Best EDITIONS and VERSIONS of the BIBLE;
With a large Account of the most Valuable COMMENTARIES, EXPOSITIONS, and PARAPHRASES upon the Whole, or any Part thereof, and the Authors of the same.

AND

An ample CHRONOLOGICAL TABLE of the History of the Bible, a Jewish Calendar, Tables of all the Hebrew Coins, Weights, and Measures, reduced to our own. A Dissertation upon JEWISH COINS and MEDALS; another upon the TACTICKS of the ancient Hebrews, by the Chevalier FOLARD: concluding with a Literal Translation of all the Hebrew, Chaldee, Syriac, and Greek Names in the Bible. With PREFACES proper to each PART.

Written originally in French,
By the Reverend Father Dom AUGUSTIN CALMET, a BENEDICTINE Monk, Abbot of Senones.

And now Translated into English, from the Author's last Edition, with occasional REMARKS, by SAMUEL D'OYLY, M.A. late Fellow of Trinity-College in Cambridge, and Vicar of St. Nicolas, Rochester:
AND
JOHN COLSON, M.A. F.R.S. and Vicar of Chalk in Kent.

VOL. I.

LONDON:
Printed for J. J. and P. Knapton, D. Midwinter and A. Ward, A. Bettesworth and C. Hitch, J. Pemberton, J. Osborn and T. Longman, C. Rivington, F. Clay, J. Batley, R. Hett, and T. Hatchett.
M.DCC.XXXII.

The Dedication

To the Right Reverend the Lord Bishop of ROCHESTER,
Dean of WESTMINSTER,
AND OF THE Most Honourable Order of the BATH.

My Lord,

HE obliging Condescension with which at all times you receive the Applications of Your Clergy, incourages us to address ourselves in this publick manner to Your Lordship, with all the Confidence indeed which so much Goodness can inspire, but with all the Apprehension too, which Men of any tolerable Modesty must be sensible of, who are so well acquainted with the great Defects of their Performance, and the still greater Accuracy of Your Judgment.

Your Lordship doubtless is no Stranger to the Merit of our Author, who has, for some Years, made so considerable a Figure in the Common-wealth of Learning. His Reputation is as universal as his Genius; and we, who think we cannot do him too much Honour, believe we cannot pay a greater Compliment to him, than by introducing him into our Country, under the Protection of a Name so generally respected in it, and so likely to procure him an easy Passport.

This generous Office to a Stranger, in himself so deserving, is suitable to Your known Humanity, which among many other Virtues has so agreeably distinguished You, as to make you in every Change of Situation, the same Object of Affection, and create in the different People whom You leave or settle with, the same Regret or Pleasure.

His Majesty is ever indulgent to his good Subjects; but could not more effectually have answered the Wishes of this Diocese, than by placing Your Lordship at the Head of it, from whose Conversation with us, upon a particular Occasion, during the ill Health of your truly Apostolical Predecessor, we conceived such a respectful Opinion of your Episcopal Qualities, and other Accomplishments which we discerned in You, that from that time, upon the Supposition of a vacant See, the common Voice both of Clergy and Laity anticipated his Majesty's Nomination, and unanimously declared or wished You ours.

What was then passionately desired we now see happily effected; whereupon we congratulate not so much Your Lordship as ourselves, who have so much the Advantage in the Honour of our spiritual Relation to You, and in the many Benefits that may be expected more especially by Your Clergy, from such eminent Talents employed in the common Service of Religion, and their particular Protection.

If Your Lordship is already so much indeared to us, by those Virtues which appeared in the short Intercourse of a few Days, how must our Veneration be increased upon a nearer and more frequent Access to You, when we have the Opportunity to observe You with more Attention, and discover so many more Perfections, which a freer Communication must reveal to us? This we are all confident will be confirmed to us by Experience; but Your Lordship, we hope, will previously give one Test of Your general good Dispositions, by forgiving the Liberty of this Application, and excusing those who cannot suffer themselves to omit such a favourable Occasion, of making the most publick Declarations of their Duty, and professing with the most perfect and intire Respect how much they are,

My Lord,
Your Lordship's most Humble and most Obedient Servants,
Samuel D'Oyly,
John Colson.

The Translators' Preface

The passages of this preface in which the translators warned their readers against Calmet's Church are left out, as are their notes of the same kind; the places are marked […].

THE Publick is at last presented with a Work, which has been long promised, and had been delivered much sooner, if the Persons concerned in it had not been solicitous to procure an Impression of it in English, from the last and most perfect Edition of the Original. The Author thought proper to enlarge his first Design with the Addition of two Volumes, published under the Title of a Supplement, distinct from the two former Volumes; with which these were afterwards incorporated, the new Articles inserted in their proper Places, and the Improvements of the rest disposed according to the References in the Supplement, so as to make one entire Work, reduced under one and the same Alphabet.

How much Delay must have proceeded necessarily from every Variation in the Author's Scheme will be easily imagined by the Reader; who now the whole is at last finished, will, we hope, receive with Candour what is here offered to him with Respect. We shall not, according to the general Humour of Translators, grow tedious with excessive Commendations of our Original: But we may be permitted to acknowledge that Merit in Father Calmet which all the World allows him; and concur with the Learned of all Opinions and Persuasions, in declaring, that he has applied Abundance of good Literature to the Service of Religion, in clearing obscure Passages of the sacred Writings, in reconciling Difficulties and appearing Contradictions, in examining Original Texts, and in performing all the Offices of a judicious Historian, Critick, and Commentator.

[…]

We have not therefore maimed him by retrenching or disguising any thing delivered by him; but in those Articles which have a more immediate Relation to the peculiar Tenets of his Church, we have faithfully expressed his Sense of them […].

[…]

We know the Veneration of all good Catholicks for their Latin Vulgate, the Council of Trent having been pleased to pronounce it Authentick, and to require the publick Use of it in all Offices of the Church, as well as Disputations. It is not therefore strange to find our Author now and then imployed in explaining certain Terms of it, and in clearing Passages of this Translation which are obscured by them. This, though it may seem to regard more particularly those of his Communion, will be found to be a common Benefit to every learned Reader; the Author proceeding often in these critical Inquiries, to illustrate the whole Context, without ever failing to dissipate the Clouds he meets with, and to leave more Light behind him. His Citations are made always from this Version; but as it varies in many Instances from our English Bibles which are copied more exactly from the Hebrew, there is a Disagreement frequently in the References, which we have thought proper to adjust, in order to prevent Confusion. And this Care has in no part of Scripture been thought more necessary, than in the Psalms, the Distribution whereof, almost throughout, is different in each Translation; the English having followed punctually the Division of them in the Hebrew. But of this see more in the Dictionary, under the Article PSALMS.

One thing may be worth observing, which demonstrates the Author's Judgment; namely, that whereas in his Historical Relations he is frequently obliged to give distinct Accounts of the Actions of such Persons as have been almost equally concerned in the same Series of Events; he has separated very artificially what is peculiar to each of them, and dwelt upon such Circumstances as belonged principally to the Person he is speaking of; so giving every one their own, and no more, and avoiding Repetitions, which to one of an inferior Genius had been exceeding difficult. If notwithstanding, any thing should occur which may seem to contradict this Remark, and look like Repetition; upon farther Consideration it will appear to be only a necessary Introduction to what follows, and to be inserted in the Place where it stands, for the better Connexion of the Story.

The Diligence and great Accuracy of Father Calmet has suffered very few Errors to fall from him; some Inadvertencies indeed there are in his Quotations, which we have endeavoured to correct, and more, it is possible, may have escaped both his and our Observation. The Extent of his Undertaking is an Apology for the Mistakes of it, which is a Plea that we, who are his Translators, are in Interest concerned to make as plausible as may be; being conscious, that in our way we have many more Over-sights to answer for, and less abundantly to say in Excuse of them.

If the quick Sale of any Book, and the many Impressions and Translations of it, may be admitted as an Argument in favour of it, this must appear with great Advantage; for within the few Years since its first Publication, there have been several Editions of it in French, one in Latin, another in Dutch, and more in other Languages. The Encouragement with which it has been received in many Parts of Europe, has been looked upon as a Presage of its Succes in this, where Learning of every kind is at least in equal Estimation, where the Men of Fortune and Education are as well disposed to fill their Libraries with what is valuable, and where the Subject of this Work is as much reverenced, we hope, as in any Corner of the Christian World.

We think ourselves obliged in Justice to acknowledge the Assistance we have had from Dr. Arbuthnot, whose elaborate Treatise of the Coins, Weights, and Measures of the Ancients has been almost our sole Guide, in reducing the Coins, Weights, and Measures of the Hebrews to our own Standard. From this learned and ingenious Gentleman we have borrowed with as much Liberty as Father Calmet from M. Pelletier, who in Matters of the same Nature is of equal Authority with him, and copied with as little Scrupulosity. But this we have done chiefly in the Body of the Work; for in the Tables of Reduction hereunto annexed, it was thought expedient to calculate them from the Author's own Tables, with a more nice exactness, the better to express his particular Estimates of the Hebrew Weights and Measures; and the Reader having thus his Choice, may determine for that Scheme which is most agreeable to his own Ideas of these Matters.

The few Notes which are inserted by the Gentleman first named in the Translation are only short Remarks upon Passages which are of different Signification in the Hebrew, Greek, and Latin Texts, or upon particular Opinions and Relations of Father Calmet, wherein he dissents from other celebrated Writers. They are sometimes transcribed from Men eminent for their Authority, and applied as Illustrations; or, where there is an Opportunity, as Confutations of our Author. They are interspersed in the several Parts of the Translation which have passed through the Hands of the Person abovementioned; namely, in the Dictionary as far as the Letter M, in the Bibliotheca Sacra, and in the Dissertation upon the Tacticks of the ancient Hebrews. The Continuation of these Remarks, throughout the rest of this Work, is by the Gentleman to whose Share the other Parts of this Translation have been allotted; who has confined them chiefly to such things as seemed to him of absolute Necessity, or where the Author advances Doctrines contrary to those of the Church of England.

To say any thing more particularly of the Form or Matter of this Dictionary would be a sort of Supererogation in us, the Author having discoursed so copiously of both in the following Preface, to which, without more Ceremony, we shall refer the Reader; desiring him only to correct, as well as to excuse, the too numerous Errors of the Press, the principal whereof are collected in the Tables prefixed to each respective Volume.

The Author's Preface to His New Edition

[The Occasion of this] the Bible which was promised by my Booksellers about the End of last June. It is very well known that I made a Journey to Paris, on purpose to concert with them the best Method in putting out this Edition. I had been thinking of it for some time, and as soon as the Supplement was published I set about it; it is true, I was not expeditious enough to prevent that of Geneva; but then how could I have expected that they who are the Authors of it would have been in so much hurry as to give it us in such an ill-favoured Condition, and disfigure to such a degree as they have done the Paris Edition, which was procured by me, and carried on under my Direction? I cannot therefore think my self at all obliged to them for their Trouble. If they were so desirous of finishing their Work, they should either by themselves or others have performed what I have done, or have given over their Design. I confess there was something ticklish and perplexing to them in this Choice. There is Ground sufficient to presume that the Hope and Greediness of Gain did not permit them to be long uncertain which of these two Resolutions they should follow; for they were obstinately bent upon a new Impression of my Dictionary, together with the Supplement which I had added, without taking any previous Care to incorporate one with the other, as I had recommended in my last Preface; and without new modelling all the Articles, that so a proper Order might be observed, both as to Time and Matter. It must be owned however, that with all the Care they might have taken, with the Help of whatever learned Men they might have employed, their Undertaking was pretty difficult; for besides the moral Impossibility there is of entering perfectly into the Views of any Author, of apprehending rightly his Genius, Style and Plan, no other Person but himself is properly qualified to make fitting Alterations, Additions and Corrections in his Works, and knows well the particular Places wherein it is necessary to insert them.

The Geneva Editors were very sensible of these Difficulties; wherefore to obviate [Advertisement to the Geneva Edition, p. 13.] the Inconveniences, they say, to which in this instance they were liable, they determined to insert every Article of the Supplement in its place, without making any Alteration, and to inclose them all within two Hooks [ ] that they may be the better distinguished from the Body of the Work. But this Precaution is worse than the Inconveniences which they say they would avoid; for how tiresome to the Reader must it be to find himself obliged every Moment to read several times with- out Necessity and to no Purpose the same Thing, and the same Facts, almost always in a confused Order; so that what should be at the Beginning or End, with them is in the Middle, either higher or lower, and never in its proper Place? Ought they not to have foreseen that this alone was sufficient to make their Edition miscarry? If they were so concerned as they are pleased to give out, to save People's Money, they should certainly have suppressed these Repetitions, since thereby they would have really lessened both the Charge of the Impression, and the Expence of Paper.

But what Reason could they have for inveighing as they do against the Plates with which we have adorned and embellished this Dictionary? It is not our Intention to make any Reply to such illgrounded Exclamations: The Paris Booksellers have already done this in a solid Manner, and such as proves that the supposed Unprofitableness of the Prints was not so much the real Motive of these stale and trivial Declamations, as the Design of concealing their Inability to make the necessary Advances for them; and inveigling the Publick with the Allurement of the low Price at which their Work was offered to Subscribers.

Had they considered in any tolerable degree the Relation and Connection of the Cuts with the particular Places of the Dictionary for which they were designed, they might have saved themselves this Confusion. If they have not yet considered this, nothing is more easy than to oblige them to it, and then retort upon them all that they said on this Occasion. What, for example, is the meaning of the Words following in the Article Absalom[1]? They have not altogether expressed my Thoughts in the Order and Disposition of the two Armies; but this was too difficult for the Designer, &c. Or of these in the Article Jerusalem[2]? Some perhaps may think it wrong in the Designer to have placed the Army in Order of Battle before the Contravallation, &c. What can be the meaning of these and so many other Words of the like nature, which are to be read in many Places? You may turn them if you please every way, but without the Help of the Prints they will be of no other Use but to obscure the Text of Scripture, and that also of the Dictionary; they will only puzzle and perplex the Reader, and instead of giving him farther Lights, and assisting him in the Study of the Bible, they will only raise an infinite Number of Difficulties in his Mind, which he had otherwise been without.

It is evident therefore, that the Prints are very serviceable, and sometimes even necessary: They spare all sorts of Persons the Time and Trouble of tiring themselves in a Circle of Reflections to find out the State, Nature, and Disposition of the Things they are reading, and the Manner how the several Facts were transacted: Nay, they give Opportunity often to penetrating Wits of making new Discoveries, or of rectifying those which have been made already. But supposing they do not always produce these great Effects, we may ask the Geneva Booksellers how it came into their Heads to print these Words after they had resolved against inserting those Figures in their Edition, with which they were necessarily joined; for the Suppression of the Cuts by consequence must have occasioned that of the Discourse; or on the contrary, if these Words were suffered to stand, they were inevitably obliged to add at least such Figures as were explained by them. But the Editors have done neither; they were intent upon making all the Haste they could, and so getting the start of this Edition; by this means they have fallen into Mistakes which are very visible, and shocking to Reason.

We need only to pursue their Distribution and Disposal of the several Pieces which we have added to the Dictionary, to discover others of the like nature: These Pieces are no Part of the Dictionary itself, but are as it were Appendices to it. There is always a certain Order to be observed in relation to the Appendices of all sorts of Works; for as the Appendices have the same Aim and Tendency as the Work itself, this End is more or less easily attained, in proportion as this Order is well or ill preserved, of all which the Geneva Booksellers seem to have been ignorant; they have not kept up to this Order; nay, they have done worse; they have separated from the Bibliotheca Sacra the Catalogue or Table of the Authors of whose Writings it is composed, as if they were two different Works: Is this an Argument of their Judgment and Understanding, or that they had any Design of consulting the Reader's Ease, of shortning his Labour, husbanding his Time for him, and relieving him of the most difficult Part of his Task?

For our Part, as it is our principal Care to proceed with Uniformity, Method and Accuracy, we have thrown the whole Supplement into the Dictionary; 1°. By inserting every one of the new Articles in its proper Place. 2°. By digesting anew the Matter of the old Articles and Additions, so that they may make one Body, all the Parts whereof should lie in the Rank and Order which they hold in History. 3°. By suppressing all the Repetitions that were in the Supplement. 4°. By correcting the Chronological Table of the History of the Bible, and augmenting it with several important Facts. 5°. By presenting the Publick with a new Bibliotheca Sacra; for our Additions to that which we at first published are so numerous and considerable, and the Plan which we have followed so different, that we can assure the Reader, that this Part of our Work has altogether the Air of something new. 6o. Lastly, by adding to all this a new Dissertation on the Hebrew Coins.

We say nothing here of the historical Flourishes placed before every Alphabetical Letter, nor of the Geographical Maps, or great Number of Prints, which are all Pieces that come from a good Hand, to the perfecting of which nothing has been spared either by the Articers or Paris Booksellers who concur'd with them in this Design. The Prints are of two Sorts; some represent the Antiquities of the Hebrews, their Dresses, Ceremonies, Temples, Synagogues, Tombs, and Musical Instruments; the Plans and Elevations of the Cities and principal Places in the Holy Land. Others set before us the Marches of Armies, the Sieges, Camps, and Orders of Battle, whereof there are Descriptions in many Places of the Scripture, circumstantial enough to enable one to argue from them with solidity; all this therefore we pass over, that we may enter upon a more particular Account concerning the Nature of this Dictionary.

Since the Publication of our literal Comment upon all the Books of the Old and New Testament, many learned Men have represented to us, that the World had no Reason to be entirely satisfied with those Dictionaries of the Bible, which had hitherto been printed; and that a Work of this nature would give us an Opportunity to treat of many new Subjects, which could not come under Consideration in the Body of our Comment, nor in the Dissertations that go along with it. That by this Means we should do an important Service to the Publick, by procuring a Collection in one Work of all that is most useful in our Comment, and of many Things besides, which are of Consequence for the Study of Holy Scripture; that abundance of Persons who were without the Comment, would be very glad to have the Advantage of the Dictionary, which would contain the Substance of it, and supply the Place of many other Books; and lastly, that they who had been at the Expence of purchasing our Comment, would receive a Dictionary with Pleasure wherein Matters are accurately treated of, and with the Addition of solid Proofs and Arguments.

Such convincing Reasons, together with the Authority of the Persons who proposed them, have determined us to enter upon this difficult Undertaking; and tho' a Work of so much Length and Tediousness must necessarily have been very disagreeable, we yet think ourselves obliged to those who first suggested the Design of it, since thereby we have been unavoidably engaged in the Observation of many new things which otherwise perhaps had been intirely neglected by us: And farther, we have had an Opportunity of reviewing many Places of our Comment, wherein we have discovered some Faults, which, unless we had made those new Enquiries and Reflections that arose very naturally from the Matter we were handling, had been overlooked by us. Lastly, the large and beautiful Library belonging to the Abby of Moyenmontier, where we composed this Work, and the Tranquillity which we enjoyed in this Solitude, have enabled us to perfect it in such a Manner as we never could have done in a Place more open to Interruptions, and less furnished with good Books.

When we engaged in this Undertaking, we considered these two Things; first, the general Duty of one employed about a Dictionary; and, secondly, what it is that distinguishes a Dictionary of the Bible from all other Works of the like Nature. As to a Dictionary in general, whoever would succeed in writing one, should take care that the Notions to be given of the Terms and Things spoken of should be clear and distinct; that an Account should be inserted of their Etymologies, Definitions, Descriptions and Divisions; that Confusion, a too great Enlargement upon Things, and an excessive Brevity are to be avoided; that what is advanced be maintained by good and succinct Arguments; and because it is not proper that Things should be discoursed on at their full Length, such Authors should be directed to as have written best upon them, and the Readers referr'd to the Originals. Lastly, tho' in Works of this kind a world of things are heaped together, and Facts very different ferent from one another, yet it should be so managed, that the same System of Chronology, Geography, Divinity and Philosophy should visibly prevail throughout; and particularly, that Conjectures should not be offered as Certainties; for the first Idea of a Dictionary supposes it to be the Standard of Language, and a Rule whereby to judge of the truest and most common Notions.

[The End of a Dictionary of the Bible.] As the Matter of the Bible is almost infinitely extensive, it either might be all entirely comprehended in a Dictionary, or some part of it only might be reserved for such a Design. The Hebrew Dictionaries are Dictionaries of the Bible, inasmuch as they explain the Hebrew Words which are to be found in the Original Text of the Old Testament. Pasor's does the same for the Greek Text of the New.

The several Hebrew, Greek and Latin Concordances of the Old and New Testament may be reduced to the same Class, since they severally include all the Words of these Texts in an alphabetical Order.

Cardinal Hugo of S. Cher, a Dominican Monk, who died in 1261, or 1262, is thought to be the first Author of these Concordances.[3] He composed his of all the declinable Words to be met with in the Bible; and for the carrying on this laborious and great Work the more sucessfully, we are told that he distributed it among five hundred Monks of his Order, who being divided in several Monasteries, had each a certain Number of Words assigned them, which they were to reduce into an alphabetical Order.

Conrad of Halberstadt, a Dominican likewise, added the undeclinable Words to these. He lived about the Year 1290; and to him Trithemius[4] attributes the very Invention of Concordances. Others make one Arlot, of the Minor Brothers Order, who flourished in 1290, to be the first Author of them.

Rabbi Gedaliah affirms, that Rabbi Nathan borrowed the Design of his Hebrew Concordances, composed in 1438, from those of Father Arlot. But it is much more probable that Cardinal Hugo first invented this kind of Work, and that Conrad of Halberstadt and Arlot only brought it to Perfection.

During the Council of Basil in 1430, John of Segovia[5] added to the old Concordances an alphabetical Table of the undeclinable Particles[6], which have been often printed separately, at the End of the Latin Concordances; and at last being reduced into an alphabetical Order, they were placed with the declinable Words in the Body of the new Editions of Concordances.

Since this time, Works of this Sort have been brought to much greater Perfection. The most eminent Printers have endeavoured with Emulation to make them more correct, more accurate, and more easy. At first it was thought sufficient to specify the Chapter wherein the Word occurr'd, with an a, b, c, d, as Marks to point out the Beginning, the Middle, or the End of the Chapter: But after Robert Stephens, in 1545, had distinguished the Bible by Verses, the Verses likewise began to be marked, and the Letters in the Editions of the Concordances to be suppress'd; and in 1555 the same Printer published his fine Concordance, wherein the Chapters and Verses are exactly distinguished.

George Bullocus had his Concordance printed at Antwerp by Plantin, in 1572, with this Title, OEconomia Methodica Concordantiarum Scripturæ Sacræ, wherein he reduces under certain Titles, for the Benefit of Preachers, whatever is to be observed upon the Word in question; for Example, under Evangelium, he shews not only the Places wherein this Term is expresly to be found, but those likewise wherein it is implied, or signified by some other Word of the like Sense and Meaning, whether in the Old or New Testament; for Example, Verbum Dei, Veritas, Testimonium, Regula, Jugum, Pactum, Justitia, &c. Testamentum, Fœdus, Testimonium, Jusjurandum, Ritus, Solemnitas, Scriptura, Scriptum, Scriptor, Liber, &c. A Work very useful to Preachers, and those who discourse on moral Subjects, but inconvenient for its Length, and the too great Niceness and Exactness of its Method.

Gaspar de Zamora, a Spanish Jesuit, who died in 1621, made likewise a Concordance, which was published at Rome by Zannet, in 1627, under this Title, Concordantiæ Bibliorum majores cum narratione de iisdem Concordantiis per Gaspa-rem de Zamora. This Edition is well esteemed, but is too large, and too much perplexed with Divisions and Subdivisions.

I say nothing here of the Concordances published in French, German, Flemish and English, the Catalogue and Editions of these, as well as of the Latin Concordances, cordances, may be seen in the Bibliotheca Sacra of Le Long, a Father of the Oratory, t. 2. from p. 331, to 341.

The Example of the Latins raised an Inclination in the Greeks to compose Concordances likewise in their Language. Euthalius Rhodius, a Greek Monk of the Order of St. Basil, made a Greek Concordance of the whole Bible, in the Year of our Lord 1300; but this was never printed.

Conrad Kircher, a Protestant of Augsbourg, is celebrated for his Greek Concordance of the Old Testament, printed at Frankfort in two Volumes, Quarto, in the Year 1602. The Author has inserted first the Hebrew Words, then the Greek, in an alphabetical Order, according to the Interpretation of the Septuagint, and other Greek Interpreters. At the End of the second Volume there is an alphabetical Table of the Greek Words which refer to the Hebrew, whereby the Body of his Concordance begins.

This Work was reprinted in Holland, in two Volumes, Folio, in the Year 1718; but the Method of it has been changed by Trommius, who, instead of following the Hebrew Alphabet with Kircher, has chosen rather to observe the Order of the Greek Alphabet. Trommius has also corrected many Mistakes in Kircher, and supplied many of his Omissions, and withal gives Notice that wherever he cites any Greek Passages, he has copied Wechel's Edition of the Septuagint, published at Frankfort, in Folio, 1597, which is the same that Kircher too had followed; and, which is a Particular worth observing, as there is a Difference between the two Greek Editions of the Septuagint, in order to a more easy Enquiry after any Passages in the different Editions, at the End of the second Volume of his Concordance, he has inserted a Parallel of the Chapters and Verses, according to the Diversities of the Roman Edition and that of Frankfort by Wechel.

Xistus Bethuleius, a Lutheran, who died in 1554, was Author of the Greek Concordance of the New Testament. He published it at Basil, in 1546. But this Edition has been much improved by the Care of Henry Stephens, and was printed at Geneva in 1600; and again, with many Augmentations, in 1624.

Rabbi Mordecai Nathan, otherwise called Isaac Nathan, composed an Hebrew Concordance in Imitation of the Latin ones. He began it in 1438, and compleated it in 1448, so was ten whole Years in finishing it; and besides, as he himself says, he was forced to employ a great many Writers in this Work. These Concordances were printed several times. First at Venice, by Daniel Bomberg, in 1623, under the Title[7] of Meïr Netib; that is to say, Which giveth Light in the Way. They were reprinted afterwards at Basil, by Frobenius, in 1581; and after that at Cracow, in 1584; but the best Edition of all is that of Rome, 1621, in four Volumes, Folio, by Maria di Calasio, with the Latin Translation on the Side, and the Various Readings of the Septuagint and Vulgate in the Margin. At the Head of each Article the Author gives a Parallel of other Oriental Languages compared with the Hebrew.

Antony Reuchlin procured the Hebrew Concordance of Isaac Nathan to be printed at Basil, in 1556, by Henry Pierre, with a Latin Translation, but a very faulty one, of his own making. However, Maria di Calasio has made good Use of Reuchlin's Labour in his Interpretation of the Hebrew Words. And as to the Latin Translation, which is over against the Hebrew Text, the greatest Part of it is borrowed from Pagninus.

John Buxtorf the Son procured likewise a new Edition of the Hebrew Concordance, by Kenig at Basil, 1632; and Christian Crinesius another at Wittemberg, in 1627, in Quarto. At length an Abridgment of these Concordances, in the Form of a Lexicon, was printed at Berlin, in 1677, by the Care of Christian Ravius, in Octavo; and at London, in 1680, by William Robinson, in Quarto, under this Title, Thesaurus Linguæ Sanctæ, seu Concordantiale Lexicon Hebræo-Latino-Biblicum una cum Concordantiis Hebraicis, &c. Frederick Landkisch, in 1680, got an Abridgment to be printed of the Greek and Hebrew Concordances, at Lipsick and Frankfort, in Quarto, with the German Translation of Luther placed over-against them.

The Dictionary intitled Mammotreptus, or Mammotrectus, was composed, as it is said, by a Franciscan, for the Benefit of the poor Clergy, who when they read the Bible did not understand the Force and Significancy of the Expressions in it; and when they preach'd the Word of God had no Regard in their Pronunciation to the Quantity of long or short Syllables. You have here the Words of his Preface: Impatiens propriæ imperitiæ, ac ruditati compatiens pauperum clericorum qui ad prædicationis officium promoventur, decrevi Bibliam perlegendo transcurrere, nec non & alia quæ in Ecclesia recitantur, g .מאיר נתיבIlluminans viam. recitantur, si vita comes fuerit, inspicere diligenter, & partium difficilium significantias, & accentus, & genera insinuare lectori pauperculo, secundum quod pro captu intelligentiæ colligere potero ex laboribus aliorum, &c. We have here a Specimen of the Ignorance and Barbarism of those Times, which appears still more in the Body of the Book. The Author begins his Explanation with St. Jerom's Epistle to Paulinus, then proceeds to St. Jerom's Preface to the Pentateuch; at last he comes to Genesis, and continues to explain successively the other Books of Scripture. He concludes with illustrating the Hymns and Anthems, the Legends of the Saints, and Sermons of the Fathers, which are recited in the Office of the Church.

Eusebius Bishop of Cæsarea wrote a Geographical Dictionary of the Scripture, wherein he reduces the Names of such Places as are to be met with in the sacred Books into an alphabetical Order. This is a very useful Work, and very much esteem'd, tho' it be not entirely without Faults, which are not so much to be imputed to Eusebius, as to the Negligence or Presumption of his Transcribers. St. Jerom has translated it, and made a good Number of considerable Additions, which give new Light to the Places that Eusebius speaks of; some too he has inserted which Eusebius had not mentioned. Our Readers may consult what we shall say hereafter, when we come to speak of those Authors who have written upon Geography. Adrichomius, M. Samson, Father Lubin, Bonfrerius and Reland have treated of this Matter at length.

Philo the Jew, as Origen reports[8], wrote a Book of the Hebrew Names, the Etymology and Signification whereof were set down in a Column placed opposite to the Hebrew Word. Origen also composed a Work like this, which remains to this day in Greek, and was translated by St. Jerom into Latin. But as St. Jerom understood Hebrew better than either Philo or Origen, as likewise Additions are made easily to Things which are already begun, and there is no great Difficulty in improving any new Invention, when discover'd, this Father carried the Design beyond what either of the others had done. He read over again all the Books of Scripture, and made a Draught out of them of all the Hebrew Names, which he afterwards explained in Latin. More on this Head may be seen in the Beginning of the second Volume of St. Jerom of F. Martinay's Edition, and in our Preface to the French Interpretation of the Hebrew, Chaldee and Greek proper Names which we read in the Vulgate, and are printed by us at the End of this Dictionary. Here some very singular Remarks may be seen upon this Matter, and upon the proper Names of the Hebrews.

Several Authors have published moral Dictionaries, or Repertories, of such Scripture-Passages as relate to Men's Manners; such as the Common Places of Father Balinghem, D. Jerom Lauret's Sylva Allegoriarum, and the Moral Concordances of F. Eulard. M. Huré, in his, has included the Grammatical, Moral and Historical Sense, but principally the Moral and Grammatical, having given us very little of History, and nothing at all of Geography, Chronology or Criticism.

M. Simon, a Priest and Doctor of Divinity, living at Lions, and heretofore Curate of St. Uzé, in the Diocese of Vienne in Dauphine, a very different Person from the famous M. Simon, formerly Priest of the Oratory, celebrated for his new Systems upon Scripture, and his critical History of the Texts both of the Old and New Testament; this M. Simon, I say, the Doctor of Divinity, wrote a new Dictionary of the Bible in one Volume, Folio, and had it printed at Lions, in 1693; in this he promises the Lives and Actions of the most considerable Persons spoken of in the Old and New Testaments, and, what relates to the History of the Jews, an Explanation of the Names of such clean and unclean Animals as are mentioned in the Scripture; of the precious Stones upon the High Priest's Pectoral and Shoulders; the Names and Explanations of the Festivals and Solemnities among the Hebrews; as also to treat of the Provinces, Regions, Cities, Towns, Mountains and Rivers spoken of in the Sacred Writings and Josephus, and likewise of the Coins, Measures, &c. This Work was so well received by the Publick, that the Author augmented it with one whole Volume, and published a new Edition of it at Lions, in 1703, in two Volumes, Folio.

If the Sale of any Book were a certain Proof of its Value, few would deserve more Approbation than this. But Men of Learning, upon an Examination of it, have found many Faults in it; which have induced them to believe, that the Author had not the necessary Assistances of Books, or a Knowledge of the Languages, without which it is not possible to perform a Work of such Ex tent and Consequence with Success. The Publick, however, is very much obliged to him for entring boldly upon the Execution of a Design which few besides would have had the Courage to attempt. We confess that he has been serviceable to us, at least in supplying us with most of the Names set in Order, and with the Titles of the several Subjects distributed by him to our Hands; nay, in those very Places where the Author is mistaken, he has been useful to us; since hereby he has cautioned us to be upon our Guard, and to enter into a closer Examination of Things. In a word, the Publick having so far declared for a Dictionary of the Bible, as a Work that wou'd be very agreeable, and all the World expressing such an earnest Inclination to see a good one, we were encouraged to set about this, wherein we have endeavour'd to avoid the Faults which others are reproached with, who have gone before us on this same Subject.

[The Method of this Dictionary.] We proposed therefore to publish a Dictionary of the Bible after the Method of our Comment upon Scripture; that is to say, we confine our selves principally to the Letter, History, and Criticism of the Bible; we explain difficult Terms, compare the Text of the Vulgate with the Hebrew, shew exactly the Situation of such Provinces, Cities, Towns, Mountains and Rivers, as are spoken of in Scripture; we settle the true Chronology of the most memorable Events, and endeavour to explain the Names of Plants, precious Stones, Animals and Fruits; to relate what we know of the Customs, Festivals and Ceremonies of the Hebrews; of their Coins, and Measures of Length and Capacity; so that this Dictionary may be looked upon not only as an Abridgment of our Comment, but even as a Supplement to it, and may serve instead of Prolegomena and Introductions to the Scripture, and supply the Want of those Books which treat of the Chronology, History and Geography of the sacred Writings; of the Polity, Commonwealth, Laws, Manners and Ceremonies of the Jews; of their Plants, precious Stones, Animals and Diseases. So that this Work may be considered as a Library for those in meaner Circumstances, and a very useful Repertory for all others who would read the Scripture with Advantage. Men of Learning will find here an Epitome of what they have read in different Authors; and they who have not many Books will see here a Summary of what is generally said upon every Subject.

In that Part which belongs to History, we have given the Lives of the chief Persons, whose Names are set down in Scripture and Josephus; and this, as much as possible, in the very Words of the Sacred and Original Authors, without omitting any considerable Circumstance. Experience hath taught us, that this Way of relating Things is both the shortest and most certain. By following this Track, the whole Work is interspersed with historical Passages taken from the Books of oriental Authors, which relate to the History and the Sacred Antiquities of the Old Testament; as also with Traditions from the old Arabians, descended from Abraham and Ishmael, who preserved some Footsteps of the Truth, tho' in many Circumstances altered and disguised.

The Authors of Dictionaries generally do no more than shew in gross, at the End of every Article, the Chronological Marks of such Facts as they report, without giving themselves the Trouble to fix these Marks to every particular Fact. To avoid this Inconveniency, we thought our selves obliged, as the History requires it, to cite the Authors in the Margin, from whom we borrow what we relate; and to note at the same time not only the Year of the World, but the Years likewise before Jesus Christ, and before the Vulgar Æra. We not only relate what we learn from Scripture of the Patriarchs, but have set down too what we find concerning them in Apocryphal Authors; not forgetting to say something of the Books, whether genuine or spurious, that are attributed to them.

When we speak of the Bible in general, we treat of the Texts, and several Versions of it; and when we consider every Book of Scripture in particular, we give a Summary of each, with an Account of the Authors of them; of their being received into the Canon of Scripture, of the Difficulties started concerning the Person, Time, and other Circumstances of the Work. We have explain'd at large whatever relates to the Hebrew Text, the Polyglots, Septuagint, Vulgate, Targums and Talmud; and we have said enough of them to give those a competent Knowledge of these Matters, who have not Leisure to go so far as the Spring-head in their Enquiries. We have been exact in the constant Citation of our Authors, that others might be able to compare or see those Things at length, which the Compendiousness of a Dictionary engages us to abridge. When any thing has appeared to us to be of Consequence, we have at the End of the Article relating to it expresly named the Books and Authors that are more particular upon it.

In treating on the Festivals, Laws and Ceremonies of the Jews, we have not only shewn what is to be found in Scripture on these Articles, but likewise what both Jewish and Christian Authors say of them; and farther, we have given some Account of the Customs of the present Jews.

We have included in this Work the Substance of many Dissertations and particular Treatises; we have inserted Lists of the several Judges of Israel, of the Kings of Israel and Judah, of the Princes of the Asmonæan Race, of the Governors of Judea under the Romans, of the Kings of Egypt and Syria from the Time of Alexander the Great, and of the Jewish High Priests, together with a Genealogical Table of Herod's Descendants, Tables of the Coins and Measures of the Hebrews, and Reductions of them to the Standard of our own Coins, Weights and Measures.

We have chiefly followed the Chronology of Usher, which hitherto hath been esteemed the most accurate that we have, and has been followed by the Generality of modern Writers. With this we have all along joined the Years of Jesus Christ and those of the Vulgar Æra, that the Reader at one View might discern the Relation that these Epochs have to one another. At the End of all we have added an Hebrew Calendar, wherein we have observ'd the principal Feasts, Fasts, and Solemnities that are taken Notice of, not only in common Calendars, but likewise in the most ancient that the Jews have. Many things also concerning Chronology may be seen in the Body of the Dictionary, under the Articles, Years, Months, Days, Jubilee; besides the Lists of Kings, Priests, and Princes already spoken of, which have some Relation to Chronology, we have farther prefixed to this Work, an universal Chronological Table, from the Beginning of the World to the Destruction of Jerusalem by the Romans; and wherever the Dates have been omitted, that Defect may be supplied by this Table.

One thing whereof we were particularly careful in this Work was, to clear the Geography of Holy Scripture, the Knowledge of this being, as we are persuaded, indispensably necessary, in order to the making any Progress in the Study of the Scriptures. But as we have very few Lights on this Article, and Ignorance is preferable to Error, we have set down so much only as we know, and may declare as certain. The Geographical Maps, Plans and Descriptions of Places that are here inserted, have all along their Proofs with them, which will be found under every Article of the Dictionary. We are very much obliged to the Labours of M. Reland, who has written two Volumes in Quarto upon the Geography of Palestine. When the Places we describe are famous and considerable, we give a kind of History of every thing remarkable which hath happened to them, and of all the Revolutions to which they have been subject; Examples of this are to be seen in Jerusalem, Samaria, Tyre, &c. But as the Design of this Dictionary is only to facilitate the understanding of the Bible, we have generally confined ourselves to represent the Condition of such Places and Cities no farther than to the taking of Jerusalem by the Romans, and to the End of the first Century.

Very little concerning Morality will be expected here. Preachers have their common Latin Concordances, and their moral Dictionaries, which in this Particular will abundantly supply them. The Letter, History and Criticism of Scripture are the principal Objects of our Care. There are few Names of Places or Persons that are pass'd by unobserved; if some have been omitted, it was because there was nothing to be said concerning them, the Scriptures having transmitted nothing to us but their Names. We have seldom said any thing of the Etymologies and Signification of proper Names, having chosen to reserve that for a distinct Dictionary, which we have placed at the End of this.

For the better compleating of this Work, we have added a Bibliotheca Sacra, which is a real Introduction to the Study of Scripture, whether the Rules be considered which the Preface to it abounds with, or the very copious Catalogue of the most celebrated Authors, and best Books to be read on this Subject, whereof the Body of this Bibliotheque is composed. They who have most Inclination to this Study, have not often the Opportunity of having all the Books that are necessary; and they who have, want Leisure frequently, or Resolution, to read them with a Design of comparing them with one another, and of making a judicious Choice of them: They too who propose to form a Library, and buy Books, may be glad to know what Authors have written on every Volume of the Scripture, and what Treatises are most in Reputation for their Accuracy on this important Matter. For want of this Knowledge, People are at a great deal of Pains and Expence oftentimes to very little Purpose; pose, because they set out wrong, follow bad Guides, and take Directions from Masters who are ill informed themselves. It is our Endeavour therefore to remedy this Inconveniency, by giving this Catalogue of Books, whereof we have set down a great Number, that there might be the better room for Choice, and that they who write on any Subject may have the Satisfaction to see all that has been said upon it. We do not however promise to name all the Books and Authors that have written on the Scripture, this is a Matter too extensive to be comprehended all intirely within this Dictionary; besides, F. le Long of the Oratory has executed this Design with great Perfection.

Lastly, That Pleasure and Profit may be join'd together in this Dictionary, several Persons of Consideration have obliged us to represent the Antiquities of the Hebrews, and Ceremonies of the Jews, in Figures, so that let the Explanation of them be what it will, the Prints will be sure to make Things more sensible and clear, and by this Means contribute to the better understanding of the Holy Scripture, and satisfy the Reader's Curiosity.

We therefore imployed the ablest Masters in delineating and engraving the principal Antiquities of the old Hebrews, and the modern Jews; such as Noah's Ark, the Tower of Babel, the Tabernacle and Utensils of it, Solomon's and Ezekiel's Temple, the same rebuilt by Herod the Great, the House of Cedar built by Solomon for his Queen; Monuments, Habits and chief Ceremonies; Plans and Views of the most celebrated Places in the Holy Land; and many other Things besides, which we have represented according to the Descriptions that we have of them in Scripture or the Jewish Writers.

As to those Things whereof there is either no Mention at all in Scripture, or not a very clear one, we have taken our Account of them from the old Historians, particularly Josephus, from Travellers and Commentators, supplying this way what to us appeared to be most probable, and most agreeable to Truth, relating to the Times, Countries, Manners and Customs of the Ancients. We do not therefore affirm every thing which we have had thus represented in Figures to be absolutely certain; but we hope at least that we have come as near to Truth as is possible in Matters so remote and obscure, and that we have in some degree clear'd and explain'd the Jewish Antiquities. And tho' all that has been thus engrav'd by our Direction be not new, the Publick notwithstanding is obliged to us for collecting in this Dictionary, not only many Things that are new, but almost every thing besides most curious, that is elsewhere to be met with on this Subject.

As to the Prints which relate to War, they neither are of my Invention or Procurement. The Chevalier Folard, so well known throughout Europe for his Experience and Capacity in the Tacticks of the Ancients, and the Works which he has published on this important Matter, is the Person who furnished the first Draughts of them. This able Officer having cast his Eyes upon my Dissertation concerning the Militia of the Hebrews, immediately conceived an advantageous Idea of the Valour of the ancient Israelites, and of their Knowledge in the Art of War: He determined afterwards to study this Point in the first Sources; to this End he read over the historical Books of the Old Testament, and examined particularly those Passages wherein there is any Mention of Battles, Sieges, and military Expeditions, under Moses, Joshua, the Judges, Kings and Maccabees. By this sort of reading he was confirmed more and more in the Opinion which had always been entertained by him, that the Greeks and Romans only imitated what had been so long before practised by the Eastern People, the Egyptians, Hebrews, Chaldæans, Assyrians and Persians; and as he is very sagacious, and has been much conversant in this kind of Literature, he has made such Discoveries in turning over the Sacred Writings as had escaped me, and perhaps might have escaped any other Person beside himself.

He resolved therefore to make his Observations upon the principal Battles and most famous Sieges recorded in the Books of the Old Testament. The Booksellers who were upon the Point of printing this Supplement to the first Edition of my Dictionary, desired he would please to communicate his Remarks to them, in order to insert them in it, being persuaded that the Publick wou'd be glad to see a Matter so new and engaging treated by one of the Profession, and withal of so good an Understanding as the Chevalier Folard. He yielded to their pressing Instances, and they on their Part, that the Satisfaction of the Publick might be entire, have procured a great Number of Plates to be engraved in a very neat Manner, and at a great Expence, representing the Orders of Battles, Encampments and Sieges, upon which he has composed a Sort of Dissertations. They are distinguished by Hands placed at the Beginning of these Articles. In these the Author sometimes confutes my Opinions as to some Points of the ancient Way of making War; and in this he is very obliging, it being no extraordinary thing for a Man of my Profession to be ignorant of many things relating to the Exercise of War, to the Marches of Armies, the Order of Battles, the Disposition of Encampments, warlike Machines, &c.

Notwithstanding that the Distance of Times and Places, and the concise Style of Scripture concur to keep us in the dark, and confound our Ideas, the Penetration of the Chevalier Folard supplies, corrects and restores every thing. He transports the Reader to the very Spot, leads him up and down all the Places which were the most memorable Scenes, and most particularly relating to Religion; he points them out to him, and brings him to a Knowledge of them, makes every thing present to him, and revives Facts, Histories and Circumstances which seemed condemned to be eternally forgotten. Nay, he goes farther, for sometimes by the way he discovers new Meanings in the Scripture, unknown to Interpreters, and reconciles Passages which according to the Significancy of received Terms, or the Sense hitherto fixed on them, implied a Contradiction.

But Josephus has particular Obligations to him: This Author, tho' a Jew, wrote in Greek, and his Works have always been an Entertainment to Persons of good Taste: Few, to his Misfortune, are qualified to read him in the Original; and they who are not, are forced to have Recourse to Translations; that is to say, to Books wherein Josephus is disfigured so as not to be easily known. This did not escape the Observation of M. de Folard, and was what he could not disguise either from himself or others. His Dissertations abound with Remarks which fix the Meaning of the Text, correct the Blunders of Translators, make them sensible of their Errors, discover their Ignorance, mend their Expressions, and furnish them with Terms of Art.

It is needless to say any thing in particular concerning the Neatness and Beauty of the Engravings: it may be sufficient to declare that the same Designers and Engravers who wrought those of the first Dictionary and Supplement, have finished these with still more Delicacy, Accuracy and Care than the first, with which however the Publick has appeared to be so well satisfied.

Tom. 1. p. 41. col. 1. of the Geneva Edition.

T. 2. p. 695. col. 1. of the same Edition.

Antonin. 3. parte Summæ Historial. t.19. c.5. S. 11. Sixt. Senenf. Biblioth. Sacr. l.3, & 4.

Trithem. Chronic. Hir- saug. t. 2. p. 65.

Ita Joan. Buxtorf. Præfat. in Concordantias suas Hebr.

Trithemius says, that during the Council of Basil, John of Ragusa*, and afterwards* Walter the Scotsman*, and last of all* John of Segovia*, finished the Work of Concordances, and put them, says he, into the Condition wherein we now see them printed*. Chronic. Hirsaug. p. 65.

מאיר נתיב. Illuminans viam.

Vid. Hieron. Præfat. in interpretationem nominum Hebraic.

The Letter A

A

A

A, A. This is what we meet with in several Places of the Vulgate Bible, viz. Jer. i. 6. and xiv. 13. in Ezek. iv. 15. xx. 49. and in Joel i. 15. In all which Passages, A, a, a, are to be understood in the Way of Exclamation, as if it were said, Alas, alas, alas! In Jer. i. 6. Et dixi a, a, a, Domine Deus, ecce nescio loqui qui puer ego sum. This one might think to be the stammering of a Child that cannot speak distinctly. But the Hebrew reads only ahah, or heu, once without Repetition; and after the same Manner, in ch. xiv. 13. as well as in the Places above cited from Ezekiel and Joel. So that in all these Passages the Translation should be Alas! without saying any thing more. A. The Apocryphal Gospel concerning the Infancy of Jesus Christ[1], informs us that the Schoolmaster who had requested our Saviour might be sent to him, was preparing to shew him his Alphabet, but that Jesus repeated it all entire to him before he had learnt it of him, and began even to explain the Prophets to him. Another Copy of the same Gospel imports, that his Master having pointed out to him the Letter a, or Aleph, Jesus desired to know of him what the Letter Aleph meant; that is to say, he asked him the mysterious Signification of it; and as his Master was reproving him with Threats, Jesus discoursed to him concerning the several Letters of the Alphabet, of their Figures, Power and Signification, in a Manner which so much surprized him that he sent him back to his Parents.

A and Ω. Alpha and Omega, the first and last Letter of the Greek Alphabet. Jesus [Rev. i. 8. xxi. 6. xxii. 13.] Christ, in the Revelations, says that he is A and Ω, the Beginning and End; he who gives Being to all things, and to whom every thing should be refer'd.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Apocryph. N. T. á Fabricio, Edit. p. 166, & 207.

Aaron

[Ex. vi. 20.] AARON, the Son of Amram and Jochebed, of the Tribe of Levi, was born in the Year of the World 2430[1]. He was [Ch. vii. 7.] three Years older than Moses, being born the Year before Pharaoh's Edict, which enjoined the Hebrews to drown all their male Children as soon as they came into the [Ch. i. 22.] World. God having revealed himself to Moses in the burning Bush, and declared the Resolution he had taken to deliver the Israelites, thro' his Means, from the Oppression of the Egyptians, Moses excused himself, representing the Difficulty of the Undertaking, and the natural Impediment [Ch. iv. 16. xiv. 15.] of his Speech. But God, in Reply to this, told him that his Brother Aaron should be his Prophet and Interpreter, and in their Addresses to Pharaoh should deliver what they had to say. At the same time the Lord inspired Aaron with the Design of meeting Moses, who left Arabia, or the Country of Midian, in order to return into Egypt. Aaron advanced as far as the Holy [Ch. iv. 27. In the Year of the World 2513. before J. C. 1487. before the Vulg. Æra 1491.] Mountain, where Moses related to him all that God had said to him; after which both perform'd their Journey together into Egypt.

Soon after they assembled the Elders of the Children of Israel, and communicated to them the good Pleasure of God, to free them from the Bondage which they groan'd under. At the same time they presented themselves before Pharaoh, declared to him the Orders they had received, and wrought several Miracles in his View, according to the Commission which God had [Ch. iv. 29, 30, 31. Ch. v. 1, 2, &c.] given them to this Purpose. But this Prince's Heart was hardened; he obliged them therefore to retire from his Presence, [Ver. 6, 7.] and commanded his Officers to supply the Hebrews with no more Straw while they were employed in making Bricks. The Hebrews, upon this, overwhelmed with Despair, made bitter Complaints to Moses and Aaron; but God encouraged them, and assured them, that he would overcome the Opposition of the Egyptians, and the Obstinacy of Pharaoh, with so many Plagues and Prodigies as should at last compel them to dismiss the Hebrews; which in effect so happened. See the Article Moses.

During their Journey thro' the Wilderness, Aaron and his Sons for ever were appointed by God to exercise the Office of [Ch. xxix. 9. Vid. & Ch. xix. 22, 24.] Priests in the Tabernacle. He was always respected in the Army of Israel as next in Dignity to Moses. When the Amalekites attacked the Israelites, Moses went up an Hill, with Aaron and Hur in his Company, and while Joshua was engaging the Enemy in the Plain, and Moses on the Hill was [Ch. xvii. 10, 11, & seq.] lifting up his Hands, Aaron and Hur supported his Arms, to prevent their being tired.

Moses being gone up the Mountain to receive the Law of God, after the Ratification of the Covenant which he had made [Ch. xxiv. 1.] with Israel, Aaron, his Sons, and the Seventy Elders, followed him, not indeed so far as to the Top, and there saw the Place where the Lord was present, without receiving any Prejudice: But during the forty Days of Moses's Continuance there, the People, grown impatient at his long Absence, in a tumultuous Manner addres's'd themselves to Aaron, saying, Make [Ch. xxxii. 1, & seq. In the Year of the World 2513. before J. C. 1487. before the Vulg. Æra 1491.] us Gods, which shall go before us: for as for this Moses, who brought us up out of the Land of Egypt, we wot not what is become of him. Aaron, disturb'd in all probability at the Resolution of the People, bid them bring their Pendants, and the Ear-rings of their Wives and Children; and when they were brought, he melted them down, and made a golden Calf of them, in Imitation of the Ox Apis, adored by the Egyptians, and by the Generality of the Hebrews, while they dwelt in Egypt. They placed it, when they had thus formed it, on a Pedestal, danced and diverted themselves about this Idol, saying, These be thy Gods, O Israel, which brought thee up out of the Land of Egypt.

[Ch. xxxii. 7.] The Lord informed Moses of the Sin which the Israelites had committed; Moses hereupon immediately descended, having in his Hands the Tables of the Law, engraved by God himself; which, as he came near the Camp, and observ'd what pass'd there, he threw upon the Ground, and broke in pieces, reproaching the People with their Transgression, and Aaron with his Weakness. Aaron excused himself after the best Manner that he could, humbled himself for his Fault, and God continued to him the Priesthood. After the Tabernacle was built, Moses consecrated him with the Holy Oil, [Levit. viii. 1, 2, & seq.] and invested him with the Sacred Ornaments of his Dignity. First of all he put on him a kind of small linen Drawers, wove very close; over these a Tunick of fine Linen doubled; over the Tunick a long Robe of azure Colour, at the Bottom whereof was a Border adorned with golden Bells, and Pomgranates wrought with Threads of various Colours; and these placed alter nately, a Bell and a Pomgranate. Over this Robe he wore a Girdle of different Colours exquisitely embroidered, which the Scripture [Ex. xxv. 7. אפוד E -phod.] calls the Ephod.

AARON IN HIS HIGH-PREISTS HABIT.according to Braunius.

This Ephod, or Girdle[2] consisted of two Ribbons of the most delicate Work, which descending from the Shoulders cross'd each other on the Stomach, and then being brought round the Body, served as a Girdle to the High Priest's Robe. At the Place where the Ribbons of the Ephod met upon the Breast, was seen what the Scripture calls the Rational[3], or Pectoral, or Breast-plate; which was a square Piece of about ten Inches wide, substantially embroidered, wherein were set twelve precious Stones, on each whereof the Name of one of the Tribes of Israel was engraved.

Upon the High Priest's two Shoulders were two precious Stones, on each whereof [Ex. xxviii. 9, 10, & seq.] the Names of six Tribes were engraved. The Covering for the High Priest's Head was a sort of Miter, fastened below upon his Forehead with a Crown, the fore-part whereof was composed of a thin Plate of Gold, on which these Words were written, Holiness to the Lord; and it was tied behind with a Ribbon. He wore likewise the Urim and Thummim on his Breast, which were either the Stones themselves of the Rational, or some hieroglyphical Figures, or some other Ornaments fixed to the Rational, by means whereof God promised to discover his Will to the High Priest.

Aaron and his Sister Miriam having one day murmured against Moses, on the Score [Num. xii. 1. & seq. about the Year of the World 2514. before Jesus Christ 1586. before the vulgar Æra 1490.] of Zipporah their Brother's Wife, who was an Æthiopian, or rather a Midianite, a Native of the Land of Cush, in Arabia Petræa, on the Red Sea; Miriam was immediately struck with a Leprosy; which Punishment having opened Aaron's Eyes, he acknowledged his Fault, and ask'd Forgiveness of Moses both for himself and Sister. Some time after Corah, Dathan and Abiram rose [Ch. xvi. about the Year of the World 2015. before Jesus Christ 1585. before the vulg. Æra 1489.] up against Moses and Aaron: Corah pretended that the Priesthood belonged to him as much as Aaron, both being of the Tribe of Levi; and Dathan and Abiram being of the Tribe of Reuben, had a mind to share with Moses in the Sovereign Authority and Government of the People. God discovered his Indignation against these Rebels in a remarkable Manner, and the Earth opening swallowed them up, and others of their Faction. Immediately a Fire issuing from the Tabernacle destroyed 250 Levites, the Accomplices of Corah, who attempted insolently of their own Head to offer Incense to the Lord. Moses commanded the 250 Censers belonging to these Conspirators to be got together, and reduced into Plates, which were fastened to the Altar of Burnt-offerings, there to remain as a Monument of what had happened.

The next Day the People murmuring against Moses and Aaron, the Lord caused a Plague to break out among them, which seized on the Camp, and consumed part of [Num. xvi. 41.] the People. But Aaron running with his Censer, placed himself between the living and the dead, and so the Plague was stayed. Another new Miracle God wrought in order to secure the Priesthood to him. For Moses [Num. xvii.] having taken twelve Rods from the Princes of the twelve Tribes, and Aaron's separately, he placed them in the Tabernacle of Witness, having first written upon each the Name of that Tribe whereunto it belonged, and upon Aaron's the Name of this High Priest. The next Day, when the Rods were taken out, Aaron's, which was made out of an Almond Tree, appeared to be all covered with Leaves, and in full Blossom; but the rest were all in the Condition wherein they were seen to be the Day before. This Rod therefore was placed either within the Ark, or on the Side of it, to perpetuate the Remembrance of this Prodigy.

He married Elisheba the Daughter of [Ex. vi. 23.] Amminadab, of the Tribe of Judah, by whom he had four Sons, Nadab and Abihu, Eleazar and Ithamar. The two first were [Lev. x. 1, 2.] killed by Fire sent from God, as a Punishment upon them for presuming to offer Incense with strange Fire in their Censers. From the two others the Race of the High Priests was continued in Israel. Aaron and Moses not expressing sufficiently their Confidence in God, when he commanded them to [Num. xx. 8, 12.] strike the Rock at Kadesh, he in his Wrath declared to them that they should not enter into the Promised Land; and soon after the Lord ordered Aaron to ascend Mount Hor, [Num. xx. 26, 26.] at the Foot whereof the Hebrews were encamp'd, there to be gathered to his Fathers. As soon as he had got thither he strip'd himself of his Pontifical Ornaments in the view of all the People, and put them on Eleazar his eldest Son and Successor in the High Priesthood; this being done, he [In the Year of the World 2522. before J. C. 1448. before the Vulg. Æra 1452. Ecclus. xlv.7, &c.] died at the Age of an hundred and twenty three Years, and was buried by Moses and his Sons in a Cave of this Mountain. All Israel mourned thirty Days for him.

The Author of Ecclesiasticus gives us an Encomium of Aaron, in these Terms: " The Lord exalted Aaron the Brother of " Moses, of the Tribe of Levi. An everlasting Covenant he made with him, " and gave him the Priesthood among the " People; he beautified him with comely " Ornaments, and cloathed him with a " Robe of Glory. He put upon him perfect Glory, and strengthened him with " rich Garments, with Breeches, with a " long Robe and the Ephod. And he " compassed him with Pomgranates, and " with many golden Bells round about, " that as he went there might be a Sound " and a Noise made, that it might be " heard in the Temple, for a Memorial " to the Children of his People; with an " holy Garment, with Gold, and blue " Silk and Purple, the Work of the Embroiderer, with a Breast-plate of Judgment, and with Urim and Thummim. " With twisted Scarlet, the Work of the " cunning Workman; with precious " Stones graven like Seals, and set in " Gold, the Work of the Jeweller; with " a Writing engraved for a Memorial, after the Number of the Tribes of Israel. " He set a Crown of Gold upon the " Mitre, wherein was engraved Holiness, " an Ornament of Honour, a costly Work, " the Desire of the Eyes, costly and beautiful. Before him there was none such, " neither did ever any Stranger put them " on, but only his Children, and his Childrens Children perpetually. Their Sacrifices shall be wholly consumed every " Day twice continually. Moses consecrated him, and anointed him with Holy Oil. This was appointed unto him " by an everlasting Covenant, and to his " Seed, so long as the Heavens should " remain, that they should minister unto " him, and exercise the Order of Priesthood, and bless the People in his Name. " He chose him out of all Men living to " offer Sacrifices to the Lord, Incense and " a sweet Savour, for a Memorial, to " make Reconciliation for his People. He " gave unto him his Commandments and " Authority in the Statutes of Judgments, that he should teach Jacob the " Testimonies, and inform Israel in his " Laws. Strangers conspired together against him, and maligned him in the " Wilderness, even the Men that were on " Dathan's and Abiram's Side, and the " Congregation of Core, with Fury and " Wrath. This the Lord saw, and it " displeased him, and in his wrathful Indignation were they consumed: He did " Wonders upon them to consume them with the fiery Flame. But he made Aaron more honourable, and gave him an Heritage, and divided unto him the First-fruits of the Increase, especially he prepared Bread in Abundance; for he did eat of the Sacrifices of the Lord, which he gave unto him and his Seed. Howbeit in the Land of the People he had no Inheritance, neither had he any Portion among the People; for the Lord himself is his Portion and Inheritance.

St. Paul, in the Epistle to the Hebrews, Chap. v, vi, vii, viii, ix, x. compares the Priesthood of Aaron with that of Jesus Christ and the New Law; and shews the Superiority of the New Priesthood, above that instituted of Old. We shall give a Catalogue of the High Priests who succeeded Aaron, and shall say something of the Rights, Privileges and Functions of the Hebrew Priests, under the Word PRIEST. As to the Life of Aaron, the Reader may consult Exodus, Leviticus, and the Book of Numbers, as far as the twentieth Chapter, and twenty fourth Verse of this last Book, wherein we have a Relation of his Death.

The Hebrews settle the Day of his Death, and the Feast which they observe upon this Occasion, on the first Day of their fifth Month, which they call Ab, and which answers pretty nearly to our July, supposing the Year to begin at Easter. In Imitation of them, the Christian Church has fixed the Festival of this Patriarch to the first of July, with a Persuasion that by his Repentance he had made Atonement for the Fault committed by him, in permitting the Israelites to adore the golden Calf; and for the Diffidence expressed by him at the Waters of Strife. This religious Respect paid to Aaron is no new thing; for we find his Death on Mount Hor taken notice of in the first Martyrologies which go under St. Jerom's Name, and in those of Ado, Usuardus, and others of a more modern Date.

Aaron's Sepulcher has hitherto continued unknown to the World. The Scripture [Deut. x. 6. And the Children of Israel took their Journey from Beeroth of the Children of Jaakan to Mazera, there Aaron died, and there he was buried. * Numb. xxxiii. 38. Deut. xxxii. 50.] tells us in a particular Place, that Aaron died at Mosera; and elsewhere , that he died upon Mount Hor; because, in all Probability, Mount Hor was near the Place of their Encampment at Mosera, where the People had their Station when God called to himself the High Priest Aaron. He died in the Arms of Moses his Brother, and of Eleazar his Son and Successor in the High Priesthood. They buried him in some Cave belonging to this Mountain, and kept the Place of his Interment from the Knowledge of the Israelites; perhaps from an Apprehension that in After-Ages they might pay some superstitious Worship to him; or that the Arabians, in the midst of whom they then were, might some time after violate the Sanctity of his Grave.

They who have most diligently enquired into the several Marks of Resemblance between sacred and fabulous History compared together, observe several Instances of Conformity between Aaron and Mercury. This false Deity was, say they, an Egyptian, born of Nile, a Shepherd, the God of Shepherds, Travellers and Merchants, the Messenger and Intepreter of the Gods. They describe him with a miraculous Rod in his Hand, wreathed about with Serpents; they ascribe to him an extraordinary Degree of Knowledge, the Gift of foretelling Things future, and interpreting Dreams. He is adored as the God of the High-ways, of Houses, Thieves, and Musicians; the Invention of the Harp is attributed to him.

Aaron was born in Egypt, had been, like his Ancestors before him, by Trade a Shepherd, was with Moses his Brother at the Head of the People of Israel, who were a Nation of Travellers in the Wilderness. He was appointed by God himself to be Moses's Interpreter, and the Messenger of God to Pharaoh and the Egyptians. Mercury's [Exod. vii. 1, 2.] Wand, with the Snakes twisted about it, represents the Wonder-working Rod which Aaron cast before Pharaoh on the Ground, and which thereupon was changed into a Serpent. The Caduceus, the miraculous Instrument of a thousand Prodigies, describes but imperfectly the many wrought in Egypt by the Means of Moses's Rod, which this Legislator put into his Brother's Hands. The Gifts of Prophecy and Knowledge attributed to Mercury are the Symbol of those Favours which God vouchsafed to Aaron, and communicated even to his Successors in the Pontifical Dignity, to whom he granted the Privilege of wearing the Urim and Thummim, which was as it were an Oracle at all times present in Israel. The Harp, the Flute, the Instruments of Musick, and the Sacred Trumpets, were peculiarly in the Care and Management of the Priests and Levites. To them only it belonged to make Use of them in the Temple, and in religious Assemblies. The pretended Robbery committed by the Hebrews, when on the point of their Departure, upon the Egyptians, of whom they borrowed what they had which was most valuable, might have contributed something towards the confounding Aaron with Mercury the God of Thieves and the High-ways. Mercury conducts the dead to Hell, and when the Gods please delivers them from thence. Aaron and Moses led the Hebrews into the Channel of the Red Sea, and miraculously brought them out of it, as it were [Ch. iv. 14, 15, 16.] from the Grave. Korah, Dathan and Abiram, who were swallowed up in the Earth, together with all their Faction, for rebelling against Aaron, may have been another Occasion of what we are told of Mercury. Lastly, Mercury the God of Eloquence is represented by Aaron, of whom it is said, I know that Aaron thy Brother can speak well: and also behold he cometh forth to meet thee. Thou shalt speak unto him, and put Words into his Mouth: And I will be with thy Mouth and with his Mouth: He shall be thy Spokesman unto the People, and he shall be to thee instead of a Mouth, or thy Interpreter.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

1570 Years before Christ, and 1574 before the Vulgar Æra, which begins four Years after the true Year of Jesus Christ's Birth. This Remark may serve for the whole Sequel of this Work.

See a more particular Description of this Ornament in the Article Ephod, in Braunius de Vestit. Hebræor. Cunæus de Repub. Hebr. and others.

Translators' note. So our Author terms it from the Vulgate, and Greek λόγιον. The Hebrew Word for it is חשן.The Stones here mentioned engraven and disposed as God appointed, Ex. xxviii. 15. are by some conceived to be the Urim and Thummim in Ver. 30. the Doctrina and Veritas, as the Latin; the Φωτισμοὶ καὶ τελειώσεις, as Aquila; the ἀλήθεια καὶ δήλωσις, as the Septuagint: All which signify no more than Truth and Manifestation, or the Manifestation of Truth, by those Stones.

Ab

AB. The eleventh Month of the civil Year, according to the Computation of the Hebrews; and the fifth of the ecclesiastical Year, which begins with Nisan. The Month Ab answers the Moon of July: There are thirty Days in it. Upon the first Day of this Month the Jews fast, in Consideration of Aaron's Death; and on the ninth, because on this Day the Temple of Solomon was burnt by the Chaldæans; and the second Temple, built after the Captivity, by the Romans. The Jews believe, that on this Day the Persons who were commissioned to survey the Land of Canaan returning to the Camp, engaged the People in Rebellion. They fast likewise upon this Day, in Memory of the Edict published by the Emperor Adrian's Command, wherein they were forbid to continue in Judea, or even to look back at a Distance on Jerusalem, with an Intention to lament its Ruin. On the eighteenth Day of the same Month they fast, because the Lamp which was in the Sanctuary was that Night extinguished, in the Time of Ahaz.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Abagarus

ABAGARUS, or Abgarus, King of Edessa, was afflicted with a very grievous Disease, for which he could find no Remedy; and while he lay in this Condition, was informed of the miraculous Cures which were performed by Jesus Christ in Judæa; thereupon he sent a Courier to him, whose Name was Ananias, with a Letter drawn up in these Terms. Abagarus King of Edessa, to Jesus, the merciful Saviour of Mankind, who has appeared clothed with human Flesh, in the Country of Jerusalem, wishes Health. I have been made acquainted with the Prodigies and Cures wrought by You, without the Use of Herbs or Medicines, and by the Efficacy only of your Words. I am told that You make Cripples and the Maimed to walk; that You force Devils from the Bodies of the Possessed; that there is no Disease, however incurable it may seem to be, which You do not heal; and that You restore the Dead to Life. These Wonders[1] persuade me, that You are some God descended from Heaven, that You are the Son of God: For this Reason I have taken the Liberty to write this Letter to You, beseeching You to come and see me, and cure me of the Indisposition under which I have so long laboured. I understand that the Jews persecute you, murmur at your Miracles, and seek your Destruction. I have here a beautiful and agreeable City, which tho' it be not very large, will be sufficient to supply you with every thing that shall be necessary.

Jesus Christ returned him an Answer in these Terms. You are very happy, Abagarus, thus to have believed in me without having seen me; for it is written of me, that they who shall see me will not believe in me, and that they who have never seen me, shall believe and be saved. As to the Desire you express of receiving a Visit from me, I must tell you, that all things for which I am come must be fulfilled in the Country where I am; when this is done, I must return to him who sent me. And when I am departed hence, I will send one of my Disciples to you, who shall cure you of the Disease which you complain of, and give Life to you and those that are with you. Eusebius says[2], that he took these Letters out of the Records of Edessa; and adds, that St. Thomas, after the Resurrection of our Saviour, sent Thaddæus, one of the seventy Disciples, and very different from the Apostle of this Name, to preach Jesus Christ in this City, and heal King Abagarus. Thaddeus went thither, converted the King and all his People, wrought an infinite Number of Miracles among them, and recovered the King's Health. There are some who believe, that besides the Letter which we have been speaking of, our Saviour sent his Picture to him, printed on an Handkerchief. But the generality of eCriticks reject this whole Story, and look upon the two Letters we have mentioned as Pieces without any Authority. See M. de Tillemont, in the Article of S. Thomas, T. 1. p. 400,401,402. and the Notes 5,6,7.

p. 657, &c.

King Abagarus, or Abgarus, was so called because he was lame[3]: We should not therefore give him the Name of Agbar, as if it were deriv'd from the Arabic Akbar, which signifies great. The City of Edessa, where he reigned, goes generally by the Name of Orfa; it is a common Tradition among the Eastern People, both Christians and Mahometans, that this Prince wrote a Letter to our Saviour, and received an Answer from him, together with a Handkerchief with the Impression of our Lord's Face upon it. This we are told by M. D'Herbelot in his Oriental Library, which however does not destroy what we have said of Abgarus, nor is it sufficient to confirm the Authentickness and Truth of Abgarus's pretended Letter to Jesus Christ, and our Saviour's Reply to Abgarus. The Eastern People are generally not very exact in Matters of History, and their Traditions are not always to be depended upon. Edessa, which some have placed upon the Euphrates, was at the Distance of a Day's Journey from it; the River upon which it is situated is the Scyrtus, the Overflowings whereof are dangerous and frequent. In the Reign of Justin it was intirely ruined by Inundations; the Emperor rebuilt it, and gave it the Name of Justinopolis; but afterwards it was called Orfa. There were Kings of Edessa before the Reign of Augustus, and they generally bore the Name of Abgarus: M. Vaillant has preserved a Succession of these Kings, who from the first Century were all Christians.

It is something surprizing that they should all go by the Name of Abgarus, which signifies, as M. D'Herbelot says, lame. It is much more credible that they assumed the Name of Akbar, which signifies great, and that he who wrote to Jesus Christ was nicknam'd Abgar instead of Akbar, by reason of his Infirmity; if however this Tradition of the Eastern People be not an Imposition upon us.

THE many Difficulties which are alledged[4] to destroy Eusebius's Story, and the Truth of our Saviour's Letters to Abgarus, and Abgarus's to our Saviour, are without doubt very solid; but should they oblige us to reject both this History, and the Letters we are speaking of, might it not be sufficient to conclude from hence, that the Truth of the Matter has been in some degree alter'd, and the Letters corrupted. To me it seems out of all dispute, that a certain King of Edessa was converted in the earliest Years of Christianity by one of the seventy Disciples, and that after his Example the whole City embraced the same Faith. As to other Circumstances, People, if they please, may look upon them as no more than Embellishments and popular Traditions ill put together; that the Letters, as they are at present, are apocryphal and without Authority; but does it follow that there never were any genuine and authentick, and that the whole is only a Fable invented with a Design to delude the World?

It is related[5] that Abgarus, King of Edessa, who had contributed to the Defeat of Crassus, was obliged to submit to Augustus,[6] Augustus, who depriv'd him of the Title of King, and left him that only of Toparch, or Governor of the Place, and carried him to Rome, in order to secure himself of his Fidelity. Abgarus, weary of abiding in this great City, bethought himself of a little Stratagem, whereby to work upon Augustus, and prevail with him to grant Permission for his Return to Edessa. When he was a hunting he caught several wild Beasts alive, and having directed some of the Earth to be taken up belonging to the Holes where each of them had been laid hold of, he appointed it to be spread separately in different Places of the Amphitheatre. Upon letting loose these Animals, each went immediately towards the Earth belonging to his Den. The Emperor easily understood Abgarus's Meaning, and sent him back to his little Kingdom. When he took his Leave, he desir'd and obtain'd Permission to build a Circus at Edessa. He died some few Years after, leaving a Son behind him very unworthy of him; the Son having used his Subjects ill, and fearing he should be punish'd for so doing by the Romans, went over to the Persians, and embraced their Party.

This Account we have from Procopius, who affirms the first Abgarus to be the same with him who wrote to Jesus Christ, and that the second was his Son, and both Christians: But this can never be made out; for Jesus Christ did not begin to preach till the Fourteenth of Tiberius, the Thirtieth of the vulgar Æra, and above eighty Years after the Defeat of Crassus. Nor could Abgarus believe in Christ till after the Preaching, nay, not till after the Death of our Saviour, which happen'd in the seventeenth Year of Tiberius. Moreover, we have some Medals struck at Edessa, under the Reign of Tiberius[7], in which this Emperor is called the God of the Edessenians; they were not therefore at that Time converted to Christianity.

According to Procopius's Recital, it should seem that the Prince who treated his Subjects so ill as to be oblig'd to fly for Safety to the Persians, was he who believed in Jesus Christ, and brought over his whole People to the Faith. Eusebius[8] places this Conversion in the Year 340, which answers to the twenty ninth of Jesus Christ, observing the Æra of the Edessenians, which is the same with that of the Seleucidæ, who began it at the Death of Alexander the Great. But in the twenty ninth Year of our Saviour Abgarus could not as yet have any Knowledge of our Jesus, who did not enter upon the Business of Preaching till the Year following. We had better therefore read with Rufinus the Year 343, which answers to the Year of Christ's Death[9], according to the vulgar Æra.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Clem. Alex. l.1. Strom.
See F. Alexander, M. Du Pin, M. de Tillemont.
D'Herbelot, Bibl. Orient. Abgar.
See Basnage's Continuation of Josephus's Hist. t. 1. l. 1. c. 6. p. 158.
Procop. de Bello Persico l. 2. c. 12.
Euseb. l. 1. Hist. Eccl. c. 13. p. 32, 33.
Basnage loco cit. p. 163. ΤΙΒΕΡΙΟΣ ΚΑΙΣΑΡ ΣΕΒΑΣΤΟΣ ΘΕΟΣ ΕΔΕΣΣΕΩΝ. Ἐπράχθη ταῦτα τεσσαρακοσῷ καὶ τριακοσιοςῷ ἔτει.
Euseb. Valef. p. 35.
Basnage loco cit. p. 173.

Abana

ABANA, a River of Damascus, mention'd by Naaman, the King of Syria's [2 Kings v. 12.] General, in these Terms, Are not Abana and Pharphar, Rivers of Damascus, better than all the Waters of Israel? We are of Opinion that this River is the same with Barrady or Chrysorroas, which derives its Source from the Foot of Mount Libanus, towards the East, runs round Damascus, and through it, and so continues its Course till its Waters are lost in the Wilderness, at the Distance of four or five Leagues South from this City[1].

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Maundrell's Journey from

Abarim

[Deut. xxxii. 19. xxxiv. 1. 2 Macc. xi. 4.] ABARIM, Mountains beyond Jordan, spreading far into the Tribe of Reuben, and the Country of the Moabites, on both Sides the River Arnon: They were composed of many little Hills, under different Names. It is impossible to describe exactly the Extent of them; Eusebius and St. Jerom speak of them in several Places. Eusebius[1] fixes them at six Miles Distance Westward from Hesbbon, and seven from Livias Eastward[2]. The Mountains Nebo, Pisgah, and Peor, were Parts of the Abarim. Upon Nebo Moses died, and in the same Mountains Jeremiah concealed the Ark, when the Chaldæans took Jerusalem. Abarim in Hebrew signifies Passengers, or Passages.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Eufeb. in Nabo.
Idem in voce Bethphogor. Aleppo to Jerusalem.

Abaron

ABARON is the Sirname of Eleazar, the fourth Son of Judas Maccabæus. Abaron in Hebrew signifies Anger, passionate, or passing away. Josephus calls him Auran or Avran, and the first Book of Maccabees Savaran, 1 Macc. vi. 43. He got a great deal of Honour by his Death, being crush'd in pieces under an Elephant, which he slew by piercing him with his Sword, as we shall shew under Eleazar. See 1 Macc. vi. 43. Joseph. Antiq. l. 12. c. 14.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Abba

ABBA[1], in Syriac signifies Father. Ab [Rom. viii. 15. Mark xiv. 36.] has the same Signification in Hebrew. St. Paul says, that we have received the Spirit of Adoption, whereby we cry Abba, Father. Jesus Christ, praying in the Garden, says, Abba, Father, all Things are possible unto thee.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

אבאAbba. אבAb, Pater.

Abdiel

ABDIEL, Son of Guni, of the Tribe of Gad, was the Head of his Family, 1 Chron. v. 15.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Abdon (1)

ABDON, the Son of Hillel, of the Tribe [Judg. xii. 13, 14, &c.] of Ephraim, and tenth Judge of Israel. He succeeded Elon in the Year of the World 2840, before Jesus Christ 1160, before the vulgar Æra 1164. He judg'd Israel eight Years, and was buried at Pirathon, in the Land of Ephraim. He left forty Sons and thirty Grandsons, who rode on seventy Asses, which were the Beasts generally made use of for this Purpose by Persons of the best Quality in Judæa[1]. He died in 2856, before Jesus Christ 1144, before the vulgar Æra 1148.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Goujon's Travels into the Holy Land.

Abdon (2)

ABDON, of the Tribe of Benjamin, a Son to Jehiel, 1 Chr. ix. 36.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Abdon (3)

ABDON, the Son of Abigabaon and [1 Chr. viii. 29.] Maachah.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Abdon (4)

ABDON, the Son of Micah, was sent by King Josiah to Huldah the Prophetess, with Directions to ask her Opinion concerning the Book of the Law, which had been [2 Chr. xxxiv. 20.] found lately in the Temple.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Abdon

[Josh. xxi. 30.] ABDON, a City belonging to the Tribe [1 Chr. vi. 74.] of Asher: It was given to the Levites of Gershon's Family.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Abednego

ABEDNEGO, is the Chaldee Name [Dan. i. 7.] given by the King of Babylon's Officer to Azariah, Daniel's Companion. This Name imports the Servant of Nago or Nego, which is the Sun or Morning Star, so called because of its Brightness. Abednego was thrown into the fiery Furnace at Babylon, with his two Companions Shadrach and Meshach, for refusing to [Dan. iii.] adore the Statue which was erected by the Command of Nebuchadnezzar. Daniel was in all probability at that Time absent from Babylon, for we do not find that he had the same Fate with his Companions. The Condemnation of Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego, by God's Appointment, redounded to his Honour; for he did not suffer them to be injured by the Flames, but sent his Angel in the midst of them, to rescue them out of the Furnace.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Abel

ABEL, the second Son of Adam and Eve, was born in the second Year of the World, before Jesus Christ 3998. Some are of Opinion that he and Cain were Twins[1]: Others believe that he was his younger Brother, being born in the second Year of the World: Others again maintain that he was born 15 Years after Cain, while others make an Interval of 30 Years between the Birth of these two Brothers. The Eastern People say that Anvina his Sister was born at the same Time with Abel: She is called Delbora, Decla, or Edocla, by different Writers[2]. Cain and Abel being instructed by their Father Adam in their Duty to the Creator, offered each to him the First Fruits of their Labours; Cain, as an Husbandman, of his Corn; Abel, as a Shepherd, of the Milk or Fattlings of his Flock. God was pleased to shew that the Offerings of Abel were agreeable, and those of Cain contemptible to him. How God gave these Marks of Preference to Abel is not distinctly known, whether by Fire sent from Heaven[3], which consumed his Offering, or by any other Means; but this we know, that Cain perceiving this Distinction, fell into Fits of deep Melancholy, and giving himself up to the Suggestions of his Envy, formed the Design of killing Abel.

Commentators agree, that the true Cause of Cain's Aversion was God's Acceptance of his Brother's Sacrifices, and the Rejection of his own; but they are not so well agreed about the Pretence which he made use of to take away his Brother's Life, whether it were on the Score of some Woman, whom Adam was inclined that he should marry[4], or whether he sought an Opportunity of quarrelling[5] with Abel, and to that End uttered Blasphemies before him. As to this Particular, the Interpreters may be consulted: So much however is certain, that Cain having invited Abel to go with him into the Field, there [Genef. iv. 8, 9.] murdered him.

The Scripture does not specify either the Manner or Instrument of this Murder, and Expositors are divided upon it; some arm Cain with the Jaw-bone of an Ass, others with a Scythe[6]; some again with a Bill[7], others with a Knife or Sword[8], a Stone[9] or Pitch-fork. However this be, the Blood of this innocent Person crying towards Heaven, the Lord demanded of Cain where Abel was; to which he answer'd, Am I my Brother's Keeper? We shall see in another Place how God punished Cain.

Josephus[10] is of Opinion that Cain buried Abel to prevent the Discovery of his Murder; and at sixteen Miles from Damascus a Travellers are shewn a Tomb said to be Abel's, which is an hundred and sixty Palms, or fourscore Cubits in Length. St. Jerom assures us, that there was a constant Tradition among the Hebrews of Abel's being murder'd in the Plain of Damascus. But nothing is more uncertain than this.

Some of the Fathers were of Opinion that Abel continued always in the State of Celibacy[11]. The Chronicon of Alexandria shews very clearly that he died before Marriage; but others maintain that he was married, tho' perhaps he had no Children[12], since Moses has made no mention of his Posterity. St. Chrysostom is expresly for his Marriage[13], excusing him, on the Score of pure Necessity, for having married his own Sister. They who explain what is said of Abel's Blood crying unto God from the Ground, as meant of the Posterity of this righteous Person, are of the same Opinion.

Under the Emperors Arcadius and Honorius, certain Hereticks rose up in Africk, called Abelites, or Abelonites, from Abel, who condemned Marriages; not that they thought this State of Life to be in itself blameable, for they were themselves married; but they condemned the Use of Wedlock, and abstained from that Conversation with their Wives, which was allowable. They said they would not bring unhappy Creatures into the World to be polluted with original Sin. The Mixture of both Sexes they looked upon as an Act to be detested; and that their Sect might not perish, they adopted the Sons and Daughters of their Neighbours, and made them Heirs to their Fortunes, on Condition that the Children to be born of them should belong to them. This Sect was of no long Continuance; such poor Creatures, so grosly deluded, must have been very soon undeceived[14].

Besides the Traditions of the Ancients which we have touched upon, the Mahometans, as well as Rabbins and Eastern Christians[15], have others which it may be proper to relate in this Place, for this, if for no other Reason, viz. that we may be thereby enabled to understand their Histories. The Mahometans say, that Eve was delivered at the same time of Cain and Aclima, or Aclimia, his Twin-Sister; and afterwards of Abel and Lebuda. The Eastern Christians call the two Sisters Azrun and Orain, and differ in this Story from the Mahometans in the Names only.

The two Brothers being arrived to a Maturity of Age, Adam was desirous of marrying them, and giving Abel's Twin-Sister to Cain for his Wife, and Cain's to Abel. This Choice was not agreeable to Cain, because his Sister Aclima was much more beautiful than Lebuda: He alledged that as they were created together in the same Womb, it was just that they should live together in the same Bed. Adam replied to him, that God had ordained otherwise in this Matter, and that it did not depend on him. To this Cain made Answer, You design to give the most beautiful Woman to my Brother, because he is more your Favourite than I am. Well, says Adam, if you would be better instructed in the Will of God, let each of you offer a Sacrifice to him, and he whose Sacrifice shall be accepted by God, shall have Aclima to Wife.

To this Abel consented, and in case God should not testify by some Marks that he approved his Sacrifice, resolved to marry Lebuda his Twin-Sister. Cain, on the contrary, pretended indeed to acquiesce in Adam's Proposal, but with a secret Resolution, that let what wou'd happen to his Sacrifice, he wou'd never resign his Sister to his Brother.

Abel, who was a Shepherd, chose the fattest Weather of his Flock, and offered it to God upon the Brow of a Hill. Cain, who was a Husbandman, took a Sheaf out of his Crop with the least Quantity of Ears in it that he could find, and presented it to God upon the Top of a neighbouring Mountain. The Offerings of the two Brothers were no sooner disposed in a proper Manner, but a Flame from Heaven very bright and without Smoke, descended and consumed Abel's Sacrifice, without touching that of Cain.

Rage, Spite, and Envy took immediate Possession of Cain's Heart: He determined to make away with his Brother, insulted him with opprobrious Language, and threatned to kill him. Abel replied to him, God accepts the Sacrifices of those only who fear him, and who offer them with a sincere and pure Intention: If you attempt to lay violent Hands on me, I will not defend my self by taking away your Life; but he who is the Lord of all Creatures, whom I fear and worship, he will be my Avenger.

Cain hearkening only to his Passion, was confirmed in the Design of destroying his Brother, but not knowing how to go about it, the Devil appear'd to him in the Shape of a Man holding a Bird in his Hand; the Bird he placed upon a Rock, took up a Stone and with it squeezed its Head to Pieces. Cain instructed by this Example, resolved to serve his Brother in the same way. He waited till Abel was asleep, and lifting up a large Stone, he let it fall with all its Weight upon his Head, and killed him. At the same time God caused him to hear a Voice from Heaven, which cried out to him in these Terms, Thou shalt pass the rest of thy Days in continual Fear.

In reality, from this Moment he found himself terribly perplexed; for he was apprehensive lest the Crime committed by him should be discovered to his Father, and not knowing what to do with his Brother's Body, he inclosed it in a Skin, which for forty Days he carried about with him, wheresoever he went. But as the Stink of the dead Body grew troublesome to him, he was forced from time to time to set it down, and the Birds of Prey and wild Beasts took the Opportunity of falling upon it, and always carried off some Pieces of it.

One Day he perceived two Ravens fighting in the Air, one whereof falling down dead, the other with his Beak and Claws made a Hole to bury it. Cain thought it was convenient for him to do the same, and in Imitation of the Raven buried his Brother. From that time Terror and Remorse laid fast hold of him, he began to run here and there over the World like a Vagabond, dreading to meet one Day the same Treatment from some or other, which his Brother had received from him, and fearing to appear before his Parents after the Perpetration of so great a Sin. His Repentance wrought no Change in his wicked Heart, nor did he endeavour to make any Expiation of his Crime to God. He was unhappily killed by one of his Grand-children, who having an Imperfection in his Sight mistook him for a wild Beast. See hereafter the Article CAIN. The Hebrew Book intitled Cozri, informs us, that the Ground of the Quarrel between Cain and Abel, proceeded from Cain's desiring to have Possession of Palestine, exclusive of his Brother Abel.

St. Paul speaks in Commendation of [Heb. xi.4.] Abel, telling us, that by Faith he offered unto God a more excellent Sacrifice than Cain; and that he was declared righteous, God himself having testified that he had accepted his Gifts, and that by Reason of his Faith his Blood still speaketh, even after [Ch. xii. 24.] his Death. The same Apostle compares the Voice of Abel's Blood, to that of Jesus Christ's; and our Saviour in the Gospel places him at the Head of those Saints who had been persecuted for Righteousness [Mat.xxiii 35. and Luke xi. 51.] sake; and distinguishes him by the Name of righteous. St. Ambrose with much Eloquence extols the Merit and Sanctity of Abel, in the two Books composed by him upon this Occasion. He may be properly reckoned the first Martyr to Truth and Justice. His Sacrifice is mentioned in the Sacrifice of the Mass, together with those of Abraham and Melchisedec; and Invocation has been made to him a long time in Litanies, for the Recommendation of the Souls of the deceased. The Worship of him does not appear to be of any great Antiquity in the Church, and his Name is not to be met with in any of the Martyrologies of the Latins before the tenth Century[16]. Some Calendars commemorate him on the twenty fifth of March, on the very Day of our Saviour's Death, as many have fixed it; others on the second of January; others on the thirtieth of July. It is said that he is honoured among the Ethiopians, upon the twenty eighth of December.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ita Joseph. Antiq. l. 1. c. 3. & Hebræi, & Calvin.

Autor Operis imperfecti in Matth. homil. 1.

Theodotion in Genes. Hieronym. qu. Hebr. in Genes.

Eutych. Alexand. Annal. Arab. Lat. p. 16.

Targum Ierosol. in Genes. iv. 5.

Iren. l. 5. c. 67.

Prudent. Hamartigen.

Chrys. in Genes. homil. 19.

Translators' note. It is most probable that Cain knock'd his Brother on the Head with some great Stone, which, as is observ'd by an ingenious Author, was one of the first ordinary and most natural Weapons of Anger. ——— Saxum circumspicit ingens Ille manu raptum trepidâ torquebat in hostem. VIRG. Æn. XII.

Joseph. Antiq. l. 1. c. 3.

Basil. Amb. alii apud Cornel. à Lapide Auth. de Mirabilib. S. Script. l. 1. c. 3.

Vide Salian. Annal. T. 1. p. 94.

Chrysost. in Matth. Homil. 1.

See S. Aug. Hæresf. 87.

D'Herbelot. Bibl. Orient. Cabil.

Baillet vie des SS. de l'ancien Test. xxx. Juillet.

Abel

ABEL, Abila, Hobal, or Hoba, or Abelbeth-Maacah, or Abel-maim, a Town situated to the left, that is, to the North of Damascus, between Libanus and Antilibanus. It is the same with Abila, under the Government of Lysanias, mentioned by St. Luke. Joab besieged it, during the Revolt of Sheba, Son of Bichri. Eusebius[1] places this Town between Paneas and Damascus. We are not to be surprized to see the same Place described under so many different Names; many Examples of the same nature will be seen in the Course of this Work. Antoninus, in his Itinerary, fixes it between Damascus and Heliopolis. Josephus and others call it sometimes Abilla in Libanus.

We have related the Occasion of the War carried on by Joab against Sheba, under the Article SHEBA; we shall here only make some Observations on the Siege abovementioned.

The investing of Places, and Lines of Circumvallation, against the Attacks of those without, as well as Lines of Contravallation against the Enemy within, are so ancient that it is to no purpose to enquire after their Original in the Authors of Sacred and Prophane Antiquity, no more than of infinite other Practices attributed to the Greeks and Romans, or even to the Moderns themselves, which are not of a less elder Date than the Lines wherewith Places are environed. Herodotus asserts, in his first Book, that Harpagus the General, who commanded Cyrus's Army, was the Inventor of this kind of Lines, made use of to cut off all Hopes of Succour to the besieged, and prevent Attempts upon the Camp of the Besiegers. He tells us expressly, that the first City which was taken by this Invention was Phocæa in Ionia. But herein he is very wide of the Truth, for they were in use many Ages, even before the Persians were known in the World. When the Scripture speaks of investing Cities, we see no Particular whereby we may judge that this was the first time, or that the doing so was any thing new, or very uncommon. We can be sure therefore of nothing in this respect, since the Original of such Practices is not discovered to us.

We are farther to observe in this Siege, that the City was not only invested, but that a Ditch was dug in the Ground close to that belonging to the City, where the Archers made their Discharges without Annoyance from the Besieged, while they thus prevented any from appearing on the Walls, and so covered their Miners. So that Attacks carried on by crown'd Works were in use among the Hebrews long before the Greeks and Romans. Dom Calmet believes that they raised Terrasses or Cavaliers against the Walls: I am not of his Opinion; nor was it indeed possible, by Reason of the Greatness of the Work, which would have been exceeding tedious. This Terras was nothing else but a Ditch carried on near the Sides of the Counterscarp, and like our Trenches.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Euseb. in Locis.

Abela

ABELA, a City in Peræa, or Batanæa, or Land of Bashan, beyond Jordan, in the half Tribe of Manasseh, twelve Miles, or four Leagues, from Gadara Eastward. Eusebius and St. Jerom observe, that it was remarkable for its good Wines.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Abel of the Vineyards

[Judg. xi. 33.] ABEL OF THE VINEYARDS[1] was, according to Eusebius, six Miles from Philadelphia, otherwise Rabbath, the Capital of the Ammonites. It is probably the same with Abela, between Jabez and Gadara, and near to Pella. Eusebius takes notice of a Town called Arbela, subject to Pella, which may very well be the same with Abela.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Translators' note. In our English Translation, The Plain of the Vineyards. Heb. אבל כרמים.

Abel the Great

ABEL THE GREAT, is a large Stone [1 Sam. vi. 18, 19. in the Year of the World 2888. before J. C. 1112. before the vulg. Æra 1116.] found in a Field belonging to one Joshua a Bethshemite, on which the Ark was placed when it was sent back by the Philistines. It was called by this Name, which signifies great Mourning; probably by reason of the great Number of Bethshemites that were destroyed by God on this Occasion; for the Scripture tells us, that fifty thousand threescore and ten Bethshemites were smitten for looking into the Ark of the Lord.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Abel-Meholah

[1 Kings xix. 6. Ch. iv. 12.] ABEL-MEHOLAH, or Abel-mea, was Elisha's Country. It could not be far from Scythopolis. Eusebius places it in the great Plain, sixteen Miles from Scythopolis towards the South. Not far from hence [Jud. vii. 23.] Gideon obtained a Victory over the Midianites.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Abel-Mitzraim

ABEL-MITZRAIM, or the Mourning of the Egyptians, otherwise called, the Floor of Atad. St. Jerom, and some others after him, believe that this is the same Place which was afterwards called Bethagla, at some Distance from Jericho and Jordan, Westward of this River.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Abel-Shittim

ABEL-SHITTIM, was situated in the Plains of Moab, beyond Jordan, opposite to Jericho. Josephus[1] says, that Abel-Shittim, or Abela, as he calls it, was sixty Furlongs from Jordan; that is, seven Miles and a half from this River. Eusebius[2] says, it is in the Neighbourhood of Mount Peor. Moses encamped at Abel-Shittim some time before the Hebrew Army passed the Jordan, under the Conduct of Joshua. [Numbers xxxiii. 49. xxv. 1. Josh. xi. 1. Num. xxv. 1, 2, &c.] There the Israelites fell into Idolatry, and worshiped Baal-Peor. There it was too that God so severely punished them by the Hands of the Levites. This City is often called Shittim only.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Joseph. Antiq. l. 4. c. 7. & v. 1. & de Bello l. 5. c. 3.
Euseb. in Φογώρ. 1 Some believe that this Fire came from the Altar of Burnt-offerings; others that it proceeded from the Altar of Perfumes.

Aben-Bohan

ABEN-BOHAN, is the [Josh. xviii. 17.] Boundary-Stone which makes the Separation between the Tribes of Judah and Benjamin Eastward, in the Valley which leads to Adummim. It took its Name from Bohan, one of the Sons or Descendants of Reuben.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Abez

ABEZ. A City belonging to the Tribe of Issachar, Josh. xix. 20.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Abi

ABI. The Daughter of Zachariah, and Mother of Hezekiah King of Judah, 2 Kings xviii. 2.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Abiah

ABIAH. Second Son to Samuel, and Brother to Joel. Samuel having trusted them with the Administration of publick Justice, and admitted them to a Share of the Government, they behaved so ill in this Employment, that they obliged the People [1 Sam. viii.] to require a King of him. This happened in the Year of the World 2909. before J. C. 1191. before the vulgar Æra 1195.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Abi-Albon

ABI-ALBON, a Native of Arbath, and [2 Sam. xxiii. 31.] one of the gallant Men in David's Army.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Abiathar

ABIATHAR, the Son of Ahimelech, and the tenth High Priest among the [2 Sam. viii. 17. 1 Chron. xviii. 16.] Jews. He is sometimes called Ahimelech or Abimelech. When Saul sent his Emissaries to Nob, in order to destroy all the Priests there, Abiathar, who at that time was young, was preserved from this [1 Sam. xxii. 11, & seq.] Slaughter, and retired to David in the Wilderness. There he continued in the Quality of High Priest, while Saul, out of Aversion to Ahimelech, who, as he thought, had betray'd his Interests, transferr'd the Dignity of High Priest from Ithamar's Family into that of Eleazar, by conferring [1 Chr. vi. 53.] this Office upon Zadock. Thus there were at the same time two High Priests in Israel; Abiathar in David's, and Zadock in Saul's Party. In this State Things continued from the Death of Ahimelech, until the Reign of Solomon; when Ahimelech being attached to the Party of Adonijah, was deprived by Solomon of his Priesthood in the Year 2989, and the Race of Zadok alone performed the Functions of this Ministry, during the Reign of Solomon, exclusive of the Family of Ithamar, according to the Prediction which had been made to Eli the [1 Sam. xi. 30, 31, & seq. & iii. 11,12,&c. Ex. xiii. 4. אביב A-bib.] High Priest.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Abiathar

ABIATHAR. This Name is sometimes given to Ahimelech the Father of Abiathar, of whom we have been just now speaking, Mark xi. 26.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Abib

ABIB, is the Name given by the Hebrews to the first Month of their Ecclesiastical Year. This Month was afterwards called Nisan. It answers to our March. Abib signifies green Ears of Corn, or fresh Fruits, according to St. Jerom's Translation: Mense novarum frugum, Exod. xiii. 4.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Abidan

ABIDAN, the Son of one Gideon, of the Tribe of Benjamin. He was Prince of his Tribe at the time when the Tabernacle was built, and the Israelites came out of Egypt. His Offering, like that of other principal Persons of the several Tribes, was a silver Charger, the weight whereof was an hundred and thirty shekels, a silver Bowl of an hundred [Num vii. 60.] and seventy shekels, a vessel of Gold weighing ten shekels, filled with Incense; a young Bullock, a Ram, a Lamb of a year old, for a Burnt-offering; two Oxen, five Rams, five He-goats, five Lambs, for a Peace -offering, and a Kid for a Sin offering.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Abiel

ABIEL, or Jehiel, the Father of Kish and Ner, and Grandsfather to Saul, the first [1 Sam. ix. 1.] King of the Jews.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Abiezer

ABIEZER, of the Tribe of Benjamin, and Town of Anathoth, was one of the [1 Chr. xi. 28.] thirty gallant Men of David's Army.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Abi-Gabaon

ABI-GABAON, otherwise called Ner, the Father of Abdon and Kish, and was one of Saul's Ancestors, and a principal Inhabitant [1 Chr. viii. 29.] of Gibeon.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Abigail

ABIGAIL, was first of all Wife to Nabal of Carmel, and after his Death was married to David, which Particular happened after this Manner: David flying from the Persecution of Saul, continued for a long Time in the Mountains where Nabal kept his Flocks, South of Palestine, towards Carmel of the Tribe of Judah, very different from another Carmel in the Tribe of Issachar, situated on the Mediterranean. David's Troops did no Prejudice to Nabal's People or his Flocks, but were rather a great Assistance to them in protecting them from Robbers; so that during all the Time of their Abode there, he lost none of his [1 Sam. xxv. 15, 16, 21.] Cattle. Upon a certain Day, when Nabal was come to Carmel to the sheering of his Sheep, David sent some of his People to him, desiring some Present from him in consideration of that happy Circumstance (for the Time of Sheering was a Festival, and Time of great Rejoicing) and as a Reward for the many Services which his Shepherds had received from him, and those under his Command. Nabal not only refused to make David any Present, but treated him as a Servant, a Fugitive, and Rebel to his Prince, and so dismiss'd his Soldiers: This being reported to him, so inrag'd him, that he swore he would destroy Nabal and all his Family. Abigail being informed what kind of Answer her Husband had returned to David's Messengers, made all the Haste she could to repair this Fault: Some of her Asses she loaded with Provisions, and went herself to meet him, attended with several of her Domesticks: She offer'd him her Presents, and so won upon him by her discreet Conversation, that David conceived a great Esteem for her, accepted her Presents, and returned. Nabal, having understood the Danger he had run, fell sick, and died ten Days after. As soon as this was known to David, he sent to demand Abigail for his Wife: She received this Honour with great Acknowledgments, and when the Days of Mourning for her Husband were over, she went to David's Camp, and was married to him. The Issue of this Marriage was two Sons, Chileab and Daniel.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Abihail (1)

ABIHAIL, the Son of Huri, and Father of Michael, Meshullam, and some others, [2 Sam. iii. 3, &c. and 1 Chr. iii. 1. It may be that Chileab and Daniel are but one and the same Person; for the 2d of Samuel, which speaks of Chileab, says nothing of Daniel; and the 1st of Chr. which mentions Daniel, says nothing of Chileab. Chileab, says nothing of Daniel; and the 1st of Chr. which mentions Daniel, says nothing of Chileab. 2 Chr. xi. 18, 19. Lev. x. 2. Lev. x. 9, 1 Kings xiv. 10, &c.] 1 Chr. v. 12, 14.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Abihail (2)

ABIHAIL, the Father of Zuriel, of the Family of Merari, Numb. iii. 35.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Abihail (3)

ABIHAIL, the Father of Queen Esther, and Brother of Mordecai, Esth. xi. 15.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Abihail (4)

ABIHAIL, the Daughter of Eliab, David's Brother, and Wife to Rehoboam, King of Judah: She was the Mother of Jeush, Shamariah, and Zaham.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Abihu

ABIHU, the Son of Aaron the High-Priest, and Elisheba, was consumed together with his Brother Nadab, by Fire sent from God1, because he had offer'd Incense with strange Fire instead of taking it from the Altar of Burnt-offerings. This Misfortune happen'd within eight Days after the Consecration of Aaron and his Sons, and the Dedication of the Tabernacle in the Year of the World 2514, before Jesus Christ 1486, before the vulgar Æra 1490. Many Commentators are of Opinion[1], that Nadab and Abihu were overtaken with Wine, and so forgot to take the sacred Fire in their Censers. This Conjecture is founded on the Command of God immediately after deliver'd to the Priests, forbidding them the Use of Wine all the Time they should be imploy'd in the Service of the Temple. Some Interpreters tell us, that these two Brothers, who were punished by God so severely for this Fault, did not herein commit any mortal Sin[2], but that God in this World inflicted on them the whole Penalty of their Neglect, in order to procure eternal Salvation for them in the other, and exhibit an Example in their Persons of that Exactness and Fidelity wherewith God requires his Ministers to serve him.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Rabbini, Lyran. Cajet. alii.
Tostat. & Corn. a Lapide in Levit. x.

Abijah (1)

ABIJAH, the Son of Jeroboam, who was the first King of the ten Tribes. This young Prince was seized with a very dangerous Disease; and his Mother having disguised herself, in order to go and ask the Prophet Ahijah whether he would recover; Abijah answer'd, that he would die, that he would be the only Person of his Family who should receive Funeral Honours, and be lamented by all Israel; but that all the other Descendants from Jero boam should be either eaten by Dogs, or devoured by Birds, as a Punishment of his Impiety and Ingratitude. Abijah on his Mother's Return died, in the Year of the World 3046, before Jesus Christ 954, before the vulgar Æra 958.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Abijah (2)

ABIJAH was King of Judah, and Successor to Rehoboam: His Mother's Name [Compare 2 Chr. xi. 20. and 2 Chr. xiii. 2.] was Maachah or Micaiah, the Daughter of Uriel or Absalom. Rehoboam had eighteen Wives and sixty Concubines, but Maachah had most of his Affection. Her Son Abijah he advanced above all his other Sons, whom he had by so great a Number of Wives. Abijah succeeded his Father in the Year of the World 3046, before Jesus Christ 954, before the vulgar Æra 958. He reigned three Years, and imitated the Impiety and bad Conduct of his Father. He died in the Year of the World 3049, before Jesus Christ 951, before the vulgar Æra 955.

Abijah, King of Judah, and Jeroboam [1 Kings xv. 5. 2 Chr. xiii. 1, 2, 3, 4, &c. There are many MSS. and printed Bibles that read only 40 and 80 thousand instead of 400 and 800 thousand Men, as we read in the Vulgate: But the Heb. and LXX, Josephus and the best Latin Bibles, both MSS. and printed, agree in this Place with the Vulgate.] , the first King of Israel, were at War with one another. Abijah having got together an Army of four hundred thousand Men of Judah and Benjamin, incamped upon Mount Zemaraim, upon which Samaria afterwards was built. Jeroboam march'd against him at the Head of eight hundred thousand Men, collected out of all his Dominions. Abijah was willing to harangue the Enemies Army, with the Hopes of engaging them by this Means to submit themselves once more to the House of David, and return to the Worship of the Lord. But while he was speaking, Jeroboam order'd Part of his Troops to file off behind the Mountain without the Enemy's perceiving it, with a Design to hem in Abijah's Army, which was much inferior in Number. Abijah and his People saw what was doing, and began to cry unto the Lord, and implore his Assistance. The Priests sounded the holy Trumpets; God struck the Hearts of the Enemy with Terror, and the Army of Judah attacked them with so much Fury, that they killed five hundred thousand upon the Spot. Abijah pursuing his Victory took several Cities from Jeroboam; among others Bethiel, Jeshanah, and Ephrain, and the Israelites were so much humbled under the Hand of Judah, that they had not the Courage to undertake any thing farther against them. The Rabbins reproach Abijah with neglecting to destroy the profane Altar which Jeroboam had erected at Bethel, and with not suppressing the Worship of the Golden Calves there. He was married to fourteen Wives, of whom he had two and twenty Sons and sixteen Daughters. Asa succeeded him, in the Year of the World 3049, before Jesus Christ 951, before the vulgar Æra 955.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Abijah (3)

[2 Chr. xxiv. 21.] 3. ABIJAH, the Wife of Ahaz, and the Mother of Hezekiah, King of Judah. Some are of Opinion that she was the Daughter of Zechariah, who was killed by the Command of Joash between the Temple and the Altar.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Abijah (4)

ABIJAH was one of the Descendants of Eleazar, the Son of Aaron, and Chief of one of the four and twenty Companies of Priests, whom David distributed into so [1 Chr. xxiv. 10. Luke i. 5.] many Classes. Zechariah, the Father of John Baptist, was of the Course of Abia or Abijah, which was the eighth of the four and twenty.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Abijah (5)

ABIJAH, King of the Parthians, who made war with Izates, King of the Adiabenians, at the Sollicitation of the Grandees of his Kingdom, who were in Arms against him, because he had embraced the Jewish Religion. Abijah was routed, and compell'd to shut himself up in a Castle, where he was so much straiten'd, that in despair he killed himself, to prevent his falling into the Enemy's Hands[1].

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Joseph. Antiq. l. xx. c. 2.

Abila

ABILA, the same as Abela, the Capital of Abylene. See ABELA.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Abilene

ABILENE, a small Province in Cœle-Syria, between Libanus and Antilibanus, whereof Lysanias was some time Master. Abela or Abila, the Capital of Abylene, was North of Damascus and Paneas, and South of Heliopolis. See the Map, and ABEL above.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Abimael

ABIMAEL, the Son of Joktan, according to some Authors, dwelt in Arabia; according to others in Armenia, in the neighbouring Countries. See our Comment upon Genesis x. 25.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Abimelech (1)

ABIMELECH, King of Gerar, having been extremely touch'd with the Beauty of Sarah, the Wife of Abraham, forced her from him, and took her for his Wife: But God did not permit him to meddle with her; for he appeared to him in the Night, and threaten'd him with death unless he restored her instantly to Abraham her Husband. Abimelech pleaded Ignorance in excuse for this Action, saying, that he took her upon Assurances from Abraham that she was his Sister: The next day therefore he sent her back to him, and complained to him of being thus deceived by him. Abraham confessed she was his Wife, but withal told him that she was his Sister also, being born of the same Father, but by another Mother. Abimelech made great Presents to him, and gave Sarah a thousand pieces of silver, desiring her to purchase a Veil with this money for a covering to her Face. At the same time he gave Abraham a Caution not to expose himself any more to the like inconveniency. He made an offer to him of chusing any part of his Dominions that was most agreeable to him for his Habitation tion, and begg'd him to intercede with God for the Cure of his Family, which, for the sake of Sarah, had been afflicted with great Plagues. Abraham did so, and the Wives of this Prince, by the favour of God, recover'd their Fertility, or the faculty of Conception. It appears by the 17th Verse of the 20th Chapter of Genesis, that Abimelech himself was seized with some indisposition, which was the Cause of Impotency. See likewise the 6th Verse of the same [Genes. xx. 17. So Abraham prayed unto God, and God healed Abimelech and his Wife, and his Maid servants, and they bare Children.] Chapter, Therefore suffered I thee not to touch her. The Commentators may be consulted concerning the moral goodness or evil of this Action of Abraham. All this fell out in the year of the World 2107, before Jesus Christ 1893, before the vulgar Æra 1897.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Abimelech (2)

ABIMELECH, King of Gerar, and son to him of whom we have been just now speakingp. This Prince having one day seen Isaac sporting with his Wife Rebekah, whom he called his Sister, Abimelech order'd him to be sent for, and said to him, It is visible that this woman is your Wife, why then do you say she is your Sister? Isaac answer'd, because, I said, lest I die for [Genes. xxvi. 1, 2, &c. In the Year of the World 2200, before J. C. 1800. before the vulgar Æra 1807.] her. Whereupon Abimelech publish'd this Declaration, He that toucheth this Man or his Wife shall surely be put to death. Now as Isaac grew extremely rich and powerful, his Posterity stirr'd up the envy of the Philistines; and Abimelech said to him, Go from us, for thou art much mightier than we. Hereupon Isaac immediately retired into the valley of Gerar, and afterwards to Beersheba, where Abimelech some time after came to visit him, in order to make an Alliance with him: In his company were Abuzzath, his Favourite, and Phicol, the Commander in chief of his Army. Isaac when he received them said, Wherefore come ye to me, seeing ye hate me, and have sent me away from you? To which Abimelech replied, that he had observed how much he was favour'd by God, and was therefore come to make a Covenant with him. Upon this Isaac entertained them splendidly, and the next day made a Treaty with them; after which they returned in Peace to their own home. This happened about the year 2200, before Jesus Christ 1800, before the vulgar Æra 1804.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Abimelech (3)

ABIMELECH, the Son of Gideon, was begotten of a Concubine, whom Gideon had at Shechem. After the death of his Father, he took possession of the Government, [Judg. ix. 6. In the Year of the World 2768. before J. C. 1232. before the vulgar Æra 1236. Judg. ix. 22.] and procured himself to be acknowledged King, or Judge of Israel, first by those of Shechem, where his Mother's family had an interest, and afterwards by a great part of the other Israelites. They of Shechem having made a present to him of seventy shekels of Silver, with this Money he levied a troop of Vagabonds, who follow'd him. Being come to his Father Gideon's house at Ophrah, he killed seventy Sons whom he had left behind him upon one Stone; so that Jotham only remained, the youngest of them all, who was concealed, and privately deliver'd from his Cruelty. Soon after the inhabitants of Shechem, with those of Millo, being all assembled near the Oak of Shechem to make Abimelech the Son of Gideon King, Jotham, upon receiving intelligence of their Design, appear'd upon the top of Mount Gerizim, and raising his Voice, address'd himself to the Assembly of the People in these Terms: “The Trees went forth on a time to appoint a King over them, and they said unto the Olive-tree Reign thou over us: But the Olive-tree said unto them, Should I leave my Fatness, wherewith by me they honour God and Man, and go to be promoted over the Trees? And the Trees said to the Fig-tree, Come thou and reign over us: but the Fig-tree said unto them, Should I forsake my Sweetness, and my good Fruit, and go to be promoted over the Trees? Then said the Trees unto the Vine, Come thou and reign over us; and the Vine said unto them, Should I leave my Wine, which cherisheth God and Man, and go to be promoted over the Trees? Then said all the Trees unto the Bramble, Come thou and reign over us; and the Bramble said unto them, If in truth ye anoint me to be King over you, then come and put your Trust in my shadow; and if not, let Fire come out of the Bramble, and devour the Cedars of Lebanon. Now therefore consider, said Jotham, proceeding in his Harangue, whether you had reason to elect Abimelech for your King, one who was the lowest of all Gideon's Family, and whether you have acknowledged as you ought to do the Services of my Father, who deliver'd you from the Bondage of the Midianites, and exposed his Life to procure your Liberty, by chusing that Person for your King who upon one Stone murder'd seventy of my Father's Sons, thereby demonstrating your Approbation of this Action, and making yourselves Accomplices in it. You have chosen Abimelech to be your Prince, who is the Son of my Father's Maidservant: If in this Particular your Conduct be just, may Abimelech and you contribute to the Happiness of each other; but if you have acted contrary to all Equity, may Abimelech and the Inhabitants of Shechem and Millo, be mutually the Destruction of each other; “ may[1] " may Fire issue out from each to the utter Ruin of you all." Having so said, he fled, and retired to Beer, where he dwelt, fearing the violence of Abimelech. The Lord permitted Division to arise very soon among the Inhabitants of Shechem, who beginning to reflect on the injustice of their Conduct, detested the Cruelty of Abimelech, who had massacred seventy Sons of Gideon his Father. While therefore he was absent, they revolted from him, and laid an Ambuscade in the Mountains, with a design to kill him in his return to Shechem. Abimelech had intelligence of what was doing from Zebul, whom he had left Governour of Shechem. Those of the City had invited one Gaal to their assistance, with whom, at a great entertainment, they began to utter a thousand Imprecations against Abimelech; who in the mean time got some Troops together, and marched all night towards Shechem. The next day in the morning it was perceived that there were People descending from the Hills, and it was immediately discovered that Abimelech was there with his Forces. Gaal went out of Shechem with what Soldiers he had, and gave Battle to Abimelech, but lost it; and as he was endeavouring to re -enter the City, Zebul forced him from thence, and obliged him to retire.

[Observations on the Battle fought near Shechem, between Gaal and Abimelech.] □ To give a true and accurate explanation of this Battle we are not obliged to have recourse to Conjectures, nothing being more exact and clear than the account we have from Scripture of the order and disposition of the two Armies.

Upon the intelligence which Abimelech [Judg. ix. 30, &c.] received from Zebul, who commanded in Shechem, that Gaal had made himself Master of it, and had a number of Troops sufficient to encourage him to take the Field, and try the Fortune of a Battle; he resolved to march towards him under the favour of a dark night, and attack him in the Plain, to prevent by this means his engaging in a Siege, and giving the Enemy an opportunity to look about him, and take those Advantages which a surprize never fails to deprive us of. If we were to keep to the French Translation, we might imagine from Zebul's message to Abimelech, that the latter was superior to his Adversary in the number of his Troops. This Passage might be produced as a proof of it, Gaal and the People that is with him will come out against thee, then, usez de vos forces. Which words usez de vos forces, might be understood as if Abimelech was the strongest in number; but the Latin Text to me seems to say the quite contrary, fac ei quod potueris, do all that is possible for you to do against such an Enemy. I am very much inclined to think that he was inferior to the other, or at least that their Forces were on both sides pretty equal. Had Abimelech been the strongest, he would have attempted something against the City, or Gaal would not have ventured out of it; but he lay waiting for the appearance of day, behind the Mountains near Shechem, lest he should be discovered by the Inhabitants who were marched out of the City, and had had all that time to range themselves in order of Battle, and choose the most advantageous Post to engage in.

The Author makes use of the Word Insidiæ, which in the case here before us does not seem to me to signify an Ambuscade laid for Gaal; for by the word Ambuscade is meant a covert or secret place, where People lie in wait for an Enemy in order to surprize and hem him in on all sides. Whereas it was Abimelech's design to quit this Post, and march forward to his Enemies, in order to engage them in the Plain without the City: Let this be as it will, Abimelech, after he had allowed his Troops some time to rest themselves in a place which was not in the least proper for an Ambuscade, descends about break of day from the Mountains, or shews himself upon the Hills, in order to leave his Enemy at liberty to draw all his Troops out of the City, and fall upon him with all his Forces, without giving him leisure to recover out of the Surprize wherein he expected certainly to find him. It appears that Gaal had intelligence of his Adversary's advancing towards him. It appears likewise, that Zebul, whom he did not in the least distrust, had given him certain notice of their march; Treacheries of this kind are hard to be discovered, and the Traitors who are concerned in them pass always for Men of fidelity with a rash and unexperienced General. Gaal shews Zebul that his Enemies appeared upon the Eminences near the City, but pretends not to be assured of it. To this Zebul replies, Thou seest the shadow of the Mountains, which seem to be Mens heads to thee, and this deceives thee. At length Gaal demonstrates to him that they are the Enemy. The Traitor hereupon observing him to be in dispute with himself what resolution to take, and fearing lest he should pursue one quite contrary to that which he had determined upon when he was at a distance from Abimelech, and which was the least discreet and prudent one that he could follow, he endeavours to engage him to it by the sharpness of his Raillery, saying, Where is now thy Mouth, wherewith thou saidst, Who is Abimelech that we should serve him? Is not this the People that thou hast despised? Go out, I pray thee, now, and fight with them. He marched out therefore, without doubt hastily; which Abimelech made advantage of. of. It is clear from the account in Scripture that Abimelech drew up his Army in four Bodies. It is probable that Gaal's Troops appeared in the same Order, and like People surprized were broke at the first onset.

The next day after Gaal's defeat the Men of Shechem all in Arms made a sally upon Abimelech; but he being before inform'd of their design, had divided his Army into three Bodies, and dispos'd it in Ambuscade at different places. As soon therefore as the Shechemites appeared, he rose from the place of his concealment, and charged them so fiercely, that he broke and routed them. Then the rest of his People, who had hitherto kept close, rose likewise from the place where they lay hid, and pursued the Run-a-ways through the Plain. As for Abimelech, he marched directly to the City, and having battered it for one whole day, he made himself Master of it, sack'd and destroy'd it in such a manner that he sowed Salt upon the ground where it stood. Those of Shechem who escaped, fled to a Tower which was extremely strong. Abimelech resolved that they should all perish in it; to this end he went with his People to Mount Zalmon, and having cut down great quantities of Wood, he set fire to the Tower, and all who were in it were either destroyed by the flames, or stifled with the smoke. See hereafter, TOWER OF SHECHEM.

[Observations on the Battle between Abimelech and the Shechemites. Judg. ix.] Abimelech had defeated Gaal near Shechem, who was determined to be revenged of him; by which resolution it appears that Abimelech's Victory was a little dubious, or that it was no more than a Rout; now a Rout so near a place of strength cannot be supposed to be very bloody. Without question Zebul informed Abimelech of this Enterprize, and was as much consulted by Gaal, as he had been the day before. We must imagine that the word Ambuscade, which the Scripture every where makes use of, had different significations: There is no room to doubt of this, if we consider with the least attention the different Actions wherein this word is employed; for we shall find that it rarely signifies an Ambuscade in the literal sense of this Term; nor even a Stratagem, or piece of martial Cunning. This deserves notice, for it is not said that the Shechemites fell into a Snare laid for them by Abimelech, who perhaps was encamp'd behind the Hills near the City, where he waited till Gaal should lead his Troops out, in order to engage him in the Plain. Abimelech took his Army, says the sacred Author, and divided it into three Companies, and laid Ambuscades for them in the Fields: When he saw therefore that the Inhabitants were come forth out of the City he rose from his Ambuscade. In this Action Abimelech drew up his Forces in three Bodies, in tres turmas. I should be glad to know whether the word turmas answers to the Hebrew term in this place; the Latin word here used signifies a Squadron; now it is certain that the two Armies were composed of Foot only. I know very well that the word cohors does not always mean a Body of between five and six hundred Foot. In Vegetius it is often taken for a Wing. The turmæ of the Asiatick People were very large, they consisted frequently of a thousand Horse in front and depth, as may be seen in many places of Polybius, and in Xenophon's Retreat. It may be very well supposed therefore, that the Jews might alike call a large Body of Horse or Foot turmæ. But however this may be, Abimelech might notwithstanding draw up his Army in three Bodies, encamp in the same disposition, and engage the Enemy, who perhaps were ranged in the same order. But I return to the word Ambush, which perplexes me as often as I meet with it in Scripture, where, as I have said already, it is frequently made use of. I am of Opinion, that this word was farther used to signify leaving one's Post, and marching towards the Enemy. See what D. Calmet says under the word Ambushes. I shall say nothing of what happeded on the score of Gaal's Defeat, but shall refer the Reader to the Author's learned Comment, which is admirable, and abounds with curious and uncommon Learning.

From Shechem Abimelech marched towards the City of Thebez, which was about three Leagues Eastward from it, and had likewise taken up Arms against him. The People of Thebez had all retired to a strong Tower situated in the midst of the City, and there had fortified themselves. Abimelech made his Approaches, and was determin'd to set fire to the Gate; but a Woman from the top of the Tower throwing a piece of a Milstone on his Head, broke his Skull so that his Brains issued from the Wound. He immediately therefore called his Armour-bearer, and said, Draw thy Sword and slay me, that Men say not of me, a Woman slew him. When they who followed him saw him dead, they all returned to their own Houses. This happened in the Year of the World 2769. before J. C. 1231. before the vulgar Æra 1235. Tola succeeded him in his Office of Judge of Israel.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Some Interpreters think this to be the same Abimelech, which is not absolutely impossible; but it is more probable that this is his Son.

Abimelech

ABIMELECH. The Priest of the Lord, who gave Goliath's Sword to David, at the time when this Prince was flying from the Persecutions of Saul. Several Latin Copies read Abimelech; the Septuagint do the same. But in the Hebrew it is Achimelech, and this is the true Reading. Reading. See hereafter ACHIMELECH. He is called Abiathar in the Gospel of St. Mark, c. xi. 26.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Abinadab (1)

ABINADAB, David's Brother, the Son of Jesse, 1 Chr. ii. 13.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Abinadab (2)

ABINADAB, the Son of Saul. See AMINADAB.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Abinadab (3)

ABINADAB, a Levite of Kirjath-jearim. See AMINADAB.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Abinoam

ABINOAM, the Father of Barak, Judg. iv. 6.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Abiram (1)

ABIRAM, the eldest Son of Hiel the Beth-elite. Joshua having destroyed the City of Jericho, pronounced this Curse, Cursed be the Man, before the Lord, that riseth up and buildeth this City Jericho: He shall lay the Foundation thereof in his First-born, and in his youngest Son shall he set up the Gate of it. Hiel of Bethel, about five hundred and thirty seven Years after this Imprecation, having undertaken to rebuild Jericho, while he was laying the Foundation of it, lost his eldest Son Abiram, and [Josh. vi. 26. In the Year of the World 2553, before J. C. 1447, before the vulgar Æra 1451. 1 Kings xvi. 34. In the Year of the World 3090, before J. C. 910. before the vulgar Æra 914. Num. xvi.] Segub the youngest when they hung up the Gates of it.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Abiram (2)

ABIRAM, one of those who conspir'd with Corah and Dathan against Aaron and Moses in the Wilderness. Abiram was the Son of Eliab, and Grandson to Phallu, of the Tribe of Reuben. Every one knows the terrible Punishment which God inflicted on these Rebels, by causing them to be swallowed up alive in the Bowels of the Earth, which opened to receive them.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Abishag

ABISHAG, a young Woman, a Native of Shunam, in the Tribe of Issachar. David, at the Age of about seventy, finding no Warmth in his Bed, was advis'd by his Physicians to procure some young Person who might communicate the Heat he wanted. To this End Abishag was presented to him, who was one of the most beautiful young Women in all Israel. The King made her his Wife, but did not know her for one whole Year that she continued near him. After his Death Adonijah demanding her in Marriage, Solomon believed with reason [1 Kings i. 3. In the Year of the World 2989, before J. C. 1011, before the vulgar Æra 1015. 1 Kings xi. 17.] that he might affect the regal Power when he was married to one of the late King's Wives; therefore he dispatch'd him, in the Year of the World 2991, before Jesus Christ 1009, before the vulgar Æra 1013.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Abishai

ABISHAI, the Son of Zuri and Zeruiah, David's Sister, was one of the most valiant Men of his time, and one of the principal Generals in David's Armies. Abishai vanquished Ishbi-benob, a Giant descended from the Rephaims, who bore a Lance, the Head whereof weighed three hundred shekels of Brass. This Giant was upon the point of killing David, when Abishai prevented him by giving him his Death's Wound. The same Abishai having one day enter'd [2 Sam. xxi. 16.] Saul's Tent in company with David, and finding him asleep, would have pierced him with his Sword; but David would not suffer it, contenting himself with carrying off this Prince's Spear, [1 Sam. xxvi. 7.] to shew that his Life had been within his power. When David, to preserve himself by flight from Absalom, was obliged to leave Jerusalem, Abishai shewed an inclination to kill Shimei, who insulted David in very offensive Language; but David check'd his Zeal, telling him that the Lord permitted this to happen with a design to humble him, and that he hoped God would have a regard to his Humility and Patience. [2 Sam. xvi. 9, 12. Ch. xviii. 2. Ch. x. 10.] Abishai commanded the third part of David's Army against Absalom. He commanded likewise part of the Army when his Brother Joab gave battle to the Ammonites. It is said in Scripture that he lift up his Spear against three hundred, and slew them all; but it is not known on what Occasion [Ch. xxiii. 18.] this happen'd, no more than the Time and manner of his Death.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Abishalom

ABISHALOM, Father of Maacha, who was Mother to Abijah, King of Judah, 1 Kings xv. 2.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Abishua

ABISHUA, the Son of Phinehas, and [1 Chr. vi. 50.] fourth High Priest of the Hebrews. He was succeeded by Bukki. Neither the Time of his continuing High-Priest, nor any other Particularity of his Life, is known to us. The Chronicon of Alexandria places Abishua under Ehud, Judge of Israel. He is called Abiezer in Josephus, Antiq. l. 5. c. ult.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Abital

ABITAL, the sixth Wife of David, and Mother of Shephatiah, 1 Chr. iii. 3.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Abiud

ABIUD, the Son of Zorobabel, and one of our Saviour's Ancestors according to the Flesh. See Matth. i. 13.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Abner

[From the Year of the World 2949 to 2956, before J. C. 1044, before the vulgar Æra 1048.] ABNER, Son of Ner, and General of Saul's Armies, preserved the Crown to Ishbosheth, the Son of this Prince, and supported him at Mahanaim beyond Jordan for seven Years, against the Forces of David, who then reigned at Hebron, in the Tribe of Judah. There were some Skirmishes from time to time between the two Parties of David and Ishbosheth, wherein David always had the Advantage. The two Generals Joab and Abner, one whereof commanded the Troops of David, the other Ishbosheth's, marching one day at the Foot [2 Sam. iii. 1. Ch. ii.] of Gibeon with their Armies, Abner said to Joab, Let the young Men now arise and play before us: And Joab said, Let them arise. Immediately twelve Men of Benjamin appeared which pertained unto Ishbosheth, and twelve of the Servants of David; and they caught every one his Fellow by the Head, and thrust his Sword in his Fellow's Side; so they fell down together. And there was a sore Battle that Day, and Abner was beaten before the Servants of David. The three Sons Sons of Zeruiah, David's Sister, Joab, Abishai, and Asahel, were in the Battle. Now Asahel was extremely swift, and as light of Foot as a wild Roe[1]. He therefore undertook to pursue Abner, without turning either to the right Hand or the left. Abner did all he could to make him fasten on some other Person ; but observing that he still continued to pursue him, he struck him with the hinder End of the Spear, and killed him on the Spot. Joab and Abishai notwithstanding persisted still to follow after Abner until Sunset. Then Abner's whole Army being gather'd about him on an Eminence, he called to Joab and said, Shall your Sword be never satisfied with Blood and Slaughter? Don't you know that it is dangerous to make an Enemy desperate? Joab replied, As the Lord liveth, if you had spoken sooner the People had long since retir'd. At the same time he sounded the Trumpet, and the whole Army withdrew from the Pursuit of Abner.

Some time after Abner quarrelled with Ishbosheth about a Concubine of Saul's, with abusing of whom Ishbosheth accused [2 Sam. iii. 7, 8, & seq. about the Year of the World 2956, before J.C. 1044, before the vulgar Æra 1048.] Abner. Abner was strangely provok'd with this Reproach; and answer'd, Am I one to be treated like a Dog, I who have declared against Judah, and supported the House of Saul your Father, while it was sinking; and after all do you now quarrel with me for a Woman? May God treat me with all the Severity that can be, if I do not procure that which he hath promised with an Oath to David, and make him to be acknowledged King throughout all Israel, from Dan even to Beersheba. Ishbosheth had not Resolution to make any Reply, because he fear'd Abner. Then Abner sent Messengers to David on his Behalf, saying, Whom does all this Country belong to but to you? If therefore you will admit me to your Friendship, I offer you my Service, and will make you Master of all Israel. To this David consented, and sent him word that he asked only one thing of him, which was, that he would bring Michal back with him, the Daughter of Saul, who had been his Wife, but was given to Phaltiel by her Father. Abner therefore sent her to him, and began to speak to the Elders of Israel in favour of David. When he had thus wrought upon them, he went to David, who was at Hebron, to acquaint him with their good Dispositions. David received him with abundance of Caresses, made a great Entertainment for him, and bad him go and endeavour to reduce all Israel as he had promised. He was scarce got out of Hebron, when Joab and his People return'd thither from an Expedition : they were told that Abner had been with David, and had made an Alliance with him. Joab thereupon immediately applied himself to the King, saying, What have you done? Why have you let Abner go? Do you not know what sort of a Man he is, and that he came only to deceive you, and to observe your Motions? At the same time he went out of the King's Presence, and without his Knowledge sent after Abner, desiring him to return: Accordingly Abner being come to Hebron, Joab took him aside in the Gate as if he had a design of speaking to him privately, and stabb'd him in the Groin, to revenge by this means the Death of his Brother Asahel. David being informed of what had pass'd, shewed publickly his Concern at it, made a solemn Funeral for Abner, attended it himself in Person, composed a mournful Song in honour of him, and after this swore that he would eat nothing till the Evening. Thus Abner died in the Year of the World 2956, before Jesus Christ 1044, before the vulgar Æra 1048.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Translators' note. Josephus says of him, that he would out-run ἵππον κατασπάντα εἰς ἁμιλλαν, which, as one observes, is no such great Matter. The Poets are bolder in their Expressions upon the Swiftness of some Persons. Virgil upon Nisus, Æn. 5. Emicat & ventis, & fulminis ocyor alis. And of Camilla, with more of an Hyperbole, Æn. 7. Illa vel intactæ segetis per summa volaret Gramina, nec teneras cursu læsisset aristas.

Abomination

ABOMINATION, Shepherds were an [Gen. xlvi. 34. Ex. viii. 26.] Abomination to the Egyptians. The Hebrews were to sacrifice the Abominations of the Egyptians in the Wilderness, that is to say, their sacred Animals, Oxen, Goats, Lambs, and Rams, the Sacrifices whereof were look'd upon by the Egyptians as Abominations, and Things utterly unlawful. The Scripture generally terms Idolatry and Idols Abomination, not only because the Worship of Idols is in itself something abominable, but likewise because the Ceremonies of Idolaters were almost always attended with Licentiousness, and Actions of an infamous and abominable Nature. Moses also calls those Animals abominable, the use whereof was prohibited to the Hebrews.

THE ABOMINATION OF DESOLATION, foretold by Daniel, according to the best Interpreters, denotes the Idol of Jupiter Olympius, which was erected in the Temple of Jerusalem by the Command of Antiochus Epiphanes; and by the same Abomination of Desolation which was seen at Jerusalem, during the last Siege of this City, carried on by the Romans under Titus, the Ensigns of the Roman Army were meant, with the Images of their Gods and Emperors upon them, which were lodged in the Temple when that and the City were taken.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Abra

ABRA, or Habra. This is a general Word made use of to signify a Maid of Honour, Honour, a waiting Gentlewoman, the Maid -servant of a Woman of Quality. By this Name the Scripture calls the young [Genes. xxiv. 61. in Græco Ἁβρᾶς. Ex. ii. 5. Esth. ii. 9. iv. 4. 15. Judith viii. 33.] Women of Rebekah's Retinue, those of Pharaoh, King of Egypt's Daughter, Queen Esther's, and last of all Judith's Waiting-woman. Abra is said to signify properly a Milliner or Dresser[1].

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Vid. Eutych. Alex. Arab. Lat. p. 304.

Abram

ABRAM, afterwards called Abraham, the Son of Terah, was born at Ur, a City of Chaldæa, in the Year of the World 2008, before Jesus Christ 1992, before the vulgar Æra 1996. He spent the first Years of his Life in his Father's House, where they [Vid. Interpp. ad Jos. xxiv. 2. & Neh. ix. 7. & Isa. xliii. 27. & Gen. xi. 31.] adored Idols. Many are of Opinion that he himself at first was engaged in this wrong way of Worship, but that God giving him a better understanding, he renounced it; and for this reason suffer'd a severe Persecution from the Chaldæans, who threw him into a fiery Furnace: But God miraculously rescued him[1]. The Text of the Vulgate, 2 Esd. ix. 7. shews clearly that he was deliver'd from the Fire of the Chaldæans, and the Jews generally teach the same. But this Opinion, in all probability, is founded only on the Ambiguity of the Word Ur, which signifies Fire, and the City of Ur, from which Place God took Abraham, and sent him into the Land of Promise. It is very likely therefore that he demonstrated to his Father the Vanity of Idolatry, since he engaged him to forsake the City of Ur where he was settled, and remove to that Place whither the Lord had called Abraham. The first City they came to was Haram in Mesopotamia, where Terah, [Gen. xi. 31, 32.] Abraham's Father, died. From thence Abraham went into Palestine, which was in the Possession of the Canaanites. God promised to give him the property of this [Ch. xii. 1, 2, &c.] Country, and to heap Blessings on him. The Patriarch however did not acquire one inch of Ground there, and lived there always as a Stranger. Some time after his Arrival in this Country there was a great Famine, which obliged him to go into Egypt, there [Ch. xii. 10, 11, & seq. in the Year of the World 2084, before J.C. 1916, before the vulgar Æra 1920.] to procure some Provisions. He foresaw that the Egyptians would be touched extremely with the Beauty of Sarah, and might not only force her from him, but take away his Life too if they knew she was his Wife; he desired her therefore to give him leave that he might call her Sister. To this Sarah consented; and when she was in Egypt her uncommon Beauty was talk'd of to Pharaoh, who took her forcibly away, and would have made a Wife of her; but God afflicted him with such great Plagues, that he was obliged to restore her. After the Famine was over Abraham left Egypt, and returned to Canaan; there he pitch'd his Tents between Bethel and Hai, where some time before [Gen. xiii. 1, 2, & seq.] he had built an Altar. Now as Abraham and his Nephew Lot had large Flocks, and for this Reason could not dwell together, they separated. Lot retired to Sodom, and Abraham to the Plain of Mamre, near Hebron, in 2084, before Jesus Christ 1916, before the vulgar Æra 1920.

[In the Year of the World 2092, before J. C. 1808, before the vulgar Æra 1912.] Some Years after Lot having been taken in the War which Chedorlaomer and his Allies were carrying on against the Kings of Sodom and Gomorrah, of Admah, Zeboim, and Zoar, Abraham with his People pursued the Conquerors, and having overtaken them at Dan, near the Springs of Jordan, he defeated them, retook all the Spoil, together with his Nephew Lot, and brought them back to Sodom. At his Return, as he marched near Salem or Jerusalem, Melchisedech, King of this City, and Priest of the most High, met him, bestowed many Blessings on him, and presented him with Bread and Wine for himself, and for the [Gen. xiv. 12, &c.] Service of his Army, or else offered Bread and Wine to God as a Sacrifice of Thanksgiving. After this the Lord renewed all the Promises which he had made to Abraham, [Ch. xv. 1, 2, & seq.] gave him fresh Assurances that he should possess the Land of Canaan, and that his Posterity should be as numerous as the Stars of Heaven. As he had no Children, and could no longer reckon upon having any, by reason of his advanced Age, and the Barrenness of Sarah, he complied with the Sollicitation of his Wife, who entreated him to marry her Servant Hagar, imagining that if he should have Children by her, God might perform the Promises which he had made to him of a numerous Posterity.

[Ch. xvi. 1, 2, &c.] He therefore married Hagar in the Year of the World 2093, before Jesus Christ 1907, before the vulgar Æra 1911. But she finding that she had conceived, began to treat her Mistress with Contempt; whereof Sarah complain'd to Abraham, who told her that she might do as she pleased with her Servant. Hagar therefore having been very ill used by Sarah fled; but the Angel of the Lord appearing to her in the Wilderness, commanded her to return to her Master, and be more submissive to her Mistress: She returned therefore to his House, and some time after was deliver'd of Ishmael, in the Year of the World 2094, before Jesus Christ 1906, before the vulgar Æra 1910.

[Ch. xvii.] Thirteen Years after, in the Year of the World 2107, before Jesus Christ 1893, before the vulgar Æra 1897, the Lord renewed his Covenant with Abraham, and the Promises which he had made to him. He changed the Name of Abram, or an elevated Father, which he had hitherto borne, into that of Abraham, or the Father of a great signifies Princess, into Sarai, that is, my Princess[2]. As a Mark and Earnest of the Covenant which he had enter'd into with him, he enjoined him to be himself circumcised, and to circumcise all the Males of his Family, and promised him expressly that he should have a Son of Sarah his Wife, and that too within a Year.

[In the Year of the World 2107. before J. C. 1893. before the Vulg. Æra 1897. Gen.xviii.] In a little time after this, the Sins of Sodom, Gomorrah and the neighbouring Cities being compleated, God sent three Angels to destroy them: They came first of all into the Valley of Mamre, where Abraham had pitched his Tents; and as soon as he saw them, he ran to them, invited them to eat, washed their Feet, and made haste to prepare Meat for them: Sarah made Cakes upon the Hearth for them, and when they had eaten, they asked Abraham where Sarah his Wife was? Abraham answered, In the Tent. Then one of them said, I will certainly return unto thee according to the time of Life, and lo, Sarah thy Wife shall have a Son. Sarah, who was behind the door, hearing this, laughed. Whereupon the Angel said to Abraham, wherefore did Sarah laugh? Is any thing too hard for the Lord? In a year I will return, as I have promised, and Sarah shall have a Son.

When they were resolved to go, Abraham with respect waited on them, and they went towards Sodom, whither two of these Angels advancing with more haste, the third remained with Abraham, and said, The Cry of Sodom and Gomorrah is great, and their Sin is very grievous; I will therefore go down and see whether they have done altogether according to the Cry of it which is come unto me. Abraham fearing left his Nephew Lot should be involved in the misfortune of this City, said, Lord, wilt thou destroy the righteous with the wicked? If there be found fifty righteous in the City, wilt thou destroy them with the others, and not spare this City for the fifty righteous that are therein? The Lord answered, I will spare it for their sakes. Abraham added, If there shall lack five of this number, wilt thou destroy all the City for lack of five? No, said the Lord. Abraham continuing to speak, reduced the number by degrees to ten righteous persons, and God promised him not to destroy the City for ten's sake; but there was one only to be found, Lot, Abraham's Nephew, and him God preserved from the calamity of Sodom; as we shall relate in another [Ch. xix.] place.

In the mean while, Sarah conceived, according to God's promise; and Abraham having left the valley of Mamre, went farther towards the South, and dwelt as a [Ch. xx.] stranger at Gerar, where Abimelech reign- Abraham, who feared left Sarah should be forced from him, and he himself be put to death, gave out here, as he had done in Egypt, that she was his Sister. Abimelech immediately fell in love with her, and took her to his own House, with a design of marrying her: but God having appeared to him in a dream, and informed him that she was Abraham's Wife, he returned her to him with great presents. In the same year Sarah was delivered of Isaac, and Abraham circumcised [Gen. xxi. In the Year of the World 2108. before J. C. 1892. before the vulg. Æra 1896.] him according to God's order. The Child grew, and Abraham made a great entertainment when he was weaned. Sarah having one day observed Ishmael the Son of Hagar playing with her Son Isaac, said to Abraham, Cast out this Bond-woman and her Son, for Ishmael shall not be Heir with Isaac. Whatever Reluctancy Abraham might have to do this, as soon as God had declared to him that it was his Will, he complied.

[Ch. xxi. 22, & seq.] About the same time, Abimelech King of Gerar came with Phicol the General of his Army to visit Abraham, and make an Alliance with him. Abraham made him a Present of seven Ew-Lambs out of his Flock, as a monument that the Well which he had made was his own. They swore each of them to the Covenant they had made, and called the place Beer-Sheba, or The Well of Swearing; because of the Covenant there ratified by them with an Oath. Here Abraham planted a Grove, built an Altar, and continued for some time.

After this God directed Abraham to sacrifice [Ch. xxii. In the Year of the World 2133. before J. C. 1867. before the vulg. Æra 1871.] his Son Isaac to him upon a Mountain which he shewed him. Abraham therefore took his Son, with some Servants, and conducted him towards the Mountain Moriah, or Vision. As they were together on their Journey, Behold the Fire and the Wood, says Isaac to his Father, but where is the Victim for a Burnt-offering? Abraham answered, My Son, God will provide one. When they were come within sight of the Mountain, Abraham left his Servants behind him, and ascended it with his Son only; and there having bound him, he prepared to sacrifice him; but as he was ready to give the blow, an Angel from Heaven cried out to him, Lay not thine hand upon the Lad, neither do thou any thing to him; now I know that thou fearest God, since to obey him thou hast not spared thine only Son. At the same time Abraham seeing a Ram intangled in a Bush by his Horns, took him and offered him up as a Burnt-offering instead of his Son Isaac. The place he called Jehovah-jireh, or The Lord will see. This happened in the Year of the World 2133. Isaac being then about the Age of five and twenty.

Twelve Years after this, that is, in the Year of the World 2145. before J. C. 1855. before the vulgar Æra 1859. Sarah the Wife of Abraham died, in the City of [Gen. xxiii.] Hebron, otherwise called Arba. Abraham was then probably at Beer-sheba, but being informed of her death, he came to Hebron, there to mourn, and perform the last Offices for her. He appeared before the People assembled in a body at the City Gate, entreating them to allow him the liberty of burying his Wife among them; for as he was a Stranger in the Country, and had no Land then of his own, he could pretend to no right of giving honourable Interment to his dead in the Sepulchres of that Country, without the consent of the Proprietors. He therefore desired Ephron, one of the Inhabitants, to sell him the Field called Machpelah, with the Cave and Sepulchre belonging to it. The Purchase was made before all the People of Hebron, at the price of four hundred Shekels of Silver; which are equivalent to forty five Pounds twelve Shillings and six Pence[3]. And Abraham buried Sarah, after he had mourned for her according to the custom of the Country.

Abraham perceiving himself to be [Ch. xxiv.] grown old, sent Eliezer, the Steward of his House, into Mesopotamia, with directions to bring a Woman of his own Nation, with whom he might marry his Son Isaac. Eliezer executed this Commission with all the Prudence that could be desired; and brought Rebekah the Daughter of Bethuel, Grand-daughter to Nahor, and consequently Abraham's Niece. Isaac married her, and lodged in his Mother Sarah's [In the Year of the World 2148. before J. C. 1852. before the vulg. Æra 1856. In the Year of the World 2183. before J. C. 1817. before the vulg. Æra 1821.] Tent. Abraham, after the Death of Sarah, married Keturah, by whom he had six Sons, Zimram, Jokshan, Medan, Midian, Ishbock, and Shuah; who were all Heads of different People, whose Habitation was in Arabia, and in the Neighbourhood of Palestine. At last, after he had lived an hundred and seventy five Years, he died, worn out with Age, and was buried with Sarah his Wife, in the Field and Cave of Machpelah, which he had purchased of Ephron.

The Eastern People, not only Christians and Mahometans, but the very Indians and Infidels, have some knowledge of the Patriarch Abraham, and speak with great commendation of him. I shall produce here what the Arabians, who are descended from the Patriarchs, inform us of him. Abraham[4], they tell us, was the Son of Azar, and Grandson of Terah; in this Account all the Arabian Historians agree. Terah therefore, whom the Scripture mentions as the Father of Abraham, went likewise by the name of Azar, which is not any thing extraordinary in the East, where several Persons have two names; whereof we have divers instances in the Scripture. If our Chronologers, according to the Remark of M. D'Herbelot, had been acquainted with this Arabian Genealogy, they would never have had recourse to the Expedient of Abraham's transplanting himself a second time, in order to reconcile thereby the Epoch of his Departure from Ur with the years of his Age; they would have easily disengaged themselves out of all those Difficulties, by admitting two Terahs, one sirnamed Azar, and the Father of Abraham; the other the Grandfather of this Patriarch; which does not any way contradict the sacred Text.

There might be a coherent History of the Life of Abraham extracted from the Traditions of the Eastern People; I shall here present you with a short Specimen of one.[5] Nimrod, the celebrated Nimrod, Son of Canaan, and the mighty Hunter, who is thought to have been the first King after the Deluge, kept his residence at Babylon, which was built by him. This Prince in a dream saw a Star rising above the Horizon, the light whereof eclipsed that of the Sun. The Soothsayers being hereupon consulted, foretold, that a Child should be born in Babylon, who in a short time should become a great Prince, and that he had reason to fear every thing from him, tho' he was not yet conceived. Nimrod, terrified with this answer, immediately gave orders that the Men should be separated from their Wives; and appointed an Officer over every ten Houses, whose business it was to prevent their seeing one another. Azar, Nimrod's Guide, deceived his Guards, and lay one night with his Wife Adna. The next day the Magi, who made their Observations every moment during this time, came and inform'd Nimrod, that the Child with whom he was threatned had been conceived that very night; which obliged this Prince to issue out his Orders, that all the Women who were with Child should be guarded with great care, and that all the Children who should be born of them should be put to death.

Adna, who did not appear by any outward signs to be with Child, was not put under guard; but was at liberty to go into the Country, where she was delivered in a Cave, the mouth whereof she closed very diligently; and at her return told her Husband that she had been brought to bed of a Son, who died immediately after his birth.

Adna

Adna however went frequently to the Cave to visit her Son, and give him Milk; but she continually found him sucking the End of his Fingers, one whereof furnish'd him with Milk, the other with Honey. This Miracle surprized her, but reliev'd her of the Concern which she might otherwise have had for the Nourishment of her Child; and as she saw that Providence had taken this Care upon itself, she was satisfied with going thither from time to time to visit him. She soon perceiv'd that he grew as much in three Days as other Children in a Month; so that fifteen Moons were scarce passed before he appear'd to be as large as a Boy of fifteen Years of Age. Hereupon Adna declar'd to Azar, that the Son of whom she had been deliver'd, and who was reported by her to be dead, was living, and that God had provided in a miraculous manner for his Subsistence.

Azar, upon this Discovery, run immediately to the Cave, where he found his Son, and desir'd his Mother to convey him to the City, because he was resolved to present him to Nimrod, and place him about the Court. In the Evening Adna brought him forth out of his Den, and conducted him through a Meadow, where Herds of tame Cattle of all sorts were feeding. This was a Sight intirely new to young Abraham, who was inquisitive to learn their several Names of his Mother, and by her was informed of their respective Names, Qualities, and Uses. Abraham continued his Enquiries, and desired to know who it was that produced all these things. Adna told him that all Things in the World had their Lord and Creator. Who then, says he, was it that brought me into the World? It was I, says Adna. And who is your Lord, replied Abraham? She answer'd Azar. As he continued to ask her who was Azar's Lord, she told him Nimrod. He shewed an Inclination to carry on his Enquiries in this Method, but she check'd him, telling him withal, that it was not convenient to search farther into Matters for fear of Danger.

At last he came to the City, which he saw deeply engaged in Superstitions and Idolatries of all kinds. After this he return'd to his Grotto, but was continually possess'd with a Desire of knowing his Creator. One day, as he was upon the way to Babylon, he saw towards the Evening the Stars shining in the Heavens, and among the rest Venus, which was ador'd by many: Hereupon he said within himself, Perhaps this is the God and Creator of the World: But observing some time after that this Star was set, he said, This certainly cannot be the Master of the Universe, for it is not possible he should be subject to such a Change. Soon after he took notice of the Moon in the Full, and it came into his Thoughts that this probably might be the Author of all Things, after whom he was enquiring; but when he perceived it to have passed over the Horizon like the other Stars, his Judgment of it was the same as he had before made of Venus. At length, as he came nearer to the City, he saw Multitudes of People adoring the rising Sun, and was tempted to follow their Example; but having viewed this Star declining, and pursuing its Course westward like the rest, he from thence concluded that it was neither his Creator, his Lord, nor his God.

Azar presented him to Nimrod, who was sitting on a lofty Throne, with a great Number of the most beautiful Slaves of both Sexes about him. Abraham asked his Father who that Person was so far exalted above the rest; Azar answer'd, That this was the King Nimrod, whom all these People acknowledged for their God. It is impossible, replied Abraham, that he should be their God, since he is not so beautiful, and consequently not so perfect as the Generality of those who are about him. Abraham from hence took an opportunity of speaking to his Father concerning the Unity of God, which afterwards drew him into great Contests with the principal Men of Nimrod's Court, who would by no means acquiesce in the Truth, which he declared to them. Nimrod having been informed of these Disputes, commanded him to be thrown into a burning Furnace, out of which he came without receiving the least hurt.

Having distributed all the Provision in his Granaries to the Poor during a great Plague, he sent to one of his Friends in Egypt, desiring him to supply him with some Corn: But he, as soon as he understood from Abraham's People the occasion of their Journey, told them they apprehended a Famine likewise in that Country: Besides, says he, I know that Abraham wants no Provisions necessary for his own Family; and the Corn which he desires of me is not for himself, but for the Poor only; for which Reason I do not think it just to send him that which we may want ourselves for the Subsistence of our own People.

This Refusal, tho' season'd with fair Speeches, extremely afflicted Abraham's Messengers; and when they drew near to their Master's Dwelling, fearing lest the People of the Country, when they saw in what condition they returned, might ridicule them, and from hence take occasion possibly to despise Abraham, they determined to disguise their Confusion by filling their Sacks with a very fine white Sand which they found in their Way. Upon their Arrival at the House, he who was the Principal of the Company, related to their Master all that had happen'd to them, and what they had done. Abraham, without shewing any concern at it, went into his Oratory, there to comfort himself with God upon this Disappointment.

In the mean time, Sarah his Wife, who was ignorant of all this, seeing the Camels return'd, took immediately a Sack, which she found full of excellent Meal, and with it made Bread for the Poor. As soon as Abraham had finish'd his Devotions, he came out of his Closet, and perceiving the Smell of new-bak'd Bread, he ask'd Sarah of what Meal she had made it: With that she replied, of your Egyptian Friend's which your Camels lately conveyed hither. Say rather, answer'd Abraham, of our faithful Friend God, who never forsakes us in our Necessities. From this time Abraham was styl'd the Friend of God, a Name which is [If. xli. 8. Dan. iii. 35.] given him by the Prophets, and by which he is generally called by the Mahometans. Hence it is that Hebron, where he was buried, is termed by them the City of the Friend of God: Nevertheless, they place him much below their false Prophet Mahomet. Abraham, says one of them, was only an Officer in his Army, and the Messiah is no more than the Master of the Ceremonies at his Court.

As to the number of Angels who were received in Abraham's Tent, they are not agreed. Demiathi acknowledges three, viz. Gabriel, Arraphel, and Michael; the first had a Commission to destroy Sodom, the second to declare the Birth of Isaac to Abraham, and the third to preserve Lot from the Ruin of Sodom. Abraham, having received them in his Tent, entertained them with a roasted Calf, says Mahomet in his Alcoran; but observing that they did not eat, was in great Consternation, apprehending them to be Enemies; for, according to the Custom of the Eastern People, there is not a greater Sign of Enmity than to refuse eating and drinking with one who invites them to his Table. The Angels therefore encourag'd him, saying, Fear not, for we are sent to Lot's People: Sarah, who was present, fell a laughing, continues Mahomet, who was unacquainted with the true History of Abraham, and relates it after his own manner. His Interpreters tell us, that the Cause of Sarah's laughing was either her Joy to find Abraham deliver'd from his Fears, or the Desire of seeing the Sodomites punished, or her Admiration to behold Angels appearing in a human Form.

The Angels therefore having observed her to laugh, communicated the good news to her that she should have a Son called Isaac, and that Isaac should become the Father of Jacob. To this Sarah answer'd, How can this be, that I who am old, my Husband also being far advanced in years, should be deliver'd of a Son? This would indeed be something very wonderful! But the Angels replied, Why should you be surpriz'd at what is God's doing? This is a Blessing to you and Abraham, for you are chosen to be the Heads of a great Family. After this, the Angels proceeded on their way to Sodom, and Abraham debated with God a long time, endeavouring to divert him from the Destruction of Lot's People, saying to them, You are going to lay several Cities in Ruin, in each of which perhaps there may be an hundred righteous Persons. This is the Account we have of this History in the Alcoran.

The Story of Hagar and Ishmael is likewise something alter'd in it; for here we read this Prayer made by Abraham, Lord I have placed one of my Sons in a barren Valley near thy sacred House. The Interpreters hereupon relate that Sarah being unable to endure Hagar or her Son Ishmael in Palestine, entreated Abraham to send them into the Wilderness, where there was no Water. This Request gave Abraham some Uneasiness; but the Angel Gabriel convincing him that he ought to acquiesce in Sarah's Will, he instantly obey'd; and taking the Mother and her Child, he transplanted them into the Territory of Mecca, which at that time was barren and destitute of Water: But the Angel caused a Spring to rise under Ishmael's Feet; and this is the Well of Zemzem, so famous among the Turks, and the only one in these Cantons. At the same time God pour'd forth his Blessings on the Country, and it became so fertil that we see the Fruits of the four Seasons of the Year growing together, and in great abundance.

As yet there was no Temple built at Mecca, but only a large Edifice called Sorah, erected, as they say, in the form of a Temple by Seth, ever since the time of Adam. It was respected for its Antiquity, and all the Inhabitants of the Country visited it out of Devotion. Afterwards Abraham and Ishmael rebuilt this Temple, which had been destroy'd by the Deluge. The Mahometans call it Cabah, or the Square House, and visit it at least once in their Lives out of Devotion; and in whatsoever Part of the World they may be, they turn themselves towards it at their Prayers.

There is a great deal of Probability that the ancient Arabians and Ishmaelites paid an idolatrous Worship in this Temple to Bacchus and Urania, or the Celestial Venus. Herodotus[6] assures us, that they ador'd only these two Deities, whom they called Bacchus Urotalt, and Urania Alilat. Strabo says[7], that they had no other Deities besides Jupiter and Bacchus. Ammianus makes Cœlus and Bacchus, to be their Gods. Philostorgius in Photius tells us, that they sacrificed to the Sun and Moon, and to Demons. Nilus in his History of the Massacre of the Monks at Mount Sina, affirms, that they sacrificed to the Sun and Morning-Star. Maximus Tyrius speaks of a great square Stone, to which they paid divine Honours; and when the Saracens were converted to Christianity, they were obliged to anathematize this Stone, which before was the Object of their Worship.

It is related[8], that the Tribe of the Arabians called Gioram, having been obliged to surrender Mecca and its Temple to the Ishmaelites, who were become too powerful for them, the Prince of the Gioramides threw the black Stone, and two Antelopes of Gold into the Well Zemzem abovementioned, and closed the mouth of it so carefully, that for a long time no one could discover it.

Abdalmotleb, Mahomet's Grandfather, drew the Stone out of the Well, and restored it to its place in the Temple from whence it had been taken.[9] It is still at this day fastned to one of the Pillars belonging to the Porch of the Temple of Mecca; and the Turkish Pilgrims would think their Pilgrimage not duly performed, if they did not kiss this Stone several times, to which they ascribe a thousand pretended miraculous qualities. This black Stone is not the only one to which the Arabians pay a superstitious Worship. The old Ishmaelites[10], who frequented the Temple built at Mecca by Abraham, pulled several Stones out, which they carried with them, and placed under a Tent, towards which they turned at their Devotions. As the Worship of the Temple of Mecca consisted in a diversity of Whirlings or Turnings round, they called these Stones Dasuar, which signifies the same thing; and observed the same Ceremonies as they went about them, which they did about the Temple. Thus an extreme respect for the memory of Abraham has engaged these miserable People in Superstition and Impiety. All that they say of the Temple of Mecca built by Abraham, is very probably no more than a Fiction, added to Moses's account of the Altar erected by this Patriarch at Beer-sheba, and of the Grove [Gen. xxi. 33.] planted round about it.

They tell us farther[11], that Abraham one day prayed to God in these terms, Lord, shew me how thou raisest the dead. The Lord answered, Hast thou not Faith? Yes, Lord, but this is the Request which I make only for my own satisfaction. At the same time the Devil observing[12] the Carcase of a Man thrown by the Sea upon the shoar, part whereof had been devoured by the Birds, wild Beasts, and Fishes, thought this was a fair Opportunity to ensnare Men with regard to their belief of the Resurrection. At that time Abraham, by God's appointment, appeared upon the shore, and the Devil immediately accosting him in the shape of a Man under surprize, asked him how it was possible that the Members of this Carcase, dispersed in the bellies of so many different Animals, should be re-united at the day of a general Resurrection. Abraham replied, He who had power to form all the parts of our Bodies out of nothing, may be very well able to find them again in the several places of Nature where they are scattered. The Potter breaks in pieces an earthen Vessel, and when he pleases makes it over again of the same Clay.

[Gen.xv.9, 10,11.] God afterwards says to Abraham[13], Take four Birds, tear them in pieces, and lay the divided Parts of them upon four separate Mountains; then call them, and you shall see that all these four Birds will immediately come to you. This is an Imitation of what is said in Genesis, concerning the Sacrifice of an Heifer, a She-Goat, and a Ram, each of them three years old, of a Turtle Dove and a young Pigeon, which Abraham divided into two pieces, and placed upon different Altars: But the Turks have added several Circumstances to it. They tell us that the four Birds mentioned by Mahamet, were the Cock, the Pigeon, the Raven, and the Peacock; that Abraham after he had divided them, dissected them with great Accuracy, then mingled them all together. Some add that he pounded them in a mortar, and composed but one mass of them, out of which he made four portions, and these he placed upon the tops of four different Mountains; after which, as he held their Heads, which had been reserved by him, he called them separately by their names, and each of them immediately returned and joined its Head again, so flew away. Thus God convinced Abraham of a future Resurrection.

One of the greatest Prerogatives of Abraham, as the Mussulmen assert[14], is his being the Stock from which the glorious Virgin Mary and her Son sprung, whose Conception and miraculous Birth of a Virgin, exempt from all original Corruption, are acknowledged by them.

The Magi, or Worshippers of Fire, who are still subsisting at this day in Persia, have as much respect for Abraham as the Followers of Mahomet[15]. They believe Zoroastres, their great Master, to be the same with Abraham, and that he was called Zerdoust, or Zoroastres; that is to say, the Friend of Fire, because when he was thrown by Nimrod into a fiery Furnace, he came out of it unhurt, the Fire having, if we may be allowed to say so, caress'd and treated him as a Friend, instead of doing mischief to him. We have before taken notice of the Books which are ascribed to him.

There is[16] a Book of S. Ephrem's the Syrian, translated out of Syriac into Arabic, concerning Abraham's Journey into Egypt. It is in the King's Library, N° 792. and in the same Volume there is a Discourse of S. Athanasius, Patriarch of Alexandria, upon Abraham's Death, pronounced upon the 28th of March, upon which day the Coptic or Egyptian Christians celebrate his Festival. We are told[17], that in the Year of Jesus Christ 1119. Abraham's Tomb was discovered near Hebron, in which Sepulchre Jacob likewise and Isaac were interr'd. The Bodies of these Patriarchs were still very intire, and many Gold and Silver Lamps were found in the places where they were deposited. The Mahometans have so great a respect for this Tomb that they make this their fourth Pilgrimage, the three others being those of Mecca, Medina and Jerusalem. The Christians built a Church over the Cave of Machpelah[18], where this holy Patriarch was buried; and the Turks afterwards changed it into a Mosque.

The place where he received the three Angels, that is to say, the Oak of Mamre, was likewise honoured by Christians, and even by the Jews and Pagans. See hereafter the Articles TEREBINTHUS and MAMRE. Lastly, there is a Chapel built upon Moriah, which makes part of Mount Sion, or Calvary, upon a supposition that this was the place where Abraham intended to have sacrificed his Son Isaac[19].

[John viii. 56.] Our Saviour assures us in the Gospel, that Abraham desired earnestly to see the day of his coming, that he saw it, and was glad. In [Matt. viii. 11.] another place he tells us, that the happiness of the Righteous consists in being seated with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob in the Kingdom of Heaven, and in being received into Abraham's Bosom, as into a place of Rest, opposite to the Misery of Hell. The [Luke xvi. 22.] Emperor Alexander Severus[20], who knew Abraham only by the Wonders which the Jews and Christians related of him, conceived so high an Idea of him, that he ranked him, with Jesus Christ, among his Gods.

The Fathers of the Church have been very large in their commendations of this great Patriarch; the Saints of the Old Testament, and the Prophets, have proposed him as the Pattern of perfect Faith and Obedience to God's Commands. There has been mention made of his Sacrifice for a long time in the Canon of the Mass; and he is called upon in the Prayers for Persons at the point of death. He has had a place in the Martyrologies ever since the ninth Century. In those of Ado, Usuardus, and in the old Roman Calendar, he is commemorated on the ninth of October. A particular Worship is paid to him by the Order of Fontevraud and the Congregation of the Oratory in France, which perform an Office peculiarly in honour of him.

Many fabulous Tales are told of Abraham, and his History has been embellished with great variety of Fictions. Some have averr'd that he reigned at Damascus[21], that he dwelt a long time in Egypt[22], and that he taught the Egyptians Astronomy and Arithmetick[23]. Some will have it that he invented Letters, and the Hebrew Language[24], or the Characters of the Syrians and Chaldeans[25]. He is said to be the Author of several Works, among others, of the famous Book intitled Jezira, or the Creation[26]. There is mention made of it in the Talmud, and some celebrated Rabbins set a great value on it. But they who have examined it without prejudice, speak of it with a great deal of contempt. In the first Ages of Christianity, the Hereticks called Sethians published Abraham's Revelations[27]. Athanasius in his Synopsis speaks of the Assumption of Abraham. Origen[28] takes notice of an apocryphal Book of Abraham's, wherein two Angels, one good, the other bad, dispute concerning the Damnation or Salvation of Abraham. The Jews likewise attribute to him the Morning Prayers, and the 89th Psalm, Misericordias Domini in æternum cantabo w, and a Treatise of Idolatry[29], and some other Works. The Magi or Worshippers of Fire, who profess the Doctrine of two Principles, believe Zoroastres[30], who is their great Prophet, to be the same with with Abraham. They affirm him to be the Author of the Books which they call Zend[31], Pazend, and Vostha, wherein all Points of their Religion are comprehended[32]. But we have said enough of these spurious Books.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Vide Hieronym. tradit. Hebr. in Genes.

אברם Abram. Pater excelsus, ;אב רהם as if it were ,אב רב המון Pater magnæ Multitudinis.

Translators' note. Four hundred Shekels make sixty Pounds English, at three Shillings per Shekel, according to the Estimate made by the very accu- rate and learned Doctor Prideaux. See his Preface to Vol. I. of his Connect. of the Hist. of the Old and New Testament.

Tarik Montekheb, D'Herbelot Bibl. Orient. p. 12.

Idem p. 13. ex lib. Maallem.

Herodot. l. 3. c. 8.

Strabo l. 16.

D'Herbelot. Bibl. Orient. p. 219. Cabah.

Idem voce Hagiar alassorad.

Idem p. 15. & Chardin Voyage de Perse t. 2. p. 451.

Alcoran, c. 2.

D'Herbelot. Bibl. Orient. p. 15.

Alcoran loc. cit.

D'Herbelot. Bibl. Orient. p. 583.

Idem p. 16.

Herbelot. Bibl. Orient. p. 16. col. 2.

Ben. Scholmah, ibid.

Quaresm. Elmid. t. 2. p. 772.

Idem. t. 2. p. 767, 768.

Lamprid. in Severo.

Nicol. Damasc. apud Joseph. l. 1. c. 7. Justin. l. 36.

Artapan. & Eupolem. apud Euseb. Præpar. l. 9. c. 17, 18.

Joseph. Antiq. l. 1. c. 8.

Suidas in Abraham.

Isidor. Hispal. l. 1. c. 3. Origen.

Translators' note. This Book, whereof the Patriarch Abraham is said to be the Author, has been publish'd, with a Comment written by a celebrated Rabbin of the same Name. In it there are two and thirty Ways de- scribed, and fifty Gates which lead Men to the Knowledge of all Mysteries. Liber Jezirah Abrahami Patriarchæ cum Commentario super xxxii. semitis Sapientiæ, a quibus Liber Jezirah incipit, cum Not. Rittangel. p. 1, &c.

Epiphan. hæres. 39. c. 5.

Origen in Luc. homil. 35. w Rab. Salem in Bava Bathra, c. 1.

Vide Gemar. Codic. Talmud. Aboda Zarah, c. 1.

Translators' note. Dr. Prideaux has given us a full and curious Account of Zoroastres, and the Magi in the first Part of his Connection, &c. and fourth Book, which the Reader, if he pleases, may have recourse to. He tells us that Zoroastres, out of a particular Veneration for Abraham, called his Book the Book of Abraham, and his Religion the Religion of Abraham. —— Not only the Jews, Magians, and Mahometans, but the Sabians, and also the Indians, all challenge him to themselves, as the great Patriarch and Founder of their several Sects, every one of them pretending that their Religion is the same which Abraham professed, and by his Reformation established among you; and to restore this Reformation was all that Zoroastres, Mahomet, and the Author of the Sabian Sect, whoever he was, pretended to.

Translators' note. Dr. Prideaux calls this Book Zendavista, and by contraction Zend. The Vulgar he says pronounce it Zundavestow and Zund. The Word originally signifies a Fire-kindler, which Name the Impostor gave it, because, as he pretended, all that would read this Book and meditate thereon, might from thence, as from a Fire-kindler, kindle in their Hearts the Fire of all true Love for God and his holy Religion. —— This Book Zoroastres pretended to have received from Heaven, as Mahomet his Alcoran, and in every Oratory and Fire-Temple a Copy of it is kept at this Day in the old Persian Lan- guage, out of which at certain stated times the Priests read a Portion of it to the People. Prid. Connect. &c. P. 1. B. iv.

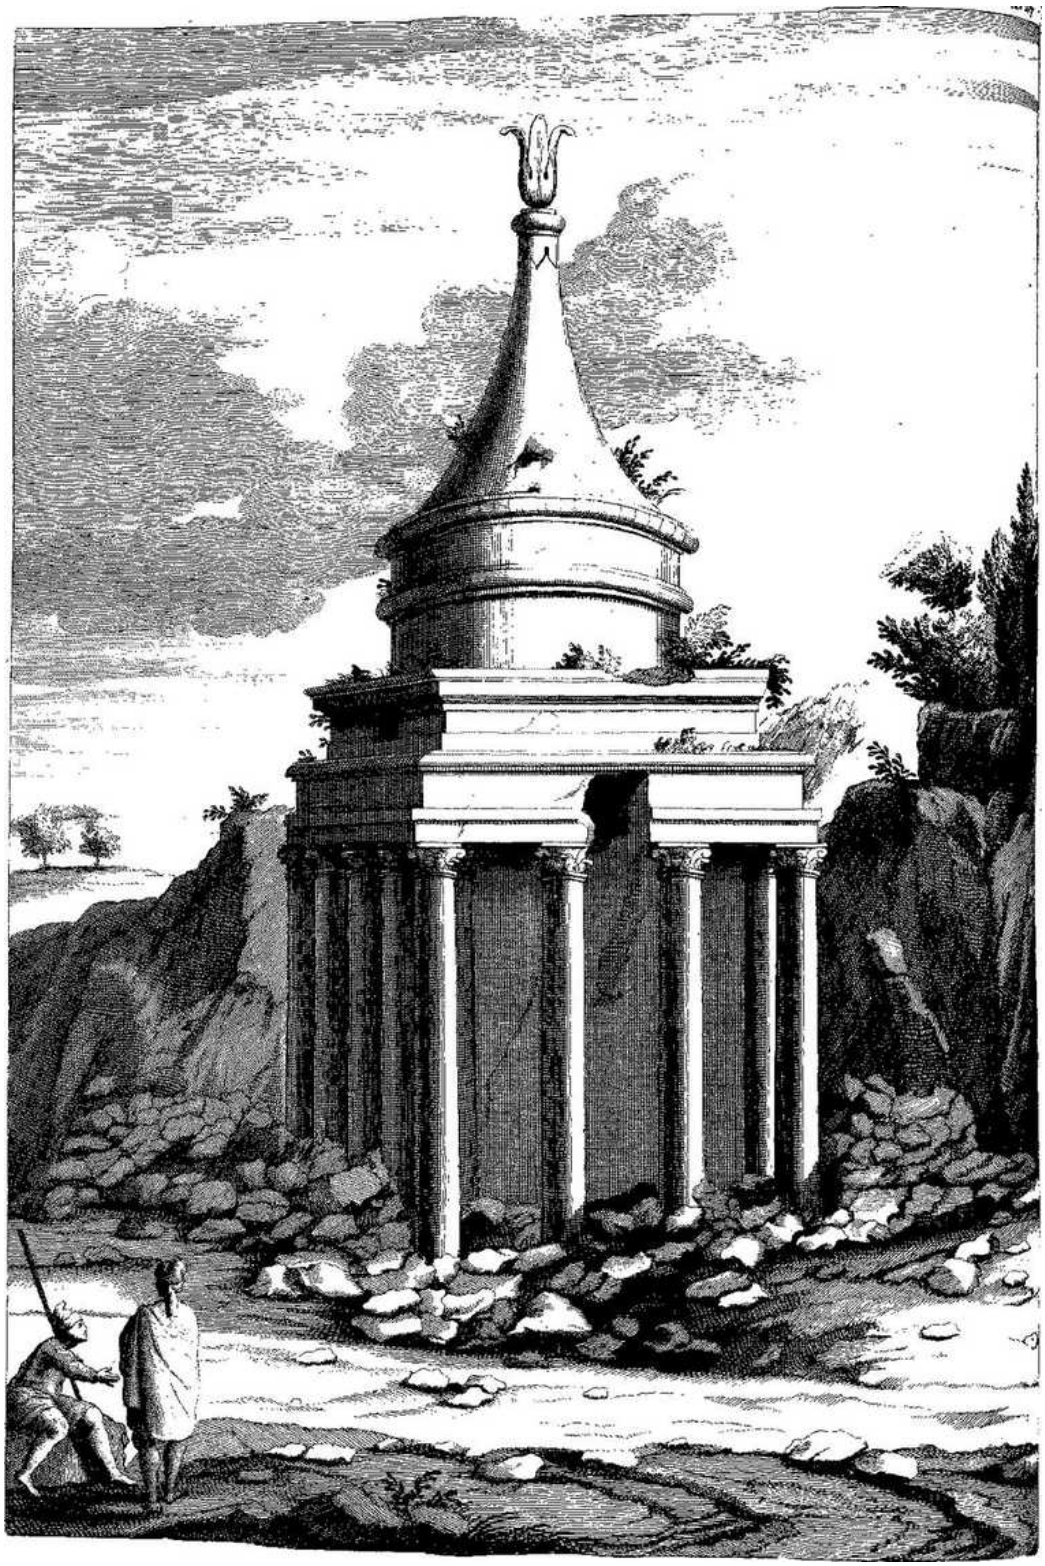
Herbelot's Bibliot. Orient. p. 16.



Absalom

ABSALOM, the Son of David, born of Maachah, the Daughter of Talmai, King of Geshur, was, according to the Scripture, the most beautiful Man in all Israel, and had the [2 Sam. xiv. 25.] finest Head of Hair. When he had his Hair cut, which he had once a year, because it was heavy, and incommoded him, it weighed two hundred shekels by the King's weight; which two hundred shekels may be computed to be about one and thirty Ounces, which is indeed pretty extraordinary, but by no means is incredible; since by the relation of Perriwigmakers, there are some Women who have two and thirty ounces of Hair upon their Heads[1]. Absalom had a Sister named Tamar, who also was extremely handsome. Amnon, the Son of David, but not by the same Mother, conceived so violent a Passion for his Sister, that it made him languish away exceedingly. He prevailed with the King to let Tamar come into his chamber, and prepare something for him to eat. While she was there he ravished her, and then dismissed her with Reproach and Shame.

[2 Sam. xiii.In the Year of the World 2972, before J. C. 1028, before the vulgar Æra 1032.] Absalom received her into his House, and resolved to revenge the outrage offer-ed to his Sister. He took no notice of it to Amnon, expecting perhaps that the King his Father should punish so wicked an Attempt. Two years after, Absalom going to a Sheep-shearing at Baal-hazor, near Ephraim, invited the King thither, with all the Royal Family. David excused himself, but, pressed by Absalom's Entreaties, he consented that Amnon and his Brethren should go. When they were warmed with Wine, Amnon, by Absalom's Direction, was assassinated; upon which the [In the Year of the World 2974, before J. C. 1026, before the vulgar Æra 1030.] King's Sons fled immediately to Jerusalem. Absalom, for his part, retired to King Talmai, his Mother's Father in the Country of Geshur: There he continued for three Years, in all which time David gave himself no trouble in pursuing him; but Joab, Absalom's Uncle, observing a Fondness in the King's Heart for his Son, found means by the Interposition of a Woman of Tekoah, who spoke to the King to procure his [2 Sam. xv.] Consent for Absalom's Return. Absalom came back therefore to Jerusalem, but David would not suffer him to come into his Presence. He continued thus for two Years in Disgrace, [2 Sam. xiv.In the Year of the World 2977, before J. C. 1023. before the vulgar Æra 1027. In the Year of the World 2979, before J. C. 1021. before the vulgar Æra 1025.] at the end of which Time he sent for Joab with a purpose of engaging him to intercede with the King on his behalf; but he refusing to come, Absalom commanded his Servants to set fire to a Field of Barley belonging to him, which he being informed of, he came and made his complaints to Absalom: Absalom confessed that this was done by his Orders, with the hopes only of having an opportunity thereby to desire his Mediation with his Father, to intreat the King intirely to forgive him, and admit him to his Presence. Joab went, and related all that had passed to David, who order'd Absalom to be introduced, immediately embraced him, and received him into favour as before.

After this Absalom set up a magnificent Equipage, looking upon himself as presumptive Heir to the Crown; and every morning he came constantly to the Palace-gate, calling all those who had any business, and came to demand justice of the King, saying, Whence are you? and when they had reported their Business, he told them, Your Matters indeed seem good and right, but there is no Man deputed of the King to hear you: O that I were made Judge in the Land, that every Man which hath any Suit or Cause, might come unto me, and I would do him justice! And when any Man came nigh to do him reverence, he put forth his Hand, and took him and kissed him. He was thus for four Years preparing the Minds of the People, and winning by degrees upon them; and when he thought he might declare himself, he desired permission from the King to go to Hebron, under pretence of performing some Vow there, which he had made during his Abode at Geshur.

[The Text reads 40 Years, but several Latin MSS. Josephus, and Theodoret, read 4 only. This happened in the Year of the World 2980, before J. C. 1020, before the vulgar Æra 1024.] He went therefore to Hebron, attended by two hundred Men, who followed him in the Simplicity of their Hearts, without having the least Knowledge of his wicked Design. At the same time he sent particular Persons, whom he had made his own intirely, throughout all the Tribes of Israel, with Orders to sound the trumpet pet, and publish every where that Absalom was King at Hebron. Hereupon there was very soon a great resort of People to him, and Absalom was acknowledged by the greatest part of Israel. David was informed of Absalom's Revolt, and that all Israel was of his Party; David therefore and his Officers fled from Jerusalem, leaving no other Guard in the Palace but the King's Wives. [2 Sam. xvi.] Absalom, without loss of time, went directly to Jerusalem, where he was received without any Resistance. Abitophel advis'd him publickly to abuse his Father's Concubines, that all the People might comprehend by this Action that the Breach was without hopes of Reconciliation, and might continue firm to him, without any thoughts of returning to their Obedience.

ABSALOM'S TOMB.

At the same time Ahitophel proposed to Absalom that some Troops might be sent in pursuit of David, that so he might be quite oppress'd before he had leisure to look about him, and gather strength; but Hushai, David's Friend, who pretended to be of Absalom's Party, diverted him from this Council, and gave notice of it secretly to David, advising him to pass the Jordan with all diligence, and throw himself into some place of Defence, where he might be able to secure himself. David therefore retired to Mahanaim, which was before the Residence of Ishbosheth, the Son of Saul, and there received several Reinforcements from those who continued faithful to him.

Absalom the next day marched against David with all his Forces, and having cross'd the River Jordan, disposed himself to attack the King his Father. David on his part order'd his Troops to march out of the City under the Command of Joab; and both Sides engaging, Absalom's Army was routed, and cut in pieces: twenty thousand were killed upon the Spot, the rest saved [2 Sam. xviii.] themselves by flight. Absalom was mounted on a Mule, and as he fled into the Forest of Ephraim, and was passing under a large Oak with very thick Boughs, his Head was intangled in the Branches, and his Mule going on swiftly, he hung between Heaven and Earth.

A Soldier seeing him in this Condition, gave intelligence of it to Joab, who ask'd him why he did not kill him; and the Man answered, Tho' I should receive a thousand Shekels of Silver in mine Hand, yet would I not put forth mine Hand against the King's Son; for in our hearing the King charged thee and Abishai, saying, Beware that none touch the young Man Absalom. Then said Joab, I may not tarry thus with thee; and he took three darts in his Hand, and thrust them through the Heart of Absalom. And while he was yet breathing, and hanging on the Oak, ten young Men that bare VOL. I. a Joseph. Antiq. l. 7. c. 9. Joab's Armour, compassed about, and smote him and slew him. His Body was carried off, and thrown into a great Pit which was there in the Wood, and a large Heap of Stones was laid upon him.

Now Absalom in his Life-time had erected a Pillar in the King's Valley, saying, I have no Son, and this shall be a Monument to perpetuate my Name. He called the Pillar therefore after his own name, and it is called unto this day Absalom's Place. This is what the Author of the Books of Samuel tells us. There is a Monument shewn at present Eastward of Jerusalem, in the valley of Jehosaphat, which is said to be this of Absalom's. After the death of Absalom, the [2 Sam. xviii. 17.] Scripture says, They took him, and cast him into a great Pit in the Forest (of Ephraim, where the Battle was fought) and laid a very great Heap of Stones upon him, &c. From hence it might be concluded that he remained buried under these Stones; but we may believe with more probability, that David, who lamented him with such excessive grief, remov'd him from thence, in order to have him laid in the Sepulchre belonging to the Kings, or perhaps somewhere about the place where the Monument which is still at this day shewn to Travellers, was dug in a Rock.

It is a little Chamber wrought with a Chisel out of one piece of Rock, standing apart at some little distance from the Mountain, being a Square of eight paces from out to out. The inside of this Cabinet is all plain, but the outside is adorn'd with some Pilasters of the same kind of Stone. The upper part or Covering is made in the form of a Conick Pyramid, pretty high and large, with a kind of Flower-pot upon the Top. The whole is about four or five Fathoms in height; the Pyramid is composed of several Stones, but the Monument itself is square, and cut out of one Block of Stone.

This may be very well called the Pillar or Hand of Absalom; for the Hebrews give every thing the name of Pillar which is set up for a Monument, and call every thing by the name of Hand which is made use of to shew and preserve the Memory of any thing. For example, that which Saul erected on Mount Carmel, to perpetuate the Remembrance of his Victory against the [1 Sam. xv. 12. Ex. xvii. 16.] Amalekites, is called Hand. And Moses, in the Book of Exodus, seems to allude to something like this, when after the Battle with the Amalekites, he says, that the Hand is upon the Throne of the Lord, as a Monument of their Malice, and of the Vengeance which God, by reason thereof, would one day take on them. Josephus, speaking of Absalom's Monument a, says it was a marble Column, dis tant about two furlongs, or three hundred paces from Jerusalem. Travellers assure us, that all who pass by Absalom's Pillar throw a Stone at it, to shew their abhorrence of the Son's Rebellion against his Father. There is so great a Heap of Stones near it that they almost hide the lower part of this Monument.

[2 Sam. xviii. 18.] The Scripture seems to intimate, that when this Prince erected it, he had no Children. It is said however four Chapters before [2 Sam. xiv. 27.] that he had three Sons and one Daughter of exceeding beauty, whose name was Tamar: But there is some probability that these Children, at least the Sons, did not live; for there are persons who believe that Tamar his Daughter married Rehoboam, King of Judah. The death of Absalom happened in the year of the World 2980, before Jesus Christ 1020, before the vulgar Æra 1024.

[Observations upon Absalom's Defeat by David's Army in the Forest of Ephraim. 2 Sam. xviii.] The order and disposition of the two Armies, as described by the Designer, do not agree entirely with my notions of this matter. The Action was in a forest, where the Troops were ranged, not according to the order usual at that time, but according to the nature of the Ground, which must have been a rule to the Combatants. Here one would believe that the Battle was fought in a plain. The Army marched in order of Battle against Israel, says the Scripture, and the Battle was in the wood of Ephraim; which proves that there were some few trees in this place, where formerly there had been an Engagement, wherein Gideon got the better of Zeb and Zebah. Here is a passage which deserves our Observation: Considerato David populo suo, constituit super eos Tribunos & Centuriones. David having reviewed his People, set Tribunes and Centurions over them. In this there was nothing new; the Jewish Armies, as well as those of other Asiaticks, were divided into Regiments, and these into Companies, and the Companies were subdivided into three parts. David was not the first who introduced this discipline, and these Subdivisions among his troops, the Captains over hundreds, and Commanders of thousands, whom the Vulgate calls Tribunos & Centuriones. This would induce me to believe that David had been deserted by the greatest part of his Forces and principal Officers, who were gone over to Absalom's Party; so that this Prince was obliged to levy a new Army, to distribute it into Regiments of a thousand, which he split into Companies of an hundred each, which proves that his Army was much more numerous than Josephus[2] allows, who tells us that it consisted of no more than four thousand men. Dom Calmet is of Grotius's opinion, which is opposite to that of Josephus: For, says he, David never would have hazarded a Battle, if his Army had been so much inferior in number to that of his Enemies. This however does not prove that he actually did not run this hazard, because we every day see small Armies beat others that are more numerous, when they happen to be commanded by able Generals; and Joab, who was a very great Captain, risked very little by encountring Generals of much less experience and capacity for Command. I am very well persuaded that David's Army was a great deal inferior to that of the Rebels. The Scripture says nothing of the disposition of the two Armies in the Forest; it only tells us that David marched in order of Battle against Israel. The wood and the nature of the Country would scarce have permitted him to draw up in a parallel line: it is my opinion that they engaged in Bodies and small Detachments; and as David's Army was doubtless not by half so strong as the other; he must have left large intervals between the several Bodies, because they fought independently of one another, by reason of the extraordinary depth of the Files, and particularly when they were so far exceeded on their wings, without troubling themselves about being broken, whatever intervals they left between them. Absalom was defeated, and his Army cut in pieces, and twenty thousand Men were left upon the spot. I should not be surprized to find that four thousand Men, to keep to Josephus's computation, should overcome a great Army, but I should be scarce able to comprehend how so small a number could kill twenty thousand.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

See M. le Pelletier of Roan, his Differt. upon the Weight of Absa- lom's Hair. The Journal of Trevoux, 1702, p. 176.
Joseph. Antiq. l. 7. c. 9.

Absalom (2)

ABSALOM, of Jerusalem, induced Manahem, the Son of Judas the Galilæan, to think of making himself King of the Jews[1], in the twelfth year of Nero's Reign, and the sixty sixth of the vulgar Æra.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Joseph. de Bello, l. 2. c. 33.

Absalom (3)

ABSALOM, Uncle and Father-in-law to Aristobulus, King of the Jews. He was made prisoner by Pompey at the Siege of Jerusalem[1], in the year of the World 3941, before Jesus Christ 59, before the vulgar Æra 63.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Joseph. Antiq. l. 14. c. 8.

Absalon

ABSALON, the Ambassador of Judas Maccabæus to Lysias, General of Antiochus's Army, who was sirnamed Eupator, 2 Macc. xi. 17.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Abstinence

ABSTINENCE. Many are of opinion that the Men who lived in the first Ages of the World, before the Deluge, abstained from Wine and Flesh meats, because the Scripture expresly takes notice that Noah after the Deluge began to plant a Vineyard, and that God permitted him to eat Flesh; whereas he gave Adam no other food than Herbs and the Fruits of the Earth. But the contrary opinion is supported by many learned Interpreters, who believe that the Men who lived before the Deluge denied themselves none of the pleasures of wine and good cheer, and the Scripture in few words intimates enough to convince us to what an excess of Corruption they were grown, when it tells us, that all [Gen. vi. 11, 12.] Flesh had corrupted his way upon the Earth; and that if God had not permitted them to use either Flesh or Wine, they wou'd have taken very little notice of his Prohibition.

The Law ordained that the Priests should forbear the use of Wine during all the time of their being imployed in the service [Lev. x. 9.] of the Temple. The same Abstinence was enjoined the Nazarites for the whole [Numb. vi. 3.] time of their Nazariteship or Separation. The Jews abstain from several sorts of Animals, whereof we have spoken under the general Article ANIMALS. St. Paul says [1 Cor. ix. 25.] that Wrestlers abstain from all things, in order to obtain a corruptible Crown; that is to say, they abstain from every thing which may weaken them: And in his Epistle to Timothy, he blames certain Hereticks who [1 Tim. iv. 3.] condemned Marriage, and the use of those Meats which God hath created. Among the primitive Christians some denied themselves the use of such Meats as were prohibited by the Law, and Flesh that had been sacrificed to Idols. Others looked with contempt upon these Acts of Forbearance, as unprofitable, and made use of that liberty which Jesus Christ had procured for his Followers. St. Paul has laid down very [1 Cor. viii. 7, 10. & Rom. xiv. 1, 2, 3.] wise rules as to this particular, whereof we have an account in his Epistles to the Corinthians and Romans.

The Council of Jerusalem, which was held by the Apostles, enjoins Believers converted from Heathenism to abstain from [Acts xv. 20.] Blood, from Meats strangled, from Fornication and Idolatry.

St. Paul requires the faithful to abstain [1 Thess. v. 21.] from all appearance of Evil; and with much stronger reason from every thing which is really evil, and contrary to Religion and Piety.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Abubus

ABUBUS, the Father of Ptolemy, by whose procurement his Father-in-law Simon Maccabæus was assassinated in the Castle of Docus, 1 Mac. xvi. 11, 12, &c. In the Year of the World 3869. before J.C. 131. before the vulgar Æra 135.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Abuma

ABUMA, a City of Judah, the place of Zebudah's Birth, the Mother of King Jehoiakim[1]. But in the second Book of Kings [2 Kings xxiii. 36. Luke viii. 31. Rom. x. 7. Rev. ix. 1. xi. 7. &c. Gen vii. 11. Ex. xv. 5. & alibi passim.] this City is called Rumah.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Joseph. Antiq. l. 14. c. 8.

Abyss

ABYSS, or Deep. Hell is called by this name in Scripture; as are likewise the deepest parts of the Sea, and the Chaos, which in the beginning of the World was covered with Darkness, and upon which the Spirit of God moved, Gen. i. 2.

The ancient Hebrews, as well as the generality of the Eastern People at this day, were of opinion that the Abyss, the Sea and Waters encompassed the whole Earth; that the Earth was as it were immersed, and floating upon the Abyss, almost, say they, like a Water-melon swimming upon and in the Water, which covers a small moiety of it. Farther, they believed that the Earth was founded upon the Waters, [Ps. xxxiii. 2. xxxv. 6.] or at least that it had its Foundation on the Abyss. Under these Waters, and at the bottom of this Abyss, the Scripture represents the Giants to be groaning and suffering the punishment of their Sin: [Job xxv. 5.] There the Rephaims are confined, those old Giants, who when they were living made the People round about them tremble. [Prov. xi. 18. ix. 18. xxi. 16. Ps. lxxxvii. 11. lxx. 20. Isai. xxvi. 14.] Lastly, in these dark Dungeons it is, that the Prophets describe to us the Kings of Tyre, Babylon, and Egypt to be lying down and buried, yet alive and expiating the guilt of their pride and cruelty.

[Isai. xiv. Ezek. xxviii. 10. xxxi. 18. xxxii. 19. Rev. ix. 1, 2, 11.] These depths are the abode of Devils and wicked Men: I saw, says St. John in the Revelations, a Star fall from Heaven, and to him was given the key of the bottomless Pit. And he opened the bottomless Pit, and there arose a smoke out of it, as the smoke of a great furnace which obscured the Sun and Air; and there came out of the smoke locusts which scattered themselves over the whole Earth.... And they had a King over them which is the Angel of the bottomless Pit, whose name is the Destroyer. [Rev. xi. 7.] And in another place, the Beast is represented to us as ascending out of the bottomless pit, and making War against the two Witnesses of God. Lastly, the Angel of the [Rev. xx. 1, 3.] Lord descends from Heaven with the key of the bottomless Pit, and a great chain in his hand. He laid hold on the Dragon that old Serpent, which is the Devil and Satan, and cast him into the bottomless Pit, and shut him up, and set a seal upon him, that he should deceive the nations no more till the thousand years should be fulfilled; and after that he should be loosed a little season.

Fountains and Rivers, in the opinion of the Hebrews, are derived from the Abyss [Eccl. i. 7.] or Sea. They issue from thence thro' invisible channels, and return thither thro' others of their own forming upon the Earth. At the time of the Deluge the depths below, or the waters of the Sea, broke down their Banks, the fountains forced their [Gen. viii. 11.] Springs, and spread over the Earth, while at the same time the Cataracts of Heaven were opened, and overflowed the whole World.

The Abyss which covered the Earth in the beginning of the World, and was put in agitation by the Spirit of God, or by an [Gen. i. 2.] impetuous Wind, this Abyss was so called by way of anticipation, because it afterwards composed the Sea, and the Waters of the Abyss issued from it, and were formed by the flowing of it: or if you please, the Earth sprung up out of the midst of this Abyss, like an Island rising out of the Sea, and appearing suddenly to our Eyes, after having been for a long time conceal'd under water.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Acabares

ACABARES or Chabares, was a Castle or City situated upon a Rock, which Josephus fortified during the War between the Jews and Romans[1].

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Lib. 2. de bello, c. 25. Vide & in ejus vita p. 1013. Χαροβη.

Accad

ACCAD, a City built by Nimrod, the [Gen. x. 10.] situation whereof is not very well known. The Septuagint read it Archad; whereupon it is conjectured that it was situated upon the River Argad in the Sittacene.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Accho

ACCHO, called since Ptolemais, lay north of Mount Carmel, with a Harbour to the Sea. It fell to the Tribe of Asher, upon [Judg. i. 31. vide & Jos. xix. 25. in Græco.] the division. They who were employed in the holy Wars called it Acra. The River Belus falls into the Mediterranean at the foot of Accho, towards the North of this City. The Israelites would not extirpate the Inhabitants of Accho; and it continued in the hands of the Canaanites, or Phœnicians. It is often mentioned in the Books of the Maccabees under the name of Ptolemais.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Aceldama

ACELDAMA, or rather Chakel-dam [Mat. xxvii. 8. Acts i. 19.] [1], the inheritance or portion of Blood; by this name was that Field called which the Priests purchased with the thirty pieces of Silver that had been given to Judas Iscariot, as the price of Jesus Christ's Blood. Judas having brought this Money back into the Temple, and the Priests not thinking it was lawful to make use of it for the service of so holy a Place, because it was the price of Blood, they bought a Potter's Field with it to be a Burying-place for Strangers. This Field was shewn in St. Jerom's time South of Jerusalem; and is still at this day shewn to Travellers. The place is very small, and covered with an arched roof, under which the Bodies that are there deposited, are, they say, consumed in less than three or four days. Drutmar, a Monk of Corbie, says, that in his time there was an Hospital in this place for the entertainment of French Pilgrims, in their Journey to the Holy Land.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

חקל דמor ,חלק דמHæreditas Sanguinis.

Achaia

ACHAIA, a Province of Greece, whereof Corinth was the Capital. St. [Acts xviii. 12.] Paul preached at Corinth, and in Achaia. The Acts of St. Andrew relate how he suffered Martyrdom in the same Province.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Achaicus

ACHAICUS, a Disciple of St. Paul's, whom this Apostle recommended in a peculiar [1 Cor. xvi. 15, 17.] manner to the Corinthians. We know nothing particular of Achaicus's Life. He, with Stephanus and Fortunatus, was the Bearer of St. Paul's first Epistle to the Corinthians, in the 56th Year of J. C.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Achan

ACHAN, the Son of Carmi, of the Tribe of Judah, having discovered a Scarlet Cloak, an Ingot of Gold, and two hundred Shekels of Silver among the Spoils of Jericho, took and concealed them, against the express prohibition of God, who had cursed the City of Jericho, and devoted it to ruin, without reserving the least thing [Josh. vi. 17. Josh. vii. 1, 2, 3. In the Year of the World 2553, before J. C. 1447, before the vulgar Æra 1451.] belonging to it. Some days after Joshua sent three thousand Men to take the little Town of Ai, which was three or four Leagues distant from Jericho. But they were charged by those of Ai, and obliged to fly. However, the loss was not great, thirty six only of the Israelites being killed in the Action; but notwithstanding their loss was so inconsiderable, they were much discouraged. Joshua and the Elders rent their Clothes, and put dust upon their Heads[1], crying to the Lord, and conjuring him not to forsake his People in the midst of their Enemies. Then the Lord said unto Joshua, Get thee up, why liest thou upon thy face? Israel hath sinn'd, and they have also transgressed my Covenant; for they have taken of the accursed thing, they have stolen and dissembled also, and they have put it even amongst their own Stuff: Therefore I will be with you no more, unless ye destroy the accursed from among you. Up, sanctify the People against to morrow, the lot shall discover him who is guilty of this Crime, and he shall be burnt, with all that belongs to him.

The next day therefore Joshua assembled all the Tribes of Israel, and having cast lots, the lot fell upon the Tribe of Judah, then upon the Family of Zarhi, then upon the House of Zabdi, and last of all upon the Person of Achan; to whom Joshua said, My Son give glory unto the Lord, confess your fault, and declare what you have done, without concealing any thing. Achan replied, It is true that I have sinned against the Lord, and look what I have done. Having seen among the spoils a scarlet Cloak, and two hundred Shekels in Silver, with an Ingot of Gold, of fifty Shekels in weight, I took them and laid them in a pit which I dug for this purpose in my Tent. Joshua immediately sent some People to Achan's tent, who found there what he had mentioned; and having produced the things in the presence of all the Israelites, they laid them out before the Lord. Then Joshua and all the People taking Achan, with what had been discover'd in his tent, the Gold, Silver, and Furniture, his Sons and Daughters, his Oxen and his Asses, his very tent, and every thing belonging to him, brought all into the valley of Achor, and said to Achan, Since thou hast troubled us, the Lord shall trouble thee this day; then they stoned him, with all those of his Family, whom they presumed to have been accomplices in his Crime; and all that he had was consumed with Fire. They laid together a great heap of Stones upon him, which remains there to this day. This is the account given by the Author of the book of Joshua. This fell out in the year of the World 2553, before Jesus Christ 1447, before the vulgar Æra 1451. The place where Achan was stoned was afterwards called the Valley of Achor, and lies to the north of Jericho.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Translators' note. This was an expression of Sorrow in use among the Ancients almost generally, and not peculiar to the Jews; that it was so among the old Latins, appears from these Lines of Virgil, ——It scissâ veste Latinus, Conjugis attonitus fatis, urbisque ruinâ, Canitiem immundo perfusam pulvere turpans. Æneid. lib. 12. h Ἄχαρις Minimè gratiosus.

Acharis

ACHARIS, is a Greek word[1], which signifies in general an ungrateful, uncivil, troublesome, or impertinent Man, Eccluf. xx. 21. Homo acharis quasi fabula vana in ore indisciplinatorum assidua erit; the unbred, impertinent, and troublesome Man is as tiresome as the insipid buffoonries of ignorant and mean People.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ἄχαρις, Minimè gratiosus.

Achbor (1)

ACHBOR, the Father of Baal-hanan, King of Edom, Gen. xxxvi. 38.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Achbor (2)

ACHBOR, an Officer belonging to King Josiah, who was sent by this Prince to consult the Prophetess Huldah concerning the book of the Law, which had been found [2 Kings xxii. 14.] by the High-priest Hilkiah, in the year of the World 3380, before Jesus Christ 620, before the vulgar Æra 624.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Achbor (3)

ACHBOR, the Father of Elnathan, spoken of in Jerem. xxvi. 22. We shall say something of ELNATHAN under the Letter of his Name.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Achiab

ACHIAB, Nephew to Herod the Great, and Governour of one of the Fortresses of Jerusalem. Herod falling sick at Samaria, Achiab prevented Alexandra the Mother of Mariamne, in her design of seizing the several Fortresses of Jerusalem[1]. Upon another occasion he hinder'd his Uncle Herod from laying violent hands upon himself, and killing himself as he intended in his excess of Grief, with a short Sword which he held in his hand[2]. He likewise render'd ineffectual the efforts of two thousand Men, who kept the field, and sought an opportunity to attack him[3].

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Joseph. Antiq. l. 15. c. 9. p. 531.
Ibid. l. 17. c. 9. p. 509.
Ibid. l. 17. c. 12. p. 607.

Achim

ACHIM, the Son of Zadok, Father of Eliud, of the Tribe of Judah, and Family of David. Achim is named in the Genealogy of our Saviour, Matt. i. 14.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Achior (1)

ACHIOR, the Friend and Relation of Tobit; he was as well as Tobit of the City and Tribe of Naphtali, and carried by Salmanesser to Niniveh, where he always was very intimate with Tobit.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Achior (2)

ACHIOR, General of the Ammonites, who joined Holofernes's Army with the auxiliary troops of his Country, in that General's expedition into Egypt. The inhabitants of Bethulia having shut their Gates against Holofernes, and refusing to execute his orders, he called the Princes of Moab, and Commanders of the Ammonites, demanding of them, with great passion, who those people were that opposed his Passage, for he presumed that the Moabites and Ammonites, being neighbours to the Hebrews, could better inform him of the truth than any other persons. Then Achior, General of the Ammonites, answer'd, My Lord, these People are originally of Chaldæa; their Ancestors dwelt first in Mesopotamia, and because they would not worship the Gods of the Chaldæans, were obliged to leave their Country, and settle in the land which at present is possess'd by them. He continued to relate to him Jacob's descent into Egypt, the Miracles wrought by Moses for the deliverance of the Israelites, and the Conquest which they had made of Canaan. Lastly, he told him that this People had at all times been invincible, and were protected visibly by God as long as they continued faithful to him; but that as soon as they shewed any marks of Infidelity, God never failed to take vengeance on them. Now therefore, added he, learn whether these People have committed any fault against their God; if so, attack them, for he will deliver them up into your hands; if not, we shall not be able to resist them, because God will undertake their defence, and cover us with Confusion.

[Judith v. 2, 3, &c.] Upon hearing these words, the great Men of Holofernes's Army, moved with indignation, were inclined to fall upon him and kill him; and Holofernes, transported with fury, said to Achior, Since you have taken upon you to be a Prophet, in telling us that the God of Israel would be the Defender of his People, to shew you that there is no other God besides Nebuchodonozor my Master, when we have put all these People to the edge of the sword, we will destroy you likewise, and you shall understand that Nebuchodonosor is Lord of all the earth; and, that you may yourself experience the vanity of your own Prophecy, I will have you carried to Bethulia, there whom you believe to be invincible. They carried him therefore through the Hill countries till he came pretty near the City; there they tied his hands behind him, and fastened him to a tree, that the People of Bethulia, who were come out against them, might take him and carry him into the City, where, in the midst of the Elders, and in a full assembly of the People, he declared to them what he had said, and what had happened to him: Then all the People of Bethulia fell with their faces to the ground, and with great cries begg'd God's assistance, beseeching him to vindicate the honour of his Name, and humble the pride of their Enemies; after which they took Achior and comforted him. Ozias, one of the great leaders of the People, received him into his House, and made a splendid entertainment for him.

Achior continued in Bethulia as long as the Siege lasted; and when God had deliver'd Holofernes into the hands of Judith, and she was returning to the City with his Head, [Judith xiii. 27, 28, &c.] Achior was called, and Judith spoke thus to him: The God of Israel, to whom you have borne testimony, has this Night, by my hands, cut off his head who was General of all these Infidels; and immediately she drew out the head of Holofernes, and shewed it to him, saying, Behold the head of that Man who insulted the God of Israel, and boasted that he would put you and us to the edge of the sword. Achior seeing the head of Holofernes, was so terrified, that he fell with his Face to the ground, and his Spirit failed him; but recovering soon after, Judith said to him, Blessed art thou throughout all the house of Jacob, for the God of Israel will be for ever glorified in thee among all People who shall hear mention of thy Name. After this Achior abandoned the Superstitions of the Heathen, believed in God, was circumcised, and received into the number of the Israelites.

[Ch. xiv. 6, &c.] The War with Holofernes is by some fixed to the time of Manasseh, King of Judah, in the year of the World 3348, before Jesus Christ 652, before the vulgar Æra 656: According to others it fell out after the return from the Captivity of Babylon. Upon this subject see the Commentators, and our Preface to the book of Judith.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Achiram

ACHIRAM, or Ahiram, of the Tribe of Benjamin, was chief of one of the greatest families of this Tribe at the time when they [Num. xxvi. 38.] came out of Egypt.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Achish

ACHISH, King of Gath. David having resolved to withdraw to some distant place from Saul, who sought an opportunity to take away his life, retired to Gath, a City in the land of the Philistines, where Achish [1 Sam. xxi. 10.] then reigned. The Officers the King whether this was not that David who was respected as the King of his own Country; whether this was not he of whom it had been said at a publick time of dancing, Saul hath killed his thousands, and David his ten thousands. David having heard these Discourses, began to apprehend his life to be in danger; he therefore counterfeited madness before the Philistines, scribbled on the doors of the Gate, and let his spittle fall down his Beard. Then Achish said unto his Servants, Lo, you see the Man is mad, wherefore then have ye brought him to me? Have we not Madmen enough without bringing him too hither? David therefore by this Stratagem got out of Gath, and escaped this danger, in the year of the World 2944, before Jesus Christ 1056, before the vulgar Æra 1060.

[In the Year of the World 2947, before J.C. 1053, before the vulgar Æra 1057. 1 Sam. xxvii. 14, &c.] Three or four years after, David having first in all probability acquainted Achish with his intentions, sent him an offer of his Services, and desired to be received either in the City or some other part of his Dominions. Achish, who knew the valour of David, and the subject of that Discontent which was between him and Saul received him willingly in Gath, with six hundred Men, their wives and children, which he had brought with him. Here they continued for some time; after which David said to Achish, If I have found Grace in thine eyes, give me a Place of retreat in some Town in the Country, for why should thy servant dwell in the royal City with thee. Achish therefore gave him the property of Ziklag, and there David settled. Now during his four months abode in Gath, he made frequent excursions with his People, and plundered the Neighbours round about, killing all the men he met with, lest any one should discover where it was that he made war. In the mean while he persuaded Achish that he ravaged the lands belonging to Judah, and from thence brought all the Spoil he took, part whereof he never failed to give him. Achish therefore confided absolutely in David, saying, He has done so much mischief to his own People, that he will never more think of returning to them, and so will be always engaged closely to my Service.

[In the Year of the World 3949, before J.C. 1051, before the vulgar Æra 1055. 1 Sam. xxviii. 1, 2, &c.] About two years after the Philistines took the Field, in order to encounter the Israelites; and David had orders from Achish to prepare to march, and imbark in this war with him; whereupon he replied to Achish, Surely thou shalt know what thy Servant can do: The other then said, that he would at all times trust him with the guard of his Person. The Philistines therefore being come to Aphek, a Town situated in the great plain or valley [1 Sam. xxix.] of Jezreel, David and his People marched in the rear with Achish. Then said the Princes of the Philistines to Achish, What do these Hebrews here? To this he answer'd, Is not this David, which hath been with me these days or these years, and I have found no fault in him? But the Princes of the Philistines were wrath with him, and said unto him, Make this Fellow return, and let him not go down with us to battle, lest in the midst of the Combat he turn upon us, and endeavour to reconcile himself with Saul at the expence of our Blood. Then said Achish to David, Surely as the Lord liveth thou hast been upright, I approve thy whole Conduct; thou hast given me no reason for complaint, but thou art not acceptable to the Lords about me, return therefore that thou mayst not offend them. David answer'd, What have I done? and what hast thou found in thy Servant so long as I have been with thee unto this day, that I may not go fight against the enemies of my Lord the King? Then said Achish, To me thou art as an Angel of God, but the Princes of the Philistines have determined that thou shalt not engage with them in the Battle. David returned therefore the next day to Ziklag, which, during his absence, had been plunder'd by the Amalekites. David continued but a very little while with this Prince after the Battle of Gilboa, wherein Saul and his Sons were slain. From Ziklag he came to Hebron, in the Tribe of Judah; from which [2 Sam. ii. 1, 2, &c.] time there is no more mention of Achish in Scripture.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Achor

ACHOR, a Valley in the Territory of Jericho, and in the Tribe of Benjamin, where Achan, his Sons and Daughters were [Josh. vii. 24.] stoned to death, and burnt in the year of the World 2553, before Jesus Christ 1447, before the vulgar Æra 1451.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Achsah

ACHSAH, the Daughter of Caleb, who was promised by her Father to him, who should take Kirjath-sepher, which, upon the division, was fallen to his Lot. Othniel [Ch. xv. 16,17,&c.] having taken it, married Achsah. After the Wedding, while they were conducting her in a ceremonious manner to her Husband's house, Othniel persuaded her to ask her Father Caleb for a field that was well watered: She therefore lighted off her ass, and threw herself at her Father's feet, who desiring to know what she would have, she answer'd, Father, thou hast given me a South-land, give me also Springs of water. And he gave her the upper Springs and the nether Springs, or a field water'd with good Springs as well as with the Dews and Rains.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Achzib

ACHZIB, is the Town of Ecdippa, situated near the Mediterranean, between Tyre and Ptolemais. See ACKSHAPH.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ackshaph

[Ch. xii. 20. Akshaph. אכשף Ch. xix. 29. אכזיב Akzib.] ACKSHAPH, a City belonging to the Tribe of Asher. The King of Ackshaph was conquer'd by Joshua. Some are of opinion that Ackshaph is the same as Ecdippa, a Town of note upon the Mediterranean, between Tyre and Ptolemais: Others will have it that Ecdippa is described in Joshua under the name of Achzib. The Arabians at this day call a Place three hours distant from Ptolemais, towards the North, Zib, which is the place where formerly stood Ecdippa. It is probable enough that Ackshaph and Achzib are but different names for the same Town of Ecdippa, upon the Coast of Phœnicia.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Acra

ACRA, is a Greek word, and signifies in general a Citadel. The Syrians and Chaldæans make use of it likewise in the same Sense[1]. King Antiochus gave orders for the building of a Citadel, northward of the Temple, upon an eminence which commanded this holy Place[2]; for which reason this Hill was called Acra. Josephus[3] says, that this Eminence was in the form of a Semicircle, and that Simon Maccabæus having driven away the Syrians, who had seized on the Citadel of Acra, demolished it, and spent three years in levelling the Mountain upon which it was built. The ruins of it were thrown, by his directions, into the Vale below, that no Situation hereafter should command the Temple. Upon Mount Acra was built afterwards the Palace of Helena, Queen of the Adiabenians[4], Agrippa's Palace[5], the place where the publick Records were lodged, and that where the Magistrates of Jerusalem assembled[6].

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Græc. Ἄκρα. Syr. Chald. הקרא.
Joseph. Antiq. l. 12. c. 7. & 14.
Ibid. l. 13. c. 11. p. 446, 447.
Joseph. de Bello, l. 7. c. 13.
Joseph. Antiq. l. 20. c. 7. p. 964.
Joseph. de Bello. l. 7. c. 13. Ἀρχεῖον καὶ τὸ Βουλευτήριον, &c.

Acrabatene (1)

ACRABATENE, a Canton of Judæa, extending itself between Naplouse or Shechem and Jericho[1], inclining towards the East. It was about twelve miles or four leagues in length. The Acrabatene had its Name from a place called Akrabbim, seated at nine miles or three leagues distance from Shechem, Eastward[2]. Josephus speaks of the Acrabatene in several places.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Euseb. in voce ἀκραβέειν. Item in Ἰδυμαία. Vide & Joseph. de Bello. l. 2. c. 11.

Vide Euseb. in Akrabbim.

Acrabatene (2)

ACRABATENE, another Canton of Judæa, upon the frontier of Idumæa, towards the Southern extremity of the Dead Sea. This Canton derives its name from Akrabbim, which in the Vulgate is [Num. xxxiv. 4. 1 Macc, v. 3.] translated the Staircase of Scorpio. There is mention made of this Acrabatene in the first Book of Maccabees.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Acrosticks

ACROSTICKS, Acrostick Writings. See the Article LETTERS.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Acts of the Apostles

ACTS OF THE APOSTLES, a Canonical Book of the New Testament, which contains a great part of St. Peter's life, and of St. Paul's, beginning at the Ascension of our Saviour, and continued as far as St. Paul's arrival at Rome, after his appeal to Cæsar, that is to say, this book includes the History of eight and twenty or thirty years. St. Luke has been always taken for the Author of the Acts. After that he had described the Actions of Jesus Christ in his Gospel, he resolved likewise to leave the lives and actions of the first Apostles, and a Relation of the wonderful manner, wherewith the holy Spirit formed that Church which Christ had redeemed with his Blood.

OEcumenius[1] calls the Acts the Gospel of the Holy Ghost, and St. Chrysostom[2] the Gospel of our Saviour's Resurrection, or the Gospel of Christ Jesus risen from the Dead. Here in the Lives and Preaching of the Apostles, we have the most miraculous instance of the power of the Holy Ghost; and in the account of those who were the first Believers, we have the most excellent pattern of the true Christian Life; so that in this work, tho' St. Luke seems to give us but a plain narrative of Facts, yet herein does this divine Physician, according to St. Jerom's expression[3], offer to us as many remedies, fit to heal the diseases of our Souls, as he speaks words.

It is believed that St. Luke's principal Design in the composition of the Acts, was to write a true History of the Apostles, and of the foundation of the Christian Church, in opposition to the false Acts and false Histories which begun to be dispersed up and down the World. The fidelity and understanding of this holy Evangelist have been so much valued by the Church, that all other Acts of the Apostles which appeared either before or after him, have been despised by it, and those only adopted which were of his composing. We shall hereafter give a List of the several spurious Acts, the names whereof have been handed down to us; for few of them have been preserved entire.

The exact time wherein St. Luke wrote the Book of the Acts is not known: It is agreed that they were penn'd after his Gospel, and must have been written two years after St. Paul's abode at Rome upon the first journey that he made thither, that is to say about the sixty second or the sixty third year of the vulgar Æra; for St. Luke speaks of this journey, and of St. Paul's continuance at Rome for such a time after it. He might have written it at Rome while he remained with St. Paul during the time of his Imprisonment; for St. Luke stay'd with him for the two years of his abode at Rome till his Deliverance.

St. Luke wrote this work in Greek, and his Greek is generally purer and more elegant than that of other Authors of the New Testament. Epiphanius says[4], that this Book was translated by the Ebionites out of Greek into Hebrew, that is to say, into Syriac, which was the common language of the Jews in Palestine; but these Hereticks corrupted it with the mixture of many Falsities and Impieties, injurious to the memory of the Apostles. St. Jerom[5] assures us, that a certain Priest of Asia added to the true genuine Acts, the Voyages of St. Paul and St. Thecla[6], and the Story of baptizing a Lion. Tertullian tells us, that St. John the Evangelist having convicted this Priest of varying from the truth in this Relation, he excused himself, saying, he did it purely out of love to St. Paul[7].

The book of the Acts has always been esteemed canonical in the Church. The Marcionites[8] indeed, the Manichees[9], and some other Hereticks, rejected it, because they were sensible that their errors were too clearly condemned by it. St. Austin says[10], that the Church received this work with great edification, and read it every year in the assembly of the Faithful. St. Chrysostom complains, that in his time this Book was too little known, and that the reading of it was too much neglected. As for himself, he very much extols the advantages of it, and maintains with good reason that it is as useful as the Gospel.

APOCRYPHAL ACTS OF THE

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Œcumenius in Acta, p. 20.
Chryf. in Acta, homil. 1.
Hieronym. Ep. 103. p. 9.
Epiphan. hæref. 30. c. 3 & 6.
Hieronym. de Script. Eccles.
M. Grabe, in his Spicilegium of the Fathers, has given us an History of S. Thecla, which he believ'd to be the antient History mentioned by St. Jerom.
Tertull. de Baptismo, c. 17.
Tertull. l. 5. contra Marcion. c. 1, 2.
Aug, de utilitate credendi c. 3. & Ep. olim 253, nunc 237. n. 2.
Aug. Ep. 315. novæ Edit. n. 1.

Apostles

APOSTLES, supposed to be written by Abdias, the pretended Bishop of Babylon. The Impostor, who composed these Acts, gives himself out to be a Bishop ordain'd at Babylon by the Apostles themselves when they were upon their Journey into Persia. This work is neither antient nor authentick: It was not known either to Eusebius or St. Jerom, or to any of the other Fathers who lived before them. The Author says that he wrote in Greek, and that his Book was translated into Latin by Julius Africanus, who is himself a Greek Writer. He cites Hegesippus, who lived in the second age of the Church. In short, the lives of the Apostles which he gives us do so abound with Fables, that we can scarce look upon them as any thing better than a Romance very ill put together.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

The Acts of St. Peter

THE ACTS OF ST. PETER, otherwise called the Voyages of St. Peter, Periodi Petri, which we have at present under another title, Recognitiones sancti Clementis, are much longer than they were formerly. This is a book stuffed with vi sions and fables, that come originally from the school of the Ebionites[1].

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

See what Cotelerius says of these Recognitions, in his Fathers of the first Age. See likewise M. Fabricius's Apocr. N. T. p. 759, &c.

The Acts of S. Paul

THE ACTS OF S. PAUL, were composed after the death of this Apostle, as a Supplement to S. Luke, and a continuation of his Narrative from the second year of St. Paul's first voyage to Rome, to the very end of his life. This Book, which is entirely lost, must have been twice as long as the Canonical Acts of the Apostles, since in a Manuscript cited by Cotelerius, it is said to have contained four thousand five hundred and sixty lines or verses; whereas in the same Manuscript it is aver'd that in the genuine Book of the Acts, written by St. Luke, there are no more than two thousand five hundred. Eusebius, who had seen this Work, says it was a spurious Piece, or without any authority.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

The Acts of S

THE ACTS OF S. JOHN THE

EVANGELIST, mentioned in Epiphanius[1] and S. Austin[2], contain incredible Stories of this Apostle. The Encratites, Manichees and Priscillianists, made use of them: It is probable that the Author of the Synopsis, who is said to be Athanasius, may quote them under the title of S. John's Voyage. These are thought to be the Acts of St. John, which are among the others published under the forged name of Abdias.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Epiphan. Hæres. 47.
Aug. de fide c. 4. & 405. contra adversar. Legis & Prophet. l. 1. c. 20.

The Acts of S. Andrew

THE ACTS OF S. ANDREW, mentioned in S. Austin, and received by the Manichees, were different from those which we have at present under the name of the Priests of Achaia. The Manichees[1], Encratites[2], and Apotacticks, made use of the Acts of S. Andrew. See Epiphanius, Hæres. 61, & 62.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Aug. de fide contra Manich. c. 38. & alibi.
Epiph. Hær. 42.

The Acts of S. Thomas

THE ACTS OF S. THOMAS, S. Austin cites something out of them:[1]He says, that the Manichees particularly made use of them: Part of them is to be met with in the life of S. Thomas, written by the counterfeit Abdias. M. Simon thinks he has found these old Acts of S. Thomas, under the name of Voyages, Periodi Sancti Apostoli Thomæ, in a Greek Manuscript of the French King's Library, N° 1832. He gives us some fragments of them in his observations on the Text and Versions of the New Testament.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Aug. lib. contra Adimant. c. 17. & lib. 22. contra Faust. c. 79. & lib. 1. de Serm. Domini in monte c. 20.

The Acts of S. Philip

THE ACTS OF S. PHILIP. This was a Book which the Gnosticks made use of; Pope Gelasius placed them among the Apocryphal Writings. Anastasius the Sinaïte has preserved a fragment of them in his work concerning three Lents, published by M. Cotelier, among his Monuments of the Greek Church, Tom. 3. p. 428.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

The Acts of S. Matthias

THE ACTS OF S. MATTHIAS[1]. Some have imagined that the Jews for a long time had concealed the original Acts of the Life and Death of S. Matthias, written in Hebrew, and that a Monk of the Abby of S. Matthias at Treves, having got them out of their hands, procured them to be translated into Latin, and published them: But the Criticks will not allow them to be genuine or authentick[2]. It is probable that the Jews abused the honesty and simplicity of the Person to whom they communicated them.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Bolland 24 Februar.
See M. de Tillemont, T. 1. of his Eccl. Hist. p. 1186. and M. Fabricius's Apoc. N. T. p. 782.

Adada

[Josh. xv. 22.] ADADA, a City in the Southern part of Judah.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Adad-Rimmon

ADAD-RIMMON, or Hadad-Rimmon, a City in the Valley of Jesreel. There the fatal Battle was fought, wherein Josiah King of Judah was killed by the forces of [2 Kings xxiii. 29.] Pharaoh-Necho King of Egypt. Adad-rimmon was afterwards called Maximianopolis[1], in honour of the Emperor Maximian. It is seventeen miles from Cæsarea in Palestine, and ten miles from Jezreel[2].

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Hieronym. ad Zach. xii. vide & ad Ose. i.
Itin. Jerosol. antiq.

Adah (I)

I. ADAH, one of Lamech's two Wives, [Gen. iv. 19.] was the Mother of Jabel and Jubal. The names of the rest of her Children (for it is presumed that she had more) are no where mentioned. One day, upon what occasion [Ch. iv. 23.] we are not told, Lamech said to his two Wives Adah and Zillah, Hear my voice, ye Wives of Lamech, hearken unto my Speech; for I have slain a Man to my wounding, and a young Man to my hurt. If Cain shall be avenged seven-fold, truly Lamech seventy and seven fold. See the Conjectures of Commentators on this matter.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Adah (II)

II. ADAH, the Daughter of Elon the [Ch. xxxvi. 4.] Hittite, and Wife to Esau. She was the Mother of Eliphaz.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Adaiah (I)

I. ADAIAH, of the Tribe of Levi, the Son of Ethan, and Father of Zerah, 1 Chron. vi. 41.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Adaiah (II)

II. ADAIAH, of the Tribe of Benjamin, the Son of Shimhi, 1 Chron. viii. 21.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Adaiah (III)

III. ADAIAH, of the sacerdotal Race, was the Son of Jeroham, and Father of Maasiai, 1 Chron. ix. 12.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Adaiah (IV)

IV. ADAIAH, a Jew, who returned from Babylon; he was one of those who dismissed the Wives, which, contrary to the Law, they had taken from among the Gentiles.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Adaliah

ADALIAH, the fifth Son of Haman, who was hanged, with the rest of his [Esth. ix. 8.] Brethren, by the command of Ahasuerus.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

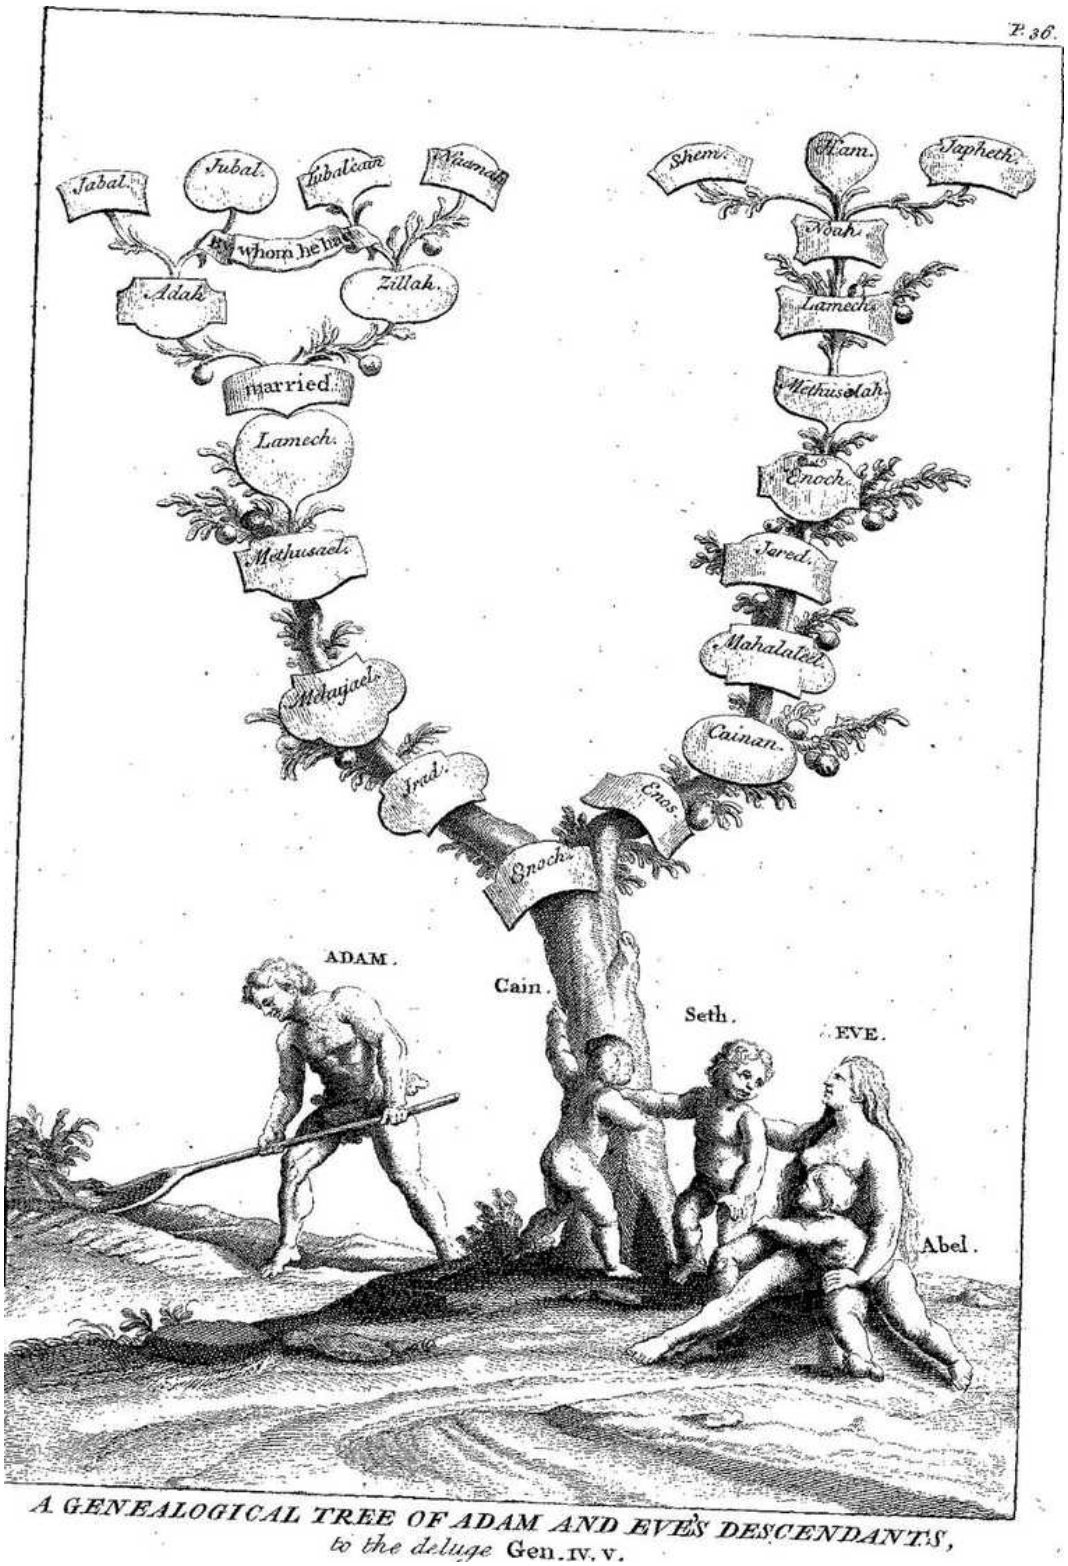
Adam

ADAM,

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Adam

[Ver. 19.] ADAM, was the first Man created by God. It is said, that he was called Adam by reason of the reddish colour of the Earth out of which he was formed; for Adam in Hebrew signifies red[1]. This name denotes likewise every Man in general. God having made Man out of the Dust of the Earth, breathed in him the Breath of Life, and gave him Dominion over all the Creatures of the Earth. He created him after his own image and resemblance, and blessed him. He placed him in a delicious Garden, that [Ch. ii. 8, 15. Ver. 16, 17.] he might cultivate it agreeably, and feed upon the fruits of it; but at the same time left this command with him, " Eat of all the " Fruits of Paradise, but of the Tree of " the knowledge of Good and Evil thou " shalt not eat of it; for in the day that " thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely " die.



[Ch. ii.] Some little time after, God brought all the Beasts of the Earth, and all the Fowls of the Air to Adam, that he might see by what names he would call them; and Adam gave to every one of them their true name; such a name as best suited them, and described the principal properties of them: Now all other Animals had been created by pairs, male and female, and Man only was without a Fellow creature of his own species: Wherefore God said, It is not good for Man to be alone; I will make an Helpmate for him. The Lord caused therefore a deep sleep to fall upon him, and while he slept he took one of his Ribs, and closed up the Flesh instead thereof; and of the Rib which he took from Man made he a Woman, whom he presented to him, when he awoke. Then said Adam, This is now bone of my bone, and flesh of my flesh; she shall be called Woman, because she was taken out of Man[2]. Therefore shall a Man leave Father and Mother, and shall cleave unto his Wife, and they two shall be one Flesh. And they were both naked, the Man and his Wife, and were not ashamed. Adam called likewise his Wife's name Eve[3]; because she was the Mother of all living.

Now the Serpent, which is more subtle than any Beast of the field, came to Eve, and said, Why has not God permitted you to eat indifferently of all the fruits of Paradise? The Woman answered, that they might eat the Fruit of all the Trees in the Garden, one only excepted, which they were forbidden to touch lest they should die. And the Serpent said unto the Woman, Ye shall not surely die; for God doth know, that in the day ye eat thereof, then your eyes shall be opened, and ye shall be as Gods, knowing Good and Evil. [ii. 7.] The Woman therefore seeing that the Tree was good for food, and pleasant to the eyes, took the fruit of it, eat, and then gave it to her Husband, who likewise did eat of it. At the same time their eyes were opened, and they knew that they were naked, and having sown fig-leaves together, they made themselves aprons for a covering to their nakedness: And as they heard the Lord walking in the garden about sun-set, they hid themselves from his presence amidst the thickest trees of Paradise. Then the Lord called unto Adam, and said unto him, Where art thou? He answered, I heard thy voice in the garden, and I was afraid, because I was naked, and I hid myself. And God said, Who told thee that thou wast naked? Hast thou eaten of the Tree whereof I commanded thee that thou shouldst not eat?

Adam replied, The Woman, whom thou gavest to be with me, she gave me of the Tree, and I did eat. And the Lord said unto the Woman, What is this that thou hast done? And the Woman said, The Serpent beguiled me, and I did eat. Then the Lord said unto the Serpent, Because thou hast done this, thou art cursed above all Cattle, and above every Beast of the field; upon thy belly shalt thou go, and dust shalt thou eat, all the days of thy life. And I will put enmity between thee and the Woman, and between thy Seed and her Seed: It shall bruise thy Head, and thou shalt bruise his Heel. Unto the Woman he said likewise, I will greatly multiply thy sorrow and thy conception, in sorrow thou shalt bring forth Children, and thy desire shall be to thy Husband, and he shall rule over thee. As to Adam to him he said, Because thou hast hearkened unto the voice of thy Wife, and hast eaten of the Tree, the fruit whereof I had forbidden thee to eat, the Ground, for thy sake, shall be cursed, and in sorrow shalt thou eat of it all the days of thy life. Thorns also and Thistles shall it bring forth to thee, and thou shalt eat the Herb of the field. In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat Bread, till thou return unto the ground; for out of it wast thou taken; for dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return.

Then the Lord made coats of skin for Adam and his Wife, and clothed them[4]; and said, Behold Adam is become as one of us, to know Good and Evil. And now, lest he put forth his hand, and take also of the Tree of Life, and eat, and live for ever; therefore the Lord God sent him forth from the Garden of Eden to till the ground, from whence he was taken. So he drove out the Man; and he placed at the East of the Garden of Eden, Cherubims, and a flaming Sword which turned every where, to keep the way of the Tree of Life. It is not known how long Adam and Eve continued in Paradise. Interpreters are very much divided upon this point[5]. Some allow them to have lived there many years; others many days; and some again but many hours. We think they might have remained there for ten or twelve days, and that when they were forced from this delicious place they were pure Virgins.

A GENEALOGICAL TREE OF ADAM AND EVE'S DESCENDANTS,

[Ch. v. 5. Gen. iv. 1, 2, &c.] In some little time after Eve conceived, and brought forth Cain, saying, I have gotten a Man from the Lord. It is believed that she had a Girl at the same time, and that generally she was delivered of twins. Scripture takes notice of but three Sons that Adam had, Cain, Abel and Seth, and does not say particularly that he had any Daughter: But Moses will not suffer us to doubt at all of his having many Children, when he tells us, that he begat Sons and Daughters. He died at the age of nine hundred and thirty years; before J. C. 3070. before the vulgar Æra 3074. This is all we learn from Moses concerning our first Parent. But Interpreters do not stop here; they have proposed a thousand questions on this subject. It is true, no History can furnish us with more room for questions of curiosity and consequence; and we should be scarce able to excuse ourselves if we did not examine some of them in this place.

It is agreed that the Serpent, which tempted Eve, was the Devil, and nothing else;[6] that infernal Serpent, who envying the privileges of Man in innocence, tempted him, and was the cause of his forfeiting all those advantages which he had received from God at his Creation. But in order to make this trial of his fidelity, he assumed the form of a Serpent; and of what kind of Serpent? Some[7] believe that the Serpent had then the use of speech, and conversed familiarly with the Woman, without her conceiving any distrust of him; and that God, to punish the malice with which he had abused Eve, deprived him of the use of Speech. Others[8] believe, that the Devil transformed himself into a Serpent, and spoke to Eve under the figure of this Animal. Others[9] maintain, that a real and common Serpent having eaten of the forbidden Fruit, Eve from thence concluded, that she too might eat of it without danger; that in effect she did eat of it, and incur'd the Displeasure of God by her disobedience. This, say these Authors, is the plain matter of fact, which Moses would relate under the allegorical representation of the Serpent conversing with Eve.

Cajetan will have this whole story, as it is recited by Moses, in the way of dialogue between the Woman and the Serpent, to be figurative only, to signify the inward suggestions of the Devil, and the Woman's weak resistance. Others affirm, that the Serpent's speech was nothing but his hissing; and that Eve understanding all Creatures by their voices, apprehended what this Animal had to say to her, by the noise it made. Lyranus reports the opinion of some to be, that the Serpent put on the face of a beautiful young Woman to tempt Eve. We are assured[10], that the Hereticks called Ophitæ, or Serpentini, believed Jesus Christ to be the Serpent which tempted the first Woman; for which reason they bred up a Serpent, which at a word from their Priests would creep under their Altars, lick up their Oblations, and then retire to its hole. After this they would advance towards the Altar, and receive the Sacrament, being then persuaded that Jesus Christ himself, under the form of a Serpent, had sanctified it. Tertullian[11] and Epiphanius tell us[12], that the same Hereticks believed the Serpent which tempted Eve to be a certain Power or Virtue, produced in the shape of a Serpent by Saldebaoth, out of vexation for what God, the Great Jehovah, had done in making Man to walk, who before was no better than a worm. Some Rabbins believe that Sammael Prince of the Devils came in person to tempt Eve, mounted on a Serpent as large as any Camel.

The nature of the forbidden Fruit has been enquired into, and what sort of Tree it was which bore it. Some Rabbins believe it was the Vine[13]; others that it was Wheat; Theodore, who is quoted in Theodoret, St. Isidore, and Procopius, tell us that it was the Fig-tree: And this opinion they ground upon the circumstance of Adam and Eve's covering themselves with Fig-leaves immediately after their Transgression. Others think it was the Cherry tree; the generality of the Latins will have it to be an Apple-tree. But we must confess, that there is nothing certain in this matter, since nothing has been said by Moses concerning the nature of this tree.

Many Jewish Writers[14] have asserted that Man and Woman were created together, and were fasten'd together by the shoulders, having four feet, four hands, and two heads, alike in every thing excepting Sex, and that God having cast them into a proa profound sleep, separated them, and made two Persons of them. Eugubinus[15] affirms, that they were joined together not by the back, but by the sides; so that God, according to the Scripture, took the Woman from Adam's side; but Moses, instead of saying this, declares, that he took a rib from Adam, out of which he form'd Woman. Many fabulous Stories are told of Adam's stature and beauty: Some have maintain'd[16], that he was the handsomest Man that ever was, and that God before he form'd him assum'd an human body of the most perfect beauty, after the pattern whereof he created Adam. In this manner it was literally true they say that Adam was made, after the image and resemblance of God.

Others[17] have declared, that he was the greatest Giant there ever was, which opinion they pretend to prove by these words of the Vulgate, Josh. xiv. ult. Adam maximus inter Enachim (ibi) Hebrone, situs est. The Rabbins tell us[18], that this first Man was of so prodigious a stature, that he reached from one end of the World to the other; but that after this Transgression God pressed his hand heavily upon him, and reduced him to the measure of an hundred Ells. Others allow him to have been nine hundred cubits in Height, and maintain that God reduced him to this measure at the request of the Angels, who were frighten'd at his first stature.

There has been much dispute in the Church concerning the Salvation of Adam. Tatian and the Encratites were positive that he was damned; but this opinion the Church condemned. The Author of the [Wisd. xi.] book of Wisdom says, that God deliver'd him from his Sin; Custodivit & eduxit illum a delicto suo; and the Fathers say that he did hard Penance. The Rabbins believe the same: Some will have it that Adam and Eve continued in a state of Continency for an hundred years after their Fall; others say but thirty, and some again but fifteen. No one knows the place where our first Parents were buried: Some of the Antients believe[19], that they were interr'd at Hebron, which opinion they ground on the words of Joshua already cited by us; [Josh. xiv. ult.] Nomen Hebron ante vocabatur Coriath-Arbe. Adam maximus ibi inter Enachim situs est. But the Hebrew text of this Passage is otherwise explained, thus;

And the Name of Hebron before was Kirjath-Arba, which Arba was a great Man among, or Father of, the A-nakims: Others in greater number hold[20], that Adam was buried upon Calvary, and this opinion has its Advocates even at this day. There is a Chapel to be seen upon Mount Calvary, dedicated to the honour of Adam[21]: But St. Jerom confesses[22], that this opinion, which is very proper to sooth the Ears of the common People, is not however the more certain for this Reason; Favorabilis opinio, & mulcens aurem populi, nec tamen vera.

Adam has been reputed the Author of some books; it has been supposed that he was master of a great deal of profound and very extensive Knowledge. His giving names to the several Animals not only proves, as the same persons alledge, his Dominion over them, but likewise his vast knowledge of the Properties belonging to them, God having created him perfect, there is no question to be made but that he gave him a very clear and comprehensive Mind; but all this speculative Science and superior Genius is not inconsistent with the experimental ignorance of those things which are to be learned by use only and reflection. There have been People who believed that he invented the Hebrew Letters. The Jews say he is the Author of the ninety first Psalm, which begins with Bonum est confiteri Domino. They affirm that he compos'd it soon after the Creation: The Gnosticks likewise had a book intitled The Revelations of Adam, which was placed among the apocryphal Writings by Pope Gelasius. The same Pope makes mention also of a Book called Adam's Penance. Masius[23] speaks of another of the Creation, which is said to have been composed by Adam. The Arabians[24] inform us that Adam received twenty Books which fell from Heaven, and contained many Laws, Promises, and Prophecies.

The antient Persians relate[25] the Creation of Adam and the first of Mankind in such a manner as deserves our notice: They say that there was a God before all things, and that he is the Author of them; that having resolved to manifest himself by his Works, he created the Universe, and divided it into six parts. First he made the Heavens and their Spheres, which he adorn'd with great and small luminaries, such as the Sun, Moon and Stars. He created also the Angels, some of whom are placed above others, according to their rank and dignity, and Heaven was appointed to be the abode of those who should keep God's Commandments, and live piously in this life. After he had finished this great work, he rested for six days, to instruct us that time and meditation are necessary for the execution of great designs.

After this he made Hell, which he placed in the lowest region of the World; from whence he banished all sort of light and consolation, that it might be a place of horror and punishment for the violators of his Laws: Here, as well as in Heaven, he made different Dwellings, wherein the wicked were to be tormented according to the measure and quality of their Crimes. About this time Lucifer, chief of the Angels, and some of his order, having conspired against God, in order to wrest his sovereign Power from him, God threw them headlong into Hell, and changed their figure into a black, hideous, and terrible form, and thus confin'd them in Hell, where they are to remain till the end of the World; then sinners shall receive their punishment, and undergo the sentence of their Condemnation. After this God again rested, and forbore working for five days more.

The third work of the Creation was the Earth or terraqueous Globe, which includes the waters and dry element; so that the Waters make the Earth fruitful, and the Earth includes the Waters within their just bounds. This great work being over, God continued five days without producing forth any thing.

The fourth work was that of the Creation of Trees, Plants, and Herbs, that so the earth might bring forth fruits, and every thing which might serve for food to Man and Beasts: After which God rested from his labours as before.

The fifth work was that of Beasts, Birds, and Fishes, which were to live upon the earth, and feed on what it produced. The World being adorned, and furnished with all sorts of Creatures, God again ceased from working for five days.

Lastly, he undertook his sixth work, and made Man and Woman, Adamah and Evah, for whose use all things had been form'd. In order to have the World peopled with more speed, God appointed that Eve should be deliver'd every day of Twins, and that for a thousand years Death should not diminish the number of Mankind.

Lucifer, who had been cast down headlong into Hell, studied how he might do mischief to Man, and tempt him to incur the guilt of Sin, and so deprive him of all his happiness. God, in order to prevent the evil effects of his Malice, appointed certain Overseers to have a vigilant eye upon his Creatures, in order to preserve them in the state wherein he had created them. The care of the Heavens he allotted to one Hamul, the care of Angels to Acrob, the care of the Sun, Moon, and Stars was given to Isoder, that of the Earth to Soreh, that of the Water to Josah, that of Animals to Sumbola, that of Fishes to Daloo, that of Trees to Rocan; that of Man and Woman to Cooz; lastly, he set Sertan and Asud as a guard to Lucifer and his accomplices, to prevent their doing mischief to his Creatures.

This did not hinder Lucifer from tempting Men, and engaging them in many disorders, which obliged God to destroy them by a Deluge which cover'd the whole Earth, and spared but very few of Mankind, from whom all the present inhabitants of the World are deriv'd.

The[26] Banians, who are People that dwell in the East Indies, and are dispersed over the Kingdom of Cambaye, say that God, intending to display his Almighty Power, created the Universe, that is to say, the Earth, Air, Fire and Water, which are as it were the basis of all sensible Creatures. These four things were at first mingled and confounded together; God separated them by blowing upon the Waters with a kind of great trunk; hereupon they immediately swelled, and became like a vastly large round bottle, in the shape of an egg, which extending itself gradually, made the Firmament that encompasses the World, light and transparent, such as we now behold it.

After this he created the Sun and Moon, which he placed in the Firmament, in order to make the difference of Seasons. By this means the four Elements were disentangled; every one was disposed in its proper place, and each perform'd its function; the Air filled every thing that was void, the Fire gave light and action to all things by its heat, the Earth produc'd its Creatures, and the Sea likewise. To every one of them God gave the seminal virtues necessary for production. Thus this great World was finished, which was divided into four parts, as it had been form'd of four Elements; and these four parts are the East, West, North, and South.

This World was to last four Ages, and to be peopled by four sorts of Men, married to four Women, made particularly for them: God therefore set about the Creation of Man after he had form'd the Universe. He commanded the Earth to produce out of its intrails this excellent Creature. The Earth obeyed, and immediately there appeared the head, then successively the other parts of Man's body, into which God breathed life and motion; his eyes were open'd, and Man employ'd the first operations of his Mind in acknowledging and adoring his Creator. At the same time God gave him a Woman like unto himself for a companion: The Man was called Pourous, and the Woman Parcontee. They lived together and had four Sons; the name of the first was Bramon, of the second Cuttery, of the third Schuddery, and of the fourth Urise.

Each of these four Men had a constitution peculiar to himself, according to the element which principally prevail'd in him. Bramon had most of the Earth in him, and consequently was of a melancholy humour; Cuttery had a great deal of Fire in his constitution, and was of a martial and warlike spirit; Schuddery was phlegmatick, and was of a gentle peaceable spirit; Urise was of an airy constitution, and had a ready wit for Invention.

God gave Bramon, as the most serious and composed, a book wherein the laws of Religion were written; to Cuttery, as the most valiant, he gave a sword and scepter, to command and govern Mankind, and contain them within the bounds of Duty; Schuddery, who was of an easy meek spirit, received balances from God, and a sack filled with all sorts of weights hung at his girdle, in order to carry on the businesss of Merchandising, and teach Men to trade; lastly, God gave Urise, who was of a subtle airy spirit, the gift of Invention, Mechanicks, and Arts, together with a sack filled with all sorts of mechanical instruments.

God did not permit Pourous and Parcontee to have Daughters, lest their Brothers living with them might pollute themselves with some incestuous act; but he created four Women for the four Sons we have been speaking of, and disposed them in places remote from the habitation of the first Men; one in the East, another in the West, a third in the North, and a fourth in the South; that so the Sons of Pourous seeking for them in these places, the Propagation of Mankind might be more easily and speedily carried on over all the Earth.

God having resolved to people the World, sent Bramon towards the East, with the book of divine Laws in his possession: Here he met the Woman whom God had design'd for him, and who was of a Stature and Constitution like his; he took her to wife, and was the Father of the Eastern People. This Woman's name was Savanée. Cuttery, the second Son of Pourous, took his Rout westward, and in like manner met the Woman who was appointed for him; she was called Todicastree: She did not yield without fighting; she had as much courage as her Husband, and was arm'd as well as he. They fought for three or four days; at last Todicastree was taken, and became the Wife of Cuttery: They peopled together the West. Schuddery, who was design'd for Trade and Merchandising, went northward, with his Weights and Balances, and having met with Pearls and Diamonds, took abundance of them; afterwards he found the Woman who was prepar'd for him: she was called Visagundah; he married her, and was Father of the Northern People. Urise, the fourth Son of Pourous, whose talent was Invention, Industry, and Mechanicks, departed with his instruments, and took his rout towards the South: He travers'd seven seas, and passed them by the help of a vessel of his own inventing. Upon his arrival into a country called Derpe, he built a fine house there upon the Sea-shore. Some time after the Woman whom God had created for him walking that way, drew near to his House to take a view of it, Urise came down to see her, and expressed his Admiration and Affection to her; but Jejunogundah, for that was her name, retiring, Urise courted her for several days following, and at last she yielded to his desires, became his Wife, and by their means the whole Southern part of the Earth was peopled.

The four Brothers, after they had thus peopled the World, found themselves inclin'd to return to the place of their first Original: Hither they came from the four corners of the World; but they quarrelling, and their Children falling into very great disorders, God destroyed them by the Deluge. Thus ended the first age of the World.

The Mahometans likewise, after their manner, relate the Creation of Adam and Eve, their fall, and that of the Angels[1], and add several particulars which we read nothing of in Moses. God, they say, by rains of long continuance prepared the slime of the Earth out of which he was to form the body of Adam; after this he sent the Angel Gabriel, and commanded him to take out of seven lays of earth of each an handful. Gabriel obeyed, declared to the Earth what orders he had received from God, and withal mentioned that the Lord had determined to extract that out of her entrails with which he proposed to form Man, who was to be the Monarch over her, and God's Vicegerent. The Earth amazed at this proposition, desired Gabriel to represent her fears to God, that this Creature whom he designed to form out of her bosom, would one day rebel against him, and draw down his curse upon her. Gabriel returned and made a report to God of the Earth's remonstrances; but God resolving to execute his design, dispatched Michael, and afterwards Asraphel, with the same commission. These two Angels returned in like manner to report the Earth's excuses, and absolute refusal to contribute to this work.

Last[27] Last of all, the Lord deputed Azrael, who without saying any thing to the Earth, or asking any questions, took hastily and carried off by force seven handfuls of seven different beds or lays out of the mass belonging to her, which he carried to a place in Arabia lying between Mecca and Taïef. Azrael, as a reward of this action, received a commission from God to separate the souls of men from their bodies; for which reason he is called the Angel of Death.

It is scarce credible that the Mussulmen should literally believe a creation in this manner; but we read this as a tradition in their Authors. Mahomet says no more than that God created and framed Man partly out of a sandy earth, and partly out of a stinking slime; but as for the Genii, he had already framed them out of a hot glowing fire. As to this difference of Earth made use of in the formation of Adam, it is of great service to them in explaining the different colours and qualities of Men who are derived from it, some of whom are white, or black, others tawny, yellow, olive-coloured, and red: some of one humour, inclination and complection, others of another quite different.

The Angels therefore having with their hands kneaded this Earth brought by Azrael, God with his own hand formed out of it a human statue, which being left for some time in the same place to dry, the Angels had leisure to examine it, and Eblis, or Lucifer, the first of them, having viewed it on all sides, and striking it upon the breast and belly perceived it sounded; from thence he concluded, that being empty within, it would be liable to several wants and temptations in order to fill itself; then turning to his companions, he said to them, If God should oblige you to acknowledge this Monarch, whom he proposes to establish as such over the Earth, what would you do? They answered, It would be highly necessary to obey God. Eblis said as much; but with a secret resolution to do nothing of it.

Some time after, God communicated his Spirit, or his enlivening Breath, to this Statue, infused Life and Understanding into it, and clothed it in a wonderful dress, suitable to its dignity. At the same time he commanded the Angels to fall prostrate before it, as a Mark of honour and respect. The Angels obeyed; Eblis only refused submission, and was therefore driven out of Paradise. Adam was placed in his room, and soon after God took out of his left side, while he was sleeping, the Woman whom he gave him for a Companion. Adam in a very short time after received God's command, forbidding him to eat of a certain fruit, on pain of falling under his Curse.

Hereupon Eblis resolved to be revenged on Adam: He associated with the Peacock and the Serpent, and approaching Adam and Eve had a long Conversation with them, wherein he persuaded them to eat of the forbidden fruit. They had no sooner tasted of it but the splendid Habits wherein they were dress'd fell at their feet, they discerned themselves to be naked, and being ashamed of their condition ran towards a Fig-tree, with a design of covering themselves with its leaves. Soon after they heard a voice like Thunder, crying out to them, Come down, and depart out of this place: You shall become enemies to one another, and shall have your habitation and subsistence for a time on earth. Adam therefore was thrown headlong from Heaven to Earth, and fell, according to the most general opinion, in the isle of Ceïlan, upon Mount Serandib. Eve fell at Gidda, a port of the Red Sea, pretty near to Mecca. The fall of Eblis happened to be at Missan, near Bassora; the Peacock's at Indostan, the Serpent's at Nisibe, or Ispahan; that is to say, in the places where these Cities were built in after-times.

In the Isle of Ceïlan, or Zeïlan, which is the same with Serandib, or Zeran-Dir, in the middle almost of the Island, they shew still at this day a very high Mountain, which the Arabians call Rahoun, and the Portugueze, Elpico d' Adam, or Adam's Mountain, upon which there is the impression or mark of a Man's foot, which they say is Adam's. This impression of his foot is, they say, seventy cubits in length; and they assure us that at that time Adam's other foot was in the Sea. But Robert Knox, an Englishman, who lived twenty years in this Island, in his Account published in the year 1681, makes this print of Adam's foot to be no more than about two feet in length[28]. Others[29] tell us that it is a Tradition, not in the Indies only, but over all the East, that Adam was buried there. But we shall see other opinions a little lower, concerning the place of his Death and Interment.

Adam therefore finding himself alone in this Island, destitute of every consolation of any kind, reflected upon himself, and being touched with Repentance, lifted up his Hands and Eyes to Heaven, imploring the clemency of his Creator. God, moved by his Repentance, caused a tent or pavilion to descend from Heaven by the hands of Angels, which they say was placed in that very spot where Abraham built afterwards the Temple of Mecca. Gabriel shew'd him all the ceremonies which were to be made use of in this Sanctuary, in order to obtain the pardon of his Sin. Adam went thither, and performed every thing which he was enjoined to do. Soon after he was conducted by the same Angel to Mount Arafat, where Adam and Eve met again, after a separation of above two hundred years.

From thence they retired into the Isle of Serandib, or Ceïlan, where they employ'd themselves in cultivating the Earth, and multiplying their Family. Eve lay in twenty several times, and at each had two Twins, one whereof was Male the other Female. Adam lived 960 Years, of all which, according to the Mussulmen, he spent but half a day in Paradise; but then they explain this day by one of Paradise or the other World, which is equivalent to a thousand years with us; so that this half day was equivalent to 500 years. During his whole life Men had but one Religion, and were often visited by Angels, who assisted and instructed them. The number of Men at the time of Enoch's translation amounted to forty thousand.

They assert that Adam was buried near Mecca, upon Mount Aboucaïs. Others think that Noah, at the time of the Deluge, put his Body into the Ark, and took care to have it carried to Jerusalem by Melchisedech the Son of Shem his Grandson. The Eastern Christians, and many of the Fathers, have followed this Tradition, and believed that he was buried on Mount Calvary, at the very place where Jesus Christ was crucified. They shew a Chapel still to this day, at Naplouse, or Samaria in Palestine, which goes by Adam's name, and is there respected by the Turks[30]; but the ancient Persians are of opinion, that he was buried at Serandib, and that his Sepulchre was guarded by Lions at the time of the Giants making War against one another.

The Mussulmen believe that Adam was inspired by God, and that a ray of the Divinity passed successively from him to other Prophets. They suppose him to have written ten Volumes, for so we are to understand them, when they say, that God sent them down from Heaven to him.

Some Rabbins, and oriental Authors[31], inform us, that Adam, during the time of his Separation from his Wife, after the Commission of his Sin, as some will have it, or after the Death of Abel, according to others, begat Genii, or familiar Spirits, who, as the Ancients affirm, had Bodies, to whom likewise they apply what is said in Scripture, That the Sons of God beheld the Daughters of Men, and took such of them as they pleased for Wives. Others maintain that these Genii, or Ginns, or Dir, as the Arabians call them, are Creatures older than Adam, that they having rebell'd frequently against God, he resolved to give the government of the World to a new species of Creatures. To this end he created Adam, and commanded the Ginns or Dir to obey him. They who refused submission to him, having Eblis or Lucifer at their head, are what we call the evil Angels; the rest who continued in their duty are the good Angels, or Sons of God; both are corporeal, and even subject unto death.

We shall have another opportunity to speak of Adam in the Articles TERRESTRIAL PARADISE and ADAM's

LANGUAGE, or the first original Language of the World.

Besides the three Sons of Adam whose names are given us by Moses, and are Cain, Abel and Seth, the Eastern People[32] have likewise preserved the names of two others, viz. Abdal-Harth and Rocaïl. The last was, as they say, the Patriarch Seth's younger Brother, and was perfect Master of the most elevated and obscure Sciences. His Understanding was so lively and penetrating, that he seem'd to be more of an Angel than a Man. Surkrage, who was a powerful Dir or Giant at that time living, desired Seth to send his Brother Rocaïl to him, to assist him in the government of his Dominions. Seth accordingly sent him, and Rocaïl became first Minister to this Prince, for whom he built a Palace and a Sepulchre, of so magnificent a Structure, and with so much Art, that there were several Statues belonging to it, of different Metals made by talismanick art, which moved and acted as if they had been animated.

This gives us a specimen of the Eastern People's way of thinking, and the particular Character of their Wit; it shews how much they are lovers of Fictions, of Wonders and Mysteries; for we are not to imagine that all which they relate of Adam, and the other Patriarchs is to be always understood literally; they are frequently no more than Allegories, or moral Reflections included in certain kinds of Parables.

The Cabalists, who are a species of Jewish Doctors, that cover moral, physical and theological Truths under mysterious and dark Expressions; the Cabalists, I say, tell us of the first Adam, Adam Kadmon[33], who is the first and most perfect Emanation that proceeded from the Essence of God, and the first of all that was created in the Beginning. They re present him like a Man, with a skull, brain, eyes, feet and hands, but some profound Mystery is included in every one of these parts: His skull signifies Wisdom, his right ear Understanding, his left Prudence, and so of the rest. Some Christians have thought, that hereby they described Jesus Christ, the second Person of the Trinity: It is true the Cabalists believe that God, not intending to create the World immediately by himself, created it by the first, the celestial Adam, thereby displaying his Power in a more perfect manner: But they acknowledge that this first Adam had a beginning, and was not without Imperfections; he could not therefore be the Son of God whom we adore.

The Talmudists tell abundance of fabulous Stories relating to Adam and his Creation[34]. They say that at the first hour of the day God collected the Dust together, out of which he designed to compose him, and so disposed it as to receive the form which he was to give it; at the second Adam stood upon his feet ; at the fourth he gave the several Animals their names; the seventh was imployed in the marriage of Adam and Eve. The Lord, as it were a Brideman, conducted her to her new Spouse, with her locks curled, and dressed out in all her Ornaments. At ten a-clock Adam sinn'd, immediately after which Judgment was pass'd upon him; and at twelve he began to feel the punishment of his Sin, and the effects of the Sentence which had been pronounc'd against him. According to the Rabbins[35], Adam was created so excessive tall that he touched Heaven; but after the guilt contracted by him, God put his hand upon his head, and reduced him to a less enormous stature. These Extravagancies they would support from the following passage in Deuteronomy iv. 32. God created Man upon the Earth, and from the one side of Heaven unto the other. They found his Diminution upon this other passage in Psal. cxxxix. 5. Thou hast beset me behind and before, and laid thine hand upon me. The matter of his Body was taken out of different Provinces; the head out of Palestine, the trunk out of Babylonia, and the other parts from other Provinces.

The Angels, upon sight of this unmeasurable Creature, murmur'd at it, as if the Lord had proposed to make a second God in person; but he put a stop to their Murmurs by resting his hand upon the head of Adam, and reducing him to a thousand cubits in stature. They who undertake to explain these expressions, tell us, that God created him with a vast extent of Knowledge in all the sciences of Nature, but that after the commission of his Sin, God deprived him of many Prerogatives which before he was possess'd of.

[If. xlii. 8.] They add, that he was of so elevated a Nature, that the matter of his Body was so subtle, fine, and thin, as to be almost like the Angels; that he had as perfect a knowledge of God and his Attributes as a creature is capable of. He was not unacquainted even with the incommunicable name of God, Jehovah; for when Adam had appropriated their several names to all the brute Creation, God asked him What is my name? Adam answer'd Jehovah, he who is. This they say Isaiah points to in these words: I am Jehovah, that is my Name; that is to say, the Name which Adam gave me at the beginning of the World.

As Circumcision is, according to the Jews, the seal of the Covenant between God and Believers, they have imagined that Adam was created circumcised, and, as much as he could, defaced the mark of his Circumcision by violating the covenant of the Lord at his Fall. They ground this Vision [Hof. vi. 7.] upon a passage in Hosea, which runs thus; But they like Adam have transgressed the Covenant; they have dealt treacherously against me.

Some have imagined that Eve was the forbidden Fruit, which he could not touch without Sin; that the Serpent having first eat of it, produced Cain, who consequently was not the Son of Adam; that the latter was so afflicted at the death of Abel, that he continued an hundred and thirty years without coming near his Wife, after which time only he began to have Children after his own image and resemblance. Some are of opinion, as has been before observed by us, that during this interval he begat Genii or Spirits, which others think were born of Adam and his first Wife, whose name was Lilith. See the Article LILITH.

[Gen. iii. 17, 18. Wisd. x. 1.] Notwithstanding the repentance of Adam is so particularly taken notice of in Scripture, and St. Austin[36] mentions his Salvation as the common opinion of almost the whole Church, and that the Son of God at his Resurrection deliver'd him out of Hell, together with the rest of the Just, who expected there his Coming; notwithstanding all this the Church has never thought itself obliged publickly to consecrate his memory, nor place him in the rank of Saints; but neither has it believed itself concern'd to prevent several private Persons from paying a religious wor ship to him. There is a Chapel built to him on Mount Calvary[37], upon presumption that he was buried there: This Chapel is served by Greeks, but it is not perfumed with Incense, nor is any particular Veneration paid to it, like other Chapels or Altars in the publick Processions. The Greeks put Adam and Eve together, with all the righteous of the Old Testament, and honour them on the nineteenth of December[38], or, more properly speaking, on the Sunday which immediately precedes the Festival of Christmas. They moreover celebrate the banishment of our first Parents out of Paradise with a religious mourning, and very doleful Prayers on the fourth of February, or first day of their Lent. Some Latin Martyrologies commemorate Adam upon the twenty fourth of April: There is a Julian Calendar which takes notice of him on the twenty fourth of December, and some Martyrologies make mention of the creation and death of Adam on the twenty fifth of March, as it were with a design of bringing the first old Adam nearer to the new, who was conceiv'd and died upon the same day, according to many of the Ancients.

We shall speak of the PRÆADAMITES in the Article particularly design'd for them.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Joseph. Antiq. l. 1. c. 1. ,ϛορρύΠαδα. Rufus.
,אי֯שIsch. Man. ,שה֯אIssha, Woman.
,חוהChavvah, vivifica or vivens.
Literally, Coats of skin, or Coats to cover their skin, their nakedness, ,כתנות עורTunicas pellis. Chald. vestimenta honoris 70. Χιτῶνας δερματίνους.
Vide Mos. Barcepham de Paradiso, & Perer. in Genes. iii. & alios.
The Devil is called Serpent, or the Old Ser- pent, John viii. 44. 2 Cor. xi. 3. Rev. xii. 9.
Joseph. Antiq. l. 1. c. 2. Basil. Homil. de Paradiso. Ephrem apud Barcepham de Paradiso.
Cyril. l. 3. contra Julian.
Abarben. in Gen. iii.
Aug. de hæres. c. 17.
Tertul. de Præscript. c. 47.
Epiphan. de hæres. 37.
Sanhedrin. fol. 70. Bemidbar Rabbi fol. 170 & 238.
Rabb. Samuel, Abarbanel, Manasseh Ben. Israel. vide Leidegger hist. Patriarch. &c.
Eugubin. in Cosmopœia.
Idem ibidem, Salian. Annal. T. 1. p. 106.
Philo de mundi opificio Joan Lucidus.
Vide lib. Sanhedrin. & Bartoloci, T. 1. p. 65, 66.
Hieronym. in quæst. Hebr.
Origen. tract. xxxv. in Matth. Epiphan. hæres. 46. Ambros. l. 10. in Luc. Hiero- & in Epitaph. Paulæ.
Quæresm. T. 2. l. 5. p. 481. 482, &c.
Hieronym in Matth xxvii. nym. in Matth. xxvii.
Apud Salian. T. 1. Annal. p. 230.
Hottinger. Histor. Oriental. p. 22.
Histoire de la Religion des anciens Persans, c. 2. imprimée à Paris, 1667. in 12mo.
Histoire de la Religion des Banians, traduite de l'Anglois de Henry Lord, à Paris 1667, in 12mo.
Alcoran, Chap. of the Stone. See D'Herbelot. Bibl. Orient. p. 55, &c.
See Les Notes de M. Renaudot sur le voyage de la Chine de deux Arabes, p. 134. Bibl. Orient. p. 806.
D'Herbelot
D'Herbelot Bibl. Orient. p. 56. col. 2.
Idem, p. 243.
Idem ex Thahmurath Nameh.
Abrah. Cohen-Irira Philosoph. Cabbal. Diss. 6. c. 7. See Basnage's Continuation of the History of the Jews.
Midras Tehillim. Ps. xcii. Vide Basnage, ibid. t. 4. p. 186.
Gemar. Sanhedrin. fol. 582.
Aug. Ep. 163. nov. Edit. p. 575. Et de illo quidem primo homine quod eum inde (ex inferno) solverit, Ecclesia fere tota consentit quod eam non inaniter credidisse credendum est, undecunque hoc traditum sit, &c. Vide & de peccatorum meritis & de nat. & grat. contra Julian. l. 6, &c.
Quaresm. t. 2. l. 5. p. 481 & 483.
Bolland. die 4. Febr. p. 449. t. 3. Apr. p. 260. t. 3. Mart. p. 541.

Adama

ADAMA, one of the five wicked Cities which were destroyed by fire from Heaven, and buried under the waters of the Dead [Gen. xix. 24.] Sea. It was the most easterly of all those which were swallowed up; and there is some probability that it was not intirely sunk under the waters, or that the Inhabitants of the Country rebuilt a new City of the same name upon the eastern shore of the Dead Sea; for Isaiah, according to the Septuagint, [If. xv. ult. Ἀρῶ τὸ σπέρμα Μωὰβ καὶ Ἀριὴλ, καὶ τὸ καταλοιπον Ἀδαμα.] says, that God will destroy the Moabites, the City of Ar, and the remnant of Adama.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Adamah

ADAMAH, a City of the Tribe of Naphtali, Josh. xix. 36. The Septuagint call it Armath, and the Vulgate Edema.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Adami

ADAMI, a City situated in the Tribe of Naphtali, Josh. xix. 33.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Adamites

ADAMITES,[1] a sort of Hereticks of the second Age: The Author of this Sect was one Prodicus, a Disciple of Carpocrates; they assumed the title of Adamites, pretending to the innocence of Adam, whose nakedness they imitated in their Churches, which they called Paradise. Community of Women was one of their principal tenets; they lived, or made a shew of living, in Solitude and Continency, condemning the state of Matrimony; and when any of them were guilty of any particular crimes, such an one they called Adam, and that he had eaten of the forbidden Fruit; and when they expelled him from their Assembly, they drove him, as their phrase was, out of Paradise. This Heresy was renewed in these last Ages by one Picard[2], a native of Flanders, who retired into Bohemia, where he introduced this Sect. There were some in Poland and England who were followers of it, and the modern Adamites are said to hold their Assemblies in the night-time, and to observe these rules exactly, Swear, forswear, and reveal not the secret. Some Anabaptists are accused with falling into the extravagances of the Adamites.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Vide Epiphan. hæref. 52. Theodoret. hæretic. Fab. l. 1. c. 6. Augustin. de hæref. See M. Bayle's Dictionary under the Name of Adamites.
He lived in the fifteenth Century.

Adar

ADAR, the twelfth month of the ecclesiastical year among the Hebrews, and the sixth of their civil year. There are but nine and twenty days in it, and it answers our February; it sometimes enters into the month of March, according to the course of the Moon. See hereafter the Article MONTHS.

On the third day of Adar the building of the Temple was finished, at the sollicitations of Haggai and Zechariah, and the Dedication of it made in a solemn manner.

On the seventh day the Jews celebrate a Fast upon the occasion of the death of [Ezra vi. 15. In the Year of the World 3489, before J.C. 511, before the vulgar Æra 515.] Moses.

On the thirteenth day they celebrate the Fast which they call Esther's, in memory of that observ'd by Mordecai, Esther, and the Jews of Susa, to divert the calamities with which they were threaten'd by Haman.

On the fourteenth they celebrate the Festival of Purim, on the score of their Deliverance from the cruelty of Haman, Esth. ix. 17.

The twenty fifth day is kept in commemoration of Jehoiachim, King of Judah, advanced by Evil-merodach above other Kings, who were at his Court, Jerem. lii. 31, 32.

As the Lunar year, which the Jews have been used to follow in their calculation, is shorter than the Solar year by eleven days, which at the end of three years make a month, they then insert a thirteenth month, which they call Veadar, or a second Adar, which has nine and twenty days in it.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Adar

ADAR, a City in the Tribe of Judah, Josh. xv. 3. Eusebius places another Town of this name in the neighbourhood of Lidda or Diospolis, in the canton of Thamna.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Adar

ADAR, or Hazer-addar, a Village taken notice of in the book of Numbers, xxxiv. 4.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Adarconim

ADARCONIM[1], a sort of Money, whereof there is mention made in 1 Chr. xxix. 7. and Ezra viii. 27. The Vulgate translates it golden Pence, the Septuagint pieces pieces of Gold. We do not question but that these Adarconim[2] were Daricks, a sort of gold coin, which some ¹ value at twenty drachms of Silver, and others[3] at eleven livres, eleven pence, nine deniers, and a quarter of French Money. See hereafter DARCMONIM, which is the same with Adarconim. Herodotus[4] says, that Daricks were first coin'd in the Reign of Darius, the Son of Hystaspes, who lived long after the Author of the Chronicles and Ezra; but the Scholiast of Aristophanes affirms, that they were first made current by another Darius, who lived long before Darius, the Son of Hystaspes[5].

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

אדרכוניםAdarconim.

Translators' note. The Adarconim of the Scripture, and Darkonoth of the Talmudists, so called from the Greek Δαρεικοὶ, Darics. A Daric was a piece of Gold of the value of one of our Jacobus's. See Prid. Con.

M. le Pelletier of Roan.

Herodot. l. 4. c. 166. º Joseph. Antiq. l. xii. c. 17.

Translators' note. It was Darius the Mede, who coined a great number of pieces of pure Gold called Darics, or Stateres Darici: This Darius was the first King of the Medes and Persians, who coined Gold Money. They were stamped on one side with the effigies of an Archer, who was crowned with a spiked Crown, had a Bow in his left hand, and an Arrow in his right, and was clothed with a long Robe. I have seen one of them in Gold, and another in Silver. They were of the same weight and value with the Attic Stater, or piece of Gold Money weighing two Attic Drachms. Darius seems to have learnt the art and use of Money from the conquered Kingdom of the Lydians, and to have re-coined their Gold; for the Medes, before they conquered the Lydians, had no Money. The Lydians were the first who coined Gold and Silver; and Crœsus coined Gold Monies in plenty, called Crœsei; and it was not reasonable that the Monies of the Kings of Lydia should continue current after the Overthrow of their Kingdom, and therefore Darius re- coined it with his own effigies, but without altering the current weight and value. See The Chronology of the ancient Kingdoms amended, by Sir Isaac Newton, p. 319, &c.

Adarsa

ADARSA, or as it is called in Greek, 1 Macc. vii. 40. Adasu, a City of the Tribe of Ephraim, four miles from Bethoron º, and not far from Gophna[1]. We place it between the upper Bethoron and Diospolis; because [1 Macc. vii. 45.] it is said in the Maccabees that the victorious Army of Judas pursued the Syrians from Adasa to Gadara, or Gazara, which is the length of one day's journey. The same City of Adarsa is called likewise Adazer, and Adaco, or Acedosa, in Josephus[2]. Here it was that Nicanor was overcome, and his Army put to flight by Judas Maccabæus, notwithstanding that his Army consisted of three thousand Men only, and Nicanor's of thirty five thousand. Josephus tells us, that Judas, in another War, was killed in the same place[3].

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Eufeb. in Adasa.

Joseph. Antiq. l. xii. c. 17. & de bello, l. 1. c. 1.

Joseph. de Bello, l. 1. c. 1. p. 710. b.

Adbeel

ADBEEL, the third Son of Ishmaë[1], and Head of one of the Tribes of the Ishmaelites, Gen. xxv. 13.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Gronov. de pecunia veterum, l. 3. c. 7.

Addan

ADDAN, Cherub and Immer not being able to prove whence they derived their original, at their return from Babylon, were excluded from the number of the true Israelites, Ezra xi. 59.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Addar

ADDAR, the Son of Bela, the Son of Benjamin, 1 Chron. viii. 3.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Adder

ADDER. See ASP.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Addi

ADDI, the Son of Cosam, and the Father of Melchi. He is placed by S. Luke among the Ancestors of Jesus Christ, according to the Flesh, Luke iii. 28.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Adeodatus

ADEODATUS, filius saltus, polymitarius de Bethleem; that is to say, Given of God, the Son of the Wood, a Weaver of Bethlehem; or to speak more correctly [2 Sam. xxi. 19.] according to the Hebrew, Elhanan the Son of the Jarim, who were Weavers of Bethlehem; or according to the Text of the Chronicles, which seems to be more pure, Elhanan the Son of Jaïr, a Beth-lemite, slew the Brother of Goliath. This, in all probability, [1 Chron. xx. 5.] is the very Elhanan spoken of in 2 Sam. xxiii. 24. who was the Son of Joab's Uncle by the Mother's side; that is to say, Son to one of David's Brothers, who was a Native of Bethlehem, and very much distinguished by his valour. The passage of Samuel being thus restored, the Difficulty is easily resolved, which some have started concerning Adeodatus filius saltus, which several Interpreters[1] have endeavoured to confound with David. Elhanan did not kill Goliath, but the Brother of Goliath, whether by the word Brother we understand his Brother in blood, or barely one like him.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Chald. Rabb. Rupert. Raban. alii recentiores.

Ader

ADER, the Tower of Ader. St. Jerom observes[1], that the place where the Angels declared the Birth of Jesus Christ to the Shepherds, was called by this name, Luke xi. 8, 9. It is said that the Empress Helena built a Church upon the same spot, the remains whereof are seen at this day. See Mich. iv. 8. Turris gregis.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Hieronym. Ep. 27.

Ader

ADER, one of those who took the City of Gath, 1 Chron. viii. 15.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Adiabene

ADIABENE, a Country in Assyria, thro' which the River Lycus passes, and discharges itself into the Tigris. The name of Adiabene is not to be met with in our Vulgate; but Josephus[1] speaks much of Helena Queen of the Adiabenians, and of Izates her Son, who were both Converts to Judaism in the time of the Emperor Claudius, about the year of J. C. 41. There are some Authors[2], who believe that this Queen and her Son embraced Christianity, and that Josephus had a mind to do honour to his Nation by a Conversion which belonged properly to the Christian Church. But I see the marks of Judaism only, both in Helena and Izates, and am of opinion, that Adiabene is the Province of Ava, thro' which the River Ahava, or Adiava runs. See hereafter AHABA.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Joseph. Antiq. l. 20. c. 2.
Orosius, l. 7. c. 6.

Adida

ADIDA, a City of Judah, at which place Simon Maccabæus encamped, in order to dispute the entrance into the Coun try with Tryphon, who had treacherously [1 Macc. xiii. 13.] seized on his Brother Jonathan at Ptolemais. We think this to be the Adida mentioned in 1 Macc. xii. 38.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Adiel

ADIEL, the Son of Adiel, of the Tribe of Judah, 1 Chron. iv. 36.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Aditha

ADITHA, or Adatha, Adia, or Adathaim, a City belonging to the Tribe of Judah, Josh. xv. 36. Eusebius mentions two Cities of this name Adatha, one lying towards Gaza, the other towards Lidda, Eastward of this City.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Adlai

ADLAI, principal Herdsman to King David, 1 Chron. xxvii. 29.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Admatha

[Ps. iv. 3.] ADMATHA, one of the seven principal Officers belonging to the Court of Ahasuerus. [Esth. i. 14. xvii. 7.]

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Admire

ADMIRE, Admiration, Admirable. Besides the common signification of these words, which all the world is acquainted with, the Hebrews often make use of them to signify the conduct of God, as well towards his Children as Sinners, in trying or rewarding the one, and chastising the other, in this or in the other world. The Lord hath shewed his wonders to his Holy One, Mirificavit Dominus sanctum suum. Shew thy marvelous Loving-kindness, Mirifica misericordias tuas, &c. I will make the [Exod. viii. 22. ix. 4.] Land of Goshen to be admired, Faciam mirabilem terram Gessen. That is to say, I will distinguish it in a wonderful manner from the rest of Egypt. The most learned Interpreters agree, that the Hebrew Pale, [פלא Pale.] or Pele, which is generally translated admirable, signifies properly to distinguish, separate[1]. See likewise Exod. ix. 4. Faciet Dominus mirabile inter possessiones Israel, & possessiones Ægyptiorum. In this sense every thing remote from the common course of Life or of Nature, every thing which is any way distinguishable, is admirable.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Translators' note. And this Interpretation is followed by our English Translators, who in the several places cited by our Author, read set apart, sever. Buxtorf, under פלא*observes*, Sunt & quædam ex hujus verbi formâ, pro segregare, quæ pertinent ad פלהNiph. Segregari, separari. Buxt. Lex.

Admirable

ADMIRABLE, is often placed for difficult, or even for impossible. Sarah laughing when the Angel promised to make her [Gen. xviii. 14.] the Mother of a Son, he answered, Will this be admirable to God?

It is likewise taken for what is above our capacity or condition. Such knowledge is too wonderful for me, I cannot attain unto [Ps. cxxxix. 6. cxxxi. 1.] it, Mirabilis facta est scientia tua ex me, or pro me. And in another place, I do not exercise my self in great matters, or in things too high for me, Non ambulavi in magnis neque in mirabilibus super me. There is nothing admirable before God, says the Son of Sirach; nothing is hid from his eyes. [Ecclus. xxxix. 20.] And the Man born blind, upon his being healed by Jesus [Mat. viii. 10. Luke vii. 9. Mat. xv. 28. Judg. xiii. 18. 2 Sam. i. 26. Ps. cxviii. 23.] Christ, It is admirable that ye should not know whence he is; and yet he hath opened mine Eyes. It is said somewhere, that our Saviour admired, for example, when he admired the Centurion's and the Woman of Canaan's faith. That is to say, he expressed himself as if he admired it; for admiration being the effect of ignorance, it is impossible that he should admire any thing. Why askest thou thus after my name, seeing it is admirable? It is above thy comprehension, and of no service to you to know it. My love to thee, O Jonathan, is more admirable[1]; greater, more ardent, than that of a Lover for the person whom he is most passionately fond of. The Stone which the builders refused, is become the head Stone of the Corner; this seems admirable to us. It is an effect of God's power.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Translators' note. The Author, in this passage, varies from the Text, where David describes the affection of his Friend to himself, not his to Jonathan. I confess, Errors of this nature are very inconsiderable, and not worth remarking; but few of more importance have escaped this diligent and exact Writer.

Adna

ADNA, a Levite, who, when the Jews returned from the Captivity of Babylon, forsook his Wife, whom he had married [Ezra x. 30.] contrary to the Law.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Adnah (I)

I. ADNAH, a valiant Man of the Tribe of Manasseh, and one of those who left his [1 Chron. xii. 20. 2 Chron. xvii. 15. Josh. iii. 16.] party, to espouse that of David.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Adnah (II)

II. ADNAH, General of the Troops belonging to Jehoshaphat King of Judah.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Adom

ADOM, or Adam, a Town upon the Banks of the River Jordan. Some[1] place it upon the Dead Sea, below the place where the Israelites passed the Jordan. Others place it much above, towards Scythopolis and Zarthan; and this is its true situation.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Celler. Geogr. antiq. l. 3. c. 13.

Adonai

ADONAI, is one of the names of God[1]. This word signifies properly My Lords, in the plural number, as Adoni signifies My Lord, in the singular number. The Jews, who either out of respect or superstition do not pronounce the name of Jehovah, read Adonai in the room of it, as often as they meet with Jehovah in the Hebrew Text. But the ancient Jews were not so nice: There is no Law which forbids them to pronounce the name of God.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

אדניAdonai, Dom. Gr. Κύριος, יהוהJehovah.

Adonibezek

[Judg. i. 4. vi. 7.] ADONIBEZEK, King of the City of Bezek, in the land of Canaan, seventeen miles from Naplouse eastward[1]. Adonibezek was a powerful and cruel Prince, who took seventy Kings, and having order'd the extremities of their hands and feet to be cut off, made them eat the remains of what was served up to him under his table. After the death of Joshua, the Hebrews finding themselves to be press'd within too narrow a compass by the Canaanites, who endeavour'd to keep their footing footing in the Country, consulted the Lord, that they might know who should lead them to the war against their Enemies. The Lord directed that they should put themselves under the conduct of the Tribe of Judah. This Tribe engaged that of Simeon to unite with it, in order to reduce the Canaanites, who possess'd several places within their allotment, with a promise mutually to assist those of the Tribe of Simeon in making a conquest of what the Canaanites still possess'd within their Division. The two Tribes marched therefore against Adonibezek, who was at the head of an Army of Canaanites and Perizzites. They beat him, killed ten thousand of his Men, and having taken him alive, they cut off his toes and fingers: Then Adonibezek acknowledged the justice of this Punishment, and owned that God treated him in the manner wherein he had treated the seventy Princes who had fallen into his Power. The Hebrews afterwards carried him to Jerusalem, which they were going to besiege, and there he died, in the year of the World 2585, before Jesus Christ 1415, before the vulgar Æra 1419.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Euseb. in loc. in Βεζεκ.

Adonijah

ADONIJAH, the fourth Son of David [2 Sam. iii. 4.] and Haggith, was born at Hebron, at the time when his Father was acknowledged King by one part only of Israel, while the most considerable paid obedience still to Ishbosheth, the Son of Saul. Adonijah seeing his eldest Brothers Amnon and Absalom were dead, believed that the Crown of Judah, by right of birth, unquestionably belong'd to him; and as his Father David, towards the latter end of his Life, was fallen into so weak a condition that he could take no care of the affairs of Government, he thought he should endeavour before his death to have himself acknowledged King: he therefore set up a magnificent Equipage, commanded chariots to be made, took [1 Kings i. 5, 6, &c.] Horsemen into his service, and fifty Men to run before him, and these at all times attended him. David his Father was not displeased with his doing this, and never reproved him for it. Adonijah was then the eldest of the Royal Family, extremely handsome in his person, was beloved by the King his Father, and had a strong party in the Court.

He had a very close engagement, particularly with Joab, the General of David's Armies, and with the High-priest Abiathar; and these were the two persons who had more interest in the King than any others of his Dominions; but neither the High-priest Zadok, (for at that time there were two High-priests in the Kingdom) nor Benaiah, the Son of Jehoiada, Captain of the King's guards, nor Nathan the Prophet, nor the body of David's Army, were of his party. One day therefore, Adonijah having made a great entertainment for his Adherents near the fountain of Rogel, eastward of the City, and below the walls of Jerusalem, he invited all the King's Sons to it except Solomon, and the principal Persons of Judah, except Nathan, Zadok, and Benaiah. His design was to procure himself at that meeting to be proclaimed King of the Country, and to get possession of the Government before the death of David. But matters fell out quite otherwise.

Nathan having understood what was transacting, went directly to Bathsheba, the Mother of Solomon, and said to her, Do you know that Adonijah designs to get himself proclaim'd King? and do you observe the danger which you and your Son Solomon will be expos'd to if he succeeds in this attempt? Be advis'd therefore by me; go to the King, tell him what is doing, and put him in mind of the promise which he made you, that Solomon your Son should be his Successor, and while you are thus conversing with the King, I will come in as by surprise and second what you shall have said. Bathsheba therefore went immediately to the King, and while she was talking with him, the King was told that the Prophet Nathan was there. David gave orders for his admission, and Nathan address'd himself to him in these terms: My Lord O King! is it by your orders that Adonijah has directed himself to be declared King, and Successor to your Majesty? for he has this day made a great entertainment for the chief officers of the Army, and the great men of the Court; and after it was over they all saluted him with the cries of Long live King Adonijah: But neither the High-priest Zadok, nor Benaiah, nor Solomon, or myself, were invited by him.

Then David, commanding Bathsheba to be again called in, swore to her that he would perform the Promise he had made in favour of Solomon; and sending immediately for Zadok, Nathan, and Benaiah, he said to them, Take my guards with you, mount Solomon upon my mule, conduct him to the fountain of Gihon, which is westward of the City, and at this place let Zadok and Nathan crown him, and with trumpets sounding proclaim him King of Israel, with cries of Long live King Solomon. After this you shall bring him back hither, and seat him on my Throne; he shall reign in my place, and I will put the Government of Judah and Israel into his hands. This was all immediately executed, and all the People being got in crowds together, the sound of Instruments was every where heard, and the acclamations of the People, saying, God save King Solomon. Jonathan, the Son of Abiathar the High-priest, gave notice instantly of this to Adonijah, Joab, and all those of his his party who were still in the tent where they had been eating.

Upon this they rose from table in great fright, and retired every one to his own home: Adonijah went out with the rest, and fearing lest Solomon should put him to death, retired to the Tabernacle, and laid hold of the horn of the Altar of Burnt-offerings, which being reported to Solomon, he said, If Adonijah would shew himself a worthy man, not a hair of his head should fall to the Earth; but if Wickedness should be found in him, he should surely die. King Solomon therefore sent, and they brought him down from the Altar, and he came and bowed himself to King Solomon; and Solomon said unto him, Go to thine House. This happened in the year of the World 2989, before Jesus Christ 1011, before the vulgar Æra 1015.

[In the Year of the World 2990, before J. C 1010, before the vulgar Æra 1014. 1 Kings ii. 13.] Some time after David dying, Adonijah waited upon Bathsheba, the mother of Solomon, who said to him, Comest thou peaceably? He answer'd peaceably, and that he had a favour to ask of her. Thou knowest, added he, that the Kingdom was mine, and that all Israel set their faces on me that I should reign, howbeit the Kingdom is turned about, and is become my Brother's, for it was his from the Lord. And now I ask one petition of thee: Speak, I pray thee, unto Solomon the King (for he will not say thee nay) that he give me Abishag the Shunamite to Wife. Bathsheba promised him to speak unto the King about it, and in effect did so, telling him that Adonijah would be glad to have Abishag for his Wife, who had been given to David to warm him in his old Age. To this Solomon replied, Why dost thou ask this of me? ask for him the Kingdom also, (for he is mine elder Brother) even for him, for he has the High-priest Abiathar already for him, and Joab the General of the Troops. Then Solomon swore by the Lord, saying, God do so to me and more also, if Adonijah has not spoken this word against his own life. I swear by the Lord Adonijah shall be put to death this day. And Benaiah, the Son of Jehoiada, being sent to execute this order, fell upon Adonijah and slew him, in the year of the World 2990, before Jesus Christ 1010, before the vulgar Æra 1014.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Adonikam

ADONIKAM, returned from Babylon with [Ezra ii. 13.] six hundred Men of his Family.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Adoniram

ADONIRAM, the principal Receiver of Solomon's tributes, and chief Director of the thirty thousand men whom this Prince sent to Lebanon, to cut timber for his buildings. I cannot [1 Kings v. 14.] tell whether he may not be the same Person with Adoram, who had the same Employment in the beginning of Rehoboam's Reign. 1 Kings xii. 18. & 2 See ADORAM. Chr. x. 18. xi. 9.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Adonis

[Ezek. viii. 14. Ps. cvi. 28. Levit. xix. 27, 28. Ezek. viii. 3, 5.] ADONIS. The text of the Vulgate in Ezekiel viii. 14. imports, that this Prophet saw Women sitting in the Temple, and weeping for Adonis; but according to the reading of the Hebrew text, they are said to weep for Tammuz, or the hidden one. Among the Egyptians Adonis was adored under the name of Osiris, the husband of Isis[1]: But he was sometimes called too by the name of Ammuz[2], or Tammuz, the concealed, to denote probably his death or burial. The Hebrews in derision call him sometimes the Dead, because they wept for him, and represented him as one dead in his coffin; and at other times they call him the Image of Jealousy, because he was the object of the God Mars's Jealousy. The Syrians, Phœnicians, and People of the isle of Cyprus, called him Adonis; and we are of opinion that the Ammonites and Moabites gave him the name of Baal-peor[3].

The manner wherein they celebrated the festivals of this false Deity was this: They represented him as lying dead in a coffin, they wept for him, bemoaned themselves, and sought for him with great eagerness and inquietude. After this they feigned that they had found him again, and he was living: At this good news they shewed marks of the most extraordinary joy, and were guilty of a thousand lewd practices to convince Venus how gladly they congratulated her upon the return and recovery of her Husband, as before they had condoled with her upon the loss of him, and his death. The Hebrew Women therefore, of whom Ezekiel is speaking, celebrated the Feasts of Tammuz or Adonis in Jerusalem, and God shewed the Prophet these Women weeping, even in his Temple, for this infamous God.

The Rabbins tell us, that Tammuz[4] was an idolatrous Prophet, who having been put to death by the King of Babylon, all the Idols of the Country flocked together about a statue of the Sun, which this Prophet, who was a magician, had suspended between Heaven and Earth: There they began all together to deplore the Prophet's death; for which reason a Festival was instituted every year, to renew the memory of this Ceremony, at the beginning of the month Tammuz, which answers pretty nearly to our June. In this Temple a statue was [† Ausonius.] erected, re presenting Tammuz to the life. The Statue was hollow, the Eyes were of lead. Below a gentle fire was kindled, which insensibly heated the Statue, melted the lead, and made room for the People to believe that the Idol wept. During all this time the Babylonish Women who were in the Temple fell a shrieking, and made strange lamentations. This is the Story they tell us. But I should be glad to see good Proofs of it.

As to Adonis; the account we have of him from fabulous History is this. Adonis was the Son of Cyniras, King of Cyprus, and Myrrha the Daughter of this Prince. So that he was at once both the Brother and the Son of Myrrha. He was so very beautiful that Venus run away with him, and lived with him in the midst of a wood, where Adonis exercised himself in hunting. A wild Boar having unhappily killed him, Venus lamented for him in an inconsolable manner. The Eastern People, in imitation of her mourning, generally established some solemn days for the bewailing of Adonis. The Poets relate, that Venus obtained the favour of Proserpine to have her Minion restored to life, and that he should pass six months on Earth, and six in Hell. Hereupon those publick Rejoicings were founded, which succeeded the Lamentations of his death. Some say he was of Syria, others again of Cyprus, others again of Egypt. See those Authors, who treat of Fables; and in particular, M. Le Clerc's Biblioth. Universelle. T. 3. Septemb, 1686. An historical Explanation of the Fable of Adonis.

What the fabulous Relations tell us concerning the Birth of Adonis, is much the same with what we learn from the sacred History concerning Lot's Incest with his Daughters. Myrrha the Daughter of Cyniras King of Cyprus, conceived an infamous Passion for her Father; she was got with child by him, without his knowing it, and was delivered of Adonis. Chemosh was the Deity of the Moabites. Moab sprung like Adonis, from an incestuous Conversation. There is some affinity between the words Chemosh, and Ammuz or Tammuz, whom we take to be the same with Adonis. Adonis, as Macrobius informs us, was the Sun; Chemosh likewise represented this Luminary, and under this Idea was adored by the Moabites.

The Scene of Adonis's History is said to have been at Biblos in Phœnicia[5], and this pretended Deity is supposed to have been killed by a wild Boar in the Mountains of Libanus, from which the River Adonis descends. This River once a year changed the colour of its Waters, and appeared as red as Blood. This was the signal for celebrating their Adonia, or Feasts of Adonis. It was not lawful to omit the observance of them; great Lamentations were made at this time thro' Town and Country, they cried dreadfully, whipt themselves, and imitated all the Ceremonies of the most serious Mourning for a dead Person. After the Mourning was ended, they performed the funeral Solemnities for him as one just deceased. The next day it was given out that he was alive, and had ascended into the Air.

The common People were persuaded to believe, that the Egyptians, at the feasts of Adonis, sent a Box by Sea made of rushes or Egyptian paper, and fashioned in the form of a Headf, in which a letter was inclosed, informing the Inhabitants of Biblos, a City above seven days journey distant from the Coasts of Egypt, that their God Adonis, whom they apprehended to be lost, had been discovered. The vessel which carried this Letter arrived always safe at Biblos at the end of seven days. Lucian tells us[6] he was a witness of this Event. Procopius, S. Cyril of Alexandria[7], and some other learned Men, are of opinion that Isaiah alludes [If. xviii. 2. .השלח בים צירים] to this superstitious Custom, when he says, Wo to the Land shadowing with wings, which is beyond the River of [70. 'Αποστέλλων ἐν θαλάσσῃ ὅμηρα. Mittens in mari obsides.] Ethiopia: that sendeth Ambassadors by the Sea, even vessels of bul-rushes upon the Waters. Some translate, That sendeth Images or Idols by the Sea[8]. But the Hebrew signifies properly Ambassadors deputed thither by Sea, to carry the news of Adonis's Resurrection. In our Comment on Isaiah, we have given another sense to this Passage, which has no relation to Adonis.

The Heathens who were reproached with the impertinency of these Feasts of Adonis, and the childish and shameful subject which had given occasion for them, explained things by saying that Adonis, by his Death and Resurrection, represented the Sun, which every year is more remote from us during the Winter, and advances nearer to us in the spring; or Seeds sown in the Earth, which die there before they shoot up and appear above ground. But these Explanations come too late. It is a large concession, to allow that the Women of Israel, who worshiped Adonis, intended no more than paying their Adorations to the Sun: These, it is very credible, were limited to Adonis the Husband of Venus, or, if you please, to Osiris the Husband of Isis: For it is very probable, that in Ezekiel's time none had as yet any knowledge in Judea of the Deities or Theology of the Greeks.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Translators' note. The Greeks worshipp'd Isis and Osiris under other Names; as for example, under that of Bacchus, and the Arabians under that of Adonis. Ogygia † me Bacchum canit; Osyrin Ægyptus vocat; Arabica gens, Adoneum.

Vide Plutarch de defectu oracul.

See our Dissertation on Baal-peor, before the book of Numbers.

Kimchi, Maimon, alii Hebr. Vide & Sant. Pagnin. in Thesauro.

Idem Ibidem Βυβλίνην κεφαλήν.

Lucian de Dea Syra. Vide & Bochart. Phaleg. l. 4 c. 2.

Procop. & Cyril. Alex. in Isai. xviii.

Bochart. loc. cit.

Adonizedek

ADONIZEDEK, King of Zedek, or Jerusalem; for this City is believed to have had four names; viz. Salem, Jerusalem, Jebus, and Zedeck. A proof of this last name we have in Melchisedeck; that is to say, the King of Sedech, or Salem. Adonizedeck therefore having understood that the Inhabitants of Gibeon had made their composition with the Hebrews, and that the Cities of Jericho and Ai had been destroyed by them, was struck with terror, and considered how he might put a stop to the Conquests of the [Josh. x. 1, 2, &c. In the Year of the World 2553. before J. C. 1447. before the vulg. Æra 1451.] Israelites. He sent to Hoham King of Hebron, to Piram King of Jarmuth, to Japhia King of Lachish, and unto Debir King of Eglon, inviting them to join with him, in order to go and take Gibeon, and chastise the Inhabitants who had submitted to the Israelites. These five Kings therefore marched against Gibeon, and besieged it.

The Gibeonites, upon this, sent in haste to demand Succours of Joshua, who was still at Gilgal. Joshua, without delay, chose some of the most gallant Men of his Army, and marching all night, fell in with the Enemy at break of day. The Lord spread terror among their Troops, and Joshua made a great slaughter of them. He pursued them towards Bethoron, cutting them in pieces till they reached Azekah and Makkedah. In this battle the Lord showered down Hail-stones upon them, and stopped the Sun and Moon at Joshuah's prayer.

The five Kings having saved themselves by flight, went and hid themselves in a Cave, near the Town of Makkedah; which being reported to Joshua, he gave orders for stopping the mouth of the Cave with large stones, and left Men sufficient to guard it. In the mean time, the Israelites continued the pursuit till Evening; and when they returned unto the Camp near Makkedah, Joshua gave orders to have the mouth of the Cave opened; and producing the five Kings before the whole Army of Israel, he said to the principal Officers, Come near, put your feet upon the necks of these Kings; fear not, nor be dismayed; for thus shall the Lord do to all your Enemies, against whom ye fight. And afterwards Joshua smote the five Kings, and slew them, and hanged them on five Trees, and they were hanging upon the Trees untill the Evening; and when the Sun was going down, Joshua commanded that they should take them down off the Trees, and cast them into the Cave wherein they had been hid, and laid great stones in the Cave's mouth; all which was executed.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Adoption

ADOPTION, is an action whereby a Man takes a Stranger into his family, in order to make him part of it, acknowledge him for his Son, and design him for the heir of his Estate. I do not find that [Gen. xlviii. 1.] Adoption, properly speaking, was in use among the Hebrews. Moses says nothing of it in his Laws, and Jacob's Adoption of his two Grandsons Ephraim and Manasseh, is not properly such, but a kind of Substitution, whereby he intended that the two Sons of Joseph should have each their lot in Israel, as if they were his own Sons. Thy two Sons, says he, Ephraim and Manasseh, are mine, as Reuben and Simeon they shall be mine. But as he gives no inheritance to their Father Joseph, all the favour he does him is, that instead of one part which he would have had to divide between Ephraim and Manasseh, he gives him two: The effect of this Adoption related only to the increase of fortune and inheritance between the Sons of Joseph.

[Deut. xxv. 5. Ruth iv. Mat. xxii. 24. Gen. xxviii. 8.] Another kind of Adoption in use among the Israelites consisted in the obligation one Brother was under to marry the Widow of another who died without Children; so that the Children born of this marriage were look'd upon as belonging to the deceas'd Brother, and went by his name, a practice which was customary before the Law, as we see in the History of Tamar; but neither was this the manner of adopting so well known among the Greeks and Romans.

[Exod. ii. 10. Esther ii. 7, 15.] Pharaoh's Daughter adopted young Moses, and Mordecai Esther. We are not acquainted with the Ceremonies observed on these occasions, nor how far the Privileges of Adoption extended, but it is to be presumed that they were the same with those we meet with in the Roman Laws; that adopted Children shared in the estate with the natural Children; that they assumed the name of the Person who adopted them, and became subject to his paternal Power who received them into his Family.

By the passion of our Saviour, and the communication of the Merits of his death, which are applied to us by Baptism, we become the adopted Children of God, and have a part in the inheritance of Heaven. This is what St. Paul teaches us in several [Rom. viii. 15.] places; Ye have not received the Spirit of bondage again to fear, but ye have received the Spirit of Adoption, whereby we cry [Ver. 23.] Abba Father. And, We wait for the Adoption of the Children of God. And again, God [Gal. iv. 4, 5.] sent forth his Son to redeem them that were under the Law, that we might receive the Adoption of Sons.

Among the Mahometans 1 the ceremony of Adoption is performed by obliging him who is adopted to pass through the shirt of the Person who is adopting him. For this reason, to adopt among the Turks is expressed by saying to draw any one through one's shirt, and an adopted Son is called by 1 D'Herbelot Bibl. Orient. p. 47. by them Akietogli, the Son of another life, because he was not begotten in this. Something like this is observable among the Hebrews: Elijah adopts the Prophet Elisha, [1 Kings xix. 19.] and communicates the gift of Prophecy to him by putting his mantle upon him, Elias misit pallium suum super illum; and when Elijah was carried away in a fiery Chariot, [2 Kings ii. 15.] he let fall his mantle, which was taken up by Elisha his disciple, his spiritual Son, and Successor in the office of a Prophet.

Moses dress'd Eleazar in Aaron's sacred [Num. xx. 26.] vestments, when this High-priest was upon the point of being gather'd to his Fathers, to shew thereby that Eleazar succeeded him in the functions of the Priesthood, and in some sort adopted him for the exercise of this Dignity. The Lord told Shebna, the Captain of the Temple, that he would deprive him of this honourable station, and substitute Eliakim, the Son of Hilkiah, in [Is. xxii. 21.] his room. I will cloath him with thy robe, saith the Lord, and strengthen him with thy girdle, and I will commit thy Government into his hand. St. Paul in several places [Rom. xiii. 14. Gal. iii. 27. Ephes. iv. 24. Col. iii. 10.] says, that Christians put on the Lord Jesus, that they put on the new Man, to denote the Adoption of the Sons of God, wherewith they are invested by

Baptism.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ador

ADOR, is probably the same as Adora. See 2 Macc. xiii. 20.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Adora

ADORA[1], or Adoraim, sometimes called [1 Macc. xiii. 20.] Ador or Dora, was a City belonging to the Tribe of Judah, and could not be far from Maresa, or Narisa, near Eleutheropolis, in the Southern part of Judah, and upon the confines of Idumæa.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Adoram (1)

ADORAM, the Son of Tou King of Hamath, who came commission'd by his Father to congratulate David upon the victory which he had obtain'd over Hadadezer, King of Syria, 1 Chr. xviiii. 10. In the second book of Samuel, Ch. viii. 10. Adoram is called Joram.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Adoram (2)

ADORAM, chief Treasurer to Rehoboam. This Prince having provoked the ten Tribes by his too haughty and imprudent answers, and given them occasion to make a Schism, and separate from the house [1 Kings xii. 14, 15, 18.] of David, thought he should be able to appease them by sending to them Adoram, who was chief Receiver of the Tribute-money, or principal Surveyor of the works. Whether he intended to reduce the People by gentle or by harsh means, or whether he designed to make some concessions to the People who were so violently inraged, by putting Adoram into their hands, who had been the instrument of those vexations which they had suffer'd under the preceding Reign, (for many believe Adoram to be the same with Adoniram, who had executed the same office under Solomon;) however this may be, the People, who had been extremely irritated, fell upon Adoram, stoned him, and put him to death; whereupon Rekoboam got as soon as he could into his chariot, and returned to Jerusalem. This happened in the year of the World 3029, before Jesus Christ 971, before the vulgar Æra 975.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Adoram (3)

ADORAM, principal Receiver of [2 Sam. xx. 24.] the tributes under the Reign of David, may be the Father of Adoram who had the same employment under Solomon and Reboam. See above ADORAM and ADONIRAM.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Adoraim

[2 Chr. xi. 9.] ADORAIM, a Town fortified by Reboam, perhaps the same as Adar or Hazer-addar, a City belonging to Judah. See above what has been said of this place under the name of ADORA, and Reland's Palæstin. T. 2. p. 547.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Adore

[1 Kings iv. 5. v. 14.] ADORE. This word, taken in the literal and etymological meaning of it, borrowed from the Latin, signifies properly to carry to one's mouth, to kiss one's hand, or to kiss something, but with a sense of Veneration [Job xxxi. 26, 27.] and Worship. If I beheld the Sun when it shined, or the Moon walking in brightness, and my mouth hath kissed my hand, this also were Iniquity, that is to say, if I have adored them by kissing my hand at the sight of them. And in the book of [1 Kings xix. 18.] Kings, Yet I have left me seven thousand in Israel, all the knees which have not bowed unto Baal, and every mouth which hath not kissed him. Minutius Felix[1] says, that as Cæcilius pass'd before the statue of Serapis, he kissed his hand, as is the custom of superstitious People. They who adore are used to kiss their hands, says St. Jerom[2], and to bow down their heads, and the Hebrews, according to the propriety of their Language, put Kissing for Adoration; for this reason it is said, Kiss the Son, lest he [Ps. ii. 12.] be angry, and ye perish from the right way, that is to say, Adore the Son, and submit to his empire. And Pharaoh speaking to Joseph, And according unto thy word shall [Gen. xli. 40. Ch. xviii. 2.] all my People kiss, Receive your orders as the commands of God or the King. The word Adore in Scripture is taken not only for that Worship and Adoration which is due to God only, but likewise for those marks of outward respect which are paid to Kings, great Men, and superior Persons. In Adoration of both kinds Men bowed their bodies very low, and often threw themselves prostrate on the Earth to demonstrate their respect. Abraham, prostrate upon the ground, adored the three Angels who appear'd to him under a human form at Mamre. Lot adored them[3] in the same manner upon their arrival at [Gen. xix. 1. Acts xxvii. 27. Rev. viii. 10, 11.] Sodom. It is very probable that neither of them at first sight took them for any other than Men. Abraham adored the People of [Ch. xxiii. 7.] Hebron, Adoravit populum terræ; he fell prostrate before them, entreating them to sell him a Burying-place for Sarah. The Israelites understanding that Moses was sent by God to deliver them from their servitude in Egypt, bowed their heads and worshipped [Ex. iv. 31.] the Lord. It is needless to multiply Examples of this way of speaking, they are to be met with in almost every page of Scripture.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Minutius in Octavio.
Hieronym. contra Rufin. l. 1.
Joseph. Antiq. l. 13. c. 17.

Adraa

ADRAA, in the Batanæa, five and twenty miles from Bostri ○. It is the same as Edrai. See hereafter EDRAI.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Adrammelech (1)

ADRAMMELECH, the Son of Sennacherib, [If. xxxvii. 38.] King of Assyria. This King returning [2 Kings xix. ult.] to Nineveh after the unhappy Expedition which he had made into Judæa against King Hezekiah, was killed by his two Sons Adrammelech and Sharezer, while he was at his devotions in the Temple of his God Nisroch. It is not known what induced these two Princes to commit this parricide: Some conjecture that they were ingaged to it by a report that Sennacherib had vowed to sacrifice them to his Gods; but of this conjecture there is no Proof. What we know certainly is, that these two Princes, after they had murdered their Father, fled for safety to the mountains of Armenia, and that Esar-haddon their Brother succeeded to the Crown. The death of Sennacherib is placed in the year of the World 3295, before Jesus Christ 705, before the vulgar Æra 709. Adrammelech and Sharezer, the Sons of Sennacherib, are called in Said Son of Batrick, Anzarmelach, and Serassera: The last of these names comes very near that of Siassernera, which the Arabians give King Sennacherib.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Adrammelech (2)

ADRAMMELECH, one of the Gods adored by the Inhabitants of Sepharvaim, who were settled in the Country of Samaria, in the room of those Israelites who were carried beyond the Euphrates. The People of Sepharvaim made their Children pass through the fire in honour of this false Deity, [Ch. xvii. 31.] and another called Anamelech. The Rabbins say that Adrammelech was represented under the form of a Mule, which is not at all probable: There is much more reason to believe that Adrammelech was the Sun, and Anamelech the Moon; the first signifies the magnificent King, the second the gentle King. Many of the Eastern People adored the Moon under the name and form of a God, not of a Goddess.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Adria

ADRIA, a City of Italy upon the Tartaro, in the State of Venice. It gives its this name, rigorously speaking, belongs only to the Sea which is incloled within the Adriatick Gulf, yet in the Acts of the Apostles the sacred Author, describing the Navigation of St. Paul, takes it for the Sicilian and Ionian Sea.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Adrian

ADRIAN. We do not find the name of this Emperor in the Bible, but we are of opinion that he is described in that passage of the Revelations where it is said, that upon the third Angel's sounding the trumpet there fell a star from Heaven, which caused the death of an infinite number of Persons. The text runs thus: And the third Angel sounded, and there fell a great star from Heaven, burning as it were a lamp, and it fell upon the third part of the Rivers, and upon the fountains of Waters. And the name of the star is called Wormwood, and the third part of the Waters became Wormwood; and many men died of the Waters because they were made bitter. By this star was described Barchochebas, the famous Jewish Impostor, who prevailed with his Countrymen to rebel against the Romans. The Emperor Adrian sent Tinnius Rufus and Julius Severus, who carried on a bloody war with them. See below the Article BARCHOCHEBAS.

The Emperor Adrian, who did not love the Jews, because he had seen the disturbances produced by them under Trajan, resolved to mortify them, and keep them in subjection, by sending a Colony to Jerusalem, and building a Temple there to Jupiter. Jerusalem at that time was not very considerable, and since the ruin and destruction of it by Titus, could have recovered itself but very imperfectly. The Jews not being able to endure that this Colony of Strangers should come and inhabit their City, and introduce there a foreign Religion, began to mutiny,[1] about the Year 134.[2] Barchochebas who appeared about the same time, and undertook to procure himself to be owned for the Messiah, animated and encouraged them in their Rebellion. The presence of Adrian, who was then in Syria and Egypt, kept them within the bounds of Respect. But as they were enemies to the Romans, they forged bad Arms for them[3], with a purpose of disabling them from making any use of them, in the encounters which they themselves might have with them; they afterwards raised little Forts with Walls, in places which seemed most for their advantage; and made subterraneous Passages for the better holding a communication with one another, and concealing themselves from the pursuit of their Enemies; but these were so many vain efforts[4] efforts, which the Romans at first despised.

But when they saw that the number of the mutineers encreased, that they fought like People in despair, that the thieves of all the neighbouring Provinces join'd them, with the hopes of Booty, and that their Rebellion had an influence upon the adjacent Countries, and even staggered the whole Universe, as a certain Historian expresses himself, they were obliged to alter their measures. Tinnius Rufus, who sometime before had been the Emperor's Lieutenant in Syria, was at that time with the same character in Judea; he attacked the Jews, and killed great numbers of them, but then the loss of Men was considerable on his side too. Adrian therefore sent a Reinforcement to him, notwithstanding which he was routed in several skirmishes. At last Adrian sent for Julius Severus, one of the greatest Generals of his Age, from England, in order to make head against them. Severus thought it too hazardous to engage the Jews in a set Battle, who were too numerous; he therefore attacked them in small Bodies, cut off their Provision, and at length marched and laid siege to Bether, or Bethron, which served as a place of retreat for them.

The City defended it self with much obstinacy. Barcbochebas, who had shut himself up in it, encouraged the Jews with vain promises of Succour. The Town was taken[5], and the Romans made a dreadful Slaughter in it. The Jews say, that more People perished there than came out of Egypt; and they have inserted an Hymn[6] in their Liturgy for the 18th of the month Ab (which answers to July and August) wherein they call Adrian a second Nebuchadnezzar, and beg of God to remember this cruel Prince, who destroyed four hundred and eighty Synagogues: They reckon that the number of Jews killed in the several Battles and Rencounters, amounted to five hundred and fourscore thousand. The Jews say that the Skulls of three hundred Children were seen upon one stone at Bether; that the streams of Blood were so large as to carry away Stones of four pounds weight into the Sea, which was at the distance of four miles from the City; lastly, that the Lands thereabouts were so fattened with the dead Bodies, that they were not dunged for seven years afterwards.

The number of Roman Soldiers and auxiliary Troops that perished in the course of this War, which lasted, as S. Jerom[7] and the Rabbins say, three years and a half; or as others only two years[8], was very great; and Dio remarks that the Emperor, when he wrote to the Senate, relating the Succes of this War, did not venture to use the common form in the beginning of his Letters, If you and your Children are in good health I am glad of it; I and the Army are in good condition; by reason of the great losses which he had sustained in this War. Dio, l. 69. p. 794.

This Affair being over, Adrian took care to have the building of Jerusalem finished, the name whereof he changed to that of Ælia, which was the name of his family; he drove the Jews out of it, forbad them, under a severe penalty, ever to enter it[9], commanded a great number of them whom he had made prisoners during the War, to be carried to the fair held near the Turpentine Tree, where Abraham was believed to have received the three Angels; there they were sold at the price of Horses; and what could not be put off here, was conveyed to another fair held at Gaza. The rest were sent to Egypt[10]. S. Jerom[11] applies the following words of Zachariah, to this calamity of the Jews, I will feed the flock of Slaughter. And the Hebrew Doctors explain [Jer. xxxi. 15.] these words of Jeremiah as relating to the same War, A voice was heard in Ramah, Lamentation and bitter Weeping, Rachel weeping for her children, &c. The Jews purchased with a sum of Money the liberty, not of entring Jerusalem, but only of looking at a distance on it, and going to lament the fall and desolation of it.

We are assured that Tinnius Rufus, or, as the Rabbins call him, Turannus, or Turnus Rufus, plowed up the spot of ground on which the Temple formerly stood. There are some Medals of Adrian's shewn to this day, which were struck on this occasion, on the reverse whereof Judea is represented like a Woman, holding two naked Children by her, and sacrificing upon an Altar[12]; to signify, probably, that the Emperor had subdued Judea, and constrained it to sacrifice to false Gods. In another Medal we see Judea on her knees, submitting to the Emperor, and three Children begging mercy of him[13].

From this time, as no more Jews were suffered in Jerusalem, we begin to find Bishops taken from the Gentile Converts to Christianity.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Xiphilin. p. 262. Dio cass.
Basnage Hist. des Juifs, T. 2. l. 4. c. 8.
Xiphilin. loco cit.
Euseb. in Astaroth.
The 10th of August, in the 18th year of Adrian, of J. C. 135.
Basnage Hist. des Juifs. t. 2. p. 138.
Hieronym. in Dan. ix.
Basnage Hist. des Juifs. t. 2. p. 133.
Euseb. Hist. Eccl. l. 4. c. 6.
Hieron. Chron. an.
Hieron. in Zach. xi. 7.
Tristan. Comm. Hist. Adrian, p. 363.
Freher. de Num. Census, p. 3648.

Adriel

[1 Sam. xviii. 19. In the Year of the World 2987. before J. C. 1013. before the vulg. Æra 1017.] ADRIEL, the Son of Barzillai, married Merab the Daughter of Saul, who at first was promised to David. Adriel had five Sons by her, who were delivered up to the Gibeonites, to be put to death before the Lord, in revenge for the Cruelty which Saul their Grandfather had exercised against the Gibeonites. The Text of the second Book of Samuel imports, that these five were the Sons of Michal and Adriel; but there is all the probability in the world, that the name of Michal is put for that of Merab; or that Michal had adopted the Sons of her Sister Merab.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Adris

ADRIS, or Edris, the same with Enoch. See ENOCH.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Adrumetum

ADRUMETUM, a City of Africk in Lybia, Capital of the Province of Byzatium. We read in the Acts of the Apostles, [Acts xxvii. 1,2. Navigantibus nobis in Adria.] that St. Paul in his first voyage to Italy embarked in a Vessel that was going to Adrumetum. But it is much more probable that we should read Adramyttium in the Text; because we know St. Paul was going into Asia, as St. Luke testifies, and Adramyttium was a maritime Town of Mysia, in Asia Minor, over-against the Island of Lesbos.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Adullam

ADULLAM, a City belonging to the [Josh. xv. 35.] Tribe of Judah, situated in the Southern part of this Tribe, towards the Dead Sea. Eusebius[1] says, that in his time it was a large Town, ten miles from Eleutheropolis, Eastward. Rehoboam rebuilt this place, and strengthned it with good Fortifications. [2 Chr. xi. 7, 8.] Judas Maccabæus incamped in the Plain of Adullam, and there passed the Sabbath-day. [2 Macc. xii. 38. Josh. xii. 15.] Joshua killed the King of Adullam. David, during his flight, hid himself in the Cave of Adullam.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Euseb. in locis in Adullam. S. Jerom, places it at eleven miles distance from Eleutheropolis.

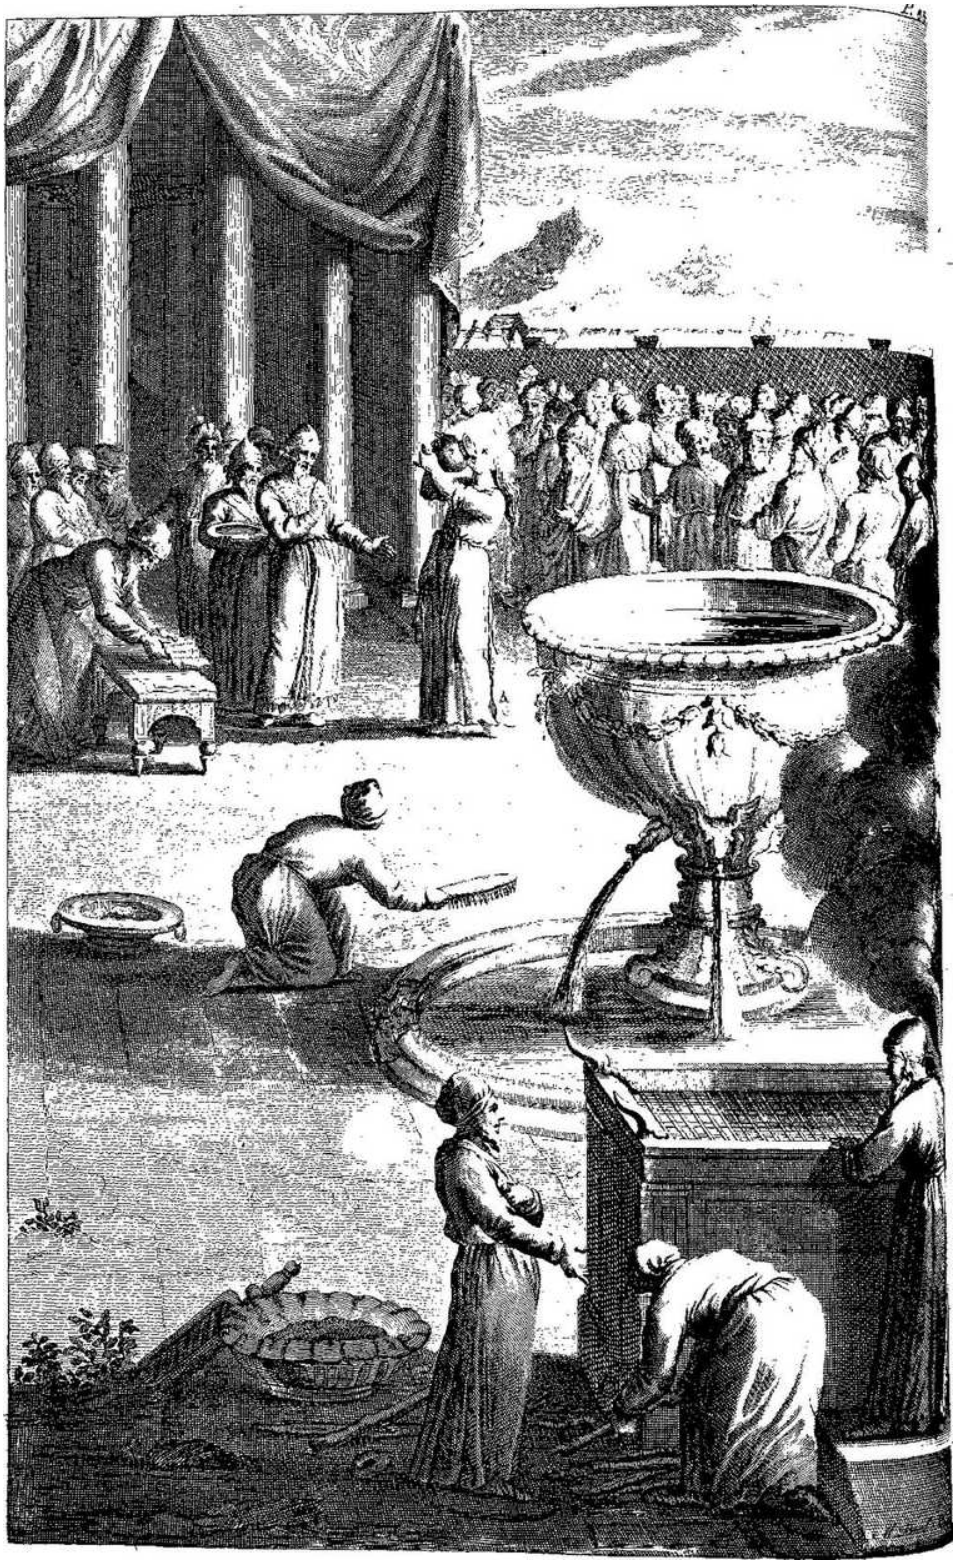
Adulteress

[1 Sam. xxii. 1,2.] ADULTERESS. The story of the Woman taken in Adultery, and presented [2 Sam. xxiii. 14. Joh. viii. 3.] to Jesus Christ, which is related in the Gospel of St. John, is not to be met with in many Greek Copies of this Evangelist. S. Jerom observes[1], that so long ago as his time there was nothing of it in many Books, as well Greek as Latin. The generality of the Greek Fathers never read it. Of three and twenty Commentators in the Greek Catena on St. John, not one has explained it; which induces us to think that it was not inserted in their Books. Maldonat assures us, that of all the Greek Copies consulted by him, he found it but in one; viz. in that which contains Leontius's Comment on St. John; nor does Leontius say one word of it in his Comment; and in the Greek Text which is joined with it, this story is marked with Obelisks, to shew that it was added to the Text. Dr. Mill cites many other Greek Manuscripts, wherein it is not to be seen. Neither Origen, S. Chrysostom, Theophylact, nor Nonnus, had any knowledge of it. Nor can Eusebius[2] be said to have read it, since he takes notice that it was contained in the Hebrew Copy of St. Matthew which the Nazarenes made use of. It is true, some assert that Eusebius has acknowledged this story in his Canons, or in his Harmony of the Gospel; but others[3] maintain that he had a regard, not to the History of the Adulteress, but to the verses which precede it.

To all this they add, that the Armenians have suppressed this passage in their Bible, that neither the Syriac printed in the Polyglots of Paris and London, nor the old Gothic Version by Ulphilas read it. The Manuscripts wherein it is to be met with vary extremely; some have it inserted only at the end of St. John's Gospel, others at the end of the XXI Chapter of St. Luke; others in the margin of the VIII Chapter of S. John; others again mark it with Obelisks, to denote that it is dubious. Euthymius, who mentions it in his Comment, confesses that it is not in the best Manuscripts. Thus you have the full force almost of what is said against this Story.



What is produced in favour of it shall now follow. All the Copies made use of by Robert Stephens, to the number of 16, and those consulted by Theodorus Beza, which amounted to 17, one only Manuscript excepted, which is cited by him, read this Story. Those likewise which Dr. Mill had recourse to, for the most part do acknowledge it. Tatian, who lived in the year 160, and Ammonius, who lived in 220, have owned it to be canonical, and placed it in their Harmonies of the Gospel. The Author of the Apostolical Constitutions[4], and the Synopsis ascribed to Athanasius, have it; S. Jerom, S. Austin, Ambrose, and the other Latin Fathers, have made no scruple of receiving it, tho' they were not unacquainted with the differences of the Greek Copies. S. Austin[5] conjectures, that some of the faithful of too little judgment, or even some who were Enemies to the true Faith, expunged this Story out of the Copies of S. John, lest our Saviour should be thought to authorize the disorder, by forgiving it so easily. Many Syriac Manuscripts of good antiquity read it; and we meet with it in all the printed Copies, both Greek and Latin; it should be admitted therefore without any difficulty. You may consult, if you please, the Commentators on the VIII Chapter of S. John, Dr. Mill's Annotations on the New Testament, M. Fabricius's Cod. Apocr. N. Test. Tom. 1. p. 355, &c. and the Authors by him cited.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Hieron. l. 2. contra Pelag. c. 6.
Euseb. l. 3. Hist. Eccl. c. 39.
Simon hist. critique du N. T. p. 150.
Constit. Apost. l. 2. c. 24.
Aug. de conjug. adulter l. 2. c. 7.

Adultery

[Levit. xi. 10.] ADULTERY. The Law of Moses punished Adultery with the death of both the Man and Woman who were guilty of this crime. When any Man, prompted by the spirit of Jealousy, suspected his Wife to have committed Adultery[1], he brought her first before the Judges, and set forth to them, that having often admonished his Wife not to be conversant in private with a certain Person, she regarded not his admonition; but as she asserted her Innocency, and would not acknowledge her fault, he required that she should be sentenced to drink the waters of Bitterness, that God by this means might discover what she was willing to conceal. The Man produced his witnesses, and had them heard; after which both the Man and Woman were carried to Jerusalem, and brought before the Sanhedrim, which was the sole Judge of such Causes. This is what we learn from the Rabbins, for all these particulars are not in Moses.

CEREMONIES ABOUT THE WATERS OF JEALOUSY.

The Judges of the Sanhedrim at first endeavour'd with their threatnings to confound the Woman, and oblige her to confess her crime. If she persisted in denying it they had her well tired with walking, to see if any thing could be got out of her by this means: And if she still own'd nothing, she was led to the eastern gate of the Court of Israel, and when she was stript of the clothes she wore, and was dressed in black before a multitude of Persons of her own Sex, the Priest then told her, that if she knew herself to be innocent of that which she was accused of, she had nothing to apprehend; but that if she were guilty, she might expect to suffer all that the Law threaten'd her with; (and what that was we shall see hereafter) to which she answer'd Amen, Amen.

The Priest wrote the terms of the Law upon a piece of Vellum, with ink made particularly for this use, without vitriol, that it might more easily be blotted out: The words were these, If a strange Man has not come near you, and you are not polluted by forsaking the bed of your Husband, these bitter waters which I have cursed will not hurt you; but if you have gone astray from your Husband, and have polluted yourself by coming near to another Man, may you be accursed of the Lord, and become an example for all his People; may your Thighs rot, and your Belly swell till it burst; may these cursed waters enter into your Belly, and being swelled therewith, may your Thighs putrify.

After this the Priest took a pitcher made of new Earth, filled it with water out of the brazen bason, which was near the Altar of Burnt-offerings, cast some dust into it, taken from the pavement of the Temple, mingled something bitter with it, as Wormwood or some other drug; and having read the Curses above mentioned to the Woman, and received her answer of Amen, he scraped them into the pitcher of water. During all this time another Priest was tearing her cloaths as low as her bosom, made her head bare, untied the tresses of her hair, fasten'd her cloaths together which were torn after this manner, with a girdle bound under her breasts, and presented her with the tenth part of an Epha, or about three pints of Barley meal, which was in a frying-pan, without oil or incense.

The other Priest, who had prepared the waters of Jealousy or Bitterness, then gave them to be drank by the accused Person, and as soon as she had got them down he put the pan with the meal in it into her hand. This was stirr'd before the Lord, and part of it thrown into the fire of the Altar. If the Woman were innocent, she returned with her Husband, and the Waters, instead of incommoding her, increas'd her health, and made her more fruitful than ever: If on the contrary she were guilty, she was seen immediately to grow pale, and her eyes started out of her head; and, lest the Temple should be polluted by her death, she was carried out with all speed, and died instantly, with all the ignominious circumstances related in the Curses, which, as they say, had their effect too upon him with whom the Woman had transgressed, tho' he were absent and at a distance. If her Husband had himself been guilty of Adultery, the bitter Waters had no bad effect upon her.

The Rabbins tell us, that since the return of the Jews from their captivity, the trial of Women suspected of Adultery has been suppressed, and that for two reasons: First, because Adulteries were become too frequent; and secondly, that the name of God might not be made liable to be too often erazed in the waters of Bitterness. When therefore any Husband had conceived just suspicions against the fidelity of his Wife, and had witnesses to depose that they had seen her privately with the suspected Persons, contrary to the directions of her Husband, she was immediately divorced, and deprived of her Dowry. Leo of Modena [1] assures us, that in this case the Husband is obliged to dismiss his Wife whether he will or no, and to separate for ever from her. After this the Woman is at liberty to marry again, not however till four months are expir'd, that it may be discern'd whether she is with child by her Husband before she takes another.

[John viii. 3.] The Jews having one day surpriz'd a Woman in Adultery, brought her to Jesus Christ, and asked what they should do with her, Moses having commanded Women of this character to be stoned: But this they said tempting him, in order to find matter of accusation against him; Je[2]sus therefore stooping, wrote with his Finger upon the ground[3], and raising himself again, said, Let him who is without Sin cast the first Stone; then stooping once more, he continued writing on the ground. His Accusers hearing him speak after this manner, retired one after another, the oldest first withdrawing: Then Jesus getting up, and seeing himself left alone with the Woman, said to her, Woman, where are thy Accusers? has no one condemned thee? She said, No, Lord. Jesus answer'd her, Neither will I condemn thee, go away and sin no more.

[Deut. xxii. 23.] It is presumed with reason, first that this Woman's Accusers were themselves guilty of the crime which they laid to her charge, in the same manner almost as the Accusers of the chaste Susanna. Now it is not just to receive the accusations of those Persons who are guilty of the evil which they find fault with in another[4]. Non modo accusator, sed me objurgatur, quidem ferendus est is, qui quod in alio reprehendit in eo ipse reprehenditur. Secondly, there is room to believe that the Woman here spoken of had suffer'd some violence, and that her crime was much lessen'd by the circumstances attending it. Selden[5] and Fagius[6] are of opinion that her case was the same with that related by Moses in these terms; If a Damsel, that is, a Virgin be betrothed to an Husband, and a Man find her in the City and lie with her, then ye shall bring them both unto the gate of that City, and ye shall stone them with stones that they die; the Damsel, because she cried not, being in the City, and the Man, because he hath humbled his Neighbour's Wife.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

See Levit. v. 11, 12. and the Commentators on this place; and Philo de specialib. legib.

Leo of Modena, his Customs of the Jews, Part 5. VOL. I. c. 6.

Translators' note. St. Jerom aggravates the matter, and tells us, that our Saviour not only wrote the Sins of the Accusers, but those too of all Mankind, Jesus inclinans se digito scribebat in terrâ, eorum videlicet qui accusabant, & omnium peccata mortalium. Secundùm quod scriptum est in Propheta, relinquentes autem te, in terra scribentur. Hieron. Advers. Pelag. 1. 2.

Cicero in verrem, Orat. 5.

Selden Uxor Hebr. l. 3. c. 11.

Fagius ad Deut. xxii. 22.

Adummim

ADUMMIM, a Town and Mountain in [Josh. xv. 7. xviii. 17. Ch. x. 30, & seq.] the Tribe of Benjamin. Some place it to the South, others to the North of Jericho. If it be true, as is generally believed, that they who went from Jerusalem to Jericho passed through Adummim, this place must have been seated to the West of Jericho. Some will have it that the Traveller mentioned by our Saviour in St. Luke, who, in his way from Jerusalem to Jericho, fell into the hands of Thieves, was attacked at Adummim between these two Cities[1].

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Vide Hieronym in Matt xx. & Ep. 27.

Ælia Capitolina

ÆLIA CAPITOLINA. This was the name given to Jerusalem when the Emperor Adrian, about the year of Jesus Christ 134, settled a Roman colony there, and intirely banished the Jews, forbidding them, upon pain of death, to continue there[1]. Some assert that they were even prohibited to circumcise their Children. St. Jerom[2] says, in his time the Jews bought permission of the Roman Soldiers to look upon Jerusalem, and shed tears over its misfortune. Thus they who bought Jesus Christ with money were obliged to pay a price even for their own tears: Old Men and Women, loaded with rags and years, were observed to go weeping to the Mount of Olives, and from thence to lament the ruin of the Temple. They were forced to purchase at a very dear rate the sight of this place, and the liberty of spreading Perfumes on a stone which was there fix'd. The name of Ælia became so common that People almost forgot that of Jerusalem, which was preserved only among the Jews, and such Christians as were better informed of things than the rest. It went by this name till the Emperor Constantine's time, when it resumed that of Jerusalem.

The name of Ælia however was not abolish'd, for it was still called so long after this, as may be seen in Greek, Latin, and Mahometan Authors. This name was given it because Ælius was that of Adrian's Family, and it was called Capitolina from Jupiter Capitolinus, to whom the City was consecrated. There was a Temple built to him in the place where Jesus Christ rose from the dead; a marble Venus was set up at Calvary, upon the Rock where the Cross stood[3]; a Hog in Marble was placed upon the Gate which looked towards Bethlehem; and at Bethlehem there was a Grove planted in honour of Tammuz or Adonis[4], to whom was dedicated the Cave where our Saviour was born. Notwithstanding all which, these Places consecrated by the Birth, Death, and Resurrection of Jesus Christ, were honoured by the Christians, and continued to be in great repute among even Heathens. Adrian's Order prohibiting the Jews to enter Jerusalem, did not exclude the Christians; they still remained there, and had Bishops of this Place. Hitherto the Church had scarce been composed of any besides convert Jews, who with the liberty of the Gospel[5] retained the old legal Ceremonies; but from that time there were none but Gentile Converts, who abolished the remains of these Jewish Observances. Some affirm[6], that the Emperor Adrian, when he set about the rebuilding of Jerusalem, made use of one Aquila, a Native of Sinope in Pontus, who at first embraced Christianity, then being expell'd out of the Church, received Circumcision, turned Jew, and became celebrated brated for his Translation of the Old Testament into Greek. See the two Articles ADRIAN and AQUILA.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Spartian. in vita Adriani.

Hieron. in Sophon. 1.

Paulin. ad Sever. Epist. xi.

Hieron. ad Paulin. Ep. 13.

Sever. Sulpit. Hist. l. 2.

Epiphan. de Pond. & Mens. c. 14, 15.

Aen

AEN, otherwise Ain. This term signifies a Fountain, and is to be met with in compound with several names of Cities. Ain, the City we are here speaking of, was first [Josh. xv. 32. 1 Chron. iv. 32.] given to the Tribe of Judah; afterwards it was yielded up to the Tribe of Simeon. Eusebius says this is Beth-anin, four miles from Hebron, and two from Terebinthus.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Æra

ÆRA, is the same thing very near with Epoch, of which we shall say something in its place. The Chronologers call the fixed points of their Chronology Æra. The Heathens, for example, talk much of the first Olympiad, the Trojan War, the Voyage for the golden Fleece, the Æra of the Foundation of Rome, the Æra of Nabonassar, of Alexander the Great, of the Seleucidæ, or, as in the language of the books of Maccabees, the year of the Greeks, and last of all, the year of Jesus Christ.

The Æra of the first Olympiad we fix at the year of the World 3228, before Jesus Christ 772.

The taking of the Town of Troy by the Greeks at the year of the World 2820, before Jesus Christ 1180.

The Voyage undertaken in order to bring away the golden Fleece, at 2760.

The Foundation of Rome at 2856. The Æra of Nabonassar at 3257, before Jesus Christ 743.

The Æra of Alexander the Great, or his last victory over Darius, at 3674, before Jesus Christ 326.

The Æra of the Seleucidæ at the year of the Julian Period 4403, of the World 3692, before Jesus Christ 308, before the vulgar Æra 312. The Jews call it the Æra of Contracts[1]. The first book of Maccabees places the beginning of it in Spring, the second in Autumn.

The Æra of the birth of Jesus Christ in 4000, the 25th of December, three years and six days before our vulgar Æra, wherein we reckon this year 1719; whereas if we were to take exactly the Æra of our Saviour's birth, we should reckon 1722. Other Æra's may be seen under the Article EPOCH. Here are as many as are necessary for fixing the Chronology of the several books in the Bible. See also the Chronological Table.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Translators' note. When the Jews became subject to the Syro-Macedonian Kings, they were obliged to make use of this Æra in all their Contracts, and other Civil Affairs; for which reason it was termed the Æra of Contracts. In the Maccabees, it is called the Æra of the Kingdom of the Greeks. All other Nations that computed by this Æra, began it from the Autumn of the Year before Christ 312. but the Chaldeans from the Spring following; because till then they did not think Seleucus thoroughly settled in the possession of Babylon. See Prid. Connect. Part I. Book VIII.

Æthan

ÆTHAN, or Ætham, between Jerusalem and Bethlehem. See ETHAN.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Affinity

AFFINITY. There were several degrees [See Lev. xviii. 7. & seq.] of Affinity among the Hebrews, which were obstructions to Matrimony. For example, 1. The Son could not marry his Mother, nor his Father's second Wife; 2. The Brother could not marry his Sister, whether she were so by the Father only, or by the Mother only, much less if she were thus related to him on both sides; 3. The Grandfather could not marry his Grandaughter, either by his Son or Daughter; 4. No one could marry the Daughter of his Father's Wife; 5. Nor the Sister of his Father or Mother; 6. Nor the Uncle his Niece, nor the Aunt her Nephew; 7. Nor the Nephew the Wife of his Uncle by the Father's side; 8. The Father-in-law could not marry his Daughter-in-law; 9. Nor the Brother the Wife of his Brother, while living, nor even after the death of his Brother, if he left Children. If he left no Children, the surviving Brother was to raise up Children to his deceased Brother, by marrying his Widow. 10. It was forbidden to marry the Mother and the Daughter at one time, or the Daughter of the Mother's Son, or the Daughter of her Daughter, or two Sisters together.

It is true, the Patriarchs before the Law sometimes married their Sisters, as Abraham married Sarah, who was his Father's Daughter by another Mother; and two Sisters together, as Jacob married Rachel and Leah; and their own Sisters by both Father and Mother, as Abel and Cain: But these Cases are not to be proposed as Examples, because in some they were authorized by necessity, in others by custom; and the Law as yet was not in being. If some other examples may be found, either before or since the Law, the Scripture expressly disapproves of them; as Reuben's Incest with Balah his Father's Concubine, and the Action of Ammon with his Sister Tamar, and that of Herod Antipas, who married Herodias his Sister-in-law, his Brother Philip's Wife, while her Husband was yet living.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Africa

AFRICA, one of the four parts of the World. It was peopled principally by Ham [Gen. x. 6, 13, 14.] and his Descendants. Mizraim peopled Egypt. The Pathrusim, the Naphluhim, the Casluhim and the Ludim, peopled other parts of this Country; the limits whereof are not at this day known distinctly. We place Lebabim in Libya, and Phut between Numidia and Libya, along the Mediterranean. It is thought that many of the Canaanites, being driven out of their Country by Joshua, retired into Africk[1]. The Mahometans believe likewise, that the Amalekites, who dwelt in ancient times in the neighbourhood of Mecca, were forced from thence by the Kings descended from Zioram[2]. This matter may be seen treated at large in our Dissertation concerning the Country whither the Canaanites retired, printed before the Book of Joshua.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Procop. de bello Vandelico, l. 2. c. 10. Gemar. alii.
Pocock. in specimine hist. Arab.

Agaba

AGABA, a Fortress near Jerusalem, which Galestus, who was Governour of it, restored to Aristobulus, the Son of Alexander Jannæus. Joseph. Antiq. l. 13. c. 24. Agaba, or Haggabah, in Hebrew signifies a rising ground, or eminence.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Agabus

AGABUS, a Prophet, and as the Greeks say, one of the seventy Disciples of our Saviour, foretold that there would be a great famine over all the Earth; and St. [Act. xi. 28. In the year of J. C. 43.] Luke, in the Acts, informs us that it accordingly fell out, under the Emperor Claudius, in the fourth Year of his Reign, and in the forty fourth Year of Jesus Christ. Profane Historians take notice of this famine; and Suetonius[1] observes, that the Emperor himself was insulted upon this occasion, attacked by the People in the middle of the Market-place, and obliged to retire to his Palace. As this famine afflicted principally Judæa, the Christians of Antioch, upon information of the great Want which their Brethren were reduced to at Jerusalem, resolved to send assistance to relieve them. St. Paul and St. Barnabas were entrusted with their Charity, [Acts xi. 29, 30. In the year of J. C. 44.] and conveyed it to Jerusalem.

Ten years after, that is to say, in the year of J.C. 58. as St. Paul was going to Jerusalem, and had already landed at [Acts xxi. 10.] Cæsarea in Palestine, the same Prophet Agabus arrived there, and coming to visit St. Paul and his company, he took this Apostle's girdle, and binding himself hand and foot, he said, Thus saith the Holy Ghost, so shall the Jews at Jerusalem bind the Man that owneth this Girdle, and shall deliver him into the hands of the Gentiles. And when they heard these things, all they who were present besought St. Paul to go no farther. But he answered, That he was ready not to be bound only, but also to die at Jerusalem, for the name of the Lord Jesus. We know no other particulars of the life of Agabus. The Greeks say he suffered Martyrdom at Antioch; and they observe his Festival on the eighth of March. The Latins, ever since the ninth Age, have kept it on the ninth of February.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Sueton. in Claudio. c. 18. Joseph. Antiq. l. 20. c. 2.

Agag

AGAG, King of the Amalekites. The Amalekites having inhumanly attacked the Israelites in the Wilderness, after their coming out of Egypt, while they were sinking under the fatigues which they had suffered, and having massacred all those who were not able to keep up with the body of the Army, the Lord was not satisfied with the Victory which Joshua obtained over them in the same Wilderness, but protested with an Oath that he would destroy the memory of Amalek from under Heaven, and would make eternal War with them, without mercy. This happened in the year of the World 2513. before J.C. 1487. before the vulgar Æra 1491. About four hundred years after, the Lord remembred the malice which Amalek had shewn formerly to his People, and he commanded Samuel to tell Saul, that he should march against the Amalekites, cut them in pieces, and destroy every thing belonging to them: Spare them not, nor desire any thing that is theirs, but slay both Man and Woman, Infant and Suckling, Ox and Sheep, Camel and Ass. Saul thereupon issued out his Orders to the People, and having assembled them, he found, upon the review of them, that their number amounted to two hundred thousand foot, without reckoning the ten thousand Men of the Tribe of Judah, which made a separate Body.

Being entred therefore into the Country of the Amalekites, he cut in pieces all he found from Havilah to Shur, which is over-against Egypt. He took Agag their King alive, and preserved him, with the best of the Sheep and Oxen, the Fatlings and the Lambs, and the richest and most valuable part of all the spoil. Then came the Word of the Lord to Samuel, saying, It repenteth me that I have set up Saul to be King; for he hath turned back from following me, and hath not performed my Commandments. And it grieved Samuel, and he cried unto the Lord all night. The next day therefore he went to meet Saul, who was returned with his Army to Gilgal; where he offered a Burnt-offering unto the Lord out of the spoil which he had taken from the Amalekites. When Samuel drew near to Saul, this Prince saluted him, and said, I have performed the Commandment of the Lord. And Samuel said, What meaneth then this bleating of the Sheep in mine ears, and the lowing of the Oxen, which I hear? And Saul said, They have brought them from the Amalekites; for the People spared the best of the Sheep, and of the Oxen, to sacrifice unto the Lord thy God, and the rest we have utterly destroyed. Then Samuel said unto Saul, Stay, and I will tell thee what the Lord hath said to me this night. And he said unto him, Say on. Then Samuel signified unto him the resolution which the Lord had taken, of rejecting him, and of transferring the Kingdom to another. Saul would have excused himself; but Samuel told him that God required neither Sacrifices nor Burnt-offerings, but perfect Obedience; and that to resist and disobey him, was as the sin of Witchcraft and Idolatry. Having said this, he called for Agag King of Amalek to be brought unto him, who, when he was presented to him in fetters, and trembling in [1 Sam. xv. 32.] every limb, said[1], Must I then be separated from all things by a bitter death? And Samuel said to him, As thy Sword hath made Women childless, so shall thy Mother be childless among Women. And he hewed Agag in pieces before the Lord in Gilgal. Thus Agag King of Amalek finished his life, about the year of the World 2930. before J. C. 1070. before the vulgar Æra 1074.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

The Text does not say that he was thus trembling; but the Septuagint and Vulgate do. The Hebrew Text, which we have rendred by in fetters, may be translated in deliciis, מ.ע.ד.נ.ות.

Agalla

[Isai. xv. 8. 1 Sam. xxv. 44.] AGALLA,[1] or Ægalla, Gallim, or Ægallim, or Eglaim, a City beyond Jordan, to the East of the Dead Sea, in the land of Moab. Eusebius[2] places it at eight miles distance from Ar, or Areopolis, towards the South.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Joseph. Antiq. lib. 14. c. 2.
Euseb. in Agallim.

Agape

AGAPE. This is a Greek word, and signifies properly Friendship. The feasts of Charity, which were in use among the Christians of the Primitive Church, were called by this name. They were celebrated in memory of the last Supper which Jesus Christ made with his Apostles, when he instituted the Holy Eucharist. These Festivals were kept in the Church, towards the Evening, after the common Prayers were over, and the word of Salvation had been heard. When this was done, the Faithful eat together with great Simplicity and Union, what every one had brought with them; so that the Rich and Poor were no way distinguished. After a frugal and modest Supper, they partook of the Lord's Body and Blood, and gave each other the Kiss of Peace. This Custom, so good and laudable in its Original, soon degenerated, and was abused. St. Paul, in his first Epistle to the Corinthians, complains, [1 Cor. xi. 21.] that so early as in his time the Rich despised the Poor in these Assemblies, and would not condescend to eat with them: When ye come together, says he, in one place, this is not to eat the Lord's Supper; for in eating every one taketh before other, his own Supper: and one is hungry, and another is drunken. What, have ye not Houses to eat and to drink in? or despise ye the Church of God, and shame them that have not? What shall I say to you? Shall I praise you in this? I praise you not?

The Jews had certain devotional Entertainments, which had some relation to the Agapæ we are speaking of. Upon [Deut. xiv. 22, 27-29. xxxvi. 10, 11, 12. Neh. viii. 12. Esth. ix. 19.] their great Festival-days they made Feasts for their Family, their Friends and Relations; to these they invited the Priests, the Poor, and Orphans, and sent portions to them of their Sacrifices. These Repasts were made in the Temple, and before the Lord. And there were certain Sacrifices and First-fruits appointed by the Law, which were to be set apart for this purpose.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Agate

AGATE, a precious Stone called Achates, or Gagathes; and in Hebrew, Shebo. There is mention of it in some places of the Scripture. It is said to take its name from a [Ex. xxviii. 19. xxix. 12. שבו Schebo. 70. Ἀχάτης, Achates.] river in Sicily, where it is found. Some of these Agates are seen likewise in Phrygia and the Indies. There are many sorts of them; one is called Agate Sardonyx, or only Sardonyx; another Agate Onyx, or Onyx only, another Agate Calcedony, or Calcedony, and nothing more; another, Roman Agate; and lastly, another, German Agate. All these Agates differ in colour and price. Some are to be seen with black and white veins, with veins of gold, and like Amethysts. They make Cups and Vessels of Agate. The oriental Agates are polished and glittering, and sometimes very pretty things are to be seen in them, represented after a natural manner.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ages of the World

AGES OF THE WORLD, the times preceding the Birth of Jesus Christ, have been generally divided into six Ages.

The first extends from the beginning of the World to the Deluge; and comprehends one thousand six hundred and fifty six years.

The second Age, from the Deluge to Abraham's coming into the Land of Promise, in 2082, comprehends four hundred and twenty six years.

The third Age of the World, from Abraham's entrance into the Promised Land, to the deliverance of the Hebrews out of Egypt, in the year of the World 2523, includes four hundred and thirty years.

The fourth Age, from the going out of Egypt to the foundation of the Temple by Solomon, in the year of the World 2992, takes up four hundred and seventy nine years.

The fifth Age of the World, from Solomon's laying the foundations of the Temple, to the Babylonish Captivity in the year of the World 3416, contains four hundred twenty four years.

The sixth Age of the World reaches from the Babylonish Captivity to the Birth of Jesus Christ, which happened in the year of the World 4000, and in the fourth year before the vulgar Æra, and includes five hundred fourscore and four years.

I shall

I shall not inlarge so far in this place as to reconcile, or even represent only, the different Systems of the antient and modern Chronologers concerning the years of the World. They who would be well informed of these matters, will without doubt go as far back as the first sources, and consult those Authors who have expressly treated on this subject. We for our parts have chosen to follow Usher in the Chronology of the Old Testament, with some little differences only, where we think we have reason to vary from him. Among the pieces annex'd to this Dictionary there is a chronological Table which is agreeable with this System, and we have endeavour'd to conform ourselves to it in all the dates which we have inserted in the course of this Work.

Every one knows that there is a great disproportion in the age of the Patriarchs, as it is expressed in the Septuagint, and in the Hebrew text. This difference, with regard to the time before the Deluge, amounts to about five hundred fourscore and six years. According to the Septuagint, the Deluge happened in the year of the World 2242, but according to the Hebrew and the Vulgate in 1656. And after the Deluge from the six hundred and first year of Noah, which is the next year after the Deluge, the Septuagint reckon eleven hundred seventy two years to the seventieth year of Terah, whereas the Vulgate reckons no more than two hundred ninety two years, which makes a difference of nine hundred and fourscore years; so that including the five hundred fourscore and six years before the Deluge, there will be, upon a computation, one thousand four hundred sixty six more in the Septuagint than in the Vulgate.

No one has hitherto been able to discover the true motive which could oblige the Septuagint thus to lengthen out the lives of the old Patriarchs: Some have conjectured, that their design herein was to secure the sacred Books from the censure of the Heathens, who not knowing how to credit the relation of the long lives of the Patriarchs, maintain'd that one of our years was equivalent to ten or five of theirs; so that one who had been said to live eight hundred years, in reality had lived no more than eighty, or at most but an hundred and sixty, and so in proportion of others. However this may be, there is scarce any question to be made but that the Septuagint multiplied the Patriarchs years; for there is no reason for placing the diminution of these years to the account of the Hebrew Writers.

As to the length of the year, according to the computation of Moses and the old Hebrews, there is no doubt but that from the time of Noah it consisted of twelve months of one and thirty days; the proof whereof appears in the particular account of the days of that year wherein the Deluge happened, which is very accurately given us by Moses. We shall speak of Cainan, whom the Septuagint, as some pretend, have added in the text, under the Article of Cainan. As to the differences between the Hebrew and the Septuagint, with relation to the years of the Patriarchs, the Reader may consult Isaac Vossius, De Ætate mundi, & de LXX Interpretibus, and F. Pezron, in his Antiquité des tems retablie.

You have here a particular account of the seven Ages of the World, according to the Greek text, together with the proofs abridg'd after M. Boivin the Elder's System, who has been labouring with great application for fifty years to clear this part of ancient Chronology.

Years I Age. From the Creation to the 2262 Deluge, lasted

II Age. From the Deluge to 738 the Confusion of Languages

III Age. From the Confusion of Languages to the Call of Abraham 460 IV Age. From thence to Jacob's 215 going into Egypt From thence to the departure out 430 of Egypt V Age. From thence to Saul 774 VI Age. From Saul to Cyrus 583 VII Age. From Cyrus to the vul- 538 gar Æra of the Christians

Total 6000

I Age, 2262 Years. From the Creation of Adam to 230 the birth of Seth, Gr. Bible, Gen. v. 3. Cedren. p. 6.

From thence to the birth of 205 Enos, (Gen. Gr. v. 6.) From thence to the birth of 190

Canaan I. (Gen. Gr. v. 9.) From thence to the birth of Ma- 170

halaleel (Gen. Gr. v. 12.) From thence to the birth of Jared, 165

(Gen. Gr. v. 15.) From thence to the birth of 162

Enoch, (Gen. Gr. v. 18.) From thence to the birth of 165

Methuselah, (Gen. Gr. v. 21.) From thence to the birth of 187

Lamech, (Gen. vulg. v. 25.) From thence to the birth of 188

Noah, (Gen. Gr. v. 28.) From thence to the Deluge, inclu- 600

sively, (Gen. vii. 6, 11.) Total, according to the best 2262

Reading of the LXX.

These

These 2262 years are attested by Julius Africanus, in Syncellus, p. 20, 53, 83, by Epiphanius in his Heresies, p. 5; by S. Austin, in his City of God, l. 15, c. 13, & 20. and upon Genes. ix. 2. This is according to five copies, viz. three Greek, one Latin, and one Syriac. By the Paschalion or Alexandrian Chronicle, by Godfrey of Viterbo, by Honorius of Autun, by all the Collections of various Readings upon the LXX.

Note, the 167 years from Methuselah to the birth of Lamech, instead of 187, are the Transcriber's fault in most of our Greek Bibles. This mistake is not in the Greek editions of Basil and Strasburg; besides, it is corrected by the Hebrew, the Vulgate, and Josephus. According to this erroneous reading, the Deluge would have happen'd in the year of the World 2242. Methuselah therefore, who, according to all our Bibles and Josephus, lived 969 years, must have died fourteen years after the Deluge; whereas, according to the proper and right reading, he died six years before the Deluge, St. Austin's City of God, 15, 13. at the end.

II Age 738 years. From the Deluge, exclusively, to the birth of Arphaxad 12 Josephus i. 7. not 2 years. Arphaxad is the third Son of Shem.

From thence to the birth of Canaan II. (Gen. Gr. ii. 12.) 135 From thence to the birth of Salah, 130 (Gen. Gr. ii. 13.) From thence to the birth of Eber, 130 (Gen. Gr. ii. 14.) From thence to the birth of Peleg, 134 (Gen. Gr. ii. 19.) From thence to the birth of Reu, 130 (Gen. Gr. ii. 18.) From thence to the confusion of Languages in the year of the World 3000, according to all the Ancients 67

Total 738

III Age 460 years. From thence to the birth of Serug, (Gen. Gr. ii. 20.) in the 132d year of Reu 65

From thence to the birth of Nahor, 130 (Gen. Gr. ii. 22.) From thence to the birth of Terah, 120 (Joseph. i. 7.)

The Bibles say 28, 29, 79, 179. but these numbers do not make Abraham and Amraphel square together, Gen. xiv. 1.

From thence to the birth of Abraham, (Gen. ii. 26. Joseph. i. 7.) 70 From thence to the call of Abraham, (Gen. xii. 4.) 75 Total 460

Note, Abraham was called in the year when Terah died; Terah therefore did not live above 145 years, as the Samaritan text imports, which is the Mosaick Hebrew: The 205 years therefore of the other text are the Copier's fault, who makes the Bible contradict itself; for Abraham being born in the seventieth year of Terah, must have been 135 years old at the death of his Father, and not 75, as all the Texts say.

[Years] IV Age 215 years.

From the call of Abraham to the birth of Isaac, (Gen. xxi. 5, 17.) 25 From thence to the birth of Jacob, (Gen. xxv. 24, 26.) 60 From thence to Jacob's journey into Mesopotamia, (Gen. xxxi. 38, 41.) 71

From thence to his return into Canaan, (Gen. xxx. 25. and xxxi. 38, 41.) 20

From thence to his going into Egypt at the Age of 130, (Gen. xlv. 6, 11. and xlvii. 7, 9.) 39

Total 215 The sojourning of the Israelites in Egypt, (Exod. xii. 40. Judith v. 9.) 430

Shepherds in Goshen. Jacob Israel, at Goshen in Egypt, (Gen. xxvii. 28.) 17 Joseph Psontomphanech, aged 56 years, reigns at Goshen 54

Total 71

The Descendants of Joseph. Hicsos or Kings, Shepherds according to Manetho in Josephus, Apology 1. 5.

[Yrs. M.] Ephraim or Salatis 19 0 Beria or Beon 44 0 Rapha or Apachnas 36 7 Reseph or Apophis 61 0 Thale or Janias 50 1 Thaan or Assis 49 2

Total 259 10

Hacsos or captive Shepherds. Laadan 40 0 Ammiud 40 0 Elisama to the 80th year of Moses, at which time he departed out of Egypt, 19 2

Total 99 2

Yrs. M.

215 0 71 0 See Gen. xv. 13.

[V Age] Total 645 0 for the four parts of the fourth Age.

V Age 774 years Years From the 80th year of Moses to his 40

death, or to Joshua,

Joshua 27 Aristocracy of the Elders, then Anarchy 18, I. Idolatry, I. Servitude (Judg. iii. 8, 10.) 8

Othniel (Judg. iii. 11.) 40 II. Idolatry and Anarchy 30 II. Servitude (Judg. iii. 14.) under 18

Eglon the Moabite

Ehud (Judg. iii. 30.) 80 III. Servitude (Judg. iv. 3.) under 20

Jabin the Canaanite

Deborah and Barak (Judg. v. 32.) 40 In the year of the World 4418. Before J. C. 1582. Attick Æra by the Parian Marble. IV. Servitude (Judg. vi. 1.) under the 7

Midianites, Amalekites, Ishmaelites

Gideon Jerubbaal (Judg. vi. 8, 11, 21, 25, 32. and viii. 28.)

Abimelech the Tyrant 40

3 (Judg.ix.22.) Tolah (Judg. x. 2.) 23 Bedan (Sam. xii. 11. & Clem. Alex. 14

p. 238.)

Boleas (Clem. Alex. p. 238.) 23 Jair (Judg. x. 3.) 22 V. Servitude (Judg. x. 8.) under the 18

Ammonites

Jepthah (Judg. xii. 7.) 6 Ibzan (Judg. xii. 9.) 7 Ebrom (Clem. Alex. p. 324.) 40 Elon (Judg. xii. 11.) 10 Abdon (Judg. xii. 14.) 8 VI. Servitude (Judg. xiii. 1.) under the 40

Philistines Samson (Judg. xv. 20. and xvi. 31.) 20

Anarchy under the High-priests (S.

Theoph. of Antioch, l. 3. p. 134.)

Africanus in Syncellus, p. 174 & 40 176. Hebrew Tradition in Cedrenus, p. 1 96, or 84. in the year of the World 4725, before Jesus Christ 1275. The Argonauts, Samera, Semei, Semergar, Simmichar, Semané (S. Theoph. Antioch. l. 3. p. 13.)

Anarchy under Joseph the High- 30 priest, of the race of Eleazar, (Joseph. 8. 1.) Julius Africanus in Syncellus, p. 174. Julius Hilario Cedren.)

Eli I. High-priest, descended from 40 Ithamar, a Judge (1 Sam. iv. 18. Cedr. p. 49.)

In the year of the World 4791, before J. C. 1209, Troy sacked. VII. Servitude under the Philistines, 21

Ahitob being then High-priest

Samuel Judge and Prophet 40

Total 774

VI Age under the Kings, 583 years. Under Saul (Acts xiii. 21.) 40 David (2 Sam. iii. 4.) 40 From the beginning of Solomon's reign to the foundation of the Temple From thence to the destruction of the 430 Temple, according to the series of 3 the several Reigns in Judah

The Captivity in Babylonia (Je- 70 rem. xxv.12. and xxix.10. and Dan. ix.2.)

Total 583

VII Age 538 years, according to the mathematical Canon. From Cyrus at Babylon to Alexander 206

the Great at Babylon From that time to Ptolemy the Son 27 of Lagus From thence to Augustus 275 From thence to our Æra in the year 30 of Rome 754

Total 538

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Agee

AGEE, the Father of Shammah, one of the gallant men in David's army, 2 Sam. xxiii. 11.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Agrippa (1)

AGRIPPA. Marcus Agrippa, the favourite of the Emperor Augustus. His name is not to be met with in the canonical books of the Old or New Testament; but as he is mentioned in Josephus and Philo, and has some part in the History of the Jews, we shall say something of him in this place. Augustus gave him his daughter Julia to Wife, and the Government of all Asia. Herod the Great, who had all the obligations in the World to him, went and paid his respects to him at Mitylene; from thence he conducted him to Jerusalem[1], where he was received with extraordinary honours. Agrippa never spoke of his reception without great satisfaction; he beheld with respect the beautiful order which was observed in the Temple, offered an hecatomb in it, entertain'd the inhabitants of Jerusalem at a great feast, and granted every thing to Herod and his People that they desired of him. In this journey he visited Sebasta and Cæsarea, which Herod had built in honour of Augustus, and was charmed with the magnificence of the Jewish Monarch, and the splendor of these two Cities. This journey of Agrippa to Jerusalem was made in the year of the World 3990, before Jesus Christ 10 years. The name of Agrippa is said to come from the Latin, æger partus[2], because they who come into the World with their feet foremost come into it with most difficulty, are generally more unhappy than others, and are very subject to have sore feet.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Vide Joseph. Antiq. l.xvi. c. 2.

Aul. Gell. Noct. Attic. l. 15. c. 16. & Plin. l. 7. c. 8.

Agrippa (2)

2. AGRIPPA, sirnamed Herod, the Son of Aristobulus and Mariamne, and Grandson to Herod the Great, was born in the year of the World 3997, three years before the birth of our Saviour, and seven years before the vulgar Æra. After the death of Aristobulus his Father, Herod his Grandfather took care of his education, and sent him to Rome to make his court to Tiberius[1]. The Emperor conceived a great affection for Agrippa, and placed him near his Son Drusus. Agrippa very soon won the good graces of Drusus and the Empress Antonia: But Drusus having been carried off by a sudden death, all those who had been [In the Year of J.C. 23.] much about him were commanded by Tiberius to withdraw from Rome, lest the sight and presence of them should renew his affliction. Agrippa, who had indulged his inclination to Liberality, was obliged to leave Rome, overwhelm'd with debts, and in a very poor condition. He did not dare to go to Jerusalem, because he was not able to make a figure there suitable to his birth; he retired therefore to the Castle of Massada, where he lived rather like a private Person than a Prince. Herod the Tetrarch his Uncle, who had married Herodias his Sister, assisted him for some time with a great deal of Generosity: He made him the principal Magistrate of Tiberias, and presented him with a large sum of Money; but all this was not sufficient to answer the excessive expences and profuseness of Agrippa; so that Herod growing weary of assisting him, and one day reproaching him gently with his bad œconomy, Agrippa was so affected with it, that he took a resolution to quit Judæa and return to Rome.

[In the Year of J.C. 35.] But as he wanted Money, Marsyas a slave, whom he had made free, addressed himself to one Protus, a Person of the same condition about Berenice, who consented to lend him twenty Drachma's[2] upon thousand Marsyas's security, provided Agrippa, who was already in his debt, would give him a bond for twenty thousand upon the receipt of no more than seventeen thousand five hundred. Besides this Sum, he borrowed two hundred thousand Drachma's of Alexander Alabarch, or Chief of the Jews at Alexandria, upon condition that Cypros, Agrippa's Wife, should be answerable for them; besides, Alexander would pay him part only of this sum at Alexandria, for the rest he remitted to him into Italy as soon as he arrived there.

The Emperor Tiberius then kept his Court at Capreæ, and Agrippa, before he proceeded farther on his journey to him, gave him intelligence of his arrival, and desired his leave to wait on him with his respects. Tiberius, whom time had cured of his affliction for the death of Drusus, sent him word that he was glad to hear of his return, and desired to see him at Capreæ. Thither he went, and the Emperor, as a mark of Distinction, gave him an apartment in his Palace, and received him with abundance of caresses.

The next day Letters were brought to the Emperor from Herennius, who had the care of his affairs in Judæa; wherein he informed his Master, that Agrippa having borrowed three hundred thousand pieces of Silver out of his Majesty's Exchequer, had fled out of Judæa without paying them. This news very much disturbed Tiberius, and so far exasperated him against Agrippa, that he commanded him to leave the Palace, and pay what he owed. Agrippa was not dejected at this unlucky accident, but addressed himself to the Empress Antonia, and desired her to lend him this sum of money. Antonia, who loved Agrippa for his Mother Berenice's sake, could not refuse him this favour; and by this means Agrippa cleared himself of this troublesome Affair. Tiberius hereupon received him again into his good graces, and commanded him to attend Tiberius Nero, the Son of Drusus. Agrippa having more inclination for Caius Caligula, the Son of Germanicus, and Grandson of Antonia, chose rather to attach himself to him; as if he had some prophetick views of the future elevation of Caius, who at that time was beloved by all the world. The great assiduity and agreeable behaviour of Agrippa, so engaged this Prince, that he was not able to live without him.

One day as they were together in a litter[3], Agrippa said to Caius, I wish I could see the day when this old Man (speaking of the Emperor) would be going into the other world, and leave you master of this, without meeting with any obstacles from his Grandson Tiberius Nero! how happy would the World then be, and how over-joyed should I be to see this lucky moment! This discourse was over-heard by Eutyches, a slave whom Agrippa had made free; but for the present he took no notice of it. However, sometime after, believing he had reason to be dissatisfied with Agrippa, he desired an opportunity of speaking to the Emperor, and said he had things of the utmost consequence to impart to him, relating to Agrippa.

Tiberius was very slow in every thing he did, and was contented, for that time, with only giving orders that Eutyches should be confined. Nevertheless, Agrippa, who knew nothing that his servant had to tell, and believed himself to be intirely innocent, pressed Tiberius very much to hear what Eutyches had to say, and put an end to this affair. The Emperor, who loved Agrippa, made no haste to enquire farther into this accusation. Agrippa therefore at last made use of the Empress, and as it were forced Tiberius to have Eutyches produced, and hear what he had to say against his Master.

Agrippa hereupon was loaded with fetters, and committed to the guard of an Officer, who observed him narrowly, but not without shewing some regard to him, in consideration of Antonia, whose commands he had for so doing. Tiberius dying some time after, and Caius Caligula succeeding him, the new Emperor heaped many favours and much wealth upon him, changed his iron fetters into a chain of gold, set a royal Diadem upon his head, and gave him the Tetrarchy which Philip the Son of Herod the Great had been possessed of, that is to say, the Batanæa and Trachonitis: To this he added that of Lysanias; and Agrippa returned very soon into Judæa, to take possession of his new [In the year of J. C. 39.] Kingdom.

The sight of his good fortune having raised the envy of Herodias his Sister, Wife to the Tetrarch Herod, she engaged the King her Husband to undertake a journey to Rome, with hopes that he too might obtain the title of King from Caius. But he was scarce got to Italy, before Fortunatus, one to whom Agrippa had given his liberty, arrived also, with letters from his Master, wherein he accused his Uncle Herod with having carried on a secret correspondence with Sejanus, and with having private intelligence at that time with Artabanus, King of Parthia; and for a proof of this, he assured the Emperor that there were Arms lodged in his Arsenals sufficient for seventy thousand Men. While Herod was receiving audience of Caius, Fortunatus came, and presented Agrippa's letters to him. He immediately opened them, and having read them, he asked Herod whether it were true, that he had such a quantity of Arms. Herod, not being able to deny it, was banished into Gaul, and his Tetrarchy was given to Agrippa, in the year of J. C. 40.

The Emperor Caïus having undertaken to make himself adored, and desiring to be reverenced as a God, had a mind to have his Statue set up in the Temple of Jerusalem. [In the year of J. C. 40.] But the Jews opposed this [In the year of J. C. 41. Jan. 25.] design with so much resolution, that Petronius had not courage to pursue it any farther, but took the liberty to represent in a letter to the Emperor, what resistance he met with from the Jews. Agrippa, who was then at Rome, coming to the Emperor at the very time while he was reading this letter, Caius told him, that the Jews were the only People of all Mankind who refused to own him for a God, and that they had taken arms to oppose his resolution. At these words, Agrippa fell down, as it were in a swoon, was carried home, and there continued without sense or knowledge of any thing till the next Evening. As soon as he was a little recovered, he wrote a long letter to Caius, wherein he endeavoured to soften him, and his arguments made such an impression upon the Emperor's mind, that he desisted for a time at least, and in appearance, from the design which he had formed, of setting up his Statue in the Temple.

Caius being killed in the beginning of the year following, Agrippa, who was then at Rome, contributed a great deal, by his advice, to maintain Claudius in the Empire, to which he had been advanced by the soldiers. But in this affair Agrippa acted a part wherein he shewed more cunning and address, than sincerity and honesty: for while he made a shew of being in the interests of the Senate, he secretly advised Claudius to be resolute, and not to abandon his good fortune. The Emperor, as an acknowledgment for his good Offices, gave him all Judæa, and the kingdom of Chalcis, which had been possessed by Herod his Brother. So that Agrippa became on a sudden one of the most powerful Princes of the East, and was possess'd of as much or more than had been held by Herod the Great his Grandfather. He returned into Judæa, and governed it to the great satisfaction of the Jews.[4] But the desire of pleasing them, and a mistaken zeal for their Religion, induced him to do [In the year of J. C. 44. Acts xii. 1, 2, 3, &c.] an unjust action, the memory whereof is preserved in Scripture.

Near the Feast of the Passover, in the year of J. C. 44. S. James major, the Son of Zebedee, and Brother to S. John the Evangelist, was seized by his order, and put to death. He proceeded also to lay hands on S. Peter, and imprisoned him, waiting till the Festival was over, that he might then have him executed. But God having miraculously delivered S. Peter from the place of his confinement, the ill will of Agrippa, in this particular, had not its effect. After the Passover, Agrippa went from Jerusalem to Cæsarea, and there had Games represented in honour of Claudius[5]. The inhabitants of Tyre and Sidon waited on him in this place, suing for peace. This Prince being come early in the morning to the Theatre, with a design to give them audience, seated himself on his throne, dressed in a robe of silver tissue, worked in a most admirable manner. The rising sun darting upon it with its rays, gave it such a lustre as the eyes of the spectators could scarce endure. When therefore the King spoke to the Tyrians and Sidonians, the people and the flatterers about him began to cry that it was the voice of a God, and not of a man.

Instead of rejecting these impious flatteries, Agrippa received them with an air of complacency, and at the same time saw an Owl above him on a cord. He had seen the same bird before, when he was in bonds, under the reign of Tiberius, and it was then told him, that he should be soon set at liberty; but that whenever he saw the same thing a second time, he should not live above five days beyond it. He was therefore extremely terrified, and at the same time the Angel of the Lord smote him, because he did not give God the glory. They were forced to carry him back to his palace, where he died, at the end of five days, racked with tormenting pains in his bowels, and devoured with worms. Such was the death of Herod Agrippa, after seven years reign, in the year of J. C. 44. He left a Son of seventeen years of age, of the same name, Agrippa, and three Daughters, viz. Berenice, who was married to her Uncle Herod, her Father's Brother; Mariamne, betroth'd to *Julius Archela*üs, the Son of Chelcias; and Drusilla, promised to Epiphanius the Son of *Archela*üs, King of Comagena.3. AGRIPPA, the younger, Son to him we have been speaking of, was at Rome with the Emperor Claudius, when his Father died1. The Emperor was inclin'd to give him all the dominions that were possess'd by his Father; but they who were about him dissuaded him from it. He kept Agrippa four years longer at his Court, and sent Cuspius Fadus into Judæa, till this young Prince, who was then but seventeen years of age, was in a condition to reign. The year following, the 45th of J. C. the Governour of Syria coming to Jerusalem, intended that the High Priest's ornaments should be put into the hands of Fadus, and was for compelling the Jews to deliver them, in order to be kept within the tower of Antonia, where they had been lodged before, till Vitellius committed them to the custody of the Jews. But they giving good security for them, were permitted to send Deputies to Rome on this affair, who by the credit and good offices of young Agrippa, so managed matters, that they were maintained in the possession of their privilege, and the pontifical ornaments were continued in their custody.

In the year of J. C. 48. Herod King of Chalcis, and Uncle to young Agrippa, dying, the Emperor gave his dominions to this Prince, who notwithstanding did not go into Judæa till four years after, that is to say, in the year of J. C. 53. when Claudius taking from him the kingdom of Chalcis, gave him the provinces of Gaulanitis, Trachonitis, Batanæa, Paneas, and Abylene, which formerly had been in the possession of Lysanias.

After the death of Claudius, his successor Nero, who had a great affection for Agrippa, to his other dominions added Julias in Perœa, and that part of Galilee to which Tarichæa and Tiberias belonged. Festus, Governour of Judæa, coming to his Government, in the year of J. C. 60. King Agrippa and Berenice his Sister went as far as Cæsarea to salute him; and as they continued there for some time, Festus talked with the King concerning the affair of S. Paul, who had been seized on in the Temple about two years before, and within few days before his visit had appealed unto the Emperor.

[Acts xxv. 13, 14, &seq.] Agrippa said to Festus, I have long desired to hear this Man speak. To-morrow, answer'd Festus, you shall hear him. On the morrow therefore, when Agrippa was come and Berenice with great pomp, and were enter'd into the place of Audience, Paul was brought forth, and Festus said, King Agrippa, and all Men which are here present with us, ye see this Man about whom all the multitude of the Jews have dealt with me, both here and at Jerusalem, representing to me with great instances and cries that he ought not to live any longer; but when I found upon examination that he had committed nothing worthy of death, and that he himself had appealed unto Augustus, I determined to send him, of whom I have no certain thing to write, unto my Lord; wherefore I have brought him forth before you, and especially before thee, O King Agrippa, that, after examination had, I might have somewhat to write; for it seemeth to me unreasonable to send a Prisoner, and not withal to signify the crimes laid against him.

[Acts xxvi. 1, 2, &c.] Then Agrippa said unto Paul, Thou art permitted to speak for thyself: Hereupon Paul stretched forth his hand, and answer'd for himself, I think myself happy, King Agrippa, because I shall answer for myself this day before thee, touching all the things whereof I am accused of the Jews; especially because I know thee to be expert in all customs and questions which are among the Jews, wherefore I beseech thee to hear me 1 Joseph. Antiq. l. 19. c. 7. & l. 20 c. 1. & seq. & l. 2. de bell. c. 21, 22, 23. In the Year of J. C. 44. me patiently. After this he declared he was in bonds only for maintaining the Hope of Israel, that is to say, the Resurrection of the Dead. Then addressing himself to Agrippa, Does it seem to thee a thing incredible, says he, that God should raise the Dead?

After this he related the several persecutions which he had promoted against Christians, and the miraculous manner wherein God had converted him while he was going to Damascus, with a design of searching after and imprisoning them. While he was speaking of the Resurrection, and the Apparition he had seen in his way to Damascus, Festus said with a loud voice, Paul thou art beside thyself, much learning hath made thee mad. To this Paul answer'd, I am not mad, most noble Festus; but speak forth the word of Truth and Soberness: For the King knoweth of these things; for this thing was not done in a corner. King Agrippa, believest thou the Prophets? I know that thou believest. Then Agrippa said unto Paul, Almost thou persuadest me to be a Christian. And Paul said, I would to God that not only thou, but also all that hear me this day, were both almost, and altogether such as I am, except these bonds. Then the King, and all that sat with him rising up, Agrippa said to Festus, this Man might have been set at liberty, if he had not appealed unto Cæsar.

Agrippa deprived Joseph Cabeï of the High priesthood, and gave it to Ananus[6], in the year of Jesus Christ 62. This was that Ananus who put to death James Minor in Jerusalem, near the time of the Passover[7]. But this action gave such general disgust to all, that Agrippa took from him the High-priesthood, which he had enjoyed but three months, and gave it to Jesus, the Son of Damnæus. Some time after he allowed the Levites, who were appointed to sing in the Temple, to wear the linen robe, which had hitherto been reserved for the use only of the Priests. And as part only of the Levites were employed in singing, and the rest were taken up with other offices in the Temple: He permitted these too to learn to sing, that so they might have their share in that Privilege which he had granted to the others.

While every thing was disposed for a Rebellion in Judæa, Agrippa did all he could to quiet the minds of the People, and incline them to peace. But his endeavours were too unsuccessful; he for some time indeed suspended, but could not intirely suppress the passion of the Jews, who were exasperated, and drove to the last extremities by the cruelties and insolence of their Governors. They declared openly against the Romans, in the year of Jesus Christ 66, and Agrippa was forced to join his troops with those of Rome, to reduce his Countrymen, and assist in taking of Jerusalem. After the destruction of this City, he retired to Rome with his Sister Berenice, with whom he had always lived in an indiscreet manner, which had given occasion for much talk very little to the advantage of either of them. He died at about seventy years of Age, towards the year 90[8].

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Vide Joseph. Antiq. l. 18. c. 7, 8, & seq. Et de Bello, l. 2. c. 15.

The Attick Drachma may be valued at eight Pence and one Denier, and consequently twenty thousand Drachma's make 8082 Livres French*, or about 700 Pounds.*

In the year of J.C. 36. Joseph. Antiq. l. 18. c. 8. & de bello, l. 2. c. 15.

Joseph. Antiq. l. 19. c. 4.

Antiq. l. 19. c. 7. & Acts xii. 19, &c.

Antiq. l. 20. c. 8.

In the year of J. C. 62. See Euseb. l. 2. c. 23. Hist. Eccl. Joseph Antiq. l. 20. c. 8.

M. de Tillemont's Destruction of the Jews, Art. 83. p. 589. & Not. 41.

Agrippias

[Prov. xxx. 1.] AGRIPPIAS. Herod the Great, to do honour to his friend Agrippa, the favourite of Augustus, gave this name to the Town of Anthedon[1], lying upon the Mediterranean, between Raphia and Gaza. See ANTHEDON.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Joseph. Antiq. l. 13. c. 21.

Agur

AGUR. We read a Chapter in the book of Proverbs with this title, The words of Agur the Son of Jakeh, which, according to the signification of the original terms, may be translated thus, Verba congregantis, filii vomentis; or according to Lewis de Dieu, The words of him who has recollected himself, the Son of obedience. The generality of the Fathers and Commentators will have it, that Solomon describes himself under the name of Agur the Son of Jakeh[1]. Others conjecture that Agur as well as Lemuel, in Chap. xxxi. 1. were wise Men who lived in the time of Solomon, and were his Interlocutors in the book of Proverbs, an Opinion without the least shew of probability. This book is nothing like a Dialogue. It is likely enough that Agur was an inspired Author, different from Solomon, whose sentences it was thought convenient to join with those of this Prince, because of the conformity of their matter. What could ever have obliged Solomon to disguise his name in this place? for what reason could he have chang'd his style and manner of writing in this Chapter only? for it is certain that the thirtieth Chapter of Proverbs is penn'd in a way very different from the rest of the book: Besides, could it become Solomon to say as this Author does in the second verse, Surely I am more brutish than any man, and have not the Understanding of a man. And to speak after this manner to God, Give me neither Poverty nor Riches: Certainly these words are not consistent with the dignity of a King like Solomon. But who then was Agur? when and where did he live? This is what no one has yet been ever able to tell us.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ita Patres, Beda, Lyra, Hugo, Dionys. Carthus. Arboreus, Rab. Solom. Cornel. Tir. alii.

Ahab (1)

[1 Kings xvi. 29. Ch. xvii.] 1. AHAB, King of Israel, the Son and Successor of Omri. He reigned two and twenty years, from the year of the World 3086 to 3107. He did evil in the sight of of the Lord, and exceeded all who went before him in impiety. He married Jezebel, the Daughter of Ethbaal, King of the Zidonians, who introduced the Idols Baal and Astarte among the Israelites, and engaged Ahab in the worship of these false Gods. God being provok'd by his sins, sent the Prophet Elijah to him, who declared to him that there would be a Famine of three years continuance; after which he retired, left King Ahab, or Jezebel his Queen, should procure his death. The Dearth having lasted for three years, Ahab sent Obadiah, who was Governor of his house, to look for some good pasture in the Country, that he might preserve some at least of his Cattle. In his journey [1 Kings xviii.] he met Elijah, who commanded him to go and tell Ahab that Elijah was there. Ahab came immediately, and said to the Prophet, Art thou he that troubleth Israel? And he answer'd, I have not troubled Israel, but thou and thy Father's house, in that thou hast forsaken the Commandments of the Lord, and hast followed Baalim.

He afterwards desired him to gather all the People unto Mount Carmel, and with them the Prophets of Baal; and when they were thus assembled, Elijah caused fire to descend from Heaven upon his sacrifice, as we shall see in the Article of ELIJAH. After this he obtained of God that it should rain, and the Earth recover its former fertility. This happen'd in the year of the World 3096, before J. C. 904, before the vulgar Æra 908.

Six years after, that is to say, in the year of the World 3103, Ben-hadad, King of [Ch. xx.] Syria, laid siege unto Samaria, and sent Ambassadors to Ahab in the City with this message, Thy Silver and thy Gold are mine, thy Wives also and thy Children, even the goodliest, are mine. To this the King of Israel answer'd, My Lord, O King, according to thy saying, I am thine and all that I have. And the Messengers came again from Benhadad, saying in their Master's name, Thou shalt deliver me thy Silver and thy Gold, and thy Wives and thy Children; and I will send my Servants to-morrow unto thee about this time, and they shall search thine house, and the houses of thy Servants, and it shall be that whatsoever is pleasant in thine eyes, they shall put it in thine hand and take it away. Then Ahab called all the Elders of the land, and said, Mark, I pray you, and see how this Man seeketh mischief. I have yielded to all that he at first demanded, and he is not content with what is mine, but will have likewise what belongs unto my Subjects. And all the Elders and all the People said unto him, Hearken not to him nor consent. The Ambassadors of Ben-hadad returning to him, reported the resolution of the Samaritans. Whereupon he sent to Ahab, and said, The Gods do so to me, and more also, if the dust of Samaria shall suffice for handfuls for all the People that follow me. To which Ahab replied, Let not him that girdeth on his harness, boast himself as he that putteth it off. Benhadad was drinking in the shade with other Kings that accompanied him when he receiv'd this answer, and said immediately to his People, Set yourselves in array, and they set themselves in array against the City. At the same time there came a Prophet unto Ahab, saying, Hast thou seen this great multitude? behold I will deliver it into thine hand this day, and thou shalt know that I am the Lord. And Ahab said, by whom? Even by the young men of the Princes of the Provinces. Ahab added, Who shall order the battle? And the Prophet answer'd Thou. Then Ahab reviewed the Princes of the Provinces, and found their number to be two hundred thirty two. After this he reviewed the People likewise that were in Samaria, and found that they amounted to seven thousand. They made a sally at noon day, while Ben-hadad was drinking, and overcharg'd with wine, and the two and thirty Kings that followed him were with him in the same condition. The young men of the Princes of the Provinces marched at the head of Ahab's little army. Ben-hadad had notice that Ahab's People were come out of the City, and he said, Whether they come to talk of Peace or to engage, take them all alive. The young men notwithstanding, followed by the inconsiderable army of Israel, advanced, and killed all that opposed them. Hereupon a panick terror seized on the Syrian army, and they all began to fly. Ben-hadad himself mounted his horse, and fled with his cavalry. Ahab seeing this, pursued the Run-aways, killed great numbers of them, and took a very considerable booty.

Then the Prophet of the Lord came to [Ch. xx. 22, &c. seq.] Ahab, to infuse new courage into him, and caution him to be upon his guard, because Ben-hadad would return against him the year following. Accordingly at the year's [In the Year of the World 3104, before J. C. 896, before the vulgar Æra 900.] end he return'd, and incamped at Aphek with a design of giving battle to the Israelites. The King of Israel march-ed against him with an Army much inferior in force and number; but a Prophet from God came and assured him of the victory. Both Armies were ranged in order of Battle for seven days successively. At last upon the seventh day the Combat began; the Israelites killed an hundred thousand of the Syrians, and the rest fled to Aphek. But as they were pressing to get into the City, the walls of Aphek fell upon them, and killed seven and twenty thousand more. Benhadad throwing himself upon upon the clemency of Ahab, this Prince received him into his own chariot, made an alliance with him, and permitted him to go, upon condition that Ahab should be allowed to make Streets and Market-places in Damascus, as Ben-hadad's Father had done before in Samaria.

This Clemency shewn so unseasonably, provoked the Lord. A certain Prophet said unto one of his companions, Smite me; and upon his refusal to do so, he said unto him, Because thou wouldst not smite me, as soon as thou art departed from me, a Lion shall slay thee. And as soon as he was departed from him a Lion found him and slew him. He said then to another Man Smite me, and the Man smote him and wounded him. The Prophet disguised himself with ashes upon his face to prevent his being known; and going to the King, said, Thy Servant went out into the midst of the Battle, and a Prisoner was deliver'd to my care with this Charge, Thou shalt answer for this Man with thy life, or shalt pay a talent of Silver: In the midst of the distraction and perplexity which I was then in, turning to one side and the other, the Man on a sudden disappeared. Ahab answer'd, You have pronounced your own sentence. Whereupon the Prophet wiping the dust from off his face, said to the King, Because thou hast let go out of thine hand a Man whom I had destined to utter destruction, therefore thy life shall go for his life, and thy People for his People. Ahab returned to Samaria in great indignation, without concerning himself much about the Prophet's Prediction. This happened in the year of the World 3104, before J. C. 896, before the vulgar Æra 900.

The year following 3105, Ahab desiring to make a Kitchen-garden near his Palace, requested of one Naboth, a Citizen of Jezreel, that he would sell him his Vineyard, because it lay convenient for him, and withal told him, that he would either give him a better, or would pay the value of it. The Lord forbid, said Naboth, that I should give the inheritance of my Fathers unto thee. Ahab therefore returned in great passion to his house, threw himself upon his bed, turned towards the wall, and would eat nothing. Jezebel his Wife coming in, asked the reason of his great concern, and being informed, she said, For one who is King of Israel, your Authority indeed is very great: Rise, eat, and take your rest, for I will undertake to put Naboth the Jezreelite's Vineyard into your possession. She immediately therefore wrote Letters in the name of Ahab, sealed them with the King's signet, and sent them to the Elders of Jezreel. The Letters were drawn up in these terms, Proclaim a fast, and set Naboth on high among the People. And set two Men, Sons of Belial, before him, to bear witness against him, saying, Thou didst blaspheme God and the King, and then carry him out and stone him, that he may die. These orders were but too punctually executed, and Ahab being informed of Naboth's death, immediately took possession of his Vineyard.

As he returned from Jezreel to Samaria, the Prophet Elijah, by God's direction, met him, and said, Hast thou killed, and also taken possession? Now thus saith the Lord, in the place where Dogs licked the blood of Naboth, shall Dogs lick thy blood, even thine. And Ahab said to him, Hast thou found me, O my Enemy! And he answer'd, I have found thee: Because thou hast sold thy self to work evil in the sight of the Lord, behold I will bring evil upon thee, and upon all thy Family. If Ahab dies in the City the Dogs shall eat him, if in the Fields the Fowls of the air shall eat him. And for Jezebel, of her the Lord spake, saying, The Dogs shall eat Jezebel by the way of Jezreel. Ahab hearing these words, rent his clothes, and put sackcloth upon his Flesh, and fasted, and lay in sackcloth, and went softly. Then the Lord said to the Prophet Elijah, Seest thou how Ahab humbleth himself before me? Because he humbleth himself before me, I will not bring the evil in his days, but in his Son's days will I bring the evil upon his house. But as Ahab's Repentance was neither sincere nor persevering, God nothwithstanding inflicted some part of this punishment upon his Person, but did not extirpate his Family till the reign of his Son Ahaziah, as we shall see in another place.

Two years after Jehoshaphat, King of Judah, making Ahab a visit in Samaria, at a [In the Year of the World 3107, before J.C. 893, before the vulgar Æra 897. 1 Kings xxii.] time when he was preparing to attack Ramoth-gilead, which Ben-hadad, King of Syria, unjustly detained from him, the King of Israel invited him to accompany him in this Expedition, which Jehoshaphat consented to, but wished that some Prophet of the Lord might be first consulted. Ahab therefore assembled all the Prophets of Baal, in number about four hundred, who all concurr'd in saying, Go up, for the Lord shall deliver Ramoth-gilead into the hand of the King. And Jehoshaphat said, Is there not here a Prophet of the Lord besides, that we might enquire of him? Ahab said, there is one, Micaiah the Son of Imlah, but he doth not prophesy good concerning me, but evil. And Jehoshaphat said, Let not the King say so. Micaiah therefore was called. In the mean time the two Kings were in an open place near the gate of Samaria, seated each upon his throne, dressed with a Magnificence truly royal, and all the Prophets of Baal were about them, counterfeiting inspired Persons; and one among the rest, Zedekiah, the Son of Chenaanah, making himself self horns of iron, said, Thus saith the Lord, With these shalt thou push the Syrians, until thou hast consumed them. The rest also prophesied the same, each after his particular manner, and exhorted the Kings to march resolutely against Ramoth-gilead.

Ahab's officer, who went in search for Micaiah, told him, that the Prophets all foretold nothing but prosperity to the two Kings; Let thy word therefore, said he, be like the word of one of them, and speak that which is good. And Micaiah said, As the Lord liveth, that which the Lord saith unto me, that will I speak. He went therefore to Ahab, who asked him whether he should march against Ramoth-gilead. Go, said Micaiah, and prosper, for the Lord shall deliver it into thine hand. The King added, I adjure thee, that thou tell me nothing but that which is true, in the name of the Lord. Then Micaiah, putting on a more serious air, said, I saw all Israel scattered upon the hills, as Sheep that have no Shepherd; and the Lord said, These have no master, let them return every man to his house in peace. Then Ahab said to Jehoshaphat, Did I not tell thee, that he would prophesy no good concerning me, but evil? Micaiah added, Hear thou therefore the word of the Lord, I saw the Lord sitting upon his throne, and all the host of Heaven standing by him, on his right hand and on his left; and the Lord said, Who shall persuade Ahab, that he may go up and fall at Ramoth gilead ? And one said on this manner, and another said on that manner. And then came forth a Spirit, and stood before the Lord and said, I will persuade him. And the Lord said unto him, wherewith? And he said, I will go forth, and I will be a lying Spirit in the mouth of all his Prophets. And he said, Thou shalt persuade him and prevail also; go forth and do so. It is this evil Spirit, which hath animated all thy Prophets, who endeavour only to engage thee in that which will be thy ruin.

At the same time Zedekiah the Son of Chenaanah smote Micaiah on the cheek, and said, Which way went the Spirit of the Lord to speak unto thee? And Micaiah answered, Behold thou shalt see in that day, when thou shalt go into an inner chamber to hide thy self. Then Ahab gave orders to his people to secure Micaiah, and carry him to Amon the Governour of the City, and to Joash the King's Son, and say, in his name, Put this fellow in prison, and feed him with the bread of affliction, and with the water of affliction, until I come in peace. And Micaiah said, If thou return at all in peace, the Lord hath not spoken by me. And he said, Hearken, O people, every one of you. Ahab therefore, and Jehoshaphat marched against Ramoth-gilead, and the King of Israel said to Jehoshaphat, I will disguise my self, and enter into the battle; but put thou on thy robes. For he knew that the King of Syria had commanded two and thirty Captains that had rule over his chariots, saying, Fight neither with small nor great, save only with the King of Israel. These officers therefore having observed King Jehoshaphat to be dressed in royal robes, took him for the King of Israel, and fell all upon him with great impetuosity; so that this Prince seeing himself pressed so closely, cried out; this discovered him, and when he was known, he was pursued no longer by the Captains of the King of Syria.

But God, in order to fulfil his word, permitted one of the Syrian army to shoot a random arrow, which pierced the heart of Ahab: He said therefore to his charioteer, Turn thine hand, and carry me out of the host, for I am wounded. The battle lasted the whole day, and Ahab continued in his chariot with his face turned against the Syrians. In the mean while his blood was still issuing from his wound, and falling on his chariot; and in the evening he died. Then proclamation was made by sound of trumpet throughout the army, that every man should return to his own city and country. The King of Israel therefore being dead, was carried to Samaria, and there buried. His chariot, and the reins of his horses were washed in the fish-pool of Samaria, and the dogs licked his blood, according to the Lord's prediction. Such was the end of Ahab, in the year of the world 3107. before J. C. 893. before the vulgar Æra 897. Ahaziah his Son succeeded him.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ahab (II)

II. AHAB, the Son of Kolaiah, is one of the two false Prophets who seduced the Israelites [Jer. xxix. 21, 22.] at Babylon. The Lord threatned them by Jeremiah, with delivering them up to Nebuchadnezzar King of Babylon, who should put them to death in the presence of those who had been deceived by them; and that all the people should make use of their name, when they would curse any one, saying, The Lord make thee like Ahab and Zedekiah, whom the King of Babylon roasted in the fire.

The Rabbins, who in this particular are followed by several expositors, believe these two to be those Elders of Judah, who endeavoured to corrupt the chaste Susanna, and upon their unjust accusation procured [Dan. xiii. 1, 2, 3.] her condemnation. But Daniel, by inspiration from God, discovered their wickedness to the people, and they were stoned. This last circumstance, which is set down in express terms in[1] Daniel, destroys the opinion of the Rabbins, who confound these two Elders with Ahab and Zedekiah; these last were roasted in the fire, the others were stoned.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

The Text does not say literally that they were stoned; but only that they were treated as they would have used their neighbour; and that they were put to death according to the law of Moses. Now the law condemns Adulterers to be stoned; and as this was the punishment which they would have had Susannah suffer, they were made to undergo the same in the way of retaliation.

Aharah

AHARAH, the third Son of Benjamin, 1 Chron. viii. 1.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Aharhel

AHARHEL, the Son of Harum, 1 Chr. iv. 8.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ahasuerus (I)

I. AHASUERUS, Dan. ix. 1. otherwise called Astyages, (Dan. xiii. 65.) and Artaxerxes, (Dan. vi. 1. in the Greek.) See hereafter the article of ASTYAGES.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ahasuerus (II)

II. AHASUERUS. This Prince was born about the year of the Julian Period 4165. of the world 3455. before J. C. 545. before the vulgar Æra 549. After the death of Cambyses King of Persia, in the year of the world 3482. Seven Magi of the country usurped the sovereign authority[1], pretending that Smerdis, the Son of Cyrus, and Brother of Cambyses, was living, and that it was he who reigned. But Ostanes, one of the great men of Persia, having enquired of his daughter, who was one of the King's concubines, whether he who reigned, that is, the first of the Magi, had ears or not, (for Cyrus, or, according to others, Cambyses, had cut them off) she answered he had none. Then he knew that the Magi, and not Smerdis, were in possession of the kingdom[2].

Ostanes communicated this to the principal Lords of the Court, who having engaged themselves by oath to kill the King, immediately departed, and went to the palace. They forthwith dispatched all those whom they met with, and being come to the apartment of the Magi, they attacked them: These defended themselves and wounded two of the Conspirators; but the Conspirators being the strongest, one of them, called Gobryas, laid hold of the principal of the Magi, and as his companions were apprehensive of wounding him instead of the Magus, because this business was acted in an obscure place, Gobryas cried out to them, and bid them pierce the enemy thro' his own body, lest they should miss him. But Providence so ordered it that the Magus was killed, and Gobryas not so [In the Year of the World 3483. before J. C. 517. before the vulg. Æra 521.] much as wounded. Thus these seven conspirators delivered their Country from the oppression of these usurpers.

Six days after the seven conspirators met to deliberate upon the form of government which they should establish in Persia; Ostanes was for a Democracy, or popular Government; Megabysus for an Oligarchy, [Dan. xiii. 61.] that is for a Government to be lodged in the hands of some few chosen persons; and Darius the Son of Hystaspes, whom we call Ahasuerus, for Monarchy, or a regal Government. The last opinion carried it; and they agreed that the next day, before the rising of the Sun, they should all meet on horseback at the same place, and that he whose horse should first salute the Sun by neighing, should be acknowledged King of Persia, and successor to Cambyses. Darius's Groom hearing this, in the evening carried his Master's horse with a mare to the place where they were to meet; so that the next day as soon as Darius's horse came thither, the smell and sense of what had passed there the evening before, set him a neighing, which was worth a kingdom to his Master; for immediately the other six conspirators dismounted, and saluted him by the title of King of Persia[3].

[In the Year of the World 3485. Hag. i. 115. ii. 2-9, 10. Zech. i. 1-6. Ezra iv. 16. Ezra v. 1, 4, 5, 6, 11.] Darius being thus seated in the throne of Cambyses, married Atharsa, Daughter to Cyrus the founder of this Monarchy, and who had been first of all Wife to Cambyses, then to the Magus who had usurped the Crown[4]. In the second year of his reign, the Jews who had returned to Palestine, encouraged by the exhortations of the Prophets Haggai and Zachary, began to set about rebuilding of the Temple, which work had been interrupted nine years before, under the reign of Cambyses. Hereupon the Governours of the Province sent thither by the Persians, came and demanded by what authority they undertook to rebuild this Edifice? The Jews answer'd, in pursuance of an Edict published by Cyrus in their favour, who permitted them to undertake this work. In the mean while, these Governours wrote to Darius concerning this affair, and told him that Cyrus's Edict should be at Babylon, desiring to receive his orders. Darius gave directions to enquire after the Edict, and having found it at Ecbatane, he confirmed it, and commanded his Officers to assist the Jews in the execution of this design; and to furnish them with things necessary for their Sacrifices, and for the fabrick of the Temple. These orders were obeyed, and in a little time the work of the Temple was advanced very considerably.

[Esth. i. 1, 2, 3, &c.] The next year Ahasuerus made a feast for the principal persons of his Empire, in the palace of Shushan, wherein he shewed the utmost magnificence. The feast was continued for an hundred and fourscore days, days, or six months intire. After this term the King invited all the People, great and small, that were present in Shushan the Palace, and commanded that preparations should be made to entertain them for seven days. Nothing could equal the splendor and magnificence of this Banquet. The Entertainment itself, and the manner wherein it was set out, was suitable to the grandeur of the most powerful Monarch in the World. Vashti the Queen treated likewise the Women in the King's Palace. Upon the seventh day Ahasuerus being more gay than usual, and well warmed with wine, ordered his principal Eunuchs to bring the Queen, and produce her before the People, that they might have an opportunity to observe her beauty; for she was perfectly handsome: But Vashti refused to come, which so provok'd the King that he call'd his Council to consult what their opinion was of Vashti's behaviour: They declared that she had not only offended the King, but that her disobedience to his Orders might engage other Women to use their Husbands in the same manner, and that their advice was for the King's divorcing her, and taking another Wife.

This counsel was followed, and Esther, the Niece of Mordecai, a Jew by Nation, was made choice of to be wedded to Ahasuerus, as we shall see in another place. Mordecai did not declare who he was, but was contented to stay at the Palace-gate, to enquire after his Niece Esther's health. Nevertheless, when Haman had obtain'd an Edict from the King, condemning all the Jews to death and confiscation of their Estates, he engaged Esther to wait on the King, and petition for a revocation of this Edict. Now Ahasuerus had forbidden all Persons whatever, upon pain of death, to come before him, unless sent for, or unless he held out his sceptber towards them when [Esth. v. 1, 2, 3, &c. seq.] they came near his Throne. Esther run the hazard of appearing without being called: The King extended his sceptber towards her, and desired her to let him know what it was that she requested of him. Esther humbly entreated him to come that very day to an Entertainment which she had provided for him, and to bring Haman with him. Ahasuerus came, and the repast being ended, he commanded Esther to ask what she pleased of him, and it should be granted. Esther said, that the only favour she had to beg of him was, that he would come again with Haman the next day to an Entertainment which she would prepare for him; to which Ahasuerus consented; and Haman, who thought himself at the height of all his good fortune, had no other uneasiness than that of observing that Mordecai did not prostrate himself before him as he pass'd by.In the mean time something happened [Ch. vi. 1, 2, 3, &c.] which extremely humbled him. The King the night following could not sleep, and ordered the several Journals and Annals of the years preceding to be read to him. They fell upon that particular part wherein it was related how two Eunuchs having conspired to take away the King's life, one Mordecai discover'd the Conspiracy, and preserved him. Ahasuerus interrupted the Reader, and asked if Mordecai had been rewarded. He was answer'd no, that Mordecai had received no recompence at all. The next morning early Haman came to the King's Levée, to desire that Mordecai might be hanged upon a gibbet which he had provided for this purpose: Ahasuerus gave orders for his admission, and before he spoke, said to him, What shall be done unto the Man whom the King delighteth to honour? Haman, who believed that all this favour was intended for himself, replied, Let this Man be dressed in the royal robes, let him be mounted on the same horse which the King himself generally rides, and let a royal Diadem be placed upon his Head; let the principal Person of all the great Men belonging to the Court hold the reins of his horse, and walk before him to the most publick part of the City, proclaiming all the way, Thus shall it be done to the Man whom the King delighteth to honour. The King answer'd, Make haste and serve Mordecai the Jew in the manner you have mentioned. Haman did not dare to disobey the King, and Mordecai received an unexpected honour, which was not at all agreeable to him, by reason of the danger to which he saw all his Brethren expos'd.

In the mean while, Dinner-time being come, enquiry was made for Haman, who was to bear the King company at the Entertainment which Esther had prepar'd for them. Ahasuerus in the heat of his Wine, said again as he had done before to Esther, [Ch. vii. 1, 2, 3, &c.] What is it that you would ask or desire of me? She replied, If I have found favour in thy sight, O King, let my life and my People's be given me at my petition, for we have all been given up to be destroyed, and utterly extirpated. The King answer'd, And who is it that dare undertake what you mention? Esther said, This Haman whom you see is our mortal Enemy. Haman hearing this, was quite confounded, and the King at the same time rose up in passion, left the place where they were entertain'd, and went into the Garden, which was near. Then Haman threw himself at the Queen's feet, who was lying upon the bed, on which, after the manner of the Persians, she had been been eating. Ahasuerus at that instant returning, and seeing Haman on the Queen's bed, What, said he, will he force the Queen also before me in my own house? As the word went out of the King's mouth, they cover'd Haman's face, looking on him as one condemned to die. Then one of the King's Eunuchs said before the King, Behold also the Gallows fifty cubits high, which Haman had made for Mordecai. Then the King said, Hang him thereon.

[Esth. viii. 1, 2, &c.] After this he gave Haman's Employments to Mordecai, and his forfeited estate to Esther. He cancell'd the Edict which appointed a general massacre of the Jews to be upon the thirteenth day of the month Adar, gave Letters to the contrary, and permitted them to take vengeance on their Enemies on the very day which had been appointed for their destruction. All this was transacted in the years of the World 3494, 3495, 3496. As the rest of Darius's life has no relation to any part of sacred History, we shall not enlarge upon his Wars and Conquests. This Prince died in the year of the World 3519, before J.C. 481, before the vulgar Æra 485, after a Reign of six and thirty years. He was succeeded by Xerxes, whom he had by Atharsa or Vashti, of whom there has been mention made in the beginning of this Article.

We have adhered to that opinion which explains what the Scripture tells us of Ahasuerus, Esther's Husband, as relating to Darius, the Son of Hystaspes: Notwithstanding, as the matter is not without difficulty, we shall here propose what Dr. Prideaux has written against this opinion, and in favour of his own, which is, that Artaxerxes Longimanus was he whom the Scripture calls Ahasuerus, Esther's Spouse. Herein he differs, as he himself acknowledges, from two great Men, Usher and Joseph Scaliger. Usher believes that Ahasuerus was Darius, the Son of Hystaspes; and Scaliger that he was Xerxes. I shall here set down what he says against Usher's opinion, and consequently against our system, since we have adopted that of Usher, tho' not in every thing, as may be seen by our Comment.

Usher believes that Darius, the Son of Hystaspes, married Atossa, who is the same as Vashti, afterwards divorced by him, and that he took to Wife likewise Aristone, the Daughter of Cyrus, and Widow of Cambyses, who is the same as Esther. But this opinion is contradicted by Herodotus[5], who informs us that Aristone was the Daughter of Cyrus, and consequently could not be Esther, who was young. He says farther[6], that Atossa had four Sons by Darius, without reckoning Daughters, and that she had all along so great an ascendant over him, as to prevail with him to declare her Son Xerxes his Successor, to the exclusion of his own Sons.

We foresaw this objection in our Comment upon Esther[7]; and without venturing to say who Vashti was that was divorced by Ahasuerus, we have shewn that neither Atossa, whom we take to be the Daughter of Cyrus, nor Aristone, who was a virgin when he married her, and might well be Esther, that neither of them were dismiss'd by Ahasuerus. Herodotus says expressly in his third book that the Daughter of Cyrus, and Wife of Darius, was Atossa[8].

[Ch. x. 1.] Dr. Prideaux adds[9], that the principal reason which engaged Usher in the opinion by him maintain'd, is the Saying in the book of Esther, that Darius, the Son of Hystaspes, laid a tribute upon the Land, and upon the isles of the Sea, which we read likewise in Herodotus[10]. But Strabo[11] attributes this to Darius Longimanus, which our Author would have us explain of Artaxerxes Longimanus.

As for Scaliger[12], he thinks Xerxes is the Ahasuerus of the Scripture, and his Wife Amestris Queen Esther. He grounds his belief only upon the resemblance of Names: But the several marks wherewith History describes Amestris, prove invincibly that she is by no means the Esther of the Scripture. Amestris, the Wife of Xerxes, had a Son by this Prince, who was of age to marry in the seventh year of his Father's Reign[13]. She could not therefore be Esther, who was not married till the seventh year of his Reign. There is nothing more necessary to destroy Scaliger's opinion.

Let us now enquire into the reasons brought by Dr. Prideaux for Artaxerxes Longimanus. In the first place he shews that Josephus[14] in express terms assures us that Artaxerxes Longimanus was Esther's Husband. The version of the Septuagint, and the Greek additions to the book of Esther, call Ahasuerus Artaxerxes. There are several circumstances in these additions which cannot be applied to Artaxerxes Mnemon: The extraordinary favour wherewith Artaxerxes Longimanus honour'd the Jews, proves farther, that in all probability he had married a Jewess. This opinion is maintained by Sulpitius Severus, and many both of the Antients and Moderns. This is what is urged in behalf of this opinion. See likewise our Preface to Esther.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Val. Max. l.9. c. 2. Ammian. Marcell. l.23.
Vide Justin. l.9. Herodot. l.3. Ctesiam, &c.
Herod. l.3. c. 80——88. Justin. l.3.
Justin. l.1. Herodot. l.3. c.88.
Herodot. l. 3 & 7.
Herodot. l. 7. sub initium.
Comment. sur Esther i. 9.
Herodot. l. 3. c. 68 & 88.
Prideaux's History of the Jews, Part 1. Book 4.
Herodot. l. 3. c. 89.
Strabo, l. 15.
Scalig. de emendat. temp. l. 9.
Herodot. l. 9.

Joseph. Antiq. l. 11. c. 6.

Ahava

AHAVA, a river of Babylonia, or rather [Ezra vii. 15.] of Assyria, where Ezra gathered those Captives into a body, whom he brought with him into Judæa. We are of opinion, that the river Ahava is that which ran along the Adiabene, where the river Diava, or Adiava, is known to be, upon which Ptolemy places the City of Abane or Aavane. This is probably the Country called in the books of [2 Kings xvii. 24. xviii. 34. xix. 13. Ch. xvii. 31.] Kings, Ava, from whence the Kings of Assyria translated the people called Avites into Palestine; where likewise in their room they settled some of the captive Israelites. Ezra intending to pick up as many Israelites as he could, to carry back with him to Judæa, made a halt in the country of Ava, or Ahava, from whence he sent emissaries into the Caspian mountains, to invite such Jews as were there to be found, to come and join him. The history of Izates King of the Adiabenians, and his mother [Ezra viii. 17.] Helena, who became converts to Judaism some years after the death of Jesus Christ, is an argument to persuade us, that there were still at that time many Jews in that country.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ahaz

AHAZ, King of Judah, the Son of Jotham, is celebrated for his impieties and vices. There are some difficulties about the age he was of when he began to reign.[1] [In the Year of the World 3262, before J. C. 738, before the vulgar Æra 742.] The Text expresses that he was twenty years of age: But how is this to be reconciled with what is said in the same place, that he reigned but sixteen years? from whence it must be necessarily concluded, that he lived but thirty six years. We know however that his Son Hezekiah was five and twenty years of age when he began to reign; it must be said therefore, that his Father Ahaz begat him when as yet he was eleven years old only; and accordingly, many good Commentators[2] do maintain this. They who cannot be of this opinion, study different ways whereby to disengage themselves out of this perplexity; as may be seen in the several comments upon the second Book of Kings.

Ahaz walked in the ways of the Kings of Israel and Samaria; that is to say, he gave himself up to idolatry and all manner of disorders. One of his Sons he consecrated, by making him pass through, and perish by the fire, in honour of the false God Moloch, according to the Idolatry of those nations, which God destroyed, when the Children of Israel entred into the land of Canaan. He [2 Kings xxi. 1, 2, 3, &c.] offered sacrifices and incense upon the high places, upon hills and in groves. About the end of Jotham, King of Judah's reign, the Lord began to send against Judah, Rezin King of Syria, and Pekah King of Israel. [Ch. xv. ult.] But these two Kings made inroads into the country principally under Ahaz, and having made great havock there, they first defeated the troops of Ahaz, and then laid [2 Kings xvi. 1, 5.] siege to Jerusalem. When they found they could not make themselves masters of it, [2 Chron. xxviii. 5,] they divided their Army, and began to plunder every where, and make prisoners. [& seq. Isai. vii. 1.] Rezin and his part of the Army, marched with all their spoil to Damascus; but that of Pekah having in one Battel only killed an hundred and twenty thousand men of Ahaz's army, took besides two hundred thousand persons in the country, without distinction of Men, Women or Children. As they were carrying all these Captives to Samaria, the Prophet Oded, with the principal inhabitants of the City, came out to meet them, and prevailed with them, by their remonstrances, to set their prisoners at liberty. They not only did this, but gave them likewise something to eat, restored the booty which they had taken, and those who were not able to perform the journey on foot, were conveyed in carriages to Jericho.

[In the Year of the World 3263. before J. C. 737. before the vulg. Æra 741. 2 Chron. xxviii. 17, 18.] About the same time the Philistines and Edomites spread themselves like an inundation over the territories of Ahaz, committed a thousand disorders, killed abundance of people, and carried off much booty. In these sad circumstances, and before the siege of Jerusalem, the Prophet [Isai. vii. 1, 2, & seq.] Isaiah went to Ahaz, foretold the deliverance of his country, and the destruction of his enemies. To prove the truth of his prediction, he gave him the liberty of choosing what prodigy he pleased. But Ahaz refused, and said he would not tempt the Lord. " Hear then, said Isaiah, O " House of David, is it a small thing " for you to weary men, but must ye " weary my God also? Behold the sign " which the Lord shall give you, a Virgin shall conceive and bear a Son, and " shall call his name Immanuel. Butter " and Honey shall he eat, that he may " know to refuse the Evil, and choose " the Good." At the same time Isaiah, as a demonstration of the approaching ruin of Rezin and Pekah, gave him his Son Hash-baz, and assured him, that before this Child should be able to call his Father or his Mother by their names, the two Kings who were confederated against Judah, should be slain.

[2 Kings xvi. 7.] But as Ahaz did not change his life, God permitted his Enemies to return again the year following, 3263, and lay waste all the Kingdom of Judah. Then Ahaz seeing no other remedy for his affairs, sent Ambassadors to Tiglath-pileser King of the Assyrians, with commission to say from him, I am thy Servant, and thy Son, come up and save me out of the hands of the King of Syria, and the King of Israel, which rise up against me. And having amassed together all the Gold and Silver which was in the Temple and the Palace, he sent it to the King of Assyria. Immediately therefore Tiglath-pileser marched to the assistance of Ahaz, attacked Rezin, killed him, took his Capital Damascus, destroyed it, removed the inhabitants of it to Cyreve, or rather, into that part of Iberia thro' which the river Cyrus runs. Ahaz went as far as Damascus to meet the King of Assyria; and having seen there a profane Altar, he sent a model of it to the High-Priest Urijah, that he might have one made like it, and placed in the Temple of Jerusalem. Accordingly, when Ahaz returned thither, he had the Altar removed which was in the Temple, and this fixed there in the room of it. Upon this new Altar he offered Sacrifices, and commanded the High-Priest Urijah never for the future to offer upon any other. He ordered also the bases to be taken away, which were adorned with fine engravings, and the levers of brass which rested on them: He removed likewise the brazen Sea, which was supported by Oxen of the same metal, and commanded them to be placed below, upon the pavement of the Temple. The misfortunes which he saw himself exposed to made him not at all better. In the time [2 Chron. xxviii. 22, 23, &c.] of his greatest affliction, he shewed the highest contempt of God. He sacrificed to the Syrian Gods, whom he looked upon as the authors of his calamities, and undertook to make them propitious to him, by honouring them in this manner. He broke in pieces the vessels of the House of God, shut up the gates of the Temple, and erected Altars in all parts of Jerusalem. He set up Altars likewise in all the cities of Judah, with a design to offer incense on them. At last he slept with his Fathers, and was buried in Jerusalem; but not in the Sepulchers of the Kings of Judah his Predecessors; this honour he was deprived of, because of his iniquities[3]. Hezekiah his Son reigned in his stead, in the year of the World 3278. before J. C. 722. before the vulgar Æra 726.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

See our Comment upon 2 Kings xvi. 2. Differt. in Reg. xvi. p. 920. Edit. Leid. 1682.

Vide Hieronym. Epist. ad Vitalem, & Samuel, Bochart.

Translators' note. Other Princes his Pre- decessors, as Jehoram and Joash, as well as Manasseh and Ammon, two of his Successors, for the same reason were treated with the same ignominy; and denied the privilege of being interr'd among the Kings their Predecessors.

Ahaz (2)

AHAZ, the Father of Jehoadah, 1 Chron. viii. 36.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ahaziah (I)

[1 Kings xxii. 40.] I. AHAZIAH, the Son and Successor of Ahab, King of Israel. He reigned two years, part alone, and part with his Father Ahab, who made him, as it is said, his Associate in the Kingdom, the year before his death[1]. Ahaziah imitated his Father's impiety, and paid his adorations to Baal and Astarte, the worship of whom had been introduced in Israel by Jezebel his Mother. The Scripture says that King Jehoshaphat having equipp'd a Fleet at Ezion-geber, Ahaziah desired leave for his servants to go with Jehoshaphat's to Ophir. Jehoshaphat, in all probability, at first might scruple it, since the first Book of Kings relates, that he would not consent to it. But the Chronicles shew sufficiently that these two Princes having together equipp'd a Fleet for Tarshish, God, provoked at the Alliance which Jehoshaphat had made with this impious King, permitted this Fleet to be so shattered by tempestuous winds, as to be disabled and unfit to perform the intended voyage.

The Moabites, who had always been obedient to the Kings of the ten Tribes, ever since their separation from the kingdom of Judah, revolted, after the death of Ahab, and refused to pay the ordinary tribute. Ahaziah had not leisure or power to reduce them; for about the same time having fallen from the terrass of his house, he hurt himself considerably, and sent his people to Ekron to consult Beelzebub concerning his indisposition. At the same time the Prophet, by God's appointment, met these messengers, and said to them, Is it because there is no God in Israel, that ye go thus and consult Beelzebub the God of Ekron? Therefore thus saith the Lord, Thou shalt not come down from that bed on which thou art gone up, but shalt surely die. Having said this he went away. Ahaziah's people returning to this Prince's palace, told what had happened to them. Ahaziah asked them what the figure and dress was of the Man who told them these things? They answered, He is an hairy Man, girt with a girdle of leather about his loins; and he said, It is Elijah the Tishbite.

Immediately he sent a Captain, with fifty soldiers under his command, to seize Elijah, and bring him to him: But the Captain having spoken in too imperious a manner to the man of God, Elijah called for fire from Heaven, which destroyed him and his fifty soldiers. Ahaziah being informed of this, sent another, who was in like manner consumed by fire from Heaven, together with his fifty soldiers. A third coming to him, fell upon his knees before him, and entreated him to preserve his life, and wait upon the King. Hereupon the Angel of the Lord suggested inwardly to the Prophet that he might go, and should fear nothing. Elijah therefore rose and went to Ahaziah, to whom he repeated what before he had told his People, that he should not recover of his disease. Accordingly he died, as the word of the Lord had declared. Jehoram his Brother reigned in his stead, in the year of the World 3108, before J.C. 892, before the vulgar Æra 896.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

He reigned from 3106. to 3108. Ahab died in 3107. before J. C. 893. before the vulgar Æra 897.

Ahaziah (2)

AHAZIAH, King of Judah, Son of Jehoram and Athaliah, succeeded his Father [2 Kings viii. 24. 2 Chr. xxii. 2.] in the Kingdom of Judah, in the year of the World 3119, before J.C. 881, before the vulgar Æra 885. He was two and twenty years old when he began to reign, and he reigned one year only at Jerusalem. He walked in the ways of Ahab's house, to which he was allied, his Mother being of this Family, and did evil in the sight of the Lord. This Prince was likewise called Jehoahaz and Azariah. The text of the Chronicles imports, that he was two and [17. Vide & vi. in Hebr.] forty years of age when he began to reign, wherein it differs from the text of the second book of Kings, which makes him to be two and twenty only; but this passage in the Chronicles is thought to be corrupted. Joram, King of Israel, going to attack Ramoth of Gilead, which the Kings of Syria had taken from the Kings his Predecessors, was there dangerously wounded, and carried by his own appointment to Jezreel, in order to be dressed. Ahaziah, [2 Kings viii. 28. ix. 21, 22. & 2 Chr. xxii. 2, 3, 4, 5. In the Year of the World 3120. before J.C. 880. before the Vulg. Æra 884.] Joram's friend and relation, accompanied him in this war, and came afterwards to visit him at Jezreel. In the mean time Jehu, the Son of Nimshi, whom Joram had left besieging the fortress of Ramoth, rebell'd against his Master, and set out with a design of extirpating the house of Ahab, according to the Lord's command. Joram and Ahaziah, who knew nothing of his intentions, went to meet him: Jehu shot Joram dead upon the spot; Ahaziah fled, but Jehu's People overtook him at the going up to Gur, which is near Ibleam, and mortally wounded him: Notwithstanding, he had strength enough to reach Megiddo, where he died. His Servants, having laid [In the Year of the World 3120. before J.C. 880. before the vulg. Æra 884.] him in his chariot, carried him to Jerusalem, where he was buried with his Fathers in the City of David. After this manner is this Accident related in the second book of Kings, Chap. ix. 21, 22, &c.

But in the Chronicles this story is told with some little difference. And it came to pass that when Jehu was executing judgment upon the house of Ahab, and found the Princes of Judah and the Sons of the Brethren of Ahaziah, that minister'd to Ahaziah, he slew them: And he sought Ahaziah, and they caught him, for he was hid in Samaria, and brought him to Jehu; and when they had slain him, they buried him, because, said they, he is the Son of Jehoshaphat. The better to reconcile the relation in the books of Kings with that in the Chronicles, it may be

[1] Epiphan. in lib. de vita & monte

VOL. I. Prophet. in Ahia. said that in the passage here produced by us, Samaria is put down not for the City, but the Kingdom of this name. Jehu being informed that Ahaziah was still in the Territories of Israel, and continued dangerously ill at Megiddo, not being able to reach the land of Judah, he gave orders for him to be brought into his presence and put to death. See the Commentators on the second book of Kings, Chap. ix. 22, 23, &c.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Aher

AHER, of the Tribe of Benjamin, was the Father of Hushim, 1 Chr. viii. 12.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ahi

AHI, the Son of Shomer, of the Tribe of Benjamin, 1 Chr. vii. 34.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ahiah (1)

AHIAH, Son of Shisha, and Solomon's Secretary, 1 Kings iv. 2.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ahiah (2)

AHIAH, Son to the High-priest [1 Sam. 3.] Ahitub, and successor in the sovereign Pontificate. When he died, he left this dignity to his Son Abimelech, who was put to death by Saul's order.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ahiah (3)

AHIAH, the Son of Naaman, of the Tribe of Benjamin.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ahiam

AHIAM, one of those brave Officers who had a command in David's Army, 2 Sam. xxiii. 33.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ahian

AHIAN, the Son of Shemida, 1 Chr. vii. 19.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ahiezer

AHIEZER, the Son of Ammishaddai, Chief of the Tribe of Dan, who came out of Egypt at the head of seventy two thousand seven hundred men of his Tribe. He offer'd a silver bason at the Tabernacle, which weighed an hundred and thirty shekels, and a silver bowl of seventy shekels in weight, [Num. vii. 66, 67. In the Year of the World 2514, before J.C. 1486, before the vulgar Æra 1490.] both full of fine flower, mingled with oil, for a Meat-offering; a golden spoon of ten shekels full of Incense, a young bullock, a ram and a lamb of the first year, for a Burnt-offering; a kid for a Sin-offering; two oxen, five rams, five he-goats, and five lambs of the first year, for a Peace-offering.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ahihud

AHIHUD, the Son of Naaman, and Brother of Ahoah, of the Tribe of Benjamin, 1 Chr. viii. 7.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ahijah

AHIJAH, the Prophet of the Lord, who dwelt at Shilo. He is thought to be the person who spoke twice to Solomon from [1 Kings vi. 11. Ch. xi. 6.] God; once while he was building the Temple, at which time he promised him his protection. And another time, after his falling into all his irregularities, when God expressed his indignation with great threatnings and reproaches. Ahijah was one of those who wrote the history or journal of [2 Chr. ix. 29.] this Prince's life. We read in1*Epiphanius* of his prediction to Solomon, that he would one day be perverted by Women, and God would raise up Enemies against him. And the same Prophet declared to Jeroboam, that he would by stratagem usurp the Kingdom, and that two heifers should alienate him from the Lord; meaning the two golden Calves erected by Jeroboam, one at Dan, the other at Bethel. We read in the first book of Kings [1 Kings xi. 29.] that Jeroboam going one day out of Jerusalem, was met by the Prophet Ahijah of Shilo. As they two were alone together in the fields, the Prophet took a new Cloak which Jeroboam wore from off his shoulders, and cutting it in twelve pieces, said, Take ten pieces for thyself; for thus saith the Lord God of Israel, I will rend the kingdom out of the hand of Solomon, and will give ten Tribes to thee: He shall have one Tribe for my Servant David's sake, and for Jerusalem's sake the City which I have chosen out of all the Tribes of Israel, because that they have forsaken me, and have worshipped Ashtoreth the Goddess of the Zidonians, Chemosh the God of the Moabites, and Milcom the God of the Children of Ammon, and have not walked in my ways, to do that which is right in mine eyes, as did David his Father.

Howbeit, I will not take the whole kingdom out of his hands, I will suffer him to govern for the remainder of his life; but I will take the kingdom out of his Son's hands, and will give it unto thee, even ten Tribes: And unto his Son will I give one Tribe, that David my Servant may have a light always before me in Jerusalem: And I will take thee, and thou shalt reign according to all that thy Soul desireth, and shalt be King over Israel: And it shall be, if thou wilt hearken to all that I command thee, and wilt walk in my ways, and do that is right in my sight, to keep my Statutes and Commandments, as David my Servant did, that I will be with thee, and build thee a sure house, as I built for David, and will give Israel unto thee: And I will for this afflict the seed of David, but not for ever. This happened in the year of the World 3020, before J. C. 980, before the vulgar Æra 984.

This Prophecy could not be so secret but Solomon got intelligence of it; and perhaps Jeroboam was so imprudent as to boast of it, and declare too openly against the King. But however this may be, Jeroboam was obliged to fly for security into Egypt, where he continued with King Shishak till the death of Solomon, in the year 3025. Then Jeroboam was advanced to the Throne of Israel, or the ten Tribes, as we shall relate in the Article belonging to him. He soon forgot what Abijah had recommended to him, to be faithful to the Lord. He forbad his Subjects to go and worship God at Jerusalem, and set up two golden Calves for the object of their Worship; one at Dan, the other at Bethel. At Bethel he erected a profane Altar, and himself sacrificed upon it: But a Man of God sent from Judah foretold the overthrow [Ch. xii. 28, 29, & seq. Ch. xiii. 1, 2, &c.] of his Altar, and the birth of King Josiah, who upon this Altar should sacrifice the Priests of the high places. Some take this Prophet from Judah to be Abijah, whom we are speaking of; but Abijah dwelt at Shilo, in the Tribe of Ephraim; and besides, survived the erection of this Altar at Bethel; whereas the Prophet here in question was killed by a lion the very day he had been speaking to Jeroboam.

About the end of Jeroboam's Reign, that is to say, towards the year 3046, Abijah [Ch. xiv. 1, 2, &c.] , the Son of Jeroboam, fell sick; Jeroboam therefore said to his Wife, Change your dress, and disguise yourself, so that no one may know you, and go to Shiloh, where the Prophet Ahijah lives, who first promised that I should reign over this People: Take with you ten loaves, and craknels, and a cruise of honey, and consult him concerning the indisposition of my Son. The Queen therefore went to Abijah's house in Shiloh. Now the Prophet could not see, for his eyes were darken'd with old age; but the Lord said to him, Behold the Wife of Jeroboam is come hither to consult you concerning the distemper of her Son; thus and thus shall you say unto her:

As Jeroboam's Wife came in disguised, and concealing who she was, Abijah heard the sound of her Feet, and said, " Come " in thou Wife of Jeroboam; why feignest thou thyself to be another? for I " am sent to thee with heavy tidings. " Go tell Jeroboam, thus saith the Lord " God of Israel; for as much as I exalted thee from among the People, and " made thee Prince over my People Israel, and rent the Kingdom away from " the house of David, and gave it to " thee, and yet thou hast not been as " my servant David, who kept my Commandments, and who followed me with " all his heart, to do that only which was " right in mine eyes; but hast done evil " above all that were before thee, for " thou hast made thee other Gods, and " molten Images, to provoke me to anger, and hast cast me behind thy back: " Therefore behold, I will bring evil upon the house of Jeroboam, I will cut " off all the Males of his Family, and will " utterly extirpate them out of Israel; I " will take away the remnant of the " house of Jeroboam, as a Man taketh " away dung, till it be all gone. Him " that dieth of Jeroboam in the City shall " the Dogs eat, and him that dieth in the " field shall the Fowls of the air eat, for " the Lord hath spoken it.

" Arise thou therefore, get thee to thine " own house, and when thy feet enter into the City the Child shall die. And " all Israel shall mourn for him, and " bury him; for he only of Jeroboam's " House " House shall come to the grave, because " in him there is found some good thing " toward the Lord God of Israel, in the " House of Jeroboam. Moreover, the " Lord shall raise him up a King over " Israel, who shall cut off the House of " Jeroboam that day: but when? Even " now. This Prince is already appointed, " and the sentence of God against Jeroboam shall be soon executed. The Lord " shall smite Israel, as a reed is shaken in " the water, and he shall root up Israel " out of this good land, which he gave " to their Fathers, and shall scatter them " beyond the river, because they have " made their groves, provoking the Lord " to anger. And he shall give Israel up, " because of the sins of Jeroboam, who " did sin, and who made Israel to sin.

Jeroboam's wife returned therefore, and came to Tirzah, and when she set her foot upon the threshold of the door her child died. He was honourably interr'd, and lamented by all Israel, as the Lord had foretold by his servant Ahijah. Ahijah, in all probability, did not long survive these predictions; but the time and manner of his death we are not acquainted with.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ahijah (II)

[1 Kings xv. 27.] II. AHIJAH, the Son of Baasha King of Israel. Baasha killed Nadab the Son of Jeroboam, of whom we have been speaking, and usurped his kingdom, so executing the threats of the Prophet Ahijah the Shilonite.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ahijah (III)

III. AHIJAH, the Son of Pelon, one of those brave officers who had commands in David's army.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ahijah (IV)

IV. AHIJAH, keeper of the Temple-Treasury, under David, 1 Chron. xxvi. 20.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ahijah (V)

V. AHIJAH, the Son of Esrom, of the Tribe of Judah, 1 Chron. ii. 25.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ahikam

AHIKAM, the Son of Shaphan, and Father of Gedaliah. He was sent by Josiah King of Judah to Huldah the Prophetess, to consult her concerning the book of the [2 Kings xxii. 12.] Law, which had been found in the Temple, in the year of the world 3380. before J. C. 620. before the vulgar Æra 624.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ahilud

AHILUD, the Father of Joshaphat, who was David's Secretary, 2 Sam. viii. 16.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ahimaaz

AHIMAAZ, the Son of Zadok the High Priest. He succeeded his Father about the year 3000, under the reign of Solomon. He did David a very important piece of [2 Sam. xv. 17. & seq. xvii. 17. In the Year of the World 2981, before J. C. 1019. before the vulgar Æra 1023.] service during the war with Absalom: For while his Father Zadok was in Jerusalem with Hushai the friend of David, Ahimaaz and Jonathan continued without the city, near the fountain Rogel; hither a maid-servant came, to tell them the resolution which had been taken in Absalom's council; whereupon they immediately departed to give the King intelligence of it. But being discovered by a young lad who gave information of them to Absalom, he sent orders to pursue them. Ahimaaz and Jonathan fearing to be taken, retired to a Man's house of Baharim, in whose Court-yard there was a well, in which they concealed themselves. Upon the mouth of this well the woman of the house spread a covering, and on the covering ground corn. When Absalom's people came, they asked the woman where Ahimaaz was, and Jonathan? She answer'd, They took a little water, and went away in great haste. They therefore who were in pursuit of them not finding them, returned to Jerusalem. Then Ahimaaz and Jonathan getting out of the well, continued their journey, and came to David, telling him that no time was to be lost, and he was to pass over Jordan with all possible expedition.

After the battle which Joab and Abishai, David's Generals, fought with Absalom, wherein this Prince was overcome and slain, Ahimaaz desired Joab's leave to carry news hereof to David. And Joab said unto him, Thou shalt not bear tidings this day, but thou shalt bear tidings another day: but this day thou shalt bear no tidings because the King's Son is dead. Then said [1 Sam. xxiii. 18, 19, 20. In the Year of the World 2981, before J. C. 1019, before the vulgar Æra 1023.] Joab to Cushi, Go tell the King what thou hast seen. And Cushi bowed and ran. Soon after this, Ahimaaz said again to Joab, Howsoever, let me, I pray thee, also run after Cushi. And Joab said, Wherefore wilt thou run, my Son, seeing thou hast no tidings ready? But howsoever, said he, let me run. And he said unto him, Run. And Ahimaaz ran by the way of the plain, and out-ran Cushi. The Centinel who kept watch upon the roof over the gate, seeing one man alone coming, gave immediate notice of it to the King; who said, If he is alone, he brings some good news. And indeed, had his army been defeated, the people would have returned in crowds.

As therefore he was coming on with great haste, the Centinel saw a second running also, whereof giving notice from his station, the King said, He too is the bearer of good news. The Centinel added, The running of the foremost is like the running of Ahimaaz the Son of Zadock. And the King said, He is a good man, and cometh with good tidings. Ahimaaz coming near, called and said unto the King, All is well. And he fell down to the earth upon his face before the King, and said, Blessed be the Lord thy God, which hath delivered up the men that lift up their hand against my Lord the King. And the King said, Is the young Man Absalom safe? Ahimaaz out of prudence was unwilling to declare his death to him, and said only, When Joab thy servant sent me thy servant to thee, I saw a great tumult, but I knew not what it was. And the King said, Turn aside, and stand here. This is what we learn from History concerning Ahimaaz. He was succeeded in the [1 Chron. vi. 9.] High-Priesthood by Azariah. The war between Absalom and David, whereof we have been speaking, began in the year of the world 2981. before J.C. 1019. before the vulgar Æra 1025.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ahiman

AHIMAN, a Giant of the race of Anak. He dwelt at Hebron, when they who were sent for this purpose from the [Numb. xiii. 23.] Camp of Israel, visited the land of Canaan. He was driven from Hebron with his brethren Sheshai and Talmai, when Caleb [Josh. xv. 14.] took this City, in the year of the world 2559. before J. C. 1441. before the vulgar Æra 1445.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ahimelech

AHIMELECH, the Son of Ahitub, and Brother of Abiah, whom he succeeded in the High-Priesthood. He is called Abiathar [Mark ii. 26.] in S. Mark. The Tabernacle was then at Nob, where Ahimelech, with other Priests, had his habitation. David being informed by his friend Jonathan, that Saul was determined to destroy him, thought it convenient to retire. He went to Nob [1 Sam. xxi. 1.] therefore, to the High-Priest Abimelech, who was very much surprized to see him, and said to him, Why art thou alone, and no Man with thee? David answered, The King has given me orders which are very pressing, and has forbidden me to discover them to any Man; and my people are appointed to rendezvous in such a place. If therefore you have any thing to eat, tho' it be but five loaves, give them to me. The High-Priest answered, I have no common bread, but there is hallowed bread, if the young Men have kept themselves at least from Women. Of a truth, said David, Women have been kept from us about these three days; and if they are any way polluted, I will take care they shall be purified before they eat of this bread.

David added, Is there not here under thine hand spear or sword? for I have neither brought my sword nor my weapons with me, because the King's business required haste. Ahimelech answered, The sword of Goliath the Philistine, whom thou slewest in the valley of Elah, behold it is here wrapt in a cloth behind the Ephod; if thou wilt take that, take it; for there is no other save that here. And David said, There is none like that, give it me. And David arose, and went to Achish King of Gath. Now Doeg the Edomite was at Gath, when David came thither. One day therefore, as Saul was complaining to his officers that no one was affected with his misfortunes, or gave him any intelligence [1 Sam. xxii. 6, 7. &c.] of what was doing against him, Doeg related to him what had happened when David came to Ahimelech the High-Priest. Saul immediately sent orders for him and the other Priests to come to him, and said to Ahimelech, Why have you conspired with the Son of Jesse against me? Why have you given him a sword and bread, and have consulted God for him? Ahimelech answered the King, Who is so faithful among all thy servants as David, which is the King's Son-in-law, and goeth at thy bidding, and is honourable in thine house? Did I then begin to enquire of God for him?

Saul, without having any regard to Ahimelech's reasons, said, Thou shalt surely die, Ahimelech, thou and all thy father's house. And he commanded his guards that were about him to turn their arms against the Priests of the Lord, for, says he, their hand also is with David. But the King's officers would not put forth their hand to fall upon the Priests of the Lord. Then Saul commanded Doeg to kill them; who obeyed: and on that day there died fourscore and five persons that wore the linen Ephod. He went afterwards to Nob, and put Men, Women and Children, and even all the cattle that he found, to the edge of the sword. But one of Ahimelech's Sons, by name Abiathar, escaped the slaughter, and retired to David. This happened in the year of the world 2944. before J. C. 1056. before the vulgar Æra 1060.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ahimoth

AHIMOTH, the Son of Elkanah, 1 Chr. vi. 25.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ahinadab

AHINADAB, the Son of Iddo, was Governor of the Canton of Mahanaim, beyond Jordan, under the reign of Solomon, 1 Kings iv. 14.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ahinoam (1)

AHINOAM, the Daughter of Abimaaz, and Wife to Saul, 1 Sam. xiv. 50.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ahinoam (2)

AHINOAM, David's second Wife, and Mother of Amnon. She was a native of Jezreel: She was taken by the Amalekites when they plunder'd Ziklag, but was recovered out of their hands by David, with the rest of the spoil.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ahio

AHIO, with his Brother Uzzah, were charged with the conduct of the Ark when David remov'd it from the house of Abinadab, in order to place it in the Tabernacle which he had prepared for it at Jerusalem. On this occasion it was that Uzzah was smitten by the Lord for presuming to touch the Ark when it was tottering upon the Cart that brought it. See UZZAH.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ahion

AHION, the Son of Abi-gibeon and Maachah, 1 Chr. viii. 31.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ahira

[Numb. i. 29.] AHIRA, the Son of Enan, Chief of the Tribe of Naphtali. He went out of Egypt at the head of his Tribe, composed of fifty three thousand and four hundred Men, all above twenty years of age, and capable of bearing arms, without reckoning old Men, Women, and Children. He was the twelfth Person that made his offering when the Tabernacle was erected in the [Num. vii. 78. In the Year of the World 2514, before J.C. 1486, before the vulgar Æra 1490.] Desart; and he offer'd a silver bason, weighing an hundred and thirty shekels, and a silver bowl of seventy shekels, both of them full of fine flower, mingled with oil, for a Meat-offering; a golden Spoon of ten shekels, full of Incense; a young bullock, a ram, and a lamb of the first year, for a Burnt-offering; a kid for a Sin-offering; two oxen, five rams, five he goats, and five lambs of the first year, for a Peace-offering.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ahisamach

AHISAMACH, the Father of Aholiab, the famous artificer imployed by Moses in [Ex. xxxi. 6.] building the Tabernacle in the Wilderness, in the year of the World 2514, before J.C. 1486, before the vulgar Æra 1490.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ahishahar

AHISHAHAR, the Son of Bilham, of the Tribe of Benjamin, 1 Chr. vii. 10.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ahishar

AHISHAR, High-steward of Solomon's Houshold, 1 Kings iv. 6.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ahitophel

AHITOPHEL, was a native of Gillo. The Jews[1] make him to be Grandfather to Bathsheba, the Wife of Uriah, and afterwards [1 Chr. iii. 5. collatum cum 2 Sam. xi. 4.] of David, by his Son Ammiel, the Father of Bathsheba. If this be so, Ahitophel must have been very old at the time of Absalom's Rebellion, since his Grand-daughter Bathsheba had already for some time been married to Uriah before she became Wife to David. There are some[2] who conjecture that the reason of Ahitophel's embracing Absalom's Interest with so much warmth, was a desire of revenging the dishonour which David had brought upon his Grand-daughter. However this may be, as soon as Absalom was acknowledged to be King by the greatest part of the Israelites, he sent for Ahitophel from Gillo, to assist him with his advice in the present [2 Sam. xv. 12. Ch. xvi. 23.] juncture of his affairs; for at that time Ahitophel's Councils were received as the Oracles of God himself. Nothing gave David more uneasiness than the hearing that this great Statesman was of Absalom's party; and when Hushai his friend came to wait on him, and attend him in his flight, he intreated him to return rather to Jerusalem, make a shew of offering his services to Absalom, and endeavour to disappoint the good advice which should be given by Ahitophel.

When Absalom was come to Jerusalem, he desired Ahitophel to deliberate with his other Counsellors upon the measures which [Ch. xv. 31, 32, 33.] were proper for him to take. Ahitophel advis'd him in the first place to abuse his Father's Concubines, that so when all Israel should understand that he had dishonour'd his Father in this manner, they might espouse his Interests more resolutely: A tent therefore was prepared for this purpose upon the terrass of the King's Palace, and Absalom, in the sight of all Israel, enter'd the place where David's Concubines were. At another time Ahitophel [Ch. xvii. 1, 2.] said to Absalom, If you please I will take twelve thousand chosen Men, and pursue David this very night, and so falling upon him while he is weary, and not upon his guard, I shall easily defeat him, disperse those who are about him, and when he is thus abandoned by his People, kill him; after which I will bring the army back to you, and all things will be peaceably settled. This advice was very agreeable to Absalom, and all the Elders of Israel. However, says Absalom, call Hushai, that we may know his opinion.

Hushai being come, and hearing what advice Ahitophel had given, said, The Counsel that Ahitophel hath given is not good at this time; what for the present, in my opinion, may do better, is this; Let all Israel be gather'd unto thee, from Dan even to Beersheba, as the sand is by the Sea for multitude, and put thyself in the midst of them, and wherever David is we shall fall upon him, and overwhelm him with our numbers, as the dew falleth upon the ground. This advice was agreeable to Absalom, and all the Elders of Israel, and the Lord permitted that of Ahitophel, which was the best, to be rejected, that so Absalom's ruin might be hasten'd. Now Ahitophel seeing his counsel neglected, saddled his ass, went to his house at Gillo, hanged himself, and was buried in the sepulchre of his Fathers. He foresaw without doubt all that would happen to Absalom, and was determin'd to prevent the death which he had deserved, and which David had not failed to have inflicted on him as soon as he had been resettled on his Throne. All this fell out in the year of the World 2981, before J.C. 1019, before the vulgar Æra 1023.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Author libri Tradit. Hebr. in libb. Reg. & Paralip. & ita Interpp. plerique.
Cornel. a Lapide Tirin. &c.

Ahitub (1)

AHITUB, the Son of Phinehas, and Grandson to the High-priest Eli. His Father Phinehas having been slain in that unhappy engagement wherein the Ark was [1 Sam. iv. 11.] taken by the Philistines, he succeeded his Grandfather Eli, in the year of the World 2888. His Successor was his Son Ahiah, about the year of the World 2911, before J.C. 1089, before the vulgar Æra 1093.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ahitub (2)

AHITUB, the Son of Amariah, and [1 Chr. vi. 8.] Father of the High-priest Zadok. It is not very certain whether this Ahitub ever exercised the office of High-priest, but we know he was Father to the High-priest Zadok, who enjoyed this dignity under David and Solomon.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ahiud

AHIUD, the Son of Shelomi, of the Tribe of Asher. He was appointed by Moses to be one of the Commissioners for making a partition of the land of Canaan.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ahlab

AHLAB, a City in the Tribe of Asher the situation whereof is not known, Judg. i. 31.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ahlai (1)

AHLAI, the Son of Shehan, 1 Chr. xi. 31.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ahlai (2)

AHLAI, one of those gallant Men who commanded in David's Army, 1 Chr. xi. 41.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ahoban

AHOBAN, or Abban, the Son of Abishur and Abihail, 1 Chr. xi. 29.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ahohe

AHOHE, or Ahoah, the third Son of Bela, and Grandson of Benjamin, 1 Chr. viii. [2 Sam. xxiii. 9. 18. 1 Chr. xi. 11, 29. xxvii. 4.] 4. His descendants are called Ahohites.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Aholiab

AHOLIAB, the Son of Ahisamach, of the Tribe of Dan, was appointed, together with Bezaleel, to undertake the building of the Tabernacle, Exod. xxxv. 34.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Aholibah

AHOLIBAH, and Aholah, are two [Ezek. xxiii. 4.] feigned names made use of by Ezekiel in his Prophecy to denote the two Kingdoms of Judah and Samaria. Aholah and Aholibah are represented as two Sisters of Egyptian extraction. Aholah stands for Samaria, and Aholibah for Jerusalem. The first signifies a Tent, and the second my Tent is in her. They both prostituted themselves to the Egyptians and Assyrians, in imitating their Abominations and Idolatries; for which reason the Lord abandoned them to those very People, for whom they had shewn so passionate and so impure an affection. They were carried into Captivity, and reduced to the severest servitude.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ahumai

AHUMAI, the Son of Jahath, of the Tribe of Judah, 1 Chr. iv. 2.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ahuzam

AHUZAM, the Son of Naarah, of the Tribe of Judah, 1 Chr. iv. 5.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ahuzzath

AHUZZATH, the Friend of Abimelech, King of Gerar, who came with this Prince and Phichol the General of his Army, in order to make an alliance with [Genes. xxiv. 26. In the Year of the World 2200. before J. C. 1800. before the vulg. Æra 1804.] Isaac. Several Interpreters, following the Chaldee and St. Jerom °, take Ahuzzath in an appellative sense, for a company of Friends which attended Abimelech. The Septuagint call him Ahuzzath the Brideman.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ai

AI, a City situated near Bethel, to the westward of it. The Septuagint call it [Josh. vii. 2. Gen. xii. 8.] Agai, and Josephus Aina; others Aiath. Joshua having sent a detachment of three thousand Men against Ai, God permitted them to be repulsed, for the sake of Achan's [Josh. vii. 1, 4, &c. In the Year of the World 2553, before J. C. 1447. before the vulgar Æra 1451. Josh. viii. 1.] sin, who had violated the Anathema pronounced against the City of Jericho, by taking to himself something of the spoil: But after the expiation of this offence, the Lord commanded Joshua to march with the whole Army of the Israelites against Ai, and treat this City and the King thereof as he had treated Jericho, with this difference, that he gave the plunder of the Town to the People. According to God's order, Joshua sent by night thirty thousand Men to lie in ambush behind Ai, having first well instructed those who had the command of them in what they were to do, and the next day, early in the morning, he marched against the City with all the remainder of his army. The King of Ai perceiving them, sallied hastily out of the Town with all his troops and all his People, and fell upon the Forces of the Israelites, who, upon the first onset, fled as if they had been under some great terror; but this was only a feint to draw the Enemy into the open plain.

As soon as Joshua saw them all out of the gates, he rais'd his shield upon the top of a pike, which was the signal given to the Ambuscade; whereupon they immediately enter'd the place which they found without defence, and set fire to it. The People of Ai perceiving the smoke ascending, were willing to return, but discover'd those who had set fire to the City in their rear, while Joshua and they who were with him turning about, fell upon them, and cut them in pieces, without suffering so much as one single Person to escape him. The King was taken alive, and brought to Joshua. The Israelites enter'd the place, carried fire and sword every where with them, and killed in this day's action twelve thousand of their Enemies, Men, Women, and Children. The King of Ai was put to death, and hung upon a gibbet, where he continued till Sun-set; after which he was taken down, thrown in the entrance of the City, and a great heap of Stones raised over him. The Israelites divided afterwards among themselves the whole spoil of the place, as the Lord had permitted them.

 Joshua's enterprize on Ai, excepting in some particulars of military art, is very like [Observations on Joshua's feigned retreat, and the surprizing Ai. Josh. viii.] that of Gibeah, which is scarce any thing more than the copy of it. We see many instances of this sort in ancient and modern History: Polybius[1] relates one much resembling it; but the original may be said to be in Joshua, for we cannot have recourse to any Historians of more antiquity, to see if no Stratagem like it is to be met with in them. The sacred Writers are not the most ancient; there were Historians without doubt before Moses, and perhaps all the arts of War had been exhausted before this Legislator of the Jewish People: I am persuaded they were, and I believe War to be almost as ancient as the World, that is to say, from the time of its beginning to be inhabited, and Ambition's engaging Men in disputes about Meum and Tuum. If any one asks when these passions had their first rise, I answer ever since Abel's being killed by[2] his elder Brother Cain, because he was accepted by God; this is the first original and Epoch of them. But let us return to the suprize of Ai.

It seems by the Scripture account as if Joshua was not the author of the Stratagem made use of by him; but we very well know that the Lord is the God of Hosts, and every thing ought to be referr'd to him. When he directs himself to Joshua, and says, Go up against Ai, lay in ambuscade behind the Town; I have deliver'd the King and People of it into thine hands. He might notwithstanding this leave the whole glory of the Invention and Execution to him as to a great General; otherwise I don't know how we can reckon Joshua in the number of extraordinary Men, if God had always wrought Miracles in favour of his People, and had left nothing for him to perform; but he is not obliged to be continually doing Prodigies, in order to punish the injustice and wickedness of Men; and it is certain that he frequently makes use of them in the execution of his Decrees.

I shall not stay to discourse on these words, Lay thee an ambush for the City behind it; Dom Calmet has made so fine a remark on this place, that I shall content myself with laying it here before you, " Some think it strange, says he, " that God, who could so easily oppress " Ai and its inhabitants, should chuse to " employ artifice and stratagem, in order " to give the victory to the Hebrews; " means which appear to be below the " greatness of the Almighty, and which " particular People, and some Generals " have rejected, as unworthy of brave " Men, and such as might rather tarnish " their glory than augment the lustre of " it. It was an expression of Alexander " the Great, that he would not steal a victory[3]. The ancient Greeks and Tibarenians gave notice to their Enemies when " and where they would engage them: " The old Romans knew not what cunning meant and subtle wiles in carrying " on their Wars: Non fraude neque occultè, sed palam & armatum Populum Romanum, hostes suos ulcisci. They " fought victory with only open force and " honest fighting; they desir'd their Enemies might be convinced of their valour, " and submit to them without regret, as " to the strongest of the two.

Here is a great deal of learning; and the Commentator might have farther added the old Gauls, the Switzers, and other People, who are frank and open in this point. It would notwithstanding very much perplex any one to prove that the old Romans made no use of artifice and cunning, since War is nothing else but the art of doubling with very great and well concerted method. If the Romans fell often into the snares which were laid for them, it was because they had unskilful Generals, who made war without Genius and Art, and to excuse their ignorance alledged, that they made war like honest Men, without deceit or artifice; we see however in History that the Romans did generally practise them. If Alexander and so many other great Captains would not use all their malice[4], it was because they knew that they should easily get the better of their Enemies without it. Alexander understood perfectly well whom he had to do with. If he had been to attack any other People besides the effeminate Persians, he would have taken Parmenio's advice, to fall on the Enemy under cover of the night: For this reason he replied,[5] that he would begin the battle in broad day-light, and that he had rather complain of Fortune than blush at a victory.

They who are surprized that God, who could so easily oppress Ai and its inhabitants, by one single act of his Will, did not chuse to do so, rather than make use of artifice and cunning, may consider whether he could not as well have overthrown the walls of Jericho in an instant, in the twinkling of an eye, and so have excused his People from marching round the Town seven times, in order to see the fall of it on the seventh day. Could he not likewise heve extirpated so many Enemies as his People had to fight with, and put them at once, without striking one blow, in possession of the promised Land! But why should we desire to search into the secrets of God! If he had perform'd all this, he had not displayed his power so eminently by that great number of Miracles which he wrought in the sight of the whole Universe, nor would there have been any merit on his People's side.

Joshua arose, says the sacred Author, and all the People of War, to go up against Ai; and Joshua chose out thirty thousand mighty Men of valour, and sent them away by night. There is a manifest contradiction between this verse and the twelfth, wherein it is said that Joshua chose five thousand Men out, whom he sent to lie in ambush between Bethel and Ai. How is this to be reconciled? Dom Calmet says, " That Masius[6] allows but five " thousand Men for the Ambuscade, and " five and twenty for the attack of the " City, being persuaded that an army of " six hundred thousand Men could only " create confusion upon this occasion, without any necessity for, or advantage in " such " such numbers." Masius seems to argue right, and to think like a Soldier. " But " the generality of Interpreters, continues " Dom Calmet, acknowledge two bodies " to be placed in ambuscade, both between " Bethel and Ai, one of five and twenty, " the other of five thousand Men.

Joshua therefore sent at first thirty thousand Men, who marched in the night-time, and to prevent discovery, passed without doubt behind the eminences of Bethel, and posted themselves towards the West between those two Cities, at the place appointed for the ambuscade. He who was at the head of them then detach'd five thousand Men, who lay close in cover'd places directly opposite, and as near as possible to the Town, in order to throw themselves into it immediately upon the first opportunity.

Dom Calmet says[7] that there are Interpreters who will not allow the Hebrew word Akeb to signify an Ambuscade, and that literally it denotes the Heel; if so, then by a metaphor, I say, it must signify Ambuscade, since the property of an Ambuscade is to fall upon the Enemy behind. It is an expression in daily use with us, that the Enemy is at our heels, that he is continually close up with us, at our backs, and it is generally behind that an ambuscade discovers itself.

Joshua spent the night in his camp at Gilgal, and the next day rising before it was light, he reviewed his troops, put himself at the head of them, with the Elders, and order'd the main body of the Army to march towards Ai. When they were come in sight of the Town, Joshua put his Army in order of battle upon the hill, and afterwards descended into the valley; which the King of Ai observing, he marched his whole Army with the utmost expedition out of the Town, by break of day, and led his troops in order of battle on the side of the Wilderness[8], where Joshua, as if he had been under some great terror, made a shew of flying, in order to decoy his Enemy, and draw him to a greater distance from the Town.

The Men of Ai thought they were to improve such an happy opportunity, and had hopes of turning it so much the more to their advantage, in that the Hebrews were engaged in a narrow pass, where there being no possibility of drawing up in a large front, great numbers are of no consideration, and the lesser cannot be flank'd, nor consequently hemm'd in: But they had no distrust of People's lying in ambuscade behind them, or that the others would turn about and face them; while these, at the first signal, should rise, and make themselves masters of the City, which was forsaken and left destitute of Soldiers for its defence.

The Hebrew General seeing his design succeeded, and that the Men of Ai were at a sufficient distance from their City, commanded his Army to face about, and gave the signal agreed upon to inform those who lay in the Ambuscade that it was time to suprize the Town. The learned Commentator makes a remark on this place which shews his great Reading; herein he reports the different opinions of the Interpreters concerning the nature of this signal; but he does not make the matter absolutely clear to us. Some pretend, he says, that the Hebrew word Cidon signifies a Shield; the Septuagint and Aquila suppose it to mean a Javelin all of iron, which is called Gæsos; but a Javelin is too small to serve for a signal, and be seen at such a distance, nor is a Shield more easily to be distinguish'd.

For my part, I embrace very readily the opinion of the Rabbins, who, tho' they are a parcel of old Dreamers, have yet sometimes good intervals; they believe it was the staff belonging to some of their Colours, which Joshua set up to give his People the signal: From hence I conclude the whole colours were used on this occasion, and that in the Asiatick style, which is very near the Poetical, the part is to be here taken for the whole. It was therefore one of the Colours that Joshua lifted up, and was perceiv'd by those in ambuscade, who thereupon immediately rose, marched towards the City, and took and burnt it; not all at once, but in some places only, to answer the signal, and give notice to Joshua that they were masters of the Town; for it was not destroyed and reduced to ashes till after it was pillaged. The Men of Ai who pursued Joshua, looking behind them, and seeing the smoke of the City ascending up to Heaven, had not power to fly one way or other, particularly after that the Israelites, who had made a shew of flying, and marched on the side of the Wilderness, turned back upon them, and briskly attacked those who had before pursued them: For they in the Ambuscade, who composed a small army, did not remain in the Town, but sallied out of it, and fell upon the Men of Ai in their rear, while the Hebrews were beginning to do execution upon them; so that they found themselves between two Armies attacked on every side, and so pressed before and behind, that not one of all this great number were saved; that is to say, that none of them could fly, and that they who were not killed in the battle were taken alive, together with their King, and put to death after the action.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Polyb. Hist. l. 4.
Hieronym. qu. Hebr. in Gen.
Vide Grot. l. 3. de jure belli & pacis, c. 1. art 20. & Serar in Joshue, c.8. qu. 2.
Observe by the way that this word Malice differs but in one letter from Milice, and that the latter scarce ever goes without the former.
Quint. Curt. .4.
Masius in Joshue viii.
Comment upon Joshua viii. 13.
Ibid. ver. 14.

Aiah (1)

1. AIAH, the Mother of Rizpah. This Rizpah was Saul's Concubine. David deliver'd her Children to the [2 Sam. xxi. 8. Levit. xi. 14. איהAiah.] Gibeonites, to be hanged before the Lord.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Aiah (2)

[1] 2. AIAH, is a Hebrew term, which St. Jerom translates Vulture, Bochart believes it to signify the Merlin; the Syriac renders it Raven, and the Arabic Owl.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Translators' note. This Magistrate in Babylonia was called in the Jew- ish Language Rosh-Golah, i. e. the head of the Captivity. The Jews of Alexandria had their Alabarchs, and the Jews of Antioch their Ethnarchs; and after this they had in most places of their dispersions their Patriarchs for the same purpose; and there are in the Imperial Laws Edicts concerning them, Prid. Connect. &c. Part. 2. B. 4

Ajah

AJAH, the Daughter[1] of Zibeon, of the race of Esau, Genes. xxxvi. 24.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Translators' note. The Author is here mistaken, or his Printer; for Ajah and Anah were both the Sons of Zibeon. The original Hebrew says צבעון, בניand the Septuagint υἱοὶ Σεβεῶν, Ἀιὲ καὶ Ἀνάς.

Ajalon

[Josh. xix. 24. Ch. xxi. 24.] AJALON, a City of the Tribe of Dan. It was assigned over to the Levites of Kohath's Family. We find it sometimes under the name of Elom or Ailom. Eusebius says, that in his time there was shewn a place called Ajalon, three miles Eastward from Bethel: but this cannot be the [Ch. x. 12.] famous Ajalon mentioned in Joshua, where he speaks to the moon to stand still in the Valley of Ajalon; for this did not belong to the Tribe of Dan; and Bethel was too remote from this Tribe. There must be still another Ajalon, which St. Jerom takes notice of[1]; this was two miles from Shechem, in the way to Jerusalem. He says elsewhere[2], that S. Paula going from Shechem to Bethoron, saw on her left hand [2 Chr. xxviii. 18.] Ajalon and Gibeon. In the Chronicles Ajalon is placed between Bethshemesh and Timnah. Lastly, there was a City called Ajalon in the Tribe of Zebulun, Judges xii. 12.

Thus there were four Cities of this name. The first in the Tribe of Dan, between [See 2 Chr. xxviii. 18, &c.] Timnah and Bethshemesh, which is that probably spoken of by Joshua, when he said to the Moon, Thou Moon stand still in the valley of Ajalon.

The second Ajalon, was in the Tribe of Benjamin, three miles Eastward from Bethel. See 2 Chron. xi. 10.

The third Ajalon, was in the Tribe of Ephraim, two miles from Shechem, as you go to Jerusalem, and to the East of [Αἰχμαλωτάρχης.] Bethoron.

The fourth was in the Tribe of Zebulun, the situation whereof is not exactly known.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Hieronym. in locis.
In Epitaphio Paulæ.

Aichmalotarcha

AICHMALOTARCHA, a Greek term signifying the Prince of the Captivity , or Chief of the Captives. Thus they are called who, as the Jews pretend, had the command or government of the people, during the captivity of Babylon[1]. They believe these Princes or Governours to have been taken constantly out of the Tribe of Judah, and family of David. But they would be very much puzzled to prove the real existence of their supposed Aichmalotarchs.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Translators' note. The Eastern Jews had their Princes of the Captivity as the Western Jews their Patriarchs. By the Eastern Jews are meant those who are settled at Babylon, in Chaldæa, Assyria, and Persia; and they who dwell in Judæa, Italy, Egypt, and other parts of the Roman Empire, were called Western Jews. There was no Prince of the Captivity before the end of the second Century. Huna was the first invested with this Character about the time above mentioned. The Office continued till the eleventh Century. The Princes of the Captivity had their residence at Babylon; there they were installed with Ceremony, held Courts of Justice, &c. See more of them in Basnage Histoire des Juifs, l. 3. c. 4.

Air

AIR. The Air is often meant by the word Heaven; the birds of the Heaven, for the birds of the Air. God rained fire [Gen. xix. 24. 1 Kings i. 10.] and brimstone upon Sodom from Heaven; that is to say, from the Air. Let fire come down from Heaven; that is, from the Air. Moses menaces the Israelites with the effects of God's wrath to destroy them [Deut. xxviii. 22. the Hebrew שרפון LXX. Ἀνεμοφθορία.] with a pestilential Air. Percutiat te Dominus aëre corrupto; or perhaps with a scorching wind, which produces mortal diseases, or with a drought which blasts the crops of corn.

[Vide 1 Kings viii. 37. 1 Cor. ix. 26. Ch. xiv. 9.] To beat the Air, to speak in the Air, are ways of expressing things which are in use even in our own tongue, and signify to speak without judgment or understanding, to fatigue ourselves in vain. The Powers of the Air, Eph. ii. 2. are the Devils, who exercise their power principally in the Air, by exciting winds, storms and tempests.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Akiba

[Judg. iv. 7.] AKIBA, a famous Rabbin, who lived about the year of J C. 130. and was as it were the Prophet and Fore-runner of the celebrated Impostor Barchochebas. The Jews, who very much extol his merit,[1] inform us, that Akiba was descended from Sisera the General of Jabin the King of Canaan's army. He spent forty years in the country, employed in keeping the flocks belonging to one Calba Cuva, a rich citizen of Jerusalem. His Master's Daughter made an offer of marrying him, if he would quit the business of a Shepherd, and apply himself to study. Akiba promised he would, whereupon they were clandestinely married, and he went to the University, where he spent twelve years with so much reputation that he came from thence with twelve thousand scholars. His Wife advised him to return thither; he continued therefore twelve years longer there; and his reputation still perpetually increasing, he brought from thence four and twenty thousand Disciples. It may be easily perceived that this prodigious number of Scholars is a Rabbinical Hyperbole. [Mechilta.] that all these Scholars died between Easter and Whitsuntide, for not behaving themselves with a suitable respect to one another. They were all buried at the foot of a hill near Tiberias.

Akiba continued teaching, and composed two works, one called Mechilta, or Mechiltin, the other Jetzira, very different from another work with the same title attributed [ספר יצירה. Sepher Jezira.] to the Patriarch Abraham, and printed by Rittangelius. The Jews say Akiba was a Man of so much learning that he could give a reason for the minutest letter of the law; and that what God had concealed from Moses, he revealed to him. There are a thousand opinions in the Mishna whereof he is thought to be the Author, and which are esteemed as so many maxims and decisions.

He was in the height of his reputation, and Prince of the Sanhedrin, when Barcochebas, or the Son of Cochebas, appeared. They say[2] the name of this Impostor was Cozeb, or Bar-Cozebas, the Lyar, or the Son of a Lyar; and that Akiba having observed it, said with a sort of exclamation, Behold the Star which is to come out of Jacob! alluding to these words in the book of [Numb. xxiv. 17.] Numbers, A Star shall come out of Jacob, and a Scepter shall rise out of Israel, and shall smite the corners of Moab, &c. It is certain Akiba was attached to Barcochebas, and served him as an Usher or Fore-runner, in the same quality almost as S. John Baptist served our Saviour. But these two Men were governed by quite a different Spirit from that which animated our Saviour and S. John. They kindled a war in Judea, inspired the Jews with the spirit of rebellion, committed infinite disorders in Judea and Syria, killed thousands of Christians and Romans, and caused the entire destruction of their Country. See the articles ADRIAN and BARCOCHEBAS.

After the taking of Bether, a fortress wherein Barcochebas shut himself up, together with his best troops, Akiba was made a prisoner, and continued some time in fetters, expressing so great a fondness for the ceremonies of his forefathers, that he chose rather to go without drinking, and make use of the water which was given him, in washing himself, than omit this practice. The Emperor Adrian severely punished his imposture, and ordered his skin to be tore off with an iron comb. And with him, say the Rabbins[3], vanished the honour of the Law. They add that Judas the Holy, another celebrated that is to say, in the year 135. for Bether was taken on the 10th of August this year.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Basnage Hist. des Juifs, t. 2. l. 4. c. 8. p. 126, 127.
Rabb. apud Scalig.
Misna in Sota 515.

Alabarcha

ALABARCHA. This term is not to be met with in the Text of Scripture; but Josephus makes use of it in several places[1] to signify the Chief of the Jews in Alexandria. Philo[2] calls this Magistrate Genarkes; and Josephus[3] in some places Ethnarches. These two last terms signify the Prince or Chief of a Nation. But concerning the signification of Alabarcha, there are some disputes. There are some[4] who believe, that this name was given in raillery to the principal Magistrate, or Head of the Jews at Alexandria, by the Gentiles of the same City, who hated and despised the Jews. Others[5] derive Alabarcha from Alaba, which signifies ink to write with; accordingly, Alabarcha would signify properly the Chief Secretary, or Collector of the customs and duties upon Cattle carried out of the Country.

Fuller[6] derives it from the Hebrew or Syriac Halaph and Arcin[7], as if we should say, the Intendant, or the Sovereign's Delegate: for in places where the Jews were numerous, they had one of the principal of their own Nation over them, or some other to whom they addressed themselves, particularly in all affairs relating to themselves, without any dependence on the President or Governour sent by the Sovereign to rule his other subjects. But this last etymology pleases me no better than the others which I have mentioned. It is certain that the dignity of Alabarch was common in Egypt, as we see in Juvenal[8]; and that the Emperors Valens, Gratian and Theodosius, speak of the Customs or Imposts called Alabarchia[9] in Egypt. It is probable, that originally the word Alabarcha signified the person who had the custom of Salt, and that afterwards it was given in the way of contempt to the Head or Governour of the Jews at Alexandria. In this sense the etymology of the word Alabarcha will come from the Greek Hals, Halos, Salt, and Archon the Chief.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Joseph. Antiq. l. 8. c. 8. & 20. & l. 20. c. 3. Αλαβάρχης.
Philo in Flacc. p. 975. d. Γεναρχης.
Joseph. Antiq. l. 19. c. 4. p. 674. A. B.
Valef. not. in Euseb. l. 2. c. 5. Ita & Turneb. l. 27. c. 25.
Cujac. l. 8. Obser. c. 37.
Fuller, l. 4 Miscell. Theologic. c. 16. Vide Martinii Lexicon.
חלקloco, via ארכיןor .ארכאArchon.
Juvenal Sat. 1. v. 129. Inter quos ausus habere Nescio quos titulos Ægyptius aut alabarches.
L. 9. c. de Vectig. & Commiss. Usurpationem totius licentiæ summovemus circa vectigal Alabarchiæ per Ægyptum.

Alabaster

[Matt. xxv. 6, 7.] ALABASTER. It is said in the Gospel, that Jesus Christ being at table in Bethany, in the House of Simon the Leper, Mary the Sister of Lazarus, and Martha, came thither, and poured an alabaster box full of precious ointment on his head. This alabaster box was made of a sort of white marble, wherein precious liquors were generally preserved. Pliny says[1], that this kind of stone or marble was found in the neighbourhood [Mark xiv. 3.] of Thebes in Egypt, and about Damascus in Syria. It was brought into any form or figure with great ease, this stone being neither hard nor brittle. All vessels to put liquors in had likewise in general the name of alabaster, of whatever matter they were composed. There are some Authors[2] who are of opinion that the box here mentioned was of glass; and this opinion they confirm by what S. Mark says, that the Women who poured out the perfume upon our Saviour, broke the box of Alabaster. A vessel of glass was given to Constantine the Great[3], said to be that wherein the liquor was contained which was poured upon the head of Jesus Christ. But Theodosius ordered it to be removed from the Forum of Constantinople, and put into a safer and more proper place. Some will have it that the name of Alabaster denotes the form rather than the matter of this box. Alabastrum may signify a vessel without an handle. It is certain that this term stands in general for a box to put perfumes in.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Plin. l. 28. c. 8.

Epiphan. l. de Mensur.
Suidas in Φόρος.

Alameth

ALAMETH, the ninth Son of Becher, the Son of Benjamin, 1 Chron. vii. 8.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Alcimus

ALCIMUS, or Jacimus, or Joachim, High Priest of the Jews, was established in this office in 3842. and died in 3844. before J. C. 156. before the vulgar Æra 160. He was of the race of the Priests, but not of a family of the first rank, nor of any, the ancestors whereof had enjoyed the High-Priesthood[1]. Besides, he had been polluted with acts of Idolatry, during the persecution of Antiochus Epiphanes, 2 Macc. xiv. 3. and obtained this supreme dignity by very irregular methods. He was confirmed in this office by King Antiochus Eupator, after the death of Menelaus. Alcimus did not perform the functions of it till after the death of Judas Maccabæus. He therefore seeing that it was not in his power to enter upon the exercise of his dignity as High-Priest, no sooner had intelligence that Demetrius the Son of Antiochus Epiphanes, had stolen privately from Rome, and was arrived in Syria, but he went to wait on him, and putting himself at the head of the apostate Jews, who were at Antioch, he threw himself at the feet of this new King, and besought him to defend them from the violences of Judas Maccabæus, whom he accused as one that oppressed those who adhered to the King's Party, and had dispersed and driven them out of their country. At the same time he intreated him to send somebody into Judæa to examine into the mischiefs and disorders committed by Judas Maccabæus, and to chastize his insolence.

[In the Year of the World 3843.] Demetrius immediately sent Bacchides thither at the head of an army, and confirming Alcimus in his office of High-Priest, he commanded him to accompany Bacchides, and charged them both jointly with the care of carrying on this war. As soon therefore as they came into Judæa, they endeavoured in the first place to surprize Judas and his brethren; and believed that under the pretence of treating with them, they might be able with fair words to persuade them to an interview; and this opportunity they proposed to take of seizing on their persons. But Judas and his brethren discovered or suspected that a snare was laid for them, and so happily avoided it. Others who were not so prudent fell into it, and perished; among the rest, sixty Assideans, and many Scribes and Doctors of the Law, who not imagining that a Priest of Aaron's race was capable of so deceiving them, were satisfied with his swearing to them that no injury should be offer'd, and went to him; but as soon as he had them in his power, he gave directions that they should be all murdered. After which instance of his perfidiousness no one would ever trust him.

[2 Macc. xiv. 3, 4. 1 Macc. xxv. 26, &c. 1 Macc. vii. 19, 20.] Bacchides having thus established Alcimus by force in Judæa, marched out of Jerusalem with his army, and incamped at Bezeth, with a design of returning into Syria. From thence he sent and apprehended several of those who had deserted his party, and certain of the people likewise whom he commanded to be killed, and thrown into a great pit. After which having once more committed the whole province to the care of Alcimus, and left troops sufficient to support him, he returned to King Demetrius. Alcimus for some time kept his ground with good success; deserters came over to him in great numbers, with whom he made terrible havock throughout the country. But Judas soon recovered a superiority over him, and restrained Alcimus and his people from continuing their incursions; who thereupon finding himself to be in no condition to resist Judas, returned to Court, with a present to the King of a gold Crown, a palm-tree and golden branches; which in all probability he had taken out of the Temple; and watching his opportunity renewed his complaints against Judas, and represented to the King, that as long as this Man lived his authority would never be well settled in Judæa. All who had the King's ear were continually insinuating the same thing; and at last so wrought upon him, that he sent a new army against Judas, under the command of Nicanor his old enemy, with particular orders to kill him, disperse his party, and establish Alcimus in the full possession of his dignity.

[In the Year of the World 3843. 1 Macc. vii. 1--- 20. In the Year 3842] Nicanor, who was very well acquainted with think it convenient to attack him by the way of arms, but proposed a treaty to him; whereupon articles were agreed on. But [1 Macc. vii. 26, &c. 2 Macc. xiv. 26—29.] Alcimus, who thought sufficient care was not taken of his interests in these conferences, went to the King, and prejudiced him so strongly against the treaty, that he refused to ratify it, and sent Nicanor positive orders to continue the war till he had killed Judas, or taken him, and sent him prisoner to Antioch. Nicanor therefore was obliged, against his inclination, to begin hostilities again against Judas and his brethren.

Nicanor attempted to secure the person of his enemy at an interview which passed [2 Macc. vii. 27—32.] between them at Jerusalem; but Judas perceiving there was treachery intended, withdrew, and re-commenced the war. Nicanor was beaten at Capharsalama; and in a second battle which he fought with Judas he was killed, and his army routed. [1 Macc. ix. 1—22.] Demetrius being informed of this, sent Bacchides again, and Alcimus, into Judæa, with a powerful army, composed of the choice of all his troops. Judas had no more than three thousand men; and this little body was much lessened by the terror which had seized them, and the effect of it, desertion, so that he had not above eight hundred remaining with him. With this small force he ventured to attack the enemy, killed abundance of them, and after having performed prodigies of valour, died overwhelmed with numbers.

[In the Year of the World 3843.] By his death Alcimus and his party were delivered from a formidable enemy. The apostates and male-contents began to raise their heads, and became the strongest. They had the advantage every where throughout the country; Alcimus began to exercise the sacrilegious offices of the High-Priesthood, which he had purchased with a sum of money. But having undertaken to pull down the wall of the inner court, which had been built formerly by the Prophets[2], that probably [1 Macc. vii. 9. ix. 54.] which separated the altar of burnt-offerings from the Priest's court, God punished him for it, by striking him with a palsy, whereof he died, after having enjoyed the Pontificate three or four years; in the year of the World 3844. See our Dissertation on the High-Priests of the Hebrews, prefixed to our Comment on the book of Judith.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Joseph. Antiq. l. xx. c. 8.
Joseph. Antiq. l. 12. c. 17.

Alema

ALEMA, a City in the Country of [1 Macc. v. 26. Is. xv. 8.] Gilead, beyond Jordan. Isaiah speaks of Elim, in the Country of Moab. *Helmon*known to be in the same Country: and this may perhaps be the same with Alema, mentioned in the Maccabees.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Alemeth (I)

I. ALEMETH, the Son of Jehoadah, of the Tribe of Benjamin, 1 Chr. viii. 36.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Alemeth (II)

II. ALEMETH, a City in the Tribe of Benjamin. It joins to Anathoth. Both were Cities of refuge in the Tribe abovementioned.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Aleph

ALEPH, is the name of the first letter in the Hebrew Alphabet, from which the Alpha of the Syrians and Greeks was formed. This word signifies Chief, Prince, or Thousand. There are some Psalms, and some other parts of Scripture, which begin with Aleph, and the other verses of them are continued with the following letters of the Alphabet. There is no mystery at all in this; but these pieces are called Acrosticks, because all the verses which compose them begin with a letter of the Alphabet in a grammatical order. Thus in the Psalm Beati immaculati in via, the eight first verses begin with Aleph, the eight following with Beth; and in like manner of others. In the CXth Psalm[1], Confitebor tibi Domine, in toto corde meo, this verse begins with Aleph; what follows, in concilio justorum & congregatione, begins with Beth; and so on. In the Lamentations of Jeremiah, there are two Chapters, the first Strophe whereof only begins with Aleph, the second with Beth; and so of others. In the third chapter there are three verses successively which begin with Aleph; then three others which begin with Beth; and the Hebrews are acquainted with no other sort of acrostick verses besides these.

The Jews at this day make use of their Letters as Cyphers. Aleph stands for one; Beth for two; Gimel for three; and so on. But I do not find that they had of old the same custom. They who wou'd know any thing more of this matter, may consult the Hebrew Grammars. There was one printed in French not long since at Paris, by Colombat, for the use of those who do not understand Latin. Latin Grammars for the Hebrew tongue are very common. The Reader may see farther what we have to say under the Articles, HEBREW TONGUE, GRAMMAR, VOWELPOINTS, LETTERS, &c.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Translators' note. In the Latin Vulgate the CXth Psalm begins as is here mentioned; but this in our English Translation is the beginning of the CXIth Psalm. And the same difference in the division of the Psalms is observable throughout both these versions, from the IXth to the CXLVIth Psalm, the English being translated from the Hebrew Text, wherein the IXth Psalm is divided into two, and so a difference created in the number of the Psalms, from the IXth to the CXLVIth, which in the Hebrew is united with the CXLVIIth of the Vulgate; and by this union the number of Psalms in the Hebrew, Greek and Vulgate are made equally CL. By this remark some little perplexities may be avoided, which might otherwise arise from this different enumeration of the Psalms, as often as the citations from them are examined and compared.

Alexander the Great

ALEXANDER THE GREAT, the Son and Successor of Philip, King of Macedon, is described in the Prophecies of Daniel, under the image of a Leopard with four wings, to signify his great strength, and the rapidity of his conquests, [Dan. viii. 4, 5, 6, 7.] and under the figure of a He-goat, running through all the World with so much swiftness as not to touch the Earth, and attacking a ram with horns, overthrowing and trampling him under foot, without any one's being able to rescue him out of his power. The He-goat is Alexander, the ram is Darius Codomannus, the last of the Persian Emperors and Successors of Cyrus. In the statue represented in a dream to Nebuchadnezzar [Dan. ii. 39.] , the belly of brass was an emblem of Alexander, the legs of iron of his Successors. He was appointed by God to destroy the Persian Empire in the East, and establish the Grecian Monarchy in its room.

[In the Year of the World 3668. before J. C. 332. before the vulgar Æra 336.] After he had performed the last duties to his Father Philip, he was chosen by the Greeks to be General of the Troops which they were to send against the Persians. He marched into Asia at the head of four and thirty thousand Men, in the year of the World 2670, before J. C. 330, before the vulgar Æra 334. He fought with Darius's Generals, and overcame them in the fields of Adraste. He subdued almost all Asia Minor in one campaign only: He afterwards defeated Orobates, one of Darius's Generals, and last of all Darius himself and his Army, consisting of four hundred thousand foot, and an hundred thousand horse, in the narrow passes which lead from Syria to Cilicia. Darius preserved himself [In the Year of the World 3672, before J. C. 328, before the vulgar Æra 332.] by flight, but abandoned his Camp, Baggage, Children, Wife, and Mother.

After he had subdued all Syria, Alexander came to Tyre; and the Tyrians having denied him entrance into their City, he laid siege to it. He wrote at the same time to Jaddus, the High-priest of the Jews, that he expected to be acknowledged by him, and to receive the same submissions from him which he had hitherto paid the King of Persia[1]. But Jaddus refusing to comply, [In the Year of the World 3672.] upon pretence of having sworn fidelity to Darius, Alexander resolved to march against Jerusalem as soon as he had reduced the City of Tyre. This siege lasted a long time, and cost Alexander a great deal of trouble; but at last the City was taken and sacked, and as soon as this was done he enter'd Palestine, and subjected it to his obedience. As he was marching against Jerusalem, with an intention to punish the High-priest for refusing to submit to him, Jaddus fearing his resentment, had recourse to God by Prayers and Sacrifices, and the Lord in a dream commanded him to open the gates to the Conqueror, to meet him at the head of all his People dressed in white, with crowns upon their heads, and attended by the Priests in their formalities, to put on his pontifical ornaments, and so march in order to receive Alexander, as it were in a triumphant manner.

[1] Joseph. Antiq. l. ii. c. ult.

Jaddus obeyed, and Alexander seeing all this company at a distance advancing towards him, was struck with awe, and coming near to the High-priest, he saluted him first, then adored God, whose name was engraved on a thin plate of Gold worn by the High-priest upon his forehead. At the same time all the People surrounded Alexander, and saluted him with great acclamations. The Kings of Syria and all the great Officers about him could not enough admire the conduct of Alexander, and could scarce comprehend that he was in his right senses. Parmenio alone ventur'd to take the liberty of asking him familiarly, why he, to whom all People did homage, and prostrated themselves before him, had thus prostrated himself before the High-priest of the Jews. To this Alexander replied, that he paid this respect to God, not to the High -priest: For, added he, while I was yet in Macedonia, I saw the God of the Jews, who appear'd to me in the same form and dress as the High-priest at present, encouraged me, and commanded me to fear nothing, but march my Army with expedition into Asia, promising me all manner of success, and under his conduct to make me Master of the Persian Empire. For this reason, as soon as I perceiv'd this habit, I remember'd the vision that I had seen, and understood that my Undertaking was favour'd by God, and that under his Protection I might expect all kind of Prosperity; so that I hope very soon to get possession of the Persian Empire, and to accomplish happily all my designs.

Having said this, he embraced Jaddus, and was conducted by the Priests into the City, which he had no sooner enter'd, but he went up to the Temple, where he offered Sacrifices to the Lord, in all things conforming himself to the directions of the Priests, and leaving to the High-priest the honours and particular functions which were annexed peculiarly to his dignity. They shewed him the Prophecies of Daniel, wherein it is said that a Grecian Prince should destroy the Persian Empire. He applied to himself what was pointed out by the Prophet, and was more and more confirmed in his opinion that God had chosen him to execute this great work.

After this he dismiss'd the Multitude, and having convened them the next day, he bad them ask what they would of him. The High-priest desired only the liberty of living under his Government according to

C c to their own laws, and an exemption from the payment of any tribute every seventh year, because in this year the Jews neither tilled their grounds nor reaped. Alexander very readily granted their request; and as they besought him to grant the same favour to the Jews who dwelt beyond the Euphrates in Babylonia and Media, he promised that they should enjoy the same privileges as soon as he made a conquest of those Provinces. After this, having signified to them that if any of them would list in his Troops he would receive them, many offered their services and followed him.

This done, he left Jerusalem, and visited the other Cities of that Province; and as he was every where received with great testimonies of Friendship and Submission, the Samaritans who dwelt at Sichem, at the foot of Mount Gerizim, and were Apostates from the Jewish Religion, observing with how much goodness Alexander treated the Jews, resolved to say that they too were by Religion Jews; for this was commonly their practice: When at any time they saw the affairs of the Jews to be in a prosperous condition, they boasted that they were of their nation, and descended from Manasseh and Ephraim; but when they thought it was their interest to say the contrary, they would not fail to affirm, and even swear that they had no relation to the Jews.

They came therefore with great eagerness, and many demonstrations of joy, to meet Alexander, as far almost as the territories of Jerusalem. Alexander commended their zeal, and the Sichemites humbly intreated him to visit their Temple, and honour their City with his presence. He promised that he would at his return; and as they petitioned him to grant them an exemption from all taxes upon every seventh year, because they, as well as the Jews, neither tilled nor reaped that year, Alexander asked them if they were Jews. They said that they were Hebrews, and that the Phœnicians called them Sichemites. Alexander answer'd that he had granted this favour only to the Jews, but that at his return he would enquire more exactly into this affair, and would do them justice.

This Prince having conquered Egypt, and regulated all things there, and given his orders for the continuation of his new City of Alexandria[1], departed thence about spring, to go with the utmost expedition [In the Year of the World 2673.] into the East, in pursuit of Darius. In his way through Palestine, he was informed that the Samaritans, in a general insurrection, had killed Andromachus, Governor of Syria and Palestine, who coming to Samaria to regulate some affairs, the inhabitants set fire to his house and burnt him. This action was infinitely displeasing to Alexander, who loved Andromachus, and commanded all those to be executed who were concerned in his murder; the rest he banished from Samaria, and settled a colony of Macedonians in their room. What remained of the lands he gave to the Jews, and exempted them from the payment of tribute[2]. They who escaped this calamity, retired to Sichem at the foot of Mount Gerizim[3], which thereby became the Capital of the Samaritans, as it still continues to be at this day; and left the eight thousand Men of this nation who were in his service, and had accompanied him ever since the siege of Tyre, if he should send them back into their country, might renew the spirit of rebellion in their Countrymen, he sent them into Thebais, the most remote Province of Egypt, and there assigned them lands.

[1 Macc. i. 3.] We shall not enlarge here in making a recital of Alexander's conquests, for those are foreign to our subject, but shall take notice only, that after he had subdued all Asia and the Indies with incredible good fortune and rapidity, he gave himself up to all manner of Intemperance. Historians relate, that having drunk to excess, he fell sick and died, after he had obliged all the World to be quiet before him. Being sensible that his end was near, he sent for the Grandees of his Court, and declared to them that he gave the Empire to him who was of all the most deserving[4]. According to other Historians[5], he made a Will, wherein he regulated every thing relating to the Succession. The Author of the first [Ch. i. 7.] book of Maccabees says, that he divided his Kingdom among his Generals while he was yet living. It is certain that a partition was made of Alexander's Empire among the principal Officers of his Army, and that the Empire which he founded in Asia subsisted many Ages after him. He died in the year of the World 3681, before J. C. 319, before the vulgar Æra 323, at the age of three and thirty, and after a reign of twelve years, viz. six years as King of Macedon, and six as Monarch of Asia.

The spurious Josephus, or Josephus Ben Gorion[67], relates that Alexander, as we have have said, having enter'd the Temple of Jerusalem, the High-priest shewed him the Courts, the Treasures, and all the beauties of that holy place, and even the Holy of Holies, which was the most sacred and innermost part of the Temple; that Alexander having admired all these things, and blessed the Lord for them, said to the High -priest, I have a mind to leave here a monument of my Devotion and Respect to the God whom you adore; I will give therefore to the artificers a great quantity of Gold, that they may make a Statue of me as large as the life, and place it between the Altar of Burnt-offerings and the holy place. But the High-priest told him that he might make a better use of the sum which he intended to devote to God, by giving it to be a support to the Priests, and for the service of the People who should worship God in his holy Place; and that as to the monument he had mentioned, he would erect a more excellent one in honour of him. What monument then is this, replied Alexander? It is this, says Jaddus; all the Children of the Priests that shall be born this year in Jerusalem and all Judæa, shall be called by the name of Alexander: These will be so many living monuments, that shall every day revive the memory of your name in the Lord's Temple.

The Jews[8] tell us, that the Egyptians prosecuted the Hebrews before Alexander, in order to procure the restitution of the gold and silver vessels which their Ancestors had formerly borrowed of the [Ex. iii. 22. Dan. viii. 3, 4, 5.] Egyptians when they went out of Egypt. The cause was pleaded before Alexander, and the Egyptians set forth their right in the best manner they could; but when they heard the complaints and pretensions of the Hebrews, and understood that they required of them a consideration for their liberty, which for many years had been oppress'd unjustly, their pay for so many years labour, satisfaction for the bad usage they had received from the Egyptians, and vengeance for their Children that had been either drown-ed or expos'd; when the Egyptians heard all this, they retired in confusion, and desisted from their demands[9]. But I mention this law-suit only as an invention of the Rabbins.

Some have been of opinion[10], that it was the High-priest Jaddus who told Alexander the Great that the Gods who were worshipped by the Heathens were mortal Men only deified: But this opinion is no more than a conjecture, for which there is no foundation. The Antients[11], from whom we learn this particularity of Alexander, taken from a letter written to his Mother, have no where told us that this Prince had it from Jaddus, but from one Leo, who was an High-priest, and had the care of the Egyptian mysteries.

The name of this Conqueror is as much celebrated in the Writings of the Eastern People as in those of the Greeks and Romans; but they vary extremely from the accounts which our Historians give of him. They generally call Alexander Escander Dulkarnim[12], Alexander with two horns, by reason of the two horns of the World, the East and the West, as the People of the East term them, which this Conqueror subdued. Daniel represents him under the idea of a Goat, having a large horn, wherewith he attacks and overthrows a Ram with two horns of an unequal size, one whereof is much larger than the other. The Ram here mentioned is Darius King of Persia, overcome by Alexander, who having overthrown and trampled upon his Adversary, became extremely powerful, and his horn was prodigiously exalted, so that it was divided into four horns, extending towards the four parts of the World. These are the four Monarchies formed out of Alexander's Empire, viz. Syria, Egypt, Babylonia, and Greece.

The Eastern People do not agree among themselves as to Alexander's Father and Mother: The Mahometans generally relate his Original after the following manner[13]; Darab King of Persia made war with Philip King of Macedonia, and having defeated him, obliged him afterwards to retreat to a certain place, where he blocked him up so close, that he was forced to sue for peace, to give him his Daughter in marriage, and pay him an annual tribute of a thousand Beizats, or golden Eggs, each forty drams in weight. Darab having thus espoused the Princess, perceiv'd upon the wedding night that her breath was offensive, and resolved to send her back to her Father, tho' she was with child already by him. Philip received her, and the Son of whom she was deliver'd he named as if he had been his own, and called him Alexander.

Darab at his death left his Kingdom to his Son of his own name: This is the Darius Codomannus of the Greeks, and Dara in the Persian language signifies Sovereign. This Prince extended far the limits of his Territories, settled Posts throughout his Dominions for the more effectual procuring speedy intelligence of what pass'd, and reign'd for some years very happily. But as he govern'd with great pride and severity, he drew upon himself the odium of the great Men and common people, who rebelled against him. The Grandees wrote to Alexander, inviting him to come and make a conquest of Persia, which belonged to him as Son and Heir to Darab the first. Alexander desiring to take advantage of these dispositions in the men of principal quality, began with a refusal to pay the customary tribute of a thousand Beizats, or golden Eggs; and the King of Persia demanding them by his Ambassador, Alexander replied, The bird which laid these eggs is flown into the other world.

Upon this refusal, and the raillery accompanying it, Darius levied a powerful army, in order to reduce Alexander to obedience; who likewise on his part raised forces, and marched against Darius. The encounter between these two armies was very terrible; but after a bloody combat, the advantage remained intirely on Alexander's side. Darius retiring from the battle, no sooner came into his tent, but two of his chief officers pierced him thro' the body with their swords, and fled to Alexander's camp; who, upon notice of what had happened, ran instantly to Darius, took the head of the expiring Monarch and placed it on his knees, protesting that he was not any way concerned in his death. Darius opening his eyes, desired him to revenge his murder, gave him his daughter Roxana in marriage, and intreated him to leave the Provinces of Persia under the government of Natives of the country. Such, according to the Eastern People, was the death of Darius Codomannus.

Abulfarage, and Said the Son of Batrik, and Josephus Gorionides, are of opinion, that Nectanetus King of Egypt was Alexander's Father; that he being driven out of his own Country by Artaxerxes Occhus, disguised himself like an Astrologer, came into Macedonia, and having lain with Olympias, Philip's Wife, begat Alexander the Great. The same Abulfarage says, that Alexander defeated thirty Kings in battle, and built twelve Cities, four whereof he called by his own name. It is related also, that he commanded a bridge of admirable structure to be destroyed, which had been erected by an ancient King of Persia over the Tigris. Afterwards a bridge of boats was made in the same place, which continued there for a long time.

[1 Macc. i. 6, 7.] We read in the first book of Maccabees, that Alexander perceiving himself to be near his end, sent for his principal officers, who had been brought up with him ever since his youth, and divided his Kingdom among them while he was yet living. It is pretty difficult to reconcile this relation with the Greek and Latin Historians, who have mentioned the circumstances of his death, and the manner wherein he disposed of his dominions. But in this particular the Eastern Historians agree very well with the Sacred Historian; they say he died in the city of Scheherezour in Assyria[14], or as others will have it, in the Curdistan[15], after having divided his dominions among ninety of his principal Captains, the chief of whom was Ptolemy the Son of Lague. Eskenderons, otherwise Aridæus his Son, or rather, as Greek Authors say, his Brother, had no share in this succession, being addicted intirely to the study of Philosophy under the direction of Aristotle, who had been Alexander's Preceptor.

Another Historian informs us[16], that this Prince, a little before his death, divided the Provinces of Persia among the Sons of those Princes whom he had subdued and dispossessed of their Crowns, they paying fealty and homage to him; with a farther condition, of keeping such a number of troops in his service. But after the death of Alexander, they who had been tributary or feudatary Princes only, made themselves absolute, and Sovereigns, and are distinguished in the Arabian and Persian Histories by the title of Kings of the Nations; who make a particular dynasty in the succession of the Kings of Persia.

Josephus the Son of Gorion, whose history was published in Germany by Sebastian Munster, in the sixteenth Century, and has been since much more correctly printed in Hebrew at Constantinople, has related the History of Alexander the Great, which he learnt, as he says, from the Egyptian Magi, but he has disfigured it in so strange a manner, and blended it with so many fables, and instances of the grossest ignorance, that were I to relate them I shou'd think I made a very ill use of my own leisure, and too severely tried the Reader's patience. M. Gagnier has translated it into Latin, and joined another Latin Author with it, a Manuscript whereof has been discover'd lately in the Bodleian Library at Oxford. His work is formed upon the same plan as that of Ben Gorion; but there is a dispute among the Learned which of the two is the most ancient[17]. Both are stuffed with childish stories, and both value themselves upon borrowing their history from the Egyptian Magi.

The Eastern people agree, that Alexander the Great built a large strong wall, continued from one of the Caspian mountains to another, in order to prevent the Northern people, whom they called Gog and Magog, from penetrating into Persia, and the other Provinces which lie East and South of this wall, known among the Ancients by the name of the Caspian Gates. See CASPIAN.

During his abode at Babylon, amidst the greatest pleasures and debauches, he resolved upon rebuilding and inlarging the Temple of Belus[18], which Xerxes had demolished at his return from Greece. He began with ordering the place to be cleaned, and observing that the Magi to whom he had committed the care of this work, proceeded very slowly in it, he employed ten thousand of his troops about it. They laboured at it for two months before his death; and after all, the undertaking was so great that it remained unfinished. It was designed that the Jews who were in the army should have their share in this work as well as the rest,[19] but when their turn came, they represented, that their Religion prohibiting Idolatry, it was not lawful for them to assist in building an Edifice intended for an idolatrous worship. It was resolved however to press them, and correction and other violent means were used to force them to it; but they continued inflexible. Alexander admired their constancy, discharged them, and sent them home.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Quint. Curt. l. 4. c. 8. Eufeb. Chronic. Cedren.

Joseph. l. 2. contra Appion.

Ibid.

Justin. l. 12.

Diodor. l. 20. p. 774. Quint. Curt. l. 10.

Lib. 2. c. 7.

Translators' note. This Author was a French Man in Scaliger's opinion, originally of Tours; but as Basnage thinks, a native of some part of Bretany. He seems to have copied a Latin Author, who has written de Gestis Alexandri. The Manuscript of this Book is in the Bodleian Library, and has been printed lately by Mr. Gagnier, in his edition of Josephus Gorionides. It is stuffed with Contradictions and Absurdities.

This Impostor is supposed to have written about the eleventh Century.

Abraham Zaceuth. in Sepher. Juchasim. & Gemar. Babylon. ad tit. Sanhed. c. 11.

Vide si placet, Tertull. l. 2. contra Marcion. c. 20.

See M. Simon's Dictionary, under the Title of Alexander.

Tertull. de Pallio, c. 3. Minutius Felix in octavio. Cyprian. de vanitate idolatorum, c. 1. August. de Civit. Dei, l. 8. c. 5. & de consensu Evang. l. 1. c. 23. Bibl. Orient. p. 285, 286, & 317.

Bibl. Orient. Escander, p. 317.

D'Herbelot.

D' Herbelot Bibl. Orient p. 318.

This City is under 82 d. 20 m. of longitude; and under the 34 d. 30 m. of Northern Latitude in the third climate. Hist. des Juifs, t. 7. p. 63, &c. l. x. c. 7.

Tarikh Montekheb.

See Basnage

Diodor. Sicul. l. 17. Arrian. l. 7.

Joseph. contra Appion. l. 2.

Alexander Balas (II)

II. ALEXANDER BALAS, so called from Bala his Mother, was the natural Son of Antiochus Epiphanes, and in Medals is surnamed Theopator Euergetes. Some Historians will not allow him to be even the natural Son of Antiochus Epiphanes. Florus[1] calls him an unknown person, and of an uncertain extraction. Justin[2] says, that the Enemies of Demetrius King of Syria suborned a young Man, who was of the very meanest of the people, to declare himself to be the Son and Heir of Antiochus; and that he having made war with success against the King of Syria, got possession of his Kingdom. Appian[3] says plainly, that he took upon him to be of the family of the Seleucidæ, without any title to this pretension. And Athenæus affirms[4], that he was the supposed Son of Antiochus Epiphanes. But let this be as it will, the Roman Senate and the Jews, as well as the Egyptians and Syrians, acknowledged him to be the Son and Heir of this Prince.

Heraclides of Byzantium was the person who undertook to place Alexander Balas on the throne of Syria, and to pull down Demetrius, who was his particular Enemy. He carried Alexander whom we are speaking of, to Rome, and Laodicea the Daughter of Antiochus Epiphanes. He had the address to gain many of the Senators by his presents, and to persuade them that Alexander was the natural Son of Antiochus. When he thought every thing was well enough disposed, he brought young Alexander and his pretended Sister Laodicea, into the Senate-house. They desired assistance from the Senate, that they might be enabled to recover their Father's Inheritance, and the Kingdom of Syria, which was usurped by Demetrius. Heraclides seconded their petition with a long harangue; and altho' the Men of best understanding looked upon all this as so much farce, yet those of the Senators, who had been gained by Heraclides, and were the most numerous, carried it; and it was immediately resolved, that Alexander and Laodicea might endeavour to recover the dominions of their Father; that the Senate and Roman People would support them, and furnish them with succours to this purpose. Immediately Heraclides set about the levying of troops; and having conducted Alexander and Laodicea to Ephesus, he made preparations to carry on the war in earnest against Demetrius.

Alexander Balas went into Syria, and upon his first appearance Ptolemaïs, which was in the custody of some Malecontents, belonging to Demetrius's troops, opened the gates to him. Then he writ to Jonathan Maccabæus, to engage him in his party: The Letter run thus, King Alexander to his Brother Jonathan sendeth greeting. We have heard of thee that thou art a Man of great power, and meet to be our friend; wherefore now this day we ordain thee to be the High-Priest of thy Nation, and to be called the King's friend, and require thee to take our part, and keep friendship with us. At the same time he sent him a purple Robe, and a Crown of Gold. Jonathan therefore embraced Alexander's party, notwithstanding all the offers and sollicitations of Demetrius King of Syria. After this Alexander thought of nothing but of going to attack Demetrius. The two Kings engaged in the year 3853. The left wing of Demetrius broke and put to flight Alexander's right wing, which was placed opposite to it; but the right wing, where Demetrius commanded in person, was obliged to retreat. Demetrius being deserted by his Men, tho' alone, made resistance, and performed prodigies of valour. At last unhappily plunging into the mire, he fell from his horse, and was pierced through with arrows, fighting valiantly to the last gasp.

[In the Year of the World 3854. before J. C. 146. before the vulg. Æra 150.] Thus Alexander Balas got full possession of the Kingdom of Syria. When this was accomplished, he considered how to strengthen himself by an alliance with the King of Egypt. He demanded his Daughter in marriage, and Ptolemy Philometor gave her to him. The two Kings met at Ptolemaïs, where the marriage was concluded. [1 Macc. x. 51, & seq. 1 Macc. x. 69, & seq. 1 Macc. xi. 17.] Jonathan Maccabæus was invited to it by King Alexander; he went, and appeared there with great splendor. He brought large presents to Alexander, and was very well received by both Princes. The King of Syria shewed him all the marks of honour, cloathed him in purple, placed him in the number of his principal friends, and made him his Master of the Horse.

[In the Year of the World 3856. before J.C. 144. before the vulg. Æra 150.] Alexander had not been above two years upon the throne of Syria, when Demetrius Nicator, the eldest Son of Demetrius Soter, put himself at the head of some troops which he had received from Lasthenes of Crete, and passed into Cilicia. Alexander was then in Phœnicia, and as soon as he received news of it, he returned with all speed to Antioch, that he might put his affairs in order before the arrival of Demetrius.

In the mean time Demetrius gave the general command of his troops to Apollonius, who came and bid defiance to Jonathan, challenging him with very insolent language to engage him in a set battle. Jonathan and his Brother Simon marched against him, and came near Joppa; the Enemy's horse, after having suffered great fatigues all the day, was at last put to flight by Simon's Infantry: After which the two Brothers took Azothus and Ascalon, and returned loaden with spoil to Jerusalem. King Alexander being informed of this good success, advanced Jonathan to new honours, and sent him the buckle of gold which was given generally to near relations only of the King. Moreover, he gave him Accaron, and the territory belonging to it, to be enjoyed by him as his own property.

While this was transacting, Ptolemy Philometor, the Father-in-law of Alexander Balas, was considering how he might join the Kingdom of Syria to that of Egypt, and took private measures to destroy both Demetrius Nicator and Alexander Balas, that so he might become master of the [In the Year of the World 3858, before J. C. 142, before the vulgar Æra 146.] Kingdom, which they were both contending for. To this end he levied a powerful army, and under the pretence of going to the assistance of his Son-in-law, he entered Syria, and was received as a friend into all the Cities of the Country; after which having [1 Macc. xi. 1,2, & seq.] seized them[5], he gave out that Balas had prepared several ambuscades for him in Ptolemaïs, with an intention to surprize him. Jonathan Maccabæus came to join him near Joppa; and tho' the inhabitants of the Country did all they could to render him odious to Ptolemy, by shewing him the heaps of dead bodies which Jonathan had slain in the preceding war, the Temple of Dagon, which he had burnt, and the City of Azotus, which he had destroyed, the King nevertheless received him with great [1 Macc. xi. 4, 5, 6, 7.] marks of distinction; and Jonathan having attended him as far as the river Eleutherus, beyond Phœnicia, returned to Jerusalem.

Thus Ptolemy advanced as far as Antioch, without meeting any resistance, seated himself in the throne of Syria, and put the two Diadems upon his head of Egypt and Syria.

Balas, who had retreated into Cilicia, gathered there a numerous army together, marched against Ptolemy and Demetrius Nicator, who were both confederated against him, gave them battle upon the river OEnœparas, was overcome, and obliged to save himself by flight, with five hundred horse that followed him, in Arabia: where Zabdiel Prince of the Arabians had his head cut off, and sent it to Ptolemy. This is what the Author of the first book of Maccabees tells us. But other Historians[6] relate, that Alexander's Generals considering their own interests and security, treated privately with Demetrius, treacherously killed their Master, and sent his head to Ptolemy at Antioch. This happened in the year of the world 3859. before J. C. 141. before the vulg. Æra 145. Alexander Balas left a Son very young, called Antiochus Theus, whom Tryphon raised to the [Ver. 39.] Throne of Syria, as we shall see under the title Antiochus.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Flor. Epitome Livii. l. 52.
Justin. l. 55.
Appian. Syriac. p. 31.
Athen. l. 5. c. 10.
Vid. Joseph. Antiq. l. xiii. c. 5. Diodor. l. 32. Justin. l. 35, &c.
Polyb. excerptis. Vales. p. 194. Diodor. l. 32. in Bibliot. Photii.

Alexander Jannæus

ALEXANDER JANNÆUS, the third Son of John Hircanus. John Hircanus left three Sons, or five, according to Josephus[1]. He had a particular affection for Antigonus and Aristobulus, but could not endure his third Son Alexander, because he had dream'd that he would reign after him; which extremely afflicted him, inasmuch as according to the order of nature, he could not come to the Crown till after the death of his two Brothers. The event justified the truth of this dream. Antigonus never reigned, and Aristobulus but for a very short time;[2] so that after his death, Salome, or Alexandra his Widow, set Alexander at liberty, whom Aristobulus had kept in prison ever since their Father's death[3], and made him King in his room in 3899. before J. C. 101. before the vulgar Æra 105. As soon as Alexander was seated on the Throne, he put to death one of his Brothers, who had formed a design upon his life, and heaped great honours on another, called Absalom, who was contented with a private condition, and lived peaceably, and retired from all publick business.

Alexander was of a warlike enterprizing genius; as soon as he had regulated the affairs of his dominions, he marched with an army against Ptolemaïs. The inhabitants of the City gave him battle, but he repulsed them; and compell'd them to shut themselves up in the place where he laid close siege to them. The besieged seeing themselves pressed, had recourse to Ptolemy Lathyrus, who having been forced out of the Kingdom of Egypt by his Mother Cleopatra, continued in the Isle of Cyprus. Lathyrus promised to come to their assistance, and to this end fitted out a strong fleet. In the mean time, Demænetus, who had great credit in Ptolemaïs, persuaded the Inhabitants that it was much more for their advantage to carry on the war against the Jews, and run all the hazards of it, than to receive Ptolemy, and thereby throw themselves into certain and inevitable slavery. The people of the town submitted to these reasons, and ordered thanks to be returned to Ptolemy for the offer of his assistance.

Ptolemy Lathyrus was already at sea, when he received this news; notwithstanding which he advanced as far as Sicaminum, a City situated over-against Ptolemaïs, where he landed his army, which was composed of about thirty thousand horse and foot. They of Ptolemaïs persisted in refusing to receive him into their City; during which time the Deputies of Gaza came to him on the part of Zoilus Tyrant of Dora, and of Strato's Tower, desiring him to come to their assistance against Alexander Jannæus, King of the Jews, who laid waste all their Country.

Ptolemy was overjoyed at this opportunity of making an honourable retreat from before Ptolemaïs. In the mean while, Alexander, not thinking it advisable to hazard an engagement with Ptolemy, withdrew with his troops into their quarters, and underhand sollicited Cleopatra, Ptolemy's Mother, to be of his party, making outward professions of a desire to live well with her Son, and offering him four hundred talents to deliver up Zoïlus, with assurances that he would resign to him the several pieces of land which Zoilus was possess'd of in the Country. Ptolemy was not long without perceiving that Alexander played with him; for which reason he began the war [In the Year of the World 3900. before J. C. 100. before the Vulg. Æra 104.] against him with more vigour than before.

He attacked and took some places in Galilee. Alexander marched against him, and gave him battle near Asophus, which was not far from Jordan[4]. But Ptolemy [In the year of the World 3901, before J. C. 99, before the vulgar Æra 103.] killed thirty thousand of his Men, or fifty thousand, if Timagenes, who is cited in Josephus, is to be believed. After this victory Ptolemy met with no more resistance in the Country. He made every where great havock, and spread the terror of his name throughout all the Province. After this, his Mother Cleopatra fearing lest so much success should make him too powerful, equipp'd a large Fleet, and sent her Son Alexander into Phœnicia, where he was very well received by the People of that Country, who forsook Ptolemy's party, but appearing before Ptolemaïs, he was obliged to lay siege to it; and Cleopatra came to his assistance, to hasten the taking of the City.

[In the Year of the World 3902, before J. C. 98, before the vulgar Æra 102.] Alexander Jannæus, as his affairs then stood, thought it impossible to procure any succour but from Cleopatra. He went therefore to her Camp before Ptolemaïs, carrying great presents with him, and was received there as an unhappy Prince, who was Ptolemy's Enemy, and had no other refuge but the Queen's protection. Some of Cleopatra's friends would have persuaded her to seize upon Judæa; but Ananias, one of her Generals, who was by birth a Jew, diverted her from it, by remonstrating to her, not only the injustice and unworthiness of such a proceeding, in robbing thus a Prince who was her Ally, and came to throw himself into her arms; but likewise that it would make her odious to all the Jews in the world, who would detest such a piece of perfidiousness. Cleopatra being moved with these reasons, made an alliance with Alexander Jannæus, in the City of Scythopolis; and thereupon Alexander marched with his troops into Cœle-Syria, where he took the Town of Gadara, after a siege of ten months, and after that Amathus, which was one of the best fortresses in the Country, where Theodorus the Son of Zeno had lodged every thing most valuable that he had, as in a place of good security. [In the Year of the World 3903. before J. C. 97. before the vulg. Æra 101. In the year of the World 3906. before J. C. 94. before the vulg. Æra 98.] This Theodorus falling suddenly upon Alexander's army, killed ten thousand of his men, and plundered all his baggage.

This Misfortune was not sufficient to shake the courage of this Prince, he besieged Raphia and Anthedon, Towns lying upon the Mediterranean, and made himself Master of them. From thence he marched against Gaza, attacked it, and ravaged all the neighbouring Country. But Apollodotus, who commanded in the Town, having made a sally in the night, fell furiously upon Alexander's Camp, put the Jews into disorder, and had the advantage as long as night lasted; but as soon as it was day, the Jews discovering who they were, (for they thought at first that it was Ptolemy Lathyrus, who was come to the assistance of Gaza) recovered spirit, and killed near a thousand of the Enemy: notwithstanding which, they did not surrender up the place, but chose rather to expose themselves to the last extremities, than submit to the Hebrews. But after a long resistance, having lost their Captain Apollodotus, the Town was taken and sacked, not however without great loss on the Jews side, for they of Gaza seeing there was no hope of quarter, sold their lives very dearly. Alexander return'd to Jerusalem a year after he began the siege of Gaza.

[In the Year of the World 3907, be - fore J. C. 93. before the vulgar Æra 97.] When he returned to Jerusalem, he did not find all that peace which he had reason to expect there. The Jews revolted from him[5], and upon the feast of Tabernacles, while he was preparing to sacrifice as High-priest, according to custom, the People who were assembled in the Temple had the insolence to throw limons at him; for it is usual with the Jews, during this festival, to carry branches of Palm-trees and Limon-trees in their hands, as tokens of joy. To these insults they added reproaches, telling him, that as he had been a captive, he was not worthy to go up to the holy Altar, and offer solemn Sacrifices. Alexander, provoked with these affronts, put the seditious to the sword, and killed about six thousand of them. Afterwards he caused a partition made of wood to be erected about the Altar and the inner Temple, to prevent the People from coming so far as the Altar where the Priests performed their functions: And farther, to defend himself for the future against any such attempts, he took guards into his pay from Pisidia and Cilicia; for as he was no lover of the Syrians, he would have none of them in his service.

He made war afterwards against the Moabites and Ammonites, and having conquer'd them, obliged them to pay tribute to him. After that he attacked Amathus, the fortress beyond Jordan, which has been above mentioned, and razed it, Theodorus the Son of Zeno not daring in the mean time to encounter him. Upon another occasion, making war with Obeda, King of the Arabians, he fell imprudently into an ambuscade that was laid for him near Gadara, beyond Jordan; and having suffered himself to be inclosed by a troop of Camels in steep places, he had much ado to disengage himself, without any company, and got back to Jerusalem.

There he found the Jews more animated against him than ever, and was obliged to make war against them for six years, and kill above fifty thousand of them. All his endeavours to be reconciled with them were of no other use than to irritate them still more; so that having one day asked them what they would have him do in order to live well with them, and acquire their good-will, they answer'd all with one voice, that he had nothing to do but to kill himself, and at the same time sent deputies to Demetrius Eucærus, to desire succours from him against their King[6].

Eucærus coming into Judæa[7], join'd his army with the rebellious Subjects of Alexander, and encamped at Sichem. Alexander marched against him at the head of an Army consisting of six thousand two hundred foreign troops, and twenty thousand Jews, who continued faithful to him. Eucærus had in his Army three thousand horse and forty thousand foot. The two Kings did what they could mutually to weaken one another; Eucærus by debauching the foreign troops which were in Alexander's pay; and Alexander by taking off those Jews from the party of Eucærus who had joined his Army. But neither of them succeeding in his design, they were obliged to come to a pitch'd battle, in which all the advantage was on the side of Eucærus, the foreign troops belonging to Alexander being defeated so entirely, that not one of them was left; and this Prince was forced to fly for shelter to the Mountains.

This misfortune, which, in all appearance, must have ruined totally the affairs of Alexander, was what most contributed to his re-establishment. Six thousand Jews, who were touched with the unhappy condition of their King, came to join him; and Demetrius, content with the first advantage he had gained, retired into Syria, and left the rebels to make war against their King with their own forces. Alexander had the better of them in all skirmishes, and at last having shut up the briskest of them in a place called Bethom, he forced them, made them prisoners, and carried them to Jerusalem, where he order'd eight hundred of them to be crucified before him, during a great entertainment which he had made for his friends; and before these unhappy wretches expir'd, he commanded their wives and children to be murder'd in their presence. This was an unheard-of and excessive cruelty; and upon this occasion the People of his own party called him Thracides, that is to say, as cruel as a Thracian. A body of eight thousand mutineers, who still kept the field, frighted with this execution, secur'd themselves in places strong by situation, and left the King at peace in his dominions.

Antiochus, sirnamed Dionysius[8], having conquer'd the Kingdom of Damascus, resolved to make an irruption into Judæa: Alexander Jannæus having intelligence of his design, and being unwilling to run the hazard of a battle, gave orders for the making good intrenchments from Antipatris to Joppa, which was the only place thro' which they could penetrate into his Country; and having added a wall to these works, with wooden towers at proper distances, for about an hundred and fifty furlongs in length, he put a stop to Antiochus, and his enterprize miscarried. This Prince, having only burnt the wooden towers, thought it convenient to return, and bend his arms against the King of the Arabians, in which war he was killed.

After his death, the people of Damascus made a present of the Crown to Aretas, who came into Judæa, attack'd Alexander, and overcame him near Adida, in the plain call'd Sephala, to the East of Gaza and Anthedon. After this the two Kings made peace upon certain conditions. Aretas return'd [In the Year of the World 3918, before J. C. 81, before the vulgar Æra 85. In the Year of the World 3920. before J. C. 80. before the vulgar Æra 84. In the year of the World 3921. before J. C. 79. before the vulgar Æra 83. Deut. iii. 4, 13, 14. In the Year of the World 3923 before J. C. 77. before the vulgar Æra 81.] to Damascus, and Alexander went and besieged Dia, or Dium, in Arabia, near Pella, in the region of Decapolis[9]; and having taken it, he led his army to Essa,[10] where Zeno had lodged all that was most valuable belonging to him. He hemm'd in the place with a triple wall, and having taken it, he march-ed against Gaulan and Seleucia. These he took, and at the same time made himself master of the Valley of Antiochus, and the Fortress of Gamala. He accused Demetrius of several crimes, who was the proprietor of all these parts, and having taken possession of them, he returned in triumph to Judæa, after an absence of three years, which he had employed in these expeditions.

The Jews received him with joy, by reason of his great successes; and under his reign the dominion of the Hebrews was extended over many Cities which had been conquered by him. After this Alexander, having drank to great excess, fell sick, and having for three whole years laboured under a quartan fever, without intermitting however his military exercises; his strength was at last quite exhausted, and he died in the country of Gerasa, while he was besieging the Castle of Ragaba, situated beyond the river Jordan. Ragaba is probably the same with Argob of Bashan, which is mentioned by Moses.

The Queen his Wife observing him to be near his end, and foreseeing all she had to fear from a mutinous people not easily to be governed, her Children not being as yet of age to take upon themselves the conduct of affairs, Alexander told her under these perplexities, that if she had a mind to reign in peace, she should in the first place conceal his death from the Soldiery, till Ragaba was taken; in the next place, that when she returned to Jerusalem, she should give the Pharisees some authority in the State, and some share in the Government; that she should send for the principal of them, and shew them his dead body; that she should tell them they might use it as they pleased, and treat it with all manner of indignities, in revenge for the ill treatment they had received from him; and for the rest, that she would do nothing henceforward in the Government without their advice and participation.

He added, if you do thus, you may be assured, that they will make a very honourable funeral for me, and that you will reign in peace, supported by the credit and authority which they have acquired among the people. Having said these words, he expired, at the age of eight and forty, and after a reign of seven and twenty years; in the year of the World 3926. before J. C. 74. before the vulgar Æra 78. He left two Sons, Hircanus and Aristobulus, who disputed for the Kingdom and High Priesthood, till the time of Herod the Great; and by their division were the cause of the intire ruin of their family, and of Herod's elevation.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Joseph. de bello, l. 1. c. 3.

He began to reign in 3898. which was the year Hircanus died; and he died in 3899. before J. C. 101. before the vulgar Æra 105. s Joseph. de bello, l. 1. c. 3.

Joseph. Antiq. l. 13. c. 20.

Joseph. Antiq. l. 13. c. 20, 21.

Joseph. Antiq. l. 13. c. 21.

Demetrius Eucærus was establish'd King of Damascus in 3912. It was not therefore till after this year that he came into Judæa.

Joseph. Antiq. l. 13. c. 22.

Antiq. l. 13. c. 23. about the year 3917, or 3918.

Plin. l. v. c. 17.

Antiq. l. 14. c. 10.

Alexander (IV)

IV. ALEXANDER, the Son of Aristobulus and Alexandra, and Grandson of Alexander Jannæus, whom we have been speaking of. After Pompey had taken Jerusalem from Aristobulus, this Prince, with Alexander and Antigonus his Sons, and two of his Daughters, were carried in captivity to Rome. Young Alexander found means to escape by the way, and being returned to [In the Year of the World 3947. before J. C. 53. before the vulg. Æra 57.] Judæa, he raised an army of ten thousand foot, and fifteen hundred horsed, with which he performed many gallant actions, and seized the Fortresses of Alexandrium and Machærus, where he design-ed to fortify himself. But Gabinius, General of the Roman Troops which were in the Country, allow'd him no leisure to do this; for he drove him from the mountains, beat him near Jerusalem, killed three thousand of his Men, and made a great many prisoners. After which Gabinius laid siege to the Fortress of Alexandrium, where Alexandra, the Mother of Alexander, was in person. She went out of this Castle, and accommodated matters between her Son Alexander and Gabinius, upon condition that Alexander should surrender the Castles of Alexandrium, Hircanium, and Machærus, which Gabinius demolished in the year 3947.

Alexander Alexander observing Gabinius to be employed in Egypt, while Sisenna, whom he had left in Judea with an Authority to command there in his absence, was not in a condition to make head against the robbers, that ravaged all parts of the province: Alexander, I say, taking the advantage of this opportunity, [In the Year of the World 3949.] [1] stirred up new commotions in the Land, had recourse to arms again, and found means to form an army considerable enough to scour all the country. Wheresoever he met with any Romans, he sacrificed them to his resentment. They who escaped from him, fortified themselves on Mount Gerizim, whither he went and besieged them. Here it was that Gabinius found him at his return from Egypt.

Gabinius being apprehensive of engaging with the great number of troops which were with Alexander, sent Antipater to him with offers of a general pardon, provided they laid down their arms. This proposal had the desired success, many of them forsook Alexander, and retired to their own houses. But there were still thirty thousand men remaining with him, and with these he resolved to give Gabinius battel. The two Armies met at the foot of Mount Tabor, where, after a very obstinate action, Alexander was overcome, with the loss of ten thousand men. The rest were dispersed by flight.

Alexander began again under the government [In the Year of the World 3952.] of Crassus to embroil affairs; but Cassius, after the unhappy expedition against the Parthians, obliged him under certain Conditions to continue quiet,[2] and marched to the Euphrates to oppose the passage of the Parthians.

[In the Year of the World 3955.] During the quarrels between Cæsar and Pompey, Alexander and Aristobulus his father took Cæsar's part, who sent Aristobulus back into Judæa with two legions, in order to support his interests there.[3] But they who were of Pompey's party found means to poison him by the way. Nevertheless Alexander his son levied troops to join with those of Aristobulus; whereof Pompey having intelligence, sent directions to Scipio, who was then in Syria, to dispatch him. Alexander was therefore apprehended and carried to Antioch, where he was arraigned in form, and condemned to lose his Head; which Sentence was accordingly executed in the year of the World 3935, before J. C. 65, before the vulgar

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Joseph. Antiq. l. 14. c. 11. & de Bello Jud. l. 1. c. 7.
Joseph. de Bello Jud. l. 1. c. 6.
Joseph. Antiq. l. 10. c. 13.

Alexander (V)

V. Alexander, the Son of Jason, was sent to Rome to renew the Friendship and Alliance that there was between the Jews and Romans. He is named in the Decree of the Senate which was directed to the Jews in the ninth year of Hircanus's Pontificate, Æra 69.[1] in the year of the World 3935, before J. C. 65, before the vulgar Æra 69.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Antiq. l. 14. c. 16.

Alexander (VI)

VI. ALEXANDER, the Son of Theodorus, was sent to Rome by Hircanus, to renew his Alliance with the Senate.[1] His name is to be met with in the Decree of the Senate addressed to the Magistrates of Ephesus, and made in the Consulship of Dolabella; wherein it is declared, That the Jews shall not be forced into their service, because they cannot bear arms upon the Sabbath-day, nor have at all times such Provisions in their armies as are permitted by their Law.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ibid. l. 14. c. 17.

Alexander (VII)

VII. ALEXANDER, the Son of Herod the Great and Mariamne. His History is scarce to be separated from that of Aristobulus his brother, and the companion of all his misfortunes. These two Princes were the handsomest men of their times. After the tragical death of their mother Mariamne, Herod sent them to Rome, to be educated near Augustus, and instructed in all exercises [In the Year of the World 3982, before J. C. 18, before the vulgar Æra 22. In the Year of the World 3988, before J. C. 12, before the vulgar Æra 16.] which were suitable to their Quality. Augustus did them the honour to allow them an apartment in his Palace, intending to compliment their father Herod with this mark of his Esteem and Consideration.[1] Some time after, Herod undertook a journey to Rome, to make his court to Augustus,[2] and bring home his two sons, Alexander and Aristobulus, who had been taught every thing sufficiently becoming persons of their Rank. The people received them in Judæa with great joy and kindness, in consideration of their extreme beauty, and the Asmonæan Race, from which, by their Mother's side, they were descended. But Salome, Herod's sister, who had been the principal cause of Mariamne's Death, apprehending, that if the Authority were ever lodged in their hands, they would make her feel the effects of their resentment, resolved by her calumnies to alienate their father from them.

This she set about with great address, for fear of being discovered; and at first made no shew at all of her ill-will. Herod seeing them of age, married them; Alexander with Glaphyra the daughter of Archelaus king of Cappadocia, and Aristobulus with Berenice the daughter of Salome. Pheroras the King's brother and Salome having conspired to destroy these two young Princes, observed all their discourses, and themselves oftentimes furnished them with opportunities of speaking their thoughts freely, and with some [In the Year of the World 3976, before J. C. 24, before the vulgar Æra 28.] sharpness, concerning the manner wherein Herod had put to death their mother Mariamne.[3] All that they said was immediately reported to the King, in the most odious and aggravating terms, Herod, who knew not how to distrust his Brother and Sister, and was well acquainted with the humour of his Sons, gave credit very easily to what was told him of their saying very frankly, that they would one day revenge their Mother's Death. To check in some degree their lofty Spirits, he sent for his eldest son Antipater to Court, whom he had by one Doris, and had brought up at a distance from Jerusalem; because the Quality of his Mother was much inferior to that of Mariamne. He thought that by making Aristobulus and Alexander both sensible, that it was in his power to advance one of their Brothers above them, he should induce them to be more circumspect and tractable: but the quite contrary happened; the presence of Antipater did but exasperate the two young Princes.

Herod having placed his confidence in Antipater, never suspected any thing he said against his two Brothers; because he understood so well how to disguise his thoughts, that he seemed always to excuse and pity them; even while he was forming Accusations against them of the most heinous nature. At last Herod was so far alienated from his two Sons, that he carried them to Rome, [In the Year of the World 3993. before J. C. 7. before the vulgar Æra 11.] in order to accuse them there before Augustus, of designing to attempt his Life. The young Princes defended themselves so well, and affected the spectators in such a manner with their tears, that Augustus reconciled them with their Father, and sent them back into Judæa, in appearance perfectly united with Antipater, who returned with them, and expressed a great deal of satisfaction to see them restored to Herod's good Graces. When this Prince came back to Jerusalem, he convened all the people in the Temple, and declared publickly his intentions, that his Sons should reign after him, in the following Order; first Antipater, and after him Alexander and Aristobulus.

This Declaration more and more provoked the two Brothers; they broke out into complaints and murmurs: their discourses were immediately reported to Herod; and Pheroras, Salome and Antipater omitted nothing that might irritate him against his Sons. Pheroras came one day and told Alexander, that his sister Salome had informed him, that Herod was passionately in love with Glaphyra his wife. Alexander hereupon was not able to contain himself, but went directly to Herod, and declared to him what Pheroras had told him. Herod was strangely enraged against Pheroras, and reproached him bitterly with raising an Accusation of so black a nature against him. Pheroras threw the whole blame upon Salome, and she, who was present, defended herself with vehemence, and protested loudly that it was all false. At last the King, tired with their clamours, obliged them to go out of his presence, and highly commended the moderation of his Son, for discovering what so sensibly concerned him.

Herod had three Eunuchs, whom he very much trusted, and employed even in Affairs that were serious and of great importance. These were accused of being corrupted by Alexander with a large sum of money. The King commanded them to be put to the rack, and the extremity of the torture forced them to confess, that they had been often sollicited by Alexander and Aristobulus, to abandon Herod, as one who was now of no farther use, and who in vain endeavoured to disguise artificially his age, by having his beard and hair painted: that they would do much better to adhere to them, who in a little time must ascend the Throne, whether their Father would or no, and would be then in a condition to procure for them the first offices of State: That every thing was disposed in their favour: That their friends, and those of their party, were ready to imbark in any undertaking for the defence of that indisputable right which they had to the Crown. This was enough to make Herod very uneasy, and to render all persons about his Court suspected. All those who were known to be the particular friends of Alexander were by his order seized and put to the rack; the greatest part of whom died under the torture, without declaring any thing, because they had nothing to discover.

There was one however, who being overcome by pain, confessed that he had often heard Alexander say, when any one commended the height of his stature, or his dexterity in drawing the bow, that it wou'd be more for his advantage not to be so tall, and to be less expert in hunting, since the King his Father looked upon these qualities with jealousy; and that when he was walking he was forced to shorten himself as he came near him, lest he should appear too tall; and that when he was hunting, he did not dare to shoot directly at the mark, lest the King should take offence if any should praise his Son's dexterity before him. During the relaxation of his torture, he added, that the two Brothers had conspired to lay snares for their Father, while he was hunting; and were resolv'd if he should die, to go in all haste to Rome, and beg the Kingdom of Augustus. Letters were produced likewise from Alexander to Aristobulus, wherein he complained that Herod had given some Lands to Antipater, which produced an annual rent of two hundred talents, or about sixty eight thousand four hundred thirty seven pounds ten shillings.

Herod thought this to be sufficient reason for putting Alexander under arrest, and his principal friends to the torture.

Many Many died amidst their torments, without saying any thing, and the whole Court was full of terror, consternation and trouble. One of those who were racked declared, that Alexander had written to his friends, desiring they would dispose the Emperor to send for him to Rome; and that he had informations of great consequence to lay before him against his Father, who had preferr'd the friendship of Mithridates King of Parthia to his alliance with the Romans. He added, that this young Prince had poison ready prepared at Ascalon to give his Father; search was made to no purpose after this poison, for none ever could be found.

Alexander however was not dejected at this storm: he not only denied nothing which had been extorted from his friends by the violence of torture, but without scruple confessed it; whether he designed thereby to confound the credulity and suspicions of his Father, or to involve the whole Court in such perplexities, out of which they should not be able to extricate themselves. He got four papers presented to the King, wherein he told him, that to torment so many persons upon his account was all in vain; that it was true, he had laid ambuscades for him, and that the principal Courtiers were his accomplices: He named in particular Pheroras, and his most intimate friends. He added, that Salome came secretly to him in the night, and, whether he would or no, would lie with him. That the whole Court wished for nothing more than the moment when they might see themselves delivered from that pain which they were continually kept in by his cruelties and perpetual apprehensions.

In the mean time, Archelaus King of Cappadocia, the Father-in-law of Alexander[4], being informed of all that passed at Herod's Court, came to Jerusalem, with intention to procure, if he could, a reconciliation between Herod and his Son-in-law. At [In the Year of the World 3996. before J.C. 4. before the vulgar Æra 8.] first he pretended to be angry with Alexander, blamed very much his conduct, and commended the King's extremely. He said, that for his part he was ready to dissolve the marriage between Alexander and his Daughter Glaphyra, if he could discover that she had any share in the ill designs of her Husband. Herod seeing Archelaus so warmly to espouse his passion, began to relent, and re-assume the sentiments of a Father towards his Child. So that he first was for excusing his Son, and desiring Archelaus not to carry things to an extremity, nor to think of breaking off the marriage of his Daughter with Alexander.

Archelaus then began to justify the young Prince, and to throw the blame of all upon others, and chiefly upon Pheroras King Herod's Brother. And the King confess'd, that indeed he was the cause of all this mischief. Thus Alexander, by the prudent management of Archelaus, was restored to the good graces of his Father. The same Archelaus afterwards reconciled Pheroras with Herod, and so established peace throughout the whole Court.

[In the Year of the World 3998. before J.C. 2. before the vulgar Æra 6.] But this calm was not of long duration. One Eurycles a Lacedæmonian, having insinuated himself into Herod's favour, gained also the confidence of Alexander; so that this young Prince opened his heart freely to him concerning the grounds of that discontent which he pretended to have against his Father[5]. Eurycles told every thing to the King, who began again to conceive violent suspicions against his Sons, to observe them narrowly, and hearken to every thing that was said against them. Alexander having received among his Guards two persons whom Herod had dismissed from his service, the King grew jealous of them, and ordered them to be tortured. They confessed that Alexander had sollicited them to kill the King, while he was hunting, with a pretence and shew of shooting at some wild beast: That they were told they might be safe, if they gave out that the King falling from his horse was run thro' with his own weapons. They declared likewise, that there was Gold concealed in Alexander's stables.

After this the Governour of Fort Alexandrium was taken into custody; he was accused of having promised Alexander and Aristobulus to receive them into his Fortress, and to deliver up the money belonging to the royal Treasury which was lodged there. The Governour suffered the rack with great resolution, and maintained that nothing was more false than this accusation. But his Son coming in, confessed all that they had a mind to, and produced even letters from Alexander, the purport whereof run thus: As soon as we have executed what we have designed, we shall come to you. Therefore be ready to receive us into your Castle, according to your promise. Herod having seen these letters, no longer doubted but his Sons had prepared an ambush for him. Alexander affirmed that he never wrote these letters, but that Diophantus had counterfeited his character. Herod was then at Jericho, and having produced those persons before an assembly of the People, who had been forced by the violence of torments to accuse his Sons, the people stoned them; and had done the same by Alexander and Aristobulus, if the King had not sent Pheroras and Ptolemy to prevent them.

Herod having confined the two Princes in different prisons, commanded them to set down the whole Conspiracy in writing. Alexander and Aristobulus wrote, that indeed they had desired to retire to the King of Cappadocia, but that they had in no sort conspired against their [In the Year of the World 3998. before J. C. 2. before the vulgar Æra 6.] Father's life. That they should have been very glad if Tyrannus, one of their Accusers, had been examined more strictly, whom the people of Jericho, pushed on by the Emissaries of Antipater, had [world] stoned. The King commanded Alexander to be brought in fetters, as he was, to the Princess Glaphyra his Wife, in order to know of her, if she were not an Accomplice with his Son in the evil designs which he had formed against him. The sight of her Husband in so melancholy a condition drew bitter outcries from her, which were followed with a torrent of tears: She protested that she was guilty of nothing; but that indeed, to free herself from the uneasinesses which she suffered, she had resolved to retire with her Husband to the King of Cappadocia her Father, and from thence to go to Rome. Herod wrote to Archelaus, complaining that he too was entred into the Conspiracy with his Sons, without giving him any intelligence of it; and at the same time wrote likewise to Augustus, accusing his Sons of plotting against his life, and designing to fly out of his dominions.

Augustus answered him, that if his Sons were convicted of having made any attempts upon his life, he might punish them as parricides; but if they were guilty only of shewing a desire to withdraw themselves, he should treat them with more gentleness: That therefore it was his advice to have a Council called at Berytus in Phœnicia, composed of his friends and Archelaus King of Cappadocia, in order to deliberate with them concerning what he should do about his Children. Herod therefore convened as many of his friends as he thought proper at Berytus[6]; but would not invite Archelaus thither, nor the two Princes Alexander and Aristobulus. He left them at Platane, a village of the Sidonians, not far from Berytus, that they might be near at hand, if it should be necessary for them to appear.

Herod came into the assembly, which consisted of an hundred and fifty persons, and began himself to accuse his Sons with great vehemence and passion; and after he had spoken in terms very unbecoming a Father, he said, that not only Augustus had made him master of his Sons destiny, but that the very laws of the Jews declared that if a Son were accused by his Parents, and they put their hand upon his head, all who were present should stone him, [Deut. xxi. 18,19,20.] and put him to death. He added, that tho' he might treat his Sons in this manner after the crimes whereof they stood convicted, yet he was willing to have their opinion, and expected that they would join with him in giving an example of that just severity to future generations, which ought to be exercised upon inhuman and unnatural Children.

Saturninus, a Man of Consular Dignity, who was at the head of the Assembly, was for punishing Alexander and Aristobulus, but not with death. His three Sons who were present were of the same opinion: but Volumnius pronounced that they were worthy of death, and the majority gave their advice the same way; so that their death was resolved on by a plurality of voices. Herod therefore carried them to Tyre, and Nicholas of Damascus being just arrived there from Rome, the King asked, what his friends thought of his Sons? Nicholas answered, that the generality was of opinion they ought to be imprisoned, till he might with more leisure take his final resolution. Herod was a long time thoughtful, and at last determined to carry them to Cæsarea.

The whole City was in great expectation to see what course Herod would take in this juncture. Every one pitied the two Princes, but no one dared to speak plainly, for fear of incurring the King's displeasure. One of Herod's old Soldiers, who had a Son called Tyro[7], of the same age with Alexander, having ventured to take the liberty of making some pretty sharp remonstrances to the King upon this matter, and telling him that the Officers and Soldiers, and the whole Body of the People were moved with compassion for the young Princes, and pitied their sad fate; the King losing all patience, commanded the Soldier and his Son to be seized, and all besides whom he had named; and having put the old Soldier and his Son to the torture, the old Man declared that he had made a resolution to kill the King, and to expose himself, for the love of Alexander, to all sorts of punishments. The King, after this, thought of nothing more than of executing the project which he had formed, of dispatching his Sons. He sent them to Sebasta, otherwise Samaria, and there ordered them to be strangled. Their bodies were carried to the Castle of Alexandrium, where their Ancestors of the Mother's side had generally been buried. Thus died Alexander and Aristobulus, the Sons of Herod the Great and Mariamne, in the year of the world 3999, one year before the birth of J. C. and four before the vulgar Æra.

Josephus relates, that Glaphyra, Alexander's Wife, having been sent back by Herod to her Father Archelaus, married for her second Husband Juba King of Mauritania; and that afterwards she married Archelaus Brother to Alexander her first Husband. This last appeared one night to Glaphyra, and reproached her with the little love she had for him, since not contented with a second marriage, she had contracted a third with his Brother Archelaus. For this reason, added he, I am determined to shew you, that my affection is more constant than yours; and for a proof that I have not forgotten you, within five days I will take you once more to my self, and deliver you from the infamy in which you now live. Accordingly Glaphyra died at the end of five days[8].

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ibid. l. 15. c. 13.
Ibid. l. 16. c. 1.
Antiq. l. 16. c. 6.
Antiq. l. 16. c. 12.
Joseph. Antiq. l. 16. c. 16.
Antiq. l. 16. c. 17.
Translators' note. The Father, not the Son, is called by Josephus, Teron, or, as our Au- thor has it, Tyro. Εἰ δὲ αὐτῷ πάλαι στρατιώτης ὀνόματι Τύρων, υἱοῦ αὐτῷ καθ' ἡλικίαν ὄντος Ἀλεξάνδρῳ φίλα, &c. Antiq. l. xvi. c. xi.
Joseph. Antiq. l. 17. c. 15.

Alexander (VIII)

VIII. Alexander a Jewish Impostor of the City of Sidon, who so much resembled Alexander the Son of Herod and Mariamne, of whom we have been speaking, that all who had ever been acquainted with him were persuaded that this was really he[1]. He gave out, that his Brother Aristobulus and he had been delivered from death by the kindness of a friend, who had placed others in their room at the time when they were to have been executed. He came into the Isle of Crete, where all the Jews owned him to be the Son of Herod, and furnished him with money to provide an equipage, and make a journey to Rome. He landed at Puzzuolo, where the Jews received him with honour. Herod's friends, and they who had known Alexander most particularly, were deceived by the great resemblance which he bore to him, so that the Jews of Rome came in crowds to meet him; and he entred the City with a train that might become a King.

Augustus was the only one who was not deluded; the air of this Man, and his hands, which had been hardened by labour, discovered to him that he was an Impostor. He first of all asked him what was become of his Brother Aristobulus, and why he did not come to Rome, to share either in his good or bad fortune. He answered, that he was in the Isle of Cyprus; that he was left behind there, because they would not both expose themselves to the dangers of the sea; and that if any misfortune should befall one of them, the other might be preserved. Augustus putting on a serious air, took this young Man aside, and said to him, If you will declare the truth to me, I promise to dismiss you without taking away your life. Tell me then who you are, and who has engaged you to play the counterfeit in this manner; for you are not of an age to form an intrigue of this nature of your self. The young Man being unable to persist longer in this falshood before the Emperor, confessed the whole cheat to him; and Augustus, not to violate the promise he had made, sent him to the Gallies, because he was a corpulent and robust Fellow; and put the person to death who had persuaded him to act this part. This happened some time after the death of Herod, in the year of the world 4001. of J. C. 1. and three years before the vulgar Æra.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Joseph. Antiq. l. 17. c. 14.

Alexander (IX)

IX. Alexander, the Son of Phasaël and Salampso, Herod's Sister. Joseph. Antiq. l. 17. c. 7. p. 628. a.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Alexander (X)

X. Alexander, the Son of Alexander the Son of Herod, and Glaphyra Daughter to the King of Cappadocia. Joseph. Antiq. l. 17. c. 17. p. 628. e.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Alexander (XI)

XI. Alexander, the Son of Tigranes, and Grandson of Alexander who was put to death by Herod. He married Jotape the Daughter of Antiochus King of Comagena. Joseph. Antiq. l. 17. c. 7.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Alexander (XII)

XII. Alexander, a Jew of Cyrene, was accused by Ruffians before Catulus Governour of this Province, and by him put to death[1], about the year of J. C. 73.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Joseph. de Bello, l. 7. c. 38.

Alexander (XIII)

XIII. Alexander, the Son of Simon the Cyrenian, and Brother of Rufus, who assisted our Saviour in carrying his Cross, as he was going to Mount Calvary.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Alexander (XIV)

XIV. Alexander Lysimachus, Alabarch of Alexandria, and Brother to Philo the Jew. Some believe that this was he who was in company with the Priests, when the Apostles were carried before the Senate to give an account of their doctrine and conduct. This Alexander was the wealthiest Jew of his time. He made rich presents to the Temple, and was the Father of Tiberius Alexander, who renounced the Religion of the Jews, and turned Pagan[1]. Alexander Lysimachus had the management of the Empress Antonia's affairs. Caligula put him in prison; and he was not set at liberty till the reign of Claudius, Caligula's Successor[2].

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Joseph. Antiq. l. 20. c. 3.
Antiq. l. 19. c. 4.

Alexander (XV)

XV. Alexander, a Jew of Ephesus, who addressed himself to the Rabble that had mutinied against St. Paul, and endeavoured to appease them. But when he appeared in the Assembly, and was known to be a Jew, the Ephesians began to cry more loudly, Great is the Diana of the Ephesians. It is not known whether this Alexander were for or against S. Paul, whether he were a Jew, or a Jew converted to Christianity.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Alexander (XVI)

XVI. Alexander, an Artificer in Copper, spoken of by St. Paul to Timothy. The holy Apostle excommunicated him and Hymenæus, because they had blasphemed against the truth.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Alexandra (I)

I. ALEXANDRA, otherwise Salome, (for Salome in Hebrew[1] signifies much the same thing as Alexandra in Greek; and in like manner Alexandra is in Greek the same as Salome in Hebrew. In the latter times of the Hebrew Commonwealth, almost all the Jews had two names; one Greek, the other Hebrew or Syriac.) Alexandra was first of all Wife to Aristobulus, sirnamed Philellen, or a friend to the Greeks, by whom she had no Children. She afterwards married Alexander Jannæus, Brother to Aristobulus her first Husband, and of whom we have spoken at large under the Article of ALEXANDER JANNÆUS. She lived seven and twenty years with this second Husband; and when she saw him ready to expire before the Castle of Ragaba, which he was then besieging, she represented to him the sad condition which she and her Children would be left in, because the Jews had always, and almost unanimously, opposed him[2].

Alexander answered her, that in the first place she should conceal his death from the Soldiers, till Ragaba was taken; secondly, that when she came to Jerusalem she should send for the principal Pharisees, whose power was very great among the Jews, whether they had a mind to make those odious whom they hated, or to recommend them to the esteem and friendship of the people. When therefore they are come, says he, shew them my body, and tell them that you leave it absolutely to their disposal; that they may throw it into the common Sewer, if they please, without burial, and abuse it every way that they can think on, in revenge for the little consideration I have had for them. You must add, that you resolve to do nothing without their approbation and advice, in the government of the Kingdom. If you behave yourself in this manner, you may assure your self that they will perform all funeral honours for me, in a more splendid manner than you would do your self, and that they will be so pleased with the deference you will pay them, as to let you govern in peace.

[In the year of the World 3926. before J. C. 74. before the vulgar Æra 78.] Alexandra followed the advice her Husband gave her[3], and the Pharisees, who were won by these marks of respect which the Queen shewed them, began publickly to praise the King as a Prince who had governed with great justice; that he deserved all imaginable honours from the People, and to have his funeral performed in the most magnificent manner. The people were easily persuaded to be of the Pharisees opinion, and never was any Prince buried in a more pompous manner than King Alexander Jannæus. This Prince, when he died, left two Sons, Hircanus and Aristobulus, and gave the Regency of the Kingdom to the Queen Alexandra. Thus she governed peaceably and happily; because she always seemed to disapprove whatever her Husband had done against the People. As for the rest, she had no more properly than the title of Queen, the Pharisees in reality governing in her name. Some affairs of consequence notwithstanding she would undertake without their direction, and kept a good number of Soldiers in her pay, so that she was formidable to all her neighbours, and obliged them to give her Hostages.

Under her government the whole Country enjoyed peace; no enemy from abroad disturbed the tranquillity of the People. The Pharisees were the only persons that caused any disturbance, by demanding of the Queen that she would revenge the death of eight hundred Men, who had been crucified by King Alexander Jannæus, and would deliver up those who had promoted this act of inhumanity. They first of all ordered one Diogenes to be dispatched, and after him another; so that none of Alexander's friends could be secure of their lives. At last the principal Persons about Court, and they who had served in the late King's armies, came to the Palace with Aristobulus at their head, and shewing sufficiently by their air that what had passed was no way [In the Year of the World 3933. before J. C. 67. before the vulgar Æra 71.] agreeable to them, they demanded of the Queen, that if there was no consideration to be had for their old services, she would at least permit them to retire, and to secure their lives from the vexations of the Pharisees.

Aristobulus, the Son of Alexandra, expressed his dissatisfaction more than all the rest, and spoke to his Mother with a great deal of vehemence. The Queen not knowing what else to resolve on, distributed these old Officers in the several Fortresses of the Country, but put none of them into the Castles of Hircanium, Alexandrium, and Machærus, whither she had removed every thing valuable that she had.

[In the Year of the World 3934, before J. C. 66, before the vulgar Æra 70.] Some time after Alexandra sent her Son Aristobulus towards Damascus, with troops against Ptolemy Mennæus, who very much incommoded this City. But Aristobulus returned without having done any thing that was memorable. After this, Tigranes coming to besiege Ptolemais, Alexandra sent Ambassadors to him with great presents, desiring him not to undertake any thing against her dominions. Tigranes received the Ambassadors very well, promised to have regard to the Queen's request, and was soon after obliged to return into Armenia to oppose Lucullus, who was ravaging it.

At last Queen Alexandra falling dangerously ill, Aristobulus her Son thought it not convenient to defer any longer the execution of a design which he had formed a great while since. He went out by night, attended only with one Servant, and visited all the Castles where his Father's friends commanded, in order to make himself Master of them, and prevent the Pharisees, lest they should seize upon the Government. The next day, as soon as it was light, and it was known that Aristobulus was absent, the Queen suspected that he was gone upon some enterprize, and was confirmed in her opinion, when Couriers came one after another, to inform her that the Fortresses had for the most part surrendred one after another to Aristobulus.

This news threw her into great consternation; orders were given for seizing the Wife and Children of Aristobulus, whom he had left at Jerusalem, and they were kept in the Fortress which was adjoining to the Temple. In the mean time Aristobulus immediately got possession of two and twenty places of strength, and saw himself soon at the head of a great number of Troops which came in voluntarily to serve him. Hircanus his Brother, and the principal persons of the Nation, came to the Queen, and desired her to put things into some order; but her indispolition would no longer give her leave to think of war. She died soon after, at the age of seventy three, after she had been nine years Regent. In the year of the World 3935. before J. C. 65. before the vulgar Æra 69.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

שלמהpacifica, felix. Ἀλέξανδρος may signify one who assists men, or one who protects them against the violence of other men.
Antiq. l. xiii. c. 23.
Ibid. c. 24.

Alexandra (II)

II. ALEXANDRA, the Daughter of Aristobulus, and Wife of Philippion[1], the Son of Ptolemy Mennæus, Prince of Chalcis, a Province situated between Libanus and Antilibanus. Ptolemy himself falling in love with Alexandra, killed Philippion, and married his Widow.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Antiq. l. 14. c. 15.

Alexandra (III)

III. ALEXANDRA, Daughter of the High-Priest Hircanus, and Wife to Alexander the Son of Aristobulus, which Aristobulus was Brother to the High Priest Hircanus, and the Son of Alexander Jannæus, King of the Jews. The Alexandra of whom we are speaking, was the Mother of Mariamne, Herod the Great's Wife, and of Aristobulus who was invested with the High-Priesthood, but enjoyed it a year only, Herod having procured him to be drowned in a bath at Jericho[1].

Herod having put to death the High-Priest Hircanus, sent for a Priest called Ananel, from Babylon, on whom he conferr'd the High-Priesthood. Alexandra was so provoked at it, that she wrote to Cleopatra, the Wife or Mistress of Antony, whom she intreated to ask of Antony the Pontificate for her Son Aristobulus, Brother to Mariamne, and Grandson to Hircanus[2]. Antony having heard much of Mariamne's extreme beauty, and of Aristobulus, desired Herod by letter to send Aristobulus to him. Herod excused himself, and being over-powered by the sollicitations of his Wife Mariamne, he gave the High-Priesthood to Aristobulus his Brother-in-law; but, as we have said, he knew well how to get rid of him very soon; in the mean while he complained mightily of Alexandra, who had addressed her self to Antony for this favour. He commanded her to continue in the Palace, and not to intermeddle in affairs of any kind. The King had her narrowly observed, so that she could neither do nor say any thing, but [In the year of the World 3968. before J. C. 32. before the vulgar Æra 36. In the year of the World 3969. before J. C. 31. before the vulgar Æra 35.] what was immediately reported to him.

Alexandra inraged to see herself reduced thus to a kind of Captivity, wrote to Cleopatra, and complain'd of it[3]. Cleopatra sent her word, that she should endeavour by all means to retire with her Son Aristobulus into Egypt; and that she would very readily receive them. Alexandra therefore took care to have two Biers or Coffins provided, one for her self, the other for her Son; she gave orders for the carrying these two Coffins to a Vessel which waited for them at sea. But one of Alexandra's Slaves discovered this intrigue to Herod, who gave directions for seizing both her and her Son, at the very instant when they were conveying them away in the manner which she had projected. However, he did not treat her ill on this account, apprehending the resentment of Cleopatra, and that she might in return do him some ill office with Mark Antony.

[In the year of the World 3970. before J. C. 30. before the vulgar Æra 34.] After that Herod had procured the death of Aristobulus, Alexandra's Son, this Princess pretended to believe, that it was purely accidental, waiting in the mean while for a fair opportunity of taking her revenge[4]. She wrote an account to Cleopatra of what had passed, and the danger she was in every day of losing her life. Cleopatra was touched with her misfortune, and never ceased importuning Antony to revenge the death of this young Prince, till she had prevailed with him to send to Herod, and order him to appear before him, and clear himself of the crime he was accused of. Herod went, but so wrought upon Antony by his presents, that he wou'd no longer hearken to Cleopatra, and declared, that Herod being King of the Jews, was accountable to no man for his actions.

In the mean time a report was spread, that Antony had put Herod to death; whereupon Alexandra sollicited Joseph, Herod's Uncle, who governed in the absence of this Prince, that she and Mariamne might be carried to the Roman Legions, that if any disturbance should happen, they might be secure. But this design was not executed, because they received letters at the same time from Herod, which contradicted the rumour that had gone abroad. And when this Prince returned to Jerusalem, being informed of all that had passed by his Sister Salome, he ordered Alexandra to be close confined, and put in fetters.

[In the Year of the World 3976. before J. C. 24. before the vulg. Æra 28.] Herod having put to death Mariamne, for reasons which will be mentioned in another place, her Mother Alexandra fearing the same fate[5], pretended to condemn her Daughter's conduct, and to approve of her death. When she was led to the place of execution, Alexandra loaded her with abusive language, and would have flown at her and torn her hair; which all who were spectators of her behaviour looked upon as instances of folly and baseness that deserved contempt. The grief which Herod conceived at the death of Mariamne was the cause of an indisposition that had reduced him very low; and Alexandra thinking he was at the last extremities, sollicited the Governours of the two Forts in Jerusalem to put them both into her hands, and secure them for Herod's Children by Mariamne, to prevent others, if the King should die, from getting them into their possession. The Governours, who did not love Alexandra, gave immediate intelligence to Herod of what was doing; and he, without any delay, gave orders for dispatching her, which were as soon executed; in the year of the World 3976. before J. C. 24. before the vulgar Æra 28.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ibid. l. 15. c. 3.
Ibid. c. 2.
Ibid. c. 3.
Ibid. c. 4.
Joseph. Antiq. l. 15. c. 11.

Alexandra (IV)

IV. ALEXANDRA, the Daughter of Phasael, Herod the Great's Brother. She married Timias, one of the most powerful Men in the Isle of Cyprus, and died without Children[1].

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ibid. l. 18. c. 7.

Alexandria

ALEXANDRIA, a celebrated City in Egypt, built by Alexander the Great, in the year of the World 3673. before J. C. 327. or 331 before the vulgar Æra. It is situated between the Mediterranean and the Lake Mœris[1]. There was before a village called Rachotis, at the nearest place to this port. Dinocrates the celebrated Architect drew the plan of it, and gave the dimensions of it. The City of Alexandria is pretty often to be met with in the Latin text of those books of the Old Testament which were written before the [Nahum iii. 8. Jer. xlv. 25. Ezek. xxx. 14,15,16.] reign of Alexander. But this name is no where in the original Hebrew; we read there of No-Ammon[2], which is probably the City of Diospolis in the Delta, between Busiris to the South, and Mendesa to the North.

The Arabians inform us that Alexandria was called Caissoun, before Alexander the Great rebuilt or enlarged it[3]. Dinocrates who prepared the plan of it, was the same Architect who rebuilt the Temple of Diana of Ephesus, which had been burnt by Erostratus. He had the direction of the work of this new City; but that it might be carried on with more diligence, Alexander appointed Cleomenes, one of his Captains, to be the Surveyor[4]. Cleomenes was of Naucratis in Egypt. Justin calls him the founder of Alexandria, as having contributed a great deal to the improvement of it[5]. Aridæus, Alexander's Brother, was charged with the care of carrying the body of this Prince from Babylon to Alexandria. He employed two years in making preparations for the removal of it, the pomp whereof is described to us by Diodorus Siculus. There had been a prophecy current, intimating that the place where Alexander should be buried should be prosperous and flourishing: The Governours therefore of the several Towns and Provinces disputed among themselves who should have the honour and advantage of possessing his Body. There was a proposal for the conveying it to Aigui in Macedonia, where generally the Kings of this Country were buried; but Egypt carried it. His body therefore was deposited first of all at Memphis, and afterwards was removed to Alexandria. It is said[6] to have been laid in a coffin of gold, and to have been embalmed in honey.

Alexandria belonged successively to the Greeks and Romans, then to the Greeks again, till it fell under the dominion of the Arabians, while Omar III. Mahomet's Successor was Caliph. The happy situation of this City between the Mediterranean and the Red Sea, and upon the river Nile, drew thither the Commerce of the East and West, and made it in a very little time one of the most flourishing Cities in the world. When the Arabians took it, there were four thousand Palaces still standing in it[7], four thousand Bagnios, forty thousand Jews paying tribute, four hundred squares, and twelve thousand persons who sold herbs and fruits. This City, which was formerly so rich and powerful, is no more than a village without any thing remarkable in it besides its ruins, and the remains of its past grandeur[8]. The Egyptians or Kopts call it generally Rachot, this being, as we have observed, the name of the old village in the room whereof it was built. See hereafter the titles NO-AMMON and THEBES.

The Christians still at this day reverence the Churches of Alexandria dedicated to St. Mark and St. Catherine; one is celebrated for the tomb of this Evangelist, whose body was carried away by the Venetians. There is a picture in it which, according to the tradition of the Kopts, who are the possessors of this Church, was painted by St. Luke. It represents the Archangel St. Michael, at a little more than half his length, with a sword in his hand. The other Church is famous for the martyrdom of St. Catherine, which she suffer'd for the sake of Jesus Christ in the reign of Maximian.

Another thing considerable there is, the remains of Cleopatra's magnificent Palace, and without the City Pompey's Pillar is very much admired, the shaft whereof is six fathoms high, all of one piece, of admirable Granite[9]. It is the finest column that is any where to be seen.

After the death of Alexander the Great, Ptolemy, firnamed Soter, who had been Captain of the guards to this Emperor, had his bones conveyed to Alexandria, and made this City the capital of his Kingdom. The Ptolemy's his successors reigned there for two hundred and ninety three years. The Commonwealth of the Jews had great correspondence with the Kings of Egypt, who succeeded Alexander, and reigned in Alexandria. Here is a list of these Princes.

Alexander the Great died in the year of the world 3681, before J.C. 319, before the vulgar Æra 323.

Ptolemy, the Son of Lagus, firnamed Soter, reigned thirty nine years, and died in 3720.

Ptolemy Philadelphus reigned thirty nine years, and died in 3758.

Ptolemy Euergetes reigned twenty five years, and died in 3783.

Ptolemy Philopator reigned seventeen years, and died in 3800.

Ptolemy Epiphanes reigned twenty four years, and died in 3824.

Ptolemy Philometor reigned thirty seven years, and died in 3861.

Ptolemy Euergetes or Physcon, reigned fifty three years, part with his Brother Philometer, part alone. He died in 3888.

Ptolemy Lathyrus reigned thirty six years six months. He died in 3923.

Cleopatra, the Daughter of Lathyrus, and Wife of Alexander I. reigned six months.

Alexander I. the Nephew of Lathyrus, was established in 3924, and died in 3943. See Usher under the year 3924.

Alexander II. the Son of Alexander I. was dispossess'd by the Alexandrians in 3939.

Ptolemy Nothus, or Auletes, the Son of Lathyrus, reigned thirteen years, and died in 3953.

Ptolemy, firnamed Dionysius or Bacchus, reigned three years eight months, and died in 3957.

Cleopatra reigned from 3957, and killed herself in 3974. The City of Alexandria[10] received the light of the Gospel, by the ministry of St. Mark, the Disciple of St. Peter, about the year of J.C. 59 or 60. He suffer'd martyrdom there towards the year 68, and was succeeded by Anian, whom he had converted in his first voyage to this City.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Arrian. l. 3. Strabo l. 17. Pausan. in Eliacis.

Translators' note. See a particular account of this place, and a description of the Delta, under their respective Articles in this Dictionary.

D'Herbelot. Bibl. Orient. p. 320.

Arrian. Quint. Curt. &c.

Justin l. 13. c. 4.

Said Sil. Batrik.

Bibl. Orient. p. 320.

Thevenot. p. 1. l. 2. c. 1, 2.

Granite is a stone which some pretend the Ancients had the secret of dissolving.

Translators' note. The Jews were very numerous in this City; here they had several fine Synagogues, and were permitted to have a particular Magistrate of their own nation, to de- cide matters in dispute among them, according to their own laws. The Alexandrian Jews had likewise a Synagogue at Jerusalem, where there was an Academy for the instruction of their youth in the Law and Hebrew language: And the History of the Acts informs us, that the Jews of this Synagogue were some of the warmest oppofers of St. Stephen.

Alexandrium

ALEXANDRIUM, a Castle built by Alexander Jannæus, King of the Jews, upon the top of a Mountain near Corea[1]. We do not know distinctly where Corea was, but we know that it was the principal City of Judæa, on the side of Samaria, in the way to Jericho, towards the frontiers of Ephraim and Benjamin[2]. Gabinius demolished the Castle of Alexandrium[3], but Herod rebuilt it[4]. The Princes of Alexander Jannæus's family were for the most part buried there. Thither Herod order'd the bodies of his Sons Alexander and Aristobulus to be carried, who had been put to death by his directions at Sebaste, otherwise called Samaria[5].

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Antiq. l. xiii. c. 24. xvi. 2. xiv. 6 & 10.
See Joseph. l. 5. de Bello, c. 4. & Antiq. l. 14. c. 6.
Antiq. l. 14. c. 10.
Ibid. l. 14. c. 27.
Ibid. l. 16. c. ult.

Alexas

ALEXAS, the third Husband of Salome, Sister to Herod the Great. Alexas and Salome were the Persons to whom Herod the Great sent orders for executing those Jews of the first rank whom he had confin'd in the Hippodrom at Jericho, as soon as he expired; that all Judæa being afflicted at the death of so many Persons of quality, might appear at least to be then mourning for their King. But Alexas, instead of obeying such cruel orders, set them all at liberty as soon as the King's eyes were closed; whereby he procured the esteem and friendship of all the Jews[1], in the year of the World 4000, of J.C. 1, before the vulgar Æra 5.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ibid. l. 17. c. 10.

Alian

ALIAN,

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Alian

ALIAN, the eldest Son of Shobal, the Son of Seir, 1 Chr. i. 40.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Allegory

ALLEGORY, is a figure in discourse which we are then said to use when we make the terms which are peculiar to one thing to signify another. It is a Metaphor continued and pursued: For example, when the Prophets represent the Jews under the Allegory of a Vine, planted, cultivated and watered by the hand of God, and which instead of producing good fruit, brings forth verjuice or sour grapes; and so of others.

Allegories[1] are very frequent in Scripture, as well as Metaphors, Parables, Similitudes, and Comparisons. The Jews, says St. Jerom[2], and in general the People of Syria and Palestine, were fond of this sort of figurative discourse, and made use of it in almost every thing they said. One principal business of a Commentator is, to distinguish between the allegorical and literal meaning of any passage, and to reduce the allegorical to the literal sense. The antient Jews, as the Therapeutæ[3], the author of the book of Wisdom[4], Josephus[5], and Philo a, and in imitation of them, the generality of the old Fathers, turned even the historical passages of the Scripture into Allegories, and such places where the literal sense is most clear. These allegorical explanations may edify indeed, but they are good for little else: They cannot regularly be produced as proofs of any thing, unless where Jesus Christ or his Apostles have made use of them as such. See hereafter this title, the Sense of Scripture.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Translators' note. The old Philosophers and Poets were used to explain things generally in an al- legorical way: Pythagoras instructed his Disciples in this symbolical manner, believing it to be the most proper method of explaining Religion, and that it was an help to Memory. Euclid of Megara did indeed forbid the use of Allegories and Emblems, as fit only to render things obscure: And Socrates taught in a manner the most natural and simple, ex- cepting those Ironies which he sometimes interspersed in his Discourses. But the Philosophers for the most part were excessively fond of Allegories and mystical Theology, and the Christian Writers of the most early Ages in this particu- lar too much resemble them.

Hieronym. in Matth. xviii.
Philo de vita contemplativa, p. 901.
Wisd. xviii. 24. & alibi
Joseph. Procœmio in lib. Antiquit. ad finem.

Alleluia

[,הללויה Hallelu-iah.] ALLELUIA, or Hallelu-iah, that is say, praise the Lord. This word is to be met with, either at the beginning or the end of some Psalms[1]. Alleluia was sung upon solemn days of rejoicing. Per vicos ejus (Jerusalem) alleluia cantabitur, says Tobit, speaking of [Tob. xiii. 12. Rev. xix. 1, 3, 4, 6.] the rebuilding of Jerusalem. St. John in the Revelations says, that he heard a great voice of much people in Heaven, who said Alleluia; and the four and twenty Elders and the four beasts fell down and worshipped God that sat on the throne, saying Alleluia.

T his hymn of joy and praises was transferr'd from the Synagogue to the Church. At the Funeral of Fabiola several Psalms were sung with loud Alleluia's, says St. Jerom[2]. The Monks of Palestine were awaken'd at their midnight watchings with the singing of Alleluia's[3]. So much energy has been observ'd in this term, that it has been thought proper to preserve it, without translating it either into Greek or Latin, for fear of impairing the genius and softness of it. The Church has for many ages prohibited the use of it in times of penance, and in the ceremonies of mourning. It is not repeated in Lent, nor in the obsequies of the dead. Notwithstanding in the mass for the dead, according to the Mosarabick ritual, at the Introit they sing, Tu es portio mea, Domine, alleluia; in terra viventium, alleluia, alleluia. In the life of S. Radegonde it is said, that at her Funeral solemnities, instead of Alleluia nothing was heard but sighs, which intimates that Alleluia was sometimes used on these occasions, as we see above at the Funeral of Fabiola; but in matters of discipline and mere custom, such as this is, ceremonies never have been uniform and universal.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

See St. Jerom, or the Author printed under his name, upon Psalm cv.
Hieronym. in obit. Fabiolæ.
Idem in Epitaphio Paulæ.

Allon

ALLON, of the Tribe of Simeon, the [1 Chr. iv. 37. Ἀλλόφυλοι ,פלשתים Philistiim.] Son of Jedaiah, and the Father of Shiphi.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Allophyli

ALLOPHYLI, is a Greek term, which signifies properly Strangers; but it is generally taken in the Old Testament to signify Philistines.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Allush

ALLUSH, or Alush. The Israelites being in the Wilderness of Shur, departed [Numb. xxxiii. 13. Judith i. 9. in Græco.] from Dophkah, and went to Allush: From thence they proceeded to Rephidim. In the book of Judith Chellus or Chalus, and Kades, are set down as two places pretty near each other. Eusebius and St. Jerom fix Allush in Idumea, towards the Country about Gabala, that is to say, about Petra, the capital of Arabia Petræa; for according to Eusebius and St. Jerom, the Gabalene is near Petra[1]. Allush is called likewise Eluza or Chaluza. In the accounts of the Empire, it is situated in the third Palestine, and by Ptolemy among the Cities of Idumæa. The Jerusalem Targum upon Genesis xxv. 18. and upon Exodus xvi. 22. translates the desart of Seir by Allush.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Eufeb. & Hieron. in onomastico, voce Idumæa, & in Masaris, & in Allud vel Allus.

Almah

[,עלמהHalma. Isaiah vii. 14.] ALMAH. This Hebrew word signifies properly a Virgin, a young Person unacquainted with Man, one who is not married. In this sense we meet with it in the famous passage of Isaiah; the words whereof are these, Behold a Virgin shall conceive and bear a Son. The Hebrews have no term that more properly signifies a Virgin than Almah; but it must be confessed without without lessening however the certainty of Isaiah's Prophecy, that sometimes by mistake any young woman whatsoever, whether a Virgin or not, is called Almah[1]. In like manner in Latin the name of Virgo is sometimes given to a young woman who has not her virginity. See our Dissertation before the Prophecy of Isaiah upon this passage of the Prophet, Ecce virgo, &c. vii. 14. St. Jerom in his Comment on it remarks, that the Prophet declined making use of the word Bethulah, which signifies a young Woman or young Person, but employed the term Alma, which denotes a Virgin who was never seen by Man. This is the proper signification of the word Alma[2], which is derived from a root that signifies to conceal. It is very well known that young Women in the East do not appear in publick, but are shut up in their houses, and their Mothers apartment, like Nuns[3]. The Chaldee Paraphrast and the Septuaginti translate Alma Virgin; Akiba[4] the famous Rabbin, a great enemy to Christ and Christians, who lived in the second Century, understands it thus. The Apostles and Evangelists, and the Jews of our Saviour's time, explained it in the same sense, and expected a Messiah born of a Virgin. Mahomet and all his followers acknowledge the Virginity of the blessed Mother of our Lord.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

See Prov. xxx. 19. Viam viri in adolescentula. Heb. .בעלמה

Hieronym. in Isai. Ergo Alma non solum puella, sed cum Ἐπιτάσει, virgo abscondita & secreta quæ nunquam virorum patuerit aspectibus.

Vide Philon. l. contra Flac. & de speial. leg.

In Gemar. Almugim, 2 Chr. xi. 7. אלגומיםAlgumim. LXX. ξύλα πεύκινα, vulg. Ligna pinea. 3 Reg. x. 11. ξύλα πελεκητά. LXX. Ligna dolata.

Almon

ALMON, a City belonging to the Tribe of Benjamin, Josh. xxi. 18. It is probably the same as Alemeth, whereof we have already said something. It was given to the Priests of Aaron's family, 1 Chr. vi. 60.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Almond-Tree

ALMOND-TREE, a sort of tree whereof there is often mention in the [שקדAmygdalus.] Scripture. The Hebrews call it Shaked, from a root, which signifies to watch, because the Almond tree is one of the first trees that blossoms in the Spring. The Lord intending to declare to Jeremiah that he was ready to display his wrath against his People, shewed him the branch of an [Jer. i. 11.] Almond-tree: Quid tu vides Jeremia? virgam vigilantem ego video. Instead of virgam vigilantem, the Hebrew reads, a rod of an Almond-tree.

[Numb. xvii. 8.] Aaron's Rod, which bore blossoms and fruit in the Wilderness, was also of the wood of the an Almond-tree. The Author [Eccl. xii. 5.] of Ecclesiastes, expressing in an enigmatical manner, that an old Man's hair will grow white, says, that the Almond-tree shall flourish. This tree blows white and very [Genes. xxx. 37. לוז Luz.] early. It is said in Genesis, that Jacob fixed rods of the Almond-tree before the places where his flocks came to drink: But the Hebrew instead of Almond-tree signifies Hazel, Luz.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Almugim

ALMUGIM, a certain kind of wood mentioned in the first book of Kings, Ch. x. 11. which in the Vulgate1 is translated ligna thyina, and in the Septuagint wrought wood. The Rabbins generally render it Coral, others Ebony, Brazil, or Pine. It certainly is not Coral, for Coral is not proper to make musical instruments of, nor to be used in rails, or in a staircase, which were the uses that the Scripture tells us this wood Almugim was put to. The Pine-tree is too common in Judæa and the neighbouring country to go in search for it as far as Ophir. The word Thyinum is that of the Citron-tree, known to the Ancients, and very much esteemed for its sweet odour and great beauty[1]. It came from Mauritania.

We are of opinion that by the word Almugim or Algumim, or simply Gummim, taking al for a kind of article, may be understood oily and gummy sorts of wood, and particularly the tree which produces Gum Ammoniac or Gum Arabic. It is said that the Gum Ammoniac proceeds from a tree resembling that which bears Myrrh; and that the Gum of Arabia comes from the black Acacia, which we take to be the same as the Shittim wood, whereof there is such frequent mention in Moses. If this were so, Solomon's Almugim and Moses's Shittim would be the same wood. See our Comment upon 1 Kings x. 11. and what we have to say on the article SHITTIM.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Plin. l. 13. c. 16.

Aloes

ALOES, a sort of tree which comes from the Indies, of about eight or ten foot high. At the head of it is a large bunch of leaves, which are thick and indented, broad at bottom, but growing narrower toward the point, and about four foot in length. The blossom of it is red intermixed with yellow, and double like a pink. From this blossom comes fruit, round like a large pea, white and red. The juice of these leaves is drawn out by cutting them with a knife, and so receiving it in bottles.

The Eastern Geographers all tell us, that the wood of Aloes, the smell whereof is exquisite, is to be found only in those Provinces of the Indies which are comprehended in the first climate; that the most excellent of all is that which grows in the isle of Senf, situated in the Indian sea, in the way to China[1]: Others are of opinion that the wood of Aloes which is produced in the isle of Comar, or at Cape Comorin, is the best of all; and that it was of this a certain King of India, made a present weighing ten quintals, to Nouschirran, and that as it was applied to the fire, it melted and burnt like wax. A great deal of this wood is brought likewise from the islands of Sumatra and Ceilan. So much for the wood of Aloes.

Some Interpreters are of opinion that the [Numb. xxiv. 6. כאהלים נטה יהוה] Hebrew Ahalim signifies the Aloes-tree. The Vulgate reads, Ut tabernacula quæ fixit Dominus, as the tents which the Lord hath spread; but the Hebrew may be translated thus; As the Ahalims which the Lord hath planted. The Septuagint and St. Jerom sometimes translate Ahalim Statte or Aloe; but as the Aloes taken for a tree is not common in Arabia, or the neighbouring countries, others translate Ahalim Santal; but the Santal-tree was unknown to the Antients, and the Moderns who speak of it say it comes from the Indies. The Aloes of Syria, Rhodes, and Candia, called Aspalathus, is known to be a shrub full of thorns, the wood whereof is made use of by Perfumers, after they have taken off the bark, to give a consistency to their perfumes, which without it would be too liquid. See Prov. vii. 17. and Cant. iv. 14. for the signification of Ahalim.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Bibl. Orient. p. 913.

Aloes (2)

ALOES, consider'd as a Plant or Herb, is a Plant, the leaves wherof are about two inches thick, prickly and chamfer'd; in the middle there rises a stem, wherein there is a white kernel, extremely light, and almost round. There are Aloes to be found at present in several places in France. There is a very bitter juice extracted out of this Plant, which preserves dead bodies from putrefaction. They say, but this is mere fable, that Aloes never flowers but once in a hundred years, and that as its flower opens it makes a great noise. There have been several seen blowing in the Royal Garden at Paris, and without making any sensible noise. It is very probable that this Plant is the only true Aloes, for what is said of the wood of Aloes is by many learned Men thought fabulous.

[John xix. 39.] From this Plant is extracted the drug called Aloes, which is a very bitter liquor made use of in embalming, to secure bodies from putrefaction. Nicodemus bought about an hundred pounds of Myrrh and Aloes to embalm the body of Jesus Christ. In the Proverbs the debauch'd Woman says, that she had perfum'd her bed with Myrrh, Aloes, and Cinnamon; and the Spouse in the Canticles, that Myrrh, Aloes, and all manner of perfumes, are to be found in the garden of her beloved. The Hebrew text in these places reads Ahalim, which the Rabbins interpret Santal, and which is an aromatick wood; but the generality understand by it either the Aloes we have been just now speaking of, or another Aloes of Syria, which we have said something of in the article preceding this.

The Arabians call the Aloes that are taken for a Plant Sabr o. They believe that of all the several species of Aloes, that which grows in the island of Socotorah is the most excellent; that Alexander the Great transplanted the inhabitants of this island into Arabia and Ethiopia, and settled Macedonians in their room, to cultivate Aloes; the People of Socotorah gather the leaves of this Plant in the month of July, and boil them in great Chaldrons to extract the juice out of them, which they put into bottles, and expose them to the Sun during the dog days.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Alpha

ALPHA, is the first letter of the Greek Alphabet, as Aleph is the first of the Hebrew Alphabet. In the Greek Alphabet Alpha stands for one, or the first[1]. For this reason God in the Revelations is styled Alpha [Rev. i. 8.] and Omega, the Beginning and End.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Translators' note. Thus Martial, in imitation of the Greeks, who were used to distinguish the rank of People by Letters, says, Epig. l. 5. Ep. 26. Quod Alpha dixi, Codre, penulatorum Te nuper, ali- qua, cum jocarer in charta: Si forte bilem movit hic tibi versus Dicas licebit beta me togatorum.

Alphabet Hebrew

ALPHABET HEBREW. See hereafter HEBREW LETTERS.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Alphæus (1)

ALPHÆUS, the Father of St. [Mat. x. 3. Luke vi, 15.] James Minor, first Bishop of Jerusalem. Alphæus was the Husband of Mary, who is believed to have been Sister to the holy Virgin[1]; for which reason James is called the Lord's Brother. Many are of opinion that [Luke xxiv. 18.] Cleophas mentioned by St. Luke, and Alphæus are the same Person, Alphæus being his Greek name, and Cleophas his Hebrew or Syriac name, according to the custom of this Province, where the Men generally had two names.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

See Bolland. ix. April. p. 811.

Alphæus (2)

[Mark ii. 14. 14.] 2. ALPHÆUS, the Father of Levi, or St. Matthew, whom the Son of God took from his office, and made an Apostle and Evangelist. We know nothing particularly of Alphæus, the Father of St. Matthew.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Altar

ALTAR. As Sacrifices offered up to God are as ancient as the world, Altars are of no less antiquity. The Scripture in some places speaks of Altars erected by the Patriarchs, without describing the form or matter of them. The Altar which Jacob set up at Bethel was nothing but the stone which had served him for a bolster. Gideon sacrificed upon nothing better than a stone which was before his house. The first Altars which God com manded Moses to raise to him, must have [Exod. xx. 24, 25.] been of Earth or rough Stones; and the Lord declared to him, that if any use were made of Iron in them they would be impure. [Ch. xxv. 1, 2, 3, &c.] The Altar of Burnt-offerings which he caused sometime after to be made, was a kind of trunk of Shittim wood, hollow, and covered over with plates of Brass. See hereafter BURNT-OFFERINGS, and ALTAR OF BURNT-OFFERINGS.

The Altar which Moses injoined Joshua to build upon Mount Hebal, was to be of [Deut. xxvii. 5. Josh. viii. 31.] unpolished Stones; and it is very probable that those which were built afterwards by Samuel, Saul and David, were of the same structure. The Altar which Solomon [2 Chron. iv. 1, 2, 3.] erected in the Temple, was of Brass, but filled, as is believed, with rough Stones. It was twenty cubits long, twenty wide, and ten in height. Lastly, that which was rebuilt at Jerusalem by Zerubbabel, and the other Jews who returned from Babylon, was only of rough Stones: nor was that which the Maccabees rebuilt any better. Josephus[1] says, that the Altar which in his time was in the Temple, was of rough Stones, fifteen cubits high, forty long, and as many in width.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

De Bello l. 6. c. 14.

Altar of Incense

ALTAR OF INCENSE. This was a small table of Shittim Wood, covered with [Exod. xxx. 1, 2, 3.] plates of Gold, of one cubit in length, another in width, and two in height. At the four corners of it were four kinds of horns, and all round a little border or crown over it. Every morning and evening the Priest in waiting for that week, and appointed by lot for this office, offered incense of a particular composition upon this Altar; and to this end entred with the smoaking Censer filled with fire from the Altar of Burnt-Offerings into the Holy, where this Altar was fixed over-against the Shew-bread Table. This was the Altar which was hidden by Jeremiah before the Captivity. [2 Macc. ii. 5, 6.] The Priest having placed the Censer on it, retired out of the Holy.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Altar (III)

III. ALTAR, or Table, for the Shew-Bread, was a small Table of Shittim Wood, [Exod. xxv. 23, 24.] covered with plates of Gold, having a little border round it, adorned with sculpture. It was two cubits long, one cubit wide, and one and an half in height. It was placed in the Holy. Upon this Table, every Sabbath -day, were put twelve loaves with salt and incense. See SHEW-BREAD.

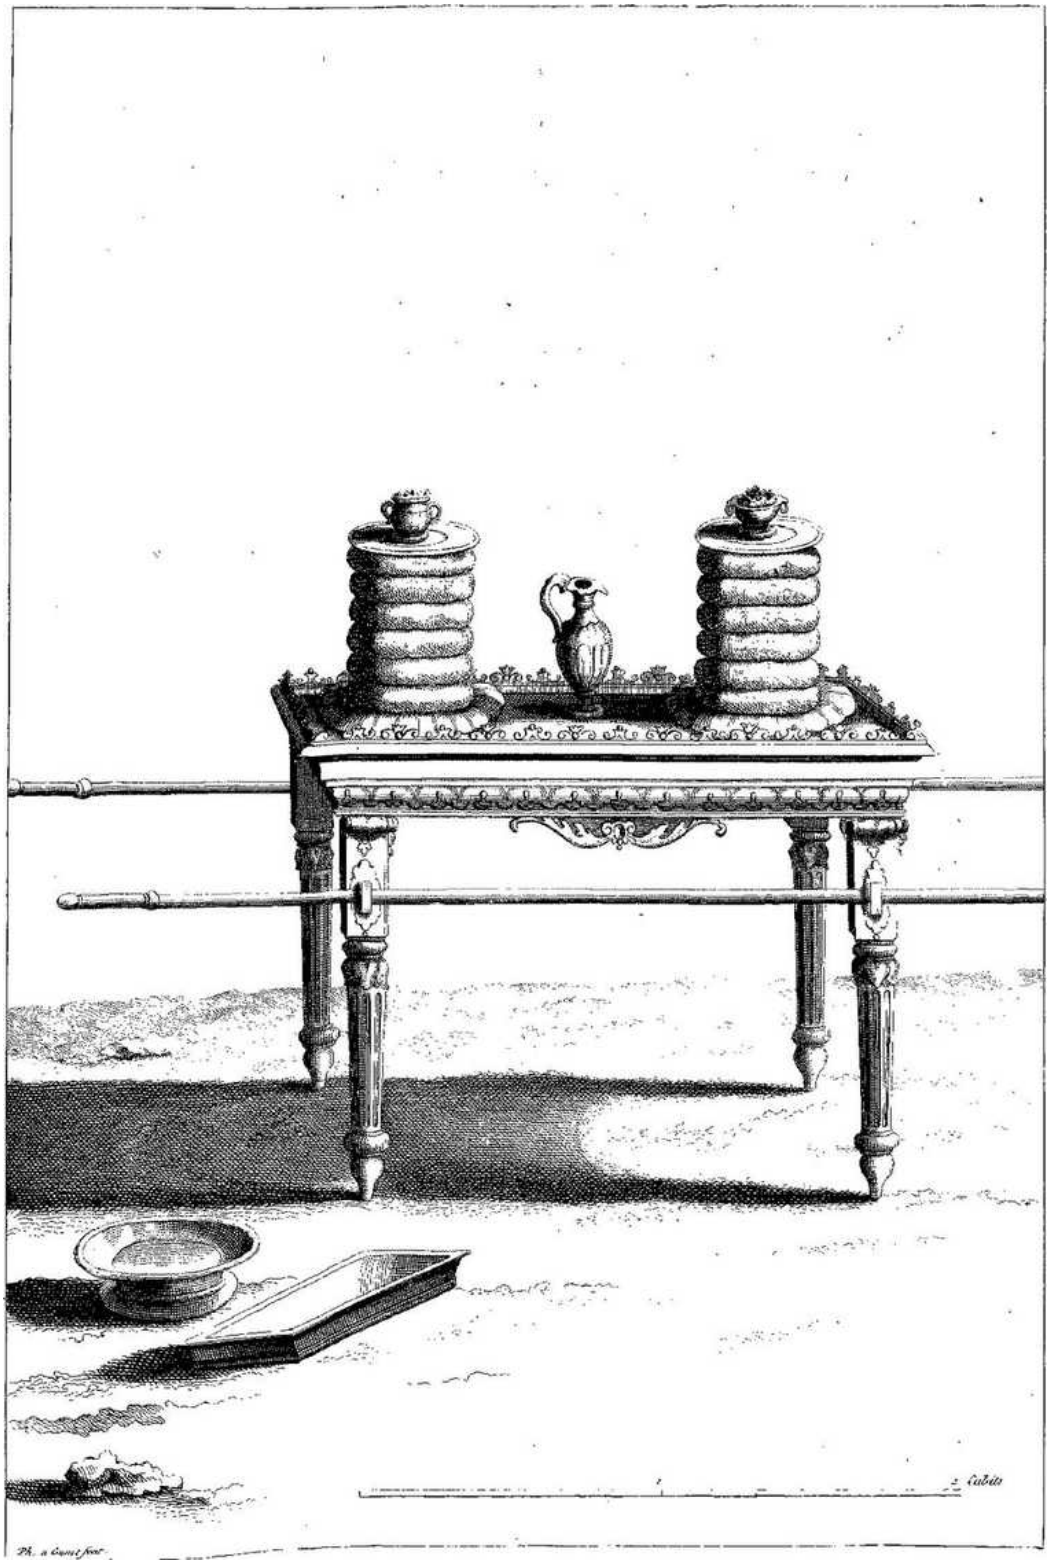
IV. ALTAR OF BURNT-OFFERINGS. This was a kind of Coffer of Shittim Wood, covered with brass plates. It [Ch. xxvii. 1, 2, 3.] was five cubits square, and three in height. Moses placed it to the East, before the entrance of the Tabernacle, in the open air, that so the fire which was to be kept perpetually upon it, and the smoak arising from the Sacrifices which were burnt there, might not spoil the inside of the Tabernacle. At the four corners of this Altar there was an appearance as it were of four horns, covered with the same metal as the rest of the Altar. Within the depth or hollow of it was a grate of brass, on which the fire was made; thro' this fell the ashes in proportion as they increased upon the Altar, and were received below within a pan which was placed under it. At the four corners of this grate were four rings, and four chains, which kept it up at the four horns of the Altar above mentioned. As this Altar was portable, Moses had rings made, and fastened to the sides of it, into which were put staves of Shittim Wood, overlaid with brass, by the help whereof it was removed from place to place.

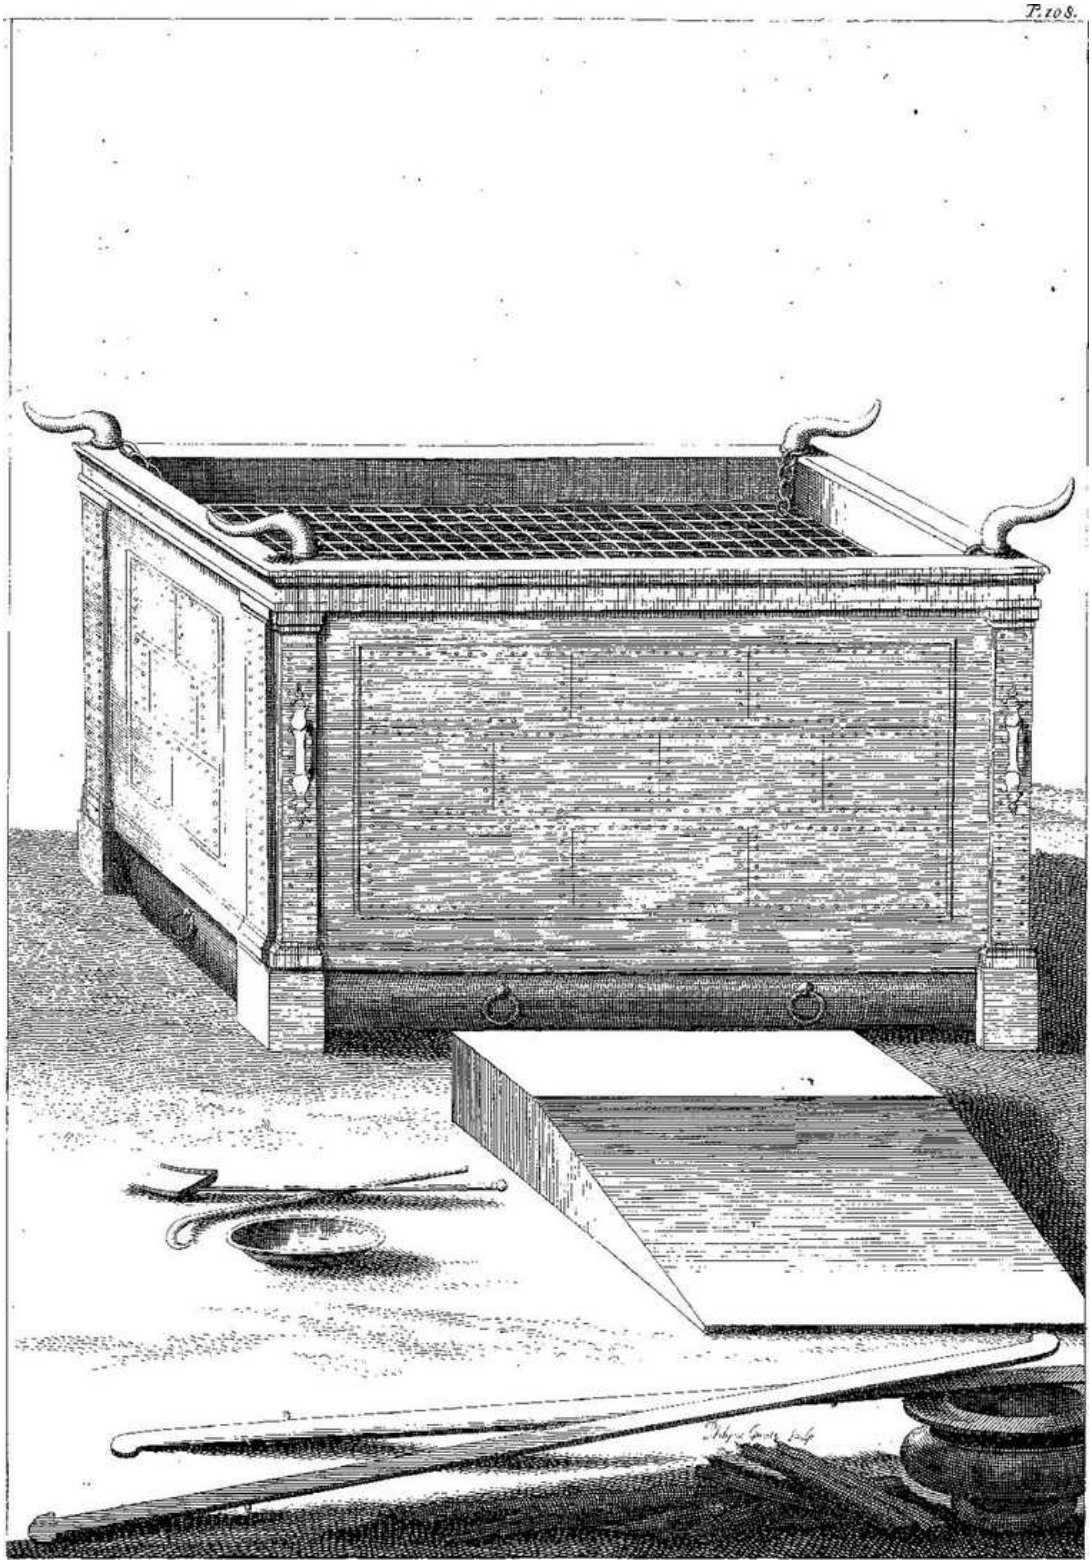
Such was the Altar of Burnt-Offerings belonging to the Tabernacle erected by Moses in the Wilderness: but in Solomon's Temple it was much larger. This was a kind of Cube, twenty cubits long, as many wide, and ten in height. It was covered with thick plates of brass, and filled with rough stones; on the East side there was an easy ascent leading up to it. When the Jews returned from the captivity of Babylon, they rebuilt the Altar of Burnt-Offerings after the model of Solomon's; but after both the Temple and Altar had been prophaned by the orders of Antiochus Epiphanes, this Altar was demolished, and the stones of it were laid up in some part of the Temple which was unpolluted, till a Prophet should be raised up by God, who should come and declare the use for which they were reserved. Herod the Great having made a new Temple, [1 Macc. xiv. 41.] built an Altar of Burnt-Offerings like that which had been there before; but Josephus says, that the ascent up to it was on the South side.

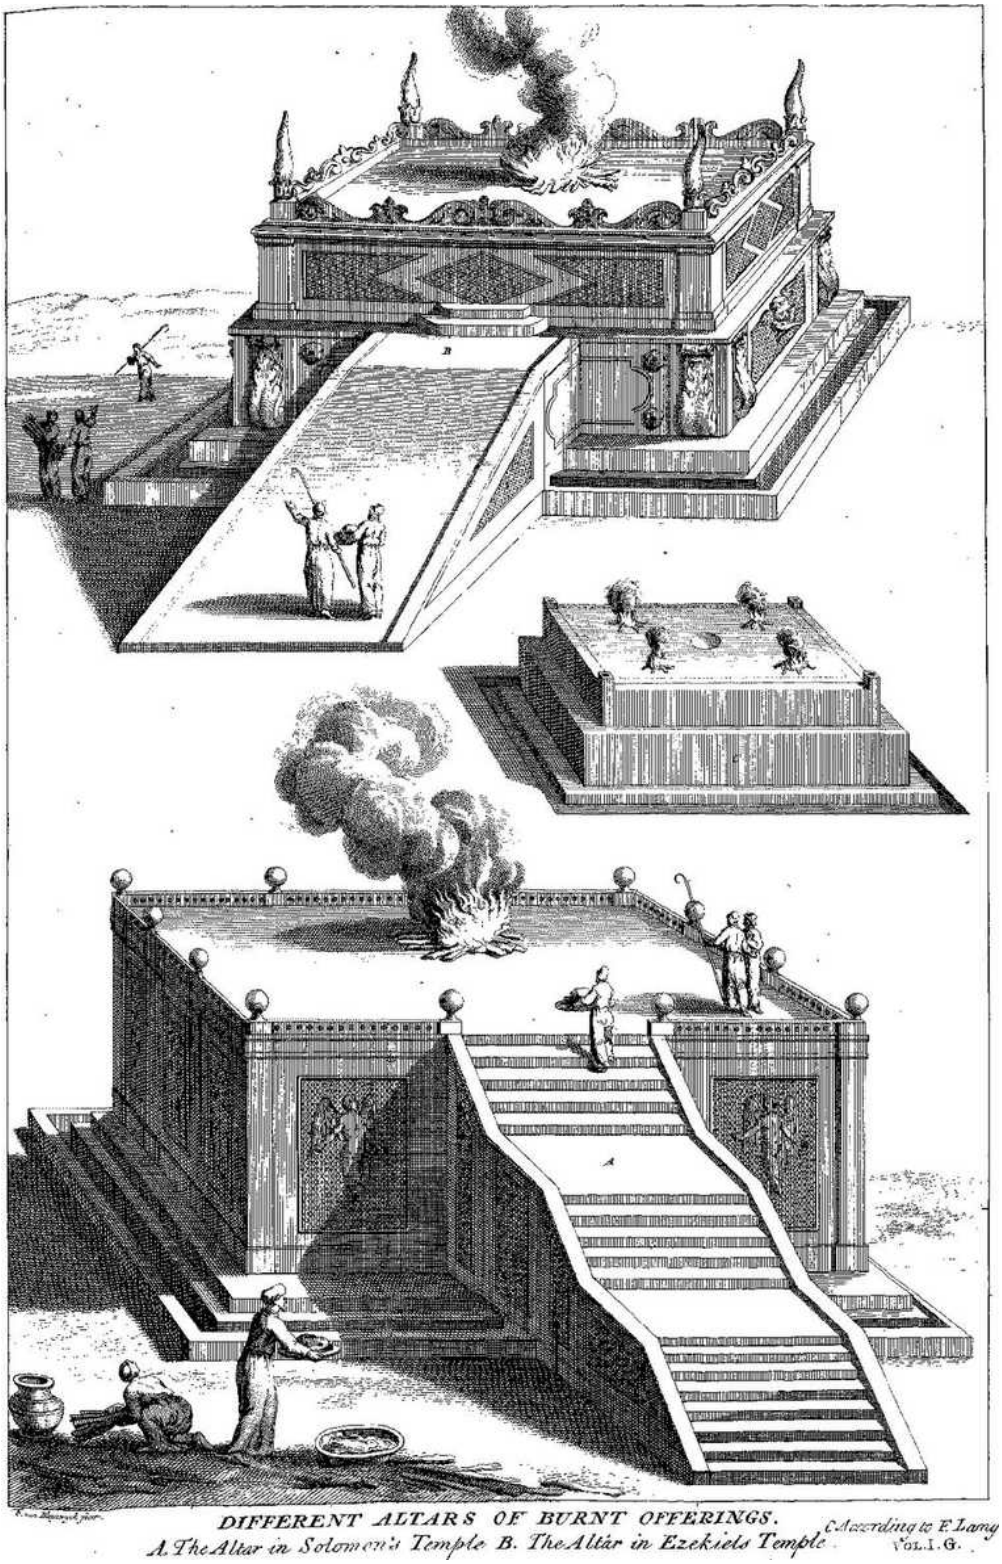
The Altar of Burnt-Offerings, according to the Rabbins[1], was a large mass all built of rough and unpolish'd stones, the basis whereof was two and thirty cubits, or forty eight feet square. From thence the Altar rose one cubit or a foot and an half, then there was a diminishing of one cubit in thickness; from thence the Altar being only thirty cubits square, rose five cubits, and received a new diminution or in-benching of two cubits, and consequently was reduced to twenty eight cubits square. From thence again it rose three cubits, and grew two cubits smaller. Lastly, it rose again one cubit, and so being in all twenty four cubits, or thirty six foot square, it formed the hearth on which the Sacrifices were burnt, and the perpetual fire kept up.

The diminution of two cubits abovementioned, which was about the middle of the Altar, served as a passage for the Priests Priests to go and come about the Altar, to attend the fire, and place the Sacrifices on it. This Altar was composed of large plates of massy Brass, whence it is called the [1 Kings viii. 64.] brazen Altar. It is believed that the Altar was all filled with rough Stones or Earth, according to what is said in Exodus, An Altar [Exod. xx. 24, 25.] of Earth thou shalt make unto me, and shalt sacrifice thereon thy Burnt-Offerings, and thy Peace-Offerings—— and if thou wilt make me an Altar of Stone thou shalt not build it of hewen Stone, for if thou lift up thy tool upon it, thou hast polluted it. At the four corners of the Altar, on the last diminution or inbenching, were four small pillars of a cubit square, hollow in the middle for half a cubit square, and in the form of a perfect cube. These are the horns of the Altar, so often mentioned in Scripture, they were hollow, that part of the blood of the Sacrifices might be poured into them.

ALTAR OF INCENSE.







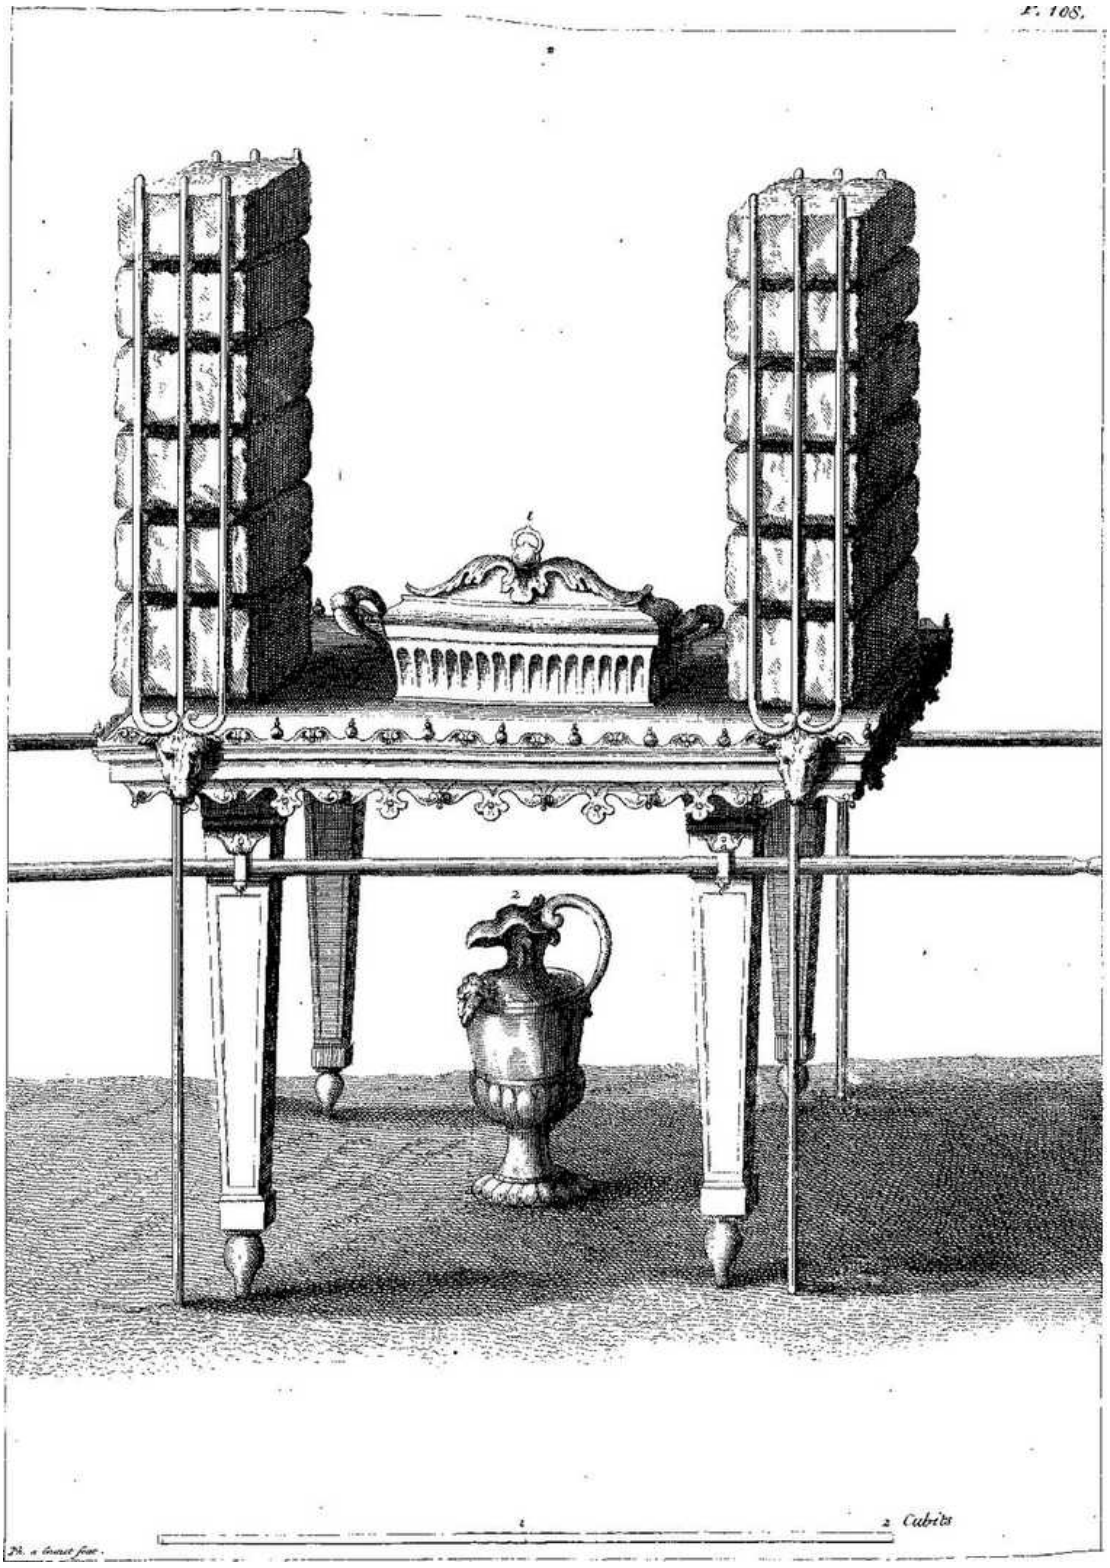


TABLE OF SHEW-BREAD.

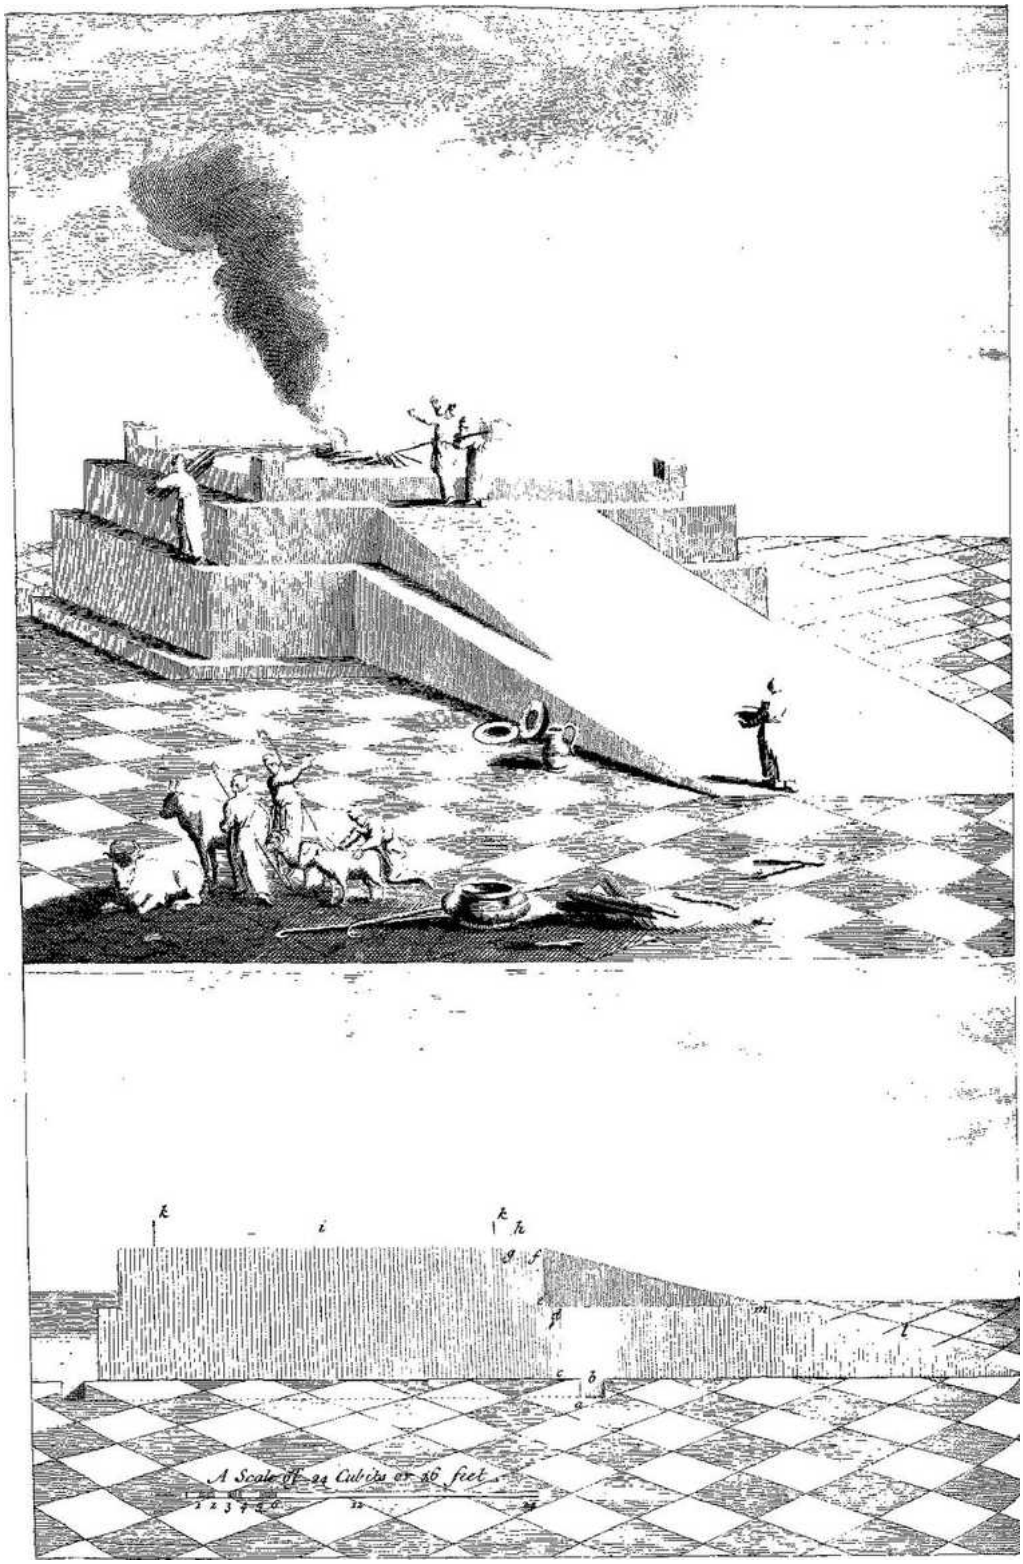

5. Cubits ALTER OF BURNT OFFERINGS.

DIFFERENT ALTARS OF BURNT OFFERINGS.A. The Altar in Solomon's Temple B. The Altär in Ezekiels Temple C. According to F. Lamy

THE SHEW-BREAD TABLE DESCRIBED BY THE JEWS.1 The golden pan wherein the loaves were baked 2 A Vessel which was filled with excellent wine.

A VIEW AND PROFILE OF THE ALTAR OF BURNT OFFERINGS.According to the Rabbins.

The ascent to the Altar was by an insensible rise on the South side, and was called Kibbesh; it was two and thirty cubits in length, and sixteen in breadth, and landed upon the upper benching-in, near the hearth or top of the Altar; for to go up to the Altar by steps was by the Law forbidden. [Ver. 26.] The Priests might go round about the Altar, and perform their offices very conveniently upon the two inbenchings which we have described; namely, that of the middle, which was a cubit, and that above it, which was likewise a cubit broad; for it would have been very uneasy for them to have walked bare-foot on the hearth, which was always heated by the fire that was continually burning there.

An Explanation of the Profil of the Altar of Burnt-Offerings, according to the Rabbins. a. A Trench which went quite round the Altar, wherein was thrown the blood of the Sacrifices. a. b. The foundation of the Altar one cubit high, and thirty two cubits square. b. c. The first in-benching, one cubit broad. c. d. The elevation of five cubits. d. e. The second in-benching, a cubit broad. e. f. The elevation of three cubits. f.g. The third in-benching, a cubit broad on every side. g. h. The last rising, of one cubit.

m. The passage on both sides the Kibbesh, to the second in-benching.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Mishnaioth. in Middoth. Maimon. in Beth-Habb. Ahirach. c. 1, 2.

Altar (V)

V. ALTAR at Athens, inscribed To the Unknown God. St. Paul being come from Thessalonica to Athens, disputed every day, either in the synagogue with the Jews, or in the market-place with the Philosophers. As he discoursed on the Resurrection of the dead, and declared Christ crucified to be both God and Man, some of the Philosophers brought him before the Judges of the Areopagus, there to give an account of his opinions. While therefore he stood before these Judges, he spoke to them in the following [Acts xvii. 22, 23.] words: Ye Men of Athens, I perceive that in all things ye are too superstitious; for as I passed by and beheld your devotions, I found an Altar with this inscription, To the Unknown God; whom therefore ye ignorantly worship, him declare I unto you.

The question is, what this Altar was thus consecrated to, the Unknown God? St. Jerom[1] informs us, that it was not inscribed upon exactly as St. Paul relates, but that the words were these, To the Gods of Asia, Europe, and Africa; to the unknown and strange Gods; and that the Apostle purposely changed the plural into the singular, because it was necessary for his design to demonstrate only to the Athenians, that they adored an Unknown God.

Others[2] believe, that St. Paul proposed to speak of those Altars which were to be seen in several places of Attica, without any particular inscription, erected after a solemn expiation for the Country, made by the Philosopher Epimenides[3].

Others affirm this Altar to the Unknown God to be that mentioned by Pausanias and Philostratus[4]. These Authors tell us, that there were Altars at Athens consecrated To the Unknown Gods. There were probably several Altars, each with an Inscription, To the Unknown God; for which reason they mention them in the plural number, as Altars inscribed To the Unknown Gods. Lucian, in his dialogue intitled Philopatris, swears by the Unknown God of Athens. He adds, Being come to Athens, and finding there the Unknown God, we worshiped him, and gave thanks to him with hands lifted up to Heaven.

Peter Comestor, Author of the Historia Scholastica, relates that Dionysius the Areh. i. The hearth of twenty four cubits, or opagite observing while he was at *Alexan*thirty six foot square. dria, the Eclipse which, contrary to Nature, k. The horns of the Altar, of one cubit, and happened at the death of our Saviour, from hollow, half a cubit square. thence concludes, that some unknown God l. The sloping ascent to the Altar, of thirty suffered; and not being then in a condition to two cubits in length. learn more of the mat ter, he erected, at his return to Athens, this Altar to the Unknown God, which gave occasion to St. Paul of making the discourse at the Areopagus, which is related to us by him.

Theophylact accounts in another manner for the occasion of this Altar. After a battle which the Athenians had lost, a spectre appeared to them, and told them, that he was the cause of the misfortune which had happened to them, out of an aversion he had to their celebrating Games in honour of all the other Gods, and none to him: After this he disappeared, without declaring his name. The Athenians, to repair their fault, immediately erected an Altar to the Unknown God.

Oecumenius reports this matter something differently. The Athenians being seized with a burning distemper, which would not allow them to endure any thing upon their bodies, addressed themselves in vain to all the Gods which were honoured in their City. As they saw that they received no relief from hence, they bethought themselves of erecting an Altar to the unknown God, out of an apprehension that some strange Deity had in his indignation smitten them. To this Unknown God they attributed the cure of their disease.

Others say, that during the war between the Persians and Greeks, the latter sent Philippides to desire succour of the Lacedæmonians. Upon Mount Parthenius the God Pan appeared to him, and complained that he was the only God to whom they did not pay their Adorations, and at the same time promised them his assistance, provided they admitted him into the number of their Gods. They did so, and erected an Altar to him; and left there should be any other God dissatisfied with their indifference, they built an Altar to the unknown God.

Every one of these opinions has its particular difficulties. The Altar intitled, To the Gods of Asia, Europe, and Africa, to the unknown strange Gods, is not in all probability that mentioned by St. Paul. The Areopagites would never have understood it by the bare name of the unknown God.

One of the Altars set up by Epimenides, which had no inscription to any Deity, can never be that which we enquire after. The Histories related by the Author of the Historia Scholastica, Theophylact, and Oecumenius, have no warrant from Antiquity. It is therefore probable enough that the Athenians, a People extremely superstitious, apprehensive that they had forgotten some Divinity, and had not paid their worship to it, erected Altars in some part of their City inscrib'd to the unknown God; from whence St. Paul took occasion to preach Jesus Christ to them, a God with respect to them truly unknown, and already in some sort adored by them without their knowing him.

These are St. Chrysostom's thoughts upon the matter[5], founded on what we have above mentioned from Philostratus, Pausanias, and Lucian.

St. Austin never questions but the Athenians, under the name of the unknown God, adored the true one. He compares their Worship with that which Schismaticks, who are not within the pale of the Church, pay to God. The Apostle's intention therefore was, to induce them to adore that wisely and profitably in the Church which they blindly and vainly worshipp'd out of the Church, Ut eundem Deum quem præter Ecclesiam ignoranter, atque inutiliter colebant, in Ecclesia sapienter & utiliter colerent. See our Dissertation on the Altar to the unknown God prefixed to the Acts of the Apostles.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Hieronym. in Ep. ad Tit. c. 1.
Grot. Voss. Beza in Act. xv. 11. Casaub. ad Laert. Selden. de Synod. l.3. c.13. Hammond. alii.
Diogen. Laert. l. 1. in Epimenide.
Philostr. Pausan. in Attic. l. 6. c. 2. Ἀγνώστων θεῶν βωμοὶ ἱδρυνται.
Chrysost. in Acta.

Alvah

ALVAH: Thus the wood is called which God shewed Moses, that with it he [Exod. xv. 25.] might sweeten the waters of Marah. The Scripture has not preserved the name of it, but the Mahometans give it that of Alva, and maintain that Moses had a piece of it, which he received by succession from the Patriarchs, Noah having kept it in the Ark, and deliver'd it to his Posterity[1]. Moses, as they say, placed it afterwards in the Ark of the Covenant, together with the Manna and tables of the Law. The word Alva has some relation to Aloes, which is a very bitter wood; and some Interpreters are of opinion, that Moses took a very bitter sort of wood on purpose, that so the power of God might be the more remarkable in sweetening these waters. Josephus says that this Legislator used the wood which he found by chance, lying at his feet.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Bibl. Orient. p. 105. col. 1. & p. 1022. col. 1.

Alvan

ALVAN, Shobal's eldest Son, and of the race of Esau. He was the second Prince of Edom, and succeeded Timna. Gen. xxxvi. 23.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Amad

AMAD, a City belonging to the Tribe [Josh. xix. 26.] of Asher.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Amal

AMAL, the fourth Son of Hemel, 1 Chr. vii. 35.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Amalek

AMALEK, the Son of Eliphaz and Timna his Concubine, and Grandson to Esau. He succeeded Gatam in the Government of Edom, which lies Southward of [Genes. xxxvi. 12. & 16. 1 Chr. i. 36.] the Tribe of Judah. Amalek was the Father of the Amalekites, a powerful People, who dwelt in Arabia Petræa, between the Dead Sea and the Red Sea, or between Havilah and Shur, 1 Sam. xv. 7. sometimes in one Canton, and sometimes in another; for we cannot assign the particular place of their habitation. It does not appear appear that they had any Cities, and perhaps they had but one, which is mentioned in the [1 Sam. xv. 5.] first book of Samuel. They lived generally in hamlets, caves, or tents.

The Israelites had scarce passed the Red Sea before the Amalekites came to attack them in the desart of Rephidim, and put those cruelly to the sword who were obliged either through fatigue or weakness to remain [Ex. xvii. 8.] behind. Moses, by God's command, directed Joshua to attack this People, to record the act of inhumanity, which they had committed, in a book, in order to have it always before his eyes, and to revenge it in the most remarkable manner. Joshua therefore fell upon the Amalekites, and defeated them, while Moses was upon the Mountain, and with Aaron and Hur in his company, lifted up his hands to Heaven. This happened in the year of the World 2513, before J. C. 1487, before the vulgar Æra 1491.

[Observations on the Battle of Rephidim between Israel and the Amalekites.] This battle is celebrated in the Scripture: It was one of the most obstinate on both sides, and the victory uncertain and for a long time in suspence. It was fought near Mount Horeb, at the foot of a hill rising at the bottom of the Mountain, and upon the declivity of it the Hebrews were probably incamped. I find the sacred Writer to be so concise in his description of this Battle, that a comment and conjectures may be excused, which however might be more tolerable than the extravagant and confused imaginations which we meet with in the figures of the Scripture Battles, drawn by our Painters with a design rather to amuse us and communicate their own fancies, than to instruct us in the military discipline of the Jews, and furnish us with any true idea of it. It was the method of the People of Asia, and consequently of the Hebrews, to engage in Phalanxes when their forces were equal, but not like those of the Greeks, with the whole front closed and united: Their Phalanx was divided into several bodies, with little intervals between them, for their chariots and troops lightly arm'd, that is, their Slingers and Archers, to retreat to: Sometimes they ranged themselves in great square bodies at a reasonable distance from one another, when they could not equal the Enemy's front. This method of engaging in large square bodies was common to the Asiaticks and Hebrews, who perhaps had borrowed it from the Egyptians. If any one should require Authorities for this opinion, nothing is more easy than to give him satisfaction; for if this People had made no changes in the way of fighting from the time of Moses to the Battle between Crœsus and Cyrus, as is very probable, we shall find that forty thousand Egyptian Pikemen, who came to the assistance of the first of these, formed four great square bodies, by whom Cyrus was several times put to a stand, and at last they capitulated, for there was only one of them broken. This is a particular which I learn from Xenophon in his Institution of Cyrus, and the account of his retreat with ten thousand Men after the Battle of Cunaxa. But suppose this Authority were not to be admitted, the Scripture would furnish me with infinite examples, and Polybius himself, whither I refer the Reader. They who do not understand Greek may have recourse to the Comment on Polybius, where they will find this way of engaging practised in Antiochus's war against Ptolemy Philopator. They fought in great Bodies not only with their foot, but with their horse likewise, leaving some little interval between the Squadrons; and the same method may be observed to be in use among the Hebrews; for I do not at all question but that Moses imitated the Egyptians in their way of making war.

[Judith iv. 13, 14.] I have therefore ranged the Israelites in several Bodies according to their Tribes, with retreats or divisions which were very necessary. Amalek acted like an understanding General, who does not stay to expect the Enemy in his own country, but marches forward to meet and fight him, and so divert his intentions of making inroads into it. The Benedictine Commentator cites Philo, who says, That the King of the Amalekites apprehending lest the Israelites might ravage his territories, resolved to prevent them; and putting himself at the head of his Troops, he marched to oppose their passage, with a design, if they shewed an inclination to resist him, of attacking them with all his Forces. I should have been very well pleased if the sacred Writer had informed us in this place what the number was, and nature of Amalek's Forces. The book of Judith in few words acquaints us with it, and describes to us the Army of the Amalekits as a formidable one, composed of many horse, and a great number of chariots, the Soldiers whereof were furnished with good weapons, and abounding with confidence in their own strength[1]. Upon this footing we range the Amalekites in the same order with the Hebrews, the Horse on the wings, and the Chariots on the whole front of the line, and between the distance of the several Bodies.

According to the Scripture way of expressing itself, Moses stood in need of all the virtue of his miraculous Rod, and his ter of so dreadful an Enemy; if God had not concerned himself in the affair, and turned to his People's side, at the earnest supplications of his Servant, the battle had been lost; the number, valour, and advantage of Amalek's arms had made the balance incline on his side.

Victory, which God at all times either gives or takes away at his pleasure, was entirely with the Israelites; but it had certainly fled to the Amalekites, if Aaron and Hur, who were with Moses on the Mountain, remote from danger, had not supported the extended arms and hands of this Legislator. This is a mystery which I leave to the Commentators, as their peculiar province; for the preservation or destruction of God's People lay in the hands and arms of these persons extended in the form of a Cross. To this the success of the Battle was owing, which was such that Amalek was entirely defeated and cut in pieces. Notwithstanding, no victory ever was more disputed; the Battle lasted the whole day till the approach of night; for [Ex. xvii. 12.] the Scripture says, That the hands of Moses were steddy till the going down of the Sun. As the success of this action was the pure work of God, he said to Moses, Write this for a memorial in a book.

Under the Judges we see the [Judg. vi. 3. Judg. iii. 13.] Amalekites united with the Midianites and Moabites, in a design to oppress the Israelites; but Ehud deliver'd the Israelites from Eglon, and Gideon deliver'd them from Midian and Amelek. Many years after [the World 2930, before J. C. 1070. 1 Sam. xv. 2, 3, &c.] the Lord said to Samuel, Go to Saul and say, Thus saith the Lord of Hosts, I remember that which Amalek did to Israel, how he laid wait for him in the way when he came up from Egypt. Now go and smite Amalek, and utterly destroy all that they have, and spare them not, but slay both Man and Woman, Infant and Suckling, Ox and Sheep, Camel and Ass.

Saul marched therefore against the Amalekites, advanced as far as their Capital, cut them in pieces from Havilah towards the mouth of the Euphrates, as far as Shur towards the Red Sea, and put all the People of the Country to the sword, but spared the best of all the cattle and moveables, and so violated the command of God. This act of Disobedience was the cause of Saul's misfortunes, and of his being rejected by God, as we have shewn in the article AGAG, and shall shew farther in that of SAUL.

After this war the Amalekites scarce appear any more in History. Some years after [In the Year of the World 2949, before J. C. 1051.] this event, a troop of Amalekites came Esau, Jacob. Eliphaz, Levi. Amalek, Koath. —— Amram. —— Aaron. [Sam. xxx. 1, 2, &c.] David, where he had left his Wife and all his substance. But he returning from an expedition which he had made in the company of King Achish into the valley of Jezreel, pursued them, overtook, dispersed them, and recover'd all the booty which they had carried off from Ziklag.

The Arabians maintain Amalek to have been the Son of Ham, and Grandson of Noah; that he was the Father of Ad, and Grandfather of Schedad. This opinion is not to be rejected: It is not easy to conceive how Amalek, the Son of Eliphaz, and Grandson of Esau, could be the Father of a People so powerful and numerous as the Amalekites were when the Israelites departed out of Egypt. Moses in the book of Genesis relates, that in Abraham's [Gen. xiv. 7.] time, and long before the birth of Amalek, the Son of Eliphaz, the five confederate Kings carried the war into Amalek's Country, about Kadesh, and into that of the Amorites, who dwelt at Hazeron-tamar.

The same Moses in another place relates, [Numb. xxiv. 20. ראשית גוים עמלק ואחריתו עדי אבד] that the Diviner Balaam observing at a distance the land of Amalek, said in his prophetick style, Amalek is the first, the head, the original of the Nations, but his latter end shall be that he perish for ever. This commendation of first of the Nations cannot certainly agree with the Amalekites who were so modern; for the Generation then living was but the third from Amalek. Moses never reproaches the Amalekites with attacking the Israelites their Brethren; an aggravating circumstance which he would not have omitted if they had been descended from Esau, and in this sense Brethren to the Israelites. Lastly, we see the Amalekites almost always joined in Scripture with the Canaanites and Philistines, and never with the Edomites; and when Saul made war with Amalek, and destroyed it, the Edomites made not the least motions towards their assistance, nor to revenge them afterwards. It is therefore probable that the Amalekites, who are so often mentioned in Scripture, were a People descended from Canaan, and devoted to the Curse, as well as the other Amorites, and very different from the descendants of Amalek, the Grandson of Esau.

What follows is the account which the Arabians give us of the Amalek destroyed by Saul. He was the Father of an ancient Tribe in Arabia, exterminated in the reign of Saul. It contained only the Arabians, who are called pure, the remains of whom were mingled with the posterity of Joktan and Adnan, and so became Mosara bes or Mostaarabes, that is to say, Arabians blended with foreign Nations. They farther believe, that Goliath, who was overcome by David, was King of the Amalekites, and that the Giants who inhabited Palestine in Joshua's time, were of the same race; that at last part of the Amalekites retired into Africk, while Joshua was yet living, and settled upon the coasts of Barbary, along the Mediterranean Sea.

[Judg. xii. 14, 15.] The Son of Amalek[2] was Ad, a celebrated Prince among the Arabians. He began to raise stately buildings, and a City very much to be admired, which was the place of his own residence, and of the Giants in his time. Some make him to be the Son of Uz, and Grandson of Aram, the Son of Shem. Let this be as it will, the Mahometans say that Ad was the Father of an Arabian Tribe called Adites, who were exterminated, as they tell us, for not hearkening to the Patriarch Eber, who preached the unity of God to them. Ad had two Sons, viz. Schedad and Schedid. This is what the Arabians relate of the Amalekites.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Translators' note. This Citation is taken from the Latin Vulgate*; for there is no mention of it in the* Greek Original*, nor is it inserted in our* English Translation.

Bibl. Orient. p. 51. Ad.

Amalek

AMALEK, a mountain in the land of Ephraim, upon which the Town of Pirathon was situated, where Abdon, the Son of Hillel, Judge of Israel, was buried; in the year of the World 2848. before J. C. 1152. before the vulgar Æra 1156.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Aman

AMAN, a City belonging to the Tribe of Judah, Josh. xv. 26.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Amana

AMANA, a Mountain mentioned in [Cant. iv. 8.] Solomon's Song. Some are of opinion that this is mount Amanus in Cilicia. St. Jerom[1] and the Rabbins[2] make the land of Israel to extend Northward as far as this Mountain; and in Solomon's time the dominion of the Hebrews did extend so far. Mount Amanus separates Syria from Cilicia, and reaches from the Mediterranean to the Euphrates.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Hieronym. Epist. ad Dardanum & ad Ezek. vii. item ad Ezek. xx.

In Gemar. Jerosol. Schevush.

Amana

AMANA, a Mountain beyond Jordan, in the Tribe of Manasseh[1]. It is three leagues from the Lake Moron; and at the bottom is three leagues in circumference, where there is a fine vineyard to be seen; but the top is always covered with snow, for which reason the Arabians have given it the name of Gebel Chaïque; that is to say, the Old Man's Mountain, because the top of it is all white. Some think this to be Mount Amana, which the Spouse speaks of in the Canticles. I do not observe that either Josephus, St. Jerom, or Eusebius had any knowledge of this Mountain: at least they say nothing of it under the name of Amana.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Eugene Roger, Terre Sainte, l. 1. c. 20.

Amariah (I)

I. AMARIAH, the eldest Son of Meraioth, and Father of the High-Priest Abitub. Amariah was High-Priest in the time of the Judges. We are not able to fix the years of his Pontificate. His name is to [1 Chron. vi. 7, 11.] be met with in the Chronicles. And if he exercised this Office, he should be placed, as I think, before Eli, who was succeeded by Ahitub, who in the Chronicles is put [Ver. 7. Ezra x. 42.] immediately after Amariah.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Amariah (II)

II. AMARIAH, one of those mentioned by Ezra, who separated from the Wives which they had taken, contrary to the Law.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Amariah (III)

III. AMARIAH, Grand-father to the [Zeph. i. 1.] Prophet Zephaniah, and Father of Gedaliah.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Amasa

AMASA, the Son of Jether and Abigail [2 Sam. xvii. 25. 2 Sam. xix. 13, &seq.] , David's Sister. Absalom, during his rebellion against David, placed his Cozen Amasa at the head of his Troops. It was Amasa that engaged Joab, General of David's army, and was worsted; in the year of the World 2981. After the defeat of Absalom's party, David, out of hatred to Joab, who had killed Absalom, offered [Ch. xx. 1, 2, &c.] Amasa his pardon, and promised him the general command of his army, in the room of Joab, whose insolence had made him insupportable. Upon the revolt of Sheba the Son of Bichri, David gave order to Amasa for assembling all Judah, and marching at the head of them, against Sheba.

Amasa thereupon took his leave, but not being able to form his army at the time prescribed, David directed Abishai to pursue Sheba with what Soldiers he had then about his own person. Joab with his people accompanied him; and these troops were scarce got so far as the great Stone which is in Gibeon, before Amasa came and joined them with his forces. Then said Joab to Amasa, Art thou in health, my Brother? and took him by the beard with the right hand to kiss him. But Amasa not observing the sword which was in Joab's hand, the latter smote him therewith in the fifth rib, and shed out his bowels to the ground, and he died. Such was the end of Amasa, David's Nephew, in the year of the world 2981. before J. C. 1019. before the vulgar Æra 1023.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Amasa (II)

II. AMASA, the Son of Hadlai, was one of those who were against permitting such Captives as were taken in the Kingdom of Judah, in the reign of Ahaz, to [2 Chron. xxviii. 12.] come into Samaria.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Amasai (I)

I. AMASAI, the Son of Elkanah, 1 Chron. vi. 25.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Amasai (II)

II. AMASAI, the same perhaps with him who is taken notice of in 1 Chron. vi. 25. He was a Levite, who perceived himself to be inspired by the Spirit of God to go over to David, and carry thirty gallant Men with him. They came and joined him while he was in the desart, flying from to meet them, and said, If ye be come peaceably to help me, mine heart shall be knit unto you: but if ye be come to betray me to mine Enemies, seeing there is no wrong in mine hands, the God of our Fathers look thereon, and rebuke it. Then said Amasai, Thine are we, David, and on thy side, thou Son of Jesse: Peace be unto thee, and peace be to thine helpers. David therefore received them; and gave them the command of some Troops.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Amasis

AMASIS, King of Egypt. Notwithstanding his name is not to be met with in the Text of Scripture, he is nevertheless celebrated in Sacred History. The Scripture [2 Kings xxiii. 29. Jer.xlvi.2.] speaks of Nechoh, who killed Josiah King of Judah, in the battle of Megiddo. Nechoh was succeeded by Psammis, Psammis by Apries, in Jeremiah called Hophrah, and Hophrah by Amasis[1], who lived in Egypt at the same time as Cyrus reign'd in Babylon. He governed four and forty years, loved and respected always by his Subjects, and favoured by Fortune, from the year of the World 3435 to 3472. He died in the time of Cambyses, before J. C. 521. before the vulgar Æra 525.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Translators' note. See Marsham Canon. Chron. Sæcu- lum 18. & Diodor. Non mihi Pyramidum tumulis evulsus Amasis. Lucan.

Amath

AMATH, or Emath, a City of Syria. It is the same with Emesa upon the Orontes. See Emath.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Amatha

AMATHA, a Town near Gadara, where there were hot baths.[1] Gabinius established one of the five Seats of Justice at Amatha.[2] The word Hamath in Hebrew [Calor.] signifies hot waters; whence so many Towns in Palestine called Amath, Amathus, or Emmaus.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Euseb. Onomast.
Joseph. de bell. l. 1. c. 6. p. 722. d.

Amathus

AMATHUS, a City situated beyond Jordan. Eusebius[1] places it at the distance of one and twenty miles from Pella, towards the South. Alexander Jannæus took and destroyed it.[2] Some are of opinion, that Gabinius fixed one of the five Seats of Justice in this City.[3] Others think, that it was at Amatha on this side of Jordan. M. Reland conjectures, that Amathus and Ramoth-gilead are the same.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Euseb. Onomastic. in Ἀιθάμ.
Antiq. l. 13. c. 21.
Ibid. l. 14. c. 10. & de bell. l. 1. c. 6.

Amatheans

AMATHEANS, the descendants of Amath, one of the Sons of Canaan. We are of opinion, that they dwelt at Emath, or Amath, or Emesa in Syria, upon the river Orontes.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Amaziah (I)

I. AMAZIAH, the eighth King of Judah, [2 Chron. xxiv. 27. xxv. 1, 2, 3, &c. 2 Kings xiv.] was Son to Joash, and succeeded him in the year of the World 3165. before J. C. 835. before the vulgar Æra 839. He was five and twenty years of age, when [Deut. xxiv. 16.] he began to reign, and he reigned nine and twenty years at Jerusalem He did that which was good in the sight of the Lord, but not with a perfect heart. When he saw himself settled in his Kingdom, he put to death the murderers of his Father, but not their Children; because it is written in the Law, The Fathers shall not be put to death for the Children, neither shall the Children be put to death for the Fathers; every man shall be put to death for his own sin.

In the general muster which he made of his People, he found there were three hundred thousand men capable of bearing arms. He bought besides, an hundred thousand of the Kingdom of Israel; for which he paid the King of Israel an hundred talents; which make thirty four thousand two hundred and eighteen pounds fifteen shillings, English. His design was to employ these Troops against the Edomites, who had revolted from the Kings of Judah, in the reign of Joram, [2 Kings viii. 20. In the year of the World 3173, before J. C. 827, before the vulgar Æra 831. 2 Chron. xxv. 7.] about fifty four years before.

At that time a Prophet of the Lord came to him, and said, O King, let not the army of Israel go with thee; for the Lord is not with Israel. But if thou wilt go, do it, be strong, for the battle of God shall make thee fall before the Enemy; for God hath power to help, and to cast down. And Amaziah said to the Man of God, What shall we do for the hundred talents which I have given to the army of Israel? And the Man of God answered, The Lord is able to give thee more than this. Amaziah hereupon separated the army which came to him from Ephraim, and sent the troops belonging to it back into their own Country. They returned therefore strangely irritated against Amaziah. They dispersed themselves over all the Cities of Judah, from Bethoron to Samaria, killed three thousand men, and carried off a great booty, to make themselves amends for that which they had promised themselves in the war against Edom.

Amaziah marched therefore only with his own forces, gave battle to the Edomites in the Valley of Salt[1], killed ten thousand Edomites upon the spot, and took ten thousand more, who had saved themselves, in all probability, upon a rock, where they were assaulted, and thrown headlong from the top to the bottom, so that they were [2 Kings xiv. 7.] dashed to pieces[2]. Now Amaziah having thus cut off the Edomites, and taken their Gods, adored them; offered incense to them, and acknowledged them for his own Deities. This action provoked the Lord, who sent a Prophet to him, which said unto him, Why hast thou sought after the Gods of the People, which could not deliver their own People out of thine hand? Amaziah answered him, Art thou made of the King's counsel? Forbear; why shouldst thou be smitten? Then the Prophet forbore, and said, I know that God hath determined to destroy thee, because thou hast done this, and hast not hearkned [2 Kings xiv. 8. 2 Chron. xxv. 14.] unto my counsel.

God therefore permitted Amaziah to be so blinded as to believe himself invincible. He sent to defy the King of Israel, saying, Come, let us look one another in the face. The motive of this war was, probably, to oblige Joash King of Israel to repair the ravages which his troops had made, as I before hinted, in their return to the Country of Samaria. Joash answered Amaziah, The Thistle that was at Lebanon sent to the Cedar saying, Give thy Daughter to my Son to wife: And there passed by a wild beast that was in Lebanon, and trod down the Thistle. Thou sayest, Lo, thou hast smitten the Edomites, and thine heart lifteth thee up to boast: Abide now at home, why shouldst thou meddle to thine hurt, that thou shouldst fall, even thou, and Judah with thee?

Amaziah was deaf to these reasons; because God had given him up to his own evil sense of things. He advanced as far as Beth -shemesh with his army; and Joash King of Israel gave him battle. Amaziah gave ground, his army was defeated, and he himself fell into the hands of his Enemies. Joash forced the Camp at Beth-shemesh, and carried Amaziah to Jerusalem. Then he gave orders for demolishing four hundred cubits of the City-walls, from the gate of Ephraim as far as to the corner gate. He carried all the gold and silver to Samaria, all the rich vessels which he found in the House of God, and in the treasuries belonging to the royal Palace; and the Sons of those among his own people, who had been sent as hostages to Jerusalem.

After this Amaziah reigned still fifteen or sixteen years at Jerusalem; but returned not to the Lord with all his heart; wherefore God, to punish him, permitted a Conspiracy to be formed against him at Jerusalem. He was in hopes of making his escape to Lachish; but the Conspirators sent after him, and had him there assassinated. He was brought back upon two horses, and buried with his ancestors in the City of David. He died in the year of the World 3194. before J.C. 806. before the vulgar Æra 810. Uzziah, or Azariah his Son, who was but sixteen years of age, succeeded him.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

This Valley is generally placed to the South of the Dead Sea; but we think rather, that it was in Idumæa, between the City of Palmyra and that of Bozra. See M. le Brun's Voyage.

It is said that Amaziah took Petra, and gave it the name of Jectael. Some think that he took Petra the Capital of Arabia Petræa; but others are of opinion that he only took the Rock, which ten thousand Edomites had retreated to.

Amaziah (II)

II. AMAZIAH, Priest to the golden Calves that were at Bethel. The Prophet Amos having said upon a certain day, that the High Places consecrated to Idols should be destroyed; and that however holy they might then be thought by Israel, they would be overthrown, and the House of Jeroboam extirpated by the sword; Amaziah Priest of Bethel sent to Jeroboam King of Israel, saying, Amos hath conspired against thee in the midst of the House of Israel: the land is not able to bear all his words. For thus Amos saith, Jeroboam shall die by the sword, and Israel shall surely be led away captive out of their own land. Also Amaziah said unto Amos, Go, thou Seer, flee thee away into the land of Judah; and there eat bread, and prophesy there. But prophesy not any more at Bethel; for it is the King's Chapel, and it is the King's Court[1].

Amos answered Amaziah, I am no Prophet, nor the Son of a Prophet; but I am an herdman, and a gatherer of Sycamore -fruit[2]. The Lord took me as I followed the flock, and the Lord said unto me, Go, prophesy unto my People Israel. Now therefore hear thou the word of the Lord. Thou sayest, Prophesy not against Israel; and drop not thy word against the House of Isaac. Therefore thus saith the Lord, Thy wife shall be an harlot in the City, and thy Sons and thy Daughters shall fall by the sword, and thy land shall be divided by line; and thou shalt die in a polluted land; and Israel shall surely go into captivity forth of his land.

S. Cyril of Alexandria says[3] that Amaziah, provoked at the Prophet's discourse, had his teeth broke in his head, in order to oblige him to be silent. Others say, that the same Amaziah procured several punishments to be inflicted on him; and that his Son Uzziah gave him a blow upon the temples with a stake, and knocked him down. The Prophet was carried back half dead to Tekoah, the place of his birth, where he died, and was buried with his fathers[4]. But these traditions are of no great certainty. It appears by the writings of this Prophet, that he retired into the lands belonging to Judah, and that he prophesied there for some time after what is related of Amaziah. Amos lived under Jeroboam the second, about the year of the World 3215. before J.C. 785. before the vulgar Æra 789.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Amos prophesied under Jeroboam II. and then the Kings of Israel kept their Court at Samaria. But they had in all probability a palace at Bethel.

Amos vii. 14. Vellicans Sycomoros. בלם שקמיםTheodot. Χαρακᾶν συκαμίνους. Plin. l. 13. c.7. Sycomorus scalpendo tantum ferreis unguibus, aliter non maturescit: id cum factum est, quarto die demetitur.

Cyrill. Præfat. exposition. in Amos.

Epiphan. de vita & morte Prophet. cap. 12. Isidor. de vita & morte SS c. 43. Doroth. in Synops. &c. IV. AMINADAB, or ABINADAB, the Son of t Antiq. l. 18. c. 3.

Ambivius

AMBIVIUS (Marcus) succeeded Coponius in the government of Judæa[1]. Annius Rufus was his successor, in the 13th year of J. C.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Antiq. l. 18. c. 3.

Ambushes

[ארב מאר בה] AMBUSHES, Ambuscades, Insidiæ. To lay in ambush. Insidiari. These words are not always taken in their proper signification, for laying ambushes for any one, attacking him in secret, laying snares for him. They sometimes signify no more than attacking a man who has no distrust of such a thing; attacking one behind, concealing ones self in some particular place in order to surprize any one. See the book of Judges, ch. ix. 25, 32, 34, 35. Abimelech, who lay lurking with his people in the heights of Sichem, so however as to rob and treat those who passed that way very ill, came and attacked the City of Sichem with his troops divided into three bodies: Tetendit insidias juxta Sichimam in quatuor locis. Literally according to the Hebrew, They prepared Ambuscades against Sichem in four Heads or Companies. And a little farther, ver. 43. Abimelech being informed that the Sichemites were marched, took his Army and divided it into three Bodies, and laid wait for them in the field. It seems certain, that in these passages Ambushes, properly so called, were not the things in question. In the first Book of Samuel, Saul complains that David laid [אחלמה Achalma. 70. Ἀμέθυστος. 1 Sam. xxii. 8,13.] Ambuscades for him; Insidiator usque hodie permanens. Now nothing could be worse grounded than this accusation, if we understand the word insidiari in its proper signification; but he might say, tho' unjustly, that David was his secret enemy. And [2 Chron. xx. 22.] in the Chronicles it is said that God turned the Ambushes laid by the enemies of Israel upon themselves; that is to say, their endeavours, their malice, their arms, he turned against themselves; for the enemies there mentioned came not in private, or by stratagem; they marched openly in arms against Israel.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Amelek

AMELEK, the Father of Joash. This was that Joash who received orders from King Ahab to keep the Prophet Micaiah in his custody till this Prince's return from [Ch. xviii. 25.] the war against the Syrians; in the year of the world 3107. before J. C. 893. before the vulgar Æra 897.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Amen

AMEN, in Hebrew, signifies true, faithful, [אמן Amen, John i. 51. & passim.] certain. It is made use of likewise to affirm any thing; and was a sort of affirmation used often by our Saviour. Amen, Amen, dico vobis. Lastly, it is understood as expressing a wish,[1] Amen, So be it; or an affirmation, Amen, Yes. I believe it. How [1 Cor. xiv. 16.] shall he that occupieth the room of the unlearned say Amen at thy giving of thanks, seeing he understandeth not what thou sayest. The Hebrews end the five books of Psalms, according to their way of distributing them, with the words Amen, Amen; which the Septuagint have translated Genoito, Genoito; and the Latins, Fiat, Fiat. The Greek and Latin Churches have preserved this word in their prayers, as well as Alleluia and Hosanna; because they observed more energy in them than in any terms which they could use in their own languages. At the conclusion of the publick prayers, the People answered with a loud voice, Amen. And St. Jerom[2] says, that at Rome, when the People answered Amen, the sound of their voices was like a clap of thunder, In similitudinem cœlestis tonitrui Amen reboat. The Jews assert, that the Gates of Heaven are opened to him who answers Amen with all his might.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Numb. v. 22. Respondebit, Amen, Amen. Deut. xxvii. 15, 16, 17, &c. Dicet omnis populus Amen, Amen.
Hieronym. Præfat. in lib. 2. Epist. ad Galat.

Amerutha

AMERUTHA, a town of Upper Galilee, which Josephus fortified against the Romans, as he says in the account of his own life[1]. This is very probably the same as Meroth, which terminates the Upper Galilee westward[2]. It is perhaps Mearah of the Sidonians, spoken of in Joshua xiii. 4.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Joseph. in vita sua, p. 1013.
Antiq. l. 3. c. 2.

Amethyst

[Ex. xxviii. 19. & xxxix. 12.] AMETHYST, a precious Stone, the ninth in place upon the High Priest's Rational or Breast-plate. The colour of it comes near that of new wine, and goes off with a violet. It is said to prevent people's getting drunk; that it is a defence against the effects of poison; and that it is a help to conception. The Hebrew name which the Septuagint translaté and Vulgate Amethyst, is Achalma, which may signify Sleep. The Chaldee, Onkelos, and the Syriac, translate it Een-egla, or the Eye of a Calf. The name of Issachar was engraven on this Stone.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ami

AMI, Chief of a great family, which in Ezra's time returned from Babylon, Ezra ii. 57, 58.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Aminadab (I)

I. AMINADAB, of the Tribe of Judah, the Son of Aram, and Father of Naasson, and Elisheba the Wife of Aaron the High Priest.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Aminadab (II)

II. AMINADAB. The Chariots of Aminadab are mentioned in the Canticles, as being extremely light. Or ever I was aware, my Soul made me like the Chariots [Cant. vi. 12.] of Aminadab[1]. He was very probably a celebrated Charioteer, whose horses were singularly swift.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Translators' note. The Vulgate reads it thus, Anima mea conturbavit me propter quadrigas Aminadab; and our Septuagints, ἅρματα Ἀμιναδάβ*; but the Vatican Edition reads it thus*, ἔθου με εἰς ἅρματα λαοῦ ἡγουμένου*; which is a sense the* Hebrew will admit of, מרכבות עם נדיב. שמהני

Aminadab (III)

III. AMINADAB, the Son of Koath, a Brother of Korah, 1 Chron. vi. 22. of King Saul, who was killed with him in the battle of Gilboa, in the year of the [1 Sam. xxxi. 2. 1 Chr. viii. 33. x. 2.] World 2949. before J. C. 1051.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Aminadab (V)

V. AMINADAB, or Abinadab, a Levite, and inhabitant of Kirjath-jearim, with whom the Ark was deposited, after it was brought back from the land of the [1 Sam. vii. 1.] Philistines z. He dwelt at Gibeah, that is to say, in the highest part of the City of Kirjath-jearim. Eleazar his Son was consecrated or appointed peculiarly to the office of keeping the Ark of the Lord. It is not certain whether Aminadab were at that time living. The Ark remained at Kirjath -jearim from the year of the World 2888 to 2959, that is to say, threescore and eleven years. Then David brought it from Kirjath-jearim to Jerusalem; but dared not [2 Sam. vi. 1, 2, 3.] bring it into his own house, by reason of the death of Uzzah; he lodged it therefore at Obededom's, where it continued some months.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Amittai

AMITTAI, Father to the Prophet Jonah. Jonah i. 1. and 2 Kings xiv. 25.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Amizabad

AMIZABAD, the Son of Benaiah. Benaiah is known to have been one of the principal Officers in David's armies. His Son Amizadab commanded a troop under [1 Chr. xxvii. 6.] him.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Amman

AMMAN, Ammanites. See AMMON, AMMONITES. The Capital of the Ammonites, called in Scripture Rabbath-Ammon, and in profane Authors Philadelphia, is likewise sometimes called Amman, and the Country of the Ammanites, Ammanitis.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ammiel (I)

I. AMMIEL, the Son of Gemal, of the Tribe of Dan, was one of the twelve deputed to go and view the Land of Canaan, Numb. xiii. 12.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ammiel (II)

II. AMMIEL, a native of Lodobar, a City situated in the Tribe of Simeon. Ammiel was the Father of Machir and [Ch. iii. 5. & 2 Sam. ix. 4, 5.] Bathsheba, who was first married to Uriah, then to David, by whom she had Solomon.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ammiel (III)

III. AMMIEL, the Son of Obededom the Levite, who was made Porter of the [Ch. xxvi. 5.] Temple under the reign of David.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ammihud (I)

I. AMMIHUD, the Son of Ephraim, and Father of Elishama, Numb. i. 10. and 1 Chr. vii. 26.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ammihud (II)

II. AMMIHUD, of the Tribe of Simeon, and Father of Shemuel, or Samuel, very different from the Prophet of that name, Numb. xxxiv. 20.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ammihud (III)

III. AMMIHUD, of the Tribe of Naph -

² Joseph Antiq. l. 6. c. 2. tali, Father of Pedahel, Numb. xxxiv. 28.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ammihud (IV)

IV. AMMIHUD, the Father of Talmai, King of Geshur, 2 Sam. xiii. 37.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ammishaddai

[Jerem. xlix. 25. Ezek. xxx. 14, 15, 16. Nahum iii. 8.] AMMISHADDAI, Father of Ahiezer, of the Tribe of Dan, Numb. i. 12. x. 25.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ammon (I)

I. AMMON, or No-Ammon, a City of Egypt. The Chaldee and the author of the Vulgate generally translate this term Alexandria. They doubtless were not ignorant that Alexandria is much more modern than Jeremiah, Ezekiel, and Nahum, who speak of No-Ammon, which by these Interpreters is render'd Alexandria; but they might believe this last to be at or near the same place where Alexandria was afterwards built, which nevertheless does not appear by History; for there was only the town of Rachotis upon the Sea near the place where the City of Alexandria was built.

The marks whereby the Prophets describe No-Ammon are, that it was situate among the Rivers, that it had the waters round about it, whose rampart was the Sea, and her wall was from the Sea; which induces us to think that No-Ammon[1] is Diospolis, or the City of Jupiter, situated in the Delta, upon an arm of the Nile, between Busiris to the South, and Mendes to the North, at a very little distance from the Mediterranean. There were such lakes about it as might be well called Seas in the style of the Hebrews. The ruin of this City, which was foretold, and so distinctly describ'd by the Prophets, happen'd under Esar-haddon and Nebuchadnezzar, and perhaps under Sennacherib. See our Comments upon the Prophets Ezekiel xxx. 14, 15, 16. and Nahum iii. 8. But notwithstanding all we have here said to support the opinion of No-Ammon's being Diospolis, we must confess ingenuously, upon farther reflection, that this is not at all certain, and Thebes, the Capital of Upper Egypt, may be understood to have been No -Ammon. The Reader may see what we have to say in favour of this opinion in the article THEBES.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Translators' note. Sir Isaac Newton, in his short Chronicle, says, that Sesac, King of Egypt adorned Thebes, and dedicated it to his Father Ammon by the name of No-Ammon, or Ammon-No, that is, the People or City of Ammon; whence the Greeks called it Diospolis, the City of Jupiter. Sesac also erected Temples and Oracles to his Father in Thebes, Ammonia, and Ethiopia, and thereby caused his Father to be worshipped as a God in those Countries: And this, continues Sir Isaac Newton, was the original of the Worship of Jupiter Ammon, and the first mention of Oracles that I meet with in profane History, Sir Isaac Newton's Chronology, &c. p. 18.

Ammon (II)

II. AMMON, or Hammon, or Jupiter Ammon, the celebrated God of the Egyptians, whom we take to be the same as Ham, who peopled Africk, and was the Father of Mizraim, the Founder of the Egyptians[1]. Ammon had a famous Temple in Africk, where he was adored under the figure of a Ram; for in this manner the Egyptians represented their Gods under the form of certain animals. The Temple of Ammon was situated in a delicious spot, surrounded every where with a frightful desart. Here there was an Oracle of eminent note, which Alexander the Great consulted. This Oracle however, as well as others, fell insensibly into contempt. In Strabo's time it was not in the vogue it had been, and in Plutarch's time scarce any regard at all was had to it; and in the reign of Theodosius, according to the testimony of Prudentius, there was no more talk of it. The Scripture says nothing of this false Deity in particular, but speaks of Ham, and of the City of Ammon or No-Ammon, which was principally devoted to it. Hammon, the God of the Egyptians, was the same as the Jupiter of the Greeks[2]; for which reason these latter call the City which the Egyptians name No-Ammon, the habitation of Ammon, Diospolis, or the City of Jupiter.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Translators' note. Sir Isaac Newton, in his Account of the Empire of Egypt, tells us, that Sesostris or Sesac, after his Father's death, built Temples to him in his Conquests; whence it came to pass that Jupiter Ammon was worshipped in Ammonia, and Ethiopia, and Arabia, and as far as India, according to the Poet, Lucan l. ix. Quamvis Ethiopum populis, Arabumque beatis Gentibus, atque Indis unus sit Jupiter Ammon. Chronology, &c. p. 216.

Translators' note. In After-ages the Egyptian and Greek names were both united, and this Deity was called Jupiter Hammon.

Ammon (III)

III. AMMON, or Ben-Ammi, the Son of Lot, born of this Patriarch and his youngest Daughter, in the year of the [Gen. xix. 34, 38.] World 2107, before J.C. 1893, before the vulgar Æra 1897. We know no particulars of Ammon's life. The place of his abode was to the East of the Dead Sea and Jordan, in the Mountains of Gilead. He was the Father of the Ammonites, a famous People always at enmity with the Israelites.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ammonites

AMMONITES, a People descended from Ammon, whom we have been speaking of. They are called sometimes Ammanites: They destroyed the Giants Zamzummims, and seized upon their Country. God forbad [Deut. ii. 19, 20, 21.] Moses, and by him the Israelites, to attack the Ammonites, because he did not intend to give their land unto the Hebrews. Before the People of Israel enter'd the land of Canaan, the Amorites had by Conquest got great part of the Countries belonging to the Ammonites and Moabites. This Moses retook from the Amorites, and divided between the Tribes of Gad and Reuben. In the time of Jephthah, the Ammonites declared war against the Israelites, under pretence [Judg. xi. 13.] that they detained a great part of the Country which had formerly been theirs before the Amorites possessed it. Jephthah declared, that as this was an acquisition which the Israelites had made in a just war, and what they had taken from the Amorites, who had long enjoyed it by right of conquest, he was under no obligation to restore it. The Ammonites were not satisfied with this reason, so Jephthah gave them battle, and won it.

The Ammonites and Moabites generally united whenever there was any design set afoot of attacking the Israelites. After the death of Othniel, the Ammonites and Amalekites joined with Eglon, King of Moab, to oppress the People of the Lord. Some years after, that is to say, in the year [Ch. iii. 13. 1 Sam. xi. 1. From the Year of the World 2661 to 2679.] of the World 2799, the Ammonites were great oppressors of the Israelites beyond Jordan; but in 2817 God raised up Jephthah to deliver them from this subjection. In the beginning of Saul's reign, in the year of the World 2909, before J. C. 1191, before the vulgar Æra 1195, Naash King of the Ammonites having set down before Jabesh-Gilead reduced the inhabitants so low as to desire a capitulation. Naash answered that he would accept of their surrender upon no other conditions than their submitting to have every one his right eye pluckt out, that so they might be made a reproach to Israel; but Saul coming seasonably to the succour of Jabesh, delivered the City and People from the barbarity of Naash.

[2 Kings i. 1.] David had been the King of Ammon's friend; and after the death of this Prince, he sent to make his compliments of condoleance to Hanun his Son and successor, who imagining that these Ambassadors were come as spies to observe his strength, and the condition of his Kingdom, treated them in a very injurious manner. David revenged the affront offered to his Ambassadors, and subdued the Ammonites, the Moabites, and the Syrians their allies. Ammon and Moab continued under the obedience of King David and Solomon, and after the separation of the ten Tribes, were subject to the Kings of Israel till the death of Ahab, in 3107, before J.C. 893, before the vulgar Æra 897.

[Ch. iii. 4, 5, 6, & seq. 2 Chr. xx. 1, 2, & seq. If. xv. xvi.] Jehoram, the Son of Ahab, and Successor of Ahaziah, defeated the Moabites in 3109. But it does not appear that his victory was so compleat as to reduce them to his obedience. At the same time the Ammonites, Moabites, and other People made an irruption upon the lands belonging to Judah, but they were forced back and routed by Jehoshaphat. Isaiah threatens the Moabites with a misfortune which was to happen three years after his prediction, which had a view probably to the war which Salmanesar made against them about the year of the World 3277, before J.C. 723, before the vulgar Æra 727.

After the Tribes of Reuben, Gad, and the half Tribe of Manasseh were carried into captivity by Tiglath Pilasser in 3264, before J. C. 736, before the vulgar Æra 740, the Ammonites and Moabites took possession of the Cities belonging to these [Jerem. xlix. 1.] Tribes. Jeremiah reproaches them for it. The Ambassadors of the Ammonites were some of those to whom this Prophet presented the cup of the Lord's fury, and directed directed to make bonds and yokes for themselves, exhorting them to submit to Nebuchadnezzar, and threatening them, if they did not, with captivity and slavery.

Ezekiel denounces their intire destruction, and tells them that God would give them up to the People of the East, who should set their palaces in their Country, so that there should be no more mention of the Ammonites among the Nations; and all this as a punishment to them for insulting the Israelites upon the calamities they suffer'd, and the destruction of their Temple by the Chaldæans. We believe that these misfortunes happen'd to them in the fifth year after the taking of Jerusalem[1], when Nebuchadnezzar made war against all the People who dwelt upon the confines of Judea, in the year of the World 3420 or 21, before J. C. 579, before the vulgar Æra 583.

It is probable that Cyrus gave the Ammonites and Moabites the liberty of returning into their own Country, from whence they had been removed by Nebuchadnezzar; for we see them in the place of their former settlement, expos'd to those revolutions which were common to the People of Syria and Palestine, and subject sometimes to the Kings of Egypt, and sometimes to the Kings of Syria.

Antiochus the Great took Rabboth or Philadelphia, their Capital, demolished the walls, and put a garrison into it[2] in 3806. During the persecutions of Antiochus Epiphanes, the Ammonites shewed their hatred to the Jews, and exercised great cruelties against such of them as lived in [1 Macc. v. 6---45.] their parts[3]. Justin Martyr says, that in his time there were still many Ammonites remaining[4]; but Origen assures us[5], that when he was living they were known only under the general name of Arabians. Thus was the prediction of Ezekiel accomplished, who said that the Ammonites should be destroyed in such a manner as [Ezek. xxv. 10.] not to be remember'd among the Nations.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Joseph. Antiq.
Polyb. l. v.
Joseph. Antiq. l. 12. c. xii.
Justin Dialog. cum Tryphone p. 272.
Origen in Job.

Ammonius

AMMONIUS, General of Alexander Balas's Troops, was accused by Ptolemy Philometor of a design to poison him; but it is believed, that this was only a pretence made use of by Philometor for dethroning his Son-in-law Alexander Balas, and taking possession of his Kingdom. He therefore attacked Balas, defeated him, took his Daughter Cleopatra from him, and gave her to Demetrius Nicanor. See Joseph. Antiq. l. 13. c. 7. p. 436, 437. He says, that Alexander refusing to deliver up Ammonius to Philometor, he concluded Balas to be his accomplice, and the principal author of those secret plots which Ammonius had formed against him. So that to revenge himself, he marched against Antioch, the inhabitants whereof were very much dissatisfied with Ammonius, by reason of the several vexations which they suffered under him. Ammonius endeavoured to escape by disguising himself in a Woman's dress; but he was apprehended and put to death, in the year of the World 3859. before J. C. 141. before the vulgar Æra 145.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Amnon (I)

I. AMNON, the eldest Son of David and Ahinoam his second Wife, having conceived a violent passion for his Sister Tamar, who was the Daughter of David and Maachah, and Absalom's Sister, grew very [2 Sam. xiii. 1, 2, &c. In the Year of the World 2972, before J. C. 1028, before the vulgar Æra 1032.] uneasy and consumptive; which being observed by Jonadab the Son of Shimeah, David's Brother, and a great friend to Amnon, he said, Why art thou, being the King's Son, lean from day to day? Amnon discovered his passion to him, and the impossibility there seemed to be of satisfying it. Jonadab advised him to counterfeit sickness, and said, When the King thy Father cometh to see thee, say unto him, I pray thee let my Sister Tamar come and give me meat, and dress me meat in my sight, that I may see it, and eat it at her hand. Amnon followed this advice, and the King easily granted his request. When Tamar came to the Apartment where her Brother Amnon lay, she took flour, kneaded it, and made cakes in his sight, and did bake the cakes. And she took a pan and poured them out before him.

But Amnon would eat nothing. He ordered every body out of his room; and calling his Sister to him in the most private part of the chamber, where his bed was, he would have offered violence to her. But Tamar said to him, Nay, my Brother, do not force me; for no such thing ought to be done in Israel; do not thou this folly. And I, whither shall I cause my shame to go? And as for thee, thou shalt be as one of the fools in Israel. Now therefore I pray thee, speak unto the King, for he will not with-hold me from thee[1].

But Amnon hearkening only to the dictates of his passion, forced her, and abused her: after which his aversion to her was more excessive than his love had been. He would have obliged her to leave the room, but she making some resistance, he called in one of his servants, ordered him to turn her out, and shut the door after her. Her Brother Absalom meeting her all in tears, making sad outcries, and having her head covered with ashes, comforted her, and advised her to be silent. David, vid, upon information of what had passed, was extremely afflicted. But as he loved Amnon, who was his eldest Son, very tenderly, he was unwilling to do any thing that might grieve him.

Absalom kept his resentment of this affront close within his heart for two years, waiting an opportunity to revenge it. One day he invited the King his Father, and all his Brothers, to an entertainment which he made at Baal-hazor, upon the shearing of his sheep. The King thanked him: but Absalom entreated him with so much earnestness, that he permitted him to carry with him the Princes his Sons, and particularly Amnon. Absalom gave his orders to his people, charging them that when they saw Amnon disordered with wine, upon the signal given, they should strike and kill him: Fear not, said he, have not I commanded you? The Officers executed what their Master had directed them to do, and Amnon was dispatched in the midst of his good cheer, at his Brother Absalom's house, in the year of the World 2974. before J. C. 1026. before the vulgar Æra 1030.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

[1] The Law, Levit. xviii. 11. forbids marriages between Brothers and Sisters: Tamar probably was not sufficiently inform'd of this, or the disorder she was in hindred her from reflecting on it.

Amnon (II)

II. Amnon, the Son of Shimon, 1 Chr. iv. 20.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Amok

AMOK, of the race of those Priests who returned from Babylon, Neh. xii. 7, 20.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Amon (I)

I. AMON, Governor of Samaria, kept the Prophet Micaiah in custody, by King [1 Kings xxii. 26.] Ahab's order.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Amon (II)

II. AMON, fourteenth King of Judah, Son of Manasseh and Meshullemeth, the Daughter of Haruz, of Jotbah. He began to reign in the year of the World 3363. before J. C. 637. before the vulgar Æra 641, at the age of two and twenty, and reigned only two years at Jerusalem. He did evil in the sight of the Lord, as his Father [2 Kings xxi. 19, 20, 21.] Manasseh did. He forsook the God of his Fathers, and worshiped Idols. His servants conspired against him, and slew him in his own house: but the People killed all the Conspirators, and established his Son Josiah in his Throne. He was buried in the Garden of Uzza. We know no other particulars of his life. His death happened in the year of the World 3365. before J. C. 635, before the vulgar Æra 639.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Amorites

AMORITES, People descended from Amorrhæus, the fourth Son of Canaan. They first of all peopled the Mountains lying to the West of the Dead Sea. They had likewise establishments to the East of the same Sea, between the brooks Jabbok and Arnon, from whence they forced the [Josh. v. 1. Numb. xiii. 30. xxi. 29.] Ammonites and Moabites. Moses made a conquest of this Country from their [Judg. xi. 19,20,&c.] Kings Sihon and Og, in the year of the World 2553. before J. C. 1447. before the vulgar Æra 1451.

[Amos ii. 9.] Amos speaks of their gigantick stature and valour. He compares their height with that of Cedars, and their strength with that of an Oak. The name Amorite is often taken in Scripture for all Canaanites in general. The Lands which the Amorites possessed on this side Jordan, were given to the Tribe of Judah; and those which they had enjoyed beyond this river were distributed between the Tribes of Reuben and Gad. The Arabians derive their name Amorites from the City of Gomorrah, one of the five which were condemned to perish by fire from Heaven. But Gomorrah, or Hamorrah[1], is written otherwise than Emor the Father of the Amorites. So that there is no probability that either the Amorites or Emor their Father founded Gomorrah, and called it by their name.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Gen. x. 19. עמרהGomorrha אמוריAmorrhæus.

Amos (I)

I. AMOS, the fourth of the small Prophets, was, as is said, of the little Town of Tekoah, in the Tribe of Judah, four leagues Southward from Jerusalem. There is no good proof however that he was a native of this place, but only that he retired thither, when he was driven from Bethel, which was in the kingdom of the ten Tribes. It is very probable that he was born within the territories of Israel, and that his Mission was directed principally to this Kingdom.

As he was prophesying in Bethel, where the golden Calves were, in the reign of Jeroboam the second, about the year of the World 3215. before the birth of J. C. 785. before the vulgar Æra 789. Amaziah the High-Priest of Bethel accused [Amos vii. 10,11,&c.] him before King Jeroboam, saying, Amos hath conspired against thee in the midst of the House of Israel; the land is not able to bear all his words; for thus Amos saith, Jeroboam shall die by the sword, and Israel shall surely be led away captive out of their own land. Amaziah said therefore unto Amos, O thou Seer, go, flee thee away into the land of Judah, and there eat bread, and prophesy there. But prophesy not again any more at Bethel, for it is the King's Chapel, and it is the King's Court.

Amos answered Amaziah, I was no Prophet, neither was I a Prophet's Son; but I was an herdman, and a gatherer of Sycamore fruit[1]. And the Lord took me as I followed the flock, and the Lord said unto me, Go, prophesy unto my people Israel. Now therefore hear thou the word of the Lord; Thou sayest, Prophesy not against Israel, and drop not thy word against the house of Isaac. Therefore thus saith the Lord, Thy Wife shall be an Harlot in the City, and thy Sons and thy Daughters shall fall by the sword, and thy land shall be divided by line; and thou shalt die in a polluted land, and Israel shall surely go into captivity forth of his land. After this the Prophet retired into the Kingdom of Judah, and dwelt in the town of Tekoah, where he continued to prophesy. He complains in many places of the violence offered him by endeavouring to oblige him to silence; and bitterly exclaims against the disorders of Israel.

He began to prophesy the second year before the earthquake, which happened in the reign of King Uzziah, and which Josephus[2], with most of the antient and modern Commentators, refers to this Prince's usurpation of the Priest's office,[3] when he attempted to offer incense to the Lord. The first of his Prophecies, in order of time, are those of the VII Chapter. The others he pronounced in the Town of Tekoah, whither he retired. His first two Chapters are against Damascus, the Philistines, Tyrians, Edomites, Ammonites, Moabites, the Kingdom of Judah, and that of the ten Tribes. The evils which he threatens them with refer to the times of Salmanezer, Tiglath-pileser, Sennacherib and Nebuchadnezzar, who did so much mischief to these provinces, and at last led the Israelites into captivity.

He foretold the misfortunes which the Kingdom of Israel should fall into after the death of Jeroboam the second, who was then living. He foretold the death of King Zechariah, the invasion of the lands belonging to Israel by Phul and Tiglath-pileser, Kings of Assyria. He speaks of the Captivity of the ten Tribes, and of their return into their own Country. He makes sharp invectives against the sins of Israel, against their effeminacy and avarice, their harshness to the poor, the splendor of their buildings, and the delicacy of their tables. He reproves the people of Israel for going to Bethel, Dan, Gilgal, and Beersheba, which were the most famous Pilgrimages of the Country, and for swearing by the Gods of these places.

The time and manner of his death are not known. Some old Authors relate[4], that Amaziah Priest of Bethel, whom we have spoken of, provoked by the discourses of the Prophet, had his teeth broke, in order to silence him. Others[5] say, that Hosea, or Uzziah the Son of Amaziah, struck him with a stake upon the temples, and knocked him down, and almost killed him; that in this condition he was carried to Tekoah, where he died, and was buried with his Fathers. This is the account we have from these Authors. On the contrary, it is our opinion, that he prophesied a long time at Tekoah, after the adventure which he had with Amaziah. And the Prophet taking no notice of the ill treatment which he is said to have received from Uzziah, his silence is an argument that he suffered nothing from him.

S. Jerom observes, that there is nothing great and sublime in the style of Amos.[6]He [2 Cor. xi. 6.] applies these words of St. Paul to him, rude in speech, tho' not in knowledge. He [Amos i. 2,] says farther, that as every one chuses to speak of his own art, Amos generally makes use of comparisons taken from the country life, wherein he had been brought up. S. Austin[7] shews, that there was a certain kind of eloquence in the Sacred Writers, directed by the Spirit of Wisdom, and so proportioned to the nature of the things they treated of, that even they who accuse them of rusticity and unpoliteness in their way of writing, could not chuse a style more suitable, were they to have spoken on the same subject, to the same persons, and in the same circumstances.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

The Sycamore is a sort of Fig-tree common in Egypt and Palestine, the fruit whereof does not ripen till it is prick'd with iron nails. After it was thus used, it would ripen in three days. See Plin. l. 13. c. 7. Theophr. & Dioscorid. See likewise Theodoret upon Amos vii.

Joseph. Antiq. l.ix. c. 11. p. 319, 320.

The Rabbins, and Procopius of Gaza, are of opinion that this happened in the twenty fifth year of Uzziah, and consequently in the year of the world 3219 But this cannot be: for Jotham the Son of Uzziah, who was born in 3221. was of age to govern, and consequently was between fifteen and twenty years of age when his Father undertook to offer incense, and was struck with a leprosy. See Ush- er, in the year of the World 3221. de vita Prophet. c. 12. Isidor. de vita & morte SS. c. 43. Doroth. Synopf. c. 2. Chronic. Pascal. p. 147.

Cyrill. Præfat. in Amos.

Epiphan. de vita Prophet. c. 12. Isidor. de vita & morte SS. c. 43. Doroth. Synops. c. 2. Chronic. Pascal. p. 147.

Hieronym. Prolog. exposit. in Amos.

Aug. l.iv. de Doctr. Christ. c. 7. Hebr. vide in Isai. xxxvii. 2. xxxviii. 1. Clem. Alex. l. 1. Stromat.

Amos (II)

II. Amos, the Father of the Prophet Isaiah, was, as it is said, the Son of King Joash, and Brother to Amaziah. The Rabbins[1] pretend, that Amos, Isaiah's Father, was a Prophet, as well as his Son, according to the rule received among them, that when the Father of a Prophet is called in Scripture by his name, it is an indication that he has had the gift of Prophecy. S. Austin[2] conjectured that the Prophet Amos, the fourth among the small Prophets, was the Father of Isaiah. But the names of these two persons are written differently[3]. Besides, Amos, Isaiah's Father, was, as well as he himself, of Jerusalem, and of much superior quality to the Prophet Amos, who was one that had the keeping of the larger sort of Cattle. Some are of opinion, that the [2 Chron. xxv. 7, 8.] Man of God who spake to King Amaziah, and obliged him to send back the hundred thousand Men of Israel whom he had purchased to march against the Edomites, was Amos the Father of Isaiah, and Brother to King Amaziah. But this opinion is supported by no proofs.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Hieronym. ex Hebr. vide in Isai. xxxvii. 2. xxxviii. 1. Clem. Alex. l. 1. Stromat.
Aug. l. xviii. de Civit. Dei c. 27.
Father to Isaiah. the Prophet Amos.

Amos (III)

[Luke iii. 25.] III. Amos, the Son of Nahum, and Father

Amos i. 1. Father of Mattathias, is to be met with in the Genealogy of our Saviour according to the Flesh, as it stands recorded in St. Luke.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Amphipolis

AMPHIPOLIS, a City lying between Macedon and Thrace, but depending upon the Kingdom of Macedon. There is mention [Acts xvii. 1.] of it in the Acts of the Apostles; St. Paul and Silas being deliver'd out of prison, left Philippi, went to Thessalonica, and pass'd through Amphipolis. This City had the name likewise of Chrysopolis or Christopolis.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Amphora

AMPHORA, is often taken in an appellative Sense for a Pitcher, or vessel to [Luke xxii. 10.] hold wine or water. For example, There shall a Man meet you bearing a Pitcher of water, Amphoram aquæ portans. At other times it is taken for a a certain measure: [Dan. xiv. 3.] For instance, There were spent every day upon the Idol Bel six vessels of Wine, Vini amphoræ sex. The Amphora is not an Hebrew measure, and the original Hebrew of the place, wherein this term is to be met with, is no where extant. The Roman Amphora contained two urns, or eight and forty Sextarii, or fourscore pounds, at twelve ounces to the pound[1]: But the Attick or Athenian Amphora contained three urns, or an hundred and twenty pounds, at twelve ounces each, which make but ninety, at sixteen ounces to the pound.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Translators' note. The Amphora in Dr. Arbuthnot's Account of it contained seven English Gallons and one Wine pint; the Urna three Gallons, four Wine pints and a half; the Sextarius one Wine pint. See his Tables of ancient Coins, Weights, Measures, &c. c. ix.

Amplias

AMPLIAS, whom St. Paul speaks of [Rom. xvi. 8.] in his Epistle to the Romans, was one whom he particularly loved. It is not certainly known who he was, nor what was done; by him but the Greeks say, that he was ordained Bishop of Odyssopolis in Mœsia by St. Andrew, was an apostolical Person, at least one of the seventy two Disciples, and had the honour of Martyrdom. They observe his Festival on the 31st of October.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Amram (I)

I. AMRAM, the Son of Koath, of the Tribe of Levi, married Jochebed, of whom he had Aaron, Miriam, and Moses. He died in Egypt, at an hundred and thirty [Exod. vi. 20.] seven years of Age. It is not very well known in what year of the World he died.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Amram (II)

II. AMRAM, the Son of Bani, was one of those who after the return from Babylon separated from his Wife, whom he had married contrary to the express direction of [Ezra x. 34.] the Law.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Amraphel

AMRAPHEL, the King of Shinar or Babylonia, confederated with Chedorloamer, King of the Edomites, and two other Kings, to make war against the Kings of Pentapolis, that is to say, of Sodom, Gomorrah, and the three neighbouring Cities. The Kings who were in league with Amraphel worsted those of Pentapolis, [Gen. xiv. 1, 2, &c.] plunder'd their City, and carried off abundance of captives, among whom was Lot, Abraham's Nephew; but Abraham pursued them, retook Lot, and recover'd all the spoil, in the year of the World 2092, before J. C. 1908, before the vulgar Æra 1912.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Amulets

AMULETS, or Preservatives, are certain characters, ligaments, stones or metals, engraved or adorned with Stars, to which a power was attributed of preserving People from mischief, from being bewitched, [Ch. xxxi. 19. Ch. xxxv. 4.] and from diseases. Some are of opinion that Laban's Teraphims, which were carried away by Rachel, and the ear-rings which Jacob hid under an oak, were Preservatives or Amulets. See hereafter TALISMANS.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Amzi

AMZI, the Son of Zechariah, and Father to Peliliah, Neh. xi. 12.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ana

ANA. We are acquainted with a City of this name at the extremity of Arabia deserta, upon the Euphrates. Tavernier says it takes up the two banks of this river much as Paris lies upon the two banks of the Seine; but another Traveller writes to me, that it takes up but one of the banks of the Euphrates, and has but one Street, which is extremely large. There is a very fine mosque in an island which lies near to it. The land about it for half a league is well cultivated, but beyond this distance there is nothing but frightful desarts.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Anab

ANAB, a City in the Mountains of Judah, Josh. xi. 21. St. Jerom believes it to be the same with Bethanaba, eight miles Eastward from Diospolis. Eusebius places Bethoanab at four miles distance from the same City of Diospolis. Epiphanius[1] speaks of a City or Village called Anablata, in the Diocese of Jerusalem towards Bethel; but I do not think any of these places to be the Anab mentioned by Joshua, which with Hebron and Debir is set by him more to the South of Judah.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Epiphan. Epist. ad Joan. Ierosol.

Anaglypha

ANAGLYPHA. This term is to be found in 1 Kings vi. 32. Sculpsit in eis picturam Cherubim, & palmarum Species, & Anaglypha. This last word is Greek[1], and signifies all sorts of figures in relievo, or rather all sorts of engraving embossed, or in basso relievo. Vessels adorned with figures in relievo, Opera signi, as Virgil speaks[2]; or in asperitatem excisa, as Pliny terms them[3], are what we call Anaglypha.

But the passage in the book of Kings where this word is met with, signifies, that as there were figures of Palm-trees, Cherubims, and blown Lilies all round the wall within the Sanctuary, Solomon appointed the same to be carved in basso relievo upon the doors of the Sanctuary; or, as the Hebrew reads it, he carved upon them carvings of Cherubims, and Palmtrees, and open Flowers w.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ἀνάγλυφα Cælata.
Æneid. v. v. 267.
Plin. l. xxxiii. c. 11.

Anagoge

ANAGOGE. This is one of the four senses wherein the Scripture is interpreted, viz. the literal, allegorical, anagogical, and tropological. The anagogical sense is, when the sacred text is explained with a regard to the end which Christians should have in view, and this is eternal life. For example, the rest of the Sabbath, in the anagogical sense, signifies the repose of everlasting blessedness.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Anah

ANAH, the Son of Zibeon the Hivite, and Father of Aholibamah, Esau's Wife. While he was feeding Asses in the desart, he discover'd Springs there of warm water. [Genes. xxxvi. 24.] Thus St. Jerom translates the Hebrew text jemim; the Septuagint and other Hebrew Translators have preserved the term jamim or jemim; he found jamim or the jamims: Others[1] translate, he discover'd the manner of producing mules, by copulation between a She-ass and an Horse, or between an Ass and a Mare; but the Scripture never calls Mules jamim, nor are such creatures at all to be met with in the Scripture till after David.

Others[2] are of opinion, that Anah found, that is, attacked, surprized the People called Jamim or Jemim in the Wilderness, where he was feeding droves of Asses. The Samaritan Version reads, that Anah found the Emeans, a sort of People whom Moses takes notice of, Deut. ii. 10. The Emims dwelt therein in times past, a People great and many, and tall as the Anakims. These Emims dwelt in the neighbourhood of Seir, where Anah fed his Asses. The Hebrew term Matza, which signifies to find, is likewise taken often for to attack or surprize an enemy. This to me seems to be the true explanation.

Some have thought, but without any proof, that Anah had merited divine honours, and that he is named in the second book of Kings, where it is said that the Sepharvaim adored Henah, or Anah, and Ivah. See likewise 2 Kings xix. 12. and Isaiah xxxvii. 13.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ita Hebræi. Vide Hieronym. quæst. Hebr. in Genes.
Bochart. de Anim. Sacr. p. 1. t. xi. c. 1.

Anaharath

ANAHARATH, a City belonging to the Tribe of Issachar.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Anak

ANAK, Anakim, famous Giants in Palestine. Anak, the Father of the Anakims, was the Son of Arba, who gave [Ch. xiv. 15. Ch. xv. 14. Num. xiii. 23.] his name to Kirjath-Arba, or Hebron. Anak had three Sons, Sheshai, Ahiman, and Talmai, who produced a great many others, terrible for their fierceness and their extraordinary stature. The Hebrews said, that in comparison of these monstrous Men, they were but Grass-hoppers. Some have thought that the name of Phœnician, given to the Canaanites, and particularly to the Sidonians, came from Bene-Anac, Sons of Anak. Others derive from it the Greek word Anax, which signifies King or Master. Caleb, assisted by the Tribe of Judah, took Kirjath-Arba, and destroyed the Anakims in the year of the World 2559.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Anamim

ANAMIM, second Son of Mizraim. He peopled the Mareotis, if we may credit the Paraphrast Jonathan, the Son of Uzziel, or the Pentapolis of Cyrene, according to the Paraphrast of Jerusalem. Bochart is of opinion that these Anamims are the People that dwell in the parts adjacent to the Temple of Jupiter Ammon, and in the Nasamonitis. We believe the Amanians and Garamantes to be descended from Anamim. The Hebrew Ger or Gar signifies a Passenger or Traveller. The name of Gar-amantes may be derived from Ger-amanim. Their Capital is called Garamania in Solinus.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Anammelech

ANAMMELECH. It is said in the second book of Kings, that the inhabitants of Sepharvaim, who had been sent from beyond the Euphrates into the Country of Samaria, burned their Children there in honour of Anammelech and Adrammelech. We are of opinion that Adrammelech signifies the Sun, and Anammelech the Moon. Adrammelech imports a magnificent King, and Anammelech a gentle King. The Eastern People worshipped the Moon under the name of a Deity, and offer'd human Sacrifices both to Sun and Moon.[1] Some Rabbins imagine, that Anammelech was figured like a Mule, others describe him in the form of a Quail or a Pheasant; but this is very uncertain.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Strabo, l. xi. & Lucian de Dea Syra. See our Dissertation upon the God Moloch, before the book of Leviti- cus, p. 30, 31.

Anani

ANANI, the seventh Son of Eliœnai.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ananias (I)

I. ANANIAS. When the Angel Raphael offer'd to bear Tobias company in his way to Rages, he told him that he was Azarias, the Son of Ananias the Great. Tobit answer'd, that he was of an illustrious extraction. This is all we know of this Ananias.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ananias (II)

II. ANANIAS, or Ananiah, of the Tribe of Benjamin, who, when the Jews returned from the Babylonish captivity, [Nehem. xi. 32.] built part of the walls of Jerusalem.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ananias (III)

III. ANANIAS, a Jewish Merchant, who converted Izates, the Son of Monobazes, King of the Adiabenians, to Judaism[1]. Orosius[2] will have it that Ananias was a Christian, and that Izates was made a convert to Christianity by him. See above ADIABENE. This conversion happened about the year of J.C. 41.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Joseph. Antiq. l. xx. c. 1.
Oros. l. vii. c. 6.

Ananias (IV)

IV. ANANIAS, Son of Nebedæus, High Priest of the Jews. He succeeded Joseph the Son of Camith[1], in the year of the World 4050, and was himself succeeded by Ishmael the Son of Fabœus, in the year of the World 4066. of J. C. 66. of the vulgar Æra 63. Quadratus Governour of Syria being come into Judœa upon the rumours which prevailed among the Samaritans and Jews, sent the High Priest Ananias to Rome[2], to give an account of his conduct to the Emperor Claudius. He justified himself so well that he was acquitted, and returned. St. Paul having been apprehended at Jerusalem, by the Tribune of the Roman Troops which guarded the Temple, declared to him that [Acts xxii. 25, 24. xxiii. 1, 2, 3, &c.] he was a Citizen of Rome, which obliged this Officer to treat him with some distinction. And as he did not know what it was whereof the Jews accused him, the next day he convened the Priests, and placed S. Paul in the midst of them, that he might have an opportunity to explain himself. S. Paul said to them, Men and Brethren, I have lived in all good conscience before God until this day. He said no more, and the High Priest Ananias commanded those who were near him to strike him on the face. The Apostle hereupon replied, God shall judge thee, thou whited Wall; for sittest thou to judge me after the Law, and commandest me to be smitten contrary to the Law? And they that stood by said, Revilest thou God's High Priest? Then said Paul, I wist not, Brethren, that he was the High Priest; for it is written, Thou shalt not speak evil of the Ruler of thy People.

After this, St. Paul, knowing that the assembly was composed of Pharisees and Sadducees, cried out, Men and Brethren, I am a Pharisee, the Son of a Pharisee, of the hope and resurrection of the dead I am called in question. At these words the assembly was divided; and the Tribune fearing lest St. Paul should be pull'd in pieces by them, took him from amongst them. The next day above forty Men bound themselves under a great curse, neither to eat nor drink till they had killed Paul. They acquainted the Priests with their resolution, and intreated them to find out some opportunity to engage the Tribune once more to produce Paul before them, that they might dispatch him. But S.

Paul having procured a discovery to be made of this design unto the Tribune, he ordered him to be conveyed to Cæsarea, that Felix, who was Governour of the Province, might take cognizance of his affair.

When the Priests understood that he was arrived at Cæsarea, Ananias the High [Acts xxiv.] Priest, and some other Jews went thither, in order to accuse him; but the affair was adjourned, and S. Paul continued two years there in prison. His prediction to Ananias, that God would smite him, was accomplished after this manner: Albinus Governour of Judæa being come into the Country, Ananias found means to gain him by his presents[3]. He was looked upon as the first Man of his Nation, by reason of his great riches, friends and fortune. But he had some violent people about him, who plundered the Country, and took by force the Tythes belonging to the Priests; and all this they did with impunity, by reason of the great credit which their Master had acquired by his wealth at Jerusalem.

At the same time several companies of Assassins infested Judæa, and committed very great ravages. As soon as any of their companions fell into the hands of those who had the government of the Province, and were upon the point of being executed, they never failed to seize some of the domesticks or relations of the High Priest Ananias, that so this Pontiff might endeavour to procure the liberty of their Associates, in order to rescue those out of their hands who were detained by them. Thus they took one of Ananias's Sons, whose name was Eleazar, and did not release him till ten of their companions were sent back to them. Upon this licence their number encreased considerably, and the country was exposed to frequent ravages.

At last Eleazar his Son putting himself at the head of a party of Mutineers, who had made themselves Masters of the Temple[4], and forbad any to offer sacrifices for the Emperor, and the Assassins joining with him, he pulled down his Father's house, who hiding himself with his Brother, in the Aqueducts belonging to the Royal Palace, and being soon discovered by the Seditious, both of them were killed, they of the Faction taking no notice at all of Ananias's being the Father of their Leader. Thus God smote this whited Wall in the very beginning of the Jewish Wars. We are to distinguish what Josephus says of Ananias, when High Priest, from what he relates of the same Ananias when deposed from the Pontificate, lest we fall into the mistake of those who have made two persons of him.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Joseph. Antiq. l. xx. c. 3.
Ibid. l. xx. c. 5.
Ibid. c. 8.
Joseph. l. ii. de Bello c. 38.

Ananias (V)

V. ANANIAS, sirnamed the Sadducee[1], was one of the warmest defenders of the Rebellion which the Jews were engaged in against the Romans. He was sent by Eleazar the Leader of the Mutineers, to Metilius Captain of the Roman Troops, who was shut up in the Royal Palace of Jerusalem, Jerusalem, to promise from the Rebels, that they would give him and his people their lives, provided they would leave the place, and surrender up their arms. But Metilius having surrendred upon these conditions, the Factious, without any regard to their word, murdered all the Romans, except Metilius only, who promised to turn Jew.

[In the year of J. C. 66.] This was the Ananias sent by Eleazar to the Idumæans[2] with a request that they would come to the assistance of the Rebels at Jerusalem against Ananus, whom they had accused of a design to deliver up the City to the Romans. This happened in the year of J. C. 67.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

De Bello l. ii. c. 18. seu 32. p. 812, 813. c. 1.
Joseph. lib. iv. de Bello, c. 6. seu 15. in Gr. p. 877.

Ananias (VI)

VI. ANANIAS, Son of Mashbal, of the priestly race, and originally of Emmaus, was put to death by Simon, Head of a party of Malecontents. He was killed, together with fifteen other principal Jews of the City[1], during the last siege of Jerusalem by the Romans.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Joseph. de Bello, l. vi. c. 15.

Ananias (VII)

[Acts v. 1, 2,3,& seq.] VII. ANANIAS, one of the first Christians of Jerusalem, who being converted, together with his Wife Sapphira, sold his estate, and reserved part of the purchase-money to himself; then went and carried the remainder to S. Peter, telling him that this was the whole price of his Inheritance. But the Apostle, to whom the Holy Ghost had revealed this falshood, reproached him very sharply for it, telling him that he had lied to the Holy Ghost, and not unto men. At the same time God smote Ananias, and he fell dead at the Apostle's feet. Some few hours after his Wife Sapphira came in; and S. Peter having put the same question to her which he had before proposed to her Husband, she too was guilty of the like falshood, and was suddenly struck dead in the same manner. This fell out in the year 33 or 34 of the vulgar Æra, in a little time after the Ascension.

Some have been so curious as to enquire wherein the sin of Ananias and Sapphira consisted; and whether their fault was punished with eternal damnation, or with bodily death only. As to the first question, many of the Antients have thought,[1] that when the first Believers embraced Christianity, and resolved to make sale of their estates, this resolution included at least a kind of implicit vow to reserve nothing to themselves, but to have every thing in common; and that Ananias and Sapphira having violated this vow, were guilty, in some sort, of perjury and sacrilege, by reserving to themselves a part of that which they had sold. They who are of this opinion make no doubt but that Ananias and Sapphira did herein commit a mortal sin. If to this you add their lying to the Holy Ghost, and the affront offered to God in tempting him, and questioning in some degree his power, their crime will appear still greater.

But we are not to conclude absolutely from hence that they were damned, because God might have inspired them with a lively sense of their fault, and have punished them with temporal death, to prevent their suffering those eternal torments which they had merited, if they had died obdurate and impenitent. Origen[2], S. Jerom[3], S. Austin[4], Petrus Damianus[5], and some Moderns[6], have followed that opinion which is most in favour of Ananias's salvation. But S. Chrysostom[7], S. Basil[8], and some others, are of the contrary opinion. There is no mark of their repentance visible, nor any interval between their crime and their death. It is safest in questions of this nature, which are more curious than necessary, to leave the decision of them to God.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Hieronym. Ep. 8. Basil. Serm. 1. de Inst. Monach. Chrysost. & Œcumen. in Act. v. Cyprian. l. 3. ad Quirin. Aug. Serm. Olim. 10. de diversis, nunc 148. n. 2. Gregor. Magn. l. i. Registri Ep. Olim. 31. nunc 34 Sanct. Tirin. Cornel. Grot. &c.

Origen. in Matt. Edit. Huet. p. 383.

Hieronym. Ep. ad Demetria.

Aug. Serm. 148. & l. iii. c. 1. contra Permen.

Petr. Damiani lib. de contemptu sæculi, c. 3.

Sanct. Salmeron. Carthus. a Lapide.

Chrysost. in Act. v.

Basil Serm. 1. de Instit. Monach.

Ananias (VIII)

[Acts ix. 10.] VIII. ANANIAS, a Disciple of Jesus Christ, dwelling at Damascus, whom the Lord directed in a vision to go and find Paul, who had been lately converted, and was come to Damascus. Ananias answered, Lord, I have heard by many of this Man, how much evil he hath done to thy Saints at Jerusalem; and how he hath authority from the Chief Priests to bind all that call upon thy Name. But the Lord said unto him, Go thy way, for he is a chosen vessel unto me, to bear my Name before the Gentiles, and Kings, and the Children of Israel. For I will shew him how great things he must suffer for my Name's sake. Ananias went therefore to the House where God had revealed to him that Paul was, and putting his hands on him said, Brother Saul, the Lord Jesus, who appeared unto thee in the way, hath sent me that thou mightest receive thy sight, and be filled with the Holy Ghost. And immediately there fell from his eyes as it had been scales, and he received sight forthwith, and arose and was baptized.

We know no other circumstance of the life of Ananias besides this which we have related. The book of Apostolical Constitutions believes him to be a Layman[1]. Œcumenius[2], and some Moderns, think he was a Deacon; S. Austin[3] will have it that he was a Priest, because it is said that S. Paul was sent to him that he might at his hands receive the Sacrament, the administration whereof was left by Jesus Christ to the Priesthood of his Church. The modern Greeks maintain, that he was one of the seventy Disciples, and made Bishop of Damascus, and that having obtained the Crown of Martyrdom, he was buried in the same City. There is a very fine Church to be seen there, in the place where he was interr'd; and the Turks, who have made a Mosque of it, do notwithstanding preserve a great respect for his Monument. The Greeks observe his Festival upon the first day of October, and the Latins on the 25th of January.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Const. Apost. l. viii. c. ult.
Œcumen. in Act. ix. ex Canone supra citato.
Aug. qu. l. ii. c. 40.

Ananias (IX)

IX. ANANIAS. Thus some of the Antients call S. Anian, who was the first Bishop of Alexandria next to S. Mark.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ananus (I)

I. ANANUS, the Son of Seth, and High Priest of the Jews, is called Annas in the Gospel. He enjoyed the High-Priesthood for eleven years; he succeeded Joazar the Son of Simon, and was succeeded by Ishmael the Son of Phabi. After he was deposed, he still preserved the title of High Priest, and had a great share in the management of publick affairs. He is called High Priest in conjunction with Caiaphas, when St. John the Baptist entred upon the exercise of his Mission, tho' at that time he did not officiate in this character. He was Father -in-law to Caiaphas; and Jesus Christ was directly carried before Annas, after he had been taken into custody in the Garden of Olives. Josephus[1] remarks, that Ananus was looked upon to be one of the happiest Men of his Nation, five of his Sons having been High Priests, which great dignity he himself possessed for many years: an instance of good fortune which till then had happened to no one.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Joseph. Antiq. l. xx. c. 8 p. 697.

Ananus (II)

II. ANANUS, Son to Ananus the High Priest, whom we have been speaking of[1], was High Priest for three months, in the 62[2] year of J. C. Josephus describes him to be a man extremely bold and enterprizing, of the sect of the Sadducees; who thinking it to be a favourable opportunity, after the death of Festus Governour of Judæa, and before the arrival of Albinus his Successor, assembled the Sanhedrim, and therein procured the condemnation of S. James, the brother or relation of Jesus Christ, according to the flesh, and Bishop of Jerusalem; and of some others whom they stigmatised as persons guilty of impiety; and so delivered them up to be stoned. This act of his was extremely displeasing to all good Men in Jerusalem, and they sent privately to Agrippa, who was come from Alexandria into Judæa, entreating him that he would forbid Ananus to attempt any thing of the like nature for the future. The King to punish his great confidence deprived him of the High-Priesthood, after three months possession of it, and conferr'd it on Jesus the Son of Damnaus. At the same time almost, the Governour Albinus, who was on his way from Alexandria to Jerusalem, having likewise been inform'd of Ananus's proceedings, wrote threatning letters to him, and told him, that he would curb his insolence as soon as he should come into the City.

It is very probable,[3] that this is the same Ananus who in the year 66 of Jesus Christ was nominated by the Council of the Jews to be Governour of Jerusalem. Josephus[4] commends extremely the prudence of this Governour, and mentions him as a very just man, a great lover of peace, zealous for the publick good, very vigilant, and very careful of the people's interests. Qualities very different from those which he attributes to him where he speaks of St. James's death, who was Bishop of Jerusalem[5]. But age might have allayed the fire of his youth, and restrained that excessive boldness which was then thought blameable in him.

The Zealots who were Masters of the Temple, having invited the Idumæans to come to their assistance, and defend Jerusalem against Ananus[6], whom they had a mind to render suspected, as one who corresponded with the Romans, Ananus gave orders to shut the gates against them. But the Idumæans having entred by night, during a great storm, began to search for Ananus, and having easily found him, they massacred him with a great deal of insult, and left his body exposed to beasts, and deprived of the honour of a burial. Josephus[7] says, that the death of Ananus was the first step towards the destruction of Jerusalem, and that the walls and strongest ramparts thereof were overthrown at the time when this man, in whose wise conduct all the hope of their preservation consisted, was sacrificed so unworthily. This happened in the year of J. C. 67.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ibid. p. 698.
Antiq. l. xx. c. 5.
See M. de Tillemont, Note 25. upon the destruction of the Jews
Joseph. l. ii. de Bello, c. 42. p. 822.

Idem de Bello, l. iv. c. 17. p. 881. c. 11. p. 872. c. 18. p. 883.
Joseph. de Bello, l. xvii, xviii.
Ibid. l. iv. c. 18.

Ananus (III)

III. ANANUS, a native of Lydda, and Captain of the Jews; who, being accused before Quadratus, as the fomenter of that division which was arisen between the Jews and Samaritans, was sent to Rome with the High Priest Ananias, to give the Emperor Claudius an account of his conductd.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ananus (IV)

IV. ANANUS, the Son of Jonathan, did all he could to hinder the Jews from rebelling against the Romans. He intended, with some others, to introduce Cestius into the City, but the Romans having been discover'd by the Factious, they drove them from the walls with stones, and obliged Ananus and his party to retire for shelter to their houses[1].

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Antiq. de Bello, l. ii. c. 24. p. 819. 9.

Ananus (V)

V. ANANUS, a native of Emmaus, was one of Simon's guards who commanded the Rebels. He surrender'd himself to Titus with one Archelaus, the Son of Magadatus[1]. Titus received them with his usual clemency; but as he saw that pure necessity had obliged them to surrender, he did not treat them as he had done other Jews who had had recourse to him, but granted them their Lives only, with permission to go where they would. At first he had resolved to put them to death, as Villains who abandoned the defence of their Country, after they had put it in a flame.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

De Bello, l. vii. p. 956. c. d. Κεφ. κγ, in Latino, c. 7.

Anarchy

ANARCHY. This is a Greek word[1], and signifies properly an Interregnum, or the condition of a City, Commonwealth, or State without a Head, King, or Sovereign: For example, it is said in some places of the Scripture, In those days there was no King in Israel, but every Man did that which was [1 Judg. xvii. 6. xviii. 1. 31. xxi. 24.] right in his own eyes. This is the true description of an Anarchy. The first Anarchy that we know of in the Hebrew Commonwealth is that which ensued upon the death of Joshua. This great Man dying without appointing his Successor, and the People having chosen no Leader in his place, the Government devolved to the Elders of the Tribes, who govern'd each according to his own mind[2].

After the death of these Elders the Anarchy was still greater; and it is generally believed, that during this interval the several Stories happen'd which are related at the end of the book of Judges, viz. the Story of Micah and the Idol, which he set up in his house, Judg. xvii. that of the Danites, who left their Country to settle at Laish, Judg. xviii. and lastly, the history of the Levite, whose Wife was dishonoured at Gibeah, which accident produced a war between all the other Tribes against that of Benjamin, Judg. xix, xx, xxi. We reckon with Usher that this Anarchy was of about two and twenty years continuance, from the death of Joshua, in the year 2561, to the first servitude of the Hebrews under Chushan Rishathaim, in the year of the World 2591. We allow about fifteen years for the Government of the Elders after the death of Joshua, and seven for the Anarchy from that time to the dominion of Chushan Rhishathaim, King of Mesopotamia, Judg. iii. begun in 2591, and terminated in 2599, by the valour of Othniel.

It is worth observing, that no point of Chronology is more perplexed than the Anarchies which happened, particularly under the Judges. Every one computes them after his own way: We have followed Usher, who may be consulted as well as the Chronological Table belonging to this Dictionary. There is said to have been an Interregnum of eleven or twelve years under the Kings between Jeroboam II. and Zechariah; but we think we have shewn the contrary in our Supplement. Some maintain that there was another Anarchy after the Reign of Pekah, but we see no proof of it. The captivity of Babylon is not properly an Anarchy, but a dispersion and total captivity of the whole Jewish nation.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ἀναρχία, Anarchia, ubi nullus imperat.

Joshua died in 2561. The Elders govern'd about fifteen years, to the year 2576, and there was an absolute Anarchy for about eight years, till towards 2591, before J. C. 1409, before the vulgar Æra 1413.

Anath

ANATH, the Father of Shamgar, Judge of Israel, Judg. iii. 31.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Anathema

ANATHEMA, is a Greek word[1], which signifies something set apart, separated, devoted. It is understood principally to denote the cutting off and entire destruction of one separated from the communion of the Faith, or the number of the Living, or the privileges of Society, or the devoting of any Man, Animal, City, or other thing to be extirpated, destroyed, given to the flames, and in some sort annihilated.

The Hebrew word Cherem[2] signifies properly to destroy, exterminate, devote, anathematize. Moses requires of the Israelites to devote those to the Curse, and utterly [Ex. xxii. 19.] extirpate them who sacrifice to false Gods. In like manner, God commands that the Cities belonging to the Canaanites which did not surrender to the Israelites, [Deut. vii. 2, 26. xx. 17.] should be thus devoted. Achan having diverted to his own use some of the spoil of Jericho which had been devoted by God, was exterminated, he, his family, his cattle, his furniture, his tent, and all that belonged [Josh. vi. 17, 21. vii. 1, 2, &c.] to him. He was stoned, and consumed with fire.

The word Cherem, or Anathema, is likewise sometimes taken for that which is consecrated, vowed, or offered to the Lord, so [Lev.xxvii. 28, 29.] that it may no longer be employed in common and profane uses. No devoted thing that a Man shall devote unto the Lord, of all that he hath, of Man and Beast, and of the field of his possession, shall be sold or redeemed; every devoted thing is most holy unto the Lord: None devoted, which shall be devoted of Men, shall be redeemed, but shall surely be put to death. There are some who assert that the Persons thus devoted were put to death; whereof Jephthah's Daughter is a memorable example, whom her Father sacrificed to God, Judg. xi. 29, &c. See our Disser tation upon Jephthah's Vow before the book of Judges. Sometimes the whole nation devoted some particular persons or Cities: For example, the Israelites devoted King Arad's Country. The People assembled at Mizpeh devoted all who should not march against the Tribe of Benjamin, to revenge the injury offered to the young [Ch. xix.] Levite's Wife. Saul devoted those who should eat before Sun set while they were [1 Sam. xiv. 24.] pursuing the Philistines. It appears by the execution of all these consecrations, that they who were involved in them were to be put to death.

Sometimes particular persons devoted themselves if they did not perform something specified by them: For example, in [Acts xxiii. 12, 13.] the Acts of the Apostles, above forty Persons bound themselves with an oath that they would neither eat nor drink till they had killed St. Paul. The Essenians[3] were engaged by the most horrible oaths to observe the statutes of their Sect; and they who, having incurr'd the guilt of any considerable fault, were driven from their Assemblies, were generally starved to death in a very miserable manner, and obliged to feed upon grass like Beasts, not daring even to receive any food which might be offered them, because they were engaged by the vows which they had made not to eat any.

[Ex. xxxii. 31. Rom. ix. 3.] Moses and St. Paul in some sort anathematized themselves, or at least wished to be accursed for their Brethren. Moses conjures God to forgive the Israelites; if not, that he would blot him out of the book of Life; and St. Paul says that he could wish to be accursed for his Brethren the Israelites, rather than see them excluded from the benefit of Christ's Covenant by their malice and obdurate temper.

Excommunication, Anathema, and cutting off, are the greatest penalty that can be inflicted on any Man in this world; whether by these terms we understand a violent and ignominious death, or a separation from the society of the Saints, an exclusion from the benefit of their Prayers, and communion with them in things sacred, or whether, lastly, Reprobation and condemnation to eternal misery are meant by them; for Interpreters are very much divided on these texts: But they agree that Moses and St. Paul gave each of them on these occasions the most sensible proofs of the greatest and most perfect charity, and in the strongest and boldest way of amplifying things, expressed their ardent desire to procure the happiness of their Brethren, and preserve them from the utmost misery.

Excommunication was also a kind of Anathema with the Hebrews, as it is among Christians. Of all the several degrees of Excommunication, Anathema was the greatest, whereby the excommunicated person was deprived not only of the opportunity of communicating in Prayers and other holy offices, but of all admittance to the Church, and conversation with Believers. Among the Hebrews, they who were excommunicated could not perform any publick duty of their employments; they could be neither Judges nor Witnesses, neither be present at Funerals, nor circumcise their own Sons, nor set down in the company of other Men nearer than within the distance of four cubits. They were not capable of receiving the publick rites of Burial; and if they died under Excommunication, a large stone was left upon their Graves, or the People threw stones upon their Sepulchres, and heaped them in great quantity upon them, as they did upon the bodies of Achan [Josh. vii. 26. 2 Sam. xvii. 27. Josh. xxi. 18.] and Absalom. See Selden de Jure Nat. & Gent. l. iv. c. 1.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ἀνάθεμα, ab ἀνατίθημι.
חרמCherem.
Joseph. de Bello, l. ii. c. 12 p. 786. 9. 787. a. Templum Dei.

Anathoth

ANATHOTH, a City in the Tribe of Benjamin, about three miles distant from Jerusalem, according to Eusebius[1] and St. Jerom[2]; or twenty furlongs, according to Josephus[3]. This was the place of the Prophet Jeremiah's birth. It was given to the Levites of Kohath's Family for their habitation, and to be a City of refuge. This City is entirely destroyed.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Euseb. in Anathoth.
Hieronym. in Jerem. i. & in Jerem. xxxi.
Joseph. Antiq. l. viii. c. 10.

Anathoth

ANATHOTH, the eighth Son of Becher, 1 Chr. vii. 8.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Anchialus

ANCHIALUS. This word is particularly taken notice of by the Criticks who have wrote concerning the affairs of the Jews. We meet with it in Martial[1], Jura, verpe, per Anchialum, Swear thou, who art circumcised, by Anchialus. Who is this Anchialus? Is it the name of the true God, or some false Deity? And why is it demanded of the Jews that they should swear by Anchialus? This People, who were despised and hated by the Gentiles, among whom they lived, were conversant in business, and were concerned in trade; but their Honesty was much called in question; and as their Creed was very different from that of the Heathens, the latter were not contented with their taking the ordinary oaths, but obliged them to swear by their own Gods, as among us at present they oblige them to swear upon their sacred books, when they would be assured of the truth of what they affirm. The point therefore to be consider'd is, what Anchialus is, whether it be a Name or an Epithet of God.

It is certain that the most common oath in use among the Jews is, As the Lord liveth. [Judg. viii. 19. Ruth iii. 23. 1 Sam. iv. 45, & passim. Num. xiv. 21. Deut. xxxii. 40. Heb. vi. 13.] liveth. This we find in several places of the sacred books: God himself, whenever he thinks fit to use an oath, as there is no greater Person than himself by whom he can swear, swears by his own life. Vivo ego, dicit Dominus. Now the oath, As the Lord liveth; may be pronounced in Hebrew thus, Hachai-Elion[2], By the life of the Most High; or Ana-Chi-Eloa[3], Ah! may the Lord live; or simply Ha-Chi-El[4], By the life of God. The Latin termination us, being nothing to the purpose, no more than the letter n, which the Poet has inserted because in pronouncing Ha-chi-el, or al, they might seem to pronounce Hanchi-al.

Some are of opinion, that the Jews were compell'd to swear by a statue of Sardanapalus erected at Anchialus a City of Cilicia; but this is too far fetch'd.

Others[5] derive Anchialon from the Greek Anchialos, which signifies one near the shore; as if the Jews swore by the God who was adored there; because in effect the Jews had a custom, when they were not at Jerusalem and in their own country, to perform their devotions upon the banks of rivers, or near some waters.

Lastly, it has been believed, that this was swearing by the Temple of the Lord. v Heical-iah, and we know that the Jews sometimes did swear by the Temple; Whoso sweareth by the Temple, sweareth by it and by him that dwelleth therein, says our Saviour. But these explanations, in my opinion, are too fine spun, and too unnatural. An old manuscript copy which belonged to M. De Thou, reads, Jura verpe per Ancharium. Swear, Jew, by the Ass: for some believed, or pretended to believe, that the Jews adored this animal[6].

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Martial. Epigr. l. xi. c. 95. Ecce negas jurasque mihi per Templa tonantis. Non credo, jura verpe, per Anchialum.
החי עליון
אנהחי אליה
החי אל
Le Moine varia sacra t. 2. p. 58.

Petron. fragm. Judæus licet & porcinum numen adoret, & Cilli summas advocet auriculas.

Andrew (I)

I. ANDREW, Captain of the Guards to Ptolemy Philadelphus King of Egypt, who inspired this Prince with a resolution to set at liberty six and twenty thousand Jews who dwelt in his dominions. He was seconded in his request by Aristæus, Zosibius, and Tharentinus, who were likewise of the Guards to Philadelphus. There is no foundation for all this, besides the relation in Aristæus's history of the seventy Interpreters, which is generally esteemed by learned men to be a fable of his own inventing.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Andrew (II)

II. ANDREW, the Apostle of Jesus Christ, was a native of Bethsaida, and S. Peter's Brother. He was at first a Disciple of S. John Baptist, whom he left to follow our Saviour, after the testimony which S. John gave him, saying, Behold the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sins of the world. He followed our Saviour with another of John's Disciples, and went into the house where Jesus lodged; there he continued from about four a clock in the afternoon till it was night. This was the first Disciple whom our Saviour received into his train. Andrew introduced his Brother Simon or Peter, and they passed a day with him. After which they went to the marriage of Cana, and at last returned to their ordinary occupation. Some months after Jesus meeting them while they were both fishing together, called them to him, and promised to make them fishers of men. Immediately they left their nets, and were never after separated from his person. [Matt. iv.] The year following Jesus Christ being in the Wilderness, beyond the Sea of Galilee, asked his Disciples how he should find bread for the five thousand people that had attended him thither. S. Andrew told him, that one in the company had five barley loaves and two small fishes. Within few days before the Passion, certain of the Gentiles being desirous to see Jesus Christ, addressed themselves to S. Philip, who spoke of it to S. Andrew; and both together told our Saviour. Two or three days after, S. Andrew and some other Apostles asked Jesus Christ when the destruction of the Temple should happen. This is what the Gospel informs us of concerning this [Matth. xxiii. 21.] Apostle.

Some of the Antients are of opinion, that he preached in Scythia[1]. Others assure us[2], that he preached in Greece. Others again differently maintain, that he taught Christianity in Epirus, Achaia, or Argos. The modern Greeks make him the founder of the Church of Byzantium or Constantinople, which the Antients knew nothing of. The Acts of his Martyrdom, which are of pretty good antiquity, tho' the Criticks will not allow them to be originals, inform us that he suffered Martyrdom at Patras in Achaia, having received sentence to be executed upon a Cross by Egæus Proconsul of this Province. The particular time of his suffering Martyrdom is not known; but all the ancient and modern Martyrologies, both of the Greeks and Latins, agree in celebrating his festival upon the 30th of November. His body was buried at Patras, where he had been crucified: from thence it was removed to Constantinople, where it wrought many miracles[3]. There is a Cross to be seen at this day in the Church of S. Victor at Marseilles, which is believed to be the same that S. Andrew was fastened to. It is of the figure of a common Cross, and is inclosed in a silver shrine. It is not known for what reason the Painters represent St. Andrew's Cross like an X. Peter Chrysologus[4] says, that he was crucified upon a Tree; and as the spurious Hippolytus[5] assures us, upon an Olive Tree. Nevertheless, the Tradition which describes him to have been nailed to a S. Andrew's Cross is very antient.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Euseb. l. 3. c. 1. p. 71. Hist. Eccles. ex Origene. Eucher. qu. in Acta. Œcumen. tom. 1. Prolog. p. 13. Sophron. de viris illustr.
Theodoret in Psal. cxvi. Nazianz. Orat. 25. Hieron. Ep. 148.
Com-befis Auctuar. Bibl. PP. 2. p. 835. Florentin. p. 116. c. Tobit iii. 17. xi. 14.
Chrysolog. Serm. 133. p. 466. Jerosol. lib. de principio anni.
Auctuar. Bibliot. PP. 2. p. 832.

Andronicus

ANDRONICUS, one of the Great Men belonging to the Court of Antiochus [2 Macc. iv. 34.] Epiphanes, was left by this Prince to govern the City of Antioch in his absence, while he went into Cilicia, to reduce certain places which had revolted from him. Menelaus the pretended High Priest of the Jews thought this circumstance might favour his design of getting rid of Onias, whose dignity he unjustly was possessed of, and who was come to Antioch with accusations to prefer against him. He addressed himself therefore to Andronicus, and made large presents to him: which Onias being informed of, reproached him with great sharpness for it, keeping close all the while in the Sanctuary of Daphne, lest any violence should be offered him.

Menelaus sollicited Andronicus so powerfully to dispatch Onias, that he came himself to Daphne, promised Onias with solemn oaths, that he would do him no injury, and so persuaded him to leave his place of refuge; but as soon as he was out of it, without any regard to justice, he killed him. When King Antiochus Epiphanes returned from his expedition, and was acquainted with the death of Onias, he was so touched with concern for it as to shed tears, and commanded Andronicus to be divested of the purple which he wore, to be led about the City in an ignominious manner, and killed in the very place where he had put to death Onias. This happened in the year of the World 3834. before J. C. 166. before the vulgar Æra 170.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Anem

[1 Chron. vi. 73. Josh. xxi. 29.] ANEM, a City belonging to the Tribe of Manasseh, given by lot to the Levites of Kohath's family, 1 Chr. vi. 70.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Aner

ANER and Eshcol, two Canaanites who joined their forces with Abraham, in the pursuit of the Kings Chedorlaomer, Amraphel and their Allies, who had pillaged Sodom, and carried off Lot, Abraham's [Gen. xiv. 24.] Nephew. They did not imitate the disinterestedness of this holy Patriarch; but retained their share of the spoil which they had taken from the conquered Kings.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Angariare

ANGARIARE. The Evangelists frequently make use of this term to signify constrain, or take by force. The word Angari, whence Angariare is deriv'd, comes originally from the Persians, who called the Post-boys that carried the letters and [Matth. xxvii. 32. Ch. v. 41.] orders of Princes, Angares. As they compelled the People whom they found in the places they passed through to furnish them with guides, horses, and carriages, the word Angariare was made use of to signify constraints of this nature. It appears that the Jews were still subject to these Angares under the Romans, since Simon the Cyrenian was compell'd to bear our Saviour's Cross, Angariaverunt eum, ut tolleret crucem ejus: And Jesus said to his Disciples, Quisquis angariabit te, Whosoever shall compel thee to go a mile, go with him twain. It is believed that the common distance of an Angarie, or from one post to another, was four miles. The Germans still call the Ember weeks Angaries, because on the days of these weeks Vassals pay their quitrents, services, and averages to their Lords.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ange

[Judith ii. 12.] ANGE, a Mountain mentioned in the Latin text of Judith; for the name is not to be met with in the Greek. The text says that this Mountain lies to the left of Cilicia. We take it to be the Mountain Argæus, situated to the left or north of Cilicia: It is the highest in all these parts. Strabo[1] affirms that it is always cover'd with snow, and that they who are able to climb to the top of it, which happens but very rarely, and with great difficulty, see the two seas when the air is clear, viz. the Euxin and the Sea of Cilicia.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Strabo, l. xii.

Angel

[Acts vii. 30, 53. Gal. iii. 19. Heb. xiii. 2.] ANGEL, Angelus. This word is borrowed from the Greek, and formed from Angelos, which signifies a Messenger, and answers the Hebrew Maleac. Nothing is more frequent in Scripture than the missions and apparitions of good and bad Angels: God sends them to declare his will, to correct, teach, reprove, and comfort. God gave the law to Moses, and appeared to the Old Patriarchs by the mediation of Angels, who represented him, and spoke in his Name.

Before the captivity of Babylon, the Hebrews did not know the name of any Angel; at least we find none mentioned in the books written before this event. The Talmudists[1] say they brought these names from Babylon: It is true we find many of them called by their names in the book of Enoch; but this we know is spurious, and was written after the captivity we are speaking of. Tobit is the first who has called an Angel by his proper name: He mentions Raphael, who conducted Tobias into Media. Tobit is thought to have lived at Nineveh some time before the captivity of Judah. Daniel, who lived at Babylon some time after Tobit, has taught us the [Dan. x. 21. viii. 16. ix. 21. 2 Esdras iv. 36.] names of Michael and Gabriel. The second book of Esdras speaks of Uriel; but this book is modern in comparison, the Author of it having in all probability liv-ed since the time of Jesus Christ.

The Jewish Cabalists make some particular Angels, whose names they give us, to have been Preceptors to the Patriarchs. For example, they say that Adam's Preceptor was called Raziel, Shem's Jephiel, Abraham's Zedekiel, Isaac's Raphael, Jacob's Seliel, Joseph's Gabriel, Moses's Metatron or Metator, that is, he who shews the field; Elias's Malushiel, and David's Cerviel. They believe likewise that there are seventy Angels who have the name of God in them, according to this expression in Exodus, [Ex. xxiii. 21. Luke i. 19, 26. Jude v. 5. & Rev. xii. 7.] My name is in him. In the New Testament we observe the names only of two Angels, Gabriel and Michael. There are disputes concerning the time when Angels were created. Some think[2] they were created at the same time as the Heaven, and that Moses included them under this name, saying, In the beginning God created the Heaven: Others[3] have conjectured that he intended to represent them under the name of Light, which God created on the first day: And lastly, o-thers[4] have asserted that they were creat-ed before the sensible world; and Job seems to favour this opinion, where he says, Where wast [Job xxxviii. 4, 7.] thou when I laid the foundations of the Earth; — and all the Sons of God shouted for joy? The Hebrews think that God created them upon the se-cond day of the World[5], and that he con-sulted with the [Gen. i. 26.] Angels, saying, Let us make Man in our image, after our like-ness.

Many of the old Fathers, led into this mistake by the authority of the book of Enoch, and a passage of Genesis, which is ill [Gen. vi. 2.] translated, wherein it is said, The Angels saw the Daughters of Men, that they were fair, and they took them Wives, of all which they chose, imagined that the Angels were corporeal, capable of sensual pleasures, and sensible of their allurements. It is true they call them Spirits, and spi-ritual Beings, but in the same signification wherein we call the Wind Spirit, and as odours, vapours, &c. are spiritual. Other Fathers indeed, and those in great num-ber, have asserted Angels to be purely spiritual; and this at present is the com-mon opinion of the Schools. See our Dis-sertation upon good and bad Angels be-fore our Comment on St. Luke.

[Dan. x. 21.] Some have appropriated Angels to Empires, Nations, Provinces, Cities, and particular persons. St. Michael is acknowledged to be Protector of the People of Israel: Michael your Prince, said the An-gel Gabriel, speaking to the Prophet Da-niel. The same Angel Gabriel speaks like-wise of [Ch. x. 13.] the Angel who was Protector of Persia, according to the generality of In-terpreters, when he says that the Prince of the kingdom of Persia withstood him one and [Acts xvi. 9.] twenty days. S. Luke in the Acts tells us, that a man of Macedonia appear-ed to S. Paul in the night, and said to him, Come over into Macedonia and help us; which is commonly understood of the Angel of Macedonia, who invited him to come and preach Jesus Christ in the Pro-vince which was committed to his care. Lastly, the Septuagint [Deut. xxxii. 8.] in Deuteronomy say that God had set the bounds of the people according to the number of the An-gels of Israel[6]. Which by the Fathers and Rabbins is supposed to mean the Go-vernment of each particular Country and Nation, wherewith God had intrusted his Angels. S. John wrote his Revelations to the Angels[7] of the seven Christian Churches in Asia Minor, whereby [Rev. xi. 18. 12.] he does not mean only the Bishops of these Churches, but, in the judgment of ma-ny Fathers, the Angels likewise who were appointed by God for their protection[8].

As to Guardian Angels, they are very clearly described in the Old Testament. [Genes. xlviii. 16.] Jacob speaks of the Angel who had been his constant guide in all his journeys, and had delivered him out of all dangers. The [Psalm xxxiii. 8. & xc. 11. Vulg.] Psalmist in several places mentions Angels as the Protectors of the Righteous: and this was the common opinion of the Jews in our Saviour's time. When S. Peter be-ing being set at liberty came from prison to the house where were others of the Disciples, he knocked at the door; they who were within thought it was his Angel, and not [Acts xii. 15.] he. Jesus Christ enjoins us in the Gospel not to despise any little ones, because their Angels continually behold the face of our [Matt. xviii. 10.] heavenly Father. The Fathers all agree unanimously in this article. The Jews and the very Heathens believed that particular Angels were commissioned to attend us, and had the care of our conduct and protection. Hesiod, the most ancient, or at least one of the most ancient Greek Authors, says[9], that there are good Angels upon earth, sent by Jupiter for the protection of Mankind, and to observe the good or evil which they practise. Plato says[10], that every one of us has two Dæmons or two Genius's, one inclining us to evil, the other directing us to what is good. Apulæus speaks but of one Dæmon assigned to every man by Plato, Ex hac sublimiore Dæmonum copia Plato autumat singulis hominibus in vitâ agendâ testes, & custodes singulos additos, qui nemini conspicui semper adsint.

[Tob. xii. 15.] The Apostle S. Paul gives us to understand, that among the Angels in Heaven there is a subordination of the several Choirs of them, which differ from one another either in their offices, or in the degrees of glory which they possess. But the Fathers, who have interpreted the Apostle's words, are not agreed among themselves as to the number and order of the celestial Hierarchy[11]. Origen was of opinion[12] that St. Paul mentioned part only of the Choirs of Angels, and that there were many others whereof he had said nothing; and this opinion may be observed in many others of the Fathers who came after him. Others have reckoned up nine Choirs of Angels in St. Paul, and this is the opinion generally received at present in the Divinity Schools of France. The Author who is cited commonly under the name of Dionysius the Areopagite[13], admits of but three Hierarchies, and three orders of Angels in each Hierarchy[14]. In the first are Seraphims, Cherubims, and Thrones; in the second Dominions, Mights, and Powers; in the third Principalities, Archangels, and Angels. In some places of Scripture it is insinuated, that there are seven principal Angels in the Court of Heaven, who are always before the Lord[15]. Raphael tells Tobias that he is one of the seven Angels who attend in the presence of God. St. Michael tells Daniel that he is one of the chief Princes in the Court of the Almighty, Unus de principibus. In the Revelations St. John saw seven Angels [Dan. x. 13. Rev. viii. 2, 3.] standing before the Lord. In a very ancient book, entitled The Testament of the twelve Patriarchs, they are called the Angels of the Presence; and in The Life of Moses, the Eyes of the Lord. These denominations are probably imitations of what was observed in the Courts of the Assyrian, Chaldæan, and Persian Kings, where there were seven Eunuchs, or seven great Officers superior to all others, and always near the Prince.

The exact number of Angels is not mentioned in any part of Scripture; but it is always represented to be very great, and [Dan. vii. 10.] as it were innumerable. Daniel says that upon his approach to the Throne of the Ancient of days, he saw a fiery stream issuing from it, and that thousand thousands of Angels minister'd unto him, and that ten thousand times ten thousand stood before him. And Jesus Christ says in the Gospel, [Mat. xxvi. 53.] that his heavenly Father could give him more than twelve legions of Angels, that is to say, more than seventy two thousand of Angels. The Psalmist declares that the chariot of God is attended by twenty thousand Angels. Many of the Fathers[16], that [Pf. lxvii. 17.] we might have some idea of the multitude of Angels, compared with that of Men, apply the Parable to them of the ninety nine sheep that were left by the master of the Family in the Mountains while he went to search after the hundredth which was gone astray. The ninety nine signify the Angels who continued firm to their allegiance in Heaven, the single sheep that was lost represents Man fallen from his original righteousness and felicity. Others of the Fathers[17] have inferr'd, from the Earth's being infinitely smaller than Heaven, that the number of Angels was infinitely greater than that of Men: Now it is natural to judge of the multitude of inhabitants in any place by the largeness and extent of their their dwelling. The Author published under the name of Dionysius the Areopagite, says, that the number of Angels is such, that nothing in nature can equal it. They who are curious to see more at large what concerns Angels, may consult our Dissertation on this Subject, published before the Gospel on St. Luke.

[Acts xxiii. 8.] The Sadducees denied the existence of Angels, and of all Spirits. Others of the Jews paid a superstitious worship to them. The Author of a book intitled, Of St. Peter's Preaching; a work of great antiquity, cited by Clemens of Alexandria[18], says, that the Jews pay religious worship to Angels[19] and Archangels, and even to the Months and Moon. Celsus[20] reproached them almost in the same manner. Tertullian[21] assures us, that Simon and Cerinthus preferr'd the mediation of Angels to that of Jesus Christ. Josephus[22], and after him Porphyry[23], say that the Essenes, upon their initiation, engage themselves by oath to preserve faithfully the names of Angels, and the books relating to their sect. Concerning the worship of Angels among the Jews and Christians, see our Comment upon Colos. ii. 18. and the Dissertation upon Angels, p. xlvi, xlvii.

By Angels of the Lord are meant often in Scripture, Men of God, Prophets; for example, [Judg. ii.1.] An Angel of the Lord came up from Gilgal to Bochim, and said, I made you to go up out of Egypt, and have brought you unto the land which I sware unto your Fathers; and I said, I will never break my covenant with you. And ye shall make no league with the Inhabitants of this land, you shall throw down their Altars. But ye have not obeyed my voice. Why have ye done this? And it came to pass when the Angel of the Lord spake these words, they lift up their voices and wept; and they sacrificed there unto the Lord, and Joshua let the People go. It is very probable[24] that this Angel was Joshua himself, or the High Priest, or some Prophet. Several Interpreters[25] are of opinion that this same Joshua is described by Moses under the name of the Angel of the Lord, who was to introduce the Israelites into the promised Land. It is certain that in Scripture the Prophets are sometimes called the Angels of the Lord[26]: Then spake Haggai the Angel of the Lord, from among the Angels of the Lord[27]. [Judg. xiii. 2, &c.] Malachi, the last of the twelve small Prophets, is by several of the Fathers[28] called the Angel of God; and this in reality is what his name signifies in Hebrew. Some believe Esdras[29] to be described by the name of Malachi, or Angel of the Lord. Eupolemus speaking of the Prophet Nathan, who addressed himself to David, and made him sensible of his sin, calls him an Angel or Messenger from the Lord. Manoah, Samson's Father, calls him indifferently Angel and Man of God, who appeared to his Wife, till vanishing with the smoke of the Burnt-offering, he was certain it was an Angel.

Sometimes the name of God is given in Scripture to Angels. The Angel who appeared to Moses in the Bush, who delivered the Law to him, spoke to him, and guided the people in the Wilderness, is perpetually called by the name of God, and the Lord said to him, My name is in him. The Angels who appeared to the holy Patriarchs, are likewise termed Gods; because they acted in the name of God, were his Ambassadors, were intrusted with his power, and the interpretation of his orders. They are not only called Elohim, and Adonai, names sometimes attributed to Judges and Princes, but by that likewise of Jehovah, which belonged to God only, whose Majesty they represented.

The opinion which ascribes tutelary Angels to Kingdoms, Provinces and Nations, is founded upon Scripture, and adopted by both Jews and Christians. The passage in Daniel, where Michael is called the Prince of God's people, Michael Princeps vester; and that in the Acts, where an Angel in the form of a Macedonian invites St. Paul to pass over into Macedonia, are particular Texts which seem clear for this opinion.

But as to another passage in Daniel, cited to the same purpose, there is some difficulty in it; it is this, wherein it is said, the Prince of the Persians resisted the Arch-angel Gabriel one and twenty days; for this Prince of the Persians, in the judgment of several good Commentators, is Cyrus King of Persia, who was one and twenty days before he submitted to the inspirations of Gabriel.

Another passage is that of Deuteronomy, where it is said, that when the Lord divided men, he divided them according to the name of the Angels of God. The Septuagint read it thus: When the Lord separated the Sons of Adam, he set the bounds of the nations, according to the number of the Angels of God[30]. Whereas the Hebrew and Vulgate import that he fixed the limits of the Nations according to the number of the Children of Israel. What way soever we read it there will remain some difficulty with relation to the number of Nations dispersed at the Tower of Babel; for in the first place, are we very sure that this passage has a regard to the division which happened at Babel? Secondly, is it certain that every particular person who assisted in carrying on this Edifice, formed a Nation; and would not the sacred Writer have set down in this place all the Nations which were, and in succeeding ages should be formed? And certainly, if it be required that all should have their tutelary Angels, we must necessarily understand it thus, according to the reading of the Septuagint.

But if we follow the reading of the Hebrew and Vulgate, it will then concern us to know what Epoch Moses intended to point at in the history of the Israelitish nation; for at the time of the Tower of Babel there were not as yet any Israelites. If Moses had a view to his own time, as the number of the Israelites was already very great, it must be said likewise, that the number of the Nations which was to be derived from the builders of Babel must be excessive; for suppose we were to take those only in the Nation of Israel, who were capable of bearing Arms, how shall we find six hundred thousand Nations in the World?

The generality[31] are fixed for seventy or seventy two people; but their opinion is founded upon very weak reasons; as that in the tenth chapter of Genesis, where Moses enumerates the Sons of Shem, Ham and Japhet, he names seventy two persons, from whom they believe seventy two People to have sprung. But if the three Patriarchs Shem, Ham and Japheth, are not reckoned, who are not to be numbred with them, because all their Children are computed, and if the thirteen Sons of Joktan are not included, who in all probability were not born till after the dispersion, the number of them will be very much diminished. I say nothing of Cainan, whom we read of in the Septuagint, ver. 24. nor of Elishah and Cozar, whom they declare to be the Sons of Japheth. If they are admitted over and above the number mentioned in the Hebrew and Vulgate, with the Philistines and Caphtorims of ver. 14. instead of seventy two people, there will be seventy six. Wherefore this foundation is not certainly of any great solidity.

Others derive this number of seventy people from that of Jacob's Children, who [Gen. xlvi. 26, 27. 70. Gen. xxvi. 27. Exod. i. 5. Deut. x.] went down into Egypt with him. All the souls of Jacob's house which came into Egypt, were threescore and ten. Rigorously speaking, there were no more than sixty six persons who went into Egypt, as Moses expresly takes notice, in ver. 26. All the souls which came with Jacob into Egypt, were threescore and six. To compleat the number seventy, Jacob, Joseph, and his two Sons, are to be added. Now if all the Sons of Jacob are included in it, it is needless to insert him himself, since Moses says expresly, God separated the Nations, or the Sons of Adam, according to the number of the Children of Israel. Besides, the Septuagint in several places, and S. Stephen in the Acts, read seventy five persons, instead of seventy. Here therefore you have new difficulties against this precise number of seventy or seventy two people descended from the Sons of Noah, and consequently against the same number of Angels deputed for the guardianship of these different people.

From all this we may conclude, that the certain tradition of the Jewish and Christian Church is, that every Nation has its tutelary Angel. But for the number of Nations, and consequently of Angels deputed for the protection of them, it is no way certain. The number of them has necessarily varied, according as the number of Nations and

People has multiplied or decreased; for it is certain, that from the Tower of Babel to this day, there have been infinite revolutions in the world, which have caused the ruin of many people; and, without going farther than the Scripture, what is become of the Amalekites, Philistines, several people of Canaan, the Emims, the Zumzummims, &c.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Talmud.

Origen. homil. i. in Genes. Beda.

Aug. l. i. de Genesi ad Litt. c. 9. & l. xi. de Civit. Rupert. l. i. de Trinit. c. 10.

Origen. homil. i. in Genes. & homil. x. in Matt. & Basil. homil. i. in Hexaemer. Nazianzen. Orat. 38. Ambros. in Hexaemer. alii plures.

Translators' note. Others are of opinion that the Angels were created on the fifth day, Bereschith, Rabba, Sect. viii. p. 10. Ori-gen, and other Greek and Latin Fathers, that they were created before the World; and Dr. Hyde thinks a very long time before the World, Hyde de Relig. Vet. Persar. c. 3. p. 82. See more of Angels in Basnage's Histoire des Juifs, l. iv. c. 9.

Translators' note. This Passage is cited by Pope Gregory, hom. xxxiv. and St. Jerom. l. ii. in Mich. according to this Translation; and St. Chrysostom seems to have a view to it in his third Homily on the Epistle to the Colossians, wherein he says, Τὸ πρῶτον κατὰ ἀριθμὸν ἐθνῶν ἦσαν οἱ ἄγγελοι, νῦν δὲ ὁ κατὰ ἀριθμὸν ἐθνῶν, ἀλλὰ κατὰ ἀριθμὸν πίστεων. But our English Translators keep more exactly to the Original, and render it, He set the bounds of the People according to the number of the Children of Israel, גבלת עמים למס פר בני ישראל. יצא*So that the opinion of tutelary Angels has no foundation from this passage*.

Translators' note. The learned Dr. Prideaux observes, that the Minister of the Synagogue, who officiated in offering up the publick Prayers, being the mouth of the Congregation, delegated from them, as their Rep- resentative, Messenger, or Angel, to speak to God in Prayer for them, was therefore in the Hebrew language called Sheliach Zibbor, that is, the Angel of the Church, and that from hence the Bishops of the seven Churches of Asia, are in the Revelations, by a Name borrowed from the Synagogue, called the Angels of those Churches, Prid. Connect. &c. P. 1. B. vi.

Ambros. in Luc. l. ii. Origen. in Luc. homil. xiii. Hilar. in Psalm. cxxix. Basil. in Isai. p. 854. & Ep. 191. Nazianz. Orat. 31 & 32. Hieronym. in Mich. vi. & in Matt. xviii.

Hesiod. Oper. & dies. l.i. v.121.

Plato, l.x. de Legibus.

Apulei Libell. de Deo Socratis.

Origen. in Joan. p.69. Edit. Huetii.

Dionys. de Cœlesti Hierarchia, c.6. Greg. magn. homil. 54.

Translators' note. Some of the Rabbins reckon four, others ten orders of Angels, and give them different names, according to their degrees of power and knowledge; but this is founded only on the imagination of those who amuse themselves with speaking very particularly of things whereof they have no knowledge. We are not to be surprized with these visions which we receive from the Jews; for if they were compared with those of Dionysius the Areopagite, the Jesuit Celert, and many others who have settled a Ceremonial, and a sort of Rule for the precedency of Angels, the Jews would appear to be no more blameable in this point than some among the Christians. See more to this particular in Basnage Hist. des Juifs, l. iv. c.9.

Translators' note. In the Verses attributed to Orpheus there is an expression something like this; Τῷ δὲ θρόνῳ πυρόεντι παρέσασιν πολύμοχθοι Hilar. in Matth. Can.18. Ambros. in Luc. l. vii. c.15. Nyssen. l. xi. contra Eunom. in Evangel. Cyril. Catech. 15.

Cyril. Jeros. loco citato. Didymus Cæcus apud Maxim. ad c.14. Dionysii de cœlesti Hierarchia.

Clem. Alex. l. vi. Stromat p. 635, 636.

Translators' note. The Book Of St. Peter's Preaching, here mentioned, is a spurious piece; and if Clemens of Alexandria was deceived by it, we are not obliged to follow him in his mistake. The Jewish Catechism pronounces a curse against him who should ask any thing of an Angel, or of any heavenly power. The fifth Article of Faith, according to Maimonides, is this, That God alone is to be worshipped, magnified, celebrated and praised. Abrabanel fully justifies the Jews from this imputation of worshipping Angels. Abrab. de Cap. Fidei, c. 3. p. 11.

Cels. apud Origen. contra Cels. l. v.

Tertull. l. de præscript. c. 12.

Joseph. l. ii. c. 12. de Bello.

Porphyr. de abstin. l. iv. p. 391.

Jonathan Mas. Vatab. Grot. Jun. Drus. &c.

Aug. qu. 91. in Exod. Justin. in Dialog. cum Tryph.

Hag. i. 13. Heb. .מלאךGreek Angelus. Vulg. Nuntius.

Translators' note. The English Translators agree with the Vulgate, in the interpretation of the word ,מלאך*and instead of Angel, as the* French Bible reads it, the English runs thus: Thus spake Haggai, the Lord's Messenger in the Lord's message unto the people. Exod. ii. 2,&c. vid. Acts vii. 30, 31. Gal.iii.19. Ex. xxiii. 21. Heb. xiii. 2. Gen. xviii. 3. xix. 1. Dan.x.21. Acts xv.9. Dan. x.13. Deut. xxxii. 8.

Clem. Alex. l.i. Strom. Tertull. contra Judæos, c. 5.

Hieronym. præfat. & Comment. in Malachiam. Antiqui Hebræi. Jonath. Caldæus.

Ὡς διέσπειρεν υἱὲς Ἀδὰμ, ἔστησεν ὅρια ἐθνῶν κατὰ ἀριθμὸν ἀγγέλων Θεοῦ. They read simply בניאל*Filii Dei*, instead of בני ישראל*Filii Israel*.

Ὡς διέσπειρεν υἱὲς Ἀδὰμ, ἔστησεν ὅρια ἐθνῶν κατὰ ἀριθμὸν ἀγγέλων Θεοῦ. They read simply בניאלFilii Dei, instead of בני ישראלFilii Israel.

Hebræi, Chaldæi Interp. Hieronym. in Matt. xxvi. 13. Clem. Alex. Epiphan. Aug. Alii.

Angel

ANGEL, the destroying Angel, Angel of death, Angel of Satan, the Angel of the bottomless pit. All these terms signify the Devil and his Agents, the evil Angels, Ministers of God's wrath and vengeance. God smote Sennacherib's army with the sword of the destroying [2 Kings xix. 35.] Angel. He killed the Israelites, David's subjects, by the sword of the Angel of death, as a punishment of this Prince's vain complacency in himself. The Angel or [2 Sam. 2 Cor. xii. 7. Zech. iii. 1, 2. Jude 9. Rev. ix. 11.] Messenger of Satan buffeted S. Paul, and laid snares to corrupt his purity. The same Angel accused the High Priest Joshua before the Lord; and disputed with the Archangel Michael about the body of Moses. The Angel of the bottomless pit, or the Angel King of the bottomless pit, as St. John in the Revelations calls him, is the same as the Prince of Devils, the destroying Angel.

We shall speak of the destroying Angel, by whose means Sennacherib's army perished, under the Article SENNACHERIB.

The Angel of Death, is he to whom God hath given a commission to separate the soul from the body: The Jews, Arabians, Turks and Persians, own such an one; the Persians call him Mordad or Asuman. The Rabbins and Arabians give him the name of Azrael; and the Chaldee Paraphrasts that of Malkad-monsa. Others, as the book concerning the Assumption, or the death of Moses, call him the Angel Samaël, Prince of the Devils. In this last mentioned book it is related, that the hour of Moses's death being come, the Lord required Gabriel to command his soul out of his body; but he excused himself: S. Michael likewise desired to be dispensed with in this particular; as did also the Angel Zinghiel, who said, that having been Preceptor to Moses, he could not resolve with himself to take away his life. Samaël made his approaches to him with a design of forcing the soul of this Conductor of God's people out of his body, but was so struck with the lustre of his countenance, and the virtue of God's name written on the rod which Moses made use of in performing miracles, that he was obliged to retire. So that God himself came to separate the soul of his Prophet, by giving him a kiss.

The Rabbins maintain[1], that the Angel of death, as soon as he has killed any man, washes his sword in the water of the house, and thereby communicates a mortal quality to it; for which reason they throw all the water into the street. This Angel of Death stands, as they say, at a dying person's bed's head, holding a naked sword in his hand, at the extremity whereof hang three drops of gall. The sick man, as soon as he perceives the Angel there, in a great fright opens his mouth, which opportunity the Angel of death takes to distil into it these three mortal drops; one immediately occasions his death, the other makes him pale and livid, and the third disposes him to be soon reduced to dust in his grave.

They believe farther[2], that the man suffers a second death there; that when a Jew is buried, the Angel of death seats himself upon the grave, and at the same time the soul of the deceased returns to his body, and sets him upon his legs. Then the Angel taking an iron chain, half whereof is cold as ice, the other burning hot, strikes the body with it, and separates all its members. He strikes it a second time, and removes all its bones; then a third time, and reduces the whole to ashes. This done, the good Angels come, gather and re-unite all these parts, and re-place the body in its grave. They assert however, that pious persons, and they who give alms liberally, shall be exempt from this punishment.

The Mussulmen and Persians acknowledge, that there is an Angel appointed by God to be the death of people, and separate the souls from the bodies of Creatures.

They moreover affirm[3], that when the dead person is buried, two evil Spirits of a frightful aspect, and black colour, make the dead sit upright in his coffin, and arraign him; if he is found innocent, they suffer him to lie down again, and rest quietly; if not, they give him several great blows with a hammer between the two ears, which occasion incredible pains, and force him to cry out terribly.

[Job xxxiii. 23. Ἄγγελος θανατοφόρος. Job xxxvi. 14. Job xx. 15.] In the Greek of the book of Job, the Angel of death is mentioned frequently. Though there were a thousand Angels of death about the righteous, ready to take away his life, yet none of them shall smite him, if he reflects upon himself, and thinks of returning to the Lord, if he discovers his sin to a man, and confesses to him his folly, the Angel shall prevent his dying. And elsewhere, Riches unjustly gathered shall be vomited up with horror, and the Angel shall drag him out of his house. And again, Let the soul of the Hypocrite die in his youth, and let his life be snatched away by the Angels. [Prov. xvii. 11.] And Solomon, An evil man seeketh only rebellion, therefore a cruel Angel shall be sent against him. This cruel Angel, this Angel of death, was he who was sent against Sarah the Daughter of Raguel's first Husbands, and [Tob. iii. 8.] was the death of them when they attempted to approach her. This is the Angel Asmodeus, or Destroyer who was banished into the Wilderness, and chained by the Angel [Tob. viii. 3.] Raphael. Lastly, this is the evil Angel spoken of by the Psalmist, Let them be as chaff [Psal. xxxv. 5, 6.] before the wind, and let the Angel of the Lord chase them, and be the cause of their perishing; let their way be dark and slippery, and let the Angel of the Lord persecute them.

The Angel or Messenger of Satan, who [2 Cor. xii. 7. Ἄγγελος Σατᾶν ἵνα με κολαφίζῃ. Matth. xii. 16.] buffeted St. Paul, is the Minister of the Devil, his Envoy. The Devil is considered in Scripture as a Prince who exercises his dominion over other Devils of a lower rank, and less power. In this sense the Gospel speaks of Satan's kingdom, If Satan is divided against himself, how will his kingdom stand? If the Devil expels

Devils [Matt. xxv. 41.] Devils out of bodies which are possessed by him, he destroys his own dominion. Jesus Christ came into the world to overthrow the power of Satan, and at the day of judgment he will condemn them whom he has rejected to that eternal fire which is prepared for the Devil and his Angels; his Ministers and Agents, who are of the same nature, and sentenced to the same punishment with him.

The Angel therefore of Satan may be said to have buffeted S. Paul, either by suggesting bad thoughts to him[4], or by producing bodily infirmities in him[5], or in stirring up adversaries against him, who opposed his good designs: as the Coppersmith, and Demetrius the Goldsmith, at Ephesus; and Hymeneus and Philetus, whom he mentions in his first Epistle to Timothy. Lastly, there are some who believei that the Angel of Satan did sensibly persecute S. Paul, struck him, and laid snares for him; as S. Athanasius relates that the Devils sometimes beat and persecuted S. Antony; and that many Saints have frequently been handled very ill by Devils, who envied their progress in virtue, and were enraged at the overthrow of Satan's kingdom, which was destroyed by them.

Tongue of Angels. See TONGUE. Angels of light, and Angels of darkness. We call good Angels, Angels of light, their habitation being in Heaven, in the region of light; they are clothed with light and glory, stand before the throne of the Most High, and inspire men with good actions, actions of light and righteousness. The Angels of darkness, on the contrary, are those who are the Devil's Ministers, whose abode is in Hell, in the region of darkness, in those black dungeons where the wicked are imprisoned. S. Paul says, that Satan sometimes transforms himself into an Angel of light; in like manner as our Saviour in the Gospel says that Wolves sometimes put on Sheep's clothing, to seduce the simple; but they are at length discovered by their works. Sooner or later they betray themselves, and are distinguish'd by works of darkness, wherein they engage their followers.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Buxtorf. Synag. Jud. i. 35.
Idem Ibid. ex Elia Thisbi.
Pocock not. Miscell. p. 241.
Aug. concione 2. in Ps. lviii. & l. iii. c. 7. contra 2 Ep. Pel. Hieronym. alii passim.
Basil. Reg. fusiorib. c. ult. Aug. in Ps. cxxx. Hieronym. in Galat. iv. 13. Beda Sedul. Quid. apud Chrysost. D. Thom. &c. Chrysost. Theodoret. in 2 Cor. xii. Ambrosiast. Primas. &c.

Anger

ANGER, Wrath. The Scripture often attributes Anger to God; not that he is capable of those irregular motions which this passion produces, but because he punishes the wicked with the severity of a provok'd Father or Master.

Anger is often used for punishment, chastisement. The Magistrate is a revenger to execute wrath, says S. Paul; that is to say, vengeance. Is God unjust, who makes people sensible of the effects of his Anger?

[Rom. iii. 5. Numb. xvi. 46.] Qui infert iram, that is to say, pœnam. Anger is come out from the Lord, and begins to be felt: Jam enim egressa est ira a Domino, & plaga desœvit.

Anger is often joined with fury, ira furoris, even when God is spoken of; but this is in order to aggravate the effects of his Anger, or the just occasions of his indignation: Quæ est hæc ira furoris ejus immensa. Turn from us the fury of thine [Deut. xxix. 24.] Anger: Averte a nobis furorem iræ tuæ.

The Hebrews place Anger in the Nose. Let not thy Nose be disturbed, be inflamed. A cholerick Man is called one with a short Nose, and the patient, People with long Noses. See NOSE.

The day of wrath, is the day of God's judgment, the day of his vengeance. St. John Baptist calls it the wrath to come. Quis vos docuit fugere a ventura ira? And S. Paul to the Thessalonians, Eripuit nos ab ira ventura. And, Thou treasurest up wrath against the day of wrath, or vengeance. We were all children of wrath. And elsewhere, We were vessels of wrath, fitted to destruction.

Give way to wrath, Dare locum iræ. Provoke not the wicked, who are already sufficiently animated against you, let their Anger of itself decline. Do not expose yourselves unseasonably to their passion.

When we meet with a furious and unruly beast, we go out of the way, and avoid him; do just so with your persecutors. Otherwise, Give way to the wrath of God; wait the time, be not too hasty to revenge yourselves, God will do you justice.

The vessels of God's wrath, are all the instruments made use of by him in punishing us; such as war, scarcity, barrenness, diseases, &c. but particularly war, which is the conjunction of all misfortunes, and the fulness of the cup of God's wrath. To consummate, finish, fill, his Anger; that is to say, to cause the effects of it to be felt with the utmost rigour.

The whole land is ruined and made desolate by the anger of the Dove, A facie iræ columbæ. And elsewhere, ch. xlvi. 16. Let us fly into our own country, from the sword of the Dove; that is to say, from the Chaldæans, who bore a Dove, as it is said, in their standards, with regard to Semiramis, who was metamorphosed into this bird. But the best Interpreters translate the word Jonah, which sometimes signifies a dove, they translate it, I say, an oppressor, destroyer, enemy, such as Nebuchadnezzar was, with respect to the Jews.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ani

ANI, or Hunni, a Levite, one of the Musicians and Players upon Instruments that that accompanied the Ark, when David [1 Chron. xv. 18] brought it to Jerusalem.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Aniam

ANIAM, the Son of Shemida, of the Tribe of Manasseh, 1 Chron. vii. 19.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Anianus

ANIANUS, or Ananias, first Bishop of Alexandria next to S. Mark. The holy Apostle entring into Alexandria, broke his shoe, and gave it to a Cobbler, whose name was Anian, to mend. This man having hurt his hand with his awl, cried out, upon feeling of great pain, and said, Ah, my God! S. Mark took this opportunity to discourse to him of God, and preach the Gospel to him. At the same time he made a little clay with his spittle, and applying it to Anian's wound, cured him immediately. Anian being very much affected by this good office, desired S. Mark to go into his house, heard the word of life there declared to him, believed, and was baptized, with all his family. The number of Christians hereupon encreased in such a manner, that the Heathens began to grow jealous of S. Mark, and obliged him to retire out of the City. But this he did not do till he had ordained S. Anian Bishop. He governed this Church eighteen years, and died in the year of J. C. 86.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Anilæus

ANILÆUS, Brother of Asinæus, both Jews of the Province of Babylon, and City of Neerda, upon the Euphrates[1]. These two Brothers finding themselves to be necessitous after the death of their Father, were forced to learn the Weaver's trade to get a livelihood. Coming one day too late to work, their Master had a mind to use them ill; but they made their escape from him, took arms, and gathered a good number of resolute people about them, with whom they seized on certain pasture grounds, in the marshes which the Euphrates makes at that place, where it divides itself into many branches. There they fortified themselves in such a manner, as to become formidable to the Governor of Babylon, who having projected to surprize them with an army, was repulsed by them, and obliged to retire. The King of the Parthians, named Artabanus, conceived an esteem for their persons, desired to see them, and suffered them to live in peace in the canton which they were possessed of.

There they lived quietly for fifteen years, till Anilæus fell passionately in love with the Wife of one who was a man of quality among the Parthians, and Governor of the Province; with him he made war, defeated, killed him, and married his Wife. This Woman brought her Idols with her, and continued to adore them; at which all the Jews murmured. Asinæus for some time took no notice of his Brother's fault; but at last he was obliged to speak to him about it, and tell him that it was necessary he should divorce his Wife. Anilæus's passion was stronger than his reason, and had more effect upon him than all his Brother's remonstrances; and his Wife apprehending this general combination of the Jews against her, poisoned her Brother-in-law Asinæus.

Anilæus made inroads afterwards upon the territories of Mithridates, Son-in-law to King Artabanus. Mithridates having assembled an army, was surprized, defeated, and himself taken prisoner by Anilæus, who after he had treated him in a base manner, gave him at last his liberty. Mithridates, animated by the reproaches of his Wife, reassembled his troops. Anilæus marched against him, was routed, and obliged to fly into the marshes. There he found people enough to enable him to keep his ground, till the Babylonians, who had got some knowledge of the Country, while they were sending Deputies to treat with him, in order to come to some agreement, fell upon him in the night, and killed him. This happened about the year of J. C. 40.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Joseph. Antiq. l. xviii. c. 12.

Anim

ANIM, a City belonging to the Tribe of Judah, Josh. xv. 50. It is probably the Town of Anam, or Anem, or Ancem, mentioned by Eusebius and S. Jerom[1], which was about eight or ten miles to the East of Hebron.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Vide Eufeb. Onomast. ad vocem Anea, Anem, & Aufem.

Animals

ANIMALS, the Hebrews distinguish pure Animals, that is, those which may be eaten, and offered to the Lord, from those which are impure, the use whereof is prohibited. The Sacrifices which they generally offered, were, 1°. A Cow, a Bull, and a Calf. The Ox could not be offered in Sacrifice, because it was cut and imperfect. And [Lev. xxii. 18, 19.] when it is said that Oxen were sacrificed, we are to understand Bulls. I do not think that the mutilation of Animals was either permitted or used among the Israelites. 2°. [Ch. xxii. 24.] The She-goat, the He-goat, and the Kid. 3°. The Ewe, the Ram, and the Lamb; and when it is said that Sheep are offered in Sacrifice, Rams are meant, or Lambs intire and without bodily defects. I would be understood here to speak of Burnt-offerings, and Sacrifices for Sin; for as to Peace-offerings, or Sacrifices made out of pure devotion, a female might be sometimes offered, provided [Ch. iii. 1.] it was pure, and without blemish.

Besides these three sorts of Animals used in Sacrifices, many others might be eaten either wild or tame; such as the Stag, the Roe -buck; and in general, all that have cloven feet, or that chew the cud. All that have not the hoof divided, and do not chew the cud, are esteemed impure, and can neither be offered in Sacrifices, nor eaten at common [Ch. xi. 2, 3, 4, &c.] tables. The fat of all sorts of Animals that were sacrificed was [Lev. iii. 17. vii. 23, 24, 25. Ch. vii. 26, 27. Ver. 27. xvii. 10.] forbidden to be eat. And the blood of all kinds of Animals generally, and in all cases, was likewise prohibited upon pain of death to those Hebrews who should eat it. Neither do they eat the sinew which is upon the hollow of the thigh, tho' it be otherwise pure, because the Angel that wrestled with Jacob at Mahanaim touched the hollow of his thigh in the sinew that [Gen. xxxii. 25. Ex. xxii. 31. Levit. v. 2. xi. 39. xvii. 15. xxii. 8. Levit. xi. 39. 40.] shrunk. Lastly, neither did they eat of those Animals which had been taken and touched by a devouring and impure beast, such as a Dog, a Wolf, or a Boar, &c. Nor of any Animal that died of itself. Whoever touched the carcass of it was impure until the evening; and till that time, and after he had washed his clothes, he did not return to the common conversation of other Jews.

Fish that had neither fins nor scales were declared unclean, Levit. xi. 10.

Birds which walk upon the ground with four feet, such as Bats; and the several sorts of flies that have many feet were [Ch. xi. 21, 22.] declared impure. But the Law excepts the different kinds of Grashoppers which have their hind feet higher than those before, and rather leap than walk. These Animals [Ver. ibid.] are clean, and may be eaten; as in effect they were in Palestine.

Interpreters are very much divided with relation to the legal purity or impurity of Animals. It is believed that it was already in use before the Flood, since God commanded [Gen. vii. 2.] Noah to carry seven couple of clean Animals into the Ark, and only two of those which were unclean. Some are of opinion[1] that this distinction is altogether symbolical, and that it denotes only the moral purity or impurity which the Hebrews were to endeavour after, or avoid, according to the nature and inclinations of those Animals which they were to use or to abstain from. A Hog, for example, signifies gluttony; a Hare lasciviousness, a Sheep gentleness, a Pigeon simplicity; and so of others. The principal design of Moses in prohibiting the use of Swine's flesh, was to condemn gluttony, and excesses in eating and drinking. S. Barnabas, in his Epistles, is very large upon these symbolical significations.

Others[2] believe that God intended to preserve the Hebrews from the temptation of adoring Animals, by permitting them to eat those the generality whereof were looked upon as Gods in Egypt; and by obliging them to think with horror on other Animals, to which likewise divine honours were paid. They never had any imagination of worshiping the Animals they eat, and still less of adoring those which they could not persuade themselves to use, even for their nourishment. Tertullian[3] thought, that God proposed by this means to accustom the Hebrews to temperance, and make them averse to gluttony, by thus enjoining them to deprive themselves of several sorts of food.

Lastly, many Commentators allow nothing more to be in the Animals which are declared unclean, besides some natural qualities which are really hurtful, or which at least are so in the idea of certain people. Moses has forbidden the use of Beasts, Birds and Fishes, the flesh whereof was thought to be bad and pernicious to health; those which are wild, dangerous, or venomous, or that were thought to be such by the people. God likewise, who design'd to separate the Hebrews from other people, as a holy nation consecrated to his service, seems to have interdicted them the use of certain Animals, which were esteemed unclean, that by this outward and figurative purity they might be inclined to another more real and perfect. This he intimates sufficiently in these words, [Levit. xx. 24,25,26.] I am the Lord, the God who have separated you from other people; ye shall therefore put difference between clean Beasts and unclean, and between unclean Fowls and clean: And ye shall not make your souls abominable by Beast or by Fowl, or by any manner of living thing that creepeth on the ground, which I have separated from you as unclean. And ye shall be holy unto me: for I the Lord am holy, and have severed you from other people, that ye should be mine.

I shall here set down a list of those unclean Animals, whereof Moses has made any express mention.

Unclean Animals. The Camel. The Porcupine, or Hedge-Four footed Beasts. hog.

The Hare. The Hog.

The Eagle.

The Griffin, or rather the Ossifraga.

The Sea-Eagle. The Kite. The Vultur, and those of its species.

The Raven, and all Birds of Birds.

the same species.

The Ostrich. The Owl. The Moor-hen. The Spar-hawk. The Scritch-Owl. The Cormorant.

The Ibis. The Swan.

The

The Swan.

The Bittern. The Porphyrio, or perhaps the Vultur.

Birds. The Hern.

The Curlew. The Lap-wing.

The Bat.

The Weasel.

The Mouse. The Crocodile. Four-footed The Shrew-Mouse. Creatures.

The Cameleon.

The Eft. The Lizard. The Mole.

But it may be proper to advertise the Reader, that we know but very imperfectly the signification of the Hebrew terms, which denote the generality of these Animals. We have followed the Vulgate in the Catalogue above written. They who please may consult on this matter the large work composed by Samuel Bochart, concerning the several Animals whereof there is any mention in the Bible, and the Commentators on the XI chapter of Leviticus; as also S. Barnabas's Epistle. They may likewise turn to the names of each of these Animals, inserted under their proper Articles in this Dictionary.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Aug. l. vi. contra Faust. c. 7. Iren. l. v. adversus hæres. Origen. in Levit. Homil. 7. Cyril. l. vii. in Levit.
Theodoret. qu. 1. in Levit.
Tertull. l. ii. contra Marcion. c. 18.

Anise

ANISE, an herb very well known, which produces small seeds of a very good smell. Our Lord reproaches the Pharisees with their scrupulous exactness in paying tythe of Anise, Mint and Cummin, while they neglected Justice, Mercy and Faith, which [Matth. xxiii. 23. Tobit i. 1, 2, &c. Ch. xi. 19.] were the more essential practices of Religion.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Anna (I)

I. ANNA, the Wife of Tobit, of the Tribe of Nephthali, who was carried in captivity to Nineveh by Salmanesar King of Assyria. After that Tobit had lost his sight, and was fallen into poverty, Anna found her self obliged to go every day to get her livelihood by spinning; and what she earned by the labour of her hands, she brought home for the subsistence of her family. One day, having received a kid, she conveyed it to her house, and Tobit having heard it, said, Take care that this kid be not stolen; send it back to those who own it. To which Anna with great passion replied, Where then is the reward of thine alms? and what are become of all thine hopes? Thus was the patience of Tobit tried amidst his other afflictions.

Some time after, Tobit believing himself to be near his end, called his Son Tobias, and charged him to have always a [Tobit xiv. 12.] great respect for his Mother; and to remember all that she had done and suffered for him. Last of all he added, When the course of her life is finished, bury her near me. Tobit lived still a great while after this, and Anna his Wife survived him. Some few moments before his death he repeated the request he had made before to Tobias, of placing his Wife Anna near him in his grave, after his decease. Tobit died about the year of the World 3363. before J. C. 637. before the vulgar Æra 641. Anna therefore must have died after this time, but before 3378. which was the year wherein Nineveh was taken: for Tobias left this City before it was taken, as his Father had forewarned him it would be.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Anna (II)

[Luke ii. 36, 37.] II. ANNA, the Daughter of Phanuel, a Prophetess and Widow of the Tribe of Asher, is mentioned in S. Luke. She was married early, and lived but seven years with her Husband. Being then disengaged from the ties of marriage, she thought only of pleasing God. She continued, without ceasing, in the Temple, serving God day and night, with fasting and prayers[1]. She was fourscore years of age, when the holy Virgin came to present Jesus in the Temple, and entring accidentally while old Simeon was pronouncing the hymn of thanksgiving, which we read in the Gospel, Anna likewise began to praise God, and to speak of the Messiah to all those who waited for the redemption of Israel. We know nothing more either of the life or death of this holy Prophetess. The Roman Martyrology fixes her festival to the first day of September; that published by Canisius, to the twenty eighth of August; that of Ugellus, and the Menæa of the Greeks, join the festival of S. Anna the Prophetess and that of old Simeon together, on the third of February.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Translators' note. Her serving God at the Temple day and night, says Dr. Prideaux*, is to be understood no otherwise than that she constantly attended the morning and evening Sacrifice at the Temple, and then with great devotion offered up her prayers to God; the time of the morning and evening Sacrifice, being the solemnest time of prayer among the* Jews*, and the Temple the solemnest place for it.*

Anna (III)

III. ANNA, the Mother of the Blessed Virgin, and Wife to Joachim. The names of Anna and Joachim are not to be met with in the Canonical Scriptures of the New Testament, but they are in books of good antiquity, which indeed are of no great authority, particularly in the Western Church, yet deserve some respect. We see them quoted in the writings of the Fathers. The tradition of the Church has preserved the names of Anna and Joachim; and hath paid suitable honours to their memory, notwithstanding that it hath not adopted every story of their lives, which has been published by the zeal of some ignorant persons. Whatever we know of Joachim and Anna, is handed down down to us from the Christians of the East, who have preserved several historical traditions, which the Christians of the West were strangers to.

We read in the Protevangelium, or preparatory Gospel , whereof S. James is said to be the author[1], that Joachim intending once upon some solemn day to present his offering in the Temple, was prevented by a Jew, whose name was Reuben; this man told him that it was not lawful for him to do it, because he had no posterity in Israel. Joachim, upon this, was in a great deal of confusion, and retired into the Wilderness, where he continued for forty days and forty nights in fasting and prayer. His Wife Anna stayed at home, afflicting herself before God, upon the account of her own barrenness, and the absence of her Husband Joachim. Upon some great festival day, Judith her maid-servant said to her, How long will you continue thus sorrowful? It is not lawful for you upon this day to afflict yourself; for it is the great day of the Lord. Take this head-dress and wear it; for it does not become me to put it on, who am your servant; but you it does, who are of royal extraction. Anna replied, Be gone, I will not, for the Lord hath humbled me. Her maid was provoked with this answer, and reproached her with her barrenness. Anna upon this laid aside her mourning, dressed her head, and put on her wedding-clothes.

About the ninth hour she came into her garden, and began to beg of God that he would vouchsafe to bless her, and deliver her from the ignominy of barrenness; and as she was thus at her devotions under a lawrel-tree, she look'd up and saw a bird's nest with young ones in it. This object encreased her grief; she cried unto the Lord, and complained bitterly that she continued barren, while animals of all kinds produced their young, and the earth brought forth its fruit in season, and blessed the Creator. I am, says she, as one who is accursed in Israel: I am reviled, and covered with confusion, and driven from the Temple of my God. To what can I compare myself?

Hereupon, an Angel descended from Heaven, and said to her, Anna, God hath heard your prayer; you shall conceive and bear a Child, and your generation shall be praised throughout all the world. Anna answered, As the Lord my God liveth, if he give me either Son or Daughter, I will consecrate him to the Lord, and he shall serve in his Temple all the days of his life. At the same time two Angels came and declared to her, that God had heard Joachim's prayer, and that he should return very soon with his flocks. Accordingly, he returned from the mountains, and Anna went to meet him. Some few days after she conceived, and at the end of nine months brought forth Mary, and suckled her with her own milk. At six months old Mary began to go alone; and at the year's end Anna weaned her, made a great entertainment for the Priests, and offered Mary to them. The Child continued still two years in her Father's house, and when she was three years old, Joachim and Anna presented her in the Temple, to be brought up and serve the Lord there. This is what we read of Joachim and Anna, in S. James's Preparatory Gospel.

Mahomet in the Alcoran[2], and other Arabians, have preserved several traditions relating to Joachim, Anna, and Mary their Daughter. They say that Anna was the Daughter of Nahor, and Wife of Amram. These words would induce any one naturally to say, that Mahomet believed Amram the Son of Koath, Grand-son of Levi, and Father of Moses, Aaron and Miriam, to be the same with Amram Husband to Anna, and Father of Mary; and consequently, that this false Prophet has confounded the Virgin Mary with Miriam or Mary the Sister of Moses. And upon this is founded the reproach with which he is charged, of having jumbled two persons together, who lived at more than sixteen hundred years distance from one another. It is certain that Mahomet was ignorant enough to fall into such an anachronism.

The Interpreters of the Alcoran endeavour however to excuse Mahomet, by saying that Amram Husband to Anna, and Father to Mary the Mother of Jesus Christ, was indeed of the same family with Aaron and Moses; which in some sort may be defended, because it is said in S. Luke, that Elizabeth was of the sacerdotal Family, of the Daughters of Aaron. They add, that Amram, Father of the Blessed Virgin Mary, was the Son of Mathée; so that their Amram would be the same with our Joachim, Husband to S. Anna.

They say moreover, that Anna being big with Mary, devoted the fruit of her womb to God, without knowing whether what she bore was a Son or Daughter; that God was pleased with her prayer and vow; that Anna being delivered, God himself named Mary; that Anna offered her to Zachary the Priest, who shut her up in one of the chambers of the Temple, the door whereof was so high that there was no going up to it without a ladder, and carried the key always about him.

Zachary Zachary from time to time paid visits to the Blessed Virgin, and as often as he visited her found abundance of fine fruit near her, which grew in the Holy Land, and at times always when it was out of season; which induced him at last to ask Mary how she came by such a variety of beautiful fruits. She answered, All you see comes from God, who provides every thing without any limitation of number or quantity for those who please him.

Some have said that S. Anna had three Husbands; Joachim, by whom she had Mary, our Saviour's Mother; and Cleophas, by whom she had Mary the Daughter of Cleophas, and Mother of James Minor, Joseph the Just, Simon the Zealot, and Thaddæus; and last of all, Salomas her third Husband, of whom she had a third Daughter named Mary, who was married to Zebedee, and was Mother to S. James Major, and S. John the Evangelist. There are some old verses cited for the confirmation of this genealogy; but both these verses, and they who maintain this opinion, are of too little authority to make way for the reception of it among learned Men. The verses are these,

Anna tribus nupsit, Joachim, Cleophæ, Salomæque, Ex quibus ipsa viris peperit tres Anna Marias. Quas duxere Joseph, Alphæus, Zebedeusq; Prima Jesum; Jacobum, Joseph, cum Simone Judam, Altera dat. Jacobum dat tertia, datque Joannem[3].

There is a great deal of probability that the Marys who are mentioned in the Gospel, and are said to have been the Holy Virgin's Sisters, were her relations only, or other Daughters of Joachim and Anna, born after the Holy Virgin. We know nothing exactly concerning the time of Joachim's and Anna's death, nor even of their tomb; tho' particular monuments are shewn to Travellers, and pains taken to persuade them that these were their sepulchers. The Latins observe the festival of S. Anna upon the 26th of July, and the Greeks that of her conception upon the 9th of December, and that of her marriage with Joseph on the 9th of September.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Protevangelium, Jacobi, c. 1.
Alcoran Surat. iii. See Meravius's notes on this place.
Vide apud Joan. Gerson. Cancellar. t. 3. p. 59.

Anna (IV)

IV. ANNA, or Anno, or Thecemine, the Wife of Jeroboam King of Israel. The name of this Princess is not to be met with in the Hebrew or Vulgate, but in the Greek only. What we know of this Queen may be seen under the Article A-BIJAH, the Son of Jeroboam I. The Greek of the first Book of Kings says that Pharaoh King of Egypt married his Wife's eldest Sister Thecemine to Jeroboam, while he abode as a Refugee in Egypt.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Annas

ANNAS, or Ananus, High Priest of Jerusalem. See ANANUS.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Annius Rufus

ANNIUS RUFUS, succeeded Ambivius in the Government of Judæa, and was himself succeeded by Valerius Gratus[1]. He governed this Province from the year of the World 4016, to 4018. He was sent by Augustus, and recalled by Tiberius.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Joseph. Antiq. l. xviii. c. 3.

Annuntiation

ANNUNTIATION. Upon this festival the Christian Church celebrates the conception or incarnation of the Son of God in the womb of the Virgin Mary. The Angel Gabriel brought the first news of it to Zechary, telling him that he should have a Son, who should be the Fore-runner and Prophet of the Messiah. Six months after, the same Angel Gabriel was sent into a City of Galilee called Nazareth, to the Virgin Mary, of the Tribe of Judah, and Family of David. The Angel said to her, Hail Thou that art highly favoured of the Lord; the Lord is with Thee, blessed art Thou among Women! Mary, when she saw him, was troubled at his saying; and considered with her self, what this salutation could mean. And the Angel said unto her, Fear not, Mary; for thou hast found favour with God. Thou shalt conceive and bring forth a Son, and shalt call his name Jesus. He shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the Highest. The Lord shall give unto him the Throne of his Father David, and he shall reign over the House of Jacob for ever, and of his Kingdom there shall be no end.

Then said Mary unto the Angel, How shall this be, seeing I know not a Man? The Angel answered, The Holy Ghost shall come upon thee, and the power of the Highest shall overshadow thee; therefore also, that Holy Thing which shall be born of thee, shall be called the Son of God. And behold thy Cousin Elizabeth she hath also conceived a Son in her old age; and this is the [Luke i. 5, 25. Ver. 26, & seq.] sixth month with her, for with God nothing shall be impossible. And Mary said, Behold the Handmaid of the Lord, be it unto me according to thy word. At the same time the Angel separated from her, and by the operation of the Holy Ghost she conceived the only Son of the Father, who had been four thousand years expected, and was to be the happiness, the light and salvation of all men.

We celebrate the memory of this mystery on the 25th of March; and S. Austin[1] says, that the Church, upon the authority of some old tradition, believed that the Saviour of the world was conceived upon this day. Not only the Greek and Latin Churches have chosen the 25th of March to celebrate this mystery upon; but the Syrians likewise, Chaldees, and Copticks[2] do the same. This opinion seems to be founded principally upon the supposition of Christ's being born upon the 25th of December. As a consequence of this opinion, it has been believed, that he was conceived upon the 25th of March, because generally there are nine months between the birth and conception of children. In the Article of NAZARETH, we shall speak of a Church built in this City, in the place where the Virgin was saluted by the Angel.

To ANSWER. Besides the common signification of this word, which is very well known, there are other interpretations of it; to answer, signifies to sing in two [Ex. xv. 21.] Chorus's; for example, it is said that Moses having composed a song of thanksgiving, after the passage of the Red Sea, Miriam answered them, Sing ye to the Lord, &c. That is to say, Moses, with the Men on one side, and Miriam with the Women on the other, sung the same song by turns, and as it were with two Chorus's. And in the [Num. xxi. 17.] Book of Numbers, Then Israel sang this song, Spring up, O well, answer unto it; sing in the way of responses, or one side of the Quire singing one verse, the other another. And in the first Book of Samuel, Is [Ver. ibid.] not this David, of whom they sung one to another in dances, saying, Saul hath slain his thousands, and David his ten thousands. They sung this song to his honour in the several Chorus's. The Vulgate generally translates the Hebrew, Hanah, by concinere; but, as is well known, it signifies properly to answer.

This word is taken likewise for to accuse or defend any one in a judicial way. [Gen. xxx. 33.] For example, Respondebit mihi cras justitia mea. My righteousness shall answer for me, it shall be my advocate before thee. And [Deut. xxxi. 21.] in Deuteronomy, The song which thou shalt compose and teach them. Responde-bit ei canticum istud pro testimonio. Isaiah says, Agitatio vultus eorum, respondebit eis. The shew of their countenance will testify against them; their impudence will be like a witness and an accuser, who replies to what the person accused endeavours to say [Hosea v. 5.] in his own justification. Hosea says the same thing, Respondebit arrogantia Israel.

To answer, is likewise taken in a bad construction, as when it is said that a Son answers his Father insolently, or a Servant his Master. Who art thou that repliest [Rom. ix. 20. Joh. xviii. 22. 1 Cor. i. 9. Τὸ ἀπόκριμα τοῦ θανάτου ἐσχήκαμεν.] against God? Who art thou to answer God to excuse thy self to him, to contest with him? Et sic respondes Pontifici? Answerest thou the High Priest so?

St. Paul says, that he had in himself the answer of death; like people who have notice given them of their condemnation. He had a certain assurance of dying. Others translate the Greek, We had a forethought of death within ourselves. Heinsius maintains, that the translation ought to be, We have had within ourselves a caution of death; that is to say, an assurance that we shall not die.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Aug. l. iv. de Trinit.
Vide Bolland. 25 Mart.

Ant

ANT, a very common Infect, which hath furnished the Wise Man with a symbolical expression representing a diligent [Prov. vi. 6. Gen. x. 18. 1 Chron. i. 16.] and laborious life. See likewise Prov. xxx. 24, 25. where the Wise Man commends the prudence of the Ant, in gathering together in the summer, what is necessary for its subsistence in the winter[1].

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Translators' note. I shall be excused, if to what the wisest of men has observed of this little Insect, I add what one of the most ingenious of mankind has said much to the same purpose. Parvula nam exemplo est, magni formica laboris Ore trahit quodcunque potest, atque addit acervo Quem struit haud ignara ac non incauta futuri. Quæ simul in versum contristat Aquarius annum, Non usquam prorepit & illis utitur ante Quæsitis sapiens. Horat. Serm. l. 1. 1. And Pliny gives us so agreeable a description of the prudence and good œconomy, &c. of this little creature, that it may not be improper to insert it at length Et iis, says he, Reipublicæ ratio, memoria, cura, semina arrosa condunt, ne rursus infruges exeant e terrâ majora ad introitum dividunt: madefacta imbre proferunt, atque siccant: operantur & noctu plenâ Lunâ: eædem interlunio cessant. Jam in opere qui labor, quæ sedulitas? Et quoniam ex diverso convehunt altera alterius ignara, certi dies ad recognitionem mutuam nundinis dantur. Quæ tunc earum concursatio, quam diligens cum obviis quædam collocutio atque percontatio! Plin. Hist. Nat. l. xi. c. 30.

Antarada

ANTARADA, a City of Syria or Phœnicia, lying upon the Continent, opposite to, and Eastward of, the Island Arada, and of the City of the same name situated in that Island. The Scripture does not speak expressly of the City Antarada; but in several places it mentions Arada, or Arva, or the Arvadites, who are reckoned among the Canaanites, whose Country God gave up to the Hebrews. Antarada is at present called Tortosa. The City is still considerable, chiefly for its fine Harbour. There is an ancient Monument shewn there of about twenty cubits in length.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Anthedon

ANTHEDON, a City of Palestine, lying upon the Mediterranean, about twenty furlongs South from Gaza. Herod the Great called it Agrippias, in honour of Agrippa[1]. See AGRIPPIAS.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Joseph. Antiq. l. 13. c. 21.

Antichrist

ANTICHRIST. This is the name of that Man of Sin, who is to precede the second coming of our Saviour; and who is represented in Scripture, and in the Fathers, as the Epitome of every thing that is most impious, cruel and abominable. To him is attributed what the Prophets have said of Antiochus Epiphanes, of Gog and Magog, of the foolish Shepherd mentioned by Zachary, of the Son of Perdition, and the Man of Sin spoken of by S. Paul, which many have applied in an historical sense to Nero. For it may be said, that Nebuchadnezzar, Cambyses, Antiochus Epiphanes, Caius and Nero, were so many Antichrists, or Fore-runners of Antichrist[1]. And S. John in his Epistle informs us, that already in his time there were many such Antichrists. Little Children, says he, it is [John ii. 18.] the last time: and as ye have heard that Antichrist shall come, even now are there many Antichrists, whereby we know that it is the last time. The Antichrists which this Apostle speaks of were no other than Hereticks and Persecutors.

But Antichrist, the true, real Antichrist, who is to come before the universal Judgment, will in himself alone include all the marks of wickedness which have been separately discern'd in different persons, who for their impiety have deserved the name of Types or Fore-runners of Antichrist. I will give you here some of those touches wherewith the Sacred Authors have described [Dan. vii. 19, 20.] him. I saw, says Daniel, an horn that had eyes, and a mouth that spake very great things: the same made war with the Saints, and prevailed against them until the Antient of Days came, and judgment was given to the Saints of the Most High, and the time came that the Saints possessed the kingdom. The Prophet was told, that he who was represented by this Horn should utter blasphemies against the Most High, should trample upon the Saints, and flatter himself that he should produce a change of times and laws; but that the supreme Judge should destroy his power, and for ever exterminate him.

[Ch. viii. 9, 10.] In another vision, the same Prophet saw a little Horn, which was exalted in an extraordinary manner, and was so insolent as to attack the Heavens, the Stars whereof he beat down and trampled on. He made war against the King of Strength, against God himself, abolished his perpetual Sacrifice, and overthrew the place which was consecrated to him. God permitted all this to punish the sins of his people. Truth was banished out of the earth; the Enemy was in every thing successful, and did what he pleased for the space of two thousand three hundred days. All these misfortunes were followed with the Resurrection of the dead, and the eternal happiness of the Faithful: Many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake, some to everlasting life, and some to shame and everlasting contempt.

[Zach. xi. 16, 17.] Zachary represents the adversary of the Messiah under the Idea of a foolish Shepherd, who does not visit those that be cut off, neither seeketh the young one, nor healeth that that is broken, nor feedeth that that standeth still. He shall eat the flesh of the fat, and tear their claws in pieces. Wo to the idol Shepherd that leaveth the flock: the sword shall be upon his arm, and upon his right eye; his arm shall be clean dried up, and his right eye shall be utterly darkned. Such will Antichrist be, and such his dominion.

[Matt. xxiv. 4, 5, &c.] Our Saviour in the Gospel describes the times that shall precede his coming, as times of war, famine and rebellion; and says that all this is but the beginning of sorrows. Then the just shall be given up into the hands of the wicked, and put to death by them; many good men shall be offended; and the Abomination of Desolation shall be seen in the Holy Place. The calamities which will then happen, will be so extreme, that if they were not to be shortned, no one would be saved: but for the Elects sake they will be shortned. Then shall arise false Christ's and false Prophets, and shall shew great signs and wonders, insomuch that (if it were possible) they should deceive the very Elect. After all this, the Son of Man shall appear in all the brightness of his Majesty.

[2 Thess. ii. 3, 4, 5.] St. Paul, writing to the Thessalonians, says, that this Man of Sin, this Son of Perdition, this Enemy of God, shall exalt himself above all that is called God, or that is worshiped; so as to sit in the Temple of God, shewing himself that he is God. He adds, Ye know what withholdeth, that he might be revealed in his time: for the mystery of iniquity doth already work—— then shall that wicked be revealed whom the Lord shall consume with the Spirit of his mouth, and shall destroy with the brightness of his coming; even him whose coming is after the working of Satan, with all power, and signs, and lying wonders; and with all the deceivableness of unrighteousness in them that perish; because they received not the love of the truth, that they might be saved.

This terrible picture of Antichrist drawn by S. Paul, seemed so like Nero, that many of the Antients[2] thought this Prince was Antichrist, or at least his Fore-runner, and that Antichrist would appear very soon after him. Others[3] were of opinion, that Nero would rise again before the consummation of Ages, to accomplish all that was said of Antichrist in the Scriptures.

Lastly,

Lastly, S. Austin assures us, that there were others who maintain'd that Nero was not dead, but was still living in some unknown and unaccessible place; that his vigour and his cruelty were the same they had been, the effects whereof were to be one day felt by God's faithful Servantsa.

[Rev. xi. 7. xiii.] St. John in the Revelations describes Antichrist under the name of the Beast that ascendeth out of the bottomless pit, and killeth the two Witnesses (which are supposed to be Enoch and Elias) who maketh war with the Saints, killeth them, and leaveth their dead bodies exposed in the market-place of the great City, which spiritually is called Sodom and Egypt, where also our Lord was crucified. He afterwards represents him to be a Beast rising up out of the sea with ten Horns and ten Crowns upon his Horns, and upon his Heads the name of Blasphemy. The Dragon (or the Devil) gave him his strength and power. The Beast was worshiped, and a mouth given him, speaking great things, and Blasphemies, and power to make war against the Saints for two and forty months: the Beast overcame, and was worshiped for two and forty months.

[Ch. xiii. 17, 18.] In another place he says, that the Beast should oblige all, both small and great, rich and poor, free and bond, to receive a mark in their right hand, or in their foreheads. So that no one might buy or sell, save he that had the mark, or the name of the Beast, or the number of his name. Here is Wisdom. Let him that hath understanding count the number of the Beast: for it is the a Aug. l. 20. de Civit. c. 19.

(a) Ο Υ Λ Π Ι Ο Σ number of a Man: and his number is six hundred threescore and six.

Some believe this number of six hundred sixty six, to be that of the letters in the name of Antichrist, set down according to their numerical valuation: for the letters of the Hebrew, Greek and Latin Alphabet have a certain numerical value; for example, I in Latin stands for number one, V for five, X for ten, L for fifty, C for an hundred, D for five hundred, M for a thousand. In Greek A stands for one, I for ten, K for twenty, Λ for thirty, M for forty; and so on.

Here the curious are perplexed to know whether the name of the Beast which St. John speaks of is to be Hebrew, Syriac, Greek or Latin; and secondly, whether his name will be that of his person, or his dignity, or that which his followers shall give him; or lastly, whether it will be that which he will merit by his crimes. There are many conjectures on this matter, and almost all the Commentators have tried their abilities, without being able to say certainly that any of them have succeeded, in giving us the true mark of the Beast, or the cypher whereby he will distinguish his followers. The number 666 has been discovered in the names of Ulpius Trajanus (a), Diocletian (b), Julian the Apostate (c), Luther (d), Evanthas (e), Latinus (f), Titan (g), Lampetis (h), Niketes (i), Kakos Hodegos (k), that is to say, bad guide; Arnoumai (l), I renounce Romiit (m) Roman, Abinu Kadescha Papa (n), our holy Father the Pope; and lastly of Elion Adonai, Jehovah, Kadosch (o), 70. 400. 30. 80. 10. 70. 6.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Vide Hieronym. in Dan. xi. 24. 2 Thess. alii.

Victorin. in Apocal. Ambrosiast. in 2 Thess. ii. Chrysost. in (b) DIOCLES AUGUSTUS. DCLXVI. (c) C. F. JULIANUS CESAR. DCLXVI. Or rather, C. F. JULIANUS CAES. DCLXVI. (d)לטרת ל ו ר200. 400. 30. 6. 30. 30. 1. 300. 5. 10. 50. 70. 200. 30. 1. 40. 80. 5. 300. 10. 200. 70. 50. 10. 20. 8. 300. 8. 200. 20. 1. 20. 70. 200. 70. 4. 8. 3. 70. 200. (m)רומייית400. 10. 10. 40. 6. 200. (n)אבינוהקדושאאפיפי10. 80. 10. 80. 1. 1. 300. 6. 4. 100. 5. 6. 50. 10. 2. 1. (o)עליוןאדנייהוהקדש300. 4. 100. 5. 6. 5. 10. 10. 30. 4. 1. 50. 6. 10. 30. 70.

Hieronym. in Dan. xi.

Atheus

ATHEUS.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Aug

AUG. (e) Ε Υ Α Ν Θ Α Σ 5. 400. 1. 50. 9. 1. 200. (f) Λ Α Τ Ε Ι Ν Ο Σ (g) Τ Ε Ι Τ Α Ν 300. 5. 10. 300. 1. 50. (h) Λ Α Μ Π Ε Τ Ι Σ (i) Ο Ν Ι Κ Η Τ Η Σ (k) Κ Α Κ Ο Σ Ο Δ Η Γ Ο Σ (l) Α Ρ Ν Ο Υ Μ Ε 1. 100. 50. 70. 400. 40. 5. the most High, the Lord, the holy God. This last Name could have been invented only to shew the vanity of all that pains which has been taken in this Enquiry, since the number 666 is found in Names, which are most sacred and most opposite to Antichrist. The wisest and the safest way is, to be silent with respect to both this Name and Character.

I may say the same almost of the time when Antichrist will appear. We know certainly that he will come before the consummation of Ages, and will precede the second coming of Jesus Christ. But all those who have attempted to fix the year of his Appearance, have only discovered their ignorance and rashness. There have been [2 Thess. ii 1, 2.] Impostors ever since S. Paul's time, who have terrified Believers by persuading them that the Day of the Lord was at hand. To encourage these People, S. Paul wrote to the Thessalonians, in these terms, We beseech you, Brethren, by the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, and by our gathering together to him, that ye be not soon shaken in Mind neither by Spirit, nor by Word, nor by Letter, as from us, as that the Day of Christ is at hand. Let no man deceive you by any means; for that Day shall not come except there come a falling away first, and that man of Sin be revealed, the Son of Perdition; who oppos- eth and exalteth himself above all that is called God. S. John in his first Epistle says, Every Spirit that confesseth [1 John iv. 3.] not that Jesus is come in the Flesh, is not of God; this is that Spirit of Antichrist, whereof you have heard that it should come, and even now already is it in the World. The Hereticks of that time were true signs of Antichrist, but this still shews that the Christians of that time expected the coming of the Messiah.

The same Opinions and Dispositions are observable in the generality of the Fathers of the first Ages. The Churches of Vienne and Lions in Gaul[1], seeing the violence of the persecution, which was set a-foot by Marcus Aurelius, believed they then beheld the Preludes to the persecution of Antichrist. An old ecclesiastical Author, called Judas[2], who lived under the Emperor Severus, asserted, that Antichrist would very soon appear; because the Persecution was then carrying on with great heat against the Church. Tertullian, who lived at the same time[3], and S. Cyprian[4], who flourished soon after, never questioned but that the coming of Antichrist was very near. S. Hilary[5] observing the progress of Arianism, believed he saw those Signs which were to be the fore-runners of Antichrist. S. Basil the Great[6], S. Ambrose[7], S. Jerom[8], S. Martin[9], S. Chrysostom[10], and Gregory the Great[11], were of Opinion, that the end of the World was at hand, and that the coming of Antichrist could not be far off.

After the tenth Age, which concluded the sixth millenary, according to their opinion who reckoned the Birth of Jesus Christ to have happened about the five thousandth year of the world, people began to get the better of that apprehension they had been under, of the conclusion of the world, which was to be according to the tradition of the Antients, after the duration of six thousand years. They began to build larger churches, and larger edifices. S. Jerome's translation of the Scriptures, which allowed the world to have existed not above four thousand years before Jesus Christ, contributed likewise to persuade men, that the last period of the World, and the coming of Antichrist, were not so near. Notwithstanding this did not hinder some from attempting once more, to fix the year of Antichrist's appearance. The Council of Florence assembled in 1105 condemned Fluentius Bishop of that City, for maintaining that Antichrist was then already born. Abbot Joachim, who lived in the twelfth Age, pretended that Antichrist was to appear in the sixtieth year of his time. Arnaud de Ville-neuve said, Antichrist would come in 1326. Peter Dailly was of opinion, that according to his observations He must appear in 1789. Cardinal de Cusa in 1730 or 1734. John Pico at Mirandola in 1994. Francis Melet in 1530, or 1540. John of Paris in 1560. Jerom Cardan in 1800. Vincent Ferrier, who lived in the fifteenth Age, wrote to Pope Benedict the XIII. that Antichrist would appear in a very little time, and that an holy Hermit had inform'd him nine years before, that this Enemy of God was then born. The event has already confuted the generality of these predictions: And we may affirm without rashness, that the rest are no better grounded, nor at all more certain than the preceding ones.

There is a Tradition which seems to be received among the Antients, that Antichrist should be born of some Jewish Family[12], and should come out of the Tribe of Dan. In which sense these words of Jeremiah [Jerem. viii. 16.] are explained[13], The snorting of his horses are heard from Dan: the whole Land of his strong ones; for they are come and have drowned the Land and all that is in it. The most ancient Commentators upon the Revelations, such as Aretas, Bede, Primasius, Rupert, Haimo, and many others are of opinion, that S. John's omission of the name of Dan in his enumeration of the [Rev. vii. 5, & seq.] Tribes of Israel, proceeds from the knowledge he had, that Antichrist should be born of this Tribe. And how should he come from this Tribe, since the Jews dwell no longer in Judæa, or at least are no longer Masters of this Province? Why he will come, say the Fathers, from the other side of the Euphrates, from Babylonia, where some suppose that the ten Tribes, and in particular that of Dan, subsists still intire. This opinion is followed by almost all those, who have written since S. Jerom[14], in whose time it was very common in the Church.

As to the Father of Antichrist, the world is not agreed. Some think[15] he will be ingendered of a Devil and some very corrupt Woman; others tell us, that Antichrist will be a Devil incarnate and not a Man. Unus de hominibus in quo Satanas habitaturus sit corporaliter, says S. Jerom[16]. Hilary the Deacon[17] thought, that as Jesus Christ was incarnate, and proved his Divinity by his Miracles; so the Devil will appear in Antichrist, and endeavour to persuade the world that he is God, by working false Miracles. And in like manner as Jesus Christ was born of a Virgin, says S. Hippolytus, will Antichrist boast that he has derived his Birth from a Mother, who never had any Conversation with Man: But whereas the Son of God assumed real Flesh, Antichrist, as this Author says, will take only the image or phantom of Flesh. It is best to follow the Opinion of S. Chrysostom[18], Theodoret, Theophylact, and many others, that Antichrist will be a real Man, and an Agent of the Devil in exercising all his cruelty and malice against the Faithful.

They who tell us that the Mother of Antichrist will be the most debauched and most impure of all Woman-kind, or that he will be born in Incest committed between the Father and his Daughter, or the Son and his Mother, or lastly between a Man and Woman who are both obliged to Celibacy by vows and solemn engagements, cannot maintain this Opinion without falling into a kind of Contradiction; for how will Antichrist prove his Mother's Virginity, if her original is so polluted and corrupt, and she is so infamous in the assert, that he will be of Jewish extraction, if he is to be born of a Father and a Mother both solemnly engaged in the monastick Profession, which, as is very well known, is not in use among the Hebrews? It is true, some suppose that this Woman will make an outward profession of Retirement, Piety, and Virginity, and will so well conceal her ignominious course of Life, as to persuade all the world, that the Son, who will be born of her, was produced in her after a supernatural manner. But where will she find persons credulous enough to believe her upon her bare Word? The birth of any Man of a pure Virgin is not a thing that People are apt easily to credit. All the Authority of the Prophets both of the old and new Testament, and all the Miracles wrought by Jesus Christ, and related in the Gospel, were no more than necessary to convince us of Mary's Virginity, after the Conception and Birth of our Saviour.

It remains now to examine the Dominion of Antichrist. As it is supposed that he will be born in Babylonia, it is said, that he will there lay the Foundations of his Empire[19], and that the Jews will be the first, who will declare[20] for him, acknowledge his Dominion, and enjoy the principal Imployments in his Government. These he will win upon by his delusions, his caresses and false miracles, and by all the appearances of goodness, piety and clemency; so that this unhappy People will take him for the Messiah; and will flatter themselves with expectations of seeing the Kingdom of Israel restored by his means to its former Splendor.

As soon as Antichrist shall appear, he will begin with attacking the Roman Empire, which will be then divided among ten powerful Kings according to these words of [Dan. vii. 7, 8, 9, 24, 25.] Daniel, which are applied to the Kingdom of Antichrist, The fourth Beast which I saw was dreadful, and terrible, and strong exceedingly; it had great iron teeth, it devoured and broke in pieces, and stamped the residue with the feet of it: It was not like any other Beasts that I have seen; it had ten horns, and as I considered these ten horns, I saw another little horn, before whom there were three of the first horns pluckt up by the roots. The Beast here with ten Horns, according to the generality of Interpreters, is the Roman Empire. The little Horn is Antichrist; the three Horns which fell before it, are three Monarchs, who will be overcome by the arms of this Enemy to God.

Daniel Daniel describes these three Monarchs in [Dan. xi. 42, 43.] another Place, He shall stretch forth his Hand also upon the Countries, and the Land of Egypt shall not escape. But he shall have Power over the Treasures of gold and silver, and over all the precious things of Egypt; and the Lybians and Ethiopians shall be at his Steps. These are the three Kingdoms whereby the Fall of the Roman Empire will begin; their Subjection shall draw on the Ruin of all the rest. We do not warrant these applications, but relate only what the Ancients have said of them.

After he has subdued Egypt, Ethiopia and Lybia, he will march against Jerusalem, which he will make an easy conquest of, and there establish the seat of his Empire. He will be then informed, [See Ezek. xxxviii, xxxix.] that the Kings Gog and Magog are coming to oppose him, he will give them battle and without difficulty defeat them in the midst of Palestine. The whole Country will be enriched with their Spoils. After this Antichrist seeing himself master of the Eastern and Western Empire, will turn all his application towards the destruction of Christ's Kingdom, and the persecution of good Men. He shall exalt himself above all that is called God or that is worshipped; so that he as God sitteth in the Temple of [2 Thess. ii. 4.] God: In the Temple of Jerusalem which he will rebuild. Nay, there are some of the Ancients[21], who believe that he will be seated in the Churches of Christians, and there receive the adorations of great numbers of Apostates, who will renounce the Faith of Jesus Christ. Then God will give his Spirit to his two witnesses, who are thought to be Enoch and Elias, they shall [Rev. xi. 2, 3, 4.] prophesie a thousand two hundred and threescore days cloathed in Sackcloth. —— And when they shall have finished their testimony, the Beast that ascendeth out of the bottomless pit, shall make War against them, and shall overcome them and kill them. And their dead shall lie in the street of the great City, which spiritually is called Sodom and Egypt, where also our Lord was crucified. But after three days and an half the Spirit of Life from God entered into them, and they stood upon their feet, and great fear fell upon them which saw them: And they heard a great voice from Heaven saying unto them, Come up hither; and they ascended up to Heaven in a Cloud. The Scripture does not particularly tell us what the Duration will be of Antichrist's kingdom; but in several places it seems to [Rev. xv. 2, 3. Dan. vii. 25. & xii. 11.] allow three years and an half for the continuance of his Persecutions. At least it assigns three years and an half for the Persecutions of those, who are looked upon as Figures of Antichrist.

The Righteous under the persecution of Antichrist will retire to the Mount of Olives[22], when they will be soon attacked by this Enemy to God. Then they will cry unto the Lord, and he will send Jesus Christ to deliver them. He will descend from Heaven attended by his Angels, and preceded by a flame which nothing will be able to extinguish. The Angels will give up the army of the wicked into the hands of the righteous, who will make so great a slaughter of them, from the third hour of the day until the Evening, that their Blood shall flow like a torrent in the Valley. Antichrist will come as far as the top of Mount Olivet[23], and there will be put to death in his own tent, and upon his own throne, without receiving the least assistance from any one. Which is agreeable to these words of Daniel, which are applied [Dan. ix. 45.] to Antichrist, He shall plant the tabernacles of his Palace between the Seas and the glorious holy Mountain, yet he shall come to his end and none shall help him. They who would know more particularly what is said of Antichrist , may consult Malvenda the Dominican De Antichristo, and our Dissertation on the same Subject, placed before the Epistle to the Galatians.

The Mussulmen as well as the Jews and Christians, expect another Christ. The Mussulmen call him Daggial, or Deggial, from a name which signifies properly an Impostor, or a Liar; and they hold, that their Prophet Mahomet taught one of his Disciples, whose name was Tamini-Al Dari, every thing relating to Antichrist; and upon the faith of this man they tell us that Antichrist must come at the end of the world, that he will make his entry into Jerusalem like Jesus Christ upon an Ass; but that Christ, who as they will have it, is not yet dead, will come at his second advent to encounter him, and that after having conquered him, he will then die indeed[24]. That the Beast described by St. John in the Revelations, will appear with Antichrist, and make war against the Saints. That Imam Mahadi, who remains concealed among the Mussulmen will then shew himself, join Jesus Christ, and with him engage Daggial, after which they will unite the Christians and Mussulmen, and of the two Religions make but one. After this manner do these people pervert the truths of Christianity, and attribute those promises to themselves, which the Apostles made to the Jewish [Rom. ix. 24. xi. 26. 2 Cor. iii. 16.] Nation, viz. that at the end of the world they shall be united with the Church, and acknowledge the Saviour whom they crucified.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Apud Euseb. l. v. hist. Eccl. c. 1.
Judas Syrus apud Euseb. l. vi. c. 6. hist. Eccl.
Tertull. de Fuga in persecut. c. 2.
Cyprian. Ep. 56. ad Tibarit. & Ep. 53. ad Fortunat.
Hilar. contra Auxentium. n. 5. p. 1265.
Basil. Ep. 71.
Ambros. l. x. in Luc. c. 3.
Hieronym. ad Ageruchiam.
Apud Sulpit. Sever. Dialog. 2.
Chrysost. homil. 33 in Joan.
Greg. Mag. lib. iv. Ep. 35, & 38. & homil. 1. in Evangel.
Pseudo-Hippolyt. de consumm. mundi. Ambrosiast. in 2 Thessal. xi. Hieronym. in Dan. xi.
Iren. l. v. advers. hæres. c. 38. Pseudo-Hippolyt. de consum. mundi. Ambros. l. de Bened. Patriarch. c. 7. & in Psal. xl. Aug. q. 12. in Josu. Theodoret. q. 109. in Genes. Greg. Mag. l. xxxi. in Job. c. 18. Prosper de Promiss. parte 4, &c.
Hieronym. in Dan. xi. Nostri interpretantur hæc omnia de Antichristo, qui nasciturus est de populo Judæorum, & de Babylone venturus.
Lactant. l. xvi. c. 17. Beda in Apoc. xiii. Sulpit. Dialog. 2. Hieronym. in Isai. xvii.
Hieronym. in Dan. vii. Vide & Bedam in Apoc. xiii.
Ambrosiast. in 2 Thessal. ii.
Chrysost. Theodoret Theophyl. in 2 Thess. ii.
Aretas in Apocal. c. ix. 14. Lactant. l. vii. c. 17. Hier. in Dan. xi.
Cyril. Jerosol. Cathech. 15. Hieron. Theodoret. Strab. in Dan. xi.
Hieronym. Epist. ad Aglas. quæst. Œcumen. in 2 Thess. ii.
Lactant. l. vii. de Divino pretio, c. 17, 19.
Hieronym. in Dan. xi. Theodoret. Haymo. Strab. idem, &c.

Bibl. Orient. p. 282. & 531. mahadi.

Antigonus Socchæus (I)

I. ANTIGONUS SOCCHÆUS, Sadoc's Master, who was head of the Sadducees. Antigonus taught, that a pure and disinterested worship should be paid to God. Be not like slaves, said he to his Disciples, let not the view of rewards only be the motive of your obedience; obey without interest, without the hope of receiving any fruit from your labours. Let the fear of the Lord be upon you. Sadoc his Disciple not being able to reconcile himself to such a disinterested spirituality, interpreted his Master's maxim in a quite opposite meaning. He concluded from it, that there were no rewards or punishments to be expected in another life; and that it was necessary to do good and to avoid evil in this, without any motives of hope or fear. This, say the Jews, was the original of the Sect of the Sadducees. Antigonus was a great Master and Teacher of the Jewish Law, and succeeded Simon the Just in this employment, who was High Priest from the year of the World 3702. to 3711. before J. C. 209. before the vulgar Æra 213.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Antigonus (II)

II. ANTIGONUS, the Son of John Hircanus, and Grandson to Simon Maccabæus. His Brother Aristobulus made him his Associate in the Kingdom[1]. Their union was interrupted by the envy and false accusations of their Enemies, who attempted to make Antigonus suspected by Aristobulus; who would never hearken to the ill which they reported of his Brother, till Antigonus one day returning from the war in a suit of rich armour, attended with a numerous retinue, went directly to the Temple, armed as he was, upon the day when the feast of Tabernacles, one of the principal which the Jews observed, was celebrated. Antigonus's enemies represented to Aristobulus, who was then indisposed, that his Brother affected visibly the Royal Power, and took upon him the airs of a Sovereign; and that he would come very soon with a great number of soldiers in his company, to kill him.

Aristobulus could not imagine things to be as they were reported; yet thought it was not proper intirely to neglect this intelligence. He ordered therefore his guards to be posted in an obscure subterraneous place, through which Antigonus was to pass, and directed them to seize and kill him, if he came that way armed; and if he came unarmed to let him pass. Now Aristobulus lay in the Tower which was afterwards called Antonia. He sent therefore to his Brother, desiring him to come and visit him without arms. But the Queen on the contrary, and Antigonus's enemies, inform'd him that the King having understood he had the finest arms in the world, desired he would come to see him with them. Antigonus, who had no distrust of any thing, went armed as he was to wait upon the King; but as he passed under the Tower called Strato's, he was killed by Aristobulus's Guards.

There was at that time one Judas at Jerusalem, who had the gift of Prophecy, so as to foretel always what was to come to pass, with great certainty. He being upon this day in the midst of his Disciples, and seeing Antigonus going, as we have said, to the Temple, cried out that he could not be able to survive his own shame; for whereas he had formerly foretold that Antigonus should on this day be killed in Strato's Tower, he saw him living, and in perfect health. But in a little time after, it was known that this Prince was massacred in a place called Strato's Tower, which confirmed the opinion some had entertained of his predictions being infallible. This happened in the year of the world 3899. before J. C. 101. before the vulgar Æra 105.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Joseph. Antiq. l. xiii. c. 18, 19. & de Bello l. i. c. 6.

Antigonus (III)

III. ANTIGONUS, Son of Aristobulus, who was Brother to Hircanus and Alexandra. Pompey having taken Jerusalem[1], and [In the Year of the World 3943, before J. C. 57, before the vulgar Æra 61. In the Year of the World 3948. before J. C. 52. before the vulg. Æra 56.] seized on Aristobulus and his two Sons, Alexander and Antigonus, Alexander by the way found means to escape. But Aristobulus and Antigonus his Son, were carried away Prisoners to Rome. They made their escape, and returned into Judæa five or six years after. There they endeavoured to re-establish their affairs by the assistance of their friends: but they were defeated and taken by Gabinius[2], who sent them once more to Rome. Aristobulus continued there: but Alexander and Antigonus his Sons were sent back into Judæa, because Gabinius had signified that he had made this promise to their Mother.

In the year of the World 3955. before J. C. 45. before the vulgar Æra 49. Cæsar sent Aristobulus and his Son Antigonus back into Judæa, that he might bring over this Province to his party, and raise an insurrection there against Pompey[3]: but Aristobulus was poisoned by those of Pompey's party. His eldest Son Alexander was beheaded at Antioch by Scipio; and Antigonus seeing himself shut out of Judæa by Antipater and his Sons, had recourse to Cæsar, and laid before him the misfortunes which his Father and his Brother had un dergone on his account[4]. But Cæsar had more regard to Antipater's reasons, and rejected [In the Year of the World 3957. In the Year of the World 3963. In the Year of the World 3964.] the petition of Antigonus. About six years after, Antigonus being assisted with troops by his Father-in-law, Ptolemy the Son of Mennæus, made an irruption into Judæa, but was repulsed with loss by Herod the Son of Antipater, who at that time was only a private person[5].

The year following, Antigonus having promised to give the Parthians a thousand talents of Silver, and five hundred Women, upon condition that they would establish him in the Kingdom of Judæa, in the room of his Uncle Hircanus, and put Herod and his relations to death; Pacorus the King of Parthia's Son entred Judæa, and advanced as far as Jerusalem. Herod and his Brother Phasael, after a vigorous resistance, retired to the Temple, and were besieged by an army consisting of Parthians and Jews in the interest of Antigonus, who had joined them. Hircanus and Phasael having imprudently relied upon the Parthians word, were seized on; Phasael killed himself; and Hircanus had his ears cut off, to prevent his ever exercising the High-Priesthood; the law excluding all those from this Office who had any such bodily defects. [Lev. xxi. 17, 18.] Herod was obliged to retire to Idumæa, with his relations. Thus Antigonus was established King of Judæa, and High-Priest, by the Parthians, who afterwards returned into their own Country, carrying the High-Priest Hircanus with them.

In the mean time Herod, being gone to Rome, left his Mother and his Wife with his Brother Joseph in the Castle of Massada, where they were besieged by Antigonus. But Herod, by the credit of Antony and Cæsar, having obtained the title of King of Judæa[6], Antigonus was declared by the Senate an enemy to the Commonwealth. [In the year 3965.] Herod returned speedily into Judæa, and with the succours he received from Ventidius and Silo, marched immediately to Massada, in order to deliver his relations, who were shut up in this castle; after this was effected, he laid siege to Jerusalem. But Silo, who had been corrupted by Antigonus, refused to continue the siege any longer; the Roman army went into winter quarters, and Antigonus himself received them into some of his Cities. Some time after, Herod going to reinforce Mark Antony, who was then employed in the siege of Samosata, was honourably received by him, and when the war was ended, was sent back into Judæa. Then Antony gave orders to Sosius, Governour of Syria and Cilicia, to assist Herod with all his forces against Antigonus.

[In the Year of the World 3966. before J. C. 34. before the vulgar Æra 38. In the Year of the World 3967. before J. C. 33. before the vulgar Æra 37.] He returned therefore into Judæa, and overcame Antigonus in a set battle; and if he had not been hindred from pursuing his victory by the rigour of the season, he might have taken Jerusalem, and finished the war. The year following Sosius having joined Herod with his troops, they marched together to besiege Antigonus in Jerusalem. The City endured the siege for five whole months[7], after which the lower City and the outward part of the Temple were taken. Antigonus and the Jews in his interest continued Masters of the upper City, and the inward parts of the Temple. Herod attacked those quarters of the City, which still held out for Antigonus, with so much vigour that at last he took them upon the first day of the year 4677, according to the Julian period. After this Antigonus seeing no more hope of safety, descended from the Tower where he was, and threw himself at Sosius's feet, who insulted him for his mean spirit, calling him Antigona, instead of Antigonus.[8] He ordered him to be put in chains, and guarded strictly. After he had pacified all things in Jerusalem, he departed from thence, carrying Antigonus with him to Antioch, where was Mark Antony; who designed to keep Antigonus for the ornament of his triumph, when he returned to Rome; but Herod fearing lest Antigonus might set forth too effectually his rights and pretensions to the Kingdom of Judæa, and might find protection from the Senate, so wrought upon Antony by great sums of money, as to prevail with him to put Antigonus to death. This unhappy Prince therefore had his head cut off at Antioch[9], in the year of the World 3967. before J. C. 33. before the vulgar Æra 37.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ibid. l. xiv. c. 11. & lib. 1. de Bello c. 6.
Antiq. l. xiv. c. 11.
Antiq. l. xiv. c. 13. & de Bello l. i. c. 7. & Dio l. xli.
Joseph. Antiq. l. xiv. c. 15. & l. i. de Bello, c. 8.
Antiq. l. xiv. c. 21. & l. i. de Bello, c. 10.
Antiq. l. xiv. c. 24, 25.
Ibid c. 26.
Ibid. c. 27.
Ibid. c. ult. & l. xx. c. 8. & l. i. de Bell. c. 13.

Anti-Libanus

ANTI-LIBANUS. Thus the Greeks called that chain of Mountains which lay to the East of Libanus, and which properly speaking formed together with Libanus but one ridge of Mountains, which extended from North to South, and afterwards from South to North, in the shape almost of an horse-shoe[1], for the space of about fourscore leagues. The Eastern part of these Mountains was called Antilibanus; and the Western part Libanus: the latter reached along the Mediterranean, from Sidon almost to Arada, or Symira. The Hebrew Text of Scripture never mentions Anti-libanus; but calls it always by the general name of Libanus. And the coins stampt at Laodicæa and Hierapolis have the name of the Cities of Libanus inscribed upon them, tho' they belong rather [Deut. i. 7. iii. 25. xi. 24. Josh. i. 4. ix. 1.] to Anti-libanus. The Septuagint, on the contrary, put Anti-libanus often in the room of Libanus. The valley which separates*Libanus* from Anti-libanus, is very fruitful. It was formerly, on the side of Syria, inclosed with a wall, whereof there are no footsteps to be seen at this day[2]. Strabo[3] says that the name of Cœle-Syria, or the hollow part of Syria, belongs principally to that valley which lies between Libanus and Antilibanus.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

See Plin. l v. c. 20. Ptolem. & Euseb. & Hieronym. in Libano & Anti-libano. Maundrel. in Itinerario. Reland. Palæstina. l. i. c. 48. p. 318. & seq.
Plin. l. v. c. 20.
Strabo, l. xvi.

Antilogia

ANTILOGIA, or Contradiction, Opposition. There are many seeming contradictions in the Scripture, which Interpreters and Commentators have endeavoured to reconcile. It is impossible that the Holy Spirit, which is the Author of the Scriptures, should contradict himself, or that there should be any real disagreement in what he delivers; but the little knowledge which we have of things divine and supernatural; our ignorance of the language, history and customs of the Jews; the loss of many ancient monuments; the condescension of God in being pleased to express himself often after a popular and human manner, whenever he speaks of his divine perfections and operations; all these things contribute to make the Text of Scripture obscure, and occasion that appearance of Antilogies and Contradictions, which are indeed but appearances, and relate all to our imperfect way of conceiving things. There is nothing but Truth in the Sacred Writings, tho' it be sometimes clearer or obscurer than at others[1].

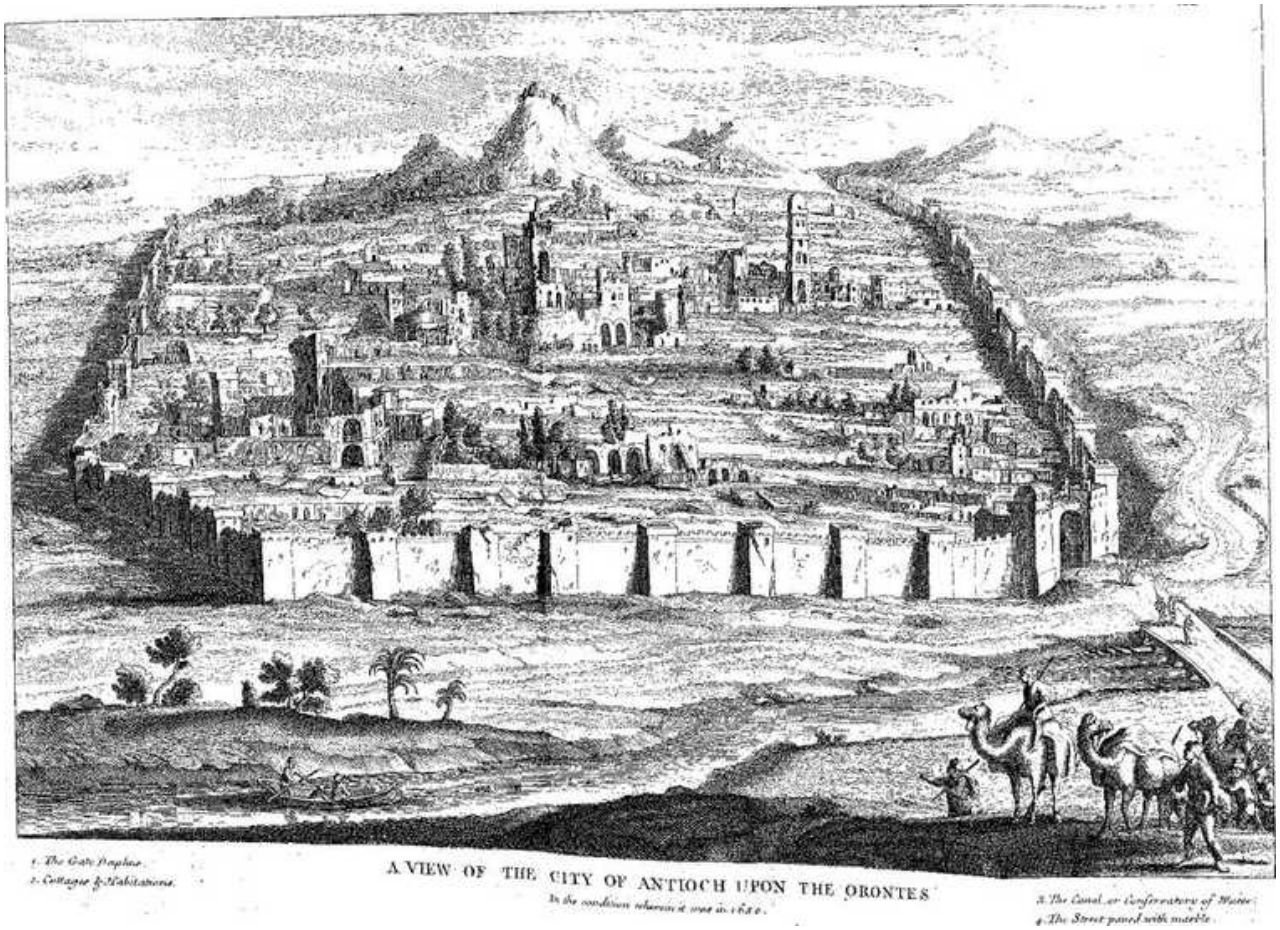
Cum in voluminibus Sacrarum literarum... aliqua velut a veritate diversum sonante sententiâ vel movetur lector, vel sollicitatur auditor, certa & inconcussa fide teneri debet unius atque ejusdem Spiritûs, & ejus præter quem nihil est veritatis, apertius alibi, paulò obscurius alibi sonare mysteria, &c.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Aug. de prædest. & gratia, c. 1.

Antimony

ANTIMONY. In Latin, Stibium; in Hebrew, Phuc; in Greek, Stimmi; is a mineral which comes near the nature of metals; it is found in Silver and Lead Mines. It is of a black colour, and filled with long glittering streaks like needles. It is mixed with several metals, and is generally used in melting them. Antimony is at this day very much employed in Physick; but before the twelfth age, it was of service only in the composition of Paint; and it is in this sense, and with relation to this use, that we shall [2 Kings ix. 30.] speak of it. The Scripture describes it to us as a sort of Paint, with which the Women blackened their Eyebrows. Jezabel understanding that Jehu was to enter Samaria, painted her Eyes with Antimony; or, according to the Hebrew, put her Eyes in Antimony. She rub'd them with it all over, or even dip'd them in the Paint, in order to speak to this Usurper, and shew herself before him.



[Isai. iii. 22.] As large black Eyes were thought the finest, they of both sexes, who were careful of their beauty, rub'd their Eyes, the Eye-lids, and round the Eyes, with a needle dip'd in a box of Paint made of Antimony, with a design of blackening them, of enlarging the Eye-lid, or rather wrinkling it, that the Eye might appear the larger. At this day the Women of Syria, Arabia and Babylonia[1], anoint and blacken themselves about the Eyes; and both Men and Women put black about their Eyes in the Desart, to preserve them from the heat of the Sun, and the piercing of its rays. M. Darvieux[2] tells us, that the Arabian Women border their Eyes with a black colour made of Tutie, which the Arabians call Rehel. They draw a line of this kind of blacking without the corner of their Eyes, to make them appear larger. Isaiah, in his enumeration of the several ornaments belonging to the Daughters of Sion, has not forgotten the needles which they made use of in painting their Eyes, and Eye-lids.

Ille Supercilium madidâ fuligine tinctum Obliquâ producit acu, pingitque trementes Attollens oculos[3].

[Jer. iv. 30. Ezek. xxiii. 40. Job xlii. 14.] Jeremiah, addressing himself to the Daughters of Sion, says, Though thou cloathest thy self with Crimson, though thou deckest thee with ornaments of gold, though thou rentest thy face with painting, (Antimony) thy lovers will despise thee. And Ezekiel, discovering the irregularities of the Jewish Nation, under the idea of a debauched Woman, says, that she bathed, perfumed herself, that she anointed her Eyes with Antimony; that she adorned herself, sat upon a fine bed, and before a well-covered table, &c. Job shews sufficiently how much Antimony was in esteem, by calling one of his Daughters a vessel of Antimony, or a box to put Paint in, cornu stibii. The Author of the Book of Enoch says, that before the Deluge the Angel Azleel taught young Women the art of painting themselves.

Tertullian[4] and St. Cyprian[5], have declaimed very warmly against this custom of painting their Eyes and Eyebrows, which was much practised in Africk, even by the Men, Inunge oculos tuos non stibio diaboli, sed collyrio Christi, says St. Cyprian. Pliny speaking of the Roman ladies, says, that they painted their very Eyes. Tanta est decoris affectatio, ut tingantur oculi quoque. Sardanapalus painted his Eyes and Eyebrows. Josephus reproaches the Seditious with the same, who assumed the name of Zealots, and made themselves Masters of the Temple of Jerusalem[6].

A VIEW OF THE CITY OF ANTIOCHUPON THE In the condition wherein it was in 1630.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Tavernier Voyage de Perse l. ii. c 7. Gabriel. Sonit. de morib. Orient. c. ii.
Darvieux Voyage au Camp du Grand Emir en 1664. Printed at Paris in 1717. p. 27, 28.
Juvenal. Satyr. 2.
Tertull. de cultu fæmin.
Cyprian. de lapsis & de disciplina & cultu virgin. & de opere & eleemosyn.
Joseph. l. v. c 9. de Bell. Jud.

Antioch

ANTIOCH. There are several Cities which are known to be of this name; but the Scripture speaks only of the greater Antioch, which was the Capital of Syria, and of another Antioch, of Pisidia, whereof we shall say something in the next Article. Antioch of Syria was formerly called Riblath, if we believe S. Jerom[1].

There is no mention of Antioch, excepting in the book of Maccabees, and in the New Testament; but of Riblath, or [Numb. xxxiv. 11. 2 Kings xxiii. 33. xxvii. 6, 20, 21. Jer.xxxix. 5. lii. 9, 10,26,27.] Riblatha, there is in the book of Numbers, in the books of Kings, and in Jeremiah. Theodoret says, that in his time there was a City of Riblah near Emesa in Syria, which is very contrary to S. Jerom's opinion. However this may be, 'tis certain Antioch was not known under this name till after the reign of Seleucus Nicanor, who built it, and called it Antioch, in consideration of his Father Antiochus, in the year 301. before the vulgar Æra of J. C. The Kings of Syria, Successors to Alexander the Great, resided generally at Antioch. There the Disciples of Jesus Christ were first called [Acts xi. 26.] Christians. This City, which was formerly so beautiful, so flourishing, and so illustrious, is scarce any thing at present but a heap of ruins. The walls are still standing; but within the City there is nothing but gardens, ruins, and some bad houses. The river Orontes runs near the City, on the outside of it. Antioch is the place where S. Peter had his first See. The Bishop of Antioch has the title of Patriarch; and at all times has had a great share in the affairs of the Eastern Church.

Antioch was almost square, had many gates, and part of it on the North side was raised upon an high mountain. It was adorned with galleries and fine fountains. Ammianus Marcellinus[2] says it was celebrated throughout the world, and that no other City exceeded it, either in fertility of soil, or richness of trade. The Emperors Vespasian, Titus, and others, granted very great privileges to it; but it has likewise been exposed to great revolutions. It was almost demolished by earthquakes, which happened in the fourth and fifth Centuries. [In the Years 340. 394. 396. 458. 526. and 528.] The Emperor Justinian repaired it in 529. and called it, as Evagrius says, Theopolis; that is to say, the City of God. Chosroes King of Persia took it in 548. massacred the inhabitants, and burnt it. Justinian had it rebuilt in 552, in a more beautiful and regular manner than it was before. Chosroes took it a second time in 574. in the reign of Justin, and destroyed its walls. In 588 it suffered again a dreadful earthquake, whereby above sixty thousand persons perished. It was once more rebuilt, and afterwards exposed to new calamities. The Saracens made themselves masters of it in 637, or 638. in the reign of Heraclius. Nicephorus Phocas retook it in 966. Cedrenus relates, that in 970. the Saracens, to the number of an hundred thousand, laid siege to it without being able to get possession of it; but that afterwards they subdued it, added new fortifications to it, and made it almost impregnable. The Christians who were of the Croisade with Godfrey of Bouillon, when he attempted the conquest of the Holy Land, besieged it in 1097. The siege was long and bloody; the Christians, by their indefatigable labours, and the help of a secret correspondence in the place, carried it on Thursday the 3d of June 1098. Lastly, this City being frequently attacked by the Saracens, was taken on the 29th of May 1268. under the Sultan of Egypt, who demolished it. It has ever since lost its reputation and magnificence, and groaned under the dominion of the Turk.

Antioch abounded with great men, and the Church there was a long time governed by illustrious Prelates; but it suffered much upon several occasions, sometimes being exposed to the violence of Hereticks, and at other times rent in pieces by deplorable Schisms.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Hieronym. in Ezek. xlvii. & in Isai. xiii. 1. & in Amos vi. 2.
Amm. Marcell. l. iv, & xxii.

Antioch of Pisidia

ANTIOCH of Pisidia, a City mentioned in the Acts, ch. xiii. 14. S. Paul and S. Barnabas preached in this City; and the Jews, who were concerned to see that some of the Gentiles had received the Gospel, raised a Sedition against Paul and Barnabas, and obliged them to leave the City. It is at present called Versategli, according to some; and as others say, Tahoya, or Sibi, or Antiochio.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Antiochis

ANTIOCHIS, the Concubine of Antiochus Epiphanes, who gave her the Cities of Tarsus and Mallo, that she might make what use she pleased of the revenues of them. This disposal of these places by the King was received by the inhabitants of them as a mark of insupportable contempt. They took arms against Antiochus Epiphanes, who was obliged to march in person, in order to reduce them to obedience. [2 Macc.iv. 30.] It was a custom with the Kings of Persia to give their Wives particular Cities, some for their table, some for their head-dress, some for their attire, and others for their girdles. Uxoribus attribuunt civitates hoc modo: Hæc civitas mulieri in redimiculum præbeat; hæc in collum; hæc in crines. Ita populos habent universos non solum conscios libidinis suæ, sed etiam administros, says Cicero[1].

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Tullius in Verrem, 5.

Antiochus (I)

I. ANTIOCHUS. There were many Kings Kings of this name in Syria, from the time of Seleucus Nicanor, who is reckoned the first King of Syria after Alexander the Great, and was Father to Antiochus Soter. This last was sirnamed Soter, or Saviour, for having hindred the invasion of the Gauls, who intended to invade Asia[1]. It happened probably upon this occasion, as is related in the second book of Maccabees; that the [2 Macc. viii. 20.] Galatians having marched to attack the Jews in Babylonia, whose army consisted only of eight thousand men, re-inforced with four thousand Macedonians, the eight thousand Jews fell upon the Galatians so briskly, that they killed an hundred and twenty thousand men. It was perhaps too on this occasion, that Antiochus Soter made the Jews of Asia free of all the Cities belonging to the Gentiles, and permitted them to live according to their own Laws[2]. The event of this Privilege is recorded under the year of the World 3743, before J. C. 257, before the vulgar Æra 261.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Appian. Syriac. p. 130.
Joseph. Antiq. l. xii. c. 3.

Antiochus Ii (II)

II. ANTIOCHUS II. Sirnamed Theos, God, the Son and Successor of Antiochus Soter, third King of Syria, married Berenice the daughter of Ptolemy Philadelphus King of Egypt. Laodice his first Wife seeing herself despis'd poisoned Antiochus, Berenice, and their Son, who was designed for their Successor in the Kingdom. After this Laodice procured Seleucus Callinicus, her Son by the same Antiochus to be acknowledged King of Syria. These events were foretold by Daniel in these terms. [Dan. ix. 6.] And in the end of years the King of Egypt, or of the South, and the King of Syria, or of the North, shall make an Alliance together, and the King's Daughter of the South shall come to the King of the North to make an Agreement: but she shall not retain the Power of them, neither shall he stand, nor his arm; but she shall be given up, and they that brought her, and he that begat her, and he that strengthened her in these times. See the Commentators on this place.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Antiochus the Great (III)

[In the Year of the World 3800, before J. C. 200, before the vulgar Æra 204.] III. ANTIOCHUS THE GREAT, is very much celebrated in the Greek and Roman Histories for the Wars carried on by him against the Egyptians and Romans. We shall not enlarge much on his Actions in these Wars; but shall confine ourselves to what more immediately relates to the History of the Jews. Antiochus was the Son of Seleucus Callinicus, and Brother to Seleucus Ceraunus. Antiochus succeeded his Brother Seleucus in the year of the World 3781. before J.C. 219. He made War with Ptolemy Philopator King of Egypt, but was defeated near Raphia, as is related in the third book of Maccabees, Chap. i. Thirteen years after, Ptolemy Philopator being dead, Antiochus resolved to make himself Master of Egypt; and immediately seized on Cœle-Syria, Phœnicia, and Judœa[1]. But Scopas, General of the King of Egypt's Troops, having entred Judœa, while Antiochus was taken up with the War against Attalus, re-took those places which Antiochus had usurped [In the Year of the World 3806, before J. C. 194, before the vulgar Æra 198. In the same year 3806.] from the King of Egypt[2]. Soon after this, Antiochus recovered what Scopas had retaken from him[3].

Upon this occasion happened that which Josephus relates, concerning this Prince's journey to Jerusalem. After the Victory which Antiochus obtained over Scopas near the Springs of Jordan, he made himself Master of the strong places in Cœle- Syria, and Samaria; and the Jews submitted freely to him, received him into their City and furnished his army plentifully with provisions, and what was necessary for his Elephants. As an acknowledgment of their affection, Antiochus made a Grant to them, which is mentioned by Josephus[4] of twenty thousand pieces of Silver to purchase Beasts for their Sacrifices, of one thousand four hundred and sixty measures of Meal, and three hundred seventy five measures of Salt, to be offered with the Sacrifices, and of so much Wood as was necessary to rebuild the Porches of the Lord's House. He declared his will, that the Senators, Priests, Scribes, and singing Men of the Temple should be exempt from the Tribute paid in the way of Capitationtax. Lastly, he gave the Jews liberty to live according to their own Laws all over his Dominions. He remitted the third part of their Tribute to indemnify them for the losses which they had sustained during the Wars; he forbad the Heathens from entring the Temple without being purified, and to bring into the city the flesh of Mules, Asses, and Horses to sell, under the penalty of paying three thousand Drachma's, as a Fine for the offence.

[In the Year of the World 3815, before J. C. 185.] In the year of the world 3812 he married his daughter Cleopatra with Ptolemy Epiphanes King of Egypt, and gave Cœle- Syria, Phœnicia, and Judœa for her Dowryi, upon condition that the Tributes arising from these three Provinces, should be equally divided between the two Sovereigns, that is to say, between the King of Syria, and the King of Egypt. Three years after he was overcome by the Romans, and obliged to make a cession of all that he possessed beyond Mount Taurus, and to give twenty hostages, among whom was his own Son Antiochus, sirnamed afterwards Epiphanes. The Romans moreover imposed a Tribute on him, consisting of twelvetwelve-thousand Euboic Talents[5], each of fourteen Roman pounds weight. To satisfy the charge which the Romans had put him to, Antiochus resolved to carry off the great treasures laid up in the Temple of Belus at Elymais[6]. But the people of this Country being informed of his design, surprized him, and destroyed him with all his army, in the year of the world 3817, before J. C. 183, before the vulgar Æra 187. He left two Sons, Seleucus Philopator, and Antiochus Epiphanes, who succeeded him, and both reigned one after the other.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Antiq. lib. xii. c. 3. Polyb. l. iii.

Antiq. lib. xii. c. 3. Polyb. l. xvi.

Tit. Liv. l. xxxiii.

Antiq. lib. xii. c. 3. Ibid.

Translators' note. Con- cerning the Euboic Talent and its Valuation, compared with the Attick and Babylonish Talents, See Dr. Prideaux's Connect. pt. II. p. 128. of the Ed. in Fol. See likewise Dr. Arbuthnot's Dissertations &c. Of the Tal- ents.

Vide Diodor. in Excerptis Valesi. p. 292, 298. Strabo. l. xvi. p. 744. Justin. l. xlii, &c.

Antiochus Epiphanes (IV)

IV. ANTIOCHUS EPIPHANES, was the Son of Antiochus the Great, whom we have been speaking of, and Brother to Seleucus Philopator King of Syria. Having continued as an hostage at Rome for fourteen years, his Brother Seleucus resolved to procure his return to Syria. It is thought that he intended to make use of him in the design which he had formed, of conquering Egypt, a Country that the Kings of Syria had for a long time looked on, as an object worthy of their ambition. However this might be, Seleucus sent his own Son Demetrius as an hostage to Rome, in the room of Antiochus; but while this last was upon his journey Seleucus [In the Year of the World 3829, before J. C. 171, before the vulgar Æra 175.] died, so that when he landed in Syria, the people received him as some propitious Deity, come to take upon him the Government, and oppose the Enterprizes of Ptolemy King of Egypt, who threatned to invade Syria. For this reason Antiochus had the Sirname given him of Epiphanes, that is, of one appearing as it were like a God, and manifesting himself to men.

This Prince thought betimes of possessing [In the Year of the World 3831, before J. C. 169. before the vulgar Æra 173. 2 Macc. iv. 21. seq.] himself of Egypt, which was then injoyed by Ptolemy Philometor his nephew, Son to his Sister Cleopatra. He sent Apollonius one of his Officers into Egypt, under pretence of being present at Ptolemy's Coronation; but in reality to observe how the great men of the Kingdom were disposed towards him, and to get intelligence, whether they were inclined to put the Government of Egypt into his hands, during the minority of the King his Nephew. But Apollonius found them no way disposed in favour of his Master, which obliged Antiochus to make war against Philometor. He came to Jerusalem in 3831, and was received there by Jason, to whom he had sold the High-Priesthood. He designed to attack Egypt, but returned without doing any thing.

The Ambition of the Jews, who sought after the High-Priesthood, and bought it of Antiochus, was the beginning of those Calamities which overwhelmed their Nation, under the reign of Antiochus Epiphanes. Jason procured himself to be established in this Dignity in the room of his brother Onias III. Menelaus having offered more, Jason was deprived, and he confirmed in his place. These Usurpers of the High-Priesthood, to gratify the Syrians, took up all the Manners of the Greeks, their Games and Exercises, and neglected the Worship of the Lord, and the Service of the Temple. In the mean time the War broke out between Antiochus Epiphanes, and Ptolemy Philometor. Antiochus entred Egypt in 3833, and reduced it almost all intirely to his obedience[1]. The next year he returned, and while he was taken up with the Siege of Alexandria, a false report was spread of his Death; and the inhabitants of Jerusalem shewing their joy on this occasion, Antiochus as he came back from Egypt entred this City by force, treated the Jews as Rebels, and commanded his Troops to put all they met with to the sword. Fourscore thousand of them were killed in three days time, forty thousand were made captives, and as many sold[2]. He entred into the Holy of Holies in the Temple conducted by the pretended High-Priest Menelaus, took and carried off the most precious vessels of this holy place, to the value of eighteen hundred talents.

[2 Macc. v. 24, 25. 2 Macc. v. 29.] In 3835 Antiochus made a third Expedition against Egypt, werein he subdued it intirely[3]. The year following he sent Apollonius into Judæa, with an army of two and twenty thousand men, and gave him orders to kill all those who were of full age, and to sell the women and young men. Apollonius executed these Orders but too punctually. It was upon this occasion that Judas Maccabæus retired into the wilderness with his Father and his Brethren. But these misfortunes were no more than preludes to those which they were afterwards to suffer. Antiochus apprehended, that the Jews would never be constant in their obedience to him, unless he oblig'd them to change their Religion, and embrace the ceremonies and worship of the Greeks. He commanded therefore an Edict to be published, injoining them to conform themselves to the laws of other Nations, and forbidding them to offer their usual Sacrifices in the Temple, and to celebrate their Festivals and Sabbath. Many corrupt Jews complied with these Orders, but others opposed them. Mattathias and his Sons retired to the mountains: Old Eleazar and the seven Bre thren, Maccabees, suffered death with great [2 Macc. vii.] courage at Antioch. The Statue of Jupiter Olympias was placed upon the Altar of the Temple, and the abomination of desolation was seen in the House of God.

Mattathias being dead, Judas Maccabæus put himself at the head of those Jews, who continued faithful to the Lord. He made war against the Generals, whom King Antiochus sent into Judæa, with the success which we shall see in another place: The King being informed of Judas's valour, and of the resistance of the Jews, sent new forces against them; and observing his treasures to be exhausted, resolved to go into [1 Macc. iii. 27.] Persia, there to levy the Tributes due from the people, and gather large sums of money, which he was to pay the Romans. He understood that there was a very great mass of riches in the Temple of Elymais, and he determined to carry it off with him. But the [Ch. v. 1, 2, 3, &c and 2 Macc. ix. 1, 2, 3.] inhabitants of the Country made so vigorous a resistance, that he was forced to retreat towards Babylonia. When he was come to Ecbatana, he received news of Nicanor's and Timotheus's defeat; and that Judas Maccabæus had retaken the Temple of Jerusalem, and restored the worship of the Lord, and Sacrifices.

Upon this intelligence the King, transported with indignation, commanded the person who drove his chariot to make the horses put on, and hasten his journey, threatning to make Jerusalem a grave for the Jews. But the Divine Vengeance soon overtook him; for he fell from his chariot and bruised all his limbs. He was tormented with such a pain in his bowels, as would allow him no rest. Grief and vexation at so much ill success concurring with his disease, reduced him speedily to death's door. In this condition he wrote to the Jews, in a very submissive manner, made them large promises, and engaged even to turn Jew, if God restored him to his health. He recommended his Son Antiochus to them very earnestly, who was to succeed him, and intreated them to favour him, and to continue faithful to him. He died overwhelmed with pain and grief, in the mountains of Paratacene, in the little town of Tabes, in the year of the World 3840. before J. C. 160. before the vulgar Æra 164.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Vide 2 Macc. v. 3, 4, 5, &c. Liber de Maccab. c. 4.

The construction of the Greek intimates, that eighty thousand was the Sum total of those who were punished upon this occasion. Ὀκτὼ μυριάδες κατεφθάρησαν· τέσσαρες μὲν ἐν χειρῶν νομαῖς. Ὀυκ ἧττον δὲ τῶν ἐσφραγμένων ἐπράθησαν.

Polyb. Legation. Diodor. in Excerptis Valesii.

Antiochus Eupator (V)

V. ANTIOCHUS EUPATOR, Son of Antiochus Epiphanes, was but nine years old, when Epiphanes his Father died, and left him the Kingdom of Syria. Lysias, who governed the Kingdom in the name of this young Prince, led an Army against Judæa, consisting of an hundred thousand foot, twenty thousand horse, and thirty elephants. [2 Macc. xiii. & 1 Macc. vi.] He laid siege to, and took, the fortress of Bethsura; from thence he marched against Jerusalem, notwithstanding the valour and resistance of the Maccabees. The City was ready to fall into the Enemy's hands, when Lysias received news that Philip, whom King Antiochus Epiphanes, a little before his death, had trusted with the Regency of the Kingdom, during the minority of young Eupator his Son; that Philip, I say, was come to Antioch, to take the government upon him, according to the disposition of the late King, whereupon he proposed an an accommodation to the Jews, that he might return speedily to Antioch, and oppose the undertakings of Philip. Thus having made peace, he immediately returned with the young King and his Army into Syria.

In the mean time Demetrius Soter, Son of Seleucus Philopator, Nephew of Antiochus Epiphanes, to whom by right of birth the Kingdom belonged, (for Antiochus Epiphanes enjoyed it by usurpation only from his Nephew;) Demetrius, I say, having [1 Macc. vii. 2 Macc. xiii.] made his escape from Rome, where he was an Hostage, came into Syria, where finding the people disposed for a revolt, he put himself at the head of an Army, and marched directly to Antioch, against Antiochus and Lysias. But the inhabitants did not wait till he besieged it, they opened the gates, and delivered to him Lysias, and the young King Antiochus Eupator, who were put to death by his orders, without suffering them to appear before him. Antiochus Eupator reigned but two years. He ascended the Throne of Syria in the year of the World 3840, and died in 3842. before J. C. 158. before the vulgar Æra 162.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Antiochus Theos (VI)

[1 Macc. xi. 39, 40, &c. In the year of the World 3859, before J. C. 141, before the vulgar Æra 145.] VI. ANTIOCHUS THEOS, or the God, Son of Alexander Balas, King of Syria, was brought up by an Arabian Prince called Elmalchuel. Demetrius Nicanor King of Syria having made himself odious to his Troops, one Diodotus, otherwise called Tryphon, came to Zabdiel, and desired him to trust him with young Antiochus, promising to place him on the Throne of Syria, which was possessed by Demetrius Nicanor. Zabdiel at first was unwilling to consent, fearing lest Diodotus should destroy this young Prince, after he had made use of him to divest Nicanor of the Kingdom. But at last he trusted him with Antiochus. Tryphon carried him into Syria, and put the Crown upon his head. The Troops which Demetrius had dismissed, came and surrendred themselves to him; and having formed a powerful Army he marched against Demetrius; who was overcome, and forced to retreat to Seleucia. Tryphon seized his Elephants, and made himself Master of Antioch.

Antiochus Theos, to strengthen himself in his new acquisition, sent letters to Jonathan nathan Maccabæus, High Priest and Prince of the Jews, whereby he confirmed him in possession of the High Priesthood, granted him four Toparchies, or four considerable places in Judæa, received him into the number of his friends, sent him vessels of gold, permitted him to use a gold cup, to wear purple, and a golden buckle; and gave his Brother Simon Maccabæus the general command of all the Troops upon the coast of the Mediterranean, from Tyre as far as the frontiers of Egypt. Jonathan, engaged by so many favours, declared resolutely against Demetrius for Antiochus, or rather for Tryphon, who reigned under the name of this young Prince; and on many occasions attacked Demetrius's Generals, who were still possessed of several [1 Macc. xi. 63, & seq. xii. 24, 34.] places beyond Jordan, and in Galilee.

Tryphon seeing young Antiochus peaceable possessor of the Kingdom of Syria, resolved to get rid of him, and himself [In the year of the World 3861. before J. C. 139. before the vulgar Æra 143.] usurp the Crown. He thought it was necessary in the first place to secure Jonathan Maccabæus, who was one of the most powerful supports of Antiochus's Throne. He came therefore with Troops into Judæa, invited Jonathan to Ptolemais, and there, upon frivolous pretences, made him a prisoner. Simon, Jonathan's Brother, headed the Troops of Judæa, and opposed the designs of Tryphon, who intended to make himself Master of Jerusalem. Tryphon, disappointed of his hopes, put Jonathan to [1 Macc. xiii. 2 Macc. xiv.] death at Bassa, or Bascama, and returned into Syria, where, without delay, he executed the design he had conceived, of killing Antiochus. He corrupted the Physicians, who having published that the young Prince was tormented with the stone, murdered him, by cutting him without any necessity. Thus Tryphon was left sole Master of the Kingdom of Syria, in the year of the World 3861. before J. C. 139. before the vulgar Æra 143.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Antiochus Sidetes (VII)

VII. ANTIOCHUS SIDETES, or Soter, or Eusebes; that is to say, the Pious; (for he is mentioned by the Ancients under these different names;) was Son of Demetrius Soter, and Brother to Demetrius Nicanor. Tryphon, the Usurper of the Kingdom of Syria, having rendred himself odious to his Troops, his Soldiers deserted him, and offered their services to Cleopatra [In the Year of the World 3864, before J. C. 136, before the vulgar Æra 140.] the Wife of Demetrius Nicanor, who lived in the City of Seleucia, where she was shut up with her Children, while her Husband Demetrius was a prisoner in Persia, where he had married Rodegune the Daughter of Arsaces King of Persia °. Cleopatra therefore sent to Antiochus Sidetes her Brotherin-law, and offered him the Crown of Syria, if he would take her to Wife. *An*tiochus consented. This Prince was then at Cnidus, where his Father Demetrius Soter had placed him with one of his friends. He came into Syria, and wrote to Simon Maccabæus, to engage him in his party against [1 Macc. xv. 1, 2, 3, & seq.] Tryphon. He confirmed the privileges and favours which the Kings of Syria his predecessors had granted him, permitted him to coin money with his own stamp, declared Jerusalem and the Temple exempt from all royal Jurisdiction, and promised to add many other favours to these, as soon as he should become peaceable possessor of the Kingdom, which had belonged to his Ancestors.

Antiochus Sidetes being come therefore into Syria, in the year of the World 3865. married his Sister-in-law Cleopatra. Tryphon's Troops resorted to him in crouds, and surrendred themselves to him; and Tryphon seeing himself abandoned, retired to Dora in Phœnicia, whither Antiochus pursued him with an Army by land, consisting of an hundred and twenty thousand foot, and eight hundred horse, and with a powerful fleet by sea. Simon Maccabæus sent him two thousand chosen men, but [Ver. 25, & seq.] Antiochus would not receive them, and revoked all the promises he had made him. He sent Athenobius to Jerusalem, to oblige Simon to restore to him Gazara and Joppa, together with the citadel of Jerusalem; and to demand of him five hundred talents, as so much tribute for the places which he held out of Judæa; and five hundred talents more in the way of reparation for injuries which the King had suffered, and as tribute-money for his own Cities; threatning to make war upon him if he did not comply with these demands. Simon shewed Athenobius all the lustre of his wealth and power, told him he had no place in his possession which belonged to Antiochus; and as to Gazara and Joppa, which were Cities that had done infinite damage to his people, he was willing to give the King the sum of an hundred talents, provided the property of them might be continued to him.

Athenobius returned with great indignation to Antiochus, who was extremely offended at Simon's answer. In the mean time Tryphon having stollen privately from Dora, imbarked in a vessel and fled. Antiochus immediately pursued him, and sent Cendebeus with Troops into the maritime parts of Palestine, with orders to rebuild Cedron, and to fight the Jews. John Hircanus the Son of Simon Maccabæus, who was at Gaza, gave notice to his Father of Cendebeus's coming. Simon furnished his Sons John Hircanus and Judas with Troops, and sent them against Cendebeus,[1] debeus, whom they routed in the plain, and pursued as far as Azotus.

Antiochus never left Tryphon till he had forced him to dispatch himself[2], in the year of the World 3856, after five or six years reign. After this he thought of nothing but reducing those Cities to his obedience, which in the beginning of his brother's reign had shaken off their subjection[3]. [In the Year of the World 3869. before J. C. 131. before the Vulg. Æra 135. 1 Macc. xvi. 11. xvii. 18, &c.] Some years after, Simon Maccabæus, Prince and High Priest of the Jews, having been treacherously killed by Ptolemy his Son-in-law, in the Castle of Docus near Jericho, the Murderer sent immediately to Antiochus Sidetes, to demand Troops of him, that he might recover for him the Country and Cities belonging to the Jews. Antiochus came thither in person with an Army, and laid siege to Jerusalem[4]. John Hircanus defended it with much vigour, and the siege lasted a long time. The King divided his Army into seven parts, that he might possess all the avenues to the City. The Feast of Tabernacles being to be celebrated, the Jews desired Antiochus to allow them a truce of seven days. This was granted them; and moreover, this Prince sent them Bulls with gilded horns, and vessels of gold and silver filled with incense, to be offered in their Temple. He ordered likewise such provisions to be given to the Jewish Soldiers, as they wanted. This courtesy of the King so won upon the hearts of the Jews, that they sent Ambassadors to treat with him of peace, and to desire that they might be permitted to live according to their own Laws.

Antiochus required of them to give up their arms, to demolish the City walls, to pay tribute for Joppa, and the other Cities they possessed out of Judæa; and lastly, to receive a garrison into their City. The besieged consented to these conditions, the last only excepted; for they could not resolve with themselves to see strangers in their Capital. They rather chose to give the King Hostages, and five hundred talents of silver. The King therefore entred the City, beat down the breast-work which was above the walls, and went back into Syria, in the year of the World 3870. before J. C. 130. before the vulgar Æra 134.

Three years after, Antiochus marched against the Persians[5], or Parthians, demanding the liberty of his Brother Demetrius Nicanor, or Nicator, who had been made prisoner of war long before, by Arsaces; and was detained by the King of Persia against his inclination, because he intended to make use of him upon occasion, in stirring up a war against Antiochus. Antiochus therefore thought it proper to prevent him. He had an Army of fourscore, or according to Orosius[6], of an hundred thousand men. Their equipage was so numerous and magnificent, that according to the computation of some there were two hundred thousand servants, or as others will have it, three hundred thousand, the greatest part whereof were Cooks, Pastry-cooks, and Comedians. King Antiochus entertained his Officers in his Camp with as much delicacy and profuseness as he could have done in the midst of his Capital. His Army imitated the extravagancy of their Prince. The generality of the soldiers had nails of gold under their shoes, made use of plate, and had their tents adorned with works of embroidery. As soon as he appeared upon the frontiers of Persia, several Eastern Kings came and surrendred themselves to him, detesting the pride and avarice of the Persians. Antiochus defeated his Enemies in three engagements, and made himself Master of Babylon. John Hircanus, High Priest of the Jews, accompanied him in these expeditions v; and it is believed that he had from hence the name of Hircanus w, or Hircanion, which he probably acquired by some gallant action performed by him in this war.

As Antiochus's Army was too numerous to continue in any one place, he was obliged to divide it, in order to put it into winter-quarters. These troops behaved themselves with so much insolence that they alienated the minds of all men. The Cities privately surrendred to the Persians, and all resolved on one day to attack each the particular garrison lodged in it; that so the troops which were separated might not be able to assist one another. Antiochus, who was at Babylon, had intelligence of this design; and endeavoured to succour his people with the few soldiers whom he had about him. Phraates King of Persia attacked him in the way, whom he fought with very great bravery. But at last being deserted by his own forces, he was overpowered and killed by the Persians, or Parthians, according to the generality of Historians[7]; or according to others killed himself[8]; or as Ælian has it, threw himself headlong from a precipice z. This happened in the year of the World 3874. before J. C. 126. before the vulgar Æra 130. Demetrius Nicanor, or Nicator, whom the King of Parthia had sent into Syria to make a diversion, reascended the Throne after the death of Sidetes.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Translators' note. Joseph. Antiq. l. xiii. c. 12.
Strabo, l. xiv. p. 668. Vide & Joseph. Antiq. l. xiii. c. 12. & Appian. Syriac. p. 132.
Justin, l. xxxvi. c. 1.
Joseph. Antiq. l. xvi. c. 13.
Justin l. xxxviii. c. 9, & 10. Livius l. lix. Appian Syriac. p. 132.
Orosius, l. v. c. 10. v Nicolaus Damasc. apud Joseph. l. xiii. Antiq. c. 16. w Euseb. in Chronic. Sever. Sulpit. l. ii. hist.
Jul. Obsequens lib. de prodigiis. Justin l. xxxviii, & xxxix. Joseph. l. xiii. c. 16. Euseb. in Chronic. Orof. l. v. c. 10.
Appian. Syriac. p. 132. z Ælian. l. x. c. 34. de animalib.

Antiochus Gryphus (VIII)

VIII. ANTIOCHUS GRYPHUS, or Philometor, the Son of Demetrius Nicanor and Cleopatra, revenged the Death of his Father upon Alexander Zebina, who had usurped the Kingdom of Syria. He attacked, defeated him, and compell'd him to shut himself up in Antioch; from whence he was forced very soon by the multitude of People which flocked together, upon notice that he intended to carry off a golden Statue of Jupiter, which was very massy. At Sea he was overtaken with a violent Storm, deserted by his own People, taken by Pyrates, and carried to Antiochus Gryphus, by whose direction he was put to death[1]. Josephus[2] says, that Zebina was killed in the Battle which he fought against Gryphus; and Porphyry relates[3], that he poisoned himself, not being able to survive the loss of his Army. Cleopatra, Gryphus's Mother, envying the happy success of her Son, upon a certain day as he came from performing some Exercise, presented him with a cup of poisoned Liquor, which Gryphus, who had been informed of this Design, refused to drink, and forced Cleopatra to make a proof of it upon herself; and upon her doing so, she died instantlyh. After this Gryphus enjoyed the Kingdom peaceably for eight

[From the year of the World 3882 to 3890.] At the expiration of this time, as he was preparing to make War against the Jews[4], he understood that Antiochus of Cyzicus, his Brother by the Mother's side, the Son of Cleopatra and Antiochus Sidetes, was disposing things in order to march against him. Gryphus prevented him, attacked, defeated, and obliged him, to fly. After this he went and laid siege to Antioch, where Cleopatra, Wife to Antiochus of Cyzicus had shut herself up. The City being taken, Cleopatra retired for Sanctuary to a Temple, thinking to secure herself thereby from the violence and outrage of the Conqueror. But Tryphena her Sister, the Wife of Gryphus, whether her Husband would or no, sent Soldiers into the Temple, who killed Cleopatra at the feet of the Goddess, whom she held within her arms[5].

The year following the two Brothers Antiochus Gryphus, and Antiochus of Cyzicus, coming to an Ingagement, Gryphus lost the Battle, and Tryphena his Wife falling into the hands of Antiochus of Cyzicus, was by him put to death, to revenge the Murder of Cleopatra, which had been executed by Tryphena's Order. By this Victory Antiochus of Cyzicus became Master of the Kingdom of Syria; and Gryphus his Brother retired to Aspendus, where he continued till the next year, when he returned into Syria, and divided the Kingdom with his Brother. Gryphus remained Master of Syria, and Antiochus of Cyzicus possessed Cœle-Syria[6]. While the two Brothers made War against one another, and mutually weakened each other, John Hircanus fortified himself in Judæa, and every day made new Progresses[7]. Antiochus Gryphus, after he had lived five and forty years, and reigned eleven years alone, and fifteen with his Brother Antiochus of Cyzicus, was put to death by Heraclion's means[8], who drew him into an Ambuscade in the year of the World 3907. Gryphus left five Sons, 1. Seleucus who succeeded him; 2 and 3. Antiochus and Philip, who were Twins; 4. Demetrias Eucærus; 5. Antiochus sirnamed Dionysius.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Justin. l. xxxix. c. 2.
Joseph. lib. xiii. c. 13.
Porphyr. in Græcis. Euseb. Scaliger. p. 227.
Joseph. Antiq. l. xiii. c. 17.
Justin l. xxxix. c. 3.
Vide Justin. l. xxxix. Appian. Syriac. p. 132. Porphyr. in Græc. Euseb. p. 227.
Joseph. Antiq. l. xiii. c. 17.
Joseph. Widem. & Euseb. Græc. p. 227.

Antiochus of Cyzicus (IX)

IX. ANTIOCHUS OF CYZICUS, Brother by the Mother to Antiochus Gryphus, and the Son of Cleopatra and Antiochus Sidetes his Uncle, was brought up at Cyzicus by his Mother Cleopatra, who was apprehensive, lest Demetrius Nicanor, her first Husband, should kill him. Hence he is called the Cyzicenian, or Antiochus of Cyzicus. Cyzicus is a City in Asia Minor upon the Propontis. Antiochus Gryphus having undertaken to poison Antiochus of Cyzicus his Brother, the latter levied troops, and prevented the effects of Gryphus's ill Will to him[1]. We have seen in the preceding Article, how Gryphus after he had won the first Battle, was defeated in a second, and how the two Brothers were reconciled, so that Syria continued in the possession of Gryphus, and the Cyzicenian had Cœle-Syria. This last seeing himself in a state of Tranquillity, gave himself up to Debauchery of all kinds, to the Pleasures of Eating and Drinking, Hunting, Shews, Buffoonries, and the making of Machines and Clockworks, which by the help of certain threads and wheels performed very surprizing Movements[2].

[In the Year of the World 3895. before J. C. 105. before the vulg. Æra 109.] In the mean while John Hircanus, Prince and High Priest of the Jews, besieged Samaria; and the City being reduced by Famine to Extremities, the Samaritans invited Antiochus of Cyzicus to their Assistance. This Prince came speedily to their Succour, but was overcome by Antigonus and Aristobulus the Sons of John Hircanus, who commanded the Siege, and pursued him as far as Scythopolis. After which they returned to the Siege of Samaria, and blocked up the City so close, that the inhabitants were once more obliged to have recourse to Antiochus of Cyzicus[3]. This Prince having received six thousand Men from Ptolemy Lathyrus, the Son of Cleo[4] patra Queen of Egypt, laid waste the lands belonging to the Jews, imagining that he should hereby oblige Hircanus to raise the Siege of Samaria. But his Troops were at last dispersed, and Samaria taken by Storm, [In the Year of the World 3895. before J.C 105. before the vulg. Æra 109.] and razed by Hircanus[5]. Antiochus was conquered and put to death by Seleucus the Son of Antiochus Gryphus[6], in the year of the World 3910, before J.C. 90, before the vulgar Æra 94. Justin says, that Antiochus of Cyzicus died in Battle; Josephus, that he was taken and executed by Seleucus; Porphyry in Eusebius, that he killed himself, being upon the point of falling into his Enemy's hands. He reigned eighteen years. He left a Son named Antiochus, and firnamed the Pious. But as there is no mention made of him in Scripture, and the Story of him has no relation to the History of the Jews, we shall say no more of him in this place.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Justin. l. xxxix. c. 3.
Diodor. Sicul. in Excerpt. Valesii p. 385.
Joseph. Antiq. l. xiii. c. 18.
Justin. l. xxxix. Appian. Syriac. p. 132.
Joseph. ibidem.
Joseph. Antiq. l. xiii. c. 21. p. 460. Porphyr. apud Euseb. Græc. p. 227. Justin. l. xl. Prolog.

Antiochus (X)

X. ANTIOCHUS, a Jew of Antioch, Son to the chief Jew of this City, accused his Father and the rest of the Jews in a full Assembly of the people, with a design of setting fire to the City. The people of Antioch hearing this Accusation, fell upon the Jews, who were then present, and killed a great Number of them; but Antiochus, who endeavoured not so much to procure their Destruction, as to oblige them to forsake their Religion, told the inhabitants of Antioch, that the way to distinguish those who were entred into this Conspiracy, from others that were innocent, was, to compel them to sacrifice after the manner of the Gentiles; and that all they who should refuse to comply, were guilty of the Crime they were accused of. Many perished upon this occasion, choosing to die rather than to sacrifice to Idols. Others apostatized and saved their lives by Sacrilege[1]. This happened about thirty five years after the Passion of Jesus Christ.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Vide Joseph. de Bello l. vii. c. 21. in Lat. p. 975. seu □□φ. θ. in Græc.

Antipas-Herod (I)

I. ANTIPAS-HEROD[1], or Herod Antipas, Son of Herod the Great, and one of his Wives call'd Cleopatra, a Native of Jerusalem. Herod the Great in his first Will declared him Successor to his Kingdom; but afterwards he changed his mind, and named Archelaus King of Judæa, giving to Antipas the Title only of Tetrarch of Galilee and Peræa. Archelaus the Son of Herod going to Rome, in order to persuade Augustus to confirm his Father's Will, Antipas went thither likewise, and the Emperor gave Archelaus one Moiety of what had been assigned him by Herod's will, with the quality of Ethnarch, promising to grant him the Title of King, as soon as he had shewn himself deserving of it by his Virtue. His Revenues amounted to six hundred Talents. As to Antipas, Augustus gave him Galilee and Peræa, which produced to him a Revenue of two hundred Talents. Lastly, he gave Philip, Herod's other Son, the Batanæa, Trachonitis, and Auranitis, and some other places, the income whereof came to an hundred Talents[2].

Antipas returning to Judæa, took a great deal of pains in adorning and fortifying the principal places of his Dominions. He gave the name of Julias to Bethzaida in honour of Julia, the Wife of Augustus; and Cinnereth he called Tiberias in honour of Tiberius. He married the Daughter of Aretas King of Arabia, whom he divorced about the year of J.C. 33, to marry his Sister-in-law Herodias, Wife to his Brother Philip, who was still living[3]. S. John [Matt. xiv. 3, 4. Mark i. 14. vi. 17, 18. Luke iii. 19, 20.] Baptist exclaiming continually against this Incest, was taken into custody by order of Antipas, and imprisoned in the Castle of Machærus. Josephus says, Antipas caused S. John to be laid hold of, because he drew too great a concourse of People after him, and that he was afraid lest he should make use of the Authority, which he had acquired over the minds and affections of the People, to induce them to revolt against him. But Josephus has taken the pretence for the true Cause. The Evangelists, who were better informed than he, since they were Eye-witnesses of what passed, and were acquainted in a particular manner with S. John and his Disciples, assure us, that the true Reason of imprisoning S. John was the Aversion which Herod and Herodias had conceived against him, on the score of that Liberty he used in censuring their scandalous Marriage.

[Matt. xiv. 5, 6, &c.] The Virtue and Holiness of St. John were such, that even Herod feared and respected him, and did many things out of the regard he had for him. But his Passion for Herodias had prevailed with him to kill him, had he not been restrained by his apprehensions of the People, who esteemed John-Baptist as a Prophet. One day while the King was celebrating the Festival of his Birth with the principal Persons of his Court, the Daughter of Herodias danced before him, and pleased him so well, that he promised with an Oath to give her whatever she should ask of him. She went to her Mother to learn of her what it might be proper for her to desire upon this occasion, and Herodias's Advice to her was, to ask nothing but the Head of John the Baptist. At her return therefore to the Hall, she addressed herself to the King and said, Give me now immediately to have the Title of King and High Priest, and Hircanus to continue quietly at home, and enjoy his fortune with tranquillity[4]. Antipater fearing the power and enterprizing humour of Aristobulus, and besides having been for a long time secretly his enemy, was always animating the most powerful of the Jews against him, and solliciting Hircanus to recover those privileges which Aristobulus had unjustly robb'd him of. He represented to him, that his life was not safe at Jerusalem, and offer'd to provide a secure retreat for him in Arabia, with Aretas Antipater's good friend[5].

When he was arrived there, Antipater press'd Aretas to re-establish him in his dominions, and Hircanus promised, that if he did, he would restore twelve Cities to him, which his Father Alexander Jan-næus had taken from the Arabians. Aretas hereupon marched against Aristobulus, and overcame him. Aristobulus, forsaken by the greatest part of his Troops, retired to Jerusalem and the Temple, where he was for some time besieged by Aretas. In the mean while Pompey having sent Scaurus into Syria, and coming thither himself soon after in person, Hircanus and Aristobulus both went to Damascus, to justify their conduct to him. Antipater on all occasions strongly supported the party of Hircanus; and Pompey, without declaring openly either for one side or the other, dismissed them, telling them that he should be going very soon into their Country, and that there he would put an end to their dispute. He came accordingly, took Jerusalem, and carried Aristobulus and his Children prisoners to Rome. But Alexander the Son of Aristobulus having escaped out of the hands of those who had the charge of him, returned into Judæa, and had raised new troubles there, if Antipater, with the Roman Soldiers that were in the Province, had not opposed him[6].

During the war which Julius Cæsar carried on in Egypt[7], Antipater did him very great services, by accompanying Mithridates of Pergamus, who brought him succours from Syria. He engaged the Jews of Egypt to declare for him, and to give him all the assistance they were able; and in the battle, which was fought in the Delta[8], Antipater commanded the left wing, and came so seasonably to the aid of Mithridates, who had the command of the right wing, that without him the battle had been lost. Cæsar was so obliged to Antipater for the important service which he had done him upon this occasion, that he gave Hircanus the office of High Priest, offered Antipater what government he pleased, and gave him the administration of Judæa. He permitted likewise Hircanus, at the request of Antipater, to rebuild the walls of Jerusalem, and appointed a rescript to be drawn up for this purpose in terms which were very much to the honour of Hircanus and the Jewish Nation.

As soon as Antipater returned to Jerusalem, he took care to have the City walls rebuilt[9], which had been demolished by Pompey's orders, and procured the government of Jerusalem, and the Country round about, for his eldest Son Phasael; and the government of Galilee for his other Son Herod, who was not then above fifteen years of age. After the death of Julius Cæsar, Cassius, one of his murderers, came into Judæa, and exacted great sums of money of the Provinces. Antipater, like an expert Politician, so managed matters that his Sons Herod and Phasael were some of the most diligent to supply what was required of them: he contributed an hundred talents out of his own purse, to compleat the sum which was demanded; whereby he very much gained the affections of the Romans[10] But Malichus, who was employed in levying this Tax, conceived so much jealousy against Antipater, that he resolved to put him to death. Antipater distrusted him, and got some Troops together to enable him to defend himself. Malichus affirmed with many oaths, that he had formed no ill design against Antipater, and pretended to be reconciled with him, by the mediation of Marcus Governour of Syria.

But this was all done only the better to conceal the snares which he was laying for him. He corrupted Hircanus's Cup-bearer, and engaged him to give Antipater a [In the Year of the World 3961. before J.C. 39. before the vulgar Æra 43.] cup of poison, while they were together at this Prince's table. As soon as Antipater was dead, Malichus took possession of the Government of Jerusalem, and denied strongly that he was any way concerned in procuring his death. Herod and Phasael made as if they believed him; but in a little time after he was killed by their directions near Tyre, to revenge the murder of their Father[11].

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

The Name of Antipas is the same with that of Antipater, which signifies equal to the Father, or comparable to the Father. In my opinion the Hebrew Name answerable to Antipater is Abihu ,אביהוhe is my Father, he shall be instead of a Father to me.

See Joseph. Antiq. l. xvii. c. 13.

Joseph. Antiq. l. xviii. c. 2.

Joseph. Antiq. l. xiv. c. 1.

Ibid. c. 2.

Ibid. c. 10.

Ibid. c. 14.

Ibid. c. 15.

Ibid. c. 16, 17.

Ibid. c. 18, 19.

Ibid. c. 20.

Antipater (III)

III. ANTIPATER, Son of Herod the Great, and Grandson of the Antipater we have been speaking of, was born of Doris, Herod's first Wife. His Father made him marry the Daughter of Antigonus, who had been beheaded at Antioch by Antony's order. As Antipater's Mother was not a Woman of quality, and he was born while Herod was no more than a private Gentleman, this Prince kept him and his Mother for some time at a distance from the Court; and never determined to recall him, till it appeared that Alexander and and Aristobulus, his two Sons by Mariamne, who was of the Asmonæan race, talked in such a manner as raised some distrust in him of their submission to his will; and till they had been rendred suspected to him by ill reports, which were carried to him, of their conduct and conversation[1].

Then he began to treat Antipater with a great deal of distinction, and encouraged him to hope that he might declare him his Successor to the Kingdom. When he visited Agrippa, who was returning to Rome, he carried Antipater with him, recommended him to Agrippa, and desired him to present him to Augustus, and procure for him the honour of this Emperor's good graces. As soon as Antipater saw the preference thus given to him before his Brothers, he thought of nothing so much as their destruction, that so he might have no competitors who might dispute the Crown with him. He accused them, tho' he was absent; and Herod, who already, upon other accounts, was not very well disposed towards them, carried them to Rome, in order to accuse them before Augustus. But the Emperor reconciled them with their Father, and Herod brought them back from Rome, and Antipater with them. At his return, he [In the Year of the World 3993, before J. C. 7. before the vulgar Æra 11.] called the people together in the Temple, and then declared to them that his Sons should reign after him in their order, first Antipater, then the two Brothers Alexander and Aristobulus[2].

Antipater's ambition soon filled Herod's palace with apprehensions and troubles, by the calumnies which he raised against his Brothers. Herod, who had placed all his confidence in him, heard his accusations without any distrust, because Antipater feigned often to take their part, and defend them in the King's presence, against those who said any thing to their disadvantage s. At last he accomplished their destruction, and they were strangled at Sebaste, by Herod's order[3], in the year of the World 3999. a year before the birth of our Saviour. When this was done, the Wretch had only one thing more to do, which was to procure his Father's death, that he might be the sooner in possession of the Kingdom. He formed a conspiracy therefore against him, with his Uncle Pheroras, Herod's Brother v. Some concerned in the plot were discovered and punished. The King forbad Antipater to have any correspondence with Pheroras; and Antipater, to remove any suspicion which might be entertained against his own person, prevailed with his friends at Rome to demand him, who accordingly wrote to Herod that he must immediately send his Son to the Emperor.

Antipater therefore departed from Jerusalem with great presents, and Herod's will, wherein he was declared first Successor to his Father, in case of his mortality; and next to him was named Herod born of Mariamne, Daughter to the High Priest Simon. During Antipater's absence, Herod discover'd in an unquestionable manner, that he had conspired against his life, and had procured poison to dispatch him. Bathyllus, Antipater's slave, whom he had made free, coming from Rome, confessed that he had brought poison to Doris and Pheroras, which the King was to take, in order effectually to destroy him; if the first dose which they were to give him, and as he supposed, they had given him, did not operate, as they expected. Herod no longer doubting his Son's wickedness, wrote to him, without revealing any thing he knew to him, desiring he would return with all speed possible, lest something should happen in his absence, that might give him disturbance. Antipater returned into Judæa, without learning from any one what had passed, tho' there had been seven months between the discovery of the treason, and his return to Palestine w.

When he arrived at Cæsarea, he was surprized to find that no one came to meet him, or shewed any forwardness to do him honour. At Jerusalem, as soon as he came thither, his friends were not permitted to enter into the palace with him; and when he would have embraced the King, he thrust him from him, reproached him with the death of his Brothers Alexander and Aristobulus, and with the parricide which he had intended to commit on his person. The next day, he was ordered to appear before Varus Governour of Syria, Herod himself being his accuser. The poison which he had prepared for his Father was produced, and a criminal under sentence of death was compelled to take it, who died instantly. Antipater having nothing to say in his own justification, was loaded with irons, and put in prison. Herod at the same time wrote to Augustus, to acquaint him with his Son's proceedings. In the mean time the King fell sick, and was carried by his own appointment to Jericho, there to be looked after. Not long after, the Ambassadors whom he sent to Rome returned, and reported that Augustus left him [In the Year of the World 4001. before J. C. 1. before the vulgar Æra 3.] at liberty to do what he thought proper with Antipater; to send him into banishment, or put him to death, as he should judge to be most fitting.

This news was agreeable to Herod: but his indisposition increasing daily, he called for an apple and a knife, as it were with a design to pare it, and as he was preparing to stab himself with the knife, Achiab his Grandson, who was present, held him by the arm, and made a great outcry; whereupon it was concluded that the King was dead. This rumour reached Antipater's prison, who begg'd his keeper to set him at liberty, making him large promises both for the present and the time to come. Herod being informed of this, raised himself upon his elbow, and sent one of his Guards that instant, to dispatch him[4]. Such was the end of Antipater Herod's eldest Son, in the year of the world 4001, of J. C. 1, before the vulgar Æra 3. Herod was buried without ceremony in the Castle of Hircanium. Herod died in few days after.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Joseph. Antiq. l. xvi. c. 6. & de Bello, l. i. c. 17.
Antiq. l. xvi. c. 11. f Ibid.
De Bello, l. i. c. 17. v Antiq. l. xvii. c. 3. w Ibid. c. 6. & l. i. de Bell. c. 2.
Joseph. Antiq. l. xvii. c. 9.

Antipatris

ANTIPATRIS, called anciently Caphar -Saba[1]. Adricomius has confounded it with Dora, and James de Vitry with Assus or Arsus, a maritime town of Palestine[2]. Antipatris did not border upon the Sea; for it lay in the way from Jerusalem to Cæsarea. Josephus[3] says, it was about one hundred [Acts xxiii. 31.] and fifty furlongs, or about seventeen miles from Joppa. The old Itinerary of Jerusalem places it at ten miles distance from Lydda, and six and twenty from Cæsarea. Herod the Great changed its old name, and gave it that of Antipatris, in honour of his Father Antipater, whom we have spoken of above. Antipatris was situated in a very fruitful and agreeable plain[4], watered with many fine springs and rivulets, and pretty near the mountains in the way from Jerusalem to Cæsarea.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Antiq. l. xiii. c. 13. & lib. xvi. c. 9.
Jacob. de Vitriaco hist. Jerosol. c. 23 Vide Reland.
Joseph. Antiq. l. xiii. c. 23.
De Bello, l. i. c. 16.

Antonia

ANTONIA, a Tower or Fortress of Jerusalem, situated towards the west and north-angle of the Temple, and built by Herod the Great in honour of his Friend Mark Antony, upon an eminence cut steep on all sides, and inclosed with a wall three hundred cubits high. It contained many apartments, bagnio's and halls, so that it might well pass for a very fine Palace. It was in form of a square Tower, with four Towers at the four corners to defend it. It was so high that one might look from thence into the Temple; and there was a bridge or vault, whereby a Communication was kept up between this Tower or Palace and the Temple[1]: So that as the Temple was in some sort the Citadel of the Town, the Tower of Antonia was the Citadel of the Temple. There is frequent mention made in Josephus of the Tower of Antonia, particularly in his History of the Jewish War. The Romans generally kept a Garrison in it, and from thence it was, that the Tribune ran with his Soldiers to rescue S. Paul out of the hands of the Jews, who had seized him in the Temple, [Acts xxi. 31, 32.] and designed to put him to death.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Joseph. Antiq. l. xv. c. 14. p. 544. & de Bello, l. vi. c. 12. p. 919.

Antoninus Pius

ANTONINUS PIUS, Emperor of Rome, adopted by Adrian, was originally of Nîmes. The Jews relate many very apocryphal things of him[1]. They say he received Circumcision, that he always favoured their Nation, while he persecuted the Christians. He became a Disciple of Judas the Holy, and made himself eminent in the study of the Mosaick Law. He circumcised himself, that he might be qualified to eat the Paschal-Lamb. He dissembled his Religion, and while he worshipped Idols, privately professed himself a Jew. They tell us he was so learned in traditions, that he was employed with his Master in the composition of his Mishna. Antoninus went every day to Judas's house through a subterraneous passage from his Palace, in order to study with him, and set two Centinels, one at his palace-gate, the other at the Rabbin's, that no one might perceive his going backward and forward so frequently, and left his guards should reveal this secret, at his return he killed them.

One day he found the Rabbin Chanina at Judas the Holy's house, and was inclined to kill him, to prevent his discovering the correspondence which the Emperor carried on with this Jew. Chanina hereupon said to him, I am not a man but an angel. Go then, replied Antoninus, and raise him from the dead whom I have killed at the entrance of the subterraneous passage: Chanina went, and raised him. The Emperor in conversation with his Rabbin maintained, that the Soul and Body after death might each excuse themselves, and impute the guilt of their Sin to one another, the Soul affirming, that it was the Body which had finn'd, for from the time of its separation it continued free; and the Body on the contrary, that it had done nothing since Death had made this division. But the Rabbin undeceived him, by producing the parable of a certain Master, who trusted a blind man and one who had no legs with the keeping of his fruit, the blind man took him who was lame upon his shoulders, and the fruit was eaten; their Master discovered their cunning, and punished both of them.

Judas asserted that the Soul was united with the Body in the very instant it was formed. Antoninus on the contrary maintained, that it was united with it much sooner, because a piece of flesh could not be three days without being salted. Judas submitted, and agreed that this union was effected at the moment of Conception.

The The Emperor one day asked Judas why the Sun was lower every evening at its sitting. The reason, answered Judas, is, because it pays its adorations to the Lord; but it defers doing so till the evening for the conveniency of labourers and travellers.

The Jews say, Antoninus had a Son whose name was Abasuerus, whom he designed for the Empire; but he died young. All that has been here produced by us is nothing but fable. Capitolinus informs us, that the Jews rebel'd in the reign of Antoninus; that this Prince made war with them, and defeated them, nevertheless he left them the liberty of being circumcised, which he denied the Samaritans; whom he forbad likewise to bring any over to them as Proselytes, and to make themselves Eunuchs.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Basnage hist. des Juifs, l. ii. l. iv. c. 9. p. 149. Edit. Paris. ex Gantz. Zemach. David. & Gedalia Schial. Schelet Kabbala.

Antony

ANTONY, Mark Antony, of the illustrious family of the Antonys at Rome. His name is very much celebrated in the Roman and Greek Histories. But in this work we are concerned no farther to take notice of him, than as he had a share in the affairs relating to the Jews. After the battle of Philippi, wherein Brutus and Cassius were defeated, Mark-Antony came into Asia, and when he arrived in Bithynia, he found Envoys there from all the nations in Asia, and among the rest, Deputies from the Jews, who were come with accusations against Herod and Phasael; who, as they said, assumed the whole authority of the Government, and left Hircanus the name only of a King[1]. But Herod so wrought upon Antony by his presents, that he would not so much as give his accusers audience, and confirmed the two Brothers Herod and Phasael in the government, which they [In the Year of the World 3963, before J. C. 37, before the vulg. Æra 41. The same year when M.Antony was come to Ephesus. Joseph. Antiq. l. 14. c. 22.] possessed in Judæa.

Some time after, Hircanus sent an Embassy to him, to desire that he would please to issue out his orders for restoring those Jews to liberty, who had been unjustly carried into captivity by Cassius, and dispersed in the Provinces of Asia. Antony granted his request, and wrote to Hircanus, to the Tyrians, and Sidonians, to the inhabitants of Antioch and Aradus, that they should set all those at liberty, who had been sold by Cassius. Towards the end of the same year, when Antony was at Daphne, near Antioch in Syria, an hundred of the principal among the Jews came with fresh accusations against Herod and Phasael[2]. But Antony asking Hircanus, who governed first the Province, Herod and his Brother, or his Accusers? Hircanus replied Herod and Phasaël; whereupon Antony confirmed them in their Government, and established them Tetrarchs over all Judæa. He wrote even letters in their favour, and ordered fifteen of the warmest of their accusers to be put in chains.

At last, when Antony came to Tyre, the Jews sent a deputation to him of a thousand, the most considerable among them, to carry their complaints against the two Brothers; but Antony, who had already been ingaged by Herod, commanded the Magistrates of Tyre to punish the male-contents, and support the Tetrarchs whom he had appointed. Herod advised these Deputies to retire, but they not regarding him, the Jews and other inhabitants of the City fell upon them, as they were upon the Sea shore, killed some and wounded others, and some saved themselves. The Jews made a great noise about the treatment which their Envoys had received, whereupon Antony ordered those whom he kept in fetters to be killed. So Herod and Phasael continued quiet in their Governments.

[In the Year of the World 3964. before J. C. 36, before the vulgar Æra 40.] The next year the Parthians having entred Syria, and Antigonus the Son of Aristobulus having promised them a thousand talents, and five hundred women[3], if they re-established him in the Throne of his Ancestors; they came into Judæa, took Hircanus and Phasael, and obliged Herod to fly to Rome, where he found Mark-Antony and Augustus very ready to grant him their protection, as much out of aversion to Antigonus, whom they looked on as one of a very turbulent spirit, and an enemy to the Romans, as for the sake of those services, which Antony and Augustus had formerly received from Antipater Herod's Father. Thus they procured Herod to be declared King of the Jews by the Senate, and Antigonus an enemy to the Roman Commonwealth. Antony and Augustus conducted Herod between them to the Capitol; and when they had offered the usual Sacrifices, and there deposited the act of his election by the Senate, they entertained him [In the Year of the World 3967, before J. C. 33, before the vulgar Æra 37.] magnificently.

Herod returned into Judæa with letters of recommendation from Antony, addressed to the Roman Officers, enjoining them to be assisting to him in getting possession of his Kingdom; and when by the help of his own party, and the Roman troops he had made himself master of Jerusalem and Antigonus, he prevailed with Antony to have Antigonus's head struck off[4], by that means to deliver him from the greatest enemy he could have. After this Antony made war against the Parthians, but performed nothing memorable; and his return was more like a real flight, than an honourable retreat. Having given himself up intirely to his passion for Cleopatra, he dismissed Octavia, and plunged himself into all manner of excesses. At last being defeated by Augustus at Actium, he returned to Egypt, where after having tried several means of accommodating matters, he was forced to kill himself, in the year of the world 3974, before J. C. 27, and before the vulgar Æra 31. Concerning the particulars of his Life the Reader may consult Plutarch, Dion and Usher, ad ann. 3965. pag. 483, &c.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Joseph. Antiq. l. xiv. c. 22. & l. xx. c. 8. & de Bello, l. i. c. 13.
Antiq. l. xiv. c. 23.
Antiq. l. xiv. c. 25.
An- tiq. l. xiv. c. ult.

Anua

ANUA, a Village fifteen miles from Neapolis, otherwise called Sichem or Naplouse, in the way towards Jerusalem[1].

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Euseb. in locis.

Anub

ANUB, the Son of Coz, of the Tribe of Judah. 1 Chron. iv. 8.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Anus of the Philistines

ANUS of the Philistines. The Ark of the Lord having been taken by the [1 Sam. v. 6. 70. Εις τὰς ἕδρας αὐτῶν. Vulg. In secretiori parte natium.] Philistines, and laid up at Ashdod, the hand of God was heavy upon their City, and other Principalities of the Philistines, and afflicted them with a painful disease in the Anus, or in the most secret part of that place, whence the excrements issue. The Interpreters are not agreed concerning the signification of the original word which is translated Anus, nor as to the nature of the disease with which God visited the Philistines; some are of opinion, that God sent them the inward or hidden Piles: The Hebrew properly signifies, that which is obscure and hidden. Others suppose the Dysentery to be meant here; others again, a Fistula or Condyloma, which is a descent of the fundament out of its place. The Psalmist describes pretty clearly a Fistula in [Psalm lxxviii.66.] these words, He smote his enemies in the hinder parts, he put them to a perpetual shame. The Septuagint and Vulgate add to the ninth verse in the Hebrew, that the Philistines made them seats of skins to sit with more ease, by reason of their indisposition. Herodotus seems to have had some knowledge of this History; but he did not understand it rightly, and has attributed the cause of it to something else[1]. He says, the Scythians having plundered the temple of Askalon, a celebrated City of the Philistines, the Goddess (Derceto or Venus) who was adored there, afflicted them with an unhappy disease, thought to have been the Hæmorrhoids, which was communicated to their posterity. The Philistines perhaps related the story after this manner, but it passed all along for certain truth, that this disease was ancient, and sent by God among them, and that it descended to their Children.

The Philistines to secure themselves from this uneasiness, and the ravages committed by rats which laid waste their Country, were advised by their Priests and [1 Sam. vi. 1, 2, 3, &c.] Soothsayers to send back the Ark into the territories of Israel, but not without some presents, to make five figures of a golden Anus, and as many in the same metal of rats, to place them in or near the Ark, and give glory to God by acknowledging, that this plague was the pure effect of his justice. This advice was followed, and the Ark was returned. Josephus[2] and some Interpreters after him believed, that the five Cities of the Philistines made each a statue, which they consecrated to God, as a monument of their deliverance. The Heathens have often imitated this conduct of the Philistines, in offering figures to the Gods representing those parts of the body, which have been diseased. Christians in imitation of them still at this day, in several places, consecrate in honour of the saints Images made of wax or metal, describing those parts of the body, wherein they believe they have experienced their power, in the cure wrought for them[3].

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Herodot. l.i. c. 105.
Joseph. l. vi. Antiq. c. 1.
Vide Theodoret. l. viii. de Græc. affection. curand.

Apadno

APADNO. Daniel speaking of Antichrist, according to the generality of the Commentators, or of Antiochus Epiphanes according to the literal meaning, says (as the Vulgate reads it) He shall plant his tabernacles at Apadno between the Seas, in the glorious holy mountain, that he shall ascend to the very top of it, and none shall help him. The question is to know where Apadno is situated. Some understand by it the Mount of Olives, where the faithful shall be assembled, where Antichrist shall march to attack them, and pitch his tent between the two Seas, the Dead Sea and the Mediterranean. Others take Apadno in an appellative sense[1] for his Palace, He shall plant the tabernacles of his palace between the Seas and the glorious holy Mountain. Porphyry[2] says, that Apadno was the name of a place in the mountains of Elimæa or Persia, where Antiochus Epiphanes pitched his tents, between the Euphrates and the Tigris, when he undertook to pillage the Temple of Belus or Diana of Elimaïs; but his design having been discovered he was obliged to retreat. Symmachus translates ito, He will set up the tents of his cavalry, between the Mountains. Fuller[3], He shall plant the tabernacles of his tunick between the two Seas. Among the Romans there was a Cuirass or Tunick of a purple colour, put sometimes at the top of the General's tent as a signal for battle[4].

We

We translate the Hebrew after this manner, He shall pitch his tents in Apadno of two Seas, or in Padan of two Rivers, Mesopotamia situated between the Euphrates and the Tigris, two large rivers, and justly compared with the sea, particularly for their inundations. Antiochus Epiphanes being upon an expedition against Artaxias King of Armenia, who had rebelled against him[5], led his Army, and pitched his Tents in Mesopotamia, between [Gen.xxiv. 10. Deut. xxiii. 4. Judg.iii.8. Gen. xxv. 20. xxviii. 2.] the two rivers Tigris and Euphrates. He shall place himself upon the glorious Mountain; in the Hebrew, upon the Mountain of Zobi. He shall go up to the very top of it, and shall die there, without any one's giving him the least assistance. Antiochus Epiphanes returning from Persia to Babylon, fell from his chariot, and bruised all his limbs. He died miserably, in the Mountains of Tabes, as the Historians inform us[6].

Theodoret[7] believes, that Apadno was a place in the neighbourhood of Jerusalem. St. Jerom[8] says, in a more particular manner, that Apadno was near Nicopolis, otherwise called Emmaus, where the Mountains of Judæa have their beginning. M. Reland v has shewn, that Emmaus, which was called Nicopolis, was very different from the Emmaus mentioned by St. Luke, [Luk. xxiv. 13.] which was sixty furlongs from Jerusalem. Procopius[9], speaking of certain places which were rebuilt by Justinian, about Amida in Mesopotamia, mentions in particular Apadna and Byrthus. Which confirms our opinion, viz. that by Apadno of the two Seas, we are to understand Mesopotamia, called in Hebrew, Padan- Aram, or Aram Naharaim; the Plain of Aram, or Aram of the two Rivers.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Translators' note. And thus it is construed by the Translators of our English Bible. Buxtorf. interprets this word in the same manner; and says, Sic in Targum Et extendit augustale suum super eos. Baxt.

Porphyr. apud Hieronym. in Dan. xi.

Fuller. Miscellan. l. v. Amicire; Ephod, amictus.

Plutarch. in Fabio. p. 182. in Bruto, p. 1002. Isidor. orig. l. xix. c. 22. Vide Lipf. de Milit. Rom. l. iv. c. 12.

Appian. Syriac. p. 117, 131. Porphyr. apud Hieronym. in Dan. xi.

Polyb. in Excerptis Valesii, p. 144.

Theodoret in Dan. xi.

Hieronym. in Dan. xi. v Reland. Palæstin. l. ii. c. 6. & l. iii. p. 788.

Procop. l. ii. c. 4. de ædificiis Justiniani.

Apamea

APAMEA, a City of Syria, lying upon the Orontes. It was built, as is believed, by Seleucus I. King of Syria; or by his Son Antiochus Soter, in honour of Queen Apamea, the Wife of Seleucus, and Mother of Antiochus. It is probably the same with Shepham, a City of Syria, whereof there is [Numb. xxxiv. 10, 11.] mention sometimes in the Scripture.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Apamea

APAMEA, a City of Phrygia, upon the river Marsyas. Some have been of opinion, that Noah's Ark rested near Apamea. This City took the firname of Ark; and its medals were struck with the figure of an Ark. In a piece coined in honour of Adrian, there is the image of a Man, who represents the river Marsyas, with these words,[1] A Medal of the Apameans, the Ark and River Marsyas. And in the Sybilline verses, the Author whereof is pretty ancient[2], we read that Mount Ararat, where the Ark settled, is upon the confines of Phrygia, at the sources of the river Marsyas. But this opinion is not to be defended; Mount Ararat was in Armenia, not in Phrygia.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

ΑΠΑΜΕΩΝ ΚΙΒΩΤΟ□ ΜΑΡ□ΙΑ□.

Ἐστὶ δί τις Φρυγίης ἐπὶ ἠπείροιο μελαίτης. Ἠλίβατον ταυύμηκες ὄρος Ἀραρὰς δὲ καλεῖται. Μαρσύεω ἔνθα φλέβεις μεγάλου ποταμοῖο πέφυκαν.

Ape

APE, Simia; in Hebrew Koph. Interpreters agree concerning the signification of this word. The Scripture a says, that Solomon's fleet, among other things, brought back Ivory and Apes. The Greek Writers speak of a sort of Ape which was to be seen in Ethiopia, and upon the Red Sea, called Kephos, or Keipos, or Kebos[1], a name which comes pretty near the Hebrew, Kuph or Koph. The Kepus had hands and feet like a Man's, the face of a Lion, and the body of a Panther. It was about the size of a Roe-buck. The Egyptians of Babylon in Egypt adored a kind of Ape, which Strabo[2] calls Keipos[3].

An Ape, of all animals, comes nearest to the figure of a Man. There are several sorts of them; some with, and others without a tail. Some have a head, or long snout, like a Dog's; others have a rounder head, and a flatter nose. The toes of their feet are as long as their fingers; they have generally red hair, inclining to be greenish. There are some in Indostan all white; others are red upon their backs, but their breast, belly, and inside of their thighs and arms, are white or grey. These Creatures have a thousand stratagems to defend and save themselves. They live commonly upon the tops of trees, leaping from one branch to another with admirable dexterity. On both sides their jaws they have pockets where they lock up every thing which they wou'd keep. The females never have more than one young one, which they carry upon their backs, as a Mother does her Child. When they wou'd give it suck, they take it in their paws, and present the breast to it, like a Woman.

The Egyptians are not the only people who have adored Apes. They are still worshiped in many places of the Indies. Maffeus[4] describes a magnificent Temple dedicated to the Ape, with a portico designed for receiving the Victims which are sacrificed to it; and supported by seven hundred columns not inferior, as he says, to those of the Pantheon at Rome. When[5] the Portugueze, in 1554, pillaged the Isle of Ceylan, there was a magnificent Temple upon the top of Pike Adame, or Mount Adam, wherein they found nothing but a little box full of gold and jewels, with an Ape's tooth. The Kings of the Country were desirous of redeeming this tooth, which they worshiped, and offered seven hundred thousand Ducats for the purchase of it. But the Bishop hindred them from accepting the offer, had the tooth burnt, and the ashes thrown into the sea[6]. The Inhabitants of Goa did not dare to kill an Ape, no more than a Serpent. They believed them to be Spirits created by God with an intention to afflict Mankind, and punish them for their sins.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

πίθηκος, κῆβος, κῆπος, κεῖφος.

Strabo, l. xvii.

See Bochart, de Animal. Sacr. P. I. l. ii. c. 23.

Maffei Hist. Ind. l. i.

1 Kings x. 22. 2 Chron. ix. 21. ,קופיםKophim. Bochart. de animal. Sacr. Par. I. l. ii. c. 31.

Lymchot. F. Syrard. Voyage du Levant. T. 1. ch. 20. p. 265.

Apelles

APELLES, is one whom St. Paul speaks of in Chap. xvi. ver. 10. of the Epistle to the Romans, and calls approved in Christ, or an honest man, probum in Christo. The Greeks believe that Apelles was one of the seventy two Disciples, and made Bishop of Heraclea. They observe his festival on the 31st of October. In the Roman Martyrology we find him registred on the 22d of April, and on the 10th of September with Luke or Lucius.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Aphaca

APHACA, or Aphek, a City of Syria in Mount Libanus, between Heliopolis and Biblos. See APHEK.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Apharsachites

APHARSACHITES, or Apharsathchites, people sent by the Kings of Assyria to inhabit the Country of Samaria, in the room of those Israelites who had been removed [Ezra v. 6. Ezra iv. 9.] beyond the Euphrates. They, with other Samaritans, opposed the rebuilding of the walls of Jerusalem. We are of opinion, that the Apharsachites are the Prosochytes.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Aphek

APHEK. There are more Cities than one of this name in Scripture.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Aphek (I)

I. APHEK in the Tribe of Judah. There it was that the Philistines encamped [1 Sam. iv. 1, 2, 3, & seq.] when the Ark was brought from Shiloh, which was taken in battle by the Philistines. It is probably the same as Aphekah mentioned in Josh. xv. 53.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Aphek (II)

II. APHEK, in the Valley of Jezreel. It was there that the Philistines incamped, [1 Sam. xxix. 1, &c.] while Saul and his Army were near Jezreel, upon the Mountains of Gilboa.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Aphek (III)

III. APHEK, a City belonging to the [Josh. xix. 30. xiii. 4.] Tribe of Asher, near the Country of the Sidonians. We are of opinion that it is the same with that which follows, and we are now going to speak of.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Aphek (IV)

IV. APHEK, a City of Syria, one of the [1 Kings xx. 26, & seq.] principal in Ben-hadad's Kingdom, near unto which the battle was fought between Ahab and Ben-hadad, wherein the Syrians were worsted; and as they retreated with precipitation into the City, the wall fell upon them, and crushed in pieces seven and twenty thousand. It is probably in this very City of Aphek, or Aphaca, situated in Libanus, upon the River Adonis[1], where the famous Temple of Venus the Aphacite was to be seen. This City lay between Heliopolis and Biblos, and is that probably which Paul Lucas speaks of[2], as swallowed up in a Lake of Mount Libanus, which is about nine or ten miles in circumference, wherein he says there are several houses all intire under water. See our Comment upon Josh. xix. 30. and upon 1 Kings xx. 26.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Sozomen. l. xi. c. 55. & Theophan. in Chronico p. 18.
Paul Lucas,

Apherema

APHEREMA, one of the three Toparchies added to Judæa by the Kings of Syria. We think it to be the same as Ephræm, or Ephraim, mentioned in St. [1 Macc. xi. 34. John xi. 54.] John.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Aphes-Dammim

APHES-DAMMIM, Ephes-dammim, Dommim, or Phes-dommim, a place belonging to the Tribe of Judah, between Shochoh and Azekah, where the Philistines encamped when Goliath insulted the battalions of Israel.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Aphraim

APHRAIM, Eusebius places a Town of this name at six miles distance from Legio, towards the North.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Aphses

APHSES, Head of the eighteenth sacerdotal family out of the twenty four which David chose for the service of the Temple.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Aphutæi

APHUTÆI, Israelites who returned from the Captivity, and settled in their old Country. There is some probability that the name of Aphutæ[1] comes from Jiphtah, a City mentioned in Josh. xv. 43.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Herod. l. iii. c. 38. Plin. l. viii. c. 46. Strabo l. xvii.

Apis

APIS. The Egyptians worshiped an Ox or a Bull; this all the Ancients testify. They had an Ox consecrated to the Sun, which they fed at Heliopolis, and called Mnevis. They had another named Apis, dedicated to the Moon, and fed at Memphis. The God Osiris was adored under the figure of this Animali. The following marks were those whereby it was distinguished. The whole body was black, except a white square spot upon the forehead: It had the figure of an Eagle on its back, as some say; or as others, the figure of a Crescent: The hairs of the tail were double, and it had the form of a Beetle under its tongue.

[1 Chron. xxiv. 15. ii. 53.] When a Calf was found with these marks, it was carried with great tokens of joy to the Temple of Osiris, where it was fed, kept and worshiped in the room of this God as long as it lived. After its death it was buried with great solemnity and mourning. This done, they looked out for another with the same marks. Sometimes they were many years before they found one; but when they had, there was a great Festival kept all over the Country. country. There is no question but that the Golden Calf which Aaron made for the Israelites in the wilderness, and the Calves set up by Jeroboam to be worshipped in his Kingdom of the ten Tribes, were an imitation of the superstitious adoration which the Egyptians paid to their bull Apis.

Some learned men[1] have thought, that the Egyptians paid divine honours to the Patriarch Joseph under the figure of a Calf, or under the name of Apis. They say Apis was King of Memphis, who provided food for his subjects during the time of a great famine; that the name Apis signifies an ox; that this animal is the symbol of agriculture. Some imagine, that the King of Memphis is the same with Joseph, who, as we know, preserved Egypt during the seven years of barrenness. The Patriarch Jacob speaking of the violence exercised by Simeon and Levi against Joseph, says, that in their fury they [Genes. xlix. 6. ex Hebr.] killed a man, and in their indignation boughed an ox, which several interpreters explain of Joseph. Besides King Pharaoh called Joseph, Abis, my Father, which comes pretty near the word Apis. But these [.עקרו שור Gen. xlv. 8. Fecit me quasi patrem Pharaonis.] reasons are not certainly convincing enough to confirm this opinion. There is no probability that the Egyptians should worship Joseph, who was of a religion different from theirs, and who had always shewn an aversion to their superstitions. Besides the Egyptian Divines gave different reasons for the worship of Apis from those given for the supposed worship of Joseph.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Gerard. Voss. l. ix. de Idolatr. Vide apud illum Julium Firmin. & Rufin. &c.

Apocalypsis (I)

I. APOCALYPSIS, this word signifies in general revelation; and in particular the Apocalypse or Revelation which S. John had in the Isle of Patmos, whither he had [Between the years of J. C. 95 and 97.] been banished by Domitian. Caius, Priest of the Church of Rome, who lived about the end of the second Age, seems to assure us, that the Apocalypse or book of Revelations was written by the Archheretick Cerinthus[1]. Dionysius Bishop of Alexandria says, that some indeed thought Cerinthus to be the author of it; that for his part, he believed it to be written by an holy man, whose name was John, but he would not take upon him to affirm, that it was really the work of the Apostle and Evangelist of this name. It passes however in the Church for a point very clear, that the book of Revelations was composed by S. John the Son of Zebedee, and Brother of S. James; and notwithstanding the doubts of Caius and Dionysius of Alexandria, the ancients have unanimously acknowledged him to be the Author of it.

The Apocalypse has not at all times been owned to be canonical. S. Jerom, Amphilochius, and Sulpitius Severus remark, that in their time there were many Churches in Greece, which did not receive this book. It is not in the catalogue prepared by the Council of Laodicea, nor in that of S. Cyril of Jerusalem; but Justin, Irenæus, Origen, Cyprian, Clemens of Alexandria, Tertullian, and after them all the Fathers of the fourth, fifth and following Ages, quote the Revelations as a book then acknowledged to be canonical. The Hereticks called Alogi by Epiphanius, the Marcionites, and the Disciples of Cerdo, Luther, and many other modern Hereticks, have likewise rejected the Revelations of S. John; but even this proves that it was received by the Catholick Churches, and Protestants themselves have forsaken Luther in this particular; and Beza has strongly maintained against his objections, that the Apocalypse is authentick and canonical.

The Book of Revelations contains two and twenty Chapters; the three first are an instruction to the Bishops of the seven Churches in Asia Minor, which are Ephesus, Smyrna, Pergamus, Thyatira, Sardis, Philadelphia, and Laodicea. The fifteen following Chapters contain the persecutions, which the Church has suffered from the Jews, Hereticks, and Roman Emperors, principally from Dioclesian, Maximian, Herculius, Galerius Maximian, Severus, Maxentius, Maximinus, and Licinius; and last of all from Julian the Apostate. After this we have a view of that Vengeance which God has exercised against the persons of persecutors, against the Roman Empire, and City of Rome, described under the name of Babylon the great prostitute, seated upon seven Hills. Lastly, the xix, xx, xxi, xxii Chapters include the description of the triumph of the Church, and its victories over its enemies, of the marriage of the Lamb, and the happiness of the Church triumphant. They who would see more at large what relates to the Apocalypse, may consult the Dissertations, which the Abbot Du Pin has joined with the Analysis of this book; and the Preface which we have inserted before our Comment on the Revelations.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Apud Euseb. l. iii. c. 28. Hist. Eccl.

Apocalypsis (II)

II. APOCALYPSIS, or Revelations of S. Peter, an apocryphal Book mentioned by Eusebius[1], and S. Jerom[2], and cited by Clemens of Alexandria in his Hypotyposes[3]. There is none of it remaining that we know of. Sozomen[4] says, that in his time there was an Apocalypse of S. Paul read upon Good-Fridays in the Church, when all the people fasted religiously, in memory of our Saviour's Passion.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Euseb. l. iii. c. 3. Hist. Eccl.
Hieronym. in Catalog. Scriptur. Eccl.
Apud Euseb. l. vi. c. 14. Hist. Eccles.
Sozomen. l. vii. c. 19.

Apocalypsis (III)

III. APOCALYPSIS or Revelation of S. Paul, an apocryphal Book, which was in use among the Gnosticks and Cainites[1]. This Book contain'd, as these Hereticks pretended, those ineffable things, which the Apostle had seen during his extasy, and [2 Cor. xii. 4.] which, as he tells the Corinthians, he was not permitted to divulge. Sozomen says[2], that several monks in his time set a great value on this work, and affirmed, that it had been discovered by a divine revelation, in the reign of Theodosius, at Tarsus, in S. Paul's house, where it had been hidden in a marble trunk under ground. But Sozomen enquiring into this fact, of an old Priest belonging to the Church of Tarsus, the Priest answered, that he had never heard any thing about it, and believed this story to have been the invention of some Hereticks.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Epiphan. Hæres. 18. c. 38. G. Eycar. part. 2. animal. p. 120. Aug. tract. 98. in Joan.
Sozomen. l. vii. Hist. Eccles. c. 19.

Apocalypsis (IV)

IV. APOCALYPSIS or Revelation of S. John, different from the true Apocalypse, whereof we have been speaking above. Lambecius says, that there is a Manuscript of it in the Emperor's Library. Cod. 119. Biblioth. fol. 108.... 15.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Apocalypsis (V)

V. APOCALYPSIS or Revelation of Cerinthus. This Arch-heretick composed certain Revelations, which he pretended to have had[1], wherein he spoke of an earthly kingdom, and particular sensual pleasures which the Saints should enjoy for a thousand years at Jerusalem. It has been already observed in another place, that some of the ancients believed Cerinthus to be the author even of S. John's Revelations perhaps for no other reason, but because of the ill use which this Heretick made of the Apostle's words, the better to authorize his visions.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Theodoret. l. ii. hæretic. Fab. c. 3.

Apocalypsis (VI)

VI. APOCALYPSIS or Revelation of S. Thomas. This is known only by Pope Gelasius's Decree, which ranks it among the Apocryphal books.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Apocalypsis (VII)

VII. APOCALYPSIS or Revelation of Adam. The Gnosticks, as Epiphanius informs us[1], had an Apocalypse, of which they supposed Adam to be the Author. They who were concerned in writing this work, took occasion doubtless of forging it from what is said in Genesis of the Lord's causing a deep sleep to fall on Adam, or as [Gen. xi. 21. Heb. 70. Ἔκστασιν.] the Septuagint have it, an extasy.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Epiphan. Hæres. 31. c. 8. Gnostic.

Apocalypsis (VIII)

VIII. APOCALYPSIS or Revelation of Abraham. The Sethian Hereticks had in like manner forged a spurious Apocalypse of Abraham's, which as Epiphanius says[1], was a work abounding with filth and nastiness.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Epiphan. Hæres. 39. c. 5.

Apocalypsis (IX)

IX. APOCALYPSIS or Revelation of Moses. Georgius Syncellus[1] speaking of this Apocalypse, says, that the following passage of S. Paul to the Galatians is taken from it, c. vi. 15. Neither Circumcision availeth any thing, nor Uncircumcision, but a new creature. Cedrenus says some Authors will have this Apocalypse to be the same thing as Genesis the less, another apocryphal Book, which the ancients were well acquainted with.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Georg. Syncell. p. 27.

Apocalypsis (X)

X. APOCALYPSIS or Revelation of Elias. S. Jerom tells us[1], that the following passage of S. Paul to the Corinthians, Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither hath it entred into the heart of man, to conceive what God hath prepared for those that love him, that these words, I say, are borrowed from the Revelation of Elias. Origen in his citation of them tells us[2], that they are no where to be found but in the secret books of Elias.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Hieron. Ep. 101. ad Pammach.
Origen. Hom. ult. in Matt. xxvii. 9. a ἀπόκρυφος absconditus, ab ἀποκρύπτω abscondo.

Apocryphal

[1 Cor. xi. 9.] APOCRYPHAL, signifies properly hidden, according to the sense of the Greek root from which it is derived[1]. Those books are called apocryphal 1°. The author whereof is not known, whether he has put no name at all to his work, or a false one[2]. 2°. Those which are not in the Sacred Canon of the Scriptures, and are not publickly read in the congregation of the faithful, but which may be read in private for our own edification. 3°. Those books, which are not esteemed to be authentick, and of divine authority, tho' they may be thought to be composed by some sacred Author and Apostle; for example the Epistle of St. Barnabas. 4°. Lastly we call those dangerous books apocryphal, which were composed by some Hereticks of old to authorize their erroneous opinions.

There are apocryphal Books therefore of several degrees. Some are absolutely false, dangerous, and impious, composed by Hereticks to defend error or superstition, such as the spurious Gospels of S. Thomas, the Gospels of the Valentinians, Simonians, Gnosticks, Marcion, &c. Others are simply apocryphal, and contain nothing contrary to faith and good manners, and may be read privately with edification; such as the third and fourth Books of Esdras, and the third and fourth of Maccabees, the Epistle of S. Barnabas, and the Book of Hermas. Others after they had been long contested by some, have at last been received into the Canon with the consent of the Church[3]; such as Judith, Tobit, the two first Books of Maccabees, Wisdom, Ecclesiasticus, Baruch, the Greek additions to Daniel and Esther, the Story of Susanna, of Bel and the Dragon, which S. Jerom[4] places among apocryphal Writings, and says, that the Church reads them but without receiving them into the Canon: Ecclesia quidem legit, sed intra Canonicas Scripturas non recipit. Lastly there are some parts of Scripture, which are still at this day contested, and received by some as canonical, but are held by others to be apocryphal; for example the titles of the Psalms, the short preface of Jeremiah, that of Ecclesiasticus, and according to some, the additions to Esther and Daniel.

The Protestants do not only reckon those Books to be apocryphal which are esteemed such in the Church of Rome; as the Prayer of Manasseh King of Judah, the third and fourth Books of Maccabees, the third and fourth Books of Esdras, S. Barnabas's Epistle, the Book of Hermas, the addition at the end of Job, and the hundred and fifty first Psalm; but they reckon likewise the Book of Wisdom, Ecclesiasticus, the two first Books of Maccabees, Tobit, Judith, Baruch, and the additions to Daniel and Esther, which are not in the Hebrew, to be all apocryphal. And for the New Testament, they are divided in their opinions, whether the Epistle to the Hebrews, the Epistle of S. James, the second Epistle of S. Peter, the second and third Epistles of S. John, the Epistle of S. Jude, and the Revelations are to be acknowledged as canonical or not.

They who have any curiosity to see a larger and more exact Catalogue of those spurious and apocryphal Writings of the Old and New Testament, I mean of books composed by old Authors under the venerable names of Patriarchs or Prophets, may consult the two Volumes of Fabricius printed on this subject; the first upon the Old Testament, with this title, Codex Pseudepigraphus veteris Testamenti, and the second, intitled, Codex apocryphus novi Testamenti.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ἀπόκρυφος absconditus, ab Ἀποκρύπτω abscondo.
Hieron. Ep. ad Lætam. Aug. l. xv. de Civit. c. 23.
Concil. Lateran. & Tridentin.
Hieron. Præfat. in lib. Salomon.

Apollo

APOLLO, one of the false Gods worshipped by the Heathens, to whom they attributed Oracles, and the art of Divination. See hereafter the word Python and Spirit of Python, or Divination, Acts xvi. 16. See likewise Deut. xviii. 11. and 1 Sam. xxviii. 7. and 2 Kings xxi. 6.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Apollonia (I)

I. APOLLONIA, a City of Macedonia, through which, and Amphipolis S. Paul passed in his way to Thessalonica. Acts xvii. 1.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Apollonia (II)

II. APOLLONIA, a City of Palestine, situated pretty near the Sea, between Joppa and Cæsarea, almost at an equal distance. Josephus, Pliny, and Ptolemy speak of it. The Peutingerian tables place it at an equal distance between Joppa and Cæsarea. Some very improperly confound it with Antipatris. Josephus, Antiq. l. xiii. c. 23. speaks of Antipatris and Apollonia as of two different places. There is no mention of it in the Scripture.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Apollonius

APOLLONIUS, an Officer belonging to Antiochus Epiphanes, whom Grotius believes to have been Governor of Mysia. He is called Misarches in the Greek, which may be understood either in the interpretation I have given it, or as signifying the Chief of a crew of villains and wicked fellows. Antiochus Epiphanes having resolved to draw great sums from Jerusalem, sent Apollonius to execute this design. He came thither at the head of an Army of two and twenty thousand men. He pretended that he would continue there without giving any disturbance, and waited without saying any thing till the Sabbath-day [See 1 Macc. i. 30, 31. and 2 Macc. v. 24, 25, &c. 1 Macc. v. 24. In the Year of the World 3836, before J. C. 164, before the vulgar Æra 167. In the Year of the World 3838, before J. C. 162, before the vulgar Æra 165. 1 Macc. iii. 10, 11, 12. In the Year of the World 3856, before J. C. 144, before the vulgar Æra 148.] came; then he fell upon the people, and put great numbers of them to the sword. The City was burnt and pillaged, and ten thousand persons taken and carried away captives, in order to be sold to the King's advantage. Two years after, Judas Maccabæus having gathered together an Army of six thousand Jews, who had continued faithful to the Lord, Apollonius, who at that time was in Samaria, marched against him, and gave him battle. But Judas got the victory, defeated Apollonius, killed him, dispersed his Army, carried off a very rich booty, and took Apollonius's sword which he made use of in times of action.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Apollonius Daus (II)

II. APOLLONIUS DAUS, Governor of Cœle-Syria, and General of Demetrius Nicanor's Armies, the Son of Demetrius Soter; having abandoned the party of Alexander Balas, and gone over to Demetrius Nicanor, he put himself at the head of a powerful Army, in order to compel the Jews to declare for Demetrius. He incamped at Jamnia, and wrote to Jonathan Maccabæus Prince of the Jews, challenging him to descend into the plain, and reproaching him for continuing among rocks and mountains for no other reason, but because he was sensible that he was not strong enough to encounter him in the open field[1]. Jonathan stung with these reproaches, took his Brother Simon with him, and ten thousand chosen troops, and set down before Joppa. The Garrison, which was composed of Apollonius's troops, shut the the gates against him. But the Citizens seeing Jonathan was preparing to force them, opened the gates, and received him into the City.

Apollonius being informed that Jonathan had made himself master of Joppa, advanced as far Azotus with three thousand horse, and eight thousand foot; having besides left a thousand horse in ambuscade near a brook to fall upon the Jews in their rear. But Jonathan having got intelligence of the design, ranged his troops in such a manner, that they could face the enemy on every side, and forbad them to stir out of their ranks; commanding them to stand firm, and receive the first onset of the enemy. Apollonius's horse were tiring themselves all day with throwing darts and arrows against Jonathan's troops, who received them on their bucklers, and were very little incommoded by them: towards the evening Jonathan gave orders to charge the Enemy; the horse fled, and the infantry was entirely defeated. Some of those who escaped threw themselves into the Temple of Dagon, near Azotus; thither Jonathan pursued them, and burnt them, with the Temple. He took likewise the City of Azotus, pillaged and set fire to it. In this Action Apollonius lost eight thousand men. Upon this victory Alexander Balas bestowed new favours, and new praises, upon Jonathan. He sent him a golden buckle, such as the King's relations wear, and gave him the property of Accaron.

[Observations on Jonathan's victory over Apollonius. 1 Macc. x.] Jonathan's behaviour in this Action, and the excellent disposition of his troops, shewed abundance of intrepidity and skill, and is a demonstration that a body of foot drawn up very deep, with close ranks and files, is always of advantage, (let the situation of the Country where they are obliged to engage be what it will,) either against horse, which seems so formidable in plains; or against foot, if the Enemy does not attack in the like order. Jonathan being convinced of this truth, and of Apollonius's ignorance, who was General of King Demetrius's Army, the number and forces whereof he despised, made it evident to him in this Action, that he would sustain the effort of the horse, which Apollonius represented to be so terrible, telling [1 Macc. x. 73.] Jonathan, with some surprize at his daring resolution, in determining to keep the field, Wherefore now thou shalt not be able to abide the horsemen, and so great a power in the plain, where is neither stone nor flint, nor place to flee unto. We may read the commendations which this General gives himself, in the Author above-cited, which have a great air of rodomontade. The brave Israelite soon undeceived him, and made it appear clearly to him [Ver. 74.] that a small number is more to be valued than one more considerable, when a man of ability takes upon him the conduct of them.

Jonathan took the field with a body of ten thousand men, and was joined by his Brother Simon with the troops, in all probability, which were under his command. Simon his Brother met him for to help him. Which words are not to be understood with relation to his own person only, but to the union of his troops with those headed by his Brother.

Apollonius upon receiving this piece of news, marched as if he were going to Azotus, and on a sudden led his Army into the plain, because his horse were numerous, in which he principally confided. Jonathan, who had none, followed him to Azotus, and there the two Armies engaged.

Apollonius, who knew the intrepidity of the Jewish General, laid a thousand men in ambush for him, and posted them behind Jonathan in his march: He had intelligence of what was done, but took no great notice of it, so that on a sudden he saw himself in the midst of the enemy attacked in front and rear, and on all sides. Circuierunt castra ejus: these words would be very perplexing to me in what I have to say farther, if the Benedictine Commentator did not inform me, that castra signifies the Army; for it is sufficiently manifest from what the Author of the Book of Maccabees says, that the Jews did not incamp since the combat began as soon as the two Armies came in sight of each other: this is demonstration. Dom. Calmet in his Comment cites Josephus, who explains the text of this place after another manner; and in my judgment with reason; it is likewise upon the credit of this Historian, whose truth and reputation are generally acknowledged, that I regulate the disposition of the two Armies. Josephus's words therefore are these[2], Jonathan discovering the enemy behind him was not at all disturbed at it, but having drawn up his troops in a square battalion, (literally speaking like a Tile, according to the form of the Macedonian Phalanx) he commanded them to face the enemy every way. From hence it would appear, that he formed an oblong Square of a very great depth, that is to say, a Phalanx-doubled. Apollonius fearing lest his Phalanx might recoil against this impenetrable mass of infantry, endeavoured to break through it with his cavalry by attacking it on all sides, in order afterwards to cut them in pieces with his Foot, if the horse could once disorder them. But he was mistaken, for he met with equal force and valour in this enormous mass of combatants, notwithstanding the showers of ar rows which were let fly against them; and this particular leaves me no room to question that the archers were dispos'd on every side. These words, like a tile, evidently shew, that the Jews made use of their bucklers like Antony's foot in his retreat, when he was upon his expedition against the Parthians; that is to say, they formed as it were a wood of this defensive kind of arms: this literally speaking is without contest the Testudo; and the word tile sufficiently proves that it was an oblong square.

There is here one considerable difficulty from which it will be hard to disengage ourselves. The Author of this book says not a word relating to the place where Simon was with his troops. He was therefore detached from his Brother: where was he then? Was not the whole Jewish Army surrounded? Simon notwithstanding brings on his troops, and attacks the foot, or phalanx of the Enemy, because the horse were already fatigued; and having broken them, put them to flight. Let us clear this point a little, for it was not possible he should be separated from his Brother: the truth of the matter is this; the foot being as much tired as the horse who surrounded them, lost all patience, moved, and quitting their first post marched up to the phalanx, and falling with all their weight upon it, broke and routed it. And as Simon drew up in the rear of his Brother's Infantry, he found he was opposite to the Enemy's phalanx, which he therefore charged, while Jonathan faced the Cavalry and Archers. I think I am right in my argument, and that my conjecture is more than probable; which is all that I propose to aim at. If the Author of this Book had reported this affair not altogether so obscurely, we should have discoursed more pertinently concerning it.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Joseph. Antiq. l.xiii. c. 8. & 1 Macc. x. 69. & seq.
Joseph. Antiq. l. xiii. c. 8.

Apollophanes

APOLLOPHANES, was killed with his Brothers Chæreas and Timotheus in the fortress of Gazara, by twenty of Judas Maccabæus's Soldiers, 2 Macc. x. 37.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Apollos

APOLLOS, a Jew of Alexandria, who [In the year of J. C. 54.] came to Ephesus during the absence of St. Paul, who was gone to Jerusalem. He was an eloquent man, and mighty in the Scriptures. [Acts xviii. 24.] He was instructed in the way of the Lord; and as he spoke with zeal and fervour, he taught diligently the things of the Lord, knowing only the baptism of John. So that he was only a Catechumen, and did not as yet distinctly know the mysteries of our Religion: But he knew that Jesus Christ was the Messiah, and declared himself openly to be his Disciple. When therefore he was come to Ephesus, he began to speak boldly in the Synagogue, and to shew that Jesus was the Christ. Aquila and Priscilla having heard him, took him home with them, instructed him more fully in the ways of God, and baptized him, probably, in the name of Jesus Christ.

Some time after he had a mind to go into Achaia, and the brethren having exhorted him to undertake this journey, they wrote to the Disciples, desiring them to receive him. He arrived at Corinth, and was there very useful in convincing the Jews out of the Scriptures, and demonstrating to them that Jesus was the Christ. Thus he watered what St. Paul had planted in this City. But [1 Cor. iii. 7.] the great fondness which his Disciples had for his person had like to have produced a [Rev.ix.11.] Schism; some saying, I am of Paul; others, I am of Apollos; I am of Cephas. But this division, which St. Paul speaks of in his first Epistle to the Corinthians, did not prevent St. Paul and Apollos from being closely united by the bands of charity. Apollos hearing that the Apostle was at Ephesus, went to meet him, and was there when St. Paul wrote the first Epistle to the Corinthians, wherein he testifies that he had earnestly entreated Apollos to return to Corinth, but hitherto had not been able to prevail with him; that nevertheless he gave him room to hope that he would go when he had an opportunity.

St. Jerom says[1], that Apollos was so dissatisfied with the division which had happened upon his account at Corinth, that he retired into Crete, with Zena a Doctor of the Law; and that this disturbance having been appeased by the Letter which St. Paul wrote to the Corinthians, Apollos returned to this City, and was Bishop there. The Greeks, in their Calendars, make him Bishop of Duras; and in their Menæa they set him down as second Bishop of Colophon in Asia. Ferrarius says, he was Bishop of Iconium in Phrygia; others that he was Bishop of Cæsarea.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Hieronym. ad Tit. iii.

Apollyon

APOLLYON,[1] a Greek word, which signifies the Destroyer, and answers to the Hebrew Abaddon; which signifies the same thing. St. John in the Revelations says, that an Angel having opened the bottomless pit, a thick smoke issued out of it, and with this smoke locusts like horses prepared for battle, and commanded by the Angel of the bottomless pit, called in Hebrew, Abaddon; in Greek, Apollyon; and in Latin, Exterminans.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ἀπολλύων, Disperdens. Heb. .אבדון

Aporior

APORIOR, this verb is not common; it signifies to be in doubt, uncertainty, or perplexity: we meet with it in the Vulgate, Eccl. xviii. 6. Cum quieverit aporiabitur; when a man shall meditate quietly upon the wonders wrought by God, he will be exceedingly amazed. And in Isai. lix. 6. Aporiatus est, quia non est qui occurret; he was grieved that no one interposed to stop him. And in S. Paul, 1 Cor. iv. 8. Aporiamur, sed non destituimur; we are perplexed, but are not discouraged. In Eccluf. xxvii. 5. we likewise meet with aporia, which is derived from the same root, Sic aporia hominis in cogitatu illius; by often ruminating and reflecting, we at last find our selves more embarrassed and uncertain.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Apostate

APOSTATE. They principally are called by this name, who forsake true Religion to imbrace idolatry, Mahometism, Heresy, Schism, or any other Religion whatsoever, besides that which is approved of God, as Judaism was before the coming of Jesus Christ, and Christianity now is, since the death of our Saviour. They likewise are called Apostates, who forsake any holy profession, whereunto they have ingaged themselves by solemn vows, in order to return to a secular way of life. In Scripture the name of Apostate is not always taken in this sense. For example, in Job, God says to the King, Thou art an Apostate, as the Vulgate translates it; the Hebrew imports only, Who says to the King Belial, Thou art one of no worth, a wicked man. And in Proverbs vi. 12. The man who is an Apostate is good for nothing. The Hebrew has it, the man of Belial, the wicked man. And in Ezekiel ii. 3. Gentes apostatrices, that is, Nations that have rebell'd against the Lord. And when it is said, that wine and women will make wise men apostatize, the meaning is, that these two things are the most dangerous rocks, that man is exposed to, and ingage him most in sin and irregularity.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Apostle

APOSTLE. This word comes from the Greek, Apostolus, which signifies an Envoy. The Hebrews had their Apostles, who were sent by their Patriarch to collect every year a certain kind of tribute, which the Jews paid him, and was called Aurum coronarium[1]. Some assert, that before Jesus Christ, they had another sort of Apostle[2], whose imployment it was to collect the half Shekel, which was to be paid by every Israelite to the Tabernacle or Temple of the Lord. The Deputies whose businels it was to levy the half Shekel before the destruction of the Temple, might be called Apostles. But I cannot observe distinctly that this name was given them, as it was to other officers, belonging to the High-Priests and Heads of the people, who were sent to carry their orders to the cities and provinces, when any affairs relating to Religion were to be transacted.

For example, S. Paul was deputed to the Synagogues of Damascus, with directions to seize on and imprison all those who professed the Religion of Christ Jesus. The Apostle alludes to this custom, according to the remark of S. Jerom[3], when in the beginning of his epistle to the Galatians, he says, that he is an Apostle not of man, neither by man, but by Jesus Christ: as if he had said, that he was not an Apostle, after the manner of such as were seen among the Jews, who derived their mission from the chief Priests only, or principal men of the nation, but that he was the Apostle of Jesus Christ himself.

Eusebius and the same St. Jerom[4] speak likewise of Apostles who were sent by the Jews to defame Jesus Christ and his Disciples. Justin the martyr in his Dialogue against Trypho, says, they sent those whom they called Apostles, who dispersed circular letters filled with calumnies against the Christians. Epiphanius speaking of these Apostles[5], observes, that this was a very honourable and profitable imployment among the Jews.

As to the Apostles of Jesus Christ, they were the first and most distinguished of his Disciples; he invested them with an authority superior to that of any others, filled them with his Spirit, trusted them particularly with his mysteries, and chose them out of all those, who followed him, to raise the edifice of his Church upon them. Jesus Christ after his Resurrection sent them into all the parts of the world with commission to preach and baptize in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost, and with power to work miracles and cures of all kinds. The names of the twelve Apostles chosen by Jesus Christ are these, 1. Peter, 2. Andrew, 3. John the Evangelist, 4. Philip, 5. James Major, 6. Bartholomew, 7. Thomas, 8. Matthew, 9. Simon, 10. Thaddæus, or Jude, 11. James Minor, 12. Judas Iscariot. This last having betrayed his Master, and in despair hanged himself, S. Mathias was chosen in his place. Lastly, S. Paul having been converted in a miraculous manner by Jesus Christ himself, was reckoned among the Apostles of the first rank. We shall give some account of the life of every Apostle in particular under the titles belonging to them.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

L. xiv. Codic. Theod. de Judæis.
Vide Gothofredi Notas in Cod. Theod. l. xiv.
Hieronym. in Epist. ad Galat. v. 1.
Euseb. in Isai. xviii. Hieronym. ibidem.
Epiphan. Hæres. 30.

Appaim

APPAIM, the Son of Nadab, 1 Chr.xi.30.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Apphus

APPHUS, the Sirname given to Jonathan Maccabæus, 1 Macc. xi. 5. This word Apphus may signify one who faints away[1], or one who abounds, or one who scatters and disperses, according to the different ways of writing it.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

אפוסdefi-ciens. abundare. spargere.

Appia

APPIA, the Wife of Philemon, S. Paul's friend. It is believed, that she suffered martyrdom with her husband Philemon; and their festival is observed upon the 22d of November.

A PARTICULAR DESCRIPTION of the COUNTRIESmention'd by the APOSTLES & pass'd through by them as they PREACH'D the GOSPEL.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Apple

APPLE, Pomum, Malum. The word Malus or Malum is sometimes taken in general, and answers to the Hebrew Peri[1], which signifies Fruit; and sometimes for an Apple and Apple-tree, and answers to the [Deut. xxxiii. 14.] Hebrew Taphuah[2]. Moses blessing Joseph, wishes him the precious fruits brought forth by the Sun and Moon, that is to say, fruits produced by the rains and dews of Heaven, and by the gentle influences of the Sun and Moon. Or, according to the letter of the Hebrew, The precious fruits brought forth by the Sun, and the precious things put forth by the Moon. The reading in the Vulgate is, De pomis cœli; de pomis fructuum solis & lunæ. The Chaldee and several others by the fruits of the Moon understand those, which come every month, and by the fruits of the Sun, those which come but once in the year. There are some trees, such as the fig-trees and the orange-trees, which have fruit almost always upon them. Moses adds, the fruits of the ancient mountains, which probably signifies the vines, olive-trees, and other trees, which grow in the mountains.

[Job. ix. 26. אניות .אבה] Job describing very light vessels, which go very swiftly, makes use of this expression, Quasi naves poma portantes: but the Hebrew has it, As the ships of Abah, which is differently explained, Ships of desire, which have the wind wished for; in the Syriac it is, Enemies Ships; in the Chaldee, Ships loaden with excellent fruit; others say, Ships well equipt; lastly, Ships of the river Aba, in Babylonia.

[Psalm lxxviii. 1.] The Psalmist complains to God[3], that the enemies had reduced Jerusalem to pomorum custodiam, to such a condition as to be no better than the cabbin of a centinel, who guards the fruits and vineyards. The Hebrew Hijim, signifies properly an heap of sand and ruins, or a mass of stones laid together in the fields or vineyards. Compare Micah i. 6. Ponam Samariam quasi acervum lapidum in agro, cum plantatur vinea.

[Cant. vii. 13 מגדים Magadim.] The Spouse in the Canticles says, that she has all sorts of fruits new and old at her house, which she has laid up for her beloved, In portis nostris omnia poma, &c. But the Hebrew reads Magadim, things delicious and sweet. In our gates are all sorts of delights, new and old, which I have reserved for thee, O my beloved.

[Prov. xxv. 2.] Solomon in his Proverbs says, that a word fitly spoken is like apples of gold in pictures of silver. The Vulgate says, in lectis argenteis, in silver beds; but in the Hebrew it is, like apples of gold in baskets of silver. These golden apples are probably oranges or citrons. The first fruits, as the Rabbins say, were carried in silver baskets to the Temple. [Lev. xix. 23.] God commanded the Hebrews, when they planted fruit-trees, to pluck off the first fruits, and not to eat them. For the three first years these fruits were thought to be unclean. In the fourth year all the fruit was consecrated to the Lord, and in the fifth, not before, the proprietor began to gather it for his own use. This shewed the sovereign dominion of God over all the Earth, and all that it produced.

Brocard[4] acknowledges, that apples, pears, cherries, and such like fruits are very rarely found in Palestine; but in their room they have abundance of other fruits, which are to be seen all the year upon their trees; so that very frequently there are blossoms and fruit at the same time upon them: and this perhaps is what Moses intended to describe under the name of Fruits of the Moon; as we have observed a little higher. They have likewise abundance of citrons, and a sort of apple-tree of a very particular species. It is a tree which lasts not above two years; but when it is withered, the roots of it produce another. Its leaves are so long, that they equal the height of a man standing upright; and so large, that two of these might easily cover a man's whole body. It bears apples in great plenty, as large as an egg, covered with a pretty thick skin, and of a yellow colour. Its fruit hangs in clusters like grapes; these bunches, wherein there are sometimes an hundred apples, are as large as a moderate basket. We see in Josephus[5], and throughout all the Scripture, that figs, olives, dates, mulberries, pistacho-nuts, almonds, capers, and grapes, were very common in Palestine. Authors speak likewise of the Balsam-tree of Judæa, as of a shrub, which is to be found only in that country. There were nuts also and carob-beans growing there, such as the prodigal Son would have been glad to have satisfied his hunger [Luke xv. 16.] with. The Spouse in the Canticles speaks of a cluster of cypress, which is a shrub about the height of a pomegranate tree; but the [Cant. i. 14.] fruit of this tree was probably to be commended only for its good scent.

Scripture[6] and the Historians[7] mention fruits brought from the neighbourhood of Sodom, which on the outside appeared to be fair and of a lively red colour, and within were very bitter, and as it were full of soot and ashes. Terram ipsam specie torridam vim frugiferam perdidisse, says Tacitus[8], nam cuncta sponte edita, aut manu sata, sive herbâ tenùs aut flore, seu solitam in speciem adolerunt, atra & inania velut in cinerem vanescunt. Tertullian speaks of them after the same manner[9], Olet adhuc incendio Terra, & si qua illic arborum poma cernantur oculis tenus, cæterum contacta cinerescunt[10].

ADAM's APPLES. James de Vitry[11] relates that there are trees in Palestine which bear very fine fruit, and are observed to have the mark as it were of a man's biting. Hottinger speaks likewise of a tree which is to be seen at Tripoli in Syria, commonly called Almauz, or Adam's Apples. This tree produces no branches, but only leaves, extended in the form of fingers, and so long and large that one alone is sufficient to cover a man. The fruit of this tree is like a green bean, with a sweetness like that of honey, and the scent of a rose. Some likewise call that fruit Adam's Apples which grows in Palestine, and at Alexandria; and is seen to hang in clusters in such great quantity that there are sometimes twenty of them together, and of such a size that they equal the largest pears. They are very sweet, and of a very good taste, and the leaves of this tree are every one almost two foot or a cubit in length. Some say, that if this fruit is cut in a particular manner, the figure of a Crucifix is to be discerned in it. See hereafter MANDRAKES.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

פריPeri. Fructus, Pomum. In acervos lapidum. Aquil. Εἰς λιθύριον.

תפוחTaphuah. Pomum, Malus.

לעייִמHieronym.

Brocard. Descript. Terræ Sanctæ p. 281.

De Bello, l. ii. c. 18.

Deut. xxxii. 32. De vinea Sodomorum vinea eorum.

Vide Joseph. Plin. l. v. c. 16. Strabo. l. xvi. alios passim.

Tacit. hist. l. v. c. 6.

Tertull. Apolog. c. 40.

Translators' note. Maundrell describing the Dead Sea, tells us, that for the Apples of Sodom so much talked of, he neither saw nor heard of any hereabouts: nor was there any tree to be seen near the Lake, from which one might expect such a kind of fruit. Which induces him to believe that there may be a greater deceit in this fruit than that which is usually reported of it; and that its very being, as well as its beauty is a Fiction, only kept up, as my Lord Bacon observes many other false notions are, because it serves for a good allusion, and helps the Poet to a similitude. Maundrell's Journey from Aleppo to Jerusalem. p. 85.

Jacob. de Vitriaco hist. Jerosolym. c. 85.

Apries

APRIES, King of Egypt, called Pharaoh-Hophrah, in the Sacred Writings. [Jerem. xliv. 30.] Apries was the Son of Psammis, and Grandson of Nechos, or Necho, who made war against Josiah King of the Jews. He reigned five and twenty years, and for a long time was looked upon as one of the happiest Princes in the world[1]. But having equipp'd a fleet in order to reduce the Cyrenians, he lost almost his whole army in this expedition. The Egyptians were resolved to make him responsible for their ill success, and rebell'd against him, pretending that he undertook this war with a design only to get rid of his subjects, and govern the remaining part of them with a more absolute authority. He deputed to them one of his principal officers, named Amasis, with the hopes of bringing them to a sense of their duty. But while he was haranguing them, one of the multitude placed a diadem about his helmet, and proclaimed him King; the rest applauded him, and Amasis did not oppose it. He then put himself at the head of them, marched against Apries, gave him battle, defeated him intirely, and took him prisoner. Amasis treated him with a great deal of kindness, but the people were not satisfied till they had taken him out of Amasis's hands, and strangled him. Such was the end of Apries according to [Ibid.] Herodotus. Jeremiah threatned this Prince with being put into the hands of his enemies, as he had delivered Zedekiah King of Judah into the hands of Nebuchadnezzar King of Babylon.

[Ezek. xvii. 15. Ezek. xxix. In the Year of the World 3414. before J. C. 584.] This Prince had made a league with Zedekiah, and promised him his assistance. Zedekiah therefore relying upon the forces of Egypt, revolted from Nebuchadnezzar King of Babylon; who in the beginning of the year following marched against Zedekiah; but as there were some other people in Syria, who likewise had shaken off their obedience, he proceeded first to attack [2 Kings xxv. 5. 2 Chron. xxxvi. 17 Jerem. xxxix. 1. — lii. 4.] them, and reduce them to their duty; then towards the end of the year he laid siege to Jerusalem. Zedekiah defended himself there for a long time, that he might give Pharaoh -Hophrah, or Apries, leisure to come to his assistance. Apries left Egypt with a powerful army; the King of Babylon thereupon raised the siege of Jerusalem, and marched to meet him; but Apries and his people not daring to run the hazard of a battle with the Chaldeans, retreated into Egypt, and abandoned Zedekiah to all the dangers of war wherein they had themselves ingaged him. Ezekiel reproaches them severely with this baseness, and threatens them that since they had been a staff of reed to the house of Israel, and an occasion of falling; for when they took hold of thee by thy hand, thou didst break and rent all their shoulder; he prophesies that Egypt should be reduced to a solitude, that God would send the sword against it which should destroy man and beast in it: And this was afterwards executed. First in the person of Apries, who was deprived of his kingdom by Amasis, as we have before mentioned, and next by the conquest which the Persians made of Egypt. To this King likewise we apply the following words of [Hab. xi. 15.] Habbakuk, Wo unto him that giveth his neighbour drink, that puttest thy bottle to him, and makest him drunken also, that thou mayest look on their nakedness.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Herodot. l. ii. c. 161, 162. & 169.

Aquila (I)

[Acts xxvii. 2 &c.] I. AQUILA, a native of Pontus in Asia Minor, was converted by S. Paul, together with his Wife Priscilla to the Christian Religion. As Aquila was by trade a tent-maker, as well as S. Paul, the Apostle lodged with him at Corinth. Aquila came thither not long before from Italy, being obliged to leave Rome upon the Edict which the Emperor Claudius had published, banishing all the Jews from that City[1]. S. Paul afterwards quitted Aquila's house, and abode with Justus near the Jewish Synagogue at Corinth, probably because Aquila was a converted Jew, and Justus was a convert from Paganism; that so the Gentiles might come and hear him with more liberty. When the Apostle left Corinth, Aquila and Priscilla acompanied him as far as Ephesus, where he left them to confirm that Church by their instructions and example, while he pursued his journey to Jerusalem. They did him very great services in this City, so far as to expose their own lives to preserve his. They were returned [Rom. xvi. 4.] to Rome, when S. Paul wrote his epistle to the Romans, wherein he salutes them with great encomiums. Lastly they were come back to Ephesus again when S. Paul wrote his second epistle to Timothy, wherein he desires him to salute them in [2 Tim. iv. 19.] his name. What became of them from this time to that of their death is not distinctly known. The Greeks give Aquila the title of Bishop and Apostle, and perform their grand office in honour of him upon the 12th of July. The Festival of Aquila and Priscilla is set down in the Calendar upon the eighth of the same month.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Sueton. Claud. c. 25.

Aquila (II)

II. AQUILA, a celebrated Translator of the writings of the Old Testament out of Hebrew into Greek. He was made Surveyor of the works by the Emperor Adrian, when the city of Jerusalem, from him called Ælia, was rebuilt by his orders, and had an opportunity, while he was in this imployment, to see the first Disciples of Jesus Christ, with the purity of whose lives, and eminent examples of their virtues, he was so affected as to embrace Christianity, and desire Baptism, which he obtained. But as he was very much addicted to judicial Astrology, the governor of the Church remonstrated to him, that this curious and unprofitable art was inconsistent with the profession of Christianity; and observing that he was not willing to relinquish it, they expell'd him out of the Church. Aquila not able to endure the shame of their excommunication, renounced Christianity, embraced Judaism, and received Circumcision. He then applied himself to the study of the Hebrew tongue; and having acquired an accurate knowledge of it, he undertook to translate the Old Testament out of Hebrew into Greek; and designing to conceal the ignominy of his apostacy, he endeavoured, as Epiphanius says[1], from whom we learn these particulars, to distort the sense of those passages, which related to our Saviour, and to interpret them in a sense different from that of the Septuagint. Which he executed, as is believed in the Emperor Adrian's time.

[Acts xviii. 7.] Aquila at first set about his translation of the Scripture, designing to keep close to the meaning of the text, but to render it in a more free and easy manner. After which he undertook another more exact one, wherein he attempted to render the most minute terms in their literal signification[2]; and this last the Jews call'd an accurate translation, and valued it above any other version. Aquila contentiosus interpres, qui non solum verba, sed etymologias quoque verborum transferre conatus est, says S. Jerom in his epistle to Pammachius. Notwithstanding in other places the same Father commends Aquila's very scrupulous and literal exactness[3]. Aquila, qui non contentiosius ut quidam putant, sed studiosius verbum interpretatur ad verbum. And whereas the generality of the Ancients accuse him of changing the sense of such passages as favour Christianity, S. Jerom writing to Marcella a Roman lady, tells us, that he was continually examining Aquila's translation, and every day discovered many things in it, which confirm our belief, Ut amicæ menti fatear, quæ ad nostram fidem pertineant roborandam plura reperio.

We do not know certainly, whether Aquila was originally a Jew, or whether he was a Gentile before he embraced Christianity. Epiphanius makes no doubt but that he was by birth a Gentile, but others urge such difficulties against it, as it is not easy to resolve. It is matter of dispute likewise whether he be the same person with Onkelos, the celebrated Paraphrast of the Pentateuch. There are some Rabbins and Christian authors for the affirmative, and others for the negative. This is certain, that in the account of the generality of the Jews, Onkelos is more ancient than the Aquila we are speaking of; and there are many places in Onkelos and Aquila, that are differently translated. The reader may consult F. Montfaucon's Dissertation before his Hexapla, p. 51. and Walton's and Serrarius's Prolegomena.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Epiphan. lib. de ponderib. & mensuris.
Origen. ad African. Hieron. in Ezechiel. Idem ad Pammach.
Hieronym. ad Damas.

Aquilo

AQUILO, the North-wind. The Hebrews generally denote the North by the left hand, the South by the right, with the West behind, and the East before according to the disposition of a man, whose face is turn'd to the East. See our Comment upon Genesis xiii. 9.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ar

[1 Chr. ii. 22.] AR, Areopolis, Ariel of Moab, or Rabbath-Moab. All these names signify the same City, the Capital of the Moabites, situated upon the river Arnon, which divides it in two. Theodoret[1] calls it simply Ariel. Eusebius[2] says the same thing, and adds, that the idol of these people, probably Moabites, was called Ariel. E [Isa. xvi.7, 11.] piphanius says, that a small tract of land, adjoining to that of Moab, Iturǽa, and the Country of the Nabathæans, is called Arielitis[3]. The Prophet Isaiah calls it the City with walls of burnt brick; ad muros cocti lateris; in Hebrew, Kirharescheth, or Kirjath-hares. St. Jerom says h this City was entirely destroyed by an earthquake, when he was a young man. We believe Charac-Moba, or Charax- Moab, to be the same with Ar and Areopolis.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Theodoret. in Isai. xv. & xxix.
Euseb. in locis Hebr. in Areopolis.

Epiphan. l. i. contra hæref. p. 40.

Ara

ARA, the Son of Jether, of the Tribe of Asher, 1 Chron. vii. 38.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Arab

ARAB, a City belonging to the Tribe of Judah, Josh. xv. 52.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Arabah

ARABAH, a City belonging to the Tribe of Benjamin, Josh. xviii. 28.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Arabia

ARABIA, one of the most considerable parts of Asia. Arabia lies to the South-East of Judæa, or the Country of the Hebrews. It is distinguished into three parts, Deserta, Petræa, and Arabia Felix. Arabia Deserta is to the East of the mountains of Gilead, between the Euphrates to the East, and the mountains of Gilead to the West. It comprehends the Itureans, the Eastern part of the Edomites, the Nabathæans, the people of Kedar, and others, who lead a wandring life, and have no cities, houses, or fixed habitations. This Country seems more generally to be described in Scripture under the word Arab, which signifies properly in Hebrew, the West, or people gathered together. They may have taken the name of Arabim, or Western, from their situation to the West of the Euphrates. In Eusebius, and the Authors of that time, and of the following ages, the Country and greatest part of the Cities beyond Jordan, and of what they call the third Palestine, are made parts of Arabia.

Arabia Petræa reaches to the South of the Holy Land; Petra is the Capital of it. This Country contains the Southern Edomites, the Amalekites, the Cushims, called Ethiopians by the interpreters of Scripture; and some other people, such as the Hivites, the Meonians, or Maonims. These people are at present known only under the general name of Arabians. But it is of consequence to take notice of the ancient inhabitants of these Cantons, as they are set down in the Text of Scripture. In this Country was Kades-barnea, Gerar, Beersheba, Lachish, Libnah, Paran, Arad, Hasmona, Oboth, Phunon, Dedan, Segor, &c. There, lastly, is Mount Sinai, where the Law was given to Moses.

Arabia Felix lay extended more towards the South. It was bounded to the East by the Persian Gulph; to the South by the Ocean, and to the West by the Dead Sea. As this part of Arabia did not immediately [1 Kings x. 1.] border on the Holy Land, or the Country of the Hebrews, there is not so frequent mention of it in Scripture. We are of opinion that the Queen of Sheba, who came to visit Solomon, was Queen of part of Arabia Felix. This Country abounds with riches, and particularly in odoriferous spices.

[2 Chron. xvii. 1. Ch. ix. 14. Ch. xxii. 1. Isai. xiii. 20.] The Scripture mentions pretty frequently the Arabians as a powerful people, who valued themselves upon their wisdom. Their riches consisted principally in their flocks and their cattle. They paid King Jehoshaphat an annual tribute of seven thousand seven hundred sheep, and as many goats. The Kings of Arabia furnished Solomon with a great quantity of gold and silver. They loved war, but made it rather like thieves and plunderers, than soldiers under discipline, and accustomed to military exercises. Their abode was generally under tents; they lived at liberty in the field, concerned themselves little about cultivating the earth, and were not very obedient to their Kings. This is the idea which the Scripture gives us of them.

[1 Chron. iv. 40,41. 2 Chron. xx. 21. Gen. xiv. 5. Deut. ii. 8,9, &c.] The ancient inhabitants of Arabia, who dwelt there before Abraham came into the Land of Promise, were descended from Ham. We find the Midianites there, of the race of Cush, among whom Moses retired. Abimelech King of Gerar is known to have lived there in the time of Abraham; and the Amalekites in the time of Moses. The Hivites, the Amorites, Kenites, Meonians or Mahonians, extended themselves a good way into Arabia Petræa; the Horims in the Mountains which lie to the South of the land of Canaan, and to the East of the Dead Sea. The Rephaïms, Emims, Zuzims, and Zamzummims, inhabited the Country called afterwards Arabia Deserta, which was peopled by the Ammonites, Moabites and Edomites.

As to Arabia Petræa, and Arabia Felix, they were possessed by the descendants of Ishmael, who were more particularly known by the name of Arabians. See the Article ISHMAELITES.

Here follows the history of the first inhabitants of Arabia, as it is related by the Arabians themselves, together with an account of the manner wherein they are said to have settled there.

The first people of Arabia[1], whom they call pure and unmix'd Arabians, descended from Cahtan, or Joktan, the Son of Eber, and Brother of Peleg; who after the division of languages came and inhabited this Peninsula of Asia, which may have derived its name from Jarab, the Son of Joktan, or from a wide plain in the Province of Tahamat, called Arabor.[2] The second Arabians, who succeeded these first, are the descendants of Ishmael the Son of Abraham and Hagar, who came and settled among the ancient pure Arabians, and was the Father of the mix'd Arabians, or Mota- Arabes, or Mosta-Arabes, or Ishmaelites, very different from the modern Mosarabians, or Mostarabians, so called by the Spaniards, because they are Arabians blended with the nations which lie out of Arabia.

The pure and ancient Arabians were divided by Tribes, as well as the Sons of Ishmael; and some of these Tribes are still in being in Arabia, others are lost and extinct; whether they were exterminated for their sins by the particular wrath of God, or were consumed by intestine wars, which were very common in this country.

As to the Ishmaelites, they formed twelve Tribes, according to the number of the twelve Sons of Ishmael, viz. Nebajoth, [13,14,&c.] Kedar, Abdiel, Mibsam, Mishma, Dumah, Massa, Hadar, Tema, Jetur, Naphish, and Kedemah. But altho' these people are very careful in their enquiries into, and preservation of their genealogy, yet they cannot trace it so high as Ishmael; they are obliged to stop at Adnan, one of his descendants; and the genealogy even of Mahomet rises no higher.

[Ver. 1, 2, 3, &c.] Besides the descendants of Ishmael, who peopled the greatest part of Arabia, it must be acknowledged likewise, that the Sons of Abraham and Keturah, of Lot and Esau, and some of Nahor's, dwelt in the same country, and extirpated part of the old inhabitants.

The inhabitants of Arabia are divided into those who dwell in cities, and those who live in the open fields: the latter have their abode continually under tents, and in desart places; they are called Bedoui, or Arabi; they are much honester and more subtle than the Arabians who live in towns. The Arabians are farther divided into Gentiles and Mussulmen; the former preceded Mahomet, and are called among them Arabians in the days of ignorance; the others are those who have received the doctrine of the Unity of God, which was preached by Mahomet. These are called Mos-lemoun, or Mussulmen; that is to say, Believers; these are the people who conquered the greatest part of Asia and Africk, and several large Provinces even in Europe, and who founded the four great Monarchies of the Turks, and Persians, of Morocco, and Mogul; without taking notice of several Provinces possessed by them in the Indies.

Arabia, as we have already observed, is divided into three principal parts, viz. Teman, which we call Arabia the Happy; the Provinces of Tahamah and Temanah, are as it were in the center of the country. Arabia the Desart is called Hegiaz, and is become the most celebrated of all, by reason of the Cities of Mecca and Medina, which are situated in it. Arabia the stony goes at present by the name of Hagar, or Hagiar; which signifies Stone, and the Capital of this Country is so called. But Arabia Deserta, in the account of the Ancients, extended much farther towards Syria and Euphrates.

Joktan the Son of Eber having settled in Teman, erected a Kingdom there, whereof he was himself the first Monarch[3]. His Son Jarab succeeded him, who introduced the Arabian language, which borrowed its name from him, as did in like manner the whole Country. The third King of Arabia Felix was Jaschab; and the fourth Abdalscham, he was sirnamed Sobas, and from him the old Sabæans derived their name. His descendants reigned in Teman above two thousand years before the original of Mahometanism.

The Arabians in general are a cunning, witty, generous, and ingenious people; excessive lovers of Eloquence and Poetry; but then they are superstitious, vindictive, and sanguinary, and make no scruple of robbing, which they think allowable, because Abraham the Father of Ishmael gave his [Gen. xxv. 5, 6.] Son nothing.

The old Aarabians were all idolaters: they worshiped a Stone, says Clemens Alexandrinus[4]. Maximus Tyrius, and the modern Arabians, accuse them of the same superstition. The black Stone which was the object of their worship is still to be seen in the Porch of the Temple of Mecca. Herodotus[5] says they were acquainted only with two Deities, viz. Bacchus, and Venus the Celestial. Bacchus, or Dionysius, they called Urostalt; and Venus, Alilat, or Alilatta. Strabo[6] tells us, that they adored none but Jupiter and Bacchus: which Alexander the Great being informed of, resolved to subdue them, that he might oblige them to worship him as their third Deity.

The modern Arabians, who are descended from Ishmael, acquaint us with some names of the old Deities adored by these ancient people of Arabia; for example, Lakiah, whom they invoked for rain; Hafedah, to whom they had recourse for preservation from bad accidents in their journeys; and Razora, of whom they desired the necessaries of life. They likewise worshiped Lath, or Ablat, which is a diminitive of Abla, the true name of God; Aza, or Uza, derived from Aziz, which signifies the Mighty God. Menat, derived from Menan, distributer of fa vours. It is very probable that they adored likewise the two golden Antelopes, whereof there is such frequent mention in their histories, and which were offered at the Temple of Mecca. The ancient Midianites, among whom Moses retired, and was received by Jethro, worshipped Abda and Hinda[7]. Finally Urotalt, mentioned by Herodotus, denotes probably the Sun, and Alitat the Moon. The first of these words may signify the God of light; the second the God, or Goddess without any addition: the Goddess in the way of eminence. See farther what we have said above in the article Abraham.

Since the Gospel was first preached, many of the Arabians have embraced Christianity: we know of some Bishops and Martyrs, who were of Arabia; and in Origen's time a Council was held there against certain hereticks. The Mahometans themselves acknowledge[8], that before Mahomet there were three tribes in the country which professed Christianity viz. those of Thanouk, Babera and Naclab. That of Thanouk having had some difference with their neighbours upon the subject of Religion, retired to the province of Baharain upon the Persian Gulf, and there settled.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Hieron. in loc. Hebr.
Bibl. Orient. p. 120, 121.
Bibl. Orient. p. 477. Jaman, or Jeman.
Clem. Alex. in Protreptico. 29. Οἱ Ἄραβες τὸν λίθον.
Herod. l. i. & 3. c. 8.
Strabo, l. xvi. p. 510.
D'Herbolet. Bibl. Orient. p. 476.
Dem. p. 852. Thanouk.

Araceans

ARACEANS, or Arkites, people descended from Arak the Son of Canaan, who dwelt in the City of Arce or Arca, of the foot of mount Libanus. Josephus and Ptolemy both speak of this City. Antoninus's itinerary places it between Tripolis and Antaradus. Josephus[1] produces a fragment of the history of Assyria, wherein it is related, that the inhabitants of Arce submitted to the Assyrians, together with those at Sidon and old Tyre. And in another place he says[2], that the river Sabbaticus empties itself into the Mediterranean between Arce and Raphanæa. I do not at all doubt, but that this is the very Arce mentioned in Josephus, and said to belong to the tribe of Asher[3], and otherwise called Antipas. In Solomon's time Baariah was intendant of the tribe of Asher, according to the Hebrew Text; but [1 Kings iv. 16.] Josephus says, he was governor of the country round about the City of Arce, which lies upon the sea[4]. In the latter times of the Jewish commonwealth, this City was part of Agrippa's Kingdom[5].

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Antiq. l. ix. c. 14.
De Bello Jud. l. vii. c. 14.
Joseph. Antiq. l. v. c. 1. p. 142.
Antiq. l. viii. p. 256.
De Bello l. vii. c. 24.

Arach

ARACH, a City of Chaldæa, built by Nimrod the Grandson of Cush, Gen. x. 8. This in all probability is the town of Aracca, placed by Ptolemy in the Susiana upon the Tigris below the place of its confluence with the Euphrates. Ammian calls it Arecha. From this City it is that the Arectæan plains[1], which abound with Naphta, and some times take fire, derive their name. From this City of Chaldæa it is, probably that the Arabians have taken the name Iraca or Eraca, a large province of Asia, which is extended along the two shores of the Tigris, in like manner as Egypt includes the two coasts of the Nile.

The length of Iraca is measured from Takrith to Abadan, where the Tigris discharges itself into the Persian Gulf[2], and is an extent of twenty days journey: Its breadth is taken from Cadisic to Habran, and is of eleven days journey. The Capital of this province under the Chaldæans and Assyrians was Babylon, under the Princes of the name of Cosroës Madain, and under the Arabians, Bagdat. This is the province which is called Chaldæa or Babylonia by the Greeks and Latins.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ardet Aracteis aut unda per hospita campis. Tibull.
Bibl. Orient. p. 317.

Arad

[Numb. xxi. 1.] ARAD, Arada, Arath, Adraa, or Adra, a city lying to the South of the tribe of Judah and the land of Canaan, in Arabia Petræa. [Numb. xxxiii.] The Israelites having advanced towards the land of Canaan, the King of Arad opposed their passage, defeated them, and took a good booty from them. But they devoted his country as a thing accursed, and destroyed all the Cities thereof as soon as they became masters of the land of Canaan. Arad was rebuilt, and Eusebius places it in the neighbourhood of Kades, at four miles distance from Malathis, and twenty from Hebron. The Israelites in their journey through the wilderness having departed from Sepher came to Arad, and from thence went to Makkelath, which I take to be the same as Molathis.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Aradus

ARADUS, a City and Island in the Mediterranean, near the coast of Phœnicia, over against Antaradus, which is a City upon the continent. The Isle of Aradus is but seven furlongs, or eight hundred seventy five paces about, and is two hundred paces distant from the continent. The Aradians or Arkites, who were the descendants of Canaan, dwelt at Aradus, Gen. x. 17. This country was promised to the Israelites; but they did not get possession of it till perhaps the reign of David or Solomon.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Arah (I)

I. ARAH, the Son of Ullah, a Grandson of Asher. 1 Chr. vii. 39.

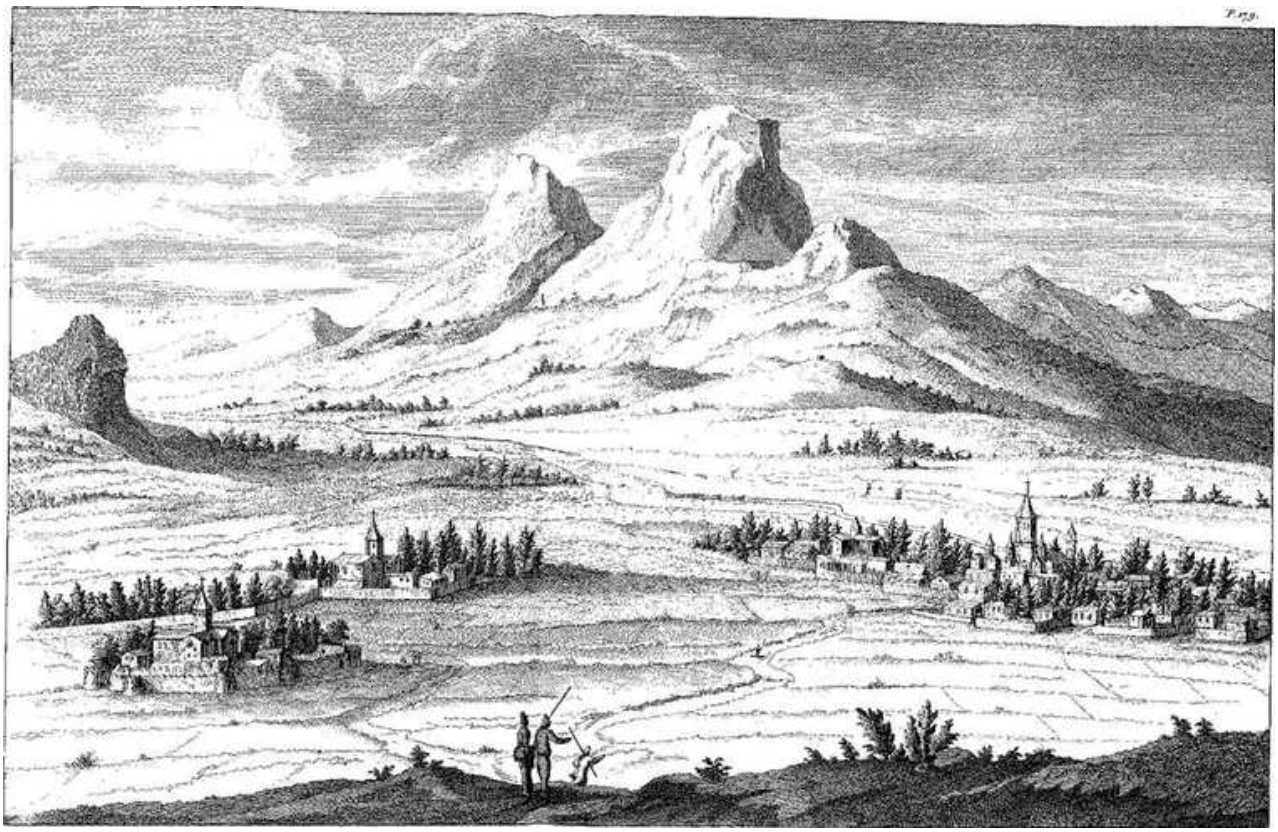
Read this article in its place on the printed pages



Arah (II)

II. ARAH. His Descendants returned from Babylon to the number of seven hundred seventy five. See Esra ii 5.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Aram (I)

[Genes. x. 22. Aram.] I. ARAM, fifth Son of Shem, was the Father of the people of Syria, who from him are called Aramæans. There are many countries of this name, distinguished in Scripture, Aram Naharaïm, or Syria of the two rivers, that is, Mesopotamia, Aram of Damascus, Aram of Soba, Aram Bethrohob, and Aram of Maacha; be cause the Cities of Damascus, Soba, Bethrohob, and Maachah, were in Syria; or at least because Syria contained the Cantons or Provinces of Soba, Maachah, Rohob, &c. Homer and Hesiod call those Aramæans, whom the Greeks of more modern times call Syrians. The Prophet Amos seems to [Amos ix. 7.] say that the first Aramæans dwelt in the Country of Kir, in Iberia, where the river Cyrus runs; and that God brought them from thence, as he did the Hebrews out of Egypt. But when this transmigration happened, no one knows. It must be very ancient, since Moses always calls the Syrians, and people of Mesopotamia, Aramites. The people of Syria often made war against the Hebrews. David subdued them, and obliged them to pay him tribute. Solomon preserved the same authority over them. But after the separation of the ten Tribes, it does not appear that the Syrians were generally subject to the Kings of Israel; unless perhaps under Jeroboam the Second, who restored the Kingdom of Israel to its ancient boundaries, 2 Kings xiv. 25.

A PROSPECT OF MOUNT ARARAT FROM THE SIDE WHERE ARE THE THREECHURCHES.according to M. de Tournefort.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Aram (II)

II. ARAM, the Son of Esrom, and Father of Amminadab. Ruth iv. 20. Matt. i. 34. Luke iii. 33.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Aran

ARAN, the Son of Dishan, and Brother of Uz, of the race of Esau. Gen. xxxvi. 28.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Arapha

ARAPHA, or rather Rapha, Father of the Giants of Raphaim. The word Rapha may likewise signify simply a Giant, and it is possible that the Giants of Anak's race, who were formerly in Palestine, are called Raphaim, only because of their gigantick stature, and the generical signification of the name Rapha. See RAPHA, and RAPHAIM.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ararat

ARARAT, a famous Mountain in Armenia, on which the Ark is said to have [Gen. xiii. 4.] rested after the deluge. It is affirmed, but without any good proof, that some remains of Noah's Ark are still to be seen upon the top of this Mountain. John Struis in his Voyages assures us, that he went up to the highest part of it, and that an Hermit who abode there, declared to him, that some broken pieces of the Ark were to be seen there; and at the same time presented him with a Cross made out of the wood belonging to this famous Vessel. But M. de Tournefort, who was upon the spot, has assured me that there was nothing like it; that the top of Mount Ararat is inaccessible, both by reason of its great height, and of the snow which perpetually covers it. Mount Ararat is twelve leagues from Erivan, Eastward, and is situated in a vast plain in the midst whereof it rises, and has nothing contiguous to it on any side. See our Comment upon Gen. viii. 4.

Josephus[1] says that the remains of Noah's Ark were still to be seen in his time, in the Canton of Adiabene, called Cæron, which is a country that produces Cinnamon very plentifully.

The Eastern people call Mount Ararat, upon which the Ark settled, Ar-dag, or Parmak-dagh[2], the finger Mountain; because it is strait, and stands by it self, like a finger when held up. It is so high as to be seen at the distance of ten days journey, according to the stages of the Caravans. The City of Tauris is not far from it. Tavernier says that there are many Monasteries upon Mount Ararat[3]; that the Armenians call it Meresoussar, because the Ark stop'd there. It is as it were taken off from the other Mountains of Armenia, which make a long chain; and from the middle to the top of it is often covered with snow for three or four months of the year. He adds[4], that the City of Nekgivan, or Nakschivan, which is built at three leagues distance from Mount Ararat, is the most ancient in the world; that Noah settled there when he came out of the Ark; that the word Nak-schivan is derived from Nak, which signifies ship, and schivan, stopt or settled; in memory of the Ark's resting on Mount Ararat. Others[5] call this Mountain Gioud, or Giouda, in the Country of Moussal, or Diar-rabiah, in Mesopotamia, at the foot whereof there is still a Village which goes by the name of Thamanin and Corda; by Thamanin is meant eight, in memory of the eight persons who came out of the Ark; and Corda denotes the Gordian Mountains so well known among the Ancients. We have before taken notice of their opinion who affirm that the Ark rested on a Mountain near Aramea in Phrygia[6].

The Persians call Ararat Mount Asis; as if they should say, the happy or fortunate Mountain, by reason of the choice which God made of it to serve as a port for Noah's Ark. The Armenians maintain, by tradition, that since Noah no one has been able to climb this Mountain, because it is perpetually covered with snow which never melts, but to make room for some newly fallen; that Noah, when he left the Ark, settled at Erivan, twelve leagues from Ararat, and that at a league from this City, in a very happy aspect, this Patriarch planted the vine, in a place where at present there is excellent wine made.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Joseph. Antiq. l. x. c. 2. Ἔστι δὲ αὐτῇ καὶ τὰ λείψανα τῆς λάρνακος - - - καὶ μέχρι νῦν ταῦτα τοῖς ἰδεῖν βουλομένοις ἐπιδείκνυται.
Voyage de la Boulaye, p. 42. Bibl. Orient. p. 404.
Tavernier Voyage de Perse, t. 1.
Idem t. 4. p. 398.
Bibl. Orient. p. 404. Giond.
See M. Saurin's Differt. Hist. p. 115, 131, &c.

Araunah

ARAUNAH or Ornan. During the Pestilence which ravaged Jerusalem, the [1 Chron. xxi. 18. & seq. and 2 Sam. xxiv. 18.] Angel of the Lord commanded Gad to bid David come and raise an Altar to the Lord, in the Threshing-floor of Araunah the Jebusite. Araunah was probably an old inhabitant of Jerusalem, whose Habitation and Threshing-floor were upon Mount Moria, where afterwards the Temple of Jerusalem was built. David therefore went immediately towards the place of Araunah's abode, with a design to execute the Lord's order. As soon as Araunah perceived him, he ran to meet him, threw himself prostrate before him, and asked what it was that he desired of him. David told him, he came to buy his Threshing-floor, with an intention to erect There an Altar to the Lord, that so he might be pleased to put a stop to the Plague, which made great havock among the people. Araunah offered him not only the Threshing-floor, but wood likewise and oxen for a burnt Sacrifice. But the King would not accept them, till he told him what the price of them should be; for said he, God forbid that I should offer unto the Lord of that which cost me nothing. David therefore bought the Threshing-floor and the oxen for fifty shekels of silver, or as the Chronicles have it, six hundred shekels of gold. Concerning this diversity, the exposition of Interpreters may be consulted.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Araunah

[2 Sam. xxiv. 16, 18. גרן .הארונה] ARAUNAH, his Threshing-floor, or as it is called in Chronicles, the Threshing-floor of Ornan, was situated upon mount Sion, where the Temple of Jerusalem afterwards [1 Chron. xxi. 18. & seq. 2 Chron. iii. 1. גרן .ארנן Area Ornan.] was built. This Threshing-floor belonged to Araunah or Ornan the Jebusite. David having seen the Angel of the Lord there preparing to afflict the City of Jerusalem with the Plague, and having understood likewise that this was the place, whereon the Lord had directed to have his worship established, bought the floor at the price of fifty shekels of silver, or six hundred shekels of gold, as the Chronicles import; and there offered to the Lord a burnt Sacrifice of the oxen which he had bought of Ornan, and consumed it on a fire made out of the wood belonging to the waggons, and the yokes.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Araxes

ARAXES, a celebrated river which springs from mount Ararat, six miles from the source of the Euphrates, and empties itself into the Caspian Sea. This river is so large and rapid, when it is swelled by the melted snow, that the banks which are raised against it, and other structures of any kind are carried away with it[1]. The noise of its waters terrifies those who hear it. The current drives boats with so much impetuosity, as to make them go half a mile in an instant. Attempts have been often made to build bridges over this river, but all those that have been built, have constantly been overset with its waters. Paul Lucas[2] says, notwithstanding, that at present there is a bridge over the Araxes; and there is a tradition in the country, that the spring-head of this river is in the place where Paradise was. We believe it to be the same with [Genes. ii. 13.] Gihon mentioned by Moses. The name of Gihon in Hebrew signifies to flow with impetuosity, as Araxes does in Greek. See our Comment upon Genesis, Chap. ii. ver. 13.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Chardin. Voyage de Perse.
Lucas, T. i. c. 27. p. 362, 363.

Arbaces

ARBACES, General of the Medes, and Governor of Media by the appointment of Sardanapalus King of Assyria[1]. He seeing the softness and effeminate manners of Sardanapalus, could not prevail with himself to obey him any longer. He took arms against him in conjunction with the principal Officers of the Median Army: He made an alliance with Belesis Governor of Babylon, and both together attacked Sardanapalus with an Army of four hundred thousand men. Arbaces was worsted in the three first battles which he fought with the King of Assyria: but in the fourth the Bactrians coming over to him, he fell suddenly in the night upon Sardanapalus, and drove him from his Camp. This Prince retired to Nineveh, and gave the command of the Army to Salamenes his wife's brother. Salamenes lost two battles against the conspirators, and almost all his Troops were cut in pieces. Nineveh was besieged three years, from the year of the world 3254 to 3257. But this last year, the river Tigris, being swelled in an extraordinary manner by reason of the rains, overflowed its banks, and beat down two and twenty furlongs, or two thousand five hundred and fifty paces of the city wall. The conspirators hereupon entred the Breach and saluted their principal Commander Arbaces , as their King. But Arbaces was content with having restored his Country to its liberty, and would not take upon him the title of King. After his death, there was an interregnum, which lasted to the year 3296, when Dejoces was acknowledged to be King of the Medes.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Diodor. l. ii. Herodot. l. i. Justin. l. i. Dr. Prideaux asserts, that Tiglath-Pilesèr and Arbaces are the same persons expressed under these two distinct names; contrary to the opinion of Archbishop Usher, who supposes one to have possessed Media, the other Assyria. Diodorus Siculus positively tells us, that Arbaces had Assyria as well as Media for his share in the partition of the former Empire, therefore there is no room for a Tiglath-Pilesèr, or a Ninus Junior distinct from him, to reign in Assyria during his time. Prid. Connect. Part. 1. Book 1.

Arbattis

ARBATTIS, a City of Galilee, which was taken and destroyed by Simon Maccabæus, 1 Macc. v. 23.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Arbe

ARBE, otherwise Hebron. Arbe was probably the first founder of Hebron, as Iconius intimates. Arbe was at first possessed by the Giants of the race of Anak; afterwards it was given to the Tribe of Judah, and the property of it yielded to Caleb. The Rabbins have a tradition, which is related by S. Jerom in his Hebrew Questions upon Genesis, that Hebron was called Arbe, that is to say, four, because the four most illustrious Patriarchs Adam, Abraham, Isaac and Jacob were buried there; or as others think, because four of the most celebrated Matrons of Antiquity were interr'd there, viz. Eve, Sarah, Rebeccah and Leah. But there is no account to be made of these rabbinical Traditions.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Arbela (I)

I. ARBELA. We know more Cities than one of this name in Palestine. Josephus speaks of a place called Arbela in Galilee, near Sephoris[1]. Bacchides in his way from Antioch to Judæa incamped at Arbela. There were caverns near Arbela, of a very difficult access, whither thieves sometimes retired. Herod found means to force them thence[2], but they returned afterwards, and did a great deal of mischief in the country. He says, that being sent Governour of Galilee in the beginning of the war against the Romans, he fortified a place called Arbela[3].

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Antiq. l. xii. c. 18. Vide & l. xiv. c. 27.
Ibid.
De Bello, l. ii. c. 25. & de vita sua. p. 1013.

Arbela (II)

II. ARBELA, a City situated in the great plain nine miles from Legio, probably towards the East. Eusebius and S. Jerom.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Arbela (III)

III. ARBELA, a City beyond Jordan, belonging to the region of Pella. Eusebius.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Arbela (IV)

IV. ARBELA, a place spoken of in Hosea x. 14. where we read in the Vulgate, Sicut vastatus est Salmana à domo ejus, qui vindicavit Baal: As Shalman was overcome, by him who made war against him after having destroyed the Altar of Baal. His design is to describe Gideon. See Judg. vi. 25. vii. viii. 10, &c. But the Hebrew imports, As Shalman spoiled Betharbel in the day of battel. Which by some Commentators is explained, as relating to the taking of the City Arbela by Salmanefer. But as this event is not taken notice of in History, it were better to read in this place with S. Jerom and the Alexandrian Manuscript Jerobaal; and understand it, as the Vulgate does, of the victory obtained by Gideon over Zalmunna.

[1 Macc. ix. 2.] Arbela or Arbah-el[1] signifies very fine countries, countries of God: for which reason we find so many places named Arbela. It is said in the Maccabees, that Bacchides and Alcimus came into Galilee, and incamped at Maseloth which is in Arbela. The city Masal or Misheal was in the [Josh. xix. 26.] Tribe of Asher, near unto which were very fine fields, and a place called Arbela.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

ערבה אלCampestria Dei.

Arca

ARCA, a City of Phœnicia. See Araca and Araceans. It was allotted to the Tribe of Asher. It is situated between Arad and Tripolis. Josephus places the river Sabbaticus between Arca and Raphanœa.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Arce

ARCE, otherwise called Rekem or Petra, the Capital of Arabia Petræa. See Rekem and Petra.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Arceutinus

ARCEUTINUS. There is mention in the 2 Chron. ii. 8. of Ligna Arceutina, Juniper-wood. But the Hebrew Berushim signifies [1 Chron. xi. 8. ברושים עצי.] properly Fir or Deal.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Arch-Triumphal

ARCH-TRIUMPHAL. It is said in the first Book of Samuel, that Saul after [1 Sam. xv. 12.] the defeat of the Amalekites erected a triumphal Arch on Carmel: Eo quod venisset Saul in Carmelum, & erexisset sibi fornicem triumphalem. The Hebrew imports, that he lifted up an hand, that is to say, a monument. We do not know what nature or form this monument was of. But it was probably some heap of stones or column to preserve the memory of his victory over Amalek. The Author of the Hebrew Traditions on the Books of Kings says, that Saul's triumphal Arch was composed of branches of myrtle, palm and olive-trees.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Archelais

ARCHELAIS, a City or Town of Judæa, built by Archelaus, Ethnarch of the Country, and Son to Herod the Great, some time before his exile at Vienne in Dauphiny. Peutinger's Tables place it between Jericho and Scythopolis, probably in that large plain which lies upon the Western shore of the River Jordan.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Archelaus (I)

I. ARCHELAUS, King of Cappadocia, the Father of Glaphyra the Wife of Alexander Son to Herod the Great. Archelaus was a wise and judicious Prince, who having learned how ill disposed Herod was to Alexander his Son-in-law, came to Jerusalem[1], seemed at first to espouse Herod's passion, declared to him that he was ready to break off the marriage of his Daughter with Alexander, condemned extremely the conduct of this young Prince, and commended that of Herod; then when he saw the King softned, he began dexterously to lay the faults which Alexander was accused of, upon those who were about him; and Pheroras Herod's Brother being come to visit Archelaus, and to desire him to make his peace with his Brother, Archelaus engaged him to confess to Herod, that he was the cause of all the trouble that was in his family, and to beg his pardon for it; and that then he, Archelaus, would join with him, in order to restore him to the King's good graces. Pheroras believed him, and Archelaus by his prudence re-established peace in Herod's Court, and reconciled him with his Sons Alexander and Aristobulus, and with Pheroras his Brother.

Some time after Alexander having been accused to Herod of designing to retire with his Wife to his Father-in-law Archelaus, and having owned the thing, Herod conceived great suspicions against Archelaus, and in the last Assembly convened by him at Berytus, where the death of Alexander and Aristobulus was determined, he would not suffer Archelaus to be present, tho' the Emperor Augustus had expresly appointed that he should, in the letter which he wrote to Herod upon this occasion[2].

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Antiq. l. xvi. c. 12. & de Bello Jud. l. i. c. 17. p. 757, 759.
Antiq. l. xvi. c. 16. in fine, & c. 17. initio. De Bello, l. i. c. 17. p. 760.

Archelaus (II)

II. ARCHELAUS, Son of Herod the Great and Maltace his fifth Wife. Herod having put to death his Sons Alexander, Aristobulus, and Antipater, and expunged Herod Antipas out of his will, whom at first he had declared King, substituted in his room Archelaus, and gave Antipas the title of Tetrarch only. After the death of Herod[1], Archelaus ordered his will to be read, wherein he was declared King, upon condition nevertheless that Augustus was consenting. Hereupon the whole Assembly cried out, Long live King Archelaus; and the Soldiers promised to be as faithful to him, as they had been to his Father. After that Archelaus had buried his Father in a magnificent manner, he came to Jerusalem, and there mourned seven days, according to the custom; then gave a splendid entertainment to all the people. He went to the Temple, harangued the multitude, promised them all manner of good treatment, and declared that he would not take upon himself the title of King, till the Emperor had confirmed it to [In the Year of the World 4001. 3 years before the vulg. Æra, and in the first year of J. C.] him.

The people notwithstanding in a tumultuous manner demanded to have those put to death, who had advised Herod to execute certain Zealots that had pulled down a golden Eagle which was fixed upon one of the Temple Gates. Moreover, they required Archelaus to divest Joazas of the High Priesthood, and loaded the memory of the late King with reproaches and ill language. Archelaus sent troops to suppress the Mutineers, and his forces killed near three thousand of them about the Temple. After this he imbarked at Cæsarea, in order to go to Rome, and desire of Augustus the confirmation of Herod's will, whereby he was declared King of Judæa. Antipas his Brother went to Rome likewise, with an intention to dispute the Kingdom with him, pretending that Herod's first will, by which he was appointed King, should be preferr'd to the last, which was made by him when his understanding was not so entire as it had been.

The two Brothers Archelaus and Antipas procured able Orators to set forth their pretensions before the Emperor; and when they had done speaking, Archelaus threw himself at Augustus's feet; Augustus gently raised him, and told him that he would do nothing contrary to Herod's intention, or his interests. He refused nevertheless to decide any thing concerning this affair at that time. Some time after the Jews sent a solemn Embassy to Rome, to desire of Augustus that he would permit them to live according to their own laws, and continue upon the footing of a Roman Province, without being subject to the Kings of Herod's family, but to the Governours of Syria only. Augustus gave them audience, and heard likewise what Archelaus had to say against this; then broke up the Assembly without declaring himself.

[In the Year of the World 4002. of J.C. 2. before the vulgar Æra 2.] At length, after some days, he sent for Archelaus, gave him the title, not of King, but of Ethnarch, with one moiety of the Territories which his Father Herod had enjoyed. He promised him the Crown likewise, if it appeared by his good conduct that he deserved it. Archelaus, upon his return to Judæa, deprived Joazas of the High Priesthood, under pretence that he had countenanced the seditious against him, and gave this dignity to his Brother Eleazar. He governed Judæa with so much violence, that seven years after his return from Rome v, the chief Men of the Samaritans and Jews accused him before Augustus. The Emperor immediately sent for the Agent employed by Archelaus at Rome, and without condescending so much as to write to Archelaus, he commanded the Agent to set out instantly for Judæa, and enjoin Archelaus, from him, to come speedily to Rome, and there give an account of his conduct.

Upon this Prince's arrival at Rome, the [In the Year of the World 4010. of J. C. 10. of the vulgar Æra 7.] Emperor call'd for his Accusers, and permitted him to defend himself. He did this so ill, that Augustus banished him to Vienne in Gaul w, where he continued in exile to the end of his life; the year whereof is not very well known.

ARCHI[2]

A VIEW OF THE AREOPAGUS AT ATHENS

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Antiq. l. xvii. c. 10. w Antiq. l. xvii. c. ult. & l. ii. de Bello, c. 6.
Ibid. c. 11. v Antiq. l. xvii. c. ult. & de Bello, l. i. c. 6.

Archi

[Ecclus. xxxii. 1,2. Josh. xvi. 2. Col. iv. 17.] ARCHI, a City in the Tribe of Manasseh, beyond Jordan.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Archippus

ARCHIPPUS, whom St. Paul speaks of to the Colossians. Some are of opinion, that Archippus was Bishop of Colosse. Others will have it, that he was Priest only, or Deacon of this Church. The Author of the Apostolical Constitutions maintains[1], that he was Bishop of Laodicea in Phrygia. The Greeks observe his Festival upon the 22d of November; and say that he suffered Martyrdom at Colosse, in the reign of Nero. The Latins honour him upon the 20th of March.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Constitut. l. vii. c. 46.

Archisynagogus

ARCHISYNAGOGUS, Chief of the Synagogue. This was the title of an Office among the Jews. There were generally many men of eminency who presided in the Synagogues, and in all Assemblies that were held there; their number was not fixed, nor equal in all places: this depended upon the extent of the several Cities they were in, or the number of the people who came to their Synagogues. In some particular Synagogues there were perhaps seventy Elders, who presided; others perhaps had but ten, others nine, others four or five only, or no more than one Head or Archisynagogus. They are sometimes called the Angels or Princes of the Synagogue. The Jews give them the name likewise of Chachamim, or Wise. They presided in religious Assemblies, invited those to speak who were thought capable of it; judged of affairs relating to money, of thefts, and other matters of this nature. They had a right to have those whipt who were convicted of acting contrary to the Law. They had a power likewise to excommunicate and expel those out of the Synagogue who had deserved this punishment. See Basnage's History of the Jews, l. vii. c. 7. and Vitringa de Synagog.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Architriclinus

ARCHITRICLINUS, which is generally translated Steward, signifies rather the Master or Intendant of the Feast; one, says Gaudentius of Brescia[1], who is the Husband's friend, and is charged with the order and œconomy of the Feast. He gave his directions to the servants, had an eye over every thing, commanded the tables to be covered, or to be cleared of the dishes, as he thought most proper. Qui conviviorum apparatum, ministros atque ordinem dispensaret; & hic pro officio Architriclinus, hoc est, triclinii præpositus, dicebatur. He tasted and distributed wine to the Guests. See how the Author of Ecclesiasticus describes this office of Master of the Feast, If thou be made the Master of a Feast, lift not thy self up, but be among them as one of the rest, take diligent care of them, and so sit down. And when thou hast done all thy office, take thy place, that thou mayest be merry with them, and receive a Crown for the well-ordering of the Feast.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Gaudent. Brixian. tract. 9.

Arcturus

ARCTURUS, signifies properly the Bear's tail, and denotes a star, which was behind the great Bear's tail, the rising and setting whereof presaged, as was said, storms and bad weather[1].

Arcturus signum sum omnium quam acerrimum. Vehemens sum, cùm exorior, cùm occido, vehementior.

[Job ix. 9. Arcturus.] Job speaks of Arcturus, or the Bear, under the name of Ash; and of Orion, under the name of Chesil. The Astronomers place this star, which is of the second magnitude, in the heart of Scorpius. The Pleiades he mentions by the name of Chimah; and lastly, the Antarctick Pole in what he calls the Chambers of the South. See our Comment upon Job ix. 9. and xxxvii. 9.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Plaut. in Rudente, Prolog.

Ard (I)

I. ARD, the youngest Son of Benjamin, Gen. xlvi. 21.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ard (II)

II. ARD, the Son of Gera, the Son of Benjamin, Gen. xlvi. 21.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ard (III)

III. ARD, the Son of Bela, of the Tribe of Benjamin, Head of the Family of the Ardites, Numb. xxvi. 40.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ardon

ARDON, the Son of Caleb and Azuba, 1 Chron. ii. 18.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Areli

ARELI, the youngest Son of Gad, Gen. xlvi. 16.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Areopagus

AREOPAGUS, the place where the Areopagites, who were the celebrated Judges of Athens, formerly assembled[1]. The Areopagus is situated upon an eminence, which in old times was almost in the middle of the City. At present it is out of Athens. There are some remains of it still visible in the foundations, which form a semi-circle, built with square stones of a prodigious size. These foundations support a terrass or plat-form of about an hundred and forty paces, which was the court, where this august Senate was held. In the midst of it there was a Tribunal cut in a rock, and all about were seats cut likewise in stone, wherein the Judges of the Areopagus formerly heard causes in the open air, and without any covering z. Not[2] far from hence there were some caves hewn likewise in the rock, where probably the prisoners were kept in custody, who were to appear before the Judges. It is said that they pronounced sentence in the night time, that so they might not be affected by the sight of the persons who spoke and defended themselves. S. Paul having preached at Athens against the plurality of Gods, and declared, that he came to reveal that God to the Athenians, whom they adored without knowing him, was carried before the Areopagites, as the introducer of a new Religion. [Acts xvii. 19, 22, & seq.] He spoke there upon this occasion with so much wisdom, that he converted Dionysius one of his Judges, and was dismissed without any one's having any thing to say to him.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Translators' note. Father Hardouin, in his de Nummis Herod, p. 351. extravagantly declares, that the Areopagus was not a Senate, but a Town, whither the people of Athens used to walk for their diversion, and entertain themselves with hearing and relating news. See the confutation of this opinion in Basnage Histoire des Juifs, T. 1. c. 14. in whose writings we have a confutation of many groundless and surprizing novelties in the criticisms of this learned Jesuit, which contradict the most authentick histories.

See Mr. Spon's Voyage into Greece in 1676.

Areopolis

AREOPOLIS, the same as Ariel, or Ar, or Rabbath-Moab. See Ar.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Aretas (I)

I. ARETAS, King of Arabia. There are many Princes of this name in Arabia. Josephus[1] speaks of a King Aretas, who was Antipater's great friend, and not only received Hircanus, the High-Priest and Prince of the Jews, at the time when he was dispossessed of his dignity by his Brother Aristobulus, but undertook likewise to re-instate him in his Kingdom; to this end he marched against Aristobulus with an Army of fifty thousand Arabians, defeated him, and obliged him to fly for safety to Jerusalem, whither Aretas followed, and [In the Year of the World 3939, before J. C. 61, before the vulgar Æra 65.] besieged him. The City was already in the possession of the King of the Arabians, and Aristobulus was master of the Temple only, where he was defending himself with the Priests, when Scaurus, sent by Pompey came to Damascus: Aristobulus and Hircanus sent Ambassadors to him, and promised him large sums of money to ingage him in their party. Scaurus preferr'd the offers made by Aristobulus, whose wealth and liberality were well known to him, and obliged Aretas to quit the siege of the Temple, threatning, in case of his refusal, to declare him an enemy to the Roman people. Aretas therefore returned into his own country, but not without interruptions in the way: for Aristobulus marched against him and Hircanus with a powerful Army, and giving him battle in a place called Papyron, killed about seven thousand of his men.

[In the Year of the World 3942, before J. C. 56, before the vulgar Æra 60.] Three or four years after Scaurus, whom Pompey had left Governour of Judæa, marched against Aretas[2]; but as he could not march his Army as far as Petra, the capital of Arabia Deserta, by reason of the difficulty of the ways, and the unevenness of the country, he pillaged all the neighbouring places. But his Troops at last suffering by famine, he deputed Antipater to go to Aretas, ingage him to make peace, and to pay a sum of money to prevent the farther ravaging his country. Aretas gave three hundred talents, and so the War was ended as much to the advantage of Scaurus as of Aretas. It is said, that when Scaurus was Ædile, he struck a medal, on which was represented a King of the Barbarians on his knees before him, presenting him with a Crown borne upon a camel's back, with this Inscription, Marcus Scaurus Ædile had this medal struck by order of the Senate. And at the bottom: King Aretas[3].

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Antiq. l. xiv. c. 2, 3, 4.
Antiq. l. xiv. c. 9. & de Bello, l. i. c. 6.
Pigh. Annal. Rom. l. iii. apud Usser. anno 3943. M. SCAURUS ÆD. EX S. C. Et infra, REX ARETAS.

Aretas (II)

II. ARETAS, called before Æneas, King of Arabia, Son or Grandson to him, of whom we have been speaking, succeeded Obodas in the Kingdom of Arabia[1]. One Syllæus having prejudiced Augustus against him, by accusing him with having assumed the Crown of Arabia without waiting for the Emperor's consent; he was for some time very much perplexed, not being within distance to be heard, and confute the calumnies of his Enemy. But the Emperor having at length discovered the impostures of Syllæus[2], confirmed Aretas in possession of the Kingdom. Herod-Antipas married Aretas's Daughter. But some [In the Year of the World 3998, before J. C. 2, and 5 years before the vulgar Æra. In the Year of the World 5040, of J. C. 40. of the vulgar Æra 37.] time after Antipas divorced her, and took Herodias his Sister-in-law, his Brother Philip's Wife[3]. The Princess, Aretas's Daughter, retiring to her Father's, he declared war against Antipas, under pretence of some difficulties concerning the limits of Gamala. Aretas's Army was successful, and Antipas's was intirely defeated. All the world thought this a just punishment for the murder of John-Baptist, whom Herod had beheaded for the liberty he took in reproving him for his Incest.

Antipas wrote to Tiberius an account of what happened, and of the war which Aretas had carried on against him; which so provoked the Emperor, that he sent a letter to Vitellius, who was then Governor of Syria, commanding him to make war against Aretas, and if he could take him alive, to bring him to him; if not, to send his head to him. Vitellius took the field, and advanced with his Army as far as Ptolemais, and the Jews intreating him not to pass through their country with his Troops, by reason of the images, which they bore in their Standards, he marched his Army through the great plain with a design in all probability to pass the Jordan at Scythopolis. As to himself, he went with his friends to Jerusalem, where he continued three days. During his stay here news was brought of Tiberius's death, and Caïus's elevation to the Empire. Whereupon Vitellius commanded his Army to return, being unwilling to begin this war, without orders from the new Emperor.

[In the Year of the World 4041. of J. C. 41. of the vulgar Æra 38.] The year following, the Apostle S. Paul, who had been for some time at Damascus, and had preached the Gospel with much zeal there, was persecuted by the Jews of that City, which was then under Aretas's obedience. They prevailed with the Governor to keep the gates shut day and night, to prevent Paul from making his escape. But he being informed of their design, consented to the request of the Brethren, and by them was let down in a basket from the City walls: and so [Acts ix. 23, 24, &c. 1 Sam. xii. 5. 2 Cor. xi. 13.] happily escaped the snares which they had laid for him.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Antiq. lib. xvi. c. 15.
Antiq. l. xvi. c. 16. p. 557. d.
Antiq. l. xviii. c. 7.

Areth

ARETH or Hareth, a Forest in the Tribe of Juda, whereof there is mention in the first book of Samuel. In this place David secured himself from the persecution of Saul.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Arethusa

ARETHUSA, a City of Judæa in the neighbourhood of Marissa, and Azoth, and Jamnia[1]. This City is not mentioned in the sacred Writings, but in process of time it became very famous.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Joseph. Antiq. l. xiv. c. 8. & de Bello, l. i. c. 5.

Argenteus

ARGENTEUS, a piece of Silver. This word is generally understood to signify a Shekel, which according to our computation, is worth two shillings, three pence farthing and a half.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Argob (I)

I. ARGOB, a Canton lying beyond Jordan in the half-tribe of Manasseh, and in the country of Bashan, one of the most fruitful on the other side of Jordan. In the region of Argob were the sixty cities called Chavoth-Jair, which had very high walls and strong gates, without reckoning many villages and hamlets, which were not inclosed. There are some remains of the word Argob observable in Ragaba, a City beyond [Deut. iii. 4, 14. and 1 Kings iv. 13.] Jordan. See the following Article.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Argob (II)

II. ARGOB, the capital City of the region of Argob, whereof we have been speaking. Eusebius[1] says, that in his time Argob was a place fifteen miles distant from Gerasa, westward. It is probably the same as Ragab or Ragaba mentioned in the Mishna[2] and Josephus[3]. The Samaritan Translation instead of Argob, generally puts Rigoba.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Euseb. in Argob.
Mishna in Menachoth. viii. 3.
Antiq. l. xiii. c. 23.

Argob (III)

III. ARGOB, a place in Samaria near [2 Kings xv. 25.] the royal palace, where Pekah the Son of Remaliah assassinated Pekahiah, the Son of Menahem King of Israel.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ariarathes

ARIARATHES, King of Cappadocia, Son of another Ariarathes. He, whom we are speaking of was forced out of his Dominions by Orophernes, and was afterwards restored by the Romans[1], in the year of the world 3847. The Roman Senate wrote to him in favour of the Jews, about the year 3861. See 1 Macc. xv. 22.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Appian. Syriac. p. 118. Polyb. Legat. 126.

Aridai

[Esth. ix. 9.] ARIDAI, the ninth Son of Haman, who was hanged upon a gibbet with his nine Brethren.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Aridatha

ARIDATHA, the sixth Son of Haman. Ibid.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ariel of Moab

ARIEL of Moab. There are two Ariels [1 Chron. xi. 22.] of Moab spoken of in Scripture, which are no other than the same City of Ar or Areopolis, the capital of Moab, divided by the river Arnon into two. See above Ar.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ariel

ARIEL, is taken likewise for the Altar of burnt Offerings, or for the City of Jerusalem in Isaiah xxix. 1, 2, 7. and Ezekiel xl. 15, 16. Ariel literally signifies a Lion of God, a very great Lion.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ariel (III)

III. ARIEL. Eusebius[1] says it is the name of an Idol worshipped by the Moabites, whose capital City was Ariel.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Euseb. in Ariel.

Arimanon

ARIMANON, a City of refuge beyond Jordan[1]. It is probably the same as Ramoth in Gilead. See Joshuah xxi. 38.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Antiq. l. iv. c. 7.

Arimathæa

ARIMATHÆA, or Ramatha, a City from whence came Joseph of Arimathæa, [Luke xxiii. 52.] mentioned in the Gospel. S. Jerom places it between Lydda and Joppa. Modern travellers speak of a City called Ramatha, between Joppa and Jerusalem, situated on a mountain. The name of Ramatha, whence Arimathæa is formed, signifies Height. But this place is very different from Ramathaïm-zophim, Samuel's country. Arimathæa lay Westward of Jerusalem, and Ramathaïm to the North [1 Sam. i. 1.] of the same City in the mountains of Ephraim. Besides, the way which Saul took, when he was seeking after his Father's Asses, will not allow us to place Ramathaïm Westward of Jerusalem, as we [1 Sam. ix. 4, 5, 6.] may be easily convinced, if we follow him. For he set out from Gibeah, from thence he advanced Northward to the mountains of Ephraim; then he turned towards the West, and went to Shalisha Westward of Jerusalem, from thence he passed through the land of Shalim or Salem; that is to say, the country about Jerusalem, and so proceeding still towards the East, he went through the Tribe of Benjamin; and as he intended to return towards Gibeah, he came Northward into the land of Zuph, or Zophim, near Ramathaïm Zophim, where he spoke to Samuel. (It is my opi[1] nion that the City Ramathaïm-Zophim, is the fame as Ramah near Bethel, four leagues distant from Jerufalem.) When he [1 Kings x. 2, 3.] went from thence, Samuel told Saul, that as he returned to Gibeah, he would find two men who came from Rachel's fepulchre in the neighbourhood of Bethlehem, and by these he would be informed, that his Father's Affes were found; that a little farther he should meet three men, going in pilgrimage to Bethel; and that at last he should come to an eminence above Gibeah, the place of his birth, which was then in the poffeffion of the Philitines. See the Map.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Hieronym. in Epitaphio Paulæ. of

Arimi

ARIMI[1] are the fame as Arameans or Syrians, descendants of Aram. See Aram.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Strabo lib. xvi. ad finem.

Arindela

ARINDELA, a City of Palestine. In the Councils we meet with Bishops of Arindela.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Arioch (I)

[Judith i. 6.] I. ARIOCH, King of the Elicians according to the Vulgate, or King of the Elymæans according to the Syriac. We find one Arioch King of Ellafar in the [Genef. xiv. 1.] book of Genefis. The country of the Elicians we have no knowledge of; of the Elymæans or Elamites we have, which is that of the ancient Perfians. The Scripture informs us, that the battle between Arphaxad King of the Medes and Nabuchodonozor King of Affyria, was fought at Ragau, near the Tigris and Euphrates, in the plain of Arioch King of the Elimeans.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Arioch (II)

II. ARIOCH, King of Pontus, or, according to the Hebrew, King of Ellafar; or according to the Paraphrast Jonathan and the Syriac King of Telaffar. Now Telaffar was a Province beyond the Euphrates, not far from Armenia; for Ifaiah [Ifai. xxxvii. 1, 2.] speaks of the children of Eden that were at Telaffar. Arioch was in league with Chedorlaomer, and join'd with him in war against the Kings of Sodom and Gomorrha. See Genef. xiv. 1, 2, 3, &c.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Arioch (III)

III. ARIOCH, General of King Nebuchadnezzar's Troops. This Prince having had a dream which he had forgotten, was determined to compel the Magi, and the Interpreters of dreams, who were at Babylon, not only to interpret the dream which he had had, but likewise to recal it to his memory; and as this exceeded the power of the Magi to perform, he commanded Arioch to have them all put to death. Daniel having understood the King's orders from Arioch, required time for deliberation; and foon after discovered to the King both his dream and the signification of it.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Arisai

ARISAI, the seventh Son of Haman, [Esth. ix. 9.] who was hanged with his Father and his Brethren.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Arissa

ARISSA, the Wife of Japhet, according to the tradition of the Eastern People[1].

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Eufeb. Patriarch of Alex. tom. i. Annal.

Aristarchus

[Coloff. iv. 10. Philemon. v. 24. Acts xix. & xx. 5. xxvii. 2.] ARISTARCHUS, spoken of by S. Paul in his Epistles to the Coloffians and Philemon, and often mentioned in the Acts of the Apostles, was a Macedonian, and a native of Theffalonica. He accompanied S. Paul to Ephefus, and there continued with him for the two years of his abode there, partaking with him in all the dangers and labours of the Apostleship. He was very near being killed in a tumult raised by the Ephefian Goldsmiths. He left this City with the Apostle, and went along with him into Greece. From thence he followed him into Afia, from Afia into Judæa, and from Judæa to Rome. Ado and the Roman Martyrology make him Bishop of Theffalonica: but the Greeks fay he was Bishop of Apamea in Syria, and was beheaded with S. Paul at Rome in Nero's reign; continuing to the very last constantly attached to the Apostle.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Aristeas

ARISTEAS, the author of the History or rather Romance concerning the version of the Septuagint, is an Author, whose Original, Age and Country we are strangers to. He gives himself out to be an Egyptian, one of Ptolemy Philadelphus's life-guard, a great favourite of this Prince, and by religion an Heathen. But upon examining his work and his discourses, we may easily discover that he was a Jew. The sentiments, language, and expreflions of a Jew appear in all he fays. We know not in what time he lived; whether in the reign of Philadelphus King of Egypt, or of Philometor, as is differently related, or whether he were more modern. Dodwel in his Differtation upon Aristeas[1], thinks he lived after Philo the Jew, and that this last is the first writer who has spoken of a Translation of the holy Scriptures out of Hebrew into Greek[2], undertaken by the direction of Ptolemy Philadelphus. Aristobulus, who is supposed to be a Jew of the Peripatetick Sect of Philosophers, and is cited in Eusebius[3], speaks likewise of this Translation: but he names neither Aristeas nor Philo. Josephus the Historian is the first, who has particularly mentioned him. As to Aristobulus we shall say something of him hereafter. It is sufficient here to shew, that what is said of the person and history of Aristeas labours under very great difficulties, and is dress'd up with abundance of fables[4].

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Dodwel Differt. super Hist. Arist. c. 1.
Philo de Vita Mosis, l. ii.
Præparat. Evangel. l. iii. c. 9.

Translators' note. See a fuller account of this matter in Dr. Hoddy's Book de Bibliorum testibus originalibus, versionibus Græcis & Latinâ vulgatâ; in Dr. Prideaux's Connection &c. Part ii. Book i. and Basnage's History of the Jews. tom. vii. c. 7.

Aristobulus (I)

I. ARISTOBULUS, was a Jew of the [2 Macc. i. 10.] Priests family, a Philosopher, and Preceptor to Ptolemy King of Egypt. Clemens of Alexandria[1] cites the first book of Aristobulus dedicated to King Philometor, wherein he affirms, that before the Translation procured by Demetrius Phalereus, there was another, out of which Pythagoras and Plato borrowed many of their opinions. Anatolius, who is quoted in Eusebius[2], says, that this same Aristobulus was one of the seventy Interpreters, and that he wrote Comments on the books of Moses, which he dedicated to Ptolemy the Son of Lagus, and his Son Ptolemy Philadelphus. The same Clemens and Eusebius[3] believe this to be the Aristobulus mentioned in the Preface to the second book of Maccabees, and called there King Ptolemy's Master, who was of the stock of the anointed Priests; that is to say, of the Priests of the God of Israel, who were consecrated by the holy Unction.

[Rom. xvi. 11.] It is generally asserted, that the Ptolemy, who had Aristobulus for his Præceptor, was he, who is sirnamed Philometor. The letter wherein we find his name, is dated in the [Ibid.] hundred four-score and eighth year of the Greeks, which comes to the year of the world 3880. Philometor died in 3860, twenty years before: notwithstanding which Aristobulus may be styled this Prince's Præceptor. The difficulty does not lye here. But how shall we make it out that Aristobulus lived so long as to the year 3880, since he dedicated books to Ptolemy the Son of Lagus, who died in 3720, that is to say, an hundred and sixty years before ? He must have been at least twenty years of age, when he composed and dedicated these Books; so that in 3880 he would have been an hundred and ten years old, which does not seem to be at all credible. We had better therefore acknowledge, that the true Aristobulus mentioned in the Maccabees is very different from him, whom Clemens of Alexandria and Eusebius speak of; or at least that the latter is a spurious Author, under whose name several works have been published, which were written long since the Maccabees, and were unknown to all the ancients before Clemens of Alexandria. The Reader may consult Dodwel's Dissertation on the History of Aristeas. Chap. xxviii.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Clem. Alex. l. i. Stromat.
Euseb. l. vii. c. 32. Hist. Eccl.
Clem. Alex. l. v. Stromat. Euseb. Hist. Eccl. l. iii. c. 9.

Aristobulus (II)

II. ARISTOBULUS, whom S. Paul speaks of in his Epistle to the Romans, was, according to the modern Greeks, Brother to S. Barnabas. They say he was one of the seventy Disciples; that he was ordained a Bishop by S. Barnabas, or by S. Paul, whom he followed in his travels; that he was sent into England, where he laboured very much, made many converts, and at last ended his life. They keep his Festival on the 13th and 16th of March, and again upon the 31st of October. Others[1] have doubted, whether Aristobulus whom S. Paul speaks of were a Christian; because S. Paul does not salute him, but those only who were met together in his house. Others[2] make him to be the Father of the Apostles S. John the Evangelist and S. James Major, and confound him with Zebedee. But it is to no purpose to heap together a crowd of fables, since we know, that there is nothing certain concerning this Aristobulus.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Vide Paræum in Rom. xvi. 11.
Ibid.

Aristobulus (III)

III. ARISTOBULUS, otherwise called Judas and Philellen, or a Lover of the Greeks, Son of Hircanus, and Grandson of Simon Maccabæus, High-Priest and Prince of the Jews, gave several proofs of his valour in his Father's life time, during the siege of Samaria, which he directed together with his Brother Antigonus[1]. After that the City was taken[2], Hircanus intirely demolished it, and cast the materials into the brooks which run along by the foot of the mountain, upon which Samaria was built. Three years after, that is to say, in the year of the world 3898, Hircanus died and Aristobulus succeeded him[3]: but he reigned one year only. He put his Mother and three of his Brothers into prison; he was so cruel as to starve his Mother in her confinement, but gave his Brother Antigonus a large share of the Government.

He made war with the Itureans[4], people descended from Jethur one of Ishmael's Sons, who dwelt in Arabia beyond Jordan between the country of Damascus to the North, and the half tribe of Manasseh to the South. He subdued them, and forced them to [Genes. xxv. 15.] receive Circumcision by offering the alternative either of embracing Judaism or of departing out of their country, and going to seek a settlement in some other place. They chose rather to remain there, and perform what was required of them. Some time after he procured the death of his Brother Antigonus, by a very tragical accident. Aristobulus being indisposed sent his Brother Antigonus upon a military expedition, from which he returned successful. They who envied him, represented to the King, his Brother, that he had designs upon the Crown, that he was gone to the Temple in an equipage not becoming a private man, and that he would come very soon with a troop of armied Soldiers and kill him. The King at first could not imagine, that there was any thing in what they told him, and sent a message to his Brother, desiring him to come unarmed to him; and commanded his guards, if he came with arms, to dispatch him in a dark subterraneous place, thro' which he was to pass, in his way from the Temple to the King's Apartment.

The persons whom Aristobulus sent on this errand, instead of telling Antigonus that he should make his visit without arms, on the contrary informed him that the King was very desirous of seeing him in that beautiful suit of armour, which he was reported to have brought back with him from the war. Antigonus went immediately, and the guards who had orders to kill him if he came armed, massacred him as he was pressing to go forward. No sooner had Aristobulus committed this crime, but a fit of severe repentance seized him, which contributed not a little to the increase of his indisposition, and to the shortning of his life. Upon a certain day, as one of his servants was carrying out some blood which this Prince had vomited, he by chance let it fall, in that very spot where the marks of Antigonus's blood were still visible. They who were present made a great Outcry, which was heard by the King, who desiring to know the cause of it, and understanding what it was, he was so sensibly touched with it, that with many tears and sighs he broke out into this exclamation, Great God! thou dost revenge very justly the parricide which I have committed! How long will my guilty soul be thus confined within my body? As soon as he had pronounced these words, he expired; in the year of the World 3899. He was succeeded by his Brother Alexander Jannæus, whom Salome, or Alexandra, the Wife of Aristobulus, took out of prison immediately after the King's death.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Antiq. l. xiii. c. 18.
The Siege of Samaria lasted for a whole year, from 3894 to 3895.
Antiq. l. xiii. c. 19.
Ibid.

Aristobulus (IV)

IV. ARISTOBULUS, was the second Son of Alexander Jannæus, and younger Bro ther to the High Priest Hircanus. He de clared openly, that he disapproved of his Mother Alexandra's conduct towards some of the King his Father's old servants, who were imprisoned and put to death by her order, to gratify the Pharisees[1]; one day the friends and partisans of the late King waited on the Queen with Aristobulus at their head, and laid before her the services which they had done the late King, and their adherence to him in the course of all his wars; that it was very hard to make every thing at present criminal which they had performed for him; that they humbly intreated for permission to retire out of the Country, or at least to be disposed in places where she had Garrisons, that so they might be secured from the persecution of their enemies. The Queen, moved with their complaints, but unable to perform for them all that she could have wished, allowed them to retreat into those Castles where she had Garrisons.

Some time after she sent the Prince Aristobulus her Son[2] against Ptolemy the Son of Mennæus King of Chalcis, whose abode was at the foot of Mount Libanus, and who extremely incommoded his neigh bours, particularly the inhabitants of Damascus. Aristobulus marched with his troops towards Damascus, entred the City, and returned without having done any thing very considerable in this expedition. His great ambition was, to engage the troops in his interests, in order to make himself Master of the Kingdom, at his Mother's death.

[In the year of the World 3935.] As he saw his Mother Alexandra in a very low condition of health, he[3] stole privately out of Jerusalem, and visited the several Castles which were in the custody of his Father's friends, by whom he was very well received. He made himself Master of fifteen Fortresses in two and twenty days; which put the Queen and leading Men among the Jews into great consternation. In this extremity they seized*Aristobulus's* Wife and Children, and lodg'd them in the Fort which was adjoining to the Temple of Jerusalem; thinking by this means to put a stop to Aristobulus's undertakings. But he continued to gather troops, and possess himself of all the most advantageous posts in the Country; so that nothing more was wanting besides the name of King.

[In the year of the World 3938.] Queen Alexandra was carried off very soon after, by the violence of her disease. She gave the Kingdom to her eldest Son Hircanus, and left the care of the govern ment to the Jews of greatest quality. But Aristobulus every day grew stronger, and made new progresses. So that three years after the death of Alexandra[4], the two Brothers engaging in the plains of Jericho[5] ,Aristobulus remained Conqueror, and Hircanus was obliged to fly for safety to Jerusalem, and shut himself up in the Fortress where the Wife and Children of Aristobulus were kept prisoners. Here in a short time he was besieged, and Hircanus's troops not being in a condition to maintain the siege, an agreement or treaty of peace was concluded between the two Brothers, whereby it was stipulated, that Hircanus should live as a private person, enjoying his fortune and estate; and that Aristobulus should have the title of King, and the honour of the High Priesthood. This Treaty was ratified in the Temple by the oaths both of Hircanus and Aristobulus; and after they had mutually embraced one another, Aristobulus took up his lodging in the Royal Palace, and Hircanus retired to the house which had been inhabited by his Brother Aristobulus.

The last of these enjoyed the Crown and the High Priesthood for three years and three months[6]; and had enjoyed it for a much longer time, had it not been for Antipater the Idumæan, Father of Herod the Great, who persuaded Hircanus to retire to Aretas King of Arabia, and afterwards prevailed with Aretas to make war against [In the Year of the World 3939, before J. C. 61, before the vulgar Æra 65. In the same year.] Aristobulus. Aretas obtained a great victory over him, and besieged him with an Army of fifty thousand men in the Temple of Jerusalem[7], where Aristobulus defended himself, with the Priests who were of his party. Some months after, Scaurus, being sent by Pompey into Syria, came to Damascus, where he received Embassies from the two Brothers Hircanus and Aristobulus[8]; who made him great offers, with hopes of engaging him each in his interests. Aristobulus offered him three hundred talents; and Scaurus declared for him. He accordingly sent word to Aretas, that he expected he would raise the siege, otherwise he should be proclaimed an Enemy to the Roman People.

Thus Aristobulus was set at liberty. But Pompey himself coming to Damascus about the end of the same year, Aristobulus sent him a present of a vine wrought in gold, valued at five hundred talents. Some time after, Ambassadors came to Damascus, [In the Year of the World 3940. before J. C. 60. before the vulg. Æra 64.] both from Hircanus and Aristobulus. Those from Aristobulus accused Gabinius and Scaurus with receiving money, Gabinius three hundred talents, and Scaurus four hundred; which made these two Romans his enemies, who might have procured Pompey's favour for him. But as Pompey could make no certain judgment upon the reports of two Ambassadors, he commanded Hircanus and Aristobulus to appear personally before him, to make good their several pretensions. Hircanus complained of the violence which he had suffered from Aristobulus, who had unjustly robb'd him of his Crown. Aristobulus, on the contrary, maintained, that Hircanus had forfeited this dignity by his own negligence and want of courage. On the other side, the Jews complained of both the Brothers, and desired that they might be no longer subject to Kings, but to Priests, according to the ancient custom of their nation.

Pompey, after having heard them, blam'd the violence of Aristobulus, and dismissed them both in peace, saying that he would reconcile them as soon as he had regulated the affairs of the Nabathæans. Accordingly, he came into Judæa, towards the end of the year, and sent for Aristobulus, who was then in the Castle of Alexandrium.[9] Aristobulus waited on him, and Pompey permitted him to return two or three times. But at last having commanded him to give up his Fortresses, and write to those who held them by his authority to surrender them; Aristobulus obeyed, but with a great deal of regret; so that he retired immediately to Jerusalem, with an intention to prepare for war. Pompey followed him so close that he had not time to execute his design. He was at Jericho, upon his march against Jerusalem with his Army, when Aristobulus, fearing the consequences of a war, met Pompey, and desired him not to push things to an extremity, promising to put the City into his hands, and to give him a large sum of money. Pompey consented to these proposals, and sent Gabinius to Jerusalem to receive the money which had been stipulated. But Aristobulus's soldiers refused to open the gates, and he was obliged to return without doing any thing.

Pompey, provok'd by this refusal, detained Aristobulus as his prisoner, and laid siege to Jerusalem. The City was taken after three months, and Hircanus was confirmed in the dignity of Prince and High Priest of the Jews, exclusive of Aristobulus, who was carried prisoner to Rome, with his two Sons Antigonus and Alexander, and his two Daughters[10]. Alexander escaped from his guards, and returned into Judæa; but Antigonus was carried to Rome, with his two Sisters, and Aristobulus their Father. There he continued eight years; after [Till the year of the World 3948. before J. C. 52. before the vulgar Æra 56.] which he made his escape, with his Son Antigonus, and returned into Judæa[11]. There he got some troops together, with which he was resolved to fortify himself in the Castle of Alexandrium. But Gabinius Governour of Syria sent some forces against him, which prevented him. He endeavoured afterwards to make himself Master of Macharus, with a design of fortifying himself in it; but the leisure necessary for this was not allowed him; the place was invested, and after a siege of two days he surrendred, all covered with wounds, with his Son Antigonus, and was carried as a Captive to Gabinius, by whose order he was once more conducted to Rome.

When he arrived there, the Senate decreed, that Aristobulus should be continued in fetters, but that his Sons should be sent back into Judæa; because Gabinius in a letter had informed them, that he had made this promise to their Mother, and that it was only upon this condition that she had put those places of the country into his hands, which were in her possession[12].

He remained at Rome seven or eight years, from the year of the world 3948 to 3955, when Julius Cæsar set him at liberty, and propos'd to send him into Palestine, there to undertake something against Pompey[13]. He appointed two Legions to be under his command, that by their assistance he might secure the Province: but those of Pompey's party poisoned him, before he could get out of Rome, and they who were in Cæsar's interests paid him the honours of a Funeral, in the year of the world 3955, before J. C. 45, before the vulgar Æra 49. His body remained a long time at Rome inbalmed in honey, till Mark Antony procured it to be carried back into Judæa, to be interr'd in the sepulchre of the Kings.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Joseph. Antiq. l. xiii. c. 24.
Ibid. p. 464. & De Bello, l. i. c. 4. p. 717.
Antiq. l. xiv. c. ult. & l. xiii. c. 1.
Josephus, Antiq. l. xv. c. 9. says that Hircanus reigned peaceably but three months: But Usher, in his Annals of this year, shews very well, that we should read three years.
Antiq. l. xiv. c. 1.
Joseph. Antiq. l. xx. c. 8. & l. i. De Bello, c. 5.
Antiq. l. xiv. c. 2, 3.
Ibid. c. 4, 5.
Ibid. c. 6.
Ibid. c. 8.
Antiq. l. xiv. c. 11. & De Bello, l. 1. c. 6.
Antiq. l. xiv. c. 11. & l. i. De Bello, c. 6.
Dio. l. xli. Joseph. Antiq. l. xiv. c. 13. & de Bello, l. i. c. 7.

Aristobulus (V)

V. ARISTOBULUS, the Son of Alexander and Grandson of Aristobulus, whom we have been speaking of; his Mother was Alexandra, the Daughter of Hircanus, and Mariamne the Wife of Herod the Great was his Sister. Aristobulus was one of the handsomest Princes of his time. As he was the last of the Asmonæan family, Herod his Brother-in-law did what he could to prevent his having the High-Priesthood, which he had by birth a right to expect. Nevertheless being over-powered by the pressing sollicitations of his Wife Mariamne, and his Motherin-law Alexandra, he invested young Aristobulus with this dignity, who was then but seventeen years of age[1]. But having observed [In the Year of the World 3969. before J. C. 31. before the vulg. Æra 35.] too great an inclination in the people to this young Prince, he conceived so much jealousy of him, that he resolved to procure his destruction; for which he found an opportunity one day at Jericho. Aristobulus desiring to bathe with some other young people in a conservatory of Water, which was near the palace, Herod gave orders secretly to have him drowned, by plunging him under water, as it were in the way of diversion[2]. This happened in the year of the world 3970, before J. C. 30, before the vulgar Æra 34. Aristobulus had not been High-Priest a whole year.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Antiq. l. xv. c. 2, 3.
Antiq. lib. xvi. c. 3.

Aristobulus (VI)

VI. ARISTOBULUS, the Son of Herod the Great and Mariamne, and Brother to Alexander. He married Berenice Joseph's Daughter, and Herod the Great's Sister. He left three Sons, and two Daughters, viz. Herod, who was King of Chalcis; Agrippa, who was King of the Jews, and firnamed the Great, and Aristobulus, who married Jotape Daughter to the King of Emesa. The Daughters were 1°. Herodias, who married first Herod, otherwise called Philip her Uncle; then Antipas. 2°. Mariamne who married Antipater her Uncle by the Father's side. Aristobulus the Father of all these children was put to death by Herod the Great's orders, together [In the Year of the World 3999. and before the birth of J. C.] with his Brother Alexander. As the ill fortune of these two Brothers was always common, and the events of their lives are perpetually intermixed[1], the reader may consult the Life of Alexander, whereof we have given some account above.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Antiq. lib. xvi. c. ult. & lib. i. de Bello, c. 17. v Apud Joseph. Antiq. lib. xii. c. 5.

Arius

ARIUS, or Areus, King of Sparta, of whom there is mention in 1 Macc. xii. 7. and in Josephus, Antiq. l. xii. c. 5. This Prince wrote a letter to the High-Priest Onias, the terms whereof are to be seen in the first book of Maccabees xii. 20. One particular of it was this, that the Lacedæmonians were the Jews Brethren, that is to say, sprung from the same original, having Abraham for their Father. Hereupon the reader may see our Dissertation concerning the Relation between the Jews and Spartans, in the beginning of the books of Maccabees[1]. Areus's letter was written upon a square piece of paper, and the seal was an eagle holding a dragon in his claws v. The date of this letter we do not know, nor what Onias it was addressed to, or by what Arius it was written. But we know, that Onias the third was made High-Priest in 3805, and was depos'd in 3829; and that Arius the second King of Lacedæmon reigned after the year 549 from the foundation of Rome, that is to say, since the year of the world 3805. He died at eight years of age. Acrotatus the second was his Father and Predecessor, and Leonidas the Son of Cleonymus was his Successor. So that if this letter be his, it must be consider'd rather as the work of his Council, not as his own, since he died so young. We know of another Arius, King of Lacedæmon, who is more celebrated in history. He died four and forty years before Onias the third was made High-Priest. But in his reign we find Onias the first, who governed or was High-Priest from the year 3682 to 3702. And as Arius the first began to reign in 3700, we may likewise fix the epoch of this letter under Onias the first, in the first or second year of Arius the first.

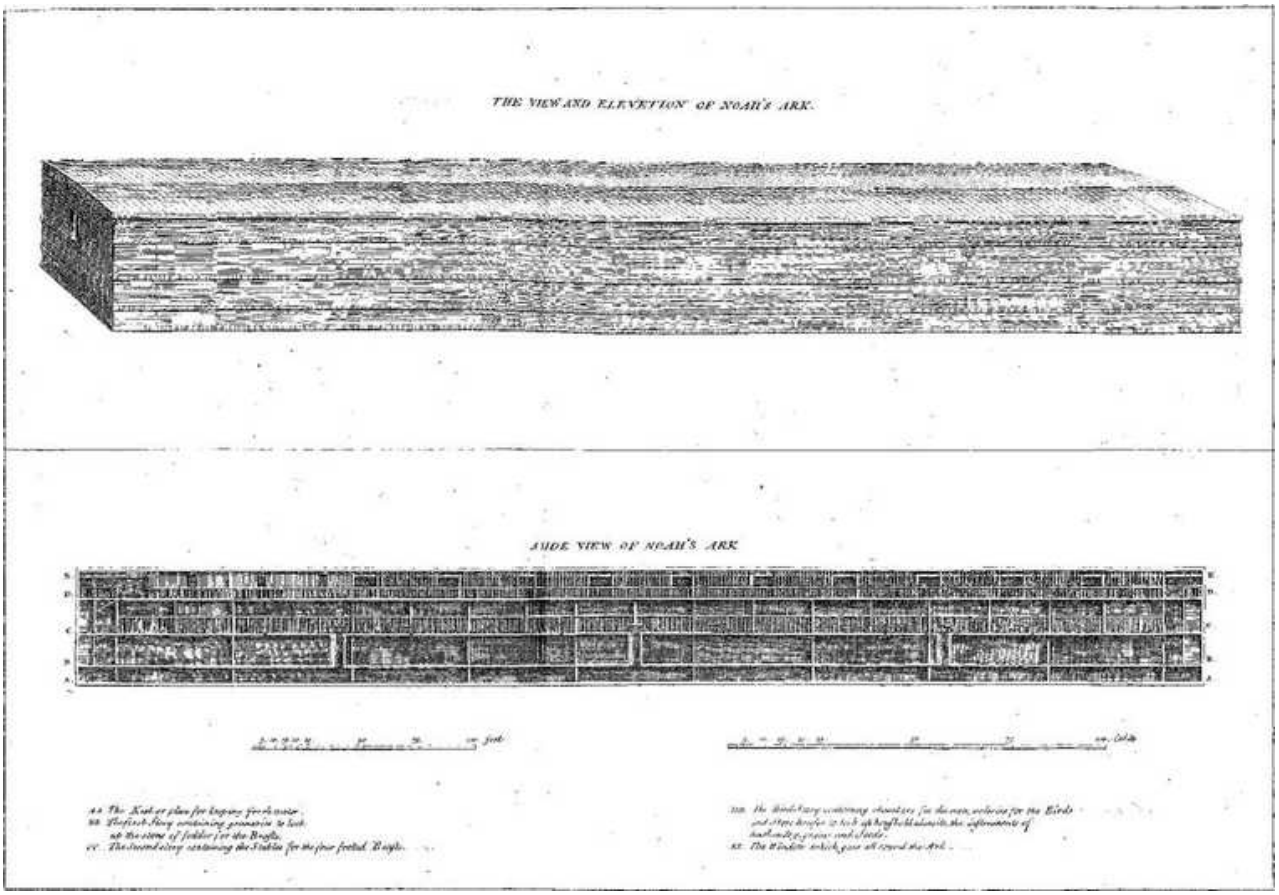
Read this article in its place on the printed pages



Translators' note. The Reader may likewise, if he pleases, consult Scaliger on the same Subject, in his Canon. Isagog. p. 332. Bochartin Chanaan. l. i. c. 22. Huet. in Demonstr. Evang. Prop. iv. Sect. 10. and more particularly Selden in his second Book de Synedriis, c. 3. Sect. 5. and Grotius upon the first of the Maccabees, c. xii. ver. 7.

Ark

ARK, Noah's, in Hebrew, Thebath[1], a kind of Coffer. The term made use of by Moses to express it, is different from the common name whereby he describes a Coffer. He imploys the same Hebrew word Thebath, when he speaks of the little basket wherein he was expos'd upon the Nile. It was a sort of bark in form much like a chest or trunk. The ancients inform form us, that the Egyptians used barks made of bulrush on the Nile[2], and that they were so light as to be carried sometimes on their shoulders, when they met with falls of water, which prevented their passage.

G... An Opening to give light to the 2d Story. A... Chambers for Noah & his family. B: The Kitchen. F: Store houses to lock up house-utensils H... Stairs to go down into the 2d Story Instruments of husbandry grains & feeds C... The Dining-room. D. The walking-place. E. The Voteries. 1. 2. 3. &c... The 36 Stables to lodge the four-footed beasts in D... The Scattles to give light to the granaries A... The Entrance of the Ark. B The Court. C. The Wells. and take out food for the Beasts. PLANS OF THE THREE STORIES IN NOAHS ARK.

THE VIEW AND ELEVATION OF NOAH'S ARK. A SIDE VIEW OF NOAH'S ARKAA The Keel or place for keeping fresh water. DD. The third Story containing chambers for the men, voleries for the Birds and Store-houses to lock up houshold utensils, the instruments of BB The first Story containing granaries to lock up husbandry, grains and Seeds. the stons of fodder for the Beasts. CC The Second story containing the Stables for the four footed Beasts. EE. The Window which goes all round the Ark.

NOAH'S ARKfloating upon the Waters of the Deluge, containing the Remains of Mankind; the rest perishing therein. Delineated according to F. LAMY.

As to Noah's Ark, there is all the probability in the world, that it was made in the form of these Egyptian boats, but of an infinitely larger size. If we reckon the Hebrew cubit at twenty inches □/□, or almost twenty inches and an half of Paris measure, the outside of Noah's Ark must be five hundred twelve feet and ⅟□ long, fourscore five feet and ⅟□ wide, and one and fifty feet ⅟□ high; and the whole capacity of the hollow part of the Ark was three hundred fifty seven thousand six hundred cubical Hebrew cubits; and supposing every cubit to be only eighteen inches, its length was four hundred and fifty feet; its width seventy five, and its height forty five feet. Its figure was an oblong square, the covering whereof might have something of a declivity in order to carry off the water that fell upon it. Its length was such that there are few Churches in Europe exceeding it. The height of it might be divided into four Stories, allowing three cubits and an half to the first, seven to the second, eight to the third, and five and an half to the fourth, and leaving the remaining five cubits of the thirty in height for the thickness from top to bottom, and the three bridges or floors of the three last Stories.

The first of these Stories might be the bottom, or what is called the keel of Ships. The second might be used for a granary or magazine. The third might contain the stables; and the fourth places for the fowls. But the keel not being reckoned as a Story, and serving only for a conservatory of fresh water, Moses says, that there were but three Stories in the Ark, and if interpreters set down four, they include the keel. In the stables the four-footed beasts were lodged, and in the voleries, the birds: Some count as many stables as there were sorts of beasts, which is not at all necessary; because there are many kinds of birds and beasts, which use the same food, and may live very well together.

The number of beasts which must have entred into the Ark, is not so great as might be imagined. We do not know above an hundred and thirty species of four -footed beasts; of birds about the same number; and of reptiles at most not above thirty species. We know not of more than six species of beasts larger than an horse. There are very few equal to this creature, and many much less, and which are under the size even of sheep: So that all the four-footed beasts, including three thousand six hundred and fifty sheep, which may be supposed necessary for the nourishment of such animals as live on flesh, take up scarce any more room, than an hundred and twenty oxen, three thousand seven hundred and thirty sheep, and fourscore wolves.

Of birds or fowls few are larger than the swan, and almost all are less.

As for reptiles, or creeping animals, their number is not great. They generally are small. Many of them can live in water, and it might not be necessary to bring them into the Ark.

All the four-footed beasts might have been easily lodged in six and thirty stables; and all the birds in as many voleries, allowing for each stable and volery, five and twenty feet and an half in length, nine and twenty in width, and thirteen and an half in height.

There might be more than thirty one thousand, one hundred and seventy four bushels of fresh water in the keel; which is more than is sufficient for four times as many men and beasts to drink in one year, as were in the Ark.

The granary and magazine, which was in the first Story, might contain more provisions than were necessary for the nourishment of all the animals in the Ark for one year; whether they all lived on hay, fruits and herbs; (which is very probable at this juncture, there being none, which in cases of necessity might not do well enough without flesh;) or whether there were sheep designed for the food of such animals as live on flesh.

Besides the places requisite for the beasts, and birds, and their provisions, Noah might spare room in the third Story for six and thirty cabbins to lock up houshold utensils, the instruments of husbandry, grains and seeds to sow the earth with after the deluge. He might make room in it for a kitchen, a hall, four chambers, and a space of about eight and forty cubits in length to walk in. The Reader may consult M. Le Pelletier's work upon Noah's Ark, and that of John Buteo an Englishman on the same Subject; and our Comment upon Genesis vi. 14.

There are several difficulties proposed with relation to Noah's Ark. For example, one question is, How long time Noah was a building it? Interpreters generally believe, that he was an hundred and twenty years; and this opinion is founded upon the following [Gen. vi. 3.] words of Genesis, My Spirit shall not always strive with Man; his Days shall be an hundred and twenty years. Some have pretended[3], that God in this intended to declare, that there were not But his answer to them was, I shall have my turn, and you will learn, at your expence, who he is that punishes the wicked in this world, and reserves chastisements hereafter for them in the other.

A GEOGRAPHICAL MAP of the OLD WORLDaccording to the division of it among NOAH'S SONS after the dispersion of them which happened at BABEL Drawn by the R.F. DOM AUGUSTIN CALMET ABBOT of SENONES.

The greatest difficulty which is formed relating to Noah's Ark, turns principally upon the size and capacity of it; and how they were able to build a Vessel sufficient to contain the Men and Beasts, besides the provisions necessary for the support of both during a whole year. To resolve these difficulties it has been requisite to be very particular in enquiring into the largeness of the Cubit mentioned by Moses, into the number of the Beasts which were admitted into the Ark, and all the dimensions of this vast Building; and after the nicest examination, computations, and taking the dimensions, with all the greatest geometrical exactness, the most learned and accurate Calculators, and most understanding in building Ships[4], conclude, that if the ablest Mathematicians had been consulted about regulating the proportions of the several apartments in the Ark, they could not have done it with more exactness than Moses has done; and the narration in the Sacred History of this particular, is so far from furnishing Deists with weapons wherewithal to weaken the authority of the Holy Scriptures, that on the contrary it supplies us with good arguments to confirm it; since it seems as it were impossible for a man in Noah's time, wherein Navigation was not as yet perfected, by his own wit and invention, to discover such an accuracy and regularity in proportions, as is remarkable in the different apartments of the Ark, and the end for which they were designed. Whence it follows, that it is therefore to be attributed to the inspiration of God, and a supernatural light.

Some have started difficulties with regard to the square and oblong figure of the Ark; but they did not consider that this Vessel was not made for rowing, but for floating only, to be upon the water for some considerable time, and to preserve the several species of Men, Animals and Plants, which were contained in it: besides, it may be proved to them by examples[5], that it was not less commodious for rowing than for carrying a great deal. George Hornius, in his history of the several Empires, tells us that in the beginning of the seventeenth Century one Peter Hans, of Horne, had two Ships built after the model and proportions of the Ark, one whereof was an hundred and twenty foot long, twenty wide, and twelve deep. These Vessels had the same fate with Noah's, they were at first the subject of ridicule and raillery to those who saw them; but experience demonstrated, that they carried a third part more than others, tho' there was no occasion for a larger Crew, they were better Sailors, and made their way with much more swiftness. All the inconveniency which was found in them was, that they discovered them to be fit only for times of peace, because they were not proper to carry guns.

The number of Men and Animals which were to enter into the Ark, supplies the Criticks plentifully with matter of dispute. As to the number of Men, if we kept to the texts of Moses and St Peter, we shou'd have no contests about it; for Moses expressly [Gen. vii. 13. 1 Pet. iii. 20. Gen. vii. 2.] says, that Noah went into the Ark, he, his Wife, his three Sons, and their three Wives. And St. Peter tells us, that there were but eight persons saved from the waters of the Deluge. But the mind of Man, which is fruitful in imaginations, and always curious and unquiet, has considerably augmented this number. Some have hereby thought to do God service, supposing eight persons not to be sufficient to supply the wants of so many Animals. Others have imagined, that to affirm eight persons only to have been preserved from the Deluge would be to set too narrow bounds to God's mercy. Mahomet in the Alcoran says[6], that Noah climbing up to the top of the Ark cried out to the incredulous, In the name of God imbark; and while he was saying thus, the Ark moved forward, and stop'd at the invocation of the Lord's name. God had commanded them to receive as many as should offer themselves, even the Infidels; but foretold that there would be very few. The Mahometan Interpreters believe, that besides the eight persons whom we have mentioned, there were seventy two more who entred, not the Sons only of Noah, but their servants likewise. Of all Noah's family, his Grandson Canaan, according to the Alcoran, was the only one who refused to go into the Ark; and he was swallowed up by the flood.

Some Rabbins inform us, that a certain King of Basan was preserved from the waters of the Deluge, by getting up on horseback on the top of the Ark. Others affirm, that Philemon, an Egyptian Priest, and his Family, retired thither with Noah. The Babylonian Sybil says, she was saved there, together with her Husband. Mere Fables! It is beyond comparison more difficult to fix the number of Animals, than that of Man. Moses himself helps to perplex us in these words of his[7], Of every clean beast thou shalt [Mark vi. 7. Ver. 39, 40.] take to thee by scores, the male and his female; and of beasts that are not clean, by two, the male and his female. Several questions are raised concerning these words; first, what these clean and unclean Animals were; and secondly, whether fourteen clean and four unclean were put into the Ark, or only seven clean and two unclean. The reading of the Hebrew Text runs thus: Of Beasts thou shalt take seven clean, seven males and females, and of unclean beasts two, (he places two here but once,) male and female. But the Samaritan Text, the Septuagint, and the Vulgate, read two twice; and the Hebrew itself, ver. 9. of chap. vii. reads twice two, duo & duo; which leaves the difficulty in all its force, the text being equally to be construed seven and seven; in like manner as it is said in the Gospel, that our Saviour sent his Disciples two and two; and that he made the Multitude to sit down by companies; and they sat down in ranks, by hundreds, and fifties: that is to say, they sat down in distinct ranks of an hundred, and of fifty; and they went away two and two, not four and four.

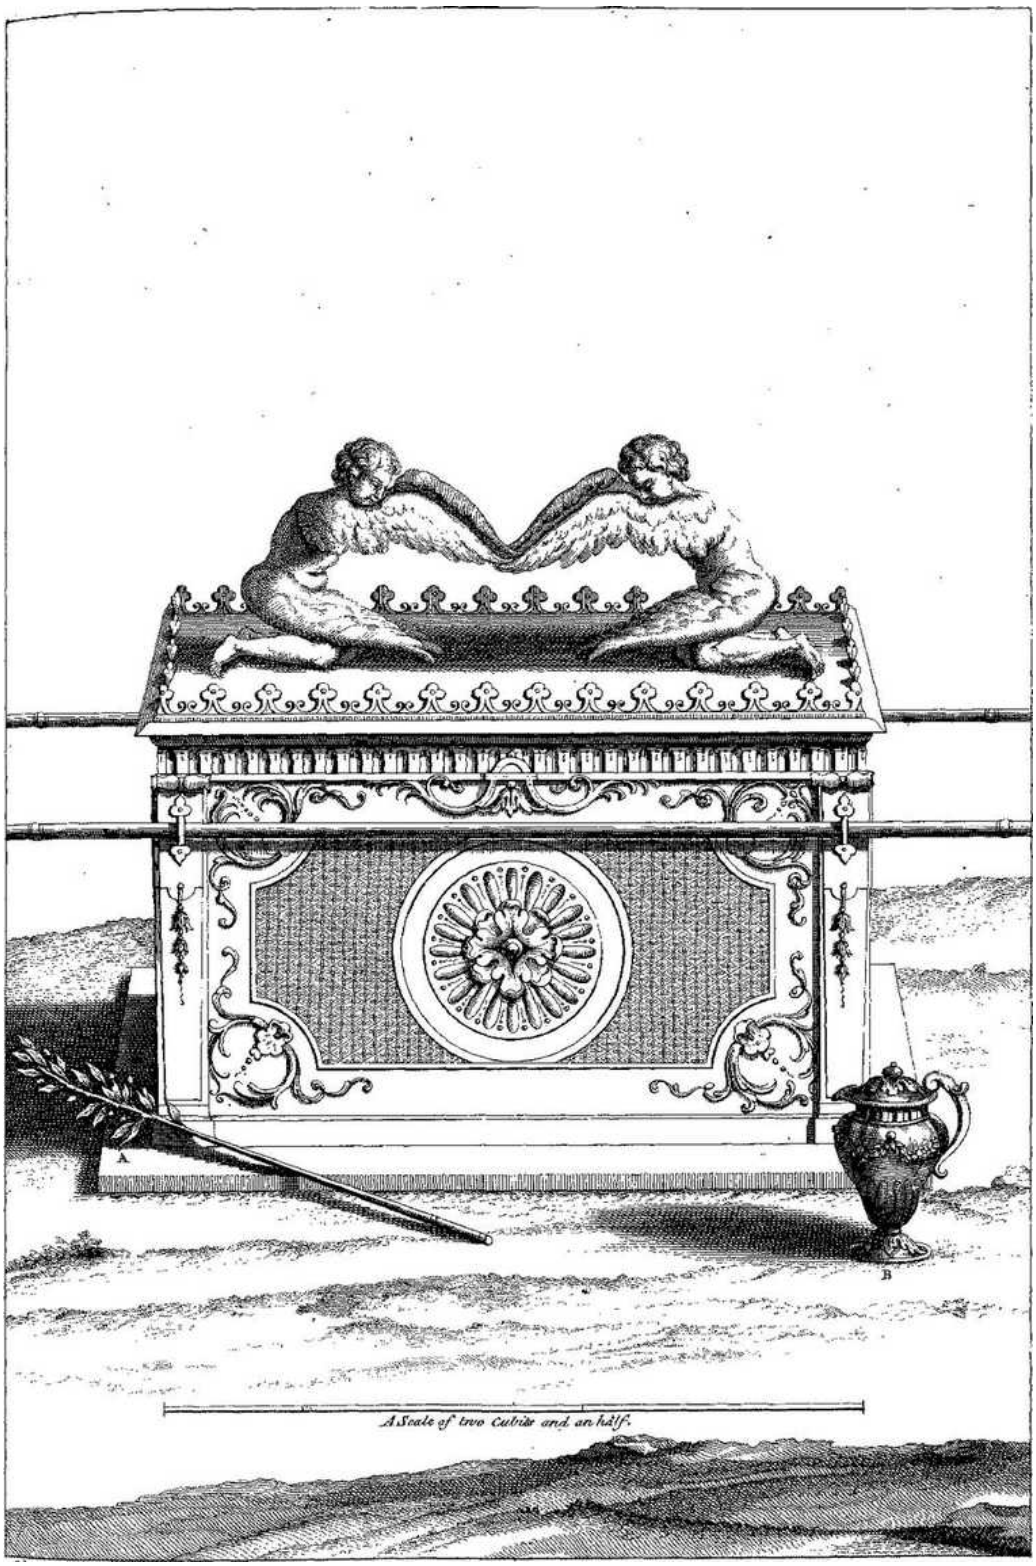
This opinion is followed by Josephus the Historian[8], by several of the Fathers[9], and by almost all the Commentators. But the contrary opinion is not without defenders, and the original Text may favour them. It may signify, Thou shalt introduce them into the Ark, fourteen clean beasts, or seven pair; and if they are unclean two pair; or only one pair two and two. Origen[10], the Author of Questions to the Orthodox, under the name of Justin[11], Abenezra, Dionysius the Carthaginian, Oleaster, and some others, have followed this last opinion.

But what are we to understand here by the name of clean and unclean beasts? The distinction declared by Moses in the Law between Animals whereof there was a permission to eat, and those the use whereof was unlawful, was this distinction known and practised before the Deluge, or did Moses here mention it in the way of anticipation? It is probable that this distinction was not unknown to Noah, since God, without explaining himself farther, commands him to take a greater number of pure than of impure Animals; and that the same Animals were pure and impure, with regard both to Noah and the Jews, since Moses makes no difference. Now it is manifest, that by pure Animals in general, those only were meant which might be offered up in sacrifice, as Bulls, Sheep, Goats, and the several species of them; and some sorts of Birds, such as Pigeons, Turtles, Hens and Sparrows. For the common uses of life Moses allows of a greater number of Animals; but I question whether in the place which we are examining we are to extend the name of pure Animals beyond those which were sacrificed. The couple of unclean Beasts could be meant only of one male and one female; but the seven clean Beasts might be two males, and five females; one of the males was reserved for the Sacrifice, and the other for the multiplication of the species.

[Aran, Arca.] We have explained our selves above, with relation to the place where the Ark settled, in the Articles ARARAT, and APAMEA of Phrygia.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages



חבתThebat. Arca. Græc. Κιβωτὸς or Λάρναξ a Coffer.
See Herodot. l. ii. Diodor. l. i. Plin. l. vii. c. 56. & lib. xiii. c. 11. Genes. Aug. l. xv. de Civit. c. 24. Hieronym. l. de qu. Heb.
Chrysost. Homil. xxii. in Wilkins Bishop of Chester's Essay towards a real Character, Part II. c. 5. p. 162. Saurin Discours Histori. &c. T. 1. p. 87, 88.
Le Pelletier Dissert. sur l'Arche de Noe. c. 2. p. 29, 30.
Bibl. Orient. p. 676. col. 2.
תקח לך שבעה שבעה איש ואשתו . . . אשר לא טהורה הוא שנים איש ואשתו 70. Ἑπτὰ ἑπτὰ ἄρσεν καὶ θῆλυ . . . δύο δύο ἄρσεν καὶ θῆλυ.
Joseph. Antiq. l. i. c. 3.
Chrysost. Hom. 24. in Genes. Theodor. qu. 50. in Gen. Hi- eron. l. i. contra Jovinian. Aug. de Civit. l. xv. c. 27, &c.
Origen. l. iv. contra Cels.
Justin. Martyr. q. 43. ad orthodox.

Ark

ARK. The Latin word Arca signifies properly a Coffer, and this is the true meaning of the Hebrew, Aran, which Moses makes use of to denote the Coffer, or Chest wherein the Tables were deposited, upon which the words of the Covenant or the principal Commandments of the Law were written. This Coffer was of Shittim wood, covered with plates or leaves of gold, being two cubits and an half in length, a cubit and an half wide, and a cubit and an half high. Upon the top of it there was all round it a kind of gold Crown, and two Cherubims were fastned to the cover. On the two sides of this coffer there were four rings of gold, two on each side, thro' which staves were put, by the help whereof they carried it as they marched thro' the Wilderness. This was the Ark of the Covenant, a Chest or Coffer of great value, wherein the two Tables of Stone were placed, written by the hand of God.

After the passage of Jordan, the Ark continued for some time at Gilgal, from thence it was removed to Shiloh. Here it was when the Israelites took it thence to carry it to their camp. They gave battle to the Philistines, and the Ark of the Lord fell into the Enemy's hands. The Philistines oppressed by the hand of God, which lay heavy upon them, sent back the Ark, and it was lodged at Kirjath-jearim. It was afterwards, in the reign of Saul, at Nob. David conveyed it from Kirjath-jearim to the House of Obededom, from thence to his Palace at Sion; and last of all, Solomon brought it into the Temple which he had built at Jerusalem.

It remained in the Temple with all suitable respect, till the times of the last Kings of Judah, who gave themselves up to Idolatry, and were so daring as to put their Idols in the very Holy Place itself. The Priests being unable to endure this prophanation, took the Ark, and car ried it from place to place, that so they might preserve it from the fury of these impious Princes. Josiah commanded them to bring it [2 Chron. xxxv. 3.] back to the Sanctuary, and forbad them to carry it as they had hitherto done, into the Country.

A Scale of two Cubits and an half. ARK OF THE COVENANT. A.... Aarons rod which blossomed. B.... Omer or vessel of about three pints full of Manna.

Some time before the Captivity of Babylon, Jeremiah foreseeing the calamities which would happen to his Nation, and enlightened in a supernatural manner, removed the Tabernacle and the Ark of [2 Macc. ii. 4—9.] the Covenant into a Cave of that Mountain, which Moses ascended some little time before his death, and saw from thence the heritage of God. To this Mountain Jeremiah went, and in a hollow Cave of it concealed this sacred Depositum: the Priests who accompanied him, had a mind to set a mark upon the place, in order to remember it, but were never able afterwards to find it. The Prophet reproved them for their curiosity, and declared to them that this place should continue unknown, till the Lord should gather together once more his people that were dispersed, and should be reconciled with them. It is questioned, with good reason, whether the Ark was placed again in the Temple after the return of the Jews from the captivity of Babylon[1]. See our Dissertation on this matter, inserted before the Books of Maccabees.

The Talmudists[2] relate, that Solomon having learned by revelation, that the Assyrians would one day burn the Temple lately built by him, and carry away all the rich materials which he had placed there, took care to have a private hole made under ground, where, in case of necessity, he might conceal the most precious ornaments and sacred things belonging to the Temple from the knowledge of any Enemies. Josiah having a foresight of the calamities which were upon the point of falling on the Hebrew Nation, hid here the Ark of the Covenant, together with Aaron's Rod, the Pot of Manna, the High Priest's Pectoral, and the Holy Oil. But during the Babylonish Captivity, the Priests having lost all knowledge of the place where these things had been concealed, they were never afterwards seen more, and were not in the second Temple.

Others affirm, that Nebuchadnezzar conveyed the Ark to Babylon, and that it was among the rest of the rich vessels which were carried off by him from the Temple. Some are of opinion, that King Manasseh having set up Idols in the Temple, took away the Ark, which was not settled there again during his reign. The [2 Esdr. x. 22.] Author of the fourth Book of Esdras represents the Jews lamenting that the Ark of the Covenant was taken by the Chaldæans in the plunder of the Temple.

[Jer. iii. 16.] The Gemara of Jerusalem[3], and that of Babylon[4], both acknowledge that the Ark of the Covenant is one of the things which were wanting in the second Temple, after the return from the Captivity of Babylon. The Jews flatter themselves[5] that it will appear again with the Messiah, who is expected by them. But Jeremiah, speaking of the time of the Messiah, and the calling of the Gentiles to the Faith, says that they shall neither talk nor think of the Ark, nor remember it any more. Esdras, Nehemiah, the Maccabees, and Josephus, never make any mention of the Ark in the second Temple; and Josephus[6] tells us expressly, that when Jerusalem was taken by Titus, there was nothing at all in the Sanctuary.

S. Epiphanius[7] relates, without doubt from some ancient tradition of the Jews, that Jeremiah foreseeing the approaching ruin of the Temple, carried the Ark of the Covenant into a Cave, and by his prayers prevail'd that it might be sunk and swallow'd up in the rock, so that it never more was seen. This done, he addressed himself to the Priests and Elders who accompanied him in the following words. " The Lord is ascended from Sion " into Heaven, from whence he must one " day descend with his celestial Host; and " it shall be a sign of his coming, when " all Nations shall adore the Cross. No " one shall discover the Ark except Moses " the Prophet of the Lord; and no Priest " nor Prophet shall open the Tables which " are enclosed in it, except Aaron the " Elect of God. But at the second Resurrection the Ark shall be raised and " come forth out of the Rock, it shall be " placed on Mount Sinai, and all the " Saints shall be assembled about it, waiting for the Lord's return, and endeavouring to defend themselves from the " Enemy who would take it. Jeremiah " at the same time sealed the stone, writing with his own fingers the name of " God upon the place, in like manner as " if it had been cut with iron. From " this moment a dark cloud was spread " over " over the name of God, and has kept it " concealed to this very day; so that no " one has been able to discover the place, " nor read this divine Name. This cloud " appears every night with great brightness over the Cave, to shew as it were " that the glory of the Lord does not forsake his Law. And the Rock abovementioned lies between the two Mountains where Moses and Aaron died.

Josephus the Son of Gorion, who had seen the Books of the Maccabees, having first related that Jeremiah had concealed the Ark, and the veils of Moses's Tabernacle, puts these words into the mouth of Jeremiah, to the Priests who followed him, and desired to know where these things were hidden, The Lord hath sworn, that no man should know this place, nor discover it, till the Prophet Isaiah and my self return into the world; then we will lodge the Ark again in the Sanctuary, and under the Cherubims wings. Lastly, the Rabbins agree in saying that the Ark no more was seen after the Captivity of Babylon, and that the Foundation-Stone, which they believe to be the center of the Holy Mountain, was placed in the Sanctuary in its room. The Fathers, and Christian Commentators agree generally with the Jews in this point, that the Ark was never found again after the Captivity. See our Dissertation on this matter before the Book of Maccabees, and that by Frischmuth, de non speranda Arcæ fœderis restitutione.

Besides the Tables of the Covenant placed by Moses in the sacred Coffer, God appointed the blooming Rod of Aaron to [Numb. xvii. 10. Exod. xvii. 33. Heb. ix. 3, 4. Josh. iv. 4, 5.] be lodged there[8], and the Omer of Manna which was gathered in the Wilderness. Tertullian[9] will have it that the twelve Stones taken from the bottom of Jordan, when the Israelites passed this River dry-shod, were likewise put there. The Mahometans[10] assure us, that Moses's Shoes were likewise preserved there, which he pull'd off before the burning Bush; that besides [Exod. iii. 5.] these Aaron's Pontifical Tiara was kept there, and a piece of Wood called Alouah, which Moses made use of when he sweetned the Waters of Mara. They add, that the Ark was given by God to Adam ready made, and that it passed from hand to hand, and from Patriarch to Patriarch, down to Moses: That all the Portraitures of the Patriarchs and Prophets were represented about the Ark; and that Shekinah, or the Majesty of God rested upon it: That in times of war an impetuous wind rushed out of the Ark, which blew fiercely upon the Enemies of Israel, and intirely defeated them: And that for this reason they often carried the Ark of the Covenant at the head of their Armies.

The Heathens likewise had in their Religion little Chests, or Cistæ, wherein they locked up the most sacred things they had[11]. Apuleius[12] says, that in certain profane Processions made in Egypt, there was a person whose office it was to be Chest-bearer. He held a Box including the richest things for their religious uses. Plutarch, in his Book intitled, Of Isis and Osiris, tells us almost the same thing. Pausanias[13] speaks of a Chest in which the Trojans locked up their mysteries; and that being taken at the siege of Troy it fell to Euripilus's share. The ancient Hetrurians[14] had also Cistæ among their sacred Vessels. There was the same custom among the Greeks and Romans. But these Boxes inclosed often things of a lewd, profane, superstitious and ridiculous nature[15]; whereas the Ark of God contained the most sacred and serious things in the world, such as the Tables of God's Law, &c.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Translators' note. Dr. Prideaux is of opinion, that as the Jews found it nec- essary for the carrying on their worship in the second Temple, to have a new Altar of Incense, a new Shew-Bread Table, and a new Candlestick, so they had likewise a new Ark. That since the Holy of Holies, and the veil drawn be- fore it, were wholly for the sake of the Ark, what need had there been of these in the second Temple, if there had not been the other also? &c. Hist. of the Connect. &c. P. I. p.117.

Galatin. l. iv. de Arcanis c. 9. Genebr. Chronol. l ii. Rab. Juda & Abarbanel. in Daniel. Maimonid. &c.
Gemar. Jerosolym. tit. Maccoth.
Gemar. Babil. tit. c. I.
Abarbanel. in Daniel. ix.
Joseph. de Bello, l. v. c. 14. in Græco.
Epiphan. vita Jerem. Prophetæ.
Arcam Testamenti in qua urna aurea & virga Aaron.
Tertull.
Bibl. Orient. p. 1022, & 834.
Vide Spencer. de legib. Hebræorum.
Apul. de Asino aureo, l. ix. & l. xi
Pausan. l. vii. p. 435.
Clem. Alex. in protreptico. Euseb. præpar. Evang. l. ii. c. 5.
Vide Clem. Alex. admonit. ad Gentes, p. 12, 14.

Arm

ARM, Brachium. The Arm is the symbol of strength. God delivered his people from bondage in Egypt with a [Deut. v. 5.] stretched out Arm, in brachio extenso; by the force of his Arm, in magnitudine brachii sui; with an Arm lifted up, in brachio excelso. To express the reducing one to a state of humiliation, to want, and impotency, it is said that his Arm shall be [1 Sam. ii. 31.] cut off; Præcidam brachium tuum, & brachium domus patrui tui, I will cut off thine Arm, and the Arm of thy Father's house, says the Lord to the High Priest Eli. He teacheth my hands to fight, and mine Arm shall break even a bow of [Psal. xviii. 34.] steel, says David. Woe to him who putteth his confidence in the Arm of flesh, Quia ponit carnem brachium suum. The Arm of the wicked shall be dried up, and [Zach. xi. 17. Jer. xvii. 5. Isai. ix. 20. Dan. xi. 31. Eccluf. vii. 31. Lev. vii. 32. Ex. xxix. 22.] he shall not be able to make use of it, Brachium ejus ariditate siccabitur.

Isaiah, to express an extreme famine, says, that every one shall eat the flesh of his own Arm; so great will be the famine, and their despair. In Daniel, Arms, absolutely taken, denote strong and powerful men. And Arms shall stand on his part, and they shall pollute the Sanctuary of strength. And in Ecclesiasticus, Brachia signifies the shoulder of the Peace-offering, which was given to the Priest as his fee, Propurga te cum brachiis. And a little after, Datum brachiorum tuorum, & sacrificium sanctificationis offeres Domino, Offer to the Lord the shoulders of thy victims.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Armageddon

ARMAGEDDON. This place is spoken of in the Revelations, xvi. 16. This term, term, in Hebrew, signifies the Mountain of Mageddon, or Megiddo. Megiddo is a City situated in the great plain at the foot of Mount Carmel. There it was that good King Josiah receiv'd his mortal wound in the battle against Necho King of Egypt. [2 Chron. xxxv. 22, 23.] At Armageddon the evil Angel[1] coming out of the Dragon's mouth, shall gather together the Kings of all the earth to the battle of the Great Day of God Almighty, as it is said in the Revelations. See our Comment on this place.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Translators' note. Our Author says, Le mauvais Ange sorti de la gueule du Dragon; the Evil Angel, or Evil Spirit, coming out of the Dragon's mouth. But in the original Greek we read πνεύματα τρία ἀκάθαρτα, three unclean Spirits; and accordingly, in the Vulgate, Tres immundos Spiritus. And why F. Calmet should chuse to translate it rather one Evil Spirit, or Angel, than three, is not easy to con- jecture.

Armenia

ARMENIA, a Province of Asia which includes the sources of the Tigris and Euphrates, the Araxes and Phasis, wherein also we suppose the Province of Eden to be, where Paradise was situated. The name of Armenia is derived either from Aram the Father of the Syrians, or from Harminni the Mountain of the Mineans. Minni, or the Mineans, are taken notice of [Jer. li. 27. Gen. viii. 4.] in Jeremiah; in Genesis, where Moses says that the Ark rested upon the Mountains of Armenia, or according to the Hebrew reading, upon the Mountains of Ararat; [2 Kings xix. 37.] and in the second Book of Kings, where it is said, that the two Sons of Sennacherib, after having killed their Father, escaped into Armenia, in terram Armeniorum; or, as the Hebrew reads it, in the land of Ararat.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Armies

ARMIES. The Lord, in Scripture, assumes the name of God of Hosts. The [יהוה צבאות Cant. ii. 7. Jer. iii. 19, &c. 1 Sam. xv. 4. Jer. vi. 3.] Hebrew word Zebaoth, which signifies Armies, is often understood to mean flocks of Sheep; and in several places of the Sacred Books Armies are compared to flocks. Saul made a review of his Army as of a flock of Sheep[1]. Jeremiah, speaking of the Assyrian Army, says it shall come before Sion like a flock under the conduct of its Shepherd. The Hebrew Nation, in infinite many places is called the Army of the Lord, because God was looked upon as their Head and General It was he who named the Captains of their Armies, who ordained war and peace; his Priests were with them, they founded the trumpet, and gave the signal of battle. Their wars likewise were generally attended with prodigies.

The Armies of Israel were not composed of regular Troops kept in pay; the whole Nation consisted of fighting men, ready to march against the Enemy, as soon as either necessity or the orders of God required it. The Army expected no other reward besides the glory of conquering, nor any other salary than the spoils taken from the Enemy, which were divided by the chief Officers. Every one furnished himself with Arms and Provisions, and their Wars were generally but of a short duration. They fought on foot, and there were no horse in their Armies till the reign of Solomon. David is the first who had regular Troops; his successors for the most part had none but the militia, excepting their body guards, which were not very numerous.

When they were ready to give battle, proclamation was made at the head of [Deut. xx. 5.] every battalion, in the terms following, "What man is there that hath built a new house and hath not dedicated it? "let him go and return to his house, lest "he die in the battle, and another man "dedicate it. And what man is he that "hath planted a vineyard and hath not "yet eaten of it? let him also go and "return unto his house, lest he die in the "battle, and another man eat of it. "And what man is there that hath betrothed a wife, and hath not taken her? "let him go and return unto his house, "lest he die in the battle, and another "man take her. What man is there that "is fearful and faint-hearted? let him go "and return unto his house, lest his brethren's heart faint as well as his heart."

At the same time the Priest put himself at the head of the Army, and said to the people, "Hear, O Israel, thou art this "day to give thine Enemy battle; fear "not, neither be dismayed, nor give "ground, for the Lord thy God is in the "midst of thee, to fight for thee, and to "deliver thee out of the hands of thine "Enemies.

The Ark of God was generally borne in the Army; it was not once out of the Camp of Israel during the whole time of their travelling in the Wilderness. Joshua ordered it to be carried almost always with him in the several Wars which he made against the Canaanites. The Israelites being put to flight by the Philistines in the [1 Sam. iv. 4, 5.] time of Eli the High Priest, they sent for the Ark, upon the coming whereof they were filled with joy, and terror was spread throughout the Camp of the Philistines. David commanded it to be carried to the siege of Rabbah, before which the Army of [2 Sam. xi. 11. xv. 24.] Israel then lay; and this Prince being compell'd to fly before his Son Absalom, the High Priest Zadok brought the Ark to him, but David ordered it to be carried back to Jerusalem. The Israelites of the ten Tribes, in imitation of those of Judah, carried their golden Calves with them, them in their Camp, and the Philistines [1 Chron. xiv. 12. 2 Chron. xiii. 8.] their Idols.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Translators' note. The Author here, according to his custom, follows his Latin Vulgate, which says indeed, recensuit eos quasi agnos; which is a different reading from that either of the Hebrew, or the Septuagint, with both which our English version agrees, that saying, he numbred them in Telaïm, ויפקדם בטלאים

Armillus

ARMILLUS. The Jews call Antichrist by this name[1]. He is to issue from the conjunction of certain Villains of different Nations with the statue of a perfectly beautiful Virgin, which will be to be seen at Rome. His stature will be prodigious; he shall proclaim himself to be the Messiah, and the God who ought to be adored. All the posterity of Esau, for so they call the Romans, shall submit to his laws. Nehemiah the Son of Joseph, the first Messiah (for they expect two) shall make War with him, and shall march against him at the head of thirty thousand Jews: Armillus shall be beaten, and two hundred thousand men shall perish in the first combat: Armillus shall return to the Charge, and after having lost an infinite number of Soldiers, shall unknowingly kill the Messiah Nehemiah.

Hereupon the Jews shall lose courage, and betake themselves to flight: all nations shall persecute them, and upon no occasion will they ever be treated with more rigour. At length they shall recover themselves. The Archangel Michael shall sound the trumpet three times: immediately the Messiah the Son of David shall appear together with the Prophet Elias; the Jews shall gather about him, and make war with Armillus, who shall be slain in the battle. After this will follow the reign of the Messiah, and the entire ruin of Christians and Infidels. Such is the idea which the Rabbins form to themselves of Antichrist. We find the name of Armillus in the Paraphrast Jonathan: but whether it be there from the first hand, or whether it be added and inserted afterwards we cannot tell.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Vide Huls. de Theol. Jud. l. i. p. 52. 78. 80. 138. 142. 150.

Armon (I)

I. ARMON, mentioned in the Vulgate translation of Amos, iv. 3. Projiciemini in Armon, signifies according to S. Jerom, the Chaldee, Syriac, Symmachus, Grotius, Bochart, and many others, Armenia, whither the ten Tribes were removed by the Kings of Assyria.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Armon (II)

II. ARMON or Armoni, the Son of Saul and Rizpah. He was crucified with his Brethren by the Gibeonites, 2 Sam. xxi. 8.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Arms of the Hebrews

ARMS of the Hebrews. The Hebrews made use of all the Arms which were employed by other people of their time and country, such as Swords, Darts, Lances, Javelins, Bows, Arrows and Slings. For defensive Arms they had Helmets Cuirasses, Bucklers, and Armour for their Thighs. It is observable that at particular times, especially of oppression and servitude, whole armies of Israelites were without any good Weapons. In the War which Deborah and Barak carried on against Jabin, there were neither Shields nor Lances in an Army of Israelites which consisted [Judg. v. 8.] of forty thousand men. In the time of Saul, upon the day of Battle with the Philistines (1 Sam. viii. 22.) there were none in all Israel, besides Saul and Jonathan armed with Swords and Spears, because the Philistines, who were masters of the country, had forbidden the Hebrews to use the trades of Smiths and Farriers, and obliged them to go down into their territories to sharpen their tools of husbandry, but would make no Arms for them.

[Job xx. 24. Ps. xvii. 35.] Arms were of old made indifferently either of brass or iron[1]. We meet with accounts in Scripture of brazen Shields, Helmets, and Bows. Goliath wore an Helmet of brass, his Greaves and Target were of the same metal. The Hebrews were both expert Archers and Slingers: we know in what manner David used his Sling against Goliath [1 Kings xiv. 27.] . The Benjamites were so skilful in flinging, that they could cast stones at an [1 Sam. xvii. 5, 6, 7. Judg. xx. 36.] hair's-breadth without missing. The Scripture adds, that for the most part they used both hands alike.

In the original text of Scripture we meet with four terms to signify Bucklers[2]. There was without doubt some difference in them; but it would be very hard to fix the particular form and use of them. They were made of wood or ozier, and covered with brass, iron or leather: sometimes they only were bordered with metal, and at other times with several foldings of leather. When Goliath advanced against the Army of Israel, his shoulders were covered with a large Shield of Brass.

[1 Sam. xvii. 5. קשקשים שריון 2 Sam. i. 9. Ezek. xxvii. 10.] Their Cuirasses were sometimes of linen, woollen or cotton beaten like felt; at other times they were made of brass or copper, like coats of mail, or composed of scales or thin plates laid one upon another, and sometimes they were solid plates of copper, iron, or steel. Goliath had a Coat of Mail, Loricam squameam. Saul had one of very solid and almost impenetrable linen[3]. We have shewn in our Dissertation on the Militia of the Hebrews, that Cuirasses of these kinds were not unknown to the Ancients. It was a custom to hang up Arms and Shields on the towers of strong places: there is mention in the Canticles of Bucklers hung on David's tower. Ezekiel speaks of the Bucklers and Helmets which the Tyrians, Persians, Libyans, and Lydians hung upon the walls of Tyre. The Maccabees [1 Macc. iv. 57.] having purified and dedicated a-new the Temple, adorned the portal of it with gold Crowns and Bucklers. Simon Maccabæus embellished the Mausolæum erected for his Brethren, with [1 Macc.] xiii. 29. with Arms and Ships carved upon the stone.

St. Paul in almost all his Epistles has allusions [Ephes. vi. 11,12,13, &c. 1 Thess. v. 8.] to Arms, War, military Exercises, and those of Wrestlers at the publick games.

He requires Christians to use their members as the armour of righteousness, for the service of God, not as the armour of iniquity, for the committing of sin; that they should put on the armour of light, or bright and shining armour; that they are not to engage with mortal enemies composed of flesh and blood, but with the rulers of darkness, with the powers of the air, with Devils; for this reason says he to them, Take the armour of God, put on the breast-plate of righteousness, and have your feet shod with the preparation of the Gospel of peace: take the helmet of Salvation, the [1 Cor. ix. 25.] word of the Spirit, which is the word of God, &c. And in another place, Let us put on the breast-plate of faith and love, and for an helmet the hope of salvation. They who combat in the publick games abstain from [2 Tim. xi. 5.] many things to obtain a perishable crown, &c. He who contends in the publick games is not to be crowned, unless he has contended according to the rules established, &c.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

See our Dissertation on the Militia of the Hebrews.

כידוןChidon. מגוMagen. צנהZinna. סחרהScherah.

Tenent me angustiæ. Heb. כי אחוני השבץNow the Hebrew שבץsignifies an imbroidered Coat. Exod. xxviii. 3. and Ps. xlv. 14. 1 De Bello, l. iii. c. 2. p. 834. a.

Arnon

ARNON, a river or brook, whereof there is frequent mention in the Scripture. Its spring-head is in the mountains of Gilead or of the Moabites, and it discharges itself into the Dead Sea. It runs at first from North to South, then from East to West, and falls into the Eastern part of the Dead Sea.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Arnona

ARNONA, is a Canton beyond Jordan, which reaches along the river Arnon. See Reland. Palæst. t. 1. l. ii. c. 12. p. 495.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Arod

AROD, the fifth Son of Gad. Numb. [Numb. xxxii. 34. Deut. xi. 36. iii. 12. iv. 48. Josh. xii. 2. Deut. iv. 48.] xxvi. 17.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Aroer (I)

I. AROER, a City in the Tribe of Gad. It was situated on the Northern Banks of the brook Arnon, at the extremity of the Country which the Hebrews possessed beyond Jordan. Eusebius says, that in his time Aroer was seated on a mountain.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Aroer (II)

II. AROER. Reland t. 2. p. 583. thinks that there was a City of this name near Rabbah of the Ammonites, otherwise called Philadelphia; and that this is the Aroer meant by Joshuah xiii. 25. and in Judg. ii. 33.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Aroer (III)

III. AROER, in the Tribe of Judah, 1 Sam. xxx. 28. which may be understood likewise of Aroer beyond Jordan. David dwelt for some time in the land of Moab, and might have left some of his Relations at Aroer. But in Joshuah xv. 22. and in the Septuagint we read Aroer or [2 Kings xviii. 34. xix. 13. Isai. x. 9. xxxvi. 19. xxxvii. 13. Jerem. lxix. 23.] Aroel, which may very well be Aroer of Judah; and Eusebius and S. Jerom speak of Aruïr, twenty miles from Jerusalem towards the North. Aroer in Heb·ew signifies Heath; it is very possible therefore, that several places in the country may have taken their name from Aroër, understood in this signification.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Arpad

ARPAD. This probably is a famous City of Syria. Arpad in Scripture is always placed with Hamath. Sennacherib boasts of having reduced Arpad and Hamath, or of having destroyed the Gods of these two places. Hamath we know is Emesa, and as far as we are able to conjecture, Arpad must be the City of Arad or Arvad, as it is sometimes called in Hebrew. Others are of opinion, that it is the Town of Arphas, taken notice of in *Josephus*1, as limiting the Provinces or Cantons of Gamalitis, Gaulanitis, Batanæa, and Trachonitis on the North-East Side, as Julias was the Boundary to them on the South-West. This position would agree well enough with Arpad, near Hamath; and Josephus had obliged us if he had shewn us more exactly the position of Arpad. It is my conjecture, that this City of Arphas mentioned by Josephus, is no other than Raphanæa, or Raphan, lying between Mount Casius and Anticasius. Josephus says[1], the river Sabbaticus runs between Arce and Raphanæa; and Stephens the Geographer sets Raphanæa near Epiphania, in the neighbourhood of Arad[2].

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

De Bello, l. vii. c. 24.
Stephan. in Ἐπιφάνεια.

Arphaxad (I)

[Judith i. 1.] I. ARPHAXAD, the Son of Shem and Father of Salah. Arphaxad was born in the year of the world 1658, a year after the deluge, and died in the year of the world 2096, at the Age of four hundred thirty eight years. See Gen. xi. 12, &c.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Arphaxad (II)

II. ARPHAXAD, King of the Medes, of whom there is mention in the book of Judith. We take him to be the same with Phraortes, the Son and Successor of Dejoces King of the Medes[1]. See Herodotus's Book the 1st, 97 and following Chapters. He says Phraortes first subdued the Persians, and afterwards made himself master of almost all Asia, passing successively from one Nation to another, with victory continually attending him; but that at last coming to attack Nineveh and the Assyrian Empire, he was overcome and killed, in the twenty second year of his reign. The book of Judith informs us, that he built Ecbatane, and was defeated in the great plains of Ragau, those probably which are about the City of Rages in Media. See Tobit i. 16. iii. 7. iv. 11. and our Comment upon Judith; Judith; see likewise F. Montfaucon concerning the Truth of Judith's History.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Translators' note. Herein our Author differs in opinion from the learned Prideaux, who thinks Arphaxad to be Dejoces and not Phraortes his Successor. For, as he observes, Arphaxad is said to be that King of Media, who was the founder of Ecbatane, which all other Writers agree to have been Dejoces. And the beginning of the twelfth year of Saosduchinus exactly agreeth with the last year of Dejoces, when this battel of Ragau is said to have been fought, &c. Prid. Connect. &c. Part 1. B. 1.

Arrows

ARROWS. Divination with Arrows. [Ezek. xxi. 21.] Ezekiel informs us, that Nebuchadnezzar putting himself at the head of his Armies to march against Zedekiah King of the Jews, who was in open rebellion, and against the King of the Ammonites, who was likewise concern'd with him in his revolt; that Nebuchadnezzar, I say, coming to the head of two ways, mingled his Arrows together in a quiver, to divine from thence which way he should march; that he consulted the Teraphim, and inspected the livers of Beasts, in order to collect from thence, what resolution he should take, and which of the two he should attack, Zedekiah, or the King of Ammon. S. Jerom, Theodoret[1], and the modern Commentators after them believe that this Prince took several Arrows, and upon each of them wrote the name of the King, Town, or Province which he was to attack: for example, upon one Jerusalem, upon another Rabbah, the capital of the Ammonites, upon another Egypt, &c. After he had put these into a quiver, he had them hussled together, then drew them out, and that which came first, was looked upon as a declaration of the will of the Gods, who required him to attack first that City, Province, or Kingdom, the name whereof was upon the Arrow.

The ancient Arabians, who before Mahomet were Idolaters, had a way of divination, which they called, presaging by Arrows[2]. These Arrows were without either Iron or Feathers, and in their language were termed Acdah and Azlam. There were three in number, shut up in a sack, which was in the hands of one whom they named the Diviner of the God Hobal, the Idol belonging to the Temple of Mecca, before Mahomet's coming. Upon one of these Arrows was written, Command me, O Lord; upon the second, Forbid me, O Lord; and upon the third nothing at all. When any one designed to enter upon an undertaking, he went to the Diviner, and carried a present to him: the Diviner drew one of his Arrows out of his sack; if that with the command came out, the Arabian immediately pursued his affair, if that with the prohibition appeared, he deferr'd the execution of his design for a whole year. When the Arrow without an inscription was drawn, he was to draw again.

The Arabians consulted these Arrows upon all occasions, but particularly upon their marriages, the circumcision of their children, their journies and warlike expeditions. They likewise made use of them in dividing any thing among them, particularly the parts of the victim or camel, which they sacrificed on certain Stones, or to Idols which were placed about the Temple of Mecca. Mahomet in his Alcoran very expressly forbids all Divinations of this kind.

M. Thevenot[3] tells us, that in the Levant abundance of these Diviners are still at present to be seen, who are seated on the ground upon a small carpet in the corners of the streets, with many books laid out before them. They take four Arrows, which they place pointing one against the other, and make two persons hold them; then they put a naked sword before them on a cushion, and read a certain chapter in the Alcoran. If they desire to know whether the Turks or Christians, for example, shall have the advantage in any war which they propose to undertake, two of these Arrows have the name of Christian given them, the two others of Turk. As the Diviner reads his Alcoran, the Arrows stir in spite of those who hold them, as if they were beating one against the other, and were capable of thought. Those which keep down the others and mount upon them, are the conquerors, and certainly foretel Victory to those whom they represent, whether Turks or Christians.

The ancient Germans[4] cut a branch of some fruit-tree into many pieces, and marking them with certain characters, threw them at random upon a white cloth, then the Father of the Family, if the matter were transacted in a private house, took up these branches one after the other, and from thence form'd his Presages of what was to come, by inspecting the characters which he observed upon them.

The Scythians had likewise their way of presaging[5] by the branches of trees. Their Diviners took large bundles of willowbranches, which they untied and extended upon the ground one after the other, pronouncing at the same time certain predictions. Afterwards they took these branches once more in a quite contrary order, and tied up the bundles again, at every stick they touched pronouncing other predictions. All which shews the antiquity of this superstitious way of presaging what was to come by Arrows, or the branches of trees. The Reader may likewise consult Ammianus Marcellinus, l. xxxi. concerning the manner made use of by the Alans in prognosticating things future by the inspection of wands.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Hieronym. Theodoret. & alii in Ezek. xxi.
D'Herbolet. Bibl. Orient. p. 42. Akdah.
Thevenot
Tacit. de morib. Germ.
Herodot. l. iv. c. 67.

Arsaces

ARSACES, otherwise Mithridates, King of the Parthians, who is spoken of in the first book of Maccabees, Ch.xiv. 2. He considerably enlarged the Kingdom of [In the Year of the World 3863, before J. C. 137, before the vulgar Æra. 141—] Parthia by his good conduct and valour. Demetrius Nicanor or Nicator, King of Syria, having invaded his Country with an Army, at first obtained several advantages. Media declared for him, the Elymæans, Persians, and Bactrians revolted from Arsaces, and joined Demetrius. He won many battles, and at first was very successful; but Arsaces at last having sent one of his Officers to him, under a pretence of treating with him about peace, he fell into an ambuscade which was prepared for him; his Army was cut in pieces by the Persians, and he himself fell into the hands of Arsaces[1].

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Joseph. Antiq. l. xiii. c. 9. Justin. l. xxxvi. & 41.

Arsenal

[1 Macc. xiv. 2, 3.] ARSENAL, Arsenals. The ancient Hebrews had every one their own arms, because they all went to the wars: they had no Arsenals, nor Magazines of Arms, because they had no regular troops, nor soldiers in pay. There were no Arsenals in Israel till the reigns of David and Solomon. David had made a large collection of arms, and consecrated them to the Lord in his Tabernacle. The High-Priest Jehoiada took them out of the treasury of the Temple, to arm the People and Levites upon the [2 Chron. xxiii. 9.] day of the young King Joash's Elevation to the Throne. Solomon laid up a great quantity of good arms in his Palace called the [Ch. ix. 16. Ch. xi. 12.] Forest of Lebanon, and had well provided Arsenals in all the Cities of Judah, which he had fortified. He sometimes laid an obligation upon the conquered and tributary People, to forge Arms for him. King [1 Kings x. 25.] Uzziah not only furnished his Arsenals with spears, helmets, shields, cuirasses, swords, bows, and slings, but lodged such machines there also, as were proper for forming and carrying on Sieges. Hezekiah [2 Chron. xxvi. 14. 2 Chron. xxxii. 27. Isa. xxii. 8.] had the same precaution, he made stores of Arms of all sorts. Jonathan and Simon Maccabæus, had Arsenals stored with good Arms, not only such as had been taken from the enemy, but with others which they had purchased, or appointed to be forged for them.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Artaba

ARTABA, a sort of measure, made use of by the Babylonians. They offered every day twelve Artaba's of fine flour to their [Dan. xiv. 3. vulg.] God Belus. But Daniel discovered the roguery of the Priests, who took the flour and wine for their own use. An Artaba[1] contains seventy two Sextarii, according to S. Epiphanius[2], and Isidore of Sevil[3].

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Translators' note. Artaba, teste Herodoto medimnum Atticum capit & tres Chænices. Grot. in locum; which according to Dr. Arbuthnot's Tables, make one bushel, a gallon, and one pint; allowing, with him, four pecks and six pints to the Medimnus, and one pint to the Choinix.

Epiphan. de ponderib. & Mens.

Isidor. l. xvi. Origin.

Artaxerxes (I)

I. ARTAXERXES, otherwise called Ahasuerus. The Greek of Esther calls him always Artaxerxes; the Hebrew and Vulgate, Ahasuerus. We are of opinion, that this celebrated King of Persia, is he who in profane Authors is named Darius the Son of Hystaspes. See what we have said on this subject in the Article of AHASUERUS.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Artaxerxes (II)

[Ezra vii, viii.] II. ARTAXERXES, sirnamed Longimanus, reigned from the year of the World 3531, to 3579. before J. C. 421. before the vulgar Æra 425. He permitted Ezra to return into Judæa, with all those who were inclined to follow him, in the year of the World 3537. Afterwards Nehemiah also obtained leave to return, and rebuild the walls and gates of Jerusalem, in the year 3550, which was the twentieth of his reign. From this year the best Chronologers reckon the beginning of Daniel's seventy weeks. These weeks are weeks of years, which make four hundred and ninety years; that is to say, after four hundred and ninety years, or seventy weeks of seven years, the Messiah will be put to death, in the middle of the seventieth week. This seventieth week begins at Jesus Christ's baptism, in the year of the World 4033. His death is the middle of it. It fell out in the year of the World 4036, and an half. It ended in 4040, which is the four hundred and ninetieth after the twentieth year of Artaxerxes Longimanus[1].

The Eastern people believe, that this sirname was given him by reason of the extent of his Dominions[2]. It is commonly said that Princes have long hands; but the Greeks[3] maintain, that this Prince had really longer hands than usual, and that when he stood upright he could touch his knees. He is said to have been the handsomest man of his time. The Eastern people call him Bahaman, and sirname him Ardschir-dirazdest; that is to say, with long hands. He was the Son of Asfendiar, sixth King of the second Dynasty of the Persians. After having extinguished the family of Rostam, which was formidable to him on the score of those great men whereof it was composed, he carried his Arms into the Western Provinces; that is to say, into Mesopotamia and Syria, which were part of his Empire. He took the government of Babylon from Belshazzar, Son of Nebuchadnezzar, by reason of the ravages committed by his Father in Syria and Palestine, and put Kiresch, known among us by the name of Cyrus, in his place.

Some

Some Persian Historians assert, that the Mother of Bahaman, or Artaxerxes, was a Jewess, of the Tribe of Benjamin and Saul's family; and that the most beloved of his Wives was of the Tribe of Judah, and race of Solomon by Rehoboam King of Judah; wherefore it is no wonder that he should recommend it to Cyrus, who was himself born of a Jewish Mother, to favour the people of this Nation in every thing he could; which Cyrus failed not to perform, by sending them back into their own Country, and permitting them to rebuild the Temple of Jerusalem. This is what these Historians relate, the truth whereof we shall not undertake to warrant.

Some have believed this to be the Prince who divorced Vashti, and married Esther. We shall examine this opinion hereafter in the Article DARIUS, the Son of Hystaspes.

Since we have given a summary of Artaxerxes's life, after the Persian Historians, we shall do the same from the accounts of him given by the Greeks. Xerxes King of Persia, who is so well known in all our Histories, was killed by Artabanus Captain of his guards, who having formed the design of placing himself upon the Throne, resolved to murder the three Sons of Xerxes. The first of them was Darius, who in course was to succeed him; the second Hystaspes, and the third Artaxerxes Longimanus.

Artabanus therefore made Artaxerxes believe, that the King his Father had been put to death by his eldest Brother Darius, and that this young Prince, after he had killed his Father, designed to murder him also, so that it concerned him to be upon his guard, and provide for his own security. Artaxerxes, not distrusting the sincerity of Artabanus, concluded, that to revenge the death of his Father, and prevent his own, it was necessary to dispatch his Brother Darius, and without deliberating longer on the matter, he went into his apartment, with Artabanus in his company, and killed him. Hystaspes, the second Son of Xerxes, to whom the Crown of right belonged, was in Bactria, and consequently at a great distance. Artabanus, without troubling himself at all about this, took Artaxerxes and placed him on the Throne, flattering himself with the hopes of ascending it himself very soon, and forcing Artaxerxes out of it. But this Prince having discovered the Conspiracy, prevented it, and put Artabanus to death[4].

But notwithstanding this, he was not altogether settled on the Throne; the friends and relations of Artabanus form'd a powerful Party against him, levied Troops, and gave him battle, which they lost. He afterwards marched against his Brother Hystaspes Governor of Bactria. He made war against him for two years successively, and in the second defeated him in a bloody engagement. By this victory he became peaceable possessor of the Empire, put new Governours in most of the Provinces, and used great application in reforming the disorders and abuses of the preceding Government, whereby he gained the esteem and friendship of his people.

About three years after, the Egyptians grown weary of the Persian Yoke, rebell'd against Artaxerxes[5], and chose Inarus Prince of the Lybians for their King. They invited the Athenians to assist them, who at that time had a Fleet of an hundred Sail in the Island Cyprus. Upon the news of this revolt Artaxerxes levied an Army of three hundred thousand men with a resolution to march against Egypt; but his friends having advised him not to hazard his Person, he trusted the care of this expedition to Achemenides one of his Brothers, or, as others will have it, his Uncle[6]. Upon his arrival in Egypt he was defeated by the Egyptians, supported by the Athenians, who were come to their assistance. There were an hundred thousand Persians computed to be killed in this battle, and they who escaped retired to Memphis: thither the conquerors pursued them, and immediately made themselves Masters of two parts of the City. But the Persians fortifying themselves in the third, called the white Wall, maintained a siege there of three years, with great bravery; after which time Artaxerxes sent two of his Generals, Megabysus and Artabazus to their assistance, who delivered them, defeated Inarus's Army, and subjected Egypt once more to the dominion of the Persians.

In the mean time the Athenians, who had kept up the rebellion of the Egyptians, acted offensively against the Persians, and did them very considerable damage on many occasions, which obliged Artaxerxes at last to make peace with them upon these conditions[7]: 1. That all the Greek Cities of Asia should have liberty, and the choice of the several Laws and Government under which they were inclined to live. 2. That no Persian Vessel of war should enter the seas from the Euxine, as far as the coasts of Pamphylia. 3. That no Persian Commander should come nearer with his Troops than within three days march of these seas. 4. That the Athenians should no more attack any of the lands belonging to the King's dominions.

Artaxerxes

Artaxerxes, after having for five years resisted the prayers and importunities of his Mother, who desired Inarus of him, and those Athenians that had been taken with him in Egypt, that she might sacrifice them to the Manes of her Son Achemenides, at last gave them up to her. This inhumanity so exasperated Megabysus, who after the victory obtained over them had given them his word not to sacrifice them, that he left the Court, and retired to Syria, whereof he was Governour, and there levied an Army, in order to take his revenge. The King sent Osiris against him, with an Army of two hundred thousand men: but Osiris was beaten, wounded, and taken by Megabysus. The next year he sent another Army against him, under the command of Menossanes, one of his Generals. But he too was overcome, and put to flight, by Megabysus. At length Artaxerxes pardoned Megabysus; after which he returned to Court. Artaxerxes reigned one and forty years, and died in the year of the world 3572. before J. C. 428.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Translators' note. Dr. Prideaux, who discourses very copiously and with great learning on this Prophecy, maintains, that the decree mentioned in it for the restoring and rebuilding of Jerusalem, cannot be understood of that granted to Nehemiah, in the twentieth year of Artaxerxes; but of that granted to Ezra, by the same Artaxerxes, in the seventh year of his reign, and of none other. From thence to the death of Christ are exactly four hundred and ninety years, to a month: for in the month Nisan was the decree granted to Ezra; and in the middle of the same month Nisan Christ suffered, just four hundred and ninety years after. Prid. Connect. Part I. B. V.

Bibl. Orient. p. 170.

Plutarch. in Cimone. Strabo l. xv.

Vide Ctesiam. Diodor. Sicul. l. xi. Justin. l. iii. c 1.

Thucid. l. i. Ctesias Persic.

Herodot. l. iii. & l. viii. & Diodor. l. vi.

Diodor. Sicul. l. xi. Plutarch. in Cimone.

Artaxerxes (III)

III. ARTAXERXES. Ezra gives this name to the Magus, called by Justin, Oropastes; by Herodotus, Smerdis; by Æschylus, Mardus; by Ctesias, Sphendadates. This Magus, after the death of Cambyses, usurped the Empire of the Persians, pretending to be Smerdis the Son of Cyrus, whom Cambyses had put to death. This is the Artaxerxes who wrote a letter to his Governours beyond the Euphrates, signifying to them, that having received the advice which they had given relating to the Jews, he had ordered the records to be consulted, and had found that Jerusalem was formerly a powerful City, which had revolted from the Kings of old; that therefore he required them to acquaint the Jews with his commands, to desist from their undertaking to rebuild Jerusalem, till they should receive further orders: Which was punctually executed. Thus from the year of the Word 3483, the Jews did not dare to work upon the repairs [Neh. i, ii.] which they had begun, of the City walls, till 3550, when Nehemiah obtained permission to rebuild them, from Artaxerxes [Tit. iii. 12.] Longimanus.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Artemas

ARTEMAS, St. Paul's Disciple, was sent by the Apostle into Crete, in the room of Titus, while he continued with St. Paul at Nicopolis, where he passed the winter. We know nothing particularly, either of the life or death of Artemas: but the employment to which he was appointed by the Apostle is a proof of his great merit.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Articles of Faith

ARTICLES OF FAITH, among the Jews. There are generally reckoned thirteen; they are set down by us under the title Faith.

These thirteen Articles were prepared by Maimonides, in the close of the eleventh Century of the Christian Æra. They were generally received, and all the Jews are obliged to live and die in this belief[1].

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Leo of Modena's Ceremonies of the Jews, Part V. c. 13. Basnage Hist. des Juifs, t. 4. l. 6. c. 1.

Aruboth

ARUBOTH, or Araboth. This is thought to be a City or Country belonging to the Tribe of Judah: but the true situation [1 Kings iv. 10.] of it is not known to us. Aruboth may signify desarts or uncultivated plains.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Aruir

ARUIR. Eusebius and St. Jerom speak of a City so called, at twenty miles distance from Jerusalem, Northward.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Arumah

ARUMAH, otherwise Rumah, a City near Shechem, Judg. ix. 41. where Abimelech encamped.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Arus

ARUS, a Village near Samaria, where Varus encamped. Joseph. Antiq. xvii. 12. & De Bello, l. i. c. 2. St. Jerom speaks of Atharus, four miles North of Samaria.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Arza

[Ch. xvi. 9.] ARZA, Governour of Tirzah, formerly the Capital of the Kingdom belonging to the ten Tribes of Israel. In the house of Arza it was that Zimri killed Elah King of Israel, in the year of the World 3075. before J. C. 925. before the vulgar Æra 929.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Asa

ASA, the Son and Successor of Abijam [Ch. xv. 8. & seq.] King of Judah. He began to reign in the year of the world 3049. before J. C. 951. [2 Chron. xiv. 1, 2.] before the vulgar Æra 955. He reigned one and forty years at Jerusalem. His Mother's name was Maachah, the Daughter of Abishalom. Asa did that which was right in the sight of the Lord, as David his Father had done. He expell'd those out of his territories, who out of a sacrilegious superstition prostituted themselves in honour of their false Gods; and purged Jerusalem of all the infamous practices attending the worship of Idols, which were tolerated by the Kings his Predecessors. He deprived his Mother of the sovereign authority, and took from her the marks of Royalty, because she had erected an Idol in a Grove consecrated to Astarte. He took this Idol and burnt it in the Valley of Hinnom, thro' which the brook Kidron run. The Scripture nevertheless reproaches him with not destroying the high places, which the superstition of the people had dedicated to the Lord. Asa thought it was necessary to tolerate them, in order to avoid a greater evil, which was Idolatry. He carried the gold and silver vessels into the house of the Lord, which his Father Abijam had vowed that he would consecrate to God.

Asa fortified several Cities in his Dominions, and repaired those which stood in need [Ver. 1, 2, 3, 4, &c.] of reparation, encouraging his people to labour in this work, while the Kingdom was at peace, and the Lord honoured them with his protection. After this he levied an Army of three hundred thousand men in Judah, armed with shields and pikes; and two hundred and fourscore thousand men besides in Benjamin, who were armed with shields and arrows, all men of courage and great valour. About this time Zerah, King of Ethiopia, or rather King of Chush, that is to say, of that part of Arabia which joins to Egypt, marched against Asa with a million of foot, and three hundred chariots of war, [Probably in the fifteenth year of Asa's reign. See 2 Chr. xv. 10. And in the year of the world 3064.] and advanced as far as Mareshah. Asa met him, and incamped in the plain of Zephathah, or rather Zephalah near Mareshah. Asa prayed unto the Lord, and God inspired Zerah's Army with a pannick Terror, it began to fly, and Asa pursued it as far as Geran. There was an infinite number slain, because the Lord fought for his people.

They returned therefore to Jerusalem loaded with Booty; and the Prophet [2 Chr. xv. 1. —] Azariah the Son of Obed, filled with the Spirit of the Lord, came to meet them, and said to them, Hear ye me, Asa, and all Judah and Benjamin. The Lord is with you, while ye be with him; and if ye seek him, he will be found of you; and if ye forsake him, he will forsake you. Israel shall be long without the true God, without Priest, without Teachers and without Law. (He intended probably to speak of the Captivity of the ten Tribes.) But when they turn unto the Lord, he will be found of them. As for you, arm yourselves with courage; for your works shall not continue unrewarded.

Asa having heard these words, perceived himself to be animated with new courage. He destroyed the Idols of Judah, Benjamin, and the conquered Cities in mount Ephraim. He repaired the Altar of Burnt-offerings, and gathered all Judah and Benjamin together, and with them many Israelites of the Tribes of Simeon, Ephraim, and Manasseh, and upon the third month in the fifteenth year of his reign celebrated a solemn Festival. Of the cattle taken from Zerah, they sacrificed seven hundred Oxen and seven thousand Sheep; they renewed the Covenant with the Lord, and ingaged to seek him with all their heart and with all their soul; they swore to the Covenant, the cymbals and trumpets sounding, and declared, that whosoever would not seek the Lord, should be put to death. God gave them peace, and the Kingdom of Judah, according to the Chronicles, was quiet till the thirty third year of Asa. But it is probable, that we should read the twenty fifth instead of the thirty fifth, since Baasha, who made war upon Asa, lived no longer than the twenty sixth year of Asa. 1 Kings xvi. 8.

In the thirty sixth, or rather twenty sixth year of Asa's reign[1], Baasha King of Israel began to fortify Ramah upon the frontiers of the two Kingdoms of Judah and Israel, to hinder the Israelites of the ten Tribes from going freely into the Kingdom of Judah, and to the Temple of the Lord. Whereupon Asa sent to Benhadad King of Damascus all the gold and silver which he had in his Palace, and all there was in the treasuries of the Temple, to prevail with him by this means to depart from his Alliance with Baasha, and make an inroad into his Territories, that so he might be obliged to abandon the design which he had undertaken to accomplish at Ramah. Benhadad accepted Asa's Presents, and invaded Baasha's Country, where he took several Cities belonging to the Tribe of Naphtali. Wherefore Baasha was forced to quit Ramah; to defend his Dominions nearer home; and Asa having ordered all his people to march to Ramah, carried off all the materials prepared by Baasha to build and fortify this place, and imployed them in building Geba and Mizpah.

At this time the Prophet Hanani came to Asa, and said, Because thou hast relied on the King of Syria, and not on the Lord thy God; therefore is the host of the King of Syria escaped out of thy hand. Were not the Ethiopians and the Lubims a huge host, yet because thou didst rely on the Lord, he delivered them into thine hands. Herein thou hast done foolishly; therefore from henceforth thou shalt have wars. Asa being offended at these reproaches, put the Prophet in chains, and at the same time gave orders for the executing several persons in Judah. Towards the latter part of his life he was incommoded with the gout in his feet, and the humour rising upwards, killed him. The Scripture reproaches him with having recourse rather to Physicians than the Lord. He was buried in the Sepulcher, which he had provided for himself in the City of David, and after his death great quantities of perfumes and spices were placed upon the bed, with which his body was burned; then his bones and ashes were collected and put into his Grave. He died in the year of the world 3090, before J. C. 910, and 913 before the vulgar Æra.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Translators' note. There are great difficulties concerning this Year. The Chronicles say the 36th year of Asa's reign. But the beginning of this 36th year is reckoned from the Separation of the two Kingdoms of Judah and Israel; or rather we should read the 25th or 26th year of Asa, instead of the 35th and 36th.

Asa (II)

II. ASA. Josephus[1] calls the place where Judas Maccabæus was killed Asa, but the first book of Maccabees Azoth. The Situation of it is not known; for this cannot be the famous City of Azoth.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Joseph. Antiq. l. xii. c. 19.

Asahel

ASAHEL,

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Asahel

ASAHEL, Son of Zeniah, and Brother to Joab, was killed by Abner in the battle of Gibeon, while he persisted obstinately in the pursuit of this General. To revenge his death, Joab his Brother some years after treacherously killed Abner, who was come to wait on David at Hebron, in order to procure him to be acknowledged by all Israel.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Asaiah

ASAIAH, was sent by King Josiah to consult Huldah the Prophetess, concerning the Book of the Law which had been found in the Temple.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Asamon

ASAMON, a Mountain of Galilee near Sephoris[1].

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Joseph. l. ii. de Bello, c. 23.

Asaph (I)

I. ASAPH, Father of Joah, who was Secretary to King Hezekiah.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Asaph (II)

II. ASAPH, the Son of Barachias, of the Tribe of Levi. He was the Father of Zaccur, Joseph, Nethaniah, and Arsarelah. Asaph was a celebrated Musician in David's time. In the distribution of the Levites which this Prince made for the service of singing in the Temple, he appointed those of Kohath's Family to be placed in the middle about the Altar of burnt Sacrifices; those of Merari's Family had the left, and those of Gerson's the right. Asaph, who was of this last Family, presided over that band, whose station was appointed to the right; and his Descendants kept the same place, and had the same rank in the Temple. We find several Psalms[1] with Asaph's name in the title, as the xlix, and others from the lxxii to the lxxxii, whether Asaph composed them, or David address'd them to him to be set; or lastly, which we think most probable, whether some of Asaph's Descendants wrote them, and fixed the name to them of this eminent Master of the Temple Musick: for it appears, that these Psalms do not suit Asaph's times, and were written some during the Captivity, as the xlix, the lxxiii, lxxviii, lxxix; others in Jehoshaphat's time, as the lxxxi, and lxxxii. The lxxvii we fix to Asa's time. See our Preface concerning the xlix Psalm.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Translators' note. The several Psalms here referr'd to are numbered according to their order in the Latin Vulgate. The reason of this difference between the Vulgate and the Hebrew Text has been before intimated.

Asarelah

ASARELAH, the fourth Son of Asaph whom we have been speaking of. See 1 Chr. xxv. 2.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ascension of our Lord

ASCENSION of our Lord, a Festival which the Church celebrates forty Days after the Resurrection of Jesus Christ, in memory of what happened, when our Saviour, having conversed with his Apostles for forty days after his Resurrection, and sufficiently instructed them, led them from Jerusalem as far as Bethany, [2 Sam. ii. 18, 19, &c.] and the Mount of Olives, at half a league's [Luke xxiv. 50. and Acts i. 4, &c.] distance from Jerusalem. Then lifting up his hands to bless them, he was raised up to Heaven in their sight; and set down at the right hand of his Father, there to continue till he shall descend at the last day, to judge the quick and the dead, and render to every man according to his works. It is believed by some[1], that our Saviour did eat with his Disciples in a cave of Mount Olivet, before he separated from them. Several of the Ancients assure us[2], that when He ascended up to Heaven, he left impressions of his feet upon the ground, which have remained there ever since, tho' the faithful every day are carrying away some of the Earth of this place, and preserve it with great devotion.

Some have added to this Miracle and tell us[3], that the Empress Helena having built the magnificent Church of the Ascension, in the midst whereof the impressions of our Saviour's feet are to be seen, this place, tho' it was often attempted, never could be paved; whatever was put there to adorn it, immediately removing from it; so that they were forced to leave it as it was, and in the condition wherein we see it at this day. It is affirmed likewise[4], that no one could ever close the roof, which answered to this place, and that all that space thro' which Christ ascended up to Heaven was left open. S. Austin[5] believed, that Jesus Christ sanctified the hour of noon-day by ascending up to Heaven; and the Apostolical Constitutions appoint the Festival of the Ascension to be observed on Thursday[6]. This solemnity is so ancient in the Church, that the beginning of it is not known; which is some reason to believe, that it came traditionally from the Apostles.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Euseb. l. iii. c. 41,43. vit. Constant. pag. 503, 504, 505. Vide & Chrysost. in Acta homil. 1. p. 8.
Sulpit. Sever. l. ii. c. 48. hist. Paulin. Ep. 11. Optat. l. vi. Aug. in Joan. homil. 47.
Euseb. vit. Constant. l. iii. c. 43.
Hieronym. seu quis alius in locis Act. Beda locis SS. c. 7.
Augustin. apud Prosper. Sentent. 209. p. 441.
Constit. l. v. c. 19.

Ascopera

ASCOPERA. The Latin Translator of the Text of Judith has made use of this term in his Version. It signifies properly a Bottle, or a leathern Bag pitched in order to contain liquors.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Aseneth

ASENETH, the Daughter of Potiphar, and Wife of the Patriarch Joseph. She was the Mother of Ephraim and Manasseh. It is a question whether Aseneth be the Daughter of the same Potiphar, who bought Joseph, and afterwards being imposed upon by his Wife's slanders, threw him into a dungeon. The Hebrews, who are cited in Origen, relate[1], that Aseneth discovered to her Father Potiphar what passed between Joseph and her Mother, and convinced him, that there was no [פוטי פרע פטי פר] ground for the suspicions which he had conceived against his Servant. S. Jerom[2], Abbot Rupert, Tostatus, and some others are persuaded likewise, that Aseneth is the Daughter of Potiphar, Joseph's first Master.

But the generality of the Fathers and Expositors are of a contrary opinion; for, first, the name of Potiphar, Joseph's Father-in-law, is written with some little difference from his who bought him, when he was first brought into Egypt; secondly, Scripture not having said that this is the same Potiphar, there is reason to believe it may be another. This circumstance was too remarkable not to be insisted on. Thirdly, St. Austin[3] observes, that the dignity of Priest of Heliopolis, ascribed by Scripture to Potiphar, Joseph's Father-in-law, does not seem consistent with the quality of Master Cook, or Captain of Pharaoh's guards, which is given in Scripture to Potiphar Joseph's Master. Fourthly, and lastly, the City of Heliopolis, in Hebrew called On, is too remote from that of Tanis, where the King of Egypt kept his Court, to think that the same Potiphar who attended that Court in this employment, could reside at On, which was above fifteen leagues from it. These reasons have determined the generality of Commentators to believe, that Aseneth the Wife of Joseph was not Daughter to that Potiphar whom Joseph, upon his coming into Egypt, was sold to. These arguments are not without reply, as will appear in the Article of POTIPHAR.

If any one has a curiosity for fables, he may read a long recital in the Rabbins, of the manner how Aseneth became Joseph's Wife. Vincent of Beuavais gives the following account of her marriage. Joseph visiting Egypt in the first of the seven years of barrenness[4], came into the neighbourhood of Heliopolis, where Potiphar, Pharaoh's Counsellor, dwelt, who had a Daughter, named Aseneth, of very uncommon beauty. She lived in a Tower joining to her Father's House, in which Tower there were ten chambers, or apartments; in the first Aseneth kept her Gods, to whom she sacrificed every day; the second contained her ornaments, rich clothes and jewels; the third was filled with all the valuable things of the earth; the seven other apartments were inhabited by Virgins, who were in the service of Aseneth, all of an extraordinary beauty, and had never spoken to any man.

There were three windows in Aseneth's chamber, one to the East, another to the South, and another to the North. In it was a golden bed, with purple curtains embroidered with gold; and about the Tower there was a Court encompassed with very high walls of free stone, wherein were four iron gates guarded by eighteen young men well armed. On the right hand there was a fountain and a bason to receive the water wherewith the trees in the garden were all watered.

Aseneth was tall like Sarah, graceful like Rebekah, and beautiful like Rachel. Joseph coming into this part of the Country, sent word to Potiphar that he would lodge at his house; Potiphar was overjoyed at it, and told his Daughter that Joseph the mighty man of God was to lodge in his house, and that it was his design to marry her to him. She replied, that she would have nothing to do with a Slave; and for a Husband she would have none but a King's Son. At the same time intelligence was brought of Joseph's arrival. Aseneth went up immediately to her apartment, and seeing Joseph come sitting in Pharaoh's Chariot, which was all of gold, drawn by four horses whiter than snow; Joseph himself dressed in a purple mantle wrought with gold, with a Crown of gold upon his head, adorned with twelve precious stones, holding a branch of olive and a gold scepter in his hand; immediately, I say, upon her perceiving him, she was discomposed at the sight of so much beauty, and said, This is the Sun coming in his Chariot to us; I did not know that Joseph was the Son of God; for what Woman could ingender such a beauty?

Joseph being conducted into the house, his hands were washed, and he desired to know who that woman was, whom he had observed through the window there? for he was apprehensive lest she should do as many other women had done, who had sent him presents, and made court to him. Potiphar told him she was his Daughter, that she had never spoke to any man, nor could endure any; that if he desired it, she should come and pay her respects to him. Joseph answered, If she is a Virgin, let her come, and I will love her as my own Sister. The young Lady's Mother went up and brought her; and Potiphar said to her, Salute your Brother, who has the same aversion to all Women as you have to all Men; embrace him. Joseph hereupon stretched out his hand, and put it upon her bosom, telling her that he would not suffer any one who worshiped Idols to touch him.

Aseneth was so moved at this, that she shed tears: Joseph blessed her; she renounced her Idols, and fell sick with grief. Joseph being upon the point of departing, Potipherah was desirous to detain him; but he refused to stay, and promised to return in eight days. During all this time Aseneth continued dressed in black, threw her Idols out of the windows, and took no nourishment. On the eighth day, upon the first dawn of light, an Angel from Heaven came to comfort her, required her to eat, to put on her richest clothes, and told her that her name was written in the book of life; that she should no longer be called Aseneth, but Great Refuge. At the same time she served him with bread and wine; and he asking for a honey comb; she told him she was very sorry she had none. Go, says he to her, into your buttery, and you will find some: which accordingly she did; the Angel took and eat a little piece of it, and gave Aseneth the rest. The Bees came and made honey in this Virgin's hand, then at the Angel's command fled to Heaven.

Aseneth desired the Angel to give his blessing likewise to seven Virgins, who had lived with her from her infancy, and had been brought up in the same apartment. The Angel blessed them all, and disappeared. In a moment after she was told that Joseph was returned: she went therefore in haste to meet him, and related to him how the Angel had declared to her, that she should be his Wife. The next day Joseph desired Pharaoh's permission to marry her, which was granted him.

I omit several circumstances of less importance, here is enough to enable us to judge of the merit of the piece, and inspire us with all the contempt of it which it deserves.

The Eastern people have likewise composed mystical books, containing the amours of Joseph and Zoleïkab, Daughter to Pharaoh King of Egypt, and Wife to Potiphar, Joseph's Master. They explain these stories much after the same manner as we do the Canticles of Solomon, that is to say, in a moral and exalted sense, of the love of the soul towards God. See hereafter JOSEPH.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Origen. in Caten. MSS. in nov. Edit. Hexapl.
Hieronym. Qu. Hebr. Vide & Auth. Testamenti XII Patriarch.
August. quæst. 136. in Genes.
Vincentii Belvacens. speculi t. 4. l. 1. c. 118. Kkk with

Ashan

ASHAN, a City in the Tribe of Judah, Josh. xv. 42. Eusebius says that in his time Beth-Ashan was to be seen at sixteen miles distance from Jerusalem, towards the West. It is perhaps the same which afterwards was yielded to the Tribe of Simeon, Josh. xix. 7.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ashbel

ASHBEL, the second Son of Benjamin, 1 Chron. viii. 1. Numb. xxvi. 38.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ashdod

ASHDOD. See AZOTH.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ashdoth

[אשדות] ASHDOTH. This word signifies plains, places that were fruitful and well watered. There is a City of this name in the Tribe of Reuben, which is called Ashdoth-pisgah; because it was seated in the plains at the foot of Mount Pisgah.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Asher (I)

I. ASHER, the Son of Jacob and Zilpah [Gen. xxx. 13.] , his Wife Leah's Servant. We know nothing particularly of his life or death; for we make no account of what is said in the Testament of the twelve Patriarchs, where we find a long discourse concerning Asher, and a prediction of the captivity of his Tribe, its deliverance by Jesus Christ, and of the burial of this Patriarch at Hebron. Asher had four Sons and one Daughter. The inheritance belonging to his Children [Ch. xlix. 20. Deut. xxxiii. 24.] lay in a very fruitful Country, with Phœnicia to the West of it, Mount Libanus to the North, Mount Carmel and the Tribe of Issachar to the South, and the Tribes of Zebulun and Naphtali to the East. The Tribe of Asher never possessed the whole extent of ground which was assigned to it; its allotment was to reach to Libanus, part of Syria, and Phœnicia, but either its weakness, its negligence, or its Sins, or all these reasons put together, were the cause that it could never get possession of its whole portion.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Asher (II)

II. ASHER, a City situated between Scythopolis and Shechem, and consequently very remote from the Tribe of Asher.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Asher (III)

III. ASHER. Eusebius says there was a large Town of this name between Azoth and Askelon.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ashes

ASHES. To repent in Sackcloth and Ashes; to afflict ourselves for our sins, or for some misfortune, and to sit upon some coarse Stuff, or in Ashes, are all Expressions [Gen. xviii. 27.] very common in Scripture. I am but Dust and Ashes, said Abraham to the Lord. God threatens his people with showering down Dust and Ashes upon their lands, instead of [Deut. xxviii. 24.] Rain, so to make them barren, instead of blessing them with fertility; to dry them up more and more, instead of moistening them. Tamar, after the injury received from her Brother Amnon, covered her head [2 Sam. xiii. 19. Ps. cii. 9.] with Ashes. The Psalmist in great sorrow says, that he had eaten Ashes as it were bread; this is an Hyperbole. He sat on Ashes, he threw Ashes on his head; his food, his bread was spoiled with the Ashes wherewith he was covered. Jeremiah, in [Lam. iii. 16. Job xxxiv. 15. Numb. xix. 17.] his Lamentations, introduces Jerusalem saying that the Lord had fed her with Ashes. And Job declares, that Man who is but Dust and Ashes, shall turn again to Dust.

There was a sort of lye and lustral water, made with the Ashes of an Heifer, sacrificed upon the great day of expiation, the Ashes whereof were distributed to the people; and this water was used in purifications, as often as any one touched a dead body, or was present at funerals.

The ancient Persians had a sort of punishment which consisted in executing certain great Criminals in Ashes. Thus the wicked Menelaus was dispatched, who was the cause of all the troubles [2 Macc. xiii. 5, 6.] with which Judæa had been disquieted[1]. He was thrown headlong from a Tower fifty cubits high, which was fill'd with Ashes to a particular height. The motion which the Criminal used to disengage himself from this place, plunged him still deeper into it; and this agitation was farther encreased by a wheel, which stirr'd the Ashes continually about him, till at last he was stifled. See the article Punishments.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

[1] See Valerius Maximus, l. ix. c. 2.

Ashimah

ASHIMAH, a famous Deity which the men of Hamath, who were carried to [2 Kings xvii. 30.] Samaria, invented and adored. Some of the Rabbins say, that Ashimah had the shape of an Ape[1], others that it was represented like a Lamb, a Goat, or a Satyr; all differing in their opinions, and nothing at all certain in any one of them[2]: They who made an Ape of this Divinity seem to have had some regard to the sound of the word Sima, which has some relation to the Greek, Simia[3]; but the Hebrews have another word to signify an Ape. Moreover both the Ape[4] and Goat[5] were Deities worshipped in Egypt and other places in the East.

Some of the Rabbins[6] have imagined, that the famous Mordecai, Esther's Foster-father was Author of the Samaritan Pentateuch, and that he gave it to the Persians of Ahasuerus's Kingdom; that the Persians having received this work into their Library, blotted out the name of God Elohim, which was to be read in the beginning of Genesis, and in the room of it substituted the name of Ashimah their false Deity, the worship whereof was introduced into Samaria by those who were sent by the Kings of Assyria. This accusation is certainly false: we have authentick copies of the Samaritan Pentateuch, both manuscript and printed in our hands, where the name of Elohim is to be read in the same manner as in the Hebrew copies of the Jews.

A certain Critick[7] prepossess'd with an opinion, that the ancient Persians worshipped fire, and imagining Ashimah to signify this Element, which the Samaritans likewise adored in their Country, instead of Ashimah[8] chose to read Ashita, which he explains of the Fire of Heaven, or Eschiomah the daily Fire. But if they will discover the word Fire in Ashimah, it is more natural to say, Esch-schamaï, the Fire of Heaven.

These people came from Hamath or Emesa, a City of Syria upon the Orontes, where we read, that the Sun was adored under the name of Elah-Gabalah; whence the Emperor Heliogabalus took his. This God Elagabal was represented below by a large round Stone, which rising insensibly in a point, terminated in a conick or pyramidal Figure[9]. The worship of this false God became celebrated at Rome from the time of Heliogabalus's reign, who caused a magnificent Temple to be erected for him. Round about this Temple were several Altars, upon which hecatombs of bulls, and great quantities of sheep were sacrificed every morning; abundance of excellent wine and spices was poured out upon the Altars. Quires of musicians and people who played upon instruments were placed round the Altar; Phœnician women danced in a circle playing upon cymbals and dulcimers, before the Senate and Roman Knights. Such was the worship which Heliogabalus appointed to be paid his God which he had brought from Emesa.

To come now to the name of Ashimah, it may be very well understood of Fire from Heaven or the Sun, as we have before said, or it may be derived from the Persian Asuman. This is the name of an Angel or Genius[10], who according to the Superstition of the ancient Magi of Persia, presides over every thing which happens on the 27th day of every Solar Month in the Persian year, which therefore for this reason is called by the name of this Genius. The Magi believe Asuman to be the Angel of Death, which separates the souls of men from their bodies. The Persians call likewise Heaven Asuman and Suman, which comes pretty near the Hebrew, Schamaïm.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Rabbi Salomon. & Kimchi.
See Selden de Diis Syr. Syntagm. 2. c. 9. & additiones Andr. Beyer. Ibidem.
Translators' note. Whether Simia be Greek or Latin is not so certain: The Greeks, we are sure, as well as Hebrews, had another word for Ape.
Juvenal. Satyr. 10. Effigies sacri nitet aurea cercopithæci.
Vide Levit. xvii. 7. Diodor. Sicul. l. i.
Abarbanel. Vide Scalig. de emendat. tempor. l. vii. c. 663.
Basnage antiquitez Judaiq. t. 1. p. 190.
אשימה Ashimah, אשיתא Aschita, אשיומא Aschioma, אש שמי Esch-Schamai.
Herodian.
Bibl. Orient. p. 141. col. 2. Asuman.

Ashkenaz

[Gen. x. 3.] ASHKENAZ, the eldest Son of Gomer. It is our conjecture, that he is the Father of the Ascantes, people who dwelt about Tanaïs, and the Palus Mœotis[1].

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Plin. l. vi. c. 1.

Ashnah

ASHNAH, a City in the Tribe of Judah. Josh. xv. 33.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ashpenaz

ASHPENAZ, Intendant or Governour of King Nebuchadnezzar's Eunuchs. He it was who changed the name of Daniel into that of Beltesbazzar, that of Hananiah into Shadrach, and that of Azariah into [Dan. i. 6.] Abednego. Daniel having formed a resolution to eat nothing dressed after the Gentile Manner, intreated Ashpenaz to permit him and his companions to be served with pulse only, and such provision as was allowed by the law of Moses. But Ashpenaz did not dare to suffer it, lest the King should perceive it by the meager air of their Countenances. Notwithstanding Melzar, whom Ashpenaz had appointed to be their Governour, privately gave them leave; and by the permission of God, this diet was so far from impairing their good complexions, that it rather encreased the strength and fulness of their persons.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ashuath

ASHUATH, the third Son of Jephlet, and Grandson of Heber. 1 Chr. vii. 33.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ashur

ASHUR, the Son of Shem, who gave his name to Assyria. It is believed that originally he dwelt in the land of Shinar, and about Babylonia; but that he was compell'd by the Usurper Nimrod to go from thence, and settle higher towards the Springs of Tigris, in the Province of Assyria, so called from him, where he built the famous City of Nineveh, and those of Rehoboth, Calah and Resen. This is the sense which is generally put upon these words of Moses. Out of that land (Shinar) went [Gen. x. 11, 12.] forth Ashur and builded Nineveh, and the City of Rehoboth, and Calah, and Resen between Nineveh and Calah.

[Micah v. 6.] But others explain the Text of Moses in a different manner[1]. They understand it of Nimrod, who left his own Country, and attacked Assyria, which he made himself master of, and built there Nineveh, Rehoboth, Calah, and Resen; here he established the Seat of his Empire, and became the most powerful and probably the first Monarch of the East. The Prophet Micah calls Assyria the land of Nimrod; And they shall waste the land of Assyria with the sword, and the land of Nimrod in the entrances thereof.

Suidas[2], John Malala[3], and Cedrenus[4] relate, that Thuras reigned at Nineveh after Ninus. He was at war with Caucasus, of the race of Japhet, conquered and killed him. After the death of Thuras, the Assyrians called the planet Mars by his name, and adored him under that of Baal, which in their language signifies the God of War. Daniel speaks of this God Baal, who was worshipped at Babylon. So much we learn from Suidas. It is generally believed, that Thuras and Ashur were the same person, and that the Baal of the Assyrians and Babylonians was their first King, and the Founder of their Monarchy. But instead of making Thuras the Son and Successor of Ninus, it should on the contrary be said, that Ninus was the Son and Successor of Thuras or Ashur, otherwise called Baal, or Belus. For Historians[5] all agree, in making Ninus the Son of Belus. But there are some who confound Ninus with Ashur. Others make him the Son of Nimrod: and in a matter of such antiquity we can hope to receive very little light from profane Authors. But there should be care taken to distinguish between the old Belus, who is probably the same with Evechoüs King of Chaldæa, and Belus the Assyrian, the Father of Ninus. Evechoüs reigned at Babylon four hundred and forty years before Belus the Assyrian.The Empire of the Assyrians is thought to have been the most ancient in the East. The Foundation of it is ascribed to Ashur, or Nimrod, or Belus, or Ninus. The original of it is not very clear. Herodotus[6], who is generally followed in this matter, says, that Ninus the Son of Belus founded the Assyrian Empire, which subsisted five hundred and twenty years in upper Asia. Usher fixes the beginning of this Empire to the year of the world 2737, of the Julian Period 3447, before J. C. 1263, before the vulgar Æra 1267. Ninus was succeeded by his Wife Semiramis, who reigned two and forty years. After her Ninus her Son reigned nine and thirty years. He is said to have had a series of six and thirty Kings for his Successors[7], whose names are set down, together with the dates and duration of their reign, to Sardanapalus. But as these historians are very much to be suspected, and they give us no particular information of any thing, we think it needless to produce them in this place.

The Scripture speaks of the Foundation [Gen. x. 8, 9, 10, 11. Gen. xiv. Judg. iii. 8.] of the Assyrian Empire by Nimrod, long before Ninus; that is to say, about the time when the tower of Babel was built, in the year of the world 1757, before J. C. 2243, before the vulgar Æra 2247, and before the taking of Babylon by Alexander the Great, nineteen hundred and three years. From this time the Babylonians began to make their observations of the Heavens, and they who were sent by Callisthenes to Aristotle, had a retrospect of nineteen hundred and three years. Who Nimrod's

Successors were we cannot tell; only we read, that in Abraham's time, and about the year of the world 2092 Chedorlaomar King of Elam having entred into a confederacy with Amraphel King of Shinar, Arioch King of Ellasar, and Tidal King of the Nations, came and attacked the Kings of Sodom and Gomorrah, and the neighbouring Cities, which had rebell'd against him. And long after, under the Judges, about the year of the World 2591, the Lord delivered the Israelites into the hands of Chushan-rishathaim, King of Mesopotamia, who oppressed them for eight years. Julius Africanus says that Evechoüs reigned in Chaldæa two hundred twenty four years before the Arabians; that is to say, in the year of the World 2242, in the time of Isaac. The Arabians conquered the Chaldæan Empire in 2466, and kept it for about two hundred and sixteen years, to the year of the World 2682. Belus the Assyrian succeeded the Arabians fifty five years before the foundation of the Assyrian Empire by Ninus.

Dionysius Halicarnassæus observes very well[8], that the Assyrian Empire was in the beginning of very small extent; and what we have said shews this sufficiently, since we see Kings of Shinar, Elam, Chaldæa, and Eliasar, at the time when the Assyrian Empire founded by Nimrod must have subsisted, and before Ninus the Son of Belus founded, or rather aggrandized the only Empire of Assyria which was known by profane Authors; for they had no notice of that which was established by Nimrod.

In the reigns of David and Solomon the Assyrian Monarchs possessed nothing on this side the Euphrates. David subdued all Syria, without their concerning themselves at all about it. When he attacked the Ammonites they sent for succour to the Country [2 Sam. x. 16.] on the other side of the Euphrates; but David defeated the Troops sent to their assistance, and obliged even the people on the other side of this river to pay tribute to [Ver. 16, 19.] him. The first King of Assyria mentioned in the Scripture, is he who reigned at Nineveh, when Jonah went thither to preach repentance, about the year of the World 3180. This Prophet does not inform us what the name was of that Prince who then reigned at Nineveh, but he describes this City to be prodigiously large. The Books of Kings and Chronicles relate, that Pul King of Assyria [2 Kings xv. 19. 1 Chron. v. 26.] invaded the Territories of Israel, under the reign of Menahem. It is the conjecture of some, that Pul was the Father of Sardanapalus. This last began to reign, according to Usher, in the year of the Julian Period 3947. of the World 3237. which was the fifth year of Menahem; and Pul's invasion of his Country happened in the beginning of Menahem's reign.

The measure of Nineveh's sins being compleated, God raised up enemies against Sardanapalus, who obliged him to kill himself. Arbaces Governour of Media, with disdain observing the effeminacy of Sardanapalus's life, which he passed in the most retired parts of his Court, confederated with Belesus Governour of Babylon, and resolved to shake off the Assyrian yoke, and set the Medes and Chaldeans at liberty. After several combats Sardanapalus was constrained to shut himself up in Nineveh; and in the third year of the siege, the Tigris having overthrown the City walls for twenty furlongs in length, Sardanapalus burnt himself in his Palace, with his Wealth, his Eunuchs, and his Concubines. Thus the City being taken, [In the Year of the World 3257. before J. C. 743. before the Vulg. Æra 747. In the year of the World 3323. Vide Usher ad hunc annum. 2 Kings xv. 29. xvi. 7, 10. 1 Chron. x. 6. 2 Chron. xxviii. 20. In the Year of the World 3294. before J. C. 706. before the vulg. Æra 709. In the Year of the World 3335, before J. C. 665, before the vulgar Æra 669. In the Year of the World 3356. before J. C. 644. before the vulg. Æra 647. In the Year of the World 3444. according to Usher, before J. C. 556, before the vulg. Æra 560. In the Year of the World 3356. before J. C. 644, before the vulgar Æra 647. In the Year of] Belesus and Arbaces assumed the Title of King, set the Medes and Chaldæans at liberty, and dismembered the ancient Empire of the Assyrians, which had endured from the time of Nimrod, about two thousand five hundred years; and from Ninus the Son of Belus, about five hundred and twenty years[9]. This ancient Empire of Assyria maintained itself still with some splendor at Nineveh, under young Ninus and his Successors. We believe this Ninus to be the same with Tiglath-pileser, mentioned in the Book of Kings. This Prince came to the assistance of Ahaz King of Judah, and overcame the Kings of Israel and Damascus. Salmanefer succeeded Tiglath-pileser, in the year of the Julian Period 3986. of the World 3236. before J. C. 764. Sennacherib the Successor of Salmanefer, is celebrated in sacred and profane writings. He was killed by two of his Sons[10], and succeeded by another of them called Eser-haddon; who after he had reigned some time at Nineveh, made himself Master of Babylon, and re-united the Empires of Chaldæa and Assyria. He left the Empire to Saosduchinus, who reigned twenty years. This is he who is supposed to be named Nebuchodonosor in Judith. Saosduchinus was succeeded by Saracus or Chynaladanus, who reigned two and twenty years.

Nabopolassar, otherwise Nebuchadnezzar, Governour of Babylon, and Astyages, otherwise Ahasuerus, Son to the King of Media, laying siege to Nineveh, took the City, and divided the Monarchy of the Assyrians between them. Nabopolassar had Nineveh and Babylon for his share; and Astyages continued Master of Media and the neighbouring Provinces. Nabopolassar was Father of the Great Nebuchadnezzar, who took Jerusalem. Evilmerodach succeeded him, and Belshasar succeeded Evilmerodach; after Belshasar Darius the Mede took possession of the Empire. Hitherto we have the authority of Scripture, which clearly points out Nebuchadnezzar, Evilmerodach, Belshasar, and Darius the Mede.

But profane Authors relate the series of Evilmerodach's Successors in a different manner.[11] that Megasthenes says Evilmerodach was put to death by Nerigliffor his Brother-in-law, who reigned four years. He was succeeded by Labassoaraschus, who was killed by some persons that had formed a Conspiracy against him, and agreed to give the Crown to one of their own number, whose name was Nabonidas, or Nabannidoch, or Labinith. From this last, Cyrus conquered Babylon. Berosus[12] says the same almost as Megasthenes. According to his account, Nerigliffor reigned four years, Laborosardoch nine months, Nabonidas seventeen years. After which Cyrus made himself Master of the Chaldæan Empire, and reunited the Empires of Assyria, Chaldæa, and Persia.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

See Bochart. Phaleg. l. iv. c. 12.
Suidas in Thuras.
Joan. Malala p. 20.
Cedren. p. 15.
Herodot. l. i. c. 95.
Ibid.
See Julius Africanus, & Eusebius.
Dionys. Halicarn. l. i. antiq. Rom.
Herodot. l. i. c. 95.
Beros. apud Joseph. Antiq. l. x. c. 1.
Megasthen. apud Euseb. Præpar. l. ix. c. 41.
Beros. apud Joseph. l. i. contra Appion.

Asia

ASIA, one of the largest parts of the World[1]. The ancient Hebrews were strangers to the division of the Earth into three or four parts; and we never find the name of Asia in any books written in Hebrew. They seem to think, that the Continent consisted only of Asia Major and Africa. The rest of the world, and even Asia Minor, were comprized under the [Gen. x. 5.] name of the Isles of the Gentiles. We are unacquainted with the true etymology of the word Asia. We find it in no part of Scripture, excepting in the Books of Maccabees, and in some places of the New Testament. Asia is looked upon as that part of the world which of all others has been most particularly favoured. There the first Man was created, there the Patriarchs lived, the Law was given, and the greatest and most celebrated Monarchies were formed; from thence the first founders of Cities and Nations in other quarters of the world brought their Colonies. Lastly, in Asia Jesus Christ appeared; there it was that he wrought the Salvation of Mankind, that he died and rose again; and from thence it is that the light of the Gospel was diffused over all the world. Laws, Arts, Sciences and Religions, almost all had their original in Asia.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Translators' note. The word Asia, when put alone, unless otherwise determined by the Context, signifieth one of the four quarters of the world. That part of it which lies between Mount Taurus on the East, and the Hellespont on the West, is called the lesser Asia; and that part of the lesser Asia which fell to the Romans by Attalus's Will, was the proper Asia. See Prideaux's Connection, &c. Part II. p. 236.

Asiarchæ

ASIARCHÆ, Asiæ Principes, as they are called in the Latin Version of the Acts of the Apostles[1]. They were so many Heathen High Priests of Asia, chosen in the way of distinction, to procure the celebration of publick and solemn Games at their own expence[2]. Those of Ephesus, out of friendship to St. Paul, and the particular consideration which they had for him, restrained him from appearing, as he intended, in the Theater, during the sedition raised there by Demetrius the Goldsmith.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Acts xix. 35. Τίνες δὲ καὶ τῶν Ἀσιαρχῶν. Quidam de Asiæ Principibus.
Vide Grot. & Hammond. ad Sect. xix.

Asiel

ASIEL, the Father of Seraiah, 1 Chr. iv. 35.

To ASK, Interrogare, in the style of the New Testament. The Greek Erotao, to ask, is often synonymous to to pray, or to desire any thing, Rogo or Peto; for example,[1] They besought him, saying, Grant her what she desires; that is to say, they begg'd of him to grant her request. And in St. Mark vii. 26. The Woman of Canaan besought him that he would cast forth the Devil out of her Daughter. The Author of the Vulgate has often translated the Greek Erotao, by to Beseech[2], because the sequel of the discourse determined him to this sense; but it is certain, that the true signification of it is to ask; and to this the Translator has kept in some places; for example, Luke xxii. 68. And if

I also ask you, you will not answer me, let her go. And in St. John xvi. 30. Now are we sure that thou knowest all things, and needest not that any man should ask thee.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Matt. xv. 23. ἠρώτων αὐτὸν λέγοντες.
Vide Matt. xv. 23. xvi. 13. Marc. iv. 10. Luc. iv. 38. v. 3. vii. 3, 36, & passim.

Askelon

ASKELON, a City in the land of the Philistines, situated between Azoth and Gaza, upon the coast of the Mediterranean. It was five hundred and twenty furlongs distant from Jerusalem[1]. The Tribe of Judah, after the death of Joshua, [Judges i. 18.] took the City of Askelon, which was one of the five Governments belonging to the Philistines. The Ancients speak with great approbation of the Shalot, which takes its name from Askelon[2]. There is some mention also of the Wine of Askelon, and the Cypress Tree, a shrub that was very much esteemed, and was very common in that place. Origen[3] takes notice of Wells that were to be seen at Askelon, which were said to have been dug by Abraham and Isaac. Askelon is often mentioned in the sacred Writings. This place subsists still at this day, but is very inconsiderable. There was a pond near Askelon filled with fish, consecrated to the Goddess Derceto, which the people of the Country never ventured to eat of, no more than of the Pigeons which were consecrated to the same Deity[4].

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Joseph. de Bell. l. iii. c. 1.
Athen. l. ii. c. 27. Plin. l. xix. c 6. Strabo, l. xvi. alii.
Liber 3. contra Celsum. Vide & Euseb. Onomast. ad vocem φρέαρ.
Diodor. l. i. Bibl. Vide & Lucian. de Dea Syria, & Philon. apud Euseb. Præpar. Evang. l. viii. &c.

Asmodeus

ASMODEUS, a certain Evil Spirit that beset Sarah the Daughter of Raguel, and killed her seven first Husbands, which she had before Tobias. This Evil Spirit was afterwards [Tob. vi. 14. iii. 8.] expell'd with the help of smoke arising from the gall of a fish, and bound by the Angel Raphael, in the Desarts of Upper [Ch. viii. 2, 3.] Egypt. Several very curious questions are proposed concerning this Evil Spirit Asmodeus. Some think the name to be derived from the Hebrew Esh-madai, the fire of [אשמדי] Media, because he inspired the people of this Country with the flames of impure love, which he looked upon himself to have under his direction. Others, with much more probability, derive it from the Hebrew [השמדי] Schamad, to exterminate; so that nothing more is meant by Asmodeus, than the destroying or exterminating Angel.

The Rabbins say that Asmodeus was born in an incestuous manner of Tubalcain and Noema his Sister; and that this Evil Spirit having fallen in love with Sarah the Daughter of Raguel, killed all those who attempted to come near her, and by the brutality of their passion delivered themselves in some sort into his power; for which reason the Angel speaks to this purpose to Tobias: [Tobit vi. 17.] They who marry forget God, and think only of satisfying their brutal passion, like horses and mules that have no understanding; upon these this Evil Spirit exercises his power. But for you, says he, when you shall come to her, rise up both of you, and pray to God which is merciful, &c.[1]

But how, say some, could the smoke made by the gall of a Fish drive away Asmodeus; and how could the Angel Raphael chain him in the utmost parts of Egypt? They who allow Angels and Evil Spirits to have subtle bodies, and think them capable of sensual pleasures, of smelling and hearing, that they love concerts of musick, and sweet odours, resolve these difficulties without hesitation. They will tell us that the strong scent proceeding from the gall of the fish might make Asmodeus leave the chamber where Sarah was, and that afterwards the Angel Raphael might have followed him, and conducted him invisibly, and with a degree of swiftness proportioned to the subtility of his body, into some Cave of Upper Egypt, where he might have shut him up.

But as our faith teaches us other principles, and we hold Angels and Dæmons to be substances purely spiritual, we are of opinion that the effect of the smoke arising from the fish's gall which Tobias burnt, rested entirely upon the senses of Tobias and Sarah; that it deadened the sense of pleasure in them, and all lustful inclinations; and that the chaining up Asmodeus is to be explained in an allegorical and figurative meaning, as signifying God's order declared to him by Raphael, which obliged him to come no more near Sarah, nor produce hereafter any signs of his presence, excepting in the utmost parts of Egypt. The Reader may consult our Dissertation concerning the Evil Spirit Asmodeus, which he will find before the Book of Tobit.

The Rabbins[2] relate that the Dæmon Asmodeus drove Solomon out of his Kingdom, and took his place; but that Solomon upon his return dethroned him, and loaded him with fetters. They tell us farther, that this Prince forced Asmodeus to serve him in his design of building the Temple of Jerusalem; that by some secret which he learned of this Dæmon, he built it without using iron, or making any noise, according to this expression of the Scripture, There was neither hammer, nor ax, nor any tool of iron heard in the house, while it was in building. He made use of, as they tell us, the stone Schamir, which cut in sunder stone, as our Glaziers cut their glass with diamond. The Arabian Mahometans believe[3], that Solomon chain'd the Dæmon Laora-Elmand on the Mountain Barend.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Translators' note. The Author has here paraphrased the Vulgate, which is it self a paraphrase of the Greek, καὶ τοῦ δαιμονίου μηδένα λόγον ἔχε, ὅτι τὴν νύκτα ταύτην δοθήσεται σοι αὕτη εἰς γυναῖκα. The Latin Translator enlarges here with more than common liberty. Hi namque qui conjugium ita suscipiunt, ut Deum a se, & suâ mente excludant. Which is all addition to the original Text.

Gemar. Cod. Gitthim.

Golius in Abulfarag. p. 18.

Asmonæans

ASMONÆANS, a name given to the Maccabees, the descendants of Mattathias. Authors are not agreed concerning the original of this term. Some are of opinion that it was derived from the Town of Assamon[1], situated in the Tribe of Judah; from whence their family originally might come. Noldius has conjectured, that they took this name from Mount Asamon, spoken of by Josephus[2], which he places in the midst of Galilee, near Sephoris. Kimchi maintains[3], that this was a title of honour given to Mattathias, and passed from him to his descendants. Chaschmanim signifies in Hebrew, Princes. [1 Kings vi. 7. Josh. xv. 17.] Josephus[4] advances something which seems to be more probable, and his opinion is more generally followed. He informs us, that Mattathias was the Son of John, the Grandson of Simon, and great Grandson of Asmonæus. Besides, he seems to make Mattathias come immediately from Asmonæus[5]; whereas others make him the Son of John, and Grandson of Hesenai. The family of the Asmonæans[6] became very illustrious in the latter times of the Hebrew Commonwealth; it was the support both of the Religion and Liberty of the Jews; and was possess'd of the supreme Authority from Mattathias to the reign of Herod the Great; for the space of about an hundred and eight and twenty years. See Maccabees, and the catalogue of the Asmonæan Princes, under the Article KINGS OF THE JEWS.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Druf. Præfat. in 1 Macc.

Joseph. de Bello, l. ii. c. 23.

Kimchi ad Psalm. lxviii. 32.

Antiq. l. xii. c. 8.

De Bello, l. i. c. 1.

Translators' note. It is no where said whether the Asmonæans were of the race of Jozadack, in whose family the office of High Priest continued in a lineal descent till Alcimus was promoted to this dignity. This is certain of the Asmonæans, that they were of the course of Joarib, which was the first class of the Sons of Aaron; and therefore upon the failure of the for- mer Pontifical Family (which had then happened by the flight of Onias the Son of Onias into Egypt) they had the best right then to succeed. And with this right Jonathan took the Office, when nominated to it by the King then reigning in Syria, and also elected thereto by the general suffrage of all the people of the land. Prid. Connect. &c. Part II. Book IV.

Asnappar

ASNAPPAR, King of Assyria, who sent the Cuthæans into the Country belonging to the ten Tribes, Ezra iv. 10. Many think this Prince to be Salmanesar, but others, with more probability, take him for Esar-haddon.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Asochis

ASOCHIS, a City of Galilee, which Ptolemy Lathyrus made himself Master of, by attacking it suddenly on the Sabbath-day, and there took ten thousand Captives. Whether it be the same with Azech, so often mentioned in the Books of the Old Testament, is a question. Josephus says that Asochis, or Azochis, was near Sephoris.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Asp

ASP, a kind of Serpent, the poison whereof is so dangerous and quick in its operation, that it kills almost in the very instant that it bites, without a possibility of applying any remedy[1]. It is said to be very small. The Scripture often speaks of it; the most remarkable place wherein it is mentioned, is where it is said to stop its ears that it may not hear the voice of the charmer. It is affirmed with great confidence, that this animal stops its ears to prevent its hearing any one who would charm [Psal. lviii. 5.] it[2]; and the Psalmist alludes to this, when he says, that the fury of the wicked is like that of the Serpent and deaf Adder[3] (or Asp) which stoppeth its ears that it may not hear the voice of the charmer[4].

We have discoursed at large on the charms of Serpents, in a Dissertation written expressly on this subject, and placed at the beginning of the first Volume on the Psalms, where we have set down the several ways of explaining the above-cited passage. Some[5] are of opinion that there is a sort of Asp that really is deaf, which of all others is the most dangerous; and that the Psalmist here speaks of this. Others will have it[6], that the Asp proving old becomes deaf of one ear, and stops the other with earth, to prevent its hearing the voice of the charmer. Lastly, others again pretend that the Asp, as well as other Serpents, hears exquisitely well; but[7] that when any one would charm it, it stops its ears after an artificial manner, by applying one very close to the earth, and stopping the other with the end of its tail. The Reader may consult Bochart, and our Dissertation.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Translators' note. It is a Serpent peculiar to the Countries of Egypt and Libya. Those that are bitten by it die within three hours; and the manner of their dying being by sleep and lethargy, without any pain, Cleopatra chose it, as the easiest way of dispatching her self.

Translators' note. Virgil's Marrubian Priest excelled in this Art, ——Marrubia venit de Gente sacerdos, Vipereo generi & graviter Spirantibus Hydris, Spargere qui somnos Cantuque manuque solebat. Virg. Æneid. VII. 750.

Translators' note. Our English Translators render the Original, פתן Adder; which the Septuagint and Latin Vulgate more properly translate Ἀσπίς, and Aspis.

Translators' note. The Ancients seem to have some opinion of the power of Spells upon Serpents; and the Poets speak often of these Charms or Incantations. Frigidus in pratis cantando rumpitur anguis. Virg. Vipereas rumpo verbis & carmine fauces. Ovid. Inque pruinoso coluber distenditur arvo, Viperei coëunt abrupto corpore nodi, Humanoque cadit Serpens afflata veneno. Lucan. Philostratus, in his life of Apollonius, describes particularly how the Indians charm Serpents, l. iii. c. 2. Κόκκῳ βαφεῖ πέπλῳ, &c. They take a scarlet Coat embroidered with golden letters, and spread it before the Serpent's hole, and these golden let- ters have a fascinating power over him, and therewith his Eyes, though as hard as stones, are yet overcome and laid to sleep. See Hammond on Psal. lviii. 4.

Vide Bochart. de animal. Sacr. Part II. l. iii. c. 6. Kimchi.

Rabb. Salomon. & Kabucnachi.

Aug. Cassiodor. Beda Isidor. alii.

Asphaltus

ASPHALTUS. This word signifies a kind of Bitumen. Hence the name is derived of Lacus Asphaltites, given to the lake of Sodom □, because of the great quantity of Bitumen in it; so that no fish can live in its waters[1], and a man cannot without difficulty sink in them, by reason of the weight and density of them. Sometimes there are pieces of Bitumen to be seen upon the surface of the waters, as large as a Bull without its head, at other times much smaller[2], which they fish up, and make great use of in the preparation of medicines; particularly in imbalming dead bodies. As the Hebrews call Nitre and Bitumen Salt, the Dead Sea is likewise called by them the Salt Sea. Galen[3] says, that it is not only salt to the taste, but bitter too, and so impregnated with salt, that they who sink deep in it come out all covered with brine; and if any one throws salt into it, it will scarce be made to melt. Lastly, it is called the Dead Sea, because no animal can live in it[4]; and if by chance the impetuosity of the water brings any fish into it, they die instantly, and swim upon the surface of the lake[5]. According to Josephus's account, the lake of Sodom is five[6] hundred and fourscore furlongs in length, from the mouth of the river Jordan to Zohar; that is to say, about two and twenty leagues, at three miles to a league; and an hundred and fifty furlongs wide; that is to say, about five leagues of the same measure.

The lake Asphaltites receives all the water of Jordan, of the brooks Arnon and Jabbok, and other waters which descend from all the neighbouring Mountains, and notwithstanding it has no visible issue, it does not overflow. It is believed that it discharges itself by some subterraneous channels into the Red Sea, or into the Mediterranean. In the Article Sodom there will be notice taken of the remains that are still at present observable about this lake, which prove the prodigy related in the Scripture. The land of Sodom waste and smoaking (says the Author of the Book of Wisdom) [Wisd. x.7.] with plants bearing fruit that never come to ripeness, and a standing pillar of salt is a monument of an unbelieving soul.

Demetrius Son of Antigonus King of Macedonia, being sent by King Antigonus his Father against the Nabathæans, marched with his Army to the lake Asphaltites, there he observed, that a considerable revenue might be raised from the Bitumen; and at his return spoke of it to the King his Father[7]. Antigonus was very well pleased with a discovery which might bring him in considerable sums, and immediately sent Jerom the Cardian to examine into the matter, and execute the design which had been formed, of settling a sort of manufacture there; but he had scarce got the boats ready which were necessary for this fishing, and begun to fill his magazines and ware-houses, but the Arabians, to the number of six thousand, fell upon him, burnt his boats, killed a great part of his workmen, and obliged him to retire. Thus the project miscarried.

The Asphaltus, or Bitumen of Judæa, or the Dead Sea, is thought to be the best of any that is known; it rises at particular seasons from the bottom of the lake, and appears upon the water sometimes as large as an Ox, at other times like a Boat or Vessel. The Arabians thereabout fish for it diligently, or gather it upon the shore, as often as the wind drives it thither. It serves for several uses in medicines; formerly it was employed in embalming bodies, particularly in Egypt. The true Asphaltus or Bitumen of Judæa is shining, of a purple colour, very weighty, and of a strong smell. There is no more Bitumen brought from Judæa, but that which we see in Apothecaries shops is a composition of oil, brimstone and pitch.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Joseph. l. i. de Bello, c. 4. Galen. de Simp. medicam. Facult. l. iv. c. 19.

Joseph. l. v. de Bello, c. 4. seu c. 5. in Lat. p. 892. D.

Galen. l. iv. de Simpl. medic. Facult. c. 19.

Hieronym. in Ezechiel xlvii.

Translators' note. Maundrel says he had reason to suspect the truth of this, having observed amongst the Pebbles on the shore two or three shells of Fish resembling Oyster-shells. They were cast up by the waves, at two hours distance from the mouth of Jordan. Which he mentions lest it should be suspected that they might be brought into the Sea that way. Maundrel's Journey to Jerusalem, p. 84.

Translators' note. At present the Inhabitants adjacent call it the lake of Lot. Maundrel's Journey to Jerusalem.

Diodor. Sicul. l. 19.

Asphar

ASPHAR. This probably is the same as the lacus Asphaltites, whereof we have been speaking. In the first Book of Maccabees ix. 33. it is said that Jonathan and Simon his Brother retired into the Desart of Thecoe, near the lake Asphar. Now we know of no other lake in the neighbourhood of Thecoe, besides that which is called Asphaltites.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Asriel (I)

I. ASRIEL, the Son of Gilead, Head of the Family of the Asrielites, Numb. xxvi. 31.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Asriel (II)

II. ASRIEL, the Son of Manasseh, Josh. xvii. 2. 1 Chron. vii. 14.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ass

[Judg. v. 10. Ch. x. 4. Ch.xii.14.] ASS, an Animal fit for domestick uses, there is frequent mention of it in the Scripture. People of the best quality in Palestine generally rode on Asses. Deborah in her Song describes those of the greatest power in Israel by these words, Ye that ride on white Asses. Jair of Gilead had thirty Sons, who rode upon as many Asses, and commanded in thirty Cities. Abdon, one of the Judges of Israel, had forty Sons, and thirty Grandsons, who rode on seventy Asses.

The Ass was declared an unclean creature by the Law, and no one was permitted to taste the flesh of it, because it did [Levit. xi. 26. Numb. xxii. 2 Pet.ii.6. Deut.xxii. 10. Matth. xviii. 6. Mark ix. 41.] not chew the cud. To draw with an Ox and an Ass together was prohibited. The history of Balaam's Ass which spoke to him is very well known. In some places of the Gospel there is mention of a milstone, or mola asinaria, to express a large milstone, such as was turned by Asses, bigger and heavier than those turned by slaves.

The Jews were accused by some Pagans with worshiping the head of an Ass. Appion the Grammarian seems to be the first Author of this slander[1]. He affirmed, that the Jews kept the head of an Ass in the Sanctuary of the Temple; and that it was discovered there, when Antiochus Epiphanes took the Temple of Jerusalem, and entred into the most private part of this Sacred Place. He added, that one Zabidus, upon a certain day having secretly got into their Temple, carried off the Ass's head, and conveyed it to Dora. Suidas[2] says that Damocritus, or Democritus, the Historian averr'd that the Jews adored the head of an Ass made of gold, and sacrificed a man to it every three, or as he says elsewhere[3], every seven years, after having cut him in pieces.

Plutarch[4] and Tacitus v were imposed upon by this calumny. They believed that the Hebrews adored an Ass, out of gratitude for the discovery of a Fountain, which was made to them by one of these creatures in the Wilderness, at a time when they they were parched with thirst, and extremely tired; Effigiem animalis, quo monstrante, errorem, sitimque depulerant, penetrali sacravere, says Tacitus.

The Heathens would impute the same impertinency to Christians: Audio Christianos, says Cæcilius[5], turpissimæ pecudis asini caput consecratum inepta nescio qua persuasione venerari. Tertullian[6] tells us the same thing, Nam & quidam somniastis caput asininum esse Deum nostrum[7]. He says moreover, that some who were enemies to the Christians exposed a picture to publick view, wherein there was a person represented holding a Book in his hand, dressed in a long robe, with Asses ears, and one foot like an Ass, with this inscription, The God of the Christians has an Ass's hoof. St. Epiphanius[8] speaking of the Gnosticks, says they taught that the God Sabaoth had the figure of an Ass; and that others described him in the shape of a Hog. Those learned men who have endeavoured to search into the original of this slander, are very much divided in their opinions. The reason which Plutarch and Tacitus bring for it would be the most plausible, if there were any truth in the fact whereupon they ground it. But we see nothing in the history of the Jews that can any way favour this circumstance, of the Asses which are supposed to have shewn Moses a spring of water. Tanaquil Fevre has attempted to prove that this accusation proceeded from the Temple in Egypt called Onion, as if this name came from Onos, an Ass. Which is indeed a very happy conjecture; for it is very credible that the report of the Jews worshiping an Ass, might come originally from Egypt; and it is well known that the Alexandrians had a great aversion to the Jews, and were very much inclined to raillery and defamation. But they might have been informed, that the Temple Onion at Heliopolis took its name from Onias the High Priest of the Jews[9], who built it in the reign of Ptolomy Philometor and Cleopatra; in the year of the World 3854. before J. C. 146. before the vulgar Æra 150.

Others[10] have asserted, that the mistake which the Heathens fell into in this particular, proceeded from an ambiguous and wrong way of reading. The Greeks said that the Hebrews adored Heaven, Ouranon; instead of Ouranon, they might in the way of abbreviation write Ounon; from whence the Enemies of the Jews concluded that they worshiped an Ass, Onon. Or perhaps reading in Latin Authors that they worshiped Heaven, Cœlum[11],

Nil præter nubes & Cœli numen adorant, [Isai. i. 20. xl. 5. lviii. 14. Omer. or Asinus.] instead of Cœlum, they read Cillum[12], an Ass[13], and so gave out that the Jews adored this Animal. Bochart[14] is of opinion, that their error arose from an expression in the Scripture, The mouth of the Lord hath spoken it; in the Hebrew, Pi-Jehovah, or piieo. Now in the Egyptian language Pieo signifies an Ass; the Egyptians hearing the Jews often pronouncing the word Pieo, believed that they called upon their God, and thence inferr'd, that they adored an Ass. These explications are very ingenious, but there is no solidity at all in them. It is very probable that no one will be ever able to give a good reason for any thing so ridiculous as this accusation. M. Le Moine seems to have hit it off best, who says, that in all probability the Urn of gold wherein the Manna was inclosed, and which was preserved in the Sanctuary, was taken for the head of an Ass; and that the Omer of Manna might have been confounded with the Hebrew, Chamor, which signifies an Ass.

BALAAM's ASS. The Reader, in the Article BALAAM, may see the account of what passed between him and his Ass which spoke to him. Here I shall insist only on an examination of this fact, and enquire whether it really and literally happened as Moses relates, or whether it be an allegory only, or the mere imagination or vision of Balaam. S. Austin[15], with the greatest number of the Commentators, supposes the fact to be certain, and he understands it exactly according to the letter. He finds nothing in the whole account of it more surprizing than the stupidity of Balaam, who heard his Ass speak to him, and talked to it again, as with a reasonable person. Our Saint is of opinion, that this Diviner was accustomed to prodigies like this, talibus monstris assuetus; or that he was strangely blinded by his avarice, not to be stop'd by an event of so extraordinary a nature. He adds, that God had not given the Ass a reasonable soul, but permitted it to pronounce certain words, in order to reprove the Prophet's covetousness.

St.

St. Gregory of Nyssa[16] seems to think, that the Ass did not utter any words distinctly, but that having brayed as usual, the Diviner, whose practice it had been to draw presages from the cries of Beasts, and singing of Birds, comprehended easily the Ass's meaning by its noise. Moses designing to ridicule this superstitious art of the Augurs and Soothsayers, relates the matter as if the Ass really spoke in words articulate.

Maimonides asserts this whole dialogue to be only a kind of fiction and allegory, whereby Moses relates what passed only in Balaam's imagination, as a piece of real history.

Others[17] have believed that the difficulty which occurs naturally to every man's mind, upon enquiring how Balaam came to answer his Beast without any sign of amazement, as if it had been not only capable of reasoning, but had even the use of speech; this difficulty, I say, they think sufficiently accounted for, by saying that Balaam believing the transmigration of souls, which supposes a continual revolution of souls passing from one body into another, from that of a Man into that of a Beast reciprocally, as fate or choice determine; that this Prophet, I say, was not surprized at the Ass's complaint to him, and might without astonishment answer and converse with it.

According to their system who hold that Beasts have the use of Reason to a certain degree, the difficulty of this place does not consist in observing Balaam's Ass to complain and reason, but only in hearing it speak. It is not uncommon to see Parrots, Ravens, Magpies, Jackdaws and Greenfinches learn to talk, because their organs are susceptible of the habit of speech. But we cannot conceive how an Ass can do any thing like this. Notwithstanding the Ancients have made no scruple of advancing things as incredible; for example, that the Serpent spoke to Eve; that an Ass spoke to Bacchus; that Achilles's Horses, Phrixus's Lamb, and Porus's Elephant uttered words, and spoke to their Masters. It is necessary either that the Ancients who relate these things understood them in an allegorical and figurative manner, or that they had not the same idea which we have of the impossibility of these events. The [2 Pet. ii. 16.] Apostle St. Peter speaks of this fact as literal and certain; and so all interpreters explain it. We must own therefore, that it is a miraculous fact, related by an inspired Writer, whose authority we are not allowed to call in question in the least particular. But we study such ways of explaining it as are most conformable to reason, and most proper to solve the difficulties of it, without attacking the truth of the history. Now it is very possible for God to make an Ass speak articulately: it is indeed something miraculous, and above the ordinary faculty of this Animal; but not against the laws of Nature.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Appion. apud Joseph. l. ii. contra Appion.

Suidas in Damocrito.

Idem in Juda.

Plutarch. Sympofia. l. iv. c. 5. v Tacit. hist. l. v.

Cæcil. apud Minut.

Tertull. Apolog. c. 16.

Translators' note. Christians, for this reason, were called Asinarii. But there is nothing in their Religion, or in the History of the Primitive Church, which could make way for such a calumny. As the Christians of the first Ages were accused very groundlessly of worshiping an Ass, the same may be said too of the Jews, and that the story of the Samaritans adoring a Pigeon on Mount Gerizim is a fiction, for which there is as little foundation.

Epiphan. de hæres. de Gnostic.

Vid. Joseph. l. xiii. c. 6. & l. xiv. c. 14. & de Bello, l. i. c. 7. & l. vii. c. 37.

Author libri cui titulus, Laus Asini.

Juvenal Satyr. 14.

Translators' note. Judæus licet & porcinum numen adoret, & Cilli summas advocet auriculas. Petron. Where the common reading is Cœli, but corrected Cilli. Κίλλος, ὄνος.

Pollux Onomast. l. vii. c. 13.

Boch. de Animal. Sacr. l. ii. c. 18.

Aug. qu. 48. & 50 in Genes.

Greg. Nyss. in vitâ Moysis.

Cleric. in Num. xxii. 28.

Ass

[Job xi. 12. xxxix. 5. Jer. xiv. 6. Ps. ciii. 12.] ASS, wild, an Animal formerly very common in Palestine, and frequently spoken of in Scripture. It lives in the most remote deserts, and is very jealous of its liberty. It can hardly endure thirst; and draws a great number of females of its own species after it. Josephus relates[1], that Herod the Great sometimes killed at one hunting only forty wild Asses[2]. Some of the Moderns have supposed the wild Ass to be a very beautiful Animal[3], about the size of a midling Mule, pretty tall, fat, with fine smooth hair; and that it has nothing of the Ass but the ears; that the hair of it is variously coloured in a very singular manner, with grey, black, and reddish fillets, all of the same size and proportion, which turn in a circle towards the flanks, and in curls towards the other parts. One of them has been sold for fourteen or fifteen thousand gold crowns. Ludolfus has given us a print of one, in the Comment on his Ethiopic History, p. 150. He says the Africans call this Animal Zecora; and the inhabitants of Congo, Zebra; and that the name of the wild Ass is given it very improperly.

The Eastern people say that the wild Ass is one of the swiftest Animals that is. The flesh of it is good to eat. I have seen the skin of one of these Asses stuff'd at M. Paul Lucas's, which shews that they are about the size of a midling Mule, with several lists of a brown colour, grey, black, and inclining to red. It is my conjecture that these are the Asses which the Scripture calls white Asses[4], which the Princes of Israel rode upon. It is certain that this Ass is not wild but tame.

The name Zecora, by which the Africans call it, is much the same with that of Zechora, by which Deborah mentions the She-Asses made use of generally by the Great Men of Israel for riding, whereof we have been just now speaking. She seems to intimate that these Animals were of service in war; and there are some still still to be seen in the East, which are employed in such uses.

The Beast upon which the Mahometans affirm their false Prophet Mahomet to have been mounted, in his supposed journey to Heaven, was, as they say, of a middle size between an Ass and a Mule; the name of it was Borak, which signifies bright, shining. I make no question but this was one of the Asses we are here speaking of, from whence Bourique in French is derived. The other Etymologies which are given of this word are all strained, and far-fetched. Boruk in Arabick, and Zecora in Hebrew, signify the same thing.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Joseph. de Bello, l. i. c. 16.

Translators' note. The Foal of a wild Ass was thought by the lovers of good cheer to be delicious eating. Pullis eorum seu præstantibus sapore, Africa gloriatur, quos Lalisiones appellant. Plin. l. 8. c. 94. Martial places it in his catalogue of fine dishes. Ep. l. xiii p. 97. Cum tener est onager, solaque lalisio matre Pascitur; hoc infans, sed breve nomen habet.

Almeida, Bernier, Litteræ PP. Societ. a Goa 1624. Telles. Vid. & Philostorg. l. iii. c. 11.

Jud. v. 10. 70 .ςαίρβμησεμ ςαίεληθ υονὄ ἰπἹΕπτονοτ אתונות צחורית, alias μεσημβρίας καὶ λαμπουσῶν.

Assaron

ASSARON, or Omer[1], is a measure of capacity in use among the Hebrews. It was the tenth part of an Ephah, as its name, Assaron, denotes; for it signifies tenth. It [Exod. xvi. 16.] contained five pints. The Assaron was the measure of Manna which God appointed for every Israelite.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Translators' note. Asseron and τὸ δέκατον*, signify the same as* Gomer. Josephus, lib. viii. calls it ἰσσαρῶν. In the Hebrew, instead of Gomer, Assarith is often used; it signifies the tenth part, viz. of the Ephah. Josephus, l. iii. says that in the time of Claudius, an Assaron or Omer of meal was sold for four Drachmæ; that is, at the rate of eight shillings a peck; but it was in the time of dearth. Arbuthnot's Tables of ancient Coins, Weights and Measures, &c. p. 101.

Assemon

ASSEMON, Assemona, the same as Asemon, Azmon, Hashmonah, or Jeshimon, a City in the Wilderness of Maon, lying [1 Sam. xxiii. 25. Josh. xv. 4. Numb. xxxiii. 29. Ch. xxxiv. 4, 5. חסידים] Southward of the Tribe of Judah. It is likewise an incampment of the Israelites in the Desart. Azmon was the nearest City to Egypt on the South side.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Assideans

ASSIDEANS, a name which we meet with in Maccabees, as 1 Macc. ii. 42. vii. 13. There are disputes concerning the original of this term. Some think it comes from the Hebrew, Chasidim, merciful, pious, holy. The Author of Ecclesiasticus, in the encomium which he makes of the greatest Men of his Nation, calls them merciful Men; which is equivalent to the name of Assideans, taken in the sense which we have been speaking of. Others maintain[1] [1], that the Assideans are the same as the Essenians, whose way of living has been so much commended by Josephus, Philo, and even Pliny, and by many others after them. This opinion seems to be confirmed by the [4 Macc. vi.] fourth Book of Maccabees, which calls the Essenians Asdanim. Others have thought the Assideans were afterwards divided, and produced the Sadducees and Pharisees. The name of Sadducees signifies just; and that of Pharisees, separated; to shew that they were distinguished from other Jews by their justice and good life.

Scaliger supposed the Assideans[2] to be a confraternity of Jews, whose principal devotion consisted in keeping up the edifices belonging to the Temple; they were not content with paying the common tribute of half a shekel a head, which was appointed for the upholding of the Temple, but voluntarily imposed other Taxes upon themselves. They swore by the Temple; every day except the eleventh of the month Tizri, they offered a Lamb in sacrifice, which was called the Sin-offering of the Assideans. And from this sect the Pharisees sprung, who produced the Essenians. [1 Macc. ii. 42.] Scripture represents the Assideans as a numerous sect distinguished for its valour, as well as zeal for the Law; A company of Assideans, who were mighty men of Israel, even all such as were voluntarily devoted unto the Law.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ferrar. in 1 Macc. vii. 13. Grot. Tirin. Mari. Gorionid. alii.

Translators' note. The mem- bers of the Jewish Church, after the captivity, were divided into the Zadikim, or righteous, who observed only the written Law of Moses; and the Chasidim, or pious, who superadded the Constitutions and Traditions of the Elders. These Chasidim were the Assideans, or Chassideans, here mentioned, the Hebrew Chath answering our Ch, and is ex- pressed sometimes in Greek by an Aspirat, in Latin sometimes by an h, and sometimes is entirely omitted, as in Assideans. Prid. Connect. &c. Part II. Book III.

Assir (I)

I. ASSIR, the Son of Jeconiah King of Judah, 1 Chron. iii. 17. Assir was the Brother of Salathiel, who is mentioned in the genealogy which St. Matthew gives us of our Saviour[1].

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Matt. i. 12. collat. cum 1 Par. III. 17.

Assir (II)

II. ASSIR, the Son of Korah, of the Tribe of Levi, 1 Chron. vi. 22. Exod. vi. 24.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Assos

[Acts xx. 13, 14.] ASSOS, a maritime City which some Geographers describe as belonging to Mysia, and others to Troas. St. Luke, and other of St. Paul's companions in his voyage, went by Sea from Troas to Assos; but St. Paul went by land thither, and meeting them at Assos, they all went together to Mytilene, in the year of J.C. 56.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Assumption (I)

I. ASSUMPTION, a term particularly made use of in the language of the Church, to signify the death of the Holy Virgin; and, according to some Ancients, and many Moderns, her resurrection, which happened three days after her death, and her elevation up into Heaven. But it must be confessed, that all the particulars which have been published concerning the death of the Blessed Virgin; and what some Authors since the fifth Age have written of it appears to be extremely dubious, after what has been written on this subject in these latter Ages. The Reader may see in particular, M. de Tillemont, Tom. 1. Notes 13, 14, 15. on the Holy Virgin. We shall not enter into any nice examination of this History, which relates rather to Church History, than a Dictionary of the Bible, since there is nothing said in Scripture either of the Death or Assumption of the Virgin.

II. ASSUMPTION

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Assumption (II)

II. Assumption of Moses[1] an apocryphal Book intitled in Hebrew, Petirath Mosé[2], and in Greek, Analepsis Moysi[3]. This Book contains the history of the Death of Moses, and the conveyance of his Soul to Paradise. It is believed that the particular of Michael's ingaging with the Devil about the Body of Moses, which is mentioned in the Epistle of S. Jude, is taken from this work. We have treated at large of it in a Dissertation on the death and burial of Moses, inserted in the last volume of our Comment.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Origen. Pen-archon l. 3. Athanas. in Synopsi.
פטירת משהPetirath Mosé.
Ἀνάληψις Μώσεως.

Assumption (III)

III. Assumption of the Virgin, an apocryphal Book, which S. John the Evangelist is said to be the Author of[1].

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Vide Sixt. Senens. l. ii. Baron. an. 44. §. 48.

Astaroth (I)

I. ASTAROTH, or Astaroth-Carnaïm, or simply Carnaïm, or Carnea, a City beyond Jordan, six miles or two leagues from Adraa, or Edraï, between this City and that of Abila. There were two places of the same name of Astaroth in the Batanæa, nine miles distant from each other between Abila and Adraa[1]. There was besides a City called Carnaim, as Eusebius says[2], in the neighbourhood of Jerusalem.

The name of Astaroth-Carnaïm is supposed to come from the Goddess Astarte, who was adored there, and was painted with horns, or a crescent on her forehead[3]; for Carnaïm signifies Horns: and the Goddess Astarte was the most celebrated Deity of all that the Phœnicians worshipped. We have discoursed at length of her in our Dissertation concerning the Phœnician Gods, placed before the small Prophets, in pages lxi, lxii, lxiii. wherein we have shewn that Astarte was the Goddess of the Woods, the Moon, the Queen of Heaven, the celestial Goddess, or celestial Venus, or the Goddess of Syria, or Venus the Syrian, Wife of Adonis[4]. Lastly S. Austin assures us, that Juno is called Astarte by the Carthaginians[5]. This too in all probability was the same as Isis the Goddess of the Egyptians, who as well as Astarte[6] is represented with the head of an ox, or with horns upon her head[7]. The Author [2 Macc. xii. 26.] of the second book of Maccabees says, that there was a Temple of the Goddess Atargatis in Carnion. Now Atargatis was the same as Derceto adored at Askelon, and represented under the form of a Woman with the lower parts of a Fish[8], and known by the Hebrews under the name of the God Dagon, or the God Fish.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Euseb. in Astaroth.

Idem in Carnaïm.

Translators' note. Lucian de Deâ Syr. Ἀστάρτην δ' ἐγὼ δοκέω σεληναίαν ἔμμεναι Her Image was the statue of a Woman with the head of an Ox. Syderum Regina bicornis. Hor.

Translators' note. See more on this subject in Selden, de Dîs Syr. Synt. 2. c. 2. and Grotius on Judges ii. 13. as also in Huet. Demonstr. Evang. Prop. iv. c. 10. Sect. 3. Astarte is thought by some to be the Ἡ Βαὰλ mentioned in the Septuagint, Tob. i. 5. ἔθυον τῇ Βαὰλ τῇ Δαμάλει. They sacrificed to She-Baal the Cow; the Sun and Moon being represented anciently under that figure.

Aug. qu. 16. in Judic.

Vide Sanchoniat. apud Euseb. Præp. l. i. c. ult.

Herodot. l. ii. c. 41.

See our Dissertation upon the Phœnician Deities, before the Book of Judges.

Astaroth (II)

II. Astaroth, the Mother of Melchisedeck, according to the Eastern people; others call her Asteria, or Selathiel. See Fabric. Apocryph. Vet. Test. p. 328.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Astarte

[אשרות Deut. xii. 13. Jer. xii. 18. xliv. 17, 18.] ASTARTE, or Astaroth, a Phœnician Goddess. The Scripture often speaks of her in the plural number, by the name of Astaroth, which signifies properly flocks of Sheep or Goats. Sometimes she is called likewise Aserah, the Grove; or Aseroth, or Aserim, Woods[1], because she was adored in Woods, was the Goddess of them, and Groves were properly her Temple. Asera, or Groves, were consecrated to her, wherein such acts of lasciviousness were commonly committed, as made the worship of her infamous[2]. Sometimes she was called the Queen of Heaven; and sometimes the worship of her is described by that of the Host of Heaven. The sacred Authors join her almost always with the God Baal, and call her by the name of Gods, having no particular one for expressing a Goddess.

[1 Kings xi. 5. xiii. 33. אלהי צדנים If. lxv. 11. Jer. vii. 18. xliv. 17.] It is believed that the Moon was adored under this name. Her Temples were generally with those of the Sun, and while bloody Sacrifices were offered to Baal, or to the Sun, and sometimes human Victims, Bread, Liquors and Perfumes were presented to Astarte, or the Queen of Heaven; tables were prepared for her on the platforms of houses, near gates, in porches and cross-ways, and on the first days of every month a supper was served up to her. This is what the Greeks called Hecate's supper.

St. Jerom in several places translates the Hebrew name Asera, or Astarte, by that of [1 Kings xv. 13. 2 Chron. xv. 16.] Priapus, as it were to denote the many acts of lasciviousness which were committed in the Groves consecrated to Astarte. The Eastern people, in many places, worshiped the Moon under the name of a God; they represented her with a beard, and in armour[3]. The statue which was worshiped in the Temple of Heliopolis in Syria, was that of a Woman cloathed like a Man[4]. Solomon, who had married many Wives that were foreigners, introduced the worship of Astarte in Israel; but it was Jezebel principally, Daughter to the King of Tyre, and Wife to Ahab, who brought the worship of this Deity into vogue in Palestine.

St. Austin assures us, that the Africans, who were descended from the Phœnicians, maintained Astarte to be the same as Juno[5], Juno sine dubitatione ab illis (Pœnis) Astarte vocatur. Herodian[6] nevertheless says, that the Carthaginians call the heavenly Goddess Astroarche, and affirm her to be the same as the Moon. The Phœnician Divines[7] asserted confidently, that their Astarte was the Syrian Venus, born at Tyre, and Wife to Adonis; very different from her who was born in the Isle of Cyprus. Lastly, Lucian, who has written particularly concerning the Goddess of Syria, which is the same as Astarte, says expressly that she is the Moon, and no other; and it is indubitable that this Luminary was worshiped under different names in almost all parts of the East. Cœlestem Afri, Mitram Persæ, plerique Venerem colunt, pro diversitate nominis, non numinis diversitate[8].

The manner of representing Astarte upon Medals, is not always the same[9]. Sometimes she is in a long, and at other times again in a short Habit; sometimes holding a long Stick with a Cross upon the top of it; in other Medals she is to be seen with a Crown of rays; and elsewhere she is crowned with Battlements, or by Victory. In a Medal struck at Cæsarea in Palestine, she is in a short Dress, crowned with Battlements, with a Man's Head in her right hand, and a Staff in her left. This is believed to be the Man's Head mentioned by Lucian, and which every year is brought from Egypt to Biblos, a City of Phœnicia, whereof we have spoken heretofore, in the Article ADONIS. Sanchoniathon[10] says she was represented with a Cow's Head, the Horns describing the royalty and rays of the Moon.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Asera אשרהAseroth אשרותAserim אשרים

Translators' note. This infamous practice is still continued in the East, according to the accounts of modern Travellers. Ta-vernier tells us, (P. 2. l. 2. 5.) that there is a Pagod near Cambay, where the Women prostitute themselves to their Idol. And Mark Polo takes notice of the like custom in the Province of Camul, that it was forbidden by Mangon Khan, whose order for three years was obeyed, but that his people observing then that their fields were not so fruitful as usual, sent Deputies to him, representing, Che da poi che mancavano di far questi piaceri & eleemosyne verso forastieri le loro case andauano dimal in peggio. See Anciennes Relations des Indes & de la Chine, p. 171.

Vide Macrob. Saturnal. l. iii c. 8.

Plin l. v. c 23.

Aug. qu. 16. in Judic.

Herodian. l. v. Ἐρανίαν καλοῦσι Φοίνικες ... Ambrof. Ep. 31.

Cicero l. iii. de natura Deorum.

Am-

See our Dissertation on the Phœnician Deities, and D. Bern. de Montfaucon's Antiquity explained.

Sanchon. apud Euseb. præpar. l. i. c. ult.

Astyages (I)

I. ASTYAGES, otherwise Cyaxares, King of the Medes, and Successor to Phraortes, reigned forty years, and died in the year of the World 3409. before J.C. 591. before the vulgar Æra 595. He had a Son called Astyages, otherwise Darius the Mede; and two Daughters, Mandane and Amyit. Astyages or Darius the Mede, otherwise called Ahasuerus, made war against Saracus King of Nineveh, and reigned afterwards at Babylon, as we shall relate in the following Article. Amyit married Nebuchadnezzar the Son of Nabopolassar King of Chaldæa, and was the Mother of Evilmerodach. Mandane married Cambyses the Persian, and was the Mother of Cyrus.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Astyages (II)

II. ASTYAGES, otherwise called Ahasuerus, Tobiæ ult. v. ult. in the Greek, and Dan. ix. 1. or Artaxerxes, Dan. vi. 1. in the Greek, or Darius the Mede, Dan.v. 31. and Cyaxares by his Father's name, in Xenophon, or Apandas in Ctesias. This Astyages was appointed by his Father Cyaxares Governour of Media[1], and sent with Nabopolassar King of Babylon against Saracus, otherwise called Chyniladanus, King of Assyria. These two Princes besieged Saracus in Nineveh; took the City, and dismembred the Assyrian Empire. Astyages was with Cyrus at the conquest of Babylon[2], and succeeded Belshassar King of the Chaldæans, as is expresly mentioned in Dan. v. 30, 31. in the year of the World 3447. After his death, Cyrus succeeded him, in the year of the World 3456. See Dan. xiii. 65.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Alex. Polyhistor. apud Cedren.

See Isai. xiii, xiv, xxi, xlv, xlvi, xlvii. Jerem. l, li. Megasth. apud Euseb. Præp. l. v. c. 41.

Asylum

ASYLUM[1]. This word signifies a Sanctuary, whither unhappy people might retire to secure themselves from the violence of their Enemies, and whence no one could force them against their wills. It is supposed that Hercules's Grandsons were the first Authors of these places of refuge[2]: for they apprehending the resentment of those whom Hercules in his life time had used ill, set up an Asylum, that is to say, a Temple of Mercy, at Athens. Cadmus erected another at Thebes, and Romulus another at Rome, upon Mount Palatine. That of Daphne near Antioch, is very famous; hither, as we read in the Maccabees, [2 Macc. iv. 34. In the Year of the World 3834. before J. C. 168 before the vulgar Æra 172. 1 Kings ii. 28,29, 34.] Onias III. High Priest of the Jews, retired, and thought himself to be here in a place of safety; whereupon Andronicus, being corrupted by Menelaus, fraudulently persuaded him to go out of it, and immediately killed him.

The Altar of Burnt-Sacrifices, and the Temple of the Lord, were likewise inviolable Sanctuaries. Thither Joab retired to secure himself, but Solomon observing that he would not quit the Altar, which he embraced closely, ordered him to be killed upon the place. Moses commands, [Exod. xxi. 14.] that any one who had committed any voluntary murder, and should fly for protection to the Altar, should be drag'd from thence. Sanctuaries are not made for the benefit of wicked men, as is acknowledged even by profane Authors[3], but in favour of the good and innocent, who are attacked unjustly. When Villains retired to the Sanctuary of the Temple, they were either starved to death there, or were forced from thence by fires kindled every where about them. We shall speak of the Cities of Refuge in another place. These were appointed in the land of Israel by God himself, in favour of those who by accident had committed an involuntary murder. See REFUGE, CITY OF REFUGE.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Asylum, Græcè Ἄσυλον, ab α & σύλη præda; quod spoliare nefas. Quidam deducunt ab Aschel. אשלLucus.
Servius ad Æneid. viii. v. 342.
Demosthen. Ep. 3. de Lycurgi liberis. Gaz. ad Gen. 1.

Asyncritus

ASYNCRITUS, mentioned by St. Paul, Rom. xvi. 14. The Greeks make him Bishop of Hircania, and set down his Festival upon the 8th of April. The Roman Martyrology fixes it on the same day. We have no certain accounts of this Saint.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Atabyrius Mons

ATABYRIUS MONS. Mount Tabor. See TABOR. Upon this Mountain there was a City called Athabyrium, or Ithabyrium, mentioned by Polybius, l. i. p. 413. There are some Medals, on which we see Jupiter firnamed Atabyrius. But as there are several Cities of this name, it is not known exactly in which he was principally honoured.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Atad

[Gen. l. 11. צרן עטר] ATAD, Atad's Threshing-Floor. This is the place where the Sons of Jacob, and the Egyptians who accompanied them, mourned for this Patriarch; and which was afterwards called Abel-mizraim, the mourning of the Egyptians. Some there are who place it beyond Jordan; but others think it was on this side the River. St. Jerom[1] fixes it between the Jordan and Jericho, two miles from the river, and three from Jericho, in the place where afterwards Beth-agla was built. Procopius of Gaza does the same[2]. They who place it Eastward beyond Jordan, seem to have been led into this mistake by St. Jerom's words, who says that Abel-mizraim, or the Mourning of the Egyptians, or the Threshing-floor of Atad, is beyond Jordan; but these words, beyond Jordan, he understood with respect to those who came from Egypt, with regard to whom the Threshing-floor of Atad was beyond this river, supposing they took the same way which the Israelites did afterwards, in their journey to the land of Canaan; which is not at all certain.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Hieronym. in locis Hebr. in Area Atad.
Procop.

Atarah

ATARAH, the Wife of Jerahmeel, and Mother of Onam, 1 Chron. ii. 26.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ataroth

ATAROTH. There are several Cities of this name. There is one in the Tribe of Gad, beyond Jordan, Numb. xxxii. 34. the same probably with Atroth-Shophan, which was given to the Tribe of Gad, xxxii. 35. and another upon the frontiers of Ephraim, between Janohah and Jericho, Josh. xvi. 7. It is probably the same with Ataroth-Addar, mentioned in Josh. xvi. 5. xviii. 13.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ater

ATER. His Children, to the number of fourscore and eighteen, returned from [Ezra ii. 16.] Babylon.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Athach

ATHACH, a City in the Tribe of Judah, 1 Sam. xxx. 30.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Athaliah (I)

[2 Kings xi. 1,2,&c. In the Year of the World 3120. before J.C. 880. before the vulg. Æra 884.] I. ATHALIAH, the Daughter of Ahab King of Samariah, and Wife to Joram King of Judah. She being informed that Jehu had put to death her Son Ahaziah, and two and forty Princes of his blood, born of different Women, she resolved to massacre all the Princes of the Royal Family, that she might be able to ascend the Throne of Judah without any obstacle. But Jehosheba the Daughter of King Joram, and Sister to King Ahaziah, took Joash the Son of Ahaziah, with his Nurse, and privately conveyed him away, while Athaliah's Officers, by her orders, were murdering the King's Children. This young Prince for six years was supported privately, together with his Nurse, in the Temple; and in the seventh year the High Priest Jehoiada determined to place him upon the Throne of his Ancestors, and procure the destruction of Athaliah. He called together the Priests and Levites who guarded the Temple, discovered his design to them, shewed them the young King, and, without losing time, having first posted them at proper places, he declared young Joash King, with great acclamations of the multitude.

Athaliah having heard the noise, entred the Temple of the Lord amidst the croud, and upon seeing the young King seated on his Throne, she tore her cloathes, and cried out, Treason! Treason! At the same time Jehoiada commanded the Levites who were in arms to take her and carry her without the inclosure of the Temple, and if any one followed her, to put him to the sword. The Officers therefore laid hands on her, and dragg'd her thro' the way of the Horse-gate, near the Palace, and in this place she was slain, in the year of the World 3126. before J.C. 874. before the vulgar Æra 878. She reigned six years.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Athaliah (II)

II. ATHALIAH, of the Tribe of Benjamin, 1 Chron. viii. 26.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Athar

ATHAR, a City in the Tribe of Simeon, Josh. xix. 7. St. Jerom speaks of a place called Atharus, four miles North from from Sebasta, or Samaria; but this is too remote from the Tribe of Simeon. It is my opinion, that Athar is the same as Ether, or Jether, which was at first given to the Tribe of Judah, and afterwards yielded to that of Simeon. Ethar and Asan are joined together, Josh. xv. 42. as are Athar and Asan, Josh. xix. 7. Now Ether, or Jether, or Pethira, was in the times of Eusebius and St. Jerom[1], a large Town, eighteen miles from Eleutheropolis, in the Southern part of Judah, towards Malatis.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Euseb & Hieronym. in Jether & Ether. See the Comment on 1 Sam. xxx. 27. Josh. xv. 42, 43, 47. xix. 7.

Athenobius

ATHENOBIUS, Son of Demetrius, was sent by Antiochus Sidetes King of [1 Macc. xv. 28.] Syria, to Simon Maccabæus, to command him to surrender the Cities of Joppa, Gazara, and the Fortress of Jerusalem, which were in his possession; to pay him tribute for the Cities which he held out of Judæa, and to indemnify him for the great waste which he had made upon the lands belonging to the Dominions of the King of Syria. He demanded five hundred talents of Silver, to repair these damages; and five hundred more for tribute which he pretended was due. Simon answered Athenobius, that he had robb'd the King of none of his Patrimony; and that for the places which the King required to have restored to him, they had been taken by the Jews, with an intention to secure themselves from the continual mischiefs which they did them: that notwithstanding, he was ready to give the King an hundred talents for these places. Athenobius hereupon returned with great indignation to the siege of Dora, where Antiochus was, and reported Simon's answer. Antiochus sent Cendebeus against him, who did nothing very remarkable. He was defeated and put to flight by the two Sons of Simon the High Priest, 1 Macc. xvi. 1, 2, & seq.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Athens

[Acts xvii. 15, 16, & seq.] ATHENS, a celebrated City of Greece, formerly a very powerful Commonwealth, which distinguished itself very much in war; but acquired still more glory, by the learning, eloquence and politeness, whereof its inhabitants made profession. It would be to little purpose to give here an historical account of Athens. We shall only observe, that St. Paul coming thither in the year of J.C. 52. found it deeply plunged in idolatry, taken up in hearing news, and spreading it, extremely curious to know every thing, and very much divided in opinions concerning true Religion, and supreme Happiness. St. Paul having taken an opportunity there to preach JESUS CHRIST, was carried before the Judges of the Areopagus, where he gave an illustrious testimony to Truth, and the Unity of God. There he converted Dionysius the Areopagite, and Damaris, who according to some of the Ancients[1], was this Senator's Wife. Dionysius was ordained first Bishop of Athens; and it is believed that he ended his life there by an honourable Martyrdom.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Chrysost. de Sacerdot. l. iv. c. 7. & After. homil. 8. p. 162.

Athlai

ATHLAI, the Son of Belai, divorced his Wife because she was not an Israelite, Ezra x. 28.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Athleta

[1 Cor. ix. 25.] ATHLETA. There is frequent mention of Wrestlers, in the Books of Scripture, composed after the establishment of the Grecian Monarchy in the East. Before this time neither Wrestlers, nor any Sports with which they exercised themselves, were known there. Wrestlers were men who used this exercise either for their diversion, or for the sake of health; or lastly, that they might appear in the publick Games with reputation, and obtain the Crowns and Prizes which were proposed at such times as these diversions were held. There were many sorts of Games, but there were reckoned six principally, which were Wrestling, Running, Leaping, Quoits, Boxing, and Boxing and Kicking both together. The life of Wrestlers was very laborious; they abstained from all manner of delicacy and softness, and particularly from the use of Marriage[1]. To this way of living St. Paul alludes, when he says that every man when he striveth for the mastery is temperate in all things. And he farther alludes frequently to their exercises and rewards, 1 Cor. ix. 24. Know ye not that they which run in a race, run all, but one receiveth the Prize? Every man that striveth for the mastery is temperate in all things. Now they do it to obtain a corruptible Crown. See likewise Philip. iii. 14. The Athletæ who made profession of learning and exercising what was commonly practised in the publick Games, whether Running, Wrestling, Quoiting, Darting, or Leaping, lived in a very severe manner; entered young upon their exercises, endured cold and heat, lived in almost continual labour, abstained from pleasures, wine and cool drinks; eat by rule and measure, and denied themselves several sorts of food, which were thought apt to weaken them[2].

Qui studet optatam cursu contingere metam. Multa tulit fecitque puer, sudavit & alsit, Abstinuit venere & Baccho, &c.

The reward of these Athletæ was a Crown of Oak, Pine, Laurel or Olive; but there were other prerogatives besides this, which consisted in exemption from publick Offices, in certain Honours, as in being led about in Triumph, and having Statues erected for them in Cities. But originally the honour of the Victory was the only Prize of the Conquerors; and it is observed, that the first Athletæ lived in a manner much more frugal and laborious than they who came after them; which may serve to reconcile those who speak of Athletæ as people put out to fatten, homines altiles, as Tertullian says, with those who commend their abstinence and temperance.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Plato l. viii. de legib. Plin. l. 34. c. 18.
Horat de Arte Poet. ver. 412.

Athon

ATHON, a frontier City of Arabia, taken by Alexander Jannæus, from Aretas King of Arbia[1].

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Joseph. Antiq. l. xiv. c. 2.

Atlas

[Job ix. 13.] ATLAS. Some make Atlas to be the Son of Japhet, or Japetus, and Clymene[1]. They say that this Hero having offended Jupiter, was condemned to bear the Heavens upon his Head and Shoulders, in a very remote Country, over-against the Hesperides. St. Jerom seems to point at the punishment of Atlas, when he says in Job, God whose anger no one can resist, and under whose weight they bend who bear the world; sub quo curvantur qui portant orbem. The Septuagint, The Fish or Sea-monsters which are under Heaven, bend under the weight of his Majesty. Ovid[2], who likewise makes him to be the Son of Japetus, says that he had a garden filled with excellent trees, one whereof bore golden Apples. Themis had foretold him, that a certain Son of Jupiter should carry off his Apples. He trusted the keeping of them to a great Dragon, and inclosed his garden with a strong wall. Perseus came to desire shelter of him; which he refusing, Perseus, to punish him, shewed him Medusa's head, and metamorphosed him into a Mountain. This gave occasion for the report of Atlas's bearing up Heaven, because Mount Atlas is so high that Heaven seems to rest upon the top of it. Eupolemus cited in Eusebius[3], thought Atlas was the same as Enoch, whom the Ancients relate to be the inventor of Arts, and of the Science of the Heavens.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Hesiod. ver. 509, 515.
Ovid. Metam. l. iv. ver. 630, &c.
Euseb. Præpar. l. 9.

Attalus

ATTALUS, King of Pergamus. There were many Kings of this name in Pergamus. He who is mentioned in the first Book of [1 Macc. XV. 22.] Maccabees, and to whom the Romans wrote in favour of the Jews, is Attalus, firnamed Philadelphus, who governed the Kingdom in the room of his Nephew Attalus III. Philometor, Son of Eumenes King of Pergamus. This last Attalus was he who left the People of Rome heirs to all his riches[1]; which, as they pretended, was to be understood as including his Kingdom too[2]. The arrival of the Jewish Ambassadors at Rome, to renew their alliance, in consequence whereof the Roman Senate wrote to Attalus, is fixed to the year of the World 3865. and Attalus Philadelphus began to govern in 3845. He governed for one and twenty years, and in 3866. put the Kingdom into the hands of his Nephew Philometor, to whom of right it belonged. Attalus Philometor died without Children, in the year of the World 3871. before J.C. 129. before the vulgar Æra 133.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Livius l. lix.

Translators' note. Videas etiam Epistolam Mithridatis Regis Ponti ad Arsacen, Regem Parthiæ inter fragmenta Sallustii, l. 4. in quâ epistolâ vocat hoc testamentum simulatum & impium testamentum. Aristonicus the next Heir, Son of Eumenes, and Brother of Attalus by another Mother, claim'd the Crown of Pergamus as his inheritance, took possession of it, defeated Licinius Crassus the Consul, cut off him and his Army, and was not reduced till after four years continuance of this war. See Prid. Connect. &c. Part II. Book V.

Attalia

[Acts xiv. 25. Lev. xx. 6. Deut. xviii. 10, 11.] ATTALIA, a City of Pamphylia, whither St. Paul and Barnabas went to preach the Gospel, in the year of J.C. 45.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Augur

AUGUR. The name of Augur is taken principally for those who concern themselves in foretelling what is to come, by the flight, the crowing, singing, or the feeding of Birds. I do not observe any presages made after this manner in the Scripture; but there are others in great number. The name of Augurs has been understood in a comprehensive sense, to signify all those who foretell what is to come by the view of Birds, the Heavens and Elements, of Animals, Lightning, the Entrails of Victims, Water, Wands, &c. and in this enlarged sense we sometimes find auguror & augurium[1] in Scripture; signifying all sorts of Magick or Divination. God had commanded his people, upon pain of death, to forbear consulting of Magicians; and had expresly forbidden them to suffer any Magicians or Diviners in the land belonging to the Hebrews.

[Gen. xliv. 5. Heb. 70.] We read in Genesis, that Joseph ordered the Cup which he made use of in divining, to be concealed in Benjamin's sack. Josephus ipse est in quo bibit Dominus meus, & in quo augurari solet. No one pretends to say, that Joseph made use of the art of divining in a superstitious manner; he was too wise and religious to practise any thing so vain, and so contrary to Religion, as Divinations, of what nature soever they might be; but his people might speak to Joseph's Brethren according to the opinion of the Egyptians, who held Joseph to be a great Soothsayer a. Or the word Augurari in this place may be understood to mean foretelling what is to come: thus the Cup here mentioned is that which Joseph used in offering libations to God, when he had a mind to consult him about any thing future[2]. The Eastern people have always been very superstitious; they brought the generality of Divinations into vogue. Some of them have pretended to understand the language of Birds; upon which the art of Augury is founded. Notwithstanding the Romans made use of it in their most serious undertakings, the most sensible of them in their hearts laughed at it[3].

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Translators' note. The Hebrew words thus translated in the Latin Vulgate are, אובand ,אבחwhich differ pretty much in significa- tion from Augur and Augurium. The Πνεῦμα Πύθωνος, in Acts xvi. 16. seems to come nearer the meaning par- ticularly of ,אובwhich by Buxtorf is rendred Pytho and Utres. Hinc, says he, Pythonis significatio juxta Aben Ezram, quod ex tumido ventre, quasi Utre oracula deponent inde ἐγγαστρίμυθος dictus fuit. But we know of no sort of Divination among the Hebrews, like that expressed properly by the word Augurium.

Grot. in Gen. xliv.

Translators' note. And not only ridiculed it tacitly within themselves, but more explicitely and expresly. Cicero in his Book de Senectute takes notice of Fabius Maximus's Contempt of this Art, Augurque cum esset, says he, dicere ausus est; optimis auspiciis ea geri. quæ pro Reipublicæ salute gererentur: quæ contra Rempublicam fierent, contra auspicia fieri. Ennius ranks Augurs among other publick Cheats and Impostors who are named by him. Non enim sunt ii aut arte Divini, aut scientiâ, sed superstitiosi Vates, impudentesque Arioli, &c. And Accius, Nihil credo Auguribus, qui aures verbis divitant alienas, suas ut auro locupletent domos.

Augustus

[Luke xi. 1.] AUGUSTUS, Emperor of Rome, and Successor to Julius Cæsar. The battle of Actium, which he fought with Mark Antony, and which made him master of the Empire, happened fifteen years before the Birth of Jesus Christ, in the year of the world 3985. Augustus lived seventeen years after it. He died in the 14th year of the common Æra, and seventeen years after the Birth of our Saviour. This was the Emperor who appointed the Enrolment mentioned by S. Luke, which obliged Joseph and the Virgin to go to Bethlehem, the place where Jesus Christ was born.

Augustus procured the Crown of Judæa for Herod from the Roman Senate. After the defeat of Mark Antony, Herod adhered to Augustus, and was always very faithful to him. Augustus loaded him with honours and riches; and when this Monarch undertook to subject Arabia to the Roman Empire, Herod gave Ælius Gallus, who had the charge of this expedition, five hundred of his guards. Augustus was pleased to undertake the care of Alexander's and Aristobulus's education, Herod's Sons, and gave them apartments in his palace. When he came into Syria, Zenodorus and the Gadarens waited on him with their complaints against Herod, accusing him of violence, rapine, and tyranny. But Herod by his presence cleared himself of these accusations, and obliged his accusers to lay violent hands upon themselves to prevent their falling into his; and Augustus was so far from having any regard to what was charged upon him, that he heaped new honours on him, and augmented his Kingdom with the addition of Zenodorus's Tetrarchy[1]. He was so kind as to examine into the quarrels between Herod and his Sons, and reconciled them.

Syllæus Minister to Obadas King of the Nabatheans having accused Herod of making an irruption into Arabia with a powerful Army, and destroying abundance of people there[2], Augustus wrote to Herod about it in an angry manner, but he justified his conduct so well, that the Emperor restored him to his good graces, and continued them to him ever after. But this did not prevent his disapproving very much the rigours exercised by Herod towards his Sons, he having put to death Alexander and Aristobulus, and last of all Antipater; whereupon the Emperor observed, that it were better a great deal to be Herod's Hog than his Child[3].

Augustus after the death of Lepidus assumed the office of High Priest among the Romans[4]. This dignity gave him an inspection over Ceremonies, and matters relating to Religion. One of his first concerns was, to order an examination of the Sybils Books, which were then very common, and occasioned great disorders among the People, and in the Government, every one taking the liberty of interpreting them, and giving such a turn to them as was agreeable to his fancy and inclinations. Augustus directed search to be made after them, and, as it is said, burnt near two thousand Copies of them. He preserved none but such as bore the name of some particular Sybils, and were esteemed to be their genuine works; and even these he submitted to a severe examination. Those which he preserved as authentick, were put into two little gold boxes under the pedestal of Apollo's statue, whose Temple was built within the inclosure of the palace. See hereafter the article Sybils.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Joseph. Antiq. l. xv. c. 13.
Idem Antiq. l. xvi. c. 14, 15.
Macrob. Saturn. l. ii. c. 4.
Sueton. in Octav. Dio. Cassius l. liv.

Avim

AVIM, a City in the Tribe of Benjamin. Josh. xviii. 23.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Avims

[Deut. xi. 23. Josh. xiii. 4. Josh. xi. 19. Josh. xi. 3. Genes. xxxiv. 29] AVIMS, People descended from Hevæus the Son of Canaan. This people dwelt at first in the country which was afterwards possessed by the Caphtorims or Philistines. The Scripture says expressly, that the Caphtorims drove out the Avims, who dwelt in Hasserim even unto Azzah. There were also Avims or Hivites at Schechem or Gibeon, and consequently in the center of the promised land; for the inhabitants of Schechem and the Gibeonites were Hivites. Lastly there were some of them beyond Jordan, at the foot of mount Hermon. Bochart thinks that Cadmus, who conducted a colony of Phœnicians into Greece, was a Hivite. His name Cadmus comes from the Hebrew, Kedem, the East, because he came from the Eastern part of the land of Canaan. The name of his Wife Hermione was taken from mount Hermon, at the foot whereof the Hivites dwelt. The metamorphosis of Cadmus's companions into serpents, is founded upon the signification of the name of Hivites, which in the Phœnician language signifies Serpents.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Avith

[Genes. xxxiv. 35.] AVITH, the capital City of Hadad King of Edom.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Aulon

AULON. This is the name which in Eusebius's and S. Jerom's time[1] was given to that vast Valley which reaches along the river Jordan, from Libanus to the wilderness of Paran. This name seems to be derived from the Greek Aulos, which is taken for a Valley. The great plain and valley which lies between Libanus and Antilibanus is likewise called Aulon[2].

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Euseb. & Hieronym. Onomastic. in Αὐλὼν.
Vide Reland. Palæst. t. i. p. 364, 365, & 372.

Ausitida

AUSITIDA. This is Job's country. See Uz, the land of Uz.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Auster

AUSTER, the South. Negeb, the South, in Scripture denotes Arabia Petræa, or the Southern part of Edom or [Deut. xxxiii. 23.] Judah. Sometimes the Hebrews express it by the right hand. Eusebius and S. Jerom frequently make use of the word Daroma, to signify the South. This term is to be met with in many places of the Hebrew in the same sense.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Aza

AZA. The cities of Gaza and Azoth [Eccl. vi. 6. Ezech. xl. 24, &c.] are sometimes so called[1]. Josephus farther takes notice of a mountain of this name, near unto which Judas Maccabæus fought against Bacchides, in the last encounter which he had with him, wherein he died[2]. In the first book of Maccabees ix. 15. this same place is called Mount Azotus.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Stephan. in Gaza & Azotos.
Joseph. Antiq. lib. xii. c. 19.

Azaliah

AZALIAH, the Father of Shaphan. 2 Kings xxii. 3.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Azariah (I)

[1 Chr. vi. 9.] I. AZARIAH, High-Priest of the Jews. He succeeded Ahimaar, and was himself succeeded by Johanan. Perhaps he and Amariah, who lived under Jehoshaphat [2 Chron. xix. 11. 1 Chr. vi. 10.] King of Judah, about the year 3092 are one and the same person.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Azariah (II)

II. AZARIAH, the Son of Johanan High-Priest of the Jews. He is perhaps the same as Zechariah the Son of Jehoiada, [2 Chron. xxiv. 20, 22.] killed in 3164.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Azariah (III)

III. AZARIAH, High-Priest also of the Jews, in the reign of Uzziah King of Judah. This Prince having undertaken to offer incense to the Lord, Azariah opposed [2 Chron. xxvi. 17.] him with vigour; and the hand of God fell heavily on King Uzziah, and smote him with a leprosy. They carried him immediately out of the Temple, and he dwelt without the City, separated from the conversation of mankind to the day of his death.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Azariah (IV)

[2 Chron. xxxi. 10.] IV. AZARIAH, High-Priest of the Jews in the reign of Hezekiah. He was the Father of Hilkiah. See the Catalogue of the High-Priests.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Azariah (V)

V. AZARIAH, lived under the last Kings of Judah. He was the Father of Seraiah the last High-Priest of the Jews before the Captivity.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Azariah (VI)

VI. AZARIAH, Son to the High-Priest Zadok. We do not read, that he succeeded his Father.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Azariah (VII)

VII. AZARIAH, the Son of Nathan, Captain of Solomon's Guards.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Azariah (VIII)

VIII. AZARIAH, or Uzziah, King of Judah, Son of Amaziah, began to reign at the age of sixteen years, and reigned two and fifty years at Jerusalem. His Mother's name was Jecholiah. He did that which was right in the sight of the Lord; nevertheless he did not destroy the high places, and the people, against the express prohibition of God, continued to sacrifice there. This Prince is called Uzziah in the Chronicles. He having taken upon him to offer incense in the Temple, which office was reserved peculiarly to the Priests, was struck with a leprosy, and continued without the City separated from other men to his death.

Josephus says[1], that upon this occasion a great earthquake was felt, and that the Temple opening at the top, a ray of light darted upon the King's forehead, and he appeared instantly to have a leprosy. The earthquake was so violent as to divide in half the mountain which lies to the West of Jerusalem, and the earth having moved along for the space of four furlongs, or five hundred paces, without ever stopping till it met with the mountain, which lies Eastward of the City, closed up the high way, and covered the King's gardens. This is what Josephus adds to the History related in the Chronicles. We know indeed that there was a very great earthquake in the reign of Uzziah. Amos and Zachary make mention of it, the Kings and Chronicles speak expressly of it; but it is not certain that it happened at the very time, when Uzziah took upon him to offer incense.

The beginnings of Uzziah's reign were very happy. He obtained great advantages over the Philistines, Ammonites, and Arabians. He made additions to the fortifications of Jerusalem, and always kept an Army on foot of three hundred and seven thousand, and five hundred men; and he had great Magazines very well furnished with all sorts of arms, as well for attacking as defending. As he was a great lover of agriculture, he had a great number of husbandmen in the plains, vinedressers in the mountains, and shepherds in the valleys. He died in the year of the world 3246, before J. C. 754, before the vulgar Æra 758. He was not buried in the royal Sepulchers, because he was a leper; but in the field where these monuments were.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Joseph. Antiq. l. ix. c. 11.

Azariah (IX)

IX. AZARIAH, the Son of John, and Father of Heber. 1 Chr. xi. 29.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Azariah (X)

X. AZARIAH, the Son of Uriel, otherwise called Zephaniah. 1 Chr. vi. 36.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Azariah (XI)

[2 Chron. xv. 1, &c.] XI. AZARIAH, a Prophet, the Son of Oded, went by God's appointment to meet Aza King of Judah, as he returned after his succes against Zerah King of Ethiopia. Azariah addressed himself to Asa and his people, saying, The Lord hath assisted you, because you adhered to him. If ye seek him, ye will find him; but if ye forsake him, he will abandon you. Israel for a long time shall be without the true God, without Priests, Teachers, or Law. If they return to the Lord in their affliction, they will find him. At this time terror shall overspread all the inhabitants of the Earth, nation shall rise up against nation, and city against city. But for your part, take courage; let not your hands be weakened, and your perseverance shall be rewarded. These words inspired Asa with new zeal, and he began to destroy all the remaining idols in his Dominions. This is all we know of this Prophet. The particular we have related happened in the year of the world 3126, before J. C. 974, before the vulgar Æra 978.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Azariah (XII)

XII. AZARIAH, the Son of Obed, one of those to whom the High-Priest Jehoida discovered, that the young Prince Joash was living; whom likewise he sent thro'out all the land to gather the Levites together, in order to place this young Prince upon the Throne of his Ancestors. In the year of the world 3126, before J. C. 974, before the vulgar Æra 978.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Azariah (XIII)

XIII. AZARIAH. This is the name of [2 Chron. xxiii. 1, 2, &c. 2 Chron. xxi. 1, 2. Jerem. xiii. 2.] two of Jehoshaphat's Sons, who was King of Judah.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Azariah (XIV)

XIV. AZARIAH, the Son of Hoshaiah, accused the Prophet Jeremiah of deceiving the people, because he advised the Jews that remained behind after the Captivity against going into Egypt. Azariah supported by Johanan the Son of Kariah and some others, carried away Jeremiah and Baruch into Egypt with the rest of the people.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Azariah (XV)

XV. AZARIAH, otherwise called Abednego, one of the three Israelites cast into the fiery furnace by Nebuchadnezzar, for refusing to adore the Statue which he [Dan. iii. 19.] had erected. In the year of the world 3444, before J.C. 556, before the vulgar Æra 560. took this name, when he ingaged to conduct [1 Macc. v. 60.] Tobias to Rages. Tob. vi. 6.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Azarias (II)

II. AZARIAS. He was left by Judas Maccabæus with another Captain, whose name was Joseph, to guard Jerusalem: when they both heard how successful Judas had been, they had a mind to distinguish themselves by ingaging with the Enemy. They marched therefore with this design, but were defeated by Gorgias near Jamnia, and lost two thousand men, in the year of the world 3841, before J. C. 159, before the vulgar Æra 163.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Azar

AZAR, the Son of Shemab of the Tribe of Reuben. 1 Chr. v. 8.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Azazel

AZAZEL, or Hazazel[1]; in Greek, Apopompaios; in Latin, Emissarius. This is what we commonly call the Scape-goat, [Levit. xvi. 5, 7, 8, &c.] and shall speak of it under this title. Upon the day of solemn expiation, the Elders of the people presented two Goats for the sins of all Israel. It was determined by lot which of the two should be sacrificed, and which set at liberty. This last was the Azazel, or Scape-goat, and Let-go. Thus the Septuagint, Aquila, Symmachus, Theodoret, Cyril of Alexandria, and many other Interpreters explain it. They think that this Goat thus set at liberty, and loaded with the imprecations of the High-Priest and the sins of all the people, was like those animals, which the Heathens consecrated to some of their Deities, and left at liberty[2]. Az-azel in Hebrew may signify the Goat that goes away or escapes.

Others think that Azazel is the name of a Mountain; which some of the Rabbins[3] assert to be ninety furlongs, or eleven thousand nine hundred and five and twenty paces, distant from Jerusalem. Bochart will have it, that this word signifies Departure or Removal. Spencer says, it signifies some Demon, and that when the Scripture tells us of sending a Goat to Hazazel, it means that it was given to the Devil. Mark, the Head of the Marcosian Hereticks[4], called the Devil, whose name he made use of in forming his juggling tricks, Azazel. The same Spencer cites the Cabalists, and Julian the Apostate, as favouring his opinion[5]. M. Le Clerc translates Azazel, præcipitium. He believes that the Scape-goat was sent to some steep and inaccessible place, where it perished. He grounds his translation upon the 21st verse, where it is said, that the Goat Azazel was sent into the Wilderness, and in the 22d verse into some inaccessible place, in terram præruptam. He derives Azazel from two Arabick words Aza to be hard, and Azala to be in pain. But we had better keep to the version of the old Greek Interpreters, who derived Azazel from the Hebrew Haz or Hez, a Goat, and Azal, he went away. See Spencer's Dissertation on the Scape-goat. Bochart, De animal. sacr. part. i. l. ii. c. 54. & seq. Marsham, Canon. Chronol. Egypt. Sæcul. ix.

You have here the Ceremonies, which, as the Hebrews tell us[6], were observed in the several particulars relating to the Scape-goat. Two Goats were led into the inner-court of the Temple, and presented to the High-Priest on the North side of the Altar of Burnt-offerings : these two Goats were placed one on the right, the other on the left hand of the High-Priest. After this an urn was brought and placed between two, and two lots cast into it of wood, silver, or gold: but under the second Temple they were always of gold. Upon one of these lots was engraven, for the Lord, and upon the other for Azazel. After the urn had been well shook, the High-Priest put both his hands at once into it, and in each drew out a lot: that in his right hand decided the sate of the Goat placed on his right, that in his left of the Goat on his left hand. The Jews tell us, that during the whole Pontificate of Simon the Just, the lot which he drew with his right hand was always that on which was written for the Lord, which was understood as a happy Omen ; whereas after his death this varied, and sometimes the lot on the right hand, sometimes that in the left was for the Lord.

[Isai. i. 18.] After this the High-Priest fastned a long fillet, or narrow piece of scarlet to the head of Azazel, or the Scape goat ; which piece under the Pontificate of Simon the Just appear'd always to be white, which was a particular favour of Heaven, and a sign that God granted the People the remission of their sins ; whereas under other High-Priests it appeared sometimes white and sometimes of its natural colour, scarlet. To this the following words of Isaiah are applied, Tho' their sins were as scarlet, yet shall they be white as snow, &c.

After the sacrifice of the Goat which was for the Lord, the Scape-goat was brought to the High-Priest, who put both his hands upon the head of this animal, and confessed all his own sins, and those of the people ; then it was conducted into the wilderness by some person chosen for this office, and left upon the brinks of a precipice at twelve miles distance from Jerusalem ; thus it was supposed to carry away with it all the sins of the people of Israel. Under the Pontificate of the same Simon the Just above mentioned, before the Scape-goat or Azazel had got half way down the precipice from whence he was cast, he was broken in pieces ; whereas after the death of this High-Priest he fled alive into the desart, and was there met with by the Saracens, who took and eat him. See hereafter Solemn Expiation.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Haz-azel. 70. Hieronym. Emissarius. Theodoret. qu. 22. in Levit. Sym. Abeuntem. Aq. Dimissum, solutum.
Vide Spencer. Dissert. de Hirco Emissario. Bochart. de Animal. sacr. p. 1. l. ii. t. 55. Marshem sæculo I. & p. 204, 207.
Jonath. R. Saad. Gaon. Kimchi. R. Salomon. Abenezra, &c.
Epiphan. hæres. 34.
Julian. apud S. Cyril. l. ix. contra Julian.
Misna in Joma. Maimonid. Jom Haccipurim.

Azaziah

AZAZIAH, a Levite zealous for the law of the Lord. 2 Chr. xxxi. 13.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Azbuk

AZBUK, the Father of Nehemiah. He lived at Jerusalem in the time of Nehemiah. Nehem. iii. 16.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Azekah

AZEKAH, a City in the Tribe of Judah. Josh. xv 35. The Philistines, in whose Army was Goliath, were incamped at Shocoh and Azekah. 1 Sam. xvii. 1. Eusebius and S. Jerom say, that in their time there was still a City of this name in being between Jerusalem and Eleutheropolis.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Azel

AZEL, the Son of Elasah, of Kish's Family. 1 Chr. viii. 37.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Azem

AZEM or Ezem, a City in the Tribe of Simeon. Josh. xix. 3. the same perhaps as Esmona or Asmona.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Azima

AZIMA or Hazimah. See above Ashimah.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Azmaveth (I)

[Nehem. xii. 29. Nehem. vii. 28.] I. AZMAVETH, or Azmoth, or Bethazmoth, a City probably in the Tribe of Judah, adjacent to Jerusalem and Anathoth.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Azmaveth (II)

II. AZMAVETH, the Son of Beroni, one of the thirty gallant men belonging to David's Army. 2 Sam. xxiii. 31.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Azmaveth (III)

III. AZMAVETH, the Son of Adiel, 1 Chr. xi. 32. xxvii. 25.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Azmaveth (IV)

IV. AZMAVETH, the Son of Jehoadah, of the Tribe of Benjamin, and Saul's Family. 1 Chr. viii. 30.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Azmon

AZMON, or Asmon, or Asmona. See Assemon.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Aznoth-Tabor

AZNOTH-TABOR. Josh. xix. 34. or simply Azanoth, or Aznoth. Eusebius places it in the plain not far from Diocæsarea.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Azor

AZOR, the Son of Eliakim. His name is to be found in the Genealogy of Jesus Christ as Man. Matth. i. 13.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Azoth

[Josh. xv. 47.] AZOTH, or according to the Hebrew reading Ashdod[1], was assigned by Joshuah to the Tribe of Judah, but was possessed a long time by the Philistines. This was a maritime City, and had a Port upon the Mediterranean. It was situated between Askelon and Akron ; or between Jamnia and Askelon, as it is said in Judith iii. 2. in Græco ; or between Gaza and Jamnia, as Josephus says, Antiq. xiii. 23. All this may be easily reconciled by saying, that it lay between these Cities, but not immediately, nor in the same sense. See the Map. Azoth or Azotus was one of the five Governments belonging to the Philistines. Herodotus says[2], that Psammetichus chus King of Egypt, lay nine and twenty years before Azoth, and that of all the Cities we know of, none ever maintained so long a siege. The Text of the Maccabees informs us, that Judas Maccabæus was killed on Mount Azotus.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

אשרודAshdod. Gr. Ἄζωτος.
Herodot. lib. ii. c. 157.

Azriel of the Tribe of Manasseh (I)

I. AZRIEL of the Tribe of Manasseh, [1 Macc. ix. 18.] one of the brave Officers in David's service. 1 Chr. v. 24. He was made Intendant of the Tribe of Dan. 1 Chron. xxvii. 22.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Azriel (II)

II. AZRIEL, the Father of Seraiah. Jerem. xxxvi. 26.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Azriel (III)

III. AZRIEL, the Father of Jerimoth. 1 Chr. xxvii. 19.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Azrikam (I)

I. AZRIKAM, the Son of Neariah, David's relation. 1 Chr. iii. 23.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Azrikam (II)

II. AZRIKAM, the Son of Azel, Saul's relation. 1 Chr. viii. 38.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Azrikam (III)

III. AZRIKAM, of the Tribe of Ephraim, massacred by Zichri. 2 Chron. xxviii. 7.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Azrikam (IV)

IV. AZRIKAM, the Son of Hachabiah, a Levite. 1 Chr. ix. 14.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Azubah (I)

I. AZUBAH, the Wife of Caleb. 1 Chr. ii. 18.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Azubah (II)

II. AZUBAH, the Wife of Asa King of Judah, and Mother to King Jehoshaphat. 1 Kings xxii. 42.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Azur (I)

I. AZUR, Father to the false Prophet Hananiah. Jerem. xxviii. 1.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Azur (II)

II. AZUR, the Father of Jaazeniah, Prince of the people. Ezech. xi. 1.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Azura

AZURA was, as the Eastern people tell us, the Daughter of Adam[1].

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Joel in limine Chronograph.

Azymus

AZYMUS. This word comes from the Greek Azymos[1] which signifies unleavened. The Hebrews in one of their principal Festivals, which was the Passover, used unleavened Bread for seven days, and this custom they observed in memory of what [Deut. xvi. 8. Exod. xii. 8, &c.] their Ancestors did, who when they went out of Egypt were obliged to carry meal with them, and make bread in haste; the Egyptians so much pressing them to be gone, that they had no leisure to make up their Bread, and leaven their meal. They began to cleanse their houses of every thing [Exod. xii. 39.] leavened upon the 13th of the month Nisan, every place was carefully examined, lest any thing leavened should be left in corners and cupboards: so that on the 14th of Nisan about noon, there was to be none in the house. The Jews at this day very religiously observe this practice[2], and S. Paul in some places alludes to it, saying, a little leaven leaveneth the whole lump: that is to say, if there were ever so little [1 Cor. v. 6. and Galat. v. 9.] leaven in any quantity of Bread or Paste, during the time the Passover lasted, it was thereby corrupted, and for that season rendred unclean. It was to be thrown away and burnt. They were no more permitted to use it. He says elsewhere, [1 Cor. v. 7, 8.] that the Christian Passover consists, not in abstaining from leavened Bread, but in living with purity, sincerity, and innocency; [Matt. xvi. 11.] and our Saviour in the Gospel warns his Apostles to take care of the leaven of the Pharisees, Sadducees, and Herodians, meaning their doctrine.

The Practice of the Jews at this day with relation to the use of unleavened Bread, is this[3]. They are forbid to eat, or have in their houses, or any place belonging to them either leavened Bread or any thing else that is leavened. That they may the better observe this rule, they search into all the corners of their houses with the most scrupulous exactness for all Bread or Paste or any thing like them that is leavened. After they have thus well cleansed their houses, they whiten them, and furnish them with kitchen and table-utensils all new, and with others which are to be used only on that day. If they are moveables, which have served for something else, and are made of metal, they have them polished and put into the fire to take away all the impurity which they may have contracted by touching any thing leavened. All this is done on the thirteenth day of Nisan, on the Vigil of the Feast of the Passover, which begins with the 15th of the same month, on the 14th day in the evening; for the Hebrews reckon their day from one evening to another.

On the 14th of Nisan at eleven a clock, they burn the common Bread, to shew, that the prohibition of eating leavened Bread is then commenced; and this action is attended with words, whereby the Master of the house declares, that he has no longer any thing leavened in his keeping; that at least he believes so, and has done all he could, that it might be so. Immediately after this, they set about making unleavened Bread, and they make as much as they shall have occasion for during the whole Octave of the Passover. They take care that the meal, which they use has been neither heated nor moistened; and lest their Bread should rise, they put it speedily into the oven, and when they take it out, they keep it in a very clean place. Thus their Bread is made in flat, heavy Cakes, of different figures. They sometimes provide finer for their sick, or for their friends, ttho' they are Christians. They knead them together with milk, sugar and eggs: but always take particular care to have no leaven in them.

As to the question, whether Jesus Christ at his last Supper instituted the Eucharist with unleavened or leavened Bread, it depends chiefly upon knowing whether he observed the Passover like other Jews, or whether he anticipated it, or lastly whether he did more or not than barely sup with his Apostles. This is an enquiry which belongs not to this Dictionary. The Reader may consult those who have written expressly on this Subject, and our Dissertation upon the last Passover observed by our Lord, prefixed to our Comment on S. Matthew.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ἄζυμος. Azymus infermentatus. Heb. מצה Matza.

Translators' note. There are many cases of Conscience relating to this matter which are stud- ied by the Talmudists. Some of their principal decisions may be seen in the Mishnah, Ordo Festorum, T. 2. p. 138. Maimon. de Solemnit. Paschatis, c. 1. Fascic. 7. p. 839.

Leo of Mo- dena, his Ceremonies of the Jews. part 3. c. 3.

Azzan

AZZAN, the Father of Paltiel, Numb. xxxiv. 26.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

The Letter B

Baal

BAAL or Bel, the God of the Phœnicians or Canaanites. Baal and Astaroth are commonly joined together; and as it is believed that Astaroth denotes the Moon, we may with good reason say that Baal is put for the Sun. The name of Baal is used in a generical sense, for the great God of the Phœnicians, Chaldæans, Moabites, &c. Baal in Hebrew signifies Master, Lord, Husband. It is joined often with the name of some other false God; as Baal-peor, Baal-zebub or Beelzebub, Baal-gad, Baal-zephon, Baal-berith. Baal is the most ancient God of the [Jerem. xxxii. 35. xix. 5. 2 Kings xvii. 16. 2 Kings xxiii. 4, 5, 12. 1 Kings xviii. 22. 2 Kings x. 19. 1 Kings xiv. 24. xv. 12. and xii. 47. 2 Kings xxiii. 7. Hosea iv. 14.] Canaanites. The Hebrews too often imitated the Idolatry of the Canaanites, in adoring Baal. They offered human Sacrifices to him, they erected Altars for him in groves, upon high places, and upon the terrasses of houses. Baal had Priests and Prophets consecrated to his Service. All sorts of infamous and immodest actions were committed in the Festivals of Baal and Astarte.

Some learned Men have asserted, that the Baal of the Phœnicians was no other than Saturn; and there was indeed a great conformity between the human Sacrifices offered to Saturn, and what the Scriptures tell us of the Sacrifices of Baal. Others are of opinion, that Baal was the Phœnician or Tyrian Hercules, a God of great antiquity in Phœnicia. But we have endeavoured to shew in our Dissertation on the Phœnician Deities, that Baal was the Sun, and that upon this suppossition, all the marks we find in Scripture of this God may be easily explained.

This great Luminary was adored over all the East, and is the most ancient Deity, the worship whereof is acknowledged among the Heathens[1]. The Greeks paid divine honours to Men, and spread their false Religion among the Romans, and almost throughout the whole Earth, ; but the Eastern people adored the Stars and Elements. The very Egyptians, who were afterwards so lavish of their worship to men, animals, and things insensible, in the beginning had no other Deities but the Heavens, the Stars, and Elements. Their

lo. Religion, which to us appears, and in reality is, so monstrous and ridiculous, becomes so principally by their endeavouring to blend the Theology of the Greeks with theirs: and at last the Egyptians, Greeks and Latins, who were made ashamed of such an extravagant Religion, and of their vicious and mortal Gods, bethought themselves of returning to the simplicity of the Ancients, who worshipped the Air, Sun, Moon, Earth and Elements, and under these names meant nothing more than Nature the Mother of all things.

But it is impossible to excuse the absurdities of the Heathen Religion, whatever colours may be given it, or with what pretences soever it may be covered. The worship of a Star or Element is no more reasonable than that of any other Creature; and if the Heathens instead of making vicious and corrupt men and women the objects of their adorations, had chosen persons venerable for their innocency and virtue, they would have been condemned only for having worshipped the creature, and not reproached with having deified sin and lewdness.

They who held that the Stars were pure intelligences, or believed them to be animated and directed by Angels, were less inexcusable. Supposing this, they saw nothing in nature more perfect than the Sun, Stars and Planets: they were blameable only in that they did not rise from the Creature to the Creator, and did not pay to [Rom. i. 21. 2 Chron. xxxiii. 3, 5.] God the Honour which was due to him.

The Hebrews sometimes described the Sun by the name of Baal Shemesh, Baal the Sun. Manasseh adored Baal, planted groves, and worshipped all the Host of [2 Kings xxiii. 5, 11.] Heaven : and Josiah desirous to repair the evil wrought by Manasseh, put to death the idolatrous Priests that burnt incense unto Baal, to the Sun, and to the Moon, and to the Planets, and to all the Host of Heaven. He commanded all the vessels that were made for Baal, and for the Grove, and for all the Host of Heaven, to be brought forth out of the Temple. Lastly, he took away the horses that the Kings of y Plato in Craty*of Judah had given to the Sun, and burnt the chariots of the Sun with fire*. Here the Worship of the Sun is particularly described, and the Sun itself represented by the name of Baal.

The Temples and Altars of the Sun, or Baal, were generally upon eminences: As the Temple of the God of Israel was situated on a mountain. Manasseh placed in the two courts of it Altars to all the host of [2 Kings xxi. 5, 7.] Heaven, and in particular the Idol of Astarte or the Moon. Jeremiah threatens those of Judah who had sacrificed to Baal [Jerem. xxxii. 29. 2 Kings xxiii. 12.] upon the house-top. Josiah destroyed the Altars which Ahaz had erected on the terrass of his palace.

Human Victims were offered to Baal, as they were likewise to the Sun. Mithrah, who was the same as the Sun, was honoured with the like Sacrifices[2]. Apollo sometimes required Victims of the same nature[3]. Moloch the God of the Ammonites is celebrated throughout the Scripture, for the Children which were made to pass through the fire in honour of him. Jeremiah reproaches the Inhabitants of Judah and Jerusalem with building the high places of Baal to burn their Sons with fire for burnt-offerings unto Baal.

We shall not examine in this place whether these Victims were really burnt, or made to pass only through the fire. The Reader may consult if he please the Article Moloch, and our Dissertation concerning this false Deity.

The Scripture has a particular term for describing the Temples consecrated to the [Levit. xxvii. 30. Isai. xvii. 8. xxvii. 9. and 2 Chr. xxxiv. 4.] Sun or Baal: it calls them Chamanim[4]: these were places enclosed with walls wherein there was kept up a perpetual fire. They were very frequent in the East, particularly among the Persians; and the Greeks called them Pyreia, or Pyratheia, from a word derived from the Greek, Pyr, Fire, or Pyra, a Funeral-pile. There was, as Strabo says, an Altar in them, abundance of ashes, and a fire which was never suffered to go out[5]. Maundrel in his journey from Aleppo to Jerusalem observed likewise some footsteps of these enclosures in Syria. In most of them there were no Statues; in others there were some, but there was nothing uniform in the figure of them.

Several Criticks have thought, the Belus of the Chaldæans and Babylonians to be no other than Nimrod their first King: whereas others have taken him for Belus the Assyrian, Father of Ninus[6]; and others again for one of Semiramis's Sons[7]. Lastly, many have supposed Belus to be the same with Jupiter. But we adhere to what we have said, that Baal was worshipped for the Sun among the Phœnicians and Canaanites; and that he was often taken in general for the great God of the Eastern people. And as to the Chaldæans and Babylonians, it is very credible that Belus was one of their first Kings, but whether Ashur, or Nimrod, or Thuras, or Belus the Father of Ninus, or Belus the Son of Semiramis, no one knows.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Plato in Cratylo.
Vide Euseb. l. iv. præparat.
Dionys. Halicarnass. apud Euseb.
חמנים Chamanim.
Strabo. l. xv.
Vide Marsham. Can. Chronolog. Secul. i. Cedren. p. 16, &c.
Vide Syncell. p. 97.

Baal

BAAL. There were many Cities in Palestine joined with the name of Baal: whether the God Baal were adored in them, or whether these places were looked upon as the capital Cities of their respective Provinces.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Baalah

[Josh. xv. 9. 1 Chron. xiii. 6.] BAALAH, otherwise called Kirjath-jearim or Kirjath-Baal, or plain Baal, or Baalim of Judah, or Sede-jearim, and Campi Silvæ in Psalm cxxxiv. 6. are one and the same City, situated in the Tribe of Judah not far from Gibeah and Gibeon. The Ark was removed to Kirjath-jearim, when the Philistines sent it back from [1 Sam. vi. 21. Josh. xix. 32. and 1 Chr. iv. 28. Josh. xv. 29.] their Country. There it remained in the house of Amminadab, till David gave orders for the carrying it to Jerusalem.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Baalath (I)

I. BAALATH, in the Tribe of Simeon. It is that probably, which is mentioned in the enumeration of the Cities of Judah; and was yielded afterwards to the Tribe of Simeon. It is placed between Azem or Asemon, and Chasar-Sual; and so advanced very far towards Arabia Petræa.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Baalath (II)

II. BAALATH, a City in the Tribe of [Josh. xix. 44. and 1 Kings ix. 18. Josh. xix. 8. Judg. viii. 33. ix. 4.] Dan. Josephus speaks of Baleth not far from Gazara. Joseph. Antiq. l. viii. c. 2.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Baalath (III)

III. BAALATH, a City which was built by Solomon. 2 Chron. viii. 6.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Baalath-Beer

BAALATH-BEER, a City lying to the South of the Tribe of Simeon.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Baal-Berith

BAAL-BERITH, that is to say, Lord of the Covenant, the God of the Schechemites. After the death of Gideon, the Israelites forsook the Lord, and prostituted themselves to the Idolatry of Baal, and made Baal-Berith their God. There was a Temple at Schechem consecrated to Baal- Berith, where they laid up that Money, which they gave afterwards to Abimelech the Son of Gideon. Diodorus of Sicily[1] speaks of a Goddess of the Cretans, named Britomartis, which is probably the same as Baal-Berith. Britomartis comes from Marath-Berith, Mistress of the Covenant.

Philo Biblius[2] says, that Elion and Beruth, are two Phœnician Deities, who had a Son and a Daughter called Heaven and Earth. The beauty of these two Children was the reason of denominating from them the Heaven and Earth which we see. If we might depend at all upon the recital of this Author, there would be no occasion to seek elsewhere for the Original of Baal-Berith. But both Porphyry and Sanchoniathon are at present in so little credit with Men of Learning, that none will venture any more to quote them; at least there can be no relying upon their Testimony.

Bochart[3] is of opinion, that Berith might be very probably the same as Beroe the Daughter of Venus and Adonis, desired in marriage by Neptune, and given to Wife to Bacchus ^[4], that she gave her name to the City of Berith in Phœnicia, and became afterwards the Goddess of it. This is Bochart's conjecture; for there is no proof of the Goddess Berith's having been adored in this City.

The most simple and natural manner of explaining the name of Baal-Berith, is to take it in general, for the God who presides over Alliances and Oaths. In this sense the true God may be termed the God of the Covenant; and if the Scripture had not added the name of Baal to that of Berith, it might be understood of the true God. But the most barbarous nations, as well as the most superstitious, the most religious and the most knowing, have always taken God to witness their Oaths and Covenants. The Greeks had their Jupiter the witness and arbitrator of Oaths, Zeus Horkios, and the Latins their Deus Fidius or Jupiter Pistius, him they looked upon as the God of Honesty and Plaindealing, who presided at all treaties and alliances: they swore sometimes even by Jupiter the Stone, per Jovem lapidem, because the Victim appointed for the ratification of the alliance, was struck with a Stone, or because Jupiter was besought to throw him headlong down some precipice, who should fail in the performance of his promise, in like manner as the Stone which the High-Priest held in his hands was cast from the top of the Capitol.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Diod. l. v. p. 236.
Phil. Bibl. apud. Euseb. Præpar. l. i.
Bochart. Chanaan. l. ii. c. 17.
Nonnus Dionys. Art. 41, 42.

Baal-Gad

[Josh xi. 17. xii. 7.] BAAL-GAD, a City situated at the foot of mount Hermon, which lies to the South of Libanus and Damascus, and to the North of mount Libanus. It seems to be said in Joshua, that mount Hermon is on this side Jordan; but we know very certainly from other passages, that mount Hermon, and consequently Baal-Gad, was beyond Jordan, Josh. xii. 1, and 5. Gad was a false God, and probably represented [Genef. xxx. 11.] the Sun or Good Fortune. Baal-Gad derived its name from this Deity, which was there adored.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Baal-Hanan

BAAL-HANAN, the Son of Achbor, succeeded Shaül in the Kingdom of Edom, and was the seventh King of it.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Baal-Hazor

BAAL-HAZOR, a City in the Tribe of Ephraim, where Absalom kept his flocks. 2 Sam. xiii. 23.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Baal Hermon

BAAL HERMON, is generally placed Northward of the Tribe of Issachar, and the great Plain. See 1 Chr. v. 23.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Baalim of Judah (I)

I. BAALIM of Judah. This is Baalah or Kirjath-jearim. See above.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Baalim (II)

II. BAALIM. This is the plural number of Baal, and signifies false Gods in general.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Baalis

BAALIS, King of the Ammonites, who sent Ishmael the Son of Nethaniah to kill Gedaliah, who had been set over the Remnant of the Jews, who were not sent captives to Babylon.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Baal-Meon

BAAL-MEON, a City in the Tribe of Reuben. Numb. xxxii. 38. 1 Chron. v. 8.

It is sometimes called Beth-Baal-Meon. The Moabites took it from the Reubenites, and they were masters of it in the time of Ezekiel. Eusebius and S. Jerom place Beel -Meon or Beel-Maus nine miles from Esbus or Esebon, at the foot of mount Baaru or mount Abarim.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Baal-Peor

BAAL-PEOR, or the God Peor. We have produced several conjectures concerning this false God, in a Dissertation wrote particularly for this purpose, and inserted before the Book of Numbers, p. 20. Herein we have endeavoured to demonstrate, that Adonis or Orus adored by the Egyptians, and the generality of the Eastern people, and this God, are the same. The Scripture tells us, that when the Israelites were incamped in the wilderness of Sin, they were prevailed with to worship Baal-Peor[1], that they partook of his Sacrifices, and committed whoredom with the Daughters of Moab; and the Psalmist relating the same event, says, that the Hebrews were initiated into the Mysteries of Baal-Peor, and ate the Offerings of the dead. Peor is the same as Or or Orus, if we cut off the article Pe, which is of no signification. Orus is the same as Adonis or Osiris. The Feasts of Adonis were celebrated after the manner of Funerals; and the people who observed them, at that time committed a thousand dissolute actions, particularly when they were told that Adonis, whom they had mourned for as dead, was alive.

Origen[2] believed Peor, or Baal-Peor, the God of the Moabites, to be the same with Priapus, or the Idol of Turpitude which was adored principally by the Women, and that Moses fearing to pollute the ears of the Hebrews, did not think proper proper to distinguish in a clearer manner what kind of Turpitude he meant. S. Jerom[3] says, that this Idol was represented in an obscene manner, as it was the custom to describe Priapus. It is his opinion, that effeminate men and women, who prostituted themselves in honour of Idols, whereof there is such frequent mention in the Scripture, were consecrated to Baal- Peor or Priapus. He seems to think, that this infamous Deity had that in its mouth, with which the Figures of Priapus are usually represented[4].

Maimonides asserts, that Baal-Peor was adored by discovering that before him, which modesty obliges people to conceal with greatest care; and Solomon Jarchi, that Excrements were offered to him. There is no question to be made of Baal- Peor's being the God of Impurity: we know with what impudence the Daughters of Moab engaged the Israelites in lasciviousness; [Numb. xxv.] and the Prophet Hosea speaking of this crime, says, They went unto Baal-Peor, and separated themselves unto that shame, and their abominations were according as they loved. Hosea ix. 10.

Others[5] have asserted, that Baal-Peor was Saturn, a Deity adored in Arabia. The adventure related of this Deity, and his castration by his own Son, may have made way for the obscenities practised in the worship of Baal-Peor, whereof we have taken notice. Further, there may be some marks of resemblance discovered between Saturn and Lot, the Father of the Moabites, who were worshippers of Baal- Peor.

Some have believed, that in Baal-Peor they discovered the God worshipped by the Heathens, under the name of Crepitus º; the word Peor is derived from a Root, which signifies to be loose. Others were of opinion, that the Moabites adored their God under the name of Baal-Reem, the God of Thunder, but that the Hebrews in derision called him Baal-Peor, the God Fart. Vossius[6] thinks the Moabites worshipped the Sun and Priapus under the name of Baal-Peor. Selden[7] will have it, that Baal-Peor is the God Pluto. He founds his conjecture upon what is said in the Psalms: They joined themselves unto Baal-Peor, and ate the offerings of the Dead. The Sacrifices here intimated are those, says Selden, which were offered to appease the manes of the Dead. Apollinarius in his Paraphrase upon this Psalm says, that the Hebrews polluted themselves in the Sacrifices of Baal-Peor, by eating hecatombs offered to the Dead. Some affirm[8], that Saturn ranked his Son Moth, whom he had by Rhea among the Gods, and that he was adored by the Phœnicians sometimes under the name of Death, and sometimes by that of Pluto.

But these several opinions seem all to be less probable than that which we have proposed and supported in our Dissertation on Baal-Peor; viz. that this false Deity was no other than Adonis, or Osiris. To what we have said elsewhere on this matter it may be added, that Adonis, as some believe, was the Father of Priapus; that funeral entertainments were made in honour of him, which may be very well understood [Baruch vi. 32.] by the name of Sacrifices: The Priests roar and cry before their Gods as men do at the Feast when one is dead, in cœna mortui. The Psalmist expresses himself in the plural number: Comederunt sacrificia mortuorum; for the Sacrifices of Baal-Peor were not like those of other Deities: they were repasts like those in use at the funerals of dead persons, with this difference, that the latter were often accompanied with real and sincere sorrow; whereas on the contrary in those of Adonis, the tears were all feigned, and the debauchery then indulged real. The Reader may see our Dissertation, and, if he pleases, Selden, De Diis Syris, and the Commentators upon Numb. xxv.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Translators' note. It is the opinion of an ingenious Author, that Baal-Peor was the Sun, the same with Moloch of the Ammonites, and Chemosh of the Moabites; and that he was denominated Baal-Peor from the particular place of his Worship, as Jupiter Capitolinus.

Origen. in Num. c. xxv. Homil. 20. Beelphegor, quod est, Idolum turpitudinis.

Hieronym. in Osee iv. Colentibus maxime fœminis Beelphegor, ob obscœni magnitudinem, quem nos Priapum possumus appellare.

Idem in Osee ix. Denique interpretantur Beelphegor idolum tentiginis, habens in ore, id est, summitate pellem, ut turpitudinem membri virilis ostenderet.

Theodoret in Ps. cv. Apollinar. Caten. in Ps. Suidas, Masius, in Josue. Hottinger. Hist. Orient. c 7, &c. º Minutius in Octaviano. Nec Serapidem magis Ægyptii quam strepitus per pudenda corporis expressos contremiscunt. Origen. contra Celsum, p 255. Hieronym. in Isai. xiii. Ut taceam de formidoloso, & horribili cœpe, & crepitu ventris inflati, quæ Pelusica Religio est.

Gerard. & Voss. de Origine & Progressu Idolatr. l. ii. c. 7.

Selden. de Diis Syris Syntagm. 1. c. 5.

Sanchon. apud Euseb. Præpar. l. i. c. 8.

Baal-Perazim

BAAL-PERAZIM, the place wherein [2 Sam. v. 20.] David put to flight the Philistines. It could not be very far from Jerusalem, since it lay in the Valley of Rephaim.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Baal-Shalisha

[2 Kings iv. 42.] BAAL-SHALISHA. S. Jerom and Eusebius place it at fifteen miles distance from Diospolis Northward.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Baal-Tamar

BAAL-TAMAR. The place, where the Children of Israel ingaged those of the [Judg. xx. 33.] Tribe of Benjamin. Eusebius says Baal- Tamar was near Gibeah.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Baaltis

BAALTIS, the same as Astarte or the Moon, next to Baal, the God most honoured by the Phœnicians.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Baal-Zephon

[בעל צפון] BAAL-ZEPHON. The Hebrews having left Egypt, after three days march came to Baal-Zephon, where they passed [Exod. xix. 2, 9.] through the Sea: Baal-Zephon therefore was near Clysma or Colsum; for there the Ancients tell us, that the Hebrews passed the Red Sea. See our Dissertation on their passage, prefixed to the Book of Exodus, p. xl. and the Supplement, p. 54. It is thought [Ezek. viii. 14.] thought that Sephon or Zephon was an Egyptian Deity, from whom the City of Baal-Zephon took its name; but what he was we do not exactly know. Zephon in Hebrew signifies the North, or the Concealed. Adonis with respect to the Egyptians was the God of the North; for he was killed in mount Libanus, and was principally adored at Biblos in Phœnicia. He was likewise the concealed God; and the Egyptians call'd him Tammuz[1], which signifies hidden; because of the celebration of his mysteries. He was kept shut up like one dead in a coffin, and afterwards, as it is pretended, revived; or because he is said to have passed six months on Earth with Venus, and six in Hell with Proserpine[2]. The Rabbins say, Baal- Zephon was an idol or figure covered with Stars, placed here by Pharaoh in order to stop the Hebrews, and hinder them from going out of his Country.

Some describe him in the shape of a Dog, as the Egyptians their God Anubis with a Dog's Head; perhaps that he might have a vigilant eye over this place, and give notice by his barking of the Enemies arrival, and that he might guard the coast of the Red Sea on that side[3]. It is said he was placed there principally to stop all slaves that fled from their masters. The Jerusalem Targum assures us, that all the Statues of the Egyptian Gods having been destroyed by the exterminating Angel, Baal-Zephon was the only one that made resistance. Whereupon the Egyptians conceived a great idea of his power, and redoubled their devotion to him. Moses observing that the people flocked in crowds thither, petitioned Pharaoh that he too might make a journey thither with the Israelites. Pharaoh permitted them to go; but as they were employed upon the shore of the Red Sea in gathering up the precious stones which the river Phison had carried into the*Gihon*, and from thence were conveyed into the Red Sea, whereby they had been thrown upon the dry land, Pharaoh surprized them like people destitute of counsel and out of their senses; he offered his Sacrifices to Baal-Zephon, waiting till the next day to attack the Israelites, whom he believed his God had delivered into his hands. But in the mean time they passed the Red Sea, and escaped from him, and his pretended God Baal-Zephon was not capable of rescuing him from death. These are Rabbinical Fables that deserve no credit.

M. Basnage[4] is of opinion, that Baal- Zephon signifies the Sun; Zephon in Hebrew signifies one who contemplates, as much as to say the observing Deity, the Sun, the great Eye of nature, which knows, sees, and enlightens all things. The Poet Ezekiel cited in Eusebius[5], believes Baal-Zephon to have been a City, and the construction in the Text Moses, is very favourable to this opinion. See hereafter Colsum.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Vide Hieronym. in eum locum.
Vide Theocriti Scholiasten.
Basnage Antiquit. des Juifs. t. ii. p. 669, 670.
Loco citato, p. 671.
Ezechiel Poeta apud Euseb. demonstr. l. ix. c. 29. p. 444.

Baana

[1 Kings iv. 12. 2 Sam. iv. 2. & seq.] BAANA, the Son of Abilud, Governour of Taanach, Megiddo, and Bethshean.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Baanah

BAANAH and Rechab, Officers belonging to Ishbosheth the Son of Saul, who having secretly entred this Prince's house, while he was sleeping at noon day, cut off his head, and carried it to David; who instead of rewarding them for so base an action, gave orders for the cutting off their hands and feet, and hanging them over the pool of Hebron.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Baara

BAARA, the Wife of Shaaraïm, who was divorced by him. 1 Chr. viii. 8.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Baaras

BAARAS, or Baaris, or Baru. Eusebius[1] and S. Jerom make mention of a place called Baru or Baris near Cariatha. Now Cariatha according to their account, is ten miles West of Medaba. And elsewhere[2] they tell us, that *Beelma*üs, or Beelmeon, is two miles from Esbus near Baaru. Lastly, Josephus[3] says, that to the North of Machærus there is a Valley called Baaras, where a wonderful Root of the same name was found, which was of the colour of fire, and towards the evening cast forth rays like those of the Sun. He relates many particulars concerning this Plant, which seem very extraordinary, and which many look upon as fabulous. Nevertheless F. Eugenius Rogers speaks of them, as one who was an Eye-witness of them, and fully convinced of what Josephus says.

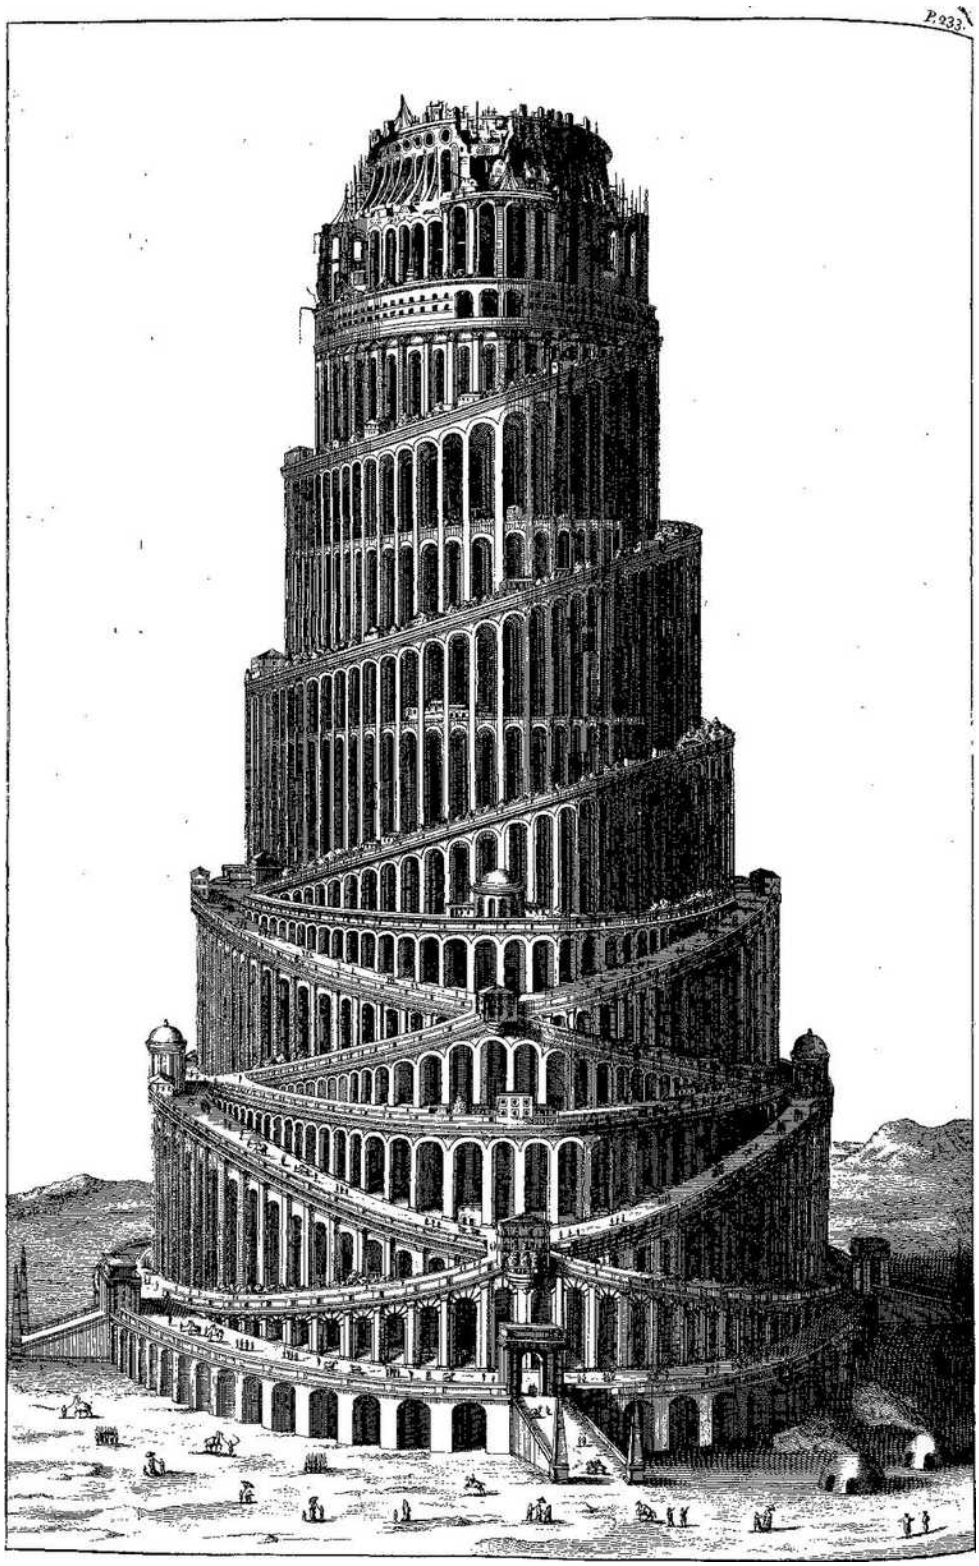
Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Euseb. in Kariathaim. Hieronym. ibidem.
Idem in Beelmeon.
Joseph. de Bello, l. vii. c. 25.



Baaseiah

BAASEIAH, the Son of Malchiah, a Levite. 1 Chr. vi. 40.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Baasha

BAASHA, the Son of Abijah, Commander in chief of the Armies belonging to Nadab, the Son of Jeroboam King of Israel [In the Year of the World 3051, before J. C. 994, before the vulgar Æra 953. 1 Kings xxv. 1. & seq.] . He killed his master treacherously at the Siege of Gibbethon, a City of the Philistines, and usurped the Kingdom which he possessed for four and twenty years. He rooted out the whole race of Jeroboam, as God had commanded him; but by his bad conduct and idolatry, he incurr'd God's indignation. Wherefore the Lord sent the Prophet Jehu, the Son of Hanani to him, to tell him, that he had exalted him out of the dust, and made him Prince over his people Israel, after which he had walked in the way of Jeroboam, and made his people Israel to sin. That therefore he would take away the posterity of Baasha, and the posterity of his house house, and would make his house like the house of Jeroboam the Son of Nebat; that him, who died of Baasha, should the dogs eat, and him that died of his in the fields, should the fowls of the air eat. Baasha, instead of making good use of these admonitions, and becoming seriously converted, was transported with rage against the Prophet, and killed him. Baasha died, and was buried at [In the Year of the World 3074, before J. C. 926, before the vulgar Æra 930.] Tirzah, which was then the Capital of the Kingdom of the ten Tribes. Elah his Son reigned in his stead. We read a circumstance of Baasha's reign in the Chronicles, which is not to be met with in the Books of Kings; and this is the attempt which Baasha made, [1 Kings xvi. 7, 8. 2 Chron. xvi. 1. & seq.] to fortify Ramah against Asa King of Judah, who, in order to disengage him from this undertaking, prevailed with Benhadad King of Damascus to make an irruption upon the lands belonging to Baasha; which succeeded according to his expectation.

ELEVATION OF THE TOWER OF BABEL

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Babas

BABAS, of the Asmonæan Family. Herod put to death the Sons of Babas, who opposed his entrance into Jerusalem, in the time of Antigonus[1].

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Joseph. Antiq. l. xv. c. 11. p. 532.

Babel

BABEL, or Babylon. This term signifies Confusion; and the City and Province of Babylon were called by this name; because when the tower of Babel was building, God confounded the languages of those men, who were employed about this edifice, so that they could no longer understand one another. Several conjectures have been [Gen. xi. 7.] started concerning the manner of producing this confusion of languages at Babel, which have no relation to our subject. The Reader may consult the Commentators, what M. Simon has written on this matter, in his critical History of the Old Testament, l. i. c. 14, & 15. and what is said by the Author of Les Sentimens de quelques Theologiens de Hollande, Lettre 19. The construction of the Tower of Babel, and the confusion of Languages are fixed to about the year of the World 1775, an hundred and twenty years after the Deluge.

It is thought[1] that Nimrod the Son of Cush was the principal Author of this attempt to build the Tower of Babel. He designed, says Josephus, to raise a Tower so high, as might secure him from a new deluge, and put him in a condition to revenge the death of his Ancestors, caused by a general inundation over the World. It is scarce possible to think, that he could [Gen. xi. 4.] conceive so foolish an imagination. The Scripture says no more, than that the undertakers coming from the East into the land of Shinar, said to one another, *Let us make a City and a Tower, the top whereof may reach to Heaven, and let us make our names celebrated before we are dispers*ed over all the earth. Now God observing that they had begun this work, and were resolved not to quit it, till they had finished it, descended from Heaven, and confounded their language; so that they were compell'd to scatter themselves throughout the Earth, and abandon their undertaking.

We do not know how high this Tower had been raised, and all that we find in Authors concerning it deserves no credit. Many have thought, that the Tower of Belus mentioned by Herodotus[2], and which was still in his time to be seen in Babylon, was the Tower of Babel; or at least was built upon the old foundations. This last opinion seems the more probable, by reason that this Tower was compleated, and raised to its full height. It was composed, says Herodotus, of eight Towers placed one upon another, decreasing gradually in their size from the first to the last. Above the eighth was the Temple of Belus. This Author does not tell us what the height was of the whole edifice; but only that the first of the eight Towers, which served as a basis to the other seven, was a furlong, or an hundred and fifty paces high, and wide, or square; for his text is not very clear[3]. Some Writers are of opinion, that this was the height of the whole edifice; and in this sense Strabo understood him[4]. Others maintain, that each of the eight Towers was a furlong in height, and that the whole fabrick was eight furlongs, or a thousand paces high; which seems impossible. Nevertheless S. Jerom[5] says, upon the report of others, that it was four thousand paces in height; and others affirm that it was still higher.

Belus King of Babylon, by whose directions the building of the Tower, which Herodotus speaks of, is said to have been undertaken, lived long after Moses, whether by Belus we suppose the Father of Ninus to be meant, or Belus the Son of Semiramis. Belus, the Father of Ninus is set down by Usher under the judicature of Shamgar, about the year of the world 2682, of the Julian Period 3392, long after Moses.

Modern Travellers vary in the description they give us of the remains of the Tower of Babel. Fabricius says, it might have been about a mile in circumference. Guion says the same. Benjamin, who is much more ancient, informs us, that the foundations were two thousand paces in length. The Sieur de la Boulaye le Gouz, a Gentleman of Anjou, who says he made a long stay at Babylon or Bagdat, declares, that about three leagues from this City, there is a Tower called Megara, situated between the Tigris and Euphrates in an open field. This Tower is all solid within, and is more like a Mountain than a [Genef. x. 10.] Tower. The compass of it is about five hundred paces; and as the rains and winds have very much ruined it, it cannot be more than about an hundred and thirty eight foot high. It is built of bricks four inches thick; and between every seven courses of bricks, there is a course of straw three inches thick mixed with pitch or bi-tumen; from the top to the bottom there are reckoned about fifty courses. The Reader may see, if he pleases, what we have said in our Comment upon Genesis, Ch. x. v. 4. It is highly probable, that all which is related of this Tower, except what we find concerning it in Scripture, is fabu-lous; and that the remains of some Towers, which are shewn in Babylonia, are far from being those of the Tower of Babel, but are only ruins of old Babylon, built by Nebuchadnezzar.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Antiq. l. i. c. 5.
Herodot. l. i. c. 381. Nov. Edit.
Στάδιυ καὶ τὸ μῆκος, καὶ τὸ εὖρος.
Strabo. l. xvi. initio.
Hieronym. in Isai. lib. v. p. 114.

Babylon (I)

I. BABYLON. The City of Babylon, the Capital of Chaldæa, was built by Nimrod in the place where the Tower of Babel was begun. It was the Capital of Nimrod's Empire; so that its Antiquity is not to be questioned. Profane Authors[1], who know nothing of the History of the Jews, make the Son of Belus to be the Founder of it, who lived two thousand years before Semiramis. Others ascribe the Foundation of it to Belus[2] the Assyrian, Father of Ninus; others to Semiramis. Marsham[3] postpones the beginning of it to the time of Nabonassar. But the opinion most generally followed, and best grounded, is this, that Nimrod founded it, Belus inlarged it, and that Semiramis added so many great works, and adorned it so many several ways, that she might be called not improperly the Foundress of it; at least with as much reason as Constantin is said to be the Founder of Constantinople.

The Scripture speaks of Babylon in very many places, particularly after the reign of Hezekiah, who upon his recovery from his indisposition was visited by the Ambassadors of Berodach-baladan King of [2 Kings xx. 12.] Babylon. Isaiah, who lived at the same time, speaks often of the calamities which the Babylonians should bring upon Palestine, of the captivity of the Hebrews, of their return from Babylon, of the fall of this great City, and the taking it by the Persians and Medes. The Prophets, who lived after Isaiah's time, as Jeremiah, Ezekiel, and Daniel, who were living in the reign of Nebuchadnezzar, and saw the extreme misfortunes of Jerusalem, and the desolation of the Kingdom of Judah, are still more taken up with the grandeur of Babylon, and its cruelty, and the evils with which God at last would overwhelm it.

[Dan. iv. 30.] The sacred Authors speak of it as one of the greatest and most powerful Cities in the world. Is not this great Babylon that I have built for the house of the King-dom, by the might of my Power, and for the honour of my Majesty? said Nebuchadnezzar. Berosus and Abydenus 1 ascribe to this Prince the Walls of Babylon, and those prodigious Gardens, raised upon arches, which some attribute to Semiramis. Historians are not agreed concerning the extent and height of the Walls of Babylon. Clitarchus, who is cited by Diodorus of Sicily, says, the circuit of the Walls was three hundred and sixty eight furlongs; Quintus Curtius, sixty thousand paces; Herodotus, three hundred and fourscore furlongs; Ctesias in Diodorus Siculus, three hundred and sixty furlongs[4]; Strabo, three hundred fourscore and five; Quintus Curtius and Strabo make them to be sixty five foot high, and thirty two wide; Pliny and Solinus, two hundred foot high and fifty broad. Quintus Curtius says that these Walls were built in a year; that the workmen finished a furlong in a day, that is to say, an hundred and five and twenty paces. But Berosus and Abydenus inform us, that this whole wonderful work was compleated in fifteen days.

Altho' the Babylonish Monarchy is perhaps the most ancient in the world, supposing as we have said, that Nimrod began his reign at Babylon; nevertheless we do not see either in Scripture, or in profane Writers, that this Empire was of any great consequence in the world. In Abraham's time we observe, that there [Gen. xiv. 1, 2, &c.] was a King of Shinar. Babylon was in the land of Shinar; but it may be made a question, whether the King of Shinar was King of Babylon; and supposing he was, the figure which he made in Chedor-laomar's Army, where he was only as an auxiliary, does not give us any great idea of him.

Julius Africanus says, that *Evecho*üs, who is probably the same as Jupiter Belus, began to reign over the Chaldæans two hundred and twenty four years before the Arabians, that is to say, in the year 2952 of the Julian Period, of the World 2242, in the time of the Patriarch Isaac, 1762 before our vulgar Æra. The Arabians having declared war against Chinizitus King of Babylon, deprived him of his Crown, and Mardocentius reigned there in his stead, in the year of the Julian Period 3176, of the world 2466, before the vulgar Æra 1538, and before Belus the Assyrian two hundred and sixteen years, about the fortieth year of Moses.

Belus[5]

Belus the Assyrian began to reign in Babylon in the year of the Julian Period 3392, of the World 2682, before the vulgar Æra 1322, in the time of Shamgar Judge of Israel. Belus was succeeded by Ninus, Semiramis, Ninyas, and others whose names we find in the common catalogues. Of all these Princes there is no notice taken in Scripture, at least under the title of [In the year of the Julian Period 3447, of the World 2737, before the vulgar Æra 1267.] Kings of Babylon. Ninus, according to Herodotus, founded the Assyrian Empire[6]; and this Empire subsisted in upper Asia for five hundred and twenty years. During this interval the City and Province of Babylon were under a Governour appointed by the King of Assyria. Of all the great number of Assyrian Monarchs, who reigned at Nineveh, the Scripture speaks only of Pul, who was probably the Father of Sardanapalus the last of the Assyrian Kings, who were the Successors of Ninus.

Under the reign of this last, in the year of the Julian Period 3966, of the World 3257, Arbaces Governour of the Medes, and Belesus, or Baladan[7], or Nabonassar Governour of Babylon, having revolted against Sardanapalus, besieged him in Nineveh, and there obliged him to burn himself, with all that was most dear and valuable to him; after which they divided the Monarchy between them. Arbaces set the Medes at liberty, and Belesus founded the Kingdom of Babylon. Young Ninus, called [2 Kings xv. 29. xvi. 7, 10. and 1 Chr. x. 6. and 2 Chron. xxviii. 20.] in Scripture Tiglath-pileser, reigned at Nineveh, and continued the Succession of the Assyrian Kings, but the extent of the Kingdom was very much lessened. He was succeeded by Salmaneser, Sennacherib, and Esar-haddon, whose names are celebrated upon too many sad occasions, in the sacred Writings, for the calamities which they brought upon the Hebrews.

Belesus or Baladan was Father or Grandfather to Berodach-Baladan, who sent to visit Hezekiah after the miracle of [2 Kings xx. 12.] the Sun's retrogradation; which happened at the time of his cure. The names and actions of his Successors weare not inform'd of; but we know that Esar-haddon King of Assyria conquered the Kingdom of Babylon[8], and that he and his Successors Saosduchinus and Chynaladanus, otherwise called Seracus, possessed it, till Nabopolassar Governour of Babylon, and Astyages the Son of Cyaxares King of Media, took arms against Chynoladanus[9], killed him, divided his dominions, and intirely destroyed the Assyrian Empire, in the year of the World 3378, of the Julian Period 4088, before the vulgar Æra 626.

[Dan. v. 31. xiii. 35.] Nabopolassar was Father to the Great Nebuchadnezzar, the destroyer of Jerusalem, and the most magnificent King of Babylon, that we know of. We have observed, that by some Authors those great works are said to be his, the honour whereof by others is given to Semiramis. Evilmerodach succeeded Nebuchadnezzar, and Belshazzar Evilmerodach[10]: But Daniel says expressly, that Darius the Mede succeeded Belshazzar, and Cyrus [We fix the death of Belshazzar to the year of the World 3448, and the first year of Cyrus's reign at Babylon, to the year of the world 3457.] Darius the Mede, otherwise called Astyages.

The Successors of Cyrus are very well known; Cambyses, the seven Magi, Darius the Son of Hystaspes, Xerxes, Artaxerxes Longimanus, Xerxes II. Secundianus, or Sogdianus, Ochus, or Darius Nothus, Artaxerxes Mnemon, Ochus, Arses, Darius Codomannus, who was overcome by Alexander the Great, in the year of the Julian Period 4383, of the World 3673, before the vulgar Æra 331.

The Greek Fathers[11], adhering to the Text of the Septuagint in Isai. x. 9. were of opinion, that the Tower of Babel was built at Chalane; they read it thus[12], Have I not taken the country which is above Babylon and Chalane, where the Tower was built? whereas the import of the Hebrew is Calenne, or Calno, is it not as Carchemish? is not Hamath as Arpad? is not Samaria as Damascus? have I not reduced all these Cities under my obedience? So that no advantage can be taken from this passage in the Septuagint, towards fixing the place where the Tower of Babel was erected: it is scarce questionable but that it either was within or very near old Babylon.

The Persians[13] attribute the Foundation of Babylon and Nineveh to Thahamurath, one of their most ancient Monarchs: This Prince allowed his subjects an intire liberty of Conscience, so that under his reign idolatry spread itself in several branches, and got footing over all the East; which some understand of the time preceding the Deluge, answerable to what Moses says, that in the life of Enos, men began to profane the name of God, by giving it to idols[14]. In effect, the Eastern people will many of them have it, that Mahalaleel the Son of Canaan founded this City before the deluge; but the generality maintain, that Nimrod was the principal Author of erecting the Tower of Babel: and give this turn to the thing after their particular manner, which has always something miraculous in it[15]. Nimrod, say they, having observed that Abraham came unhurt out of the fire, into which he had been cast by his orders, told his Courtiers, that he had a great mind to climb up to Heaven, in order to behold there the mighty God whom Abraham preached to them. They remonstrated in vain, that this undertaking was impossible; for notwithstanding, he commanded a Tower to be built as high as they could carry it. They had been employed three years about it, when Nimrod, ascending to the top of this edifice, was surprized to see, that Heaven still appeared at as great a distance from them as before. His surprize was still farther encreased, when news was brought him the next day, that his Tower was fallen.

He commanded another to be built higher and more solid than the first; but the same fate attended it as that which had been before raised. At last he resolved he would be carried up to Heaven by four monstrous Birds, called Kerkez. These Birds for some time flew about with him in the air, and at length threw him upon the earth against a mountain which was shaken with his fall. Strange Fables!

A German Traveller, whose name was Renwolf, passed through the place in 1574, where formerly old Babylon stood; he speaks of the ruins of this famous City as follows[16]. " The Village of Elugo now " lyes where heretofore Babylon of Chal- " dæa was situated. The harbour is a " quarter of a league's distance from it; " people go ashore in order to proceed „ by land to the celebrated City of Bag- " dad, which is a day and a half's journey from thence Eastward on the Tigris. " The Soil is so dry and barren, that they " cannot till it, and so naked, that I " could never have believed, that this " powerful City, once the most stately " and renowned in all the world, and situated in the fruitful country of Shinar, “ could have ever stood there, if I had not “ discerned by the situation, and many “ antiquities of great beauty, tho' intirely “ neglected, which are to be seen round “ about, that it certainly had been there; “ and first by the old Bridge over the Eu- “ phrates, whereof some piles and arches “ of brick are still remaining, so strong “ that they are a great wonder. . . The “ whole front of the village Elugo is the “ hill upon which the Castle stood, and “ the ruins of its fortifications are still visible, tho' demolished and uninhabited. “ Behind, and some little way beyond, “ was the Tower of Babylon.... It is “ still to be seen, and is half a league in “ diameter; but so ruinous, so low, and “ so full of venomous creatures, which “ lodge in holes made by them in the rubbish, that no one durst approach nearer “ to it than within half a league, except “ during two months in the Winter, when “ these animals never stir out of their “ holes. There is one sort particularly, “ which the inhabitants in the language of “ the country, which is Persian, call Eg- “ lo, the poison whereof is very searching: they are larger than our lizards.

The Reader may compare Isaiah's description, of the condition to which Babylon was reduced after its fall, with what is [Isai. xiii. 19, 22.] said by this Traveller. And Babylon the glory of the Kingdoms, the beauty of the Chaldees excellency shall be as when God overthrew Sodom and Gomorrah; it shall not be inhabited, neither shall the Arabian pitch tent there, neither shall the shepherds make their fold there. But wild beasts of the desart shall lye there, and their house shall be full of doleful creatures, and the owls shall dwell there, and satyrs shall dance there. And the wild beasts of the island shall cry in their desolate houses, and dragons in their pleasant palaces.

The following is an account of Babylon in its greatest splendor, whether it were the work of Semiramis or of Nebuchadnezzar; for the ancients are not agreed among themselves as to this article: we shall borrow this description principally from Herodotus[17], who had been upon the spot, and is the oldest Author, that has treated of this matter. The City was square an hundred and twenty furlongs every way, that is to say, fifteen miles or five leagues square, and the whole circuit of it 480 furlongs or twenty leagues. The walls of it were built with large bricks cemented with bitumen, a thick glutinous liquor, which issues out of the earth in the country hereabouts; it binds stronger than mortar; and becomes harder than the brick itself for which it is made use of as a cement. These walls were 87 feet thick, 350 high, and 480 furlongs in circumference. They who allow them to have been no more than fifty cubits high, speak of them according to the condition they were in after Darius the Son of Hystaspes, who commanded the walls to be demolished to the height we are mentioning, as a punishment for the rebellion of the Babylonians.

The City was encompassed with a vast ditch filled with water, and brick-work carried up on both sides. The earth which was dug out was imployed in making the bricks wherewith the walls of the City were built, so that one may judge of the depth and largeness of the ditch by the extream height and thickness of the walls. There were an hundred gates belonging to the City, five and twenty on each of the four sides. All these gates with the posts and upper parts of them were of massy brass. Between every two of these gates at particular distances were three Towers, and three between each angle of this great square; the Towers were raised ten feet higher than the walls, which is to be understood of those places only where they were necessary; for the City being encompassed in several places with marshes which were always full of water, and defended the approach to it[18], there was no need of Towers on these sides; so that their number did not consist of above two hundred and fifty, whereas if they had been carried on throughout, there must have been many more of them.

A PLAN OF THE CITY OF BABYLON ACCORDING TO HERODOTUS AND F. KIRCHER.

There was a Street answering to every gate, so that there were fifty Streets in all, which led from one gate to another, cut one another at right angles, and were each fifteen miles or five good leagues in length, and 151 feet wide. There were four other Streets which were adorned with houses only on one side, having the ramparts on the other. They made the whole compass of the City along the walls, and were each two hundred feet wide. As the Streets of Babylon went cross one another, they formed six hundred seventy six squares, each whereof had four furlongs and an half on every side, which made two miles and a quarter in circuit. These squares were surrounded without by houses three or four stories high[19], the front whereof was adorned with all sorts of embellishments; the inner space was taken up with courts and gardens.

The Euphrates cut the City into two equal parts from North to South. A Bridge of admirable structure of about a furlong or 125 paces in length, and thirty wide, continued a communication from one part of the City to the other; at the two extremities of the Bridge were two palaces, the old on the East side of the river, and the new on the opposite Western side[20]. The first contained four of the squares we have been just speaking of, the other took up nine. Diodorus makes the first to be thirty furlongs in circumference, and the second sixty. The Temple of Belus which was near the old Palace, filled another of these squares. The City intire was situated in a vast plain, the soil whereof was extremely fat and fruitful. To people this vast City, Nebuchadnezzar transplanted thither an infinite number of Captives out of the several nations subdued by him. The sacred Books relate many particulars concerning the Captivity of the Jews at Babylon. We have inserted here the Plan of this famous City, in the draught whereof we have followed F. Kircher.

We have already mentioned the Temple of Belus, which many confound with the Tower of Babel. We shall in another place speak of the Statue which Nebuchadnezzar appointed to be erected in the plain of Dura in the Province of Babylon. It remains that we should say something of those famous hanging Gardens, which passed for one of the wonders of the world. They contained a space of four hundred feet square[21]; within this space these celebrated Gardens were raised, composed of several large terrasses, placed like amphitheaters, and the highest platform belonging to them equalled the walls of Babylon in height, that is to say, was three hundred and fifty feet high. They went up from one terrass to another, by stairs ten feet wide: this whole mass was supported by large vaults built upon one another, and strengthned with a wall two and twenty feet thick, incompassing it every way: upon the top of these vaults were laid large flat stones sixteen feet long and four wide.

Over these was placed a layer of rushes done over with a great quantity of bitumen, upon which were two rows of bricks bound fast together with mortar. All this was covered with plates of lead; and upon these the Earth of the Garden was disposed. All these precautions were taken to prevent the water and moisture from making way, and running through the vaults. There was so large a quantity of earth heap'd together, that the greatest trees might take root in it. Here was every thing to be seen that could please the sight and curiosity; very beautiful and large trees, flowers, plants, and shrubs. Upon the highest of the terrasses there was an Aquæduct supplied with water from the river by a pump probably, and from thence the whole Garden was watered. It is affirmed, that Nebuchadnezzar undertook this wonderful and famous Edifice out of complaisance to his Wife Amytis, the Daughter of Astyages, who being a native of Media, retained strong inclinations for mountains and forests.

[Psalm cxxxvii. 2. Isai. xv. 7. Isai. xxi. 1.] The Scripture no where takes notice of these celebrated Gardens, but speaks of Willows planted upon the banks of the rivers of Babylon, or Babylonia, upon which the Priests or Levites Ministers of the Temple hung their instruments of Musick during the Captivity. We hanged our harps upon the willows in the midst thereof. And Isaiah designing to make mention in a prophetick style of the Captivity, to which the Moabites were to be reduced by Nebuchadnezzar says, They shall be carried away to the valley of Willows. And the same Prophet, describing in another place the calamities which Babylon was to suffer from Cyrus, calls this City the Desart [Jer. li. 36, 42.] of the Sea. And Jeremiah, I will dry up the Sea of Babylon, and make her springs dry. And again, The Sea is come up upon her: she is covered with the multitude of the waves thereof. And Megasthenes assures us[22], that Babylon was built in a place which before abounded so with water, that it was called [Is. xiii. 1, 2, &c.] the Sea. Isaiah prophesies against Babylon in the terms following, Lift up a banner upon the high mountain, upon Media, a mountainous country, exalt the voice unto them, shake the hand, that they may go into the gates of the nobles, their rendezvous in order to march against Babylon. I have commanded my sanctified ones, I have also called my mighty ones: the noise of a multitude in the mountains like as of a great people, a tumultuous noise of the Kingdoms of nations gathered together. Haste ye, for the day of the Lord is at hand: the hearts of the Babylonians shall melt, they shall be afraid, they shall be amazed at one another, their faces shall be as flames. I will take vengeance for the crimes which the Babylonians have committed against the rest of the world, I will put an end to their pride, and humble their insolence. A man shall be more precious (and more rare) than gold. . . . Babylon shall be as the chased roe, and as a sheep that no man taketh up. Whoever shall be found within her walls, shall be put to death, and they who shall offer themselves for its defence shall be put to the sword. Their children shall be dashed to pieces before their eyes, their houses shall be spoiled and their wives ravished. I will stir up the Medes against them, which shall not regard silver, and as for gold they shall not delight in it. . . . Babylon the glory of Kingdoms, the beauty of the Chaldees excellency, shall be as when God overthrew Sodom and Gomorrah. It shall never be inhabited, neither shall it be dwelt in from generation to generation.

[See likewise Isai. xiv. xxi. xlv. xlvi. xlvii. xlviii.] The predictions of the Prophets against Babylon were by degrees accomplished. Berosus[23] relates, that Cyrus having made [Jerem. l. i. Exek. xxi. 30, 31, 32. Hab. ii, &c.] himself master of this City, demolished the outward walls of it; because the City seemed to be too strong, and he was apprehensive that it would revolt. Darius the Son of Hystaspes[24] having taken Babylon, destroyed the gates and walls of it, hereby intending to chastise the pride of this City. Alexander the Great had formed a design for rebuilding it; but his sudden death prevented the execution of it, and his Successors neglected it[25]. Seleucus Nicator, one of Alexander's Successors, having built Seleucia upon the Tigris, the neighbourhood of this place, which Seleucus proposed to make a great City, insensibly robb'd Babylon of its inhabitants[26]. Strabo assures us[27], that in his time, that is to say, under the Empire of Augustus, Babylon was almost intirely deserted. He applies to it the expression of an old Poet concerning Megalopolis, that it was no longer any thing more than a great Desart. Diodorus of Sicily[28], who lived in the same Age, assures us, that there was but a small part of the City inhabited.

Pausanias, who lived in the second Age of the Church, says[29], that there was nothing but waste walls standing. Theodoret remarks, that in his time it was inhabited only by some Jews. Eusebius writing upon the xiii. Chapter of Isaiah, says, that it was then entirely deserted, as they declared, who came from that part of the world. Lastly, S. Jerom upon the same Ch. xiii. of Isaiah, relates upon the testimony of a Monk, who was an Elamite, and dwelt at Jerusalem, that the Kings of Persia made a great park of Babylon, and kept abundance of wild creatures in it for the diversion of hunting. Benjamin of Tudela, a Jew, who lived in the twelfth Age, says, he found Babylon all in ruins, and that the remains of Nebuchadnezzar's palace were still remarkable there, but that no one could go near it, by reason of the Serpents which were there in great numbers. At present all marks of this proud City are so intirely lost, that there is no telling with any certainty, where it stood formerly. So that they who confound the City of Bagdat with old Babylon are grossly mistaken.

There have been great boasts made of the antiquity of the Astronomical Observations made by the Babylonians. They reckon four hundred seventy three thousand years from the Observations of their first Astrologers, to the arrival of Alexander the Great[30]. Cicero[31] makes a round number of four hundred and seventy thousand years. Pliny[32], as he is corrected by Perizonius and F. Hardouin, reports, that Epigenes allowed their Observations to have been for seven hundred and twenty thousand years, and that Berosus and Critodemus, who lessen the antiquity of them more than any others, yet confessed, that these Observations had been made four hundred and fourscore thousand years: This number of years is excessive, and extends not only much farther than the flood, but even than the beginning of the world according to the account of it by Moses. If the Babylonians had been in reality so ancient, we should have had some remains sure of their ancient history. Josephus tells us[33], that Berosus agreed with Moses in what he said concerning the corruption of mankind, and the deluge: and Aristotle[34], who was curious in enquiring into the truth of what was published relating to these Observations, desired Callisthenes to send him the most certain accounts that he could find of this particular among the Babylonians. Callisthenes sent him Observations of the Heavens, which had been made for one thousand nine hundred and three years, computing from the original of the Babylonish Monarchy to the time of Alexander[35]. And the printed copies of Pliny, instead of the seven hundred and twenty thousand years, according to Epigenes's reckoning, imply no more than seven hundred and twenty; and instead of the four hundred and fourscore thousand, said to be allowed by Berosus and Critodemus, they read only four hundred and fourscore. But, notwithstanding we have no design to vindicate the common reading of Pliny, which indeed appears to be faulty, we cannot however admit of their opinion, who make the Chaldeans so very ancient. This pretended Antiquity is contradicted by the sacred Writings, which are of an infinitely superior authority. The computation even of Callisthenes seems to be a little inlarged; for according to our Chronology, we reckon no more than about eighteen hundred years from Nimrod and the Tower of Babel, to the reign of Alexander at Babylon.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Herennius apud Stephen. in Babylon.
Doroth. Sidonius Poeta. Item Abiden. apud Eufeb. Præp. l. ix. c. 41.
Marsham. Can. Chron. Secul. xiii.
The 360 furlongs make 44600 paces, that is to say, near fifteen leagues, at three miles to the league.
Vide Joseph. l. x. Antiq. c. 11. & lib. i. contra Appion. & Euseb. l. ix. Præpar. c. ult.
Herodot. l. i. c. 95.
Isai. xxxix. collatum cum 2 Reg. xx. 12.
Vide Usher. ad ann. 3323.
Alex. Polyhistor. apud Syncell. Usher. ad an. Mund. 3328. & Is. xxiii. 13. l. i. contra Appion. p. 1045.
Beros. apud Joseph.
Cyril. Alex. Basil. Gregor. Nazian.
Is. x. 9. Οὐκ ἔλαβον τὴν χώραν τὴν ἐπάνω Βαβυλῶνος καὶ Χαλάνης, οὗ ὁ πύργος ᾠκοδομήθη.
Bibl. Orient. p. 1016. & 159. Babel.
Gen. iv. 26. according to the Hebrew, אז הוחל לקרא בשם יהוהVide Hieronym. in qu. Hebr. in Genes.
Bibl. Orient. p. 668. Nimrod.
Ranwolf's Voyage. c. 8.
Herodot. l. i.
Diodor. Sicul. l. ii. l. i. Diodor. Sicul. l. ii.
Herodot. l. i.
Berosus apud Joseph. Antiq. l. x. c. 11. Herodot. Strabo, l. xvi. c. 2. Curt. l. v. c. 1.
Diodor. Sicul. l. ii.
Megasth. apud Euseb. Præp. l. ix. c. 41.
Beros. apud Joseph. l. i. contra Appion. p. 1045. l. i. fol. 307. & l. ii. fol. 320.
Herodot. l. iii. c ult.
Strabo. l. xvi.
Plin. l. vi. c. 27.
Strabo. l. xvi.
Diodor. l. ii. c 9.
Pausan. Arcad. c. 33.
Diodor. l. ii.
Cicero de Divinat.
Plin. l. vii. c. 56.
Berof. apud Joseph. contra Appian. l. i. p. 1044.
Vide Simplicium. l. iii. de Cœlo.

Translators' note. This carries up the account as high as the one hundred and fifteenth year after the Flood, which was within fifteen years af- ter the Tower of Babel was built. For the confusion of tongues, which followed immediately after the building of that Tower, hap- pened in the year wherein Peleg was born, which was an hundred and one years after the Flood, and fourteen years after that these Observations began. Prid. Connect. Part. I. Book 2.

Babylon of Egypt (II)

II. BABYLON of Egypt. Diodorus Siculus fixes the original of it to the time of Sesostris[1]. He says, that the captives carried by this Prince from Babylon, fortified themselves in this place, and built a City of the same name with that, where they were born. Ctesias, who is cited in the same Diodorus, relates, that the Babylonians who came with Semiramis into Egypt, founded Babylon; but Josephus v is much more credible when he says, that this City was not built till the time of Cambyses, and that it owes its original to some Persians, to whom this Prince gave the ground hereabouts, and permitted them to settle there. Some modern Criticks have supposed, that S. Peter wrote his first Epistle from this Babylon in Egypt; which opinion we have confuted in a particular Dissertation, prefixed to the last Tome of our Commentary.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Diodor. l. i. v Joseph. Antiq. l xxi. c 5. w Joseph. l. iii. de Bello, c. 2.

Babylonia

BABYLONIA, a Province of Chaldæa or Assyria, whereof Babylon was the Capital. It is called at this day Ierak.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Baca

BACA, a place which separates the lands belonging to the Tyrians from Galilee w.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Bacatha

BACATHA, a City or Town which Epiphanius[1] places in Arabia, in the neighbourhood of Philadelphia, on the other side of Jordan. In the subscriptions of some Councils[2], we find a Bishop of Bacatha. Charles de S. Paul, and after him F. Labbé, take Bacatha and Bazcata in the Tribe of Judah, to be the same place.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Epiphan. advers. hæres. l. ii. p. 397, & 489.
Vide Reland. Palæst. l. iii. p. 612.

Bacchides

BACCHIDES, General of the Troops belonging to Demetrius Soter King of Syria [1 Macc. xii. 8. In the Year of the World 3843, before J. C. 157, before the vulgar Æra 161.] , and Governour of Mesopotamia. He was sent by Demetrius together with the High Priest Alcimus, to examine into the depredations which Judas Maccabæus was accused of committing in the Country. He came therefore with a great Army to Jerusalem, and sent a deputation of some persons to Judas Maccabæus and his Brothers, with fraudulent propositions of peace. But neither Judas nor his Brethren had any confidence in them. A Priest with some Assideans coming to Bacchides, he put to death sixty of them. After which he left Jerusalem, and incamping at Bethzekah, he gave directions to apprehend some of those who had deserted the party of the Syrians, and having murdered them threw them into a well. This done, he put the whole Province into the hands of Alcimus, whom he left with Troops for his defence, and so returned to Antioch, where the King was.

[1 Macc. ix. 1.] Some time after, towards the end of the same year, Bacchides returned again into Judæa with some of the King's choicest Troops, to put a stop to the progress, which Judas was making, who had obtained a signal Victory over Nicanor. Bacchides went directly to Jerusalem, thinking to find Judas there; but he had retreated to Laïsa or Lesen; whither Bacchides went in search of him. Judas's Army consisted of no more than three thousand men, whereas in that of Bacchides there were twenty thousand foot, and two thousand horse. Judas's forces were intimidated by the great numbers of their Enemies, and insensibly stole away from him, so that not above eight hundred men were left; with these he encountered Bacchides chides, broke his right wing, and pursued him as far as mount Azotus. But Bacchides's left wing having hem'd in Judas and his little Army, this Hero was born [In the Year of the World 3843, before J. C. 157, before the vulg. Æra 161. במתניו] down by multitudes, and killed by the Enemy.

The whole Country after this submitted to Bacchides; and he gave the government of it to a set of wicked men, who exercised their cruelty upon all Judas's friends. But all the people having chosen Jonathan to [1 Macc. xi. 24. & seq.] succeed his Brother Judas Maccabæus, Bacchides used his utmost endeavours to lay hold of him and put him to death: which Jonathan being informed of, retired to Tekoe near Jerusalem, and from thence passed the Jordan. Bacchides pursued him, and inclosed him in a place, where behind him he had the river Jordan, and woods on each side of him; so that there was a necessity either to conquer or die. He gave battle, and fought valiantly with his Troops, but being overpowered by the great number of his Enemies, he threw himself into the river, and swam over it with his people. Bacchides left a thousand of his men dead upon the spot, and afterwards returned to Jerusalem. He fortified several places in the Country, took the children of the chief men in Israel for hostages, secured them in the fortress of Jerusalem, and, Alcimus dying some time [In the year of the World 3846, before J. C. 154. before the vulg. Æra 159.] after, left Judæa, and returned to Antioch.

Two years after, Bacchides was recalled by a wicked party of the Jews, accordingly he came with an Army, and solicited those in his interest to seize Jonathan. But he avoided the ambuscades they laid for him, [1 Macc. xi. 57, 58, 59, &c.] and retired; he fortified Bethbesen, and there abode with his Brother Simon. Bacchides upon notice of this, besieged him; but Jonathan after he had defended himself for a long time, left his Brother Simon in the place, and himself took the field at the head of some Troops. Simon in the mean time on his part made several successful sallies on the Enemy, burnt their machines, and compell'd them to raise the siege. In short, Jonathan having sent to demand peace of Bacchides, it was granted, the prisoners were restored, and he returned to Antioch; from whence he made no more expeditions into Judæa. This is all we know relating to the history of Bacchides. There is mention in 2 Macc. viii. 30. of some conflicts between Judas and Bacchides; but we know no particulars of them, nor of their date, unless they happened after the year of the world 3840.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Bacenor

BACENOR, the Father of Dositheus, spoken of in 2 Macc. xii. 35.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Bachur

BACHUR, or Bahurim, Bachor, Bachora, Choraba, Choramon, for this place is described by all these several names[1]. It was a village near Jerusalem, in the way towards Jordan, where Shimei the Son of Gera met David, and loaded him with imprecations and abuses. 2 Sam. xvi. 5.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Joseph. Antiq. l. vii. c. 8, 9. Macc. xiii. 37.

Back

[2 Sam. xxii. 41. and Ps. xvii. 41. Ps. cxviii. 3. Ps. lxviii. 24. 1 Kings xii. 10. Exek. ix. 11. Ps. lxv. 11. Prov. x. 13.] BACK, Dorsum. Thou hast shewn me the Backs of mine Enemies, thou hast put them to flight before me: Inimicos meos dedisti mihi dorsum. Bow down their Backs: Dorsum eorum semper incurva. Overwhelm them with burthens, reduce them to servitude: Posuisti tribulationes in dorso nostro. Thou hast loaded us like beasts of burden, thou hast overwhelmed us with evils. I will shew them the Back and not the face in the day of their destruction, says the Lord in Jerem. xviii. 17. And Sinners have ploughed upon my back: Supra dorsum meum fabricaverunt, the Hebrew, araverunt. My little finger is heavier than my Father's loins, said Rehoboam imprudently to the Israelites: I have more power and authority than he ever had. The rod is upon the back of him that wanteth understanding; the idle and the foolish deserve to be punished with scourgings. Ezekiel saw in Spirit a Man, or an Angel, carrying an inkhorn upon his back, or rather, upon his loins according to the Hebrew. In the same sense we are to understand what Rehoboam said of his little finger's being greater than his Father's back or loins.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Bagdad

BAGDAD, or Bagdet, a celebrated City upon the Tigris. It is by several called Babylon, but it is at a good distance from the place, where the ancient City of this name stood. Bagdad is the Capital of the Province of Terach.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Bagoas

BAGOAS, Holofernes's Chamberlain, who introduced Judith into his master's tent, with hopes, that she would gratify his brutal passion. The word Bagoas is used for all sorts of Eunuchs in general[1].

Quem penes est Dominam servandi cura Bagoë[2]. And is often to be met with in the histories of the East. In the Hebrew, Eunuchs are called Bagata, and in the Greek, Bugaioi.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Plin. l. xiii. c. iv.
Ovid. Amor. l. ii.

Bahem

[1 Macc. xiii. 37.] BAHEM. It is said in the first Book of Maccabees, that King Demetrius wrote to the High Priest Simon in these terms, Coronam auream & Bahem quam misistis, suscepimus. Some think that Bahem signifies pearls, others an habit[1]. The Greek instead of Bahem reads Baïnan, which Grotius derives from Baïs, the branch of a palm-tree. This opinion seems to be the best. It was common to send crowns, and branches of palm-trees in gold, in the way of presents to Kings, who were conquerors.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Vide Syr. ad

Bahurim

BAHURIM. See Bachur.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Bakbakker

BAKBAKKER,

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Bakbakker

BAKBAKKER, a Levite, imployed in building the Temple of Jerusalem. 1 Chr. ix. 15.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Bala

[Josh. xix. 3.] BALA, otherwise Zohar, a City of Pentapolis. See Zohar. It is said to be called Bala, that is to say, swallowed up, because as soon as Lot went out of it, the earth opened and swallowed it up. Vide Theodoret. qu. 70. in Genes. Procop. Diodor. in Caten. Vide & Hieronym. quæst. Hebr.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Balaam

[Numb. xxii. 4, 5, &c.] BALAAM, a Prophet or Diviner of the City of Pethor upon the Euphrates. Moses informs us, that Balak King of the Moabites having seen the great multitude of the Israelites, was afraid that they would fall upon his Country; and perceiving that he was not strong enough to resist them with his arms, he resolved to send for Balaam the Divine, that he might devote and curse them, according to a very ancient superstition in use among the Heathens. He sent therefore deputies to Balaam the Son of Beor, who dwelt at Pethor upon the Euphrates, desiring him to come and curse the Israelites. Hereupon the deputies of Midian and Moab departed, carrying with them wherewithal to pay the Diviner, and declared what they were commissioned to say to him. His answer was, Continue here this night, and I will answer you to morrow, as the Lord shall speak unto me. In the night the Lord appeared to him, and said, What men are these with thee? Balaam replied, They are Envoys from Balak King of Moab, who requested of me, to go and curse a certain people, which covereth the face of the earth, and is now upon the frontiers of his Dominions.

The Lord said to him, Have a care how you go and curse this people, for they are blessed. Balaam rising in the morning, delivered his answer to the Princes of Moab and Midian: Return into your Country, for the Lord hath forbidden me to go with you. The deputies therefore returned with this answer to Balak; who sent others in greater number to Balaam, and of greater quality than the first. These came and earnestly intreated him to go, promising him all the honours imaginable from Balak, and to give him what he pleased.

But he answered, If Balak would give me his house full of gold and silver, I cannot go beyond the Word of the Lord my God, to do less or more. I desire you therefore to continue here this night, that I may know the will of the Lord.

The night following the Lord appeared to him, and said, If the men come to call thee, rise up and go with them; but yet the word that I shall say unto thee, that shalt thou do: Balaam therefore rose, took his Ass, and went with the Envoys. But God, who saw the evil dispositions of his heart, was angry with him, and an Angel stood in the way to prevent his proceeding farther. Balaam's Ass seeing the Angel with a naked sword in his hand, turned out of the way, and crossed the fields. Balaam forced him by blows into the way again, and the Angel again appearing to him in a narrow passage between two walls, which inclosed some vineyards, the Ass run against the wall, and bruised Balaam's leg. At last, while he continued to push on, and strike his beast, the Angel appeared to him a third time in so narrow a place, that it was not possible for him to turn either to the right hand or the left. Then the Ass fell down under the Diviner, and would not move a step farther, and while Balaam was so violently beating of her, the Lord opened the mouth of the Ass, and she said unto Balaam, What have I done? Why hast thou smitten me these three times? Balaam answered, Because thou hast deserved it, and mocked me: I would I had a sword to kill thee! The Ass answered, Am not I thine Ass upon which thou hast ridden ever since I was thine? Was I ever wont to do so unto thee? He said, Never. Then the Lord opened the eyes of Balaam, and he perceived the Angel in the way, with a drawn sword in his hand; and he bowed down his head, and fell flat on his face. And the Angel said, Wherefore hast thou smitten thine Ass these three times? behold I went out to withstand thee; because thy way is perverse before me, unless thine Ass had turned out of the way, surely now had I slain thee. Balaam answered, I have sinned unto the Lord, for I knew not that thou stoodest in the way against me. Now therefore if it displease thee, I will get me back again. And the Angel said unto him, Go with the men; but only the word that I shall speak unto thee, that shalt thou speak. He continued his journey therefore with Balak's deputies, and this Prince upon notice of his coming went to meet him, and said, I sent persons to desire you to come, why did you not set out immediately? Now I am come, said Balaam, I can say nothing: the word that God putteth in my mouth, that must I speak. He conducted him therefore to the capital City of Moab, Kirjath-huzoth, slew sheep and oxen, whereof he made presents to Balaam, and the next morning carried him to the high places consecrated to Baal, and from thence shewed him the extremity of the Israelites Camp.

[Numb. xxxiii. 1, 2, &c.] Then Balaam said to Balak, Build me here seven Altars, and prepare me seven oxen and seven rams, which was done accordingly, and a bullock and a ram was offered on each Altar. Then Balaam said to Balak, Stand by the Burnt-offering while I go apart and see if the Lord will appear to me; and what he shall command me to speak, that will I tell thee. God immediately appeared to Balaam, who said, I have prepared seven Altars, and on each have offered a bullock and a ram. And the Lord put a word in his mouth, and said, Return; which he did, and found Balak standing by the seven Altars with the Princes of Moab about him; he said, therefore Balak King of the Moabites hath brought me from Aram, out of the mountains of the East, and said, Come, curse me Jacob, come, defie Israel. How shall I curse whom God hath not cursed? How shall I defie whom the Lord hath not defied. From the top of the rocks I see him, and from the hills I behold him: Lo, the people shall dwell alone, and shall not be reckoned among the nations. Who can count the dust of Jacob, and the number of the fourth part of Israel? Let me die the death of the righteous, and let my last end be like his.

And Balak said unto Balaam, What hast thou done? I took thee to curse mine enemies, and behold thou hast blessed them altogether. And Balaam answered, Must I not take heed to speak that which the Lord hath put in my mouth? And Balak said unto him, Come, I pray thee, with me unto another place, from whence thou mayest see them all, for thou hast seen but a part of them, and curse me them from thence; so he led him to the top of Mount Pisgah, where he erected seven Altars, and offered a bullock and a ram on each, then went aside to seek the Lord. And the Lord put a word in his mouth, and sent him back to Balak, who inquiring what the Lord had said, was answered by Balaam in these terms, " Rise up, Balak, and hear, God " is not a man that he should lye, neither " the Son of Man that he should repent: " hath he said and shall he not do it? or " hath he spoken and shall he not make it " good? Behold I have received commandment to bless; and he hath blessed and " I cannot reverse it. He hath not beheld iniquity in Jacob, neither hath he " seen perverseness in Israel: The Lord " his God is with him, and the Shout of " a King is among them; God brought " them out of Egypt, he hath as it were " the strength of an unicorn. Surely, " there is no enchantment against Ja- " cob, neither is there any divination against Israel; according to the time, " it shall be said of Jacob and of Israel, " what hath God wrought? Behold the " people shall rise up as a great Lion, and " lift up himself as a young Lion; he " shall not lye down until he eat of the " prey, and drink the blood of the slain.

Then Balak said unto Balaam, neither curse them at all, nor bless them at all; but Balaam answered, Did I not tell thee saying, All that the Lord speaketh, that I must do? Balak, in order to see whether God at last would inspire him with something else, carried him to the top of Mount Peor, and there erected seven Altars as before. But Balaam no longer doubting what the will of the Lord was, went not as at other times to seek for enchantments, but set his face towards the wilderness, and began [Numb. xxiv. 1, &c.] to speak after this manner: " Ba- " laam the Son of Beor hath said, and the " man whose eyes are open hath said, he " who heard the words of God, who saw " the vision of the Almighty, falling into " a trance but having his eyes open; (he " alludes to what happened, when his Ass " fell under him;) how goodly are thy " tents, O Jacob! As the valleys are they " spread forth as gardens by the river side, " as the trees of lign-aloes which the Lord " hath planted, and as cedar-trees besides " the waters. He shall pour out the water out of his bucket, and his seeds shall " be in many waters. His King shall be " higher than Agag, and his Kingdom " shall be exalted. God brought him out " of Egypt, he shall eat up the nations " his enemies, and shall break their bows, " and pierce them through with arrows. " He couched, he lay down as a Lion, and " as a great Lion, who shall stir him up. " Blessed is he that blesseth thee, and " cursed is he that curseth thee.

Balak hearing him, was inraged at him, and said, I called thee to curse mine enemies, and behold thou hast altogether blessed them these three times. Therefore now flee unto thy place. I thought to promote thee to great honour, but now the Lord hath kept thee back from honour. Balaam answered, Spake I not also to thy Messengers, which thou sendest unto me, saying, If Balak would give me his house full of silver and gold, I cannot go beyond the commandment of the Lord, to do either good or bad of my own mind. Nevertheless, before I return, I will advise you what you have to do, and will inform you what this people in the latter days will do to yours: Then re-assuming his prophetical style, he continued his discourse in this manner, " Hear what Ba- " laam the Diviner says, I shall see him " (meaning the Great King the Messiah so " much desired) but not now: I shall behold him but not nigh; there shall come " a Star out of Jacob, and a Scepter shall " rise out of Israel, and shall smite the " corners of Moab, and destroy all the " children of Sheth. And Edom shall be " a possession, Seir also shall be a possession for his Enemies, and Israel shall do " valiantly. Out of Jacob shall come he " that shall have dominion, and shall destroy him that remaineth of the City." Then looking on Amalek, he said, " Amalek " Amalek was the first of the nations, but " his latter end shall be, that he perish for " ever. And he looked on the Kenites, " and said, Strong is thy dwelling-place, " and thou puttest thy nest in a rock. " Nevertheless the Kenite shall be wasted, " until Ashur shall carry thee away captive. " Alas ! who shall live when God doth " this ? People shall come from the coast " of Chittim[1], (that is Macedonia) who " shall overcome the Assyrians, and at last " shall themselves perish.

After this Balaam separated from Balak, and returned into his own Country. But before he left the land of Moab, he told [Numb. xxiv. 14. Mich. vi. 5. 2 Pet. ii. 5 Jude v. 11. Rev. ii. 14.] Balak and the Midianites, that if they would secure themselves from the attempts, which the Hebrews might make against them, and obtain even some advantage over them, they should ingage them in idolatry and whoredom: that then they would be forsaken by their God, and would become a prey to their Enemies. This bad counsel was pursued: The young women of Moab invited the Hebrews to the Feasts of Baal- Peor; after they had persuaded them to imbrace idolatry, they seduced them to impurity. God commanded Moses to revenge this crime. He declared war against the [Numb. xxv. 17, 18.] Midianites, killed five of their Princes, and a great number of other persons without distinction of age or sex ; and Balaam himself was involved in this misfortune. This is what we learn from Scripture concerning [Numb. xxxi. 1, 2, 7, 8.] Balaam.

But the Rabbins[2] relate many other particulars of his Life and Person. They believe that at first he was one of Pharaoh's Counsellors, that he made his escape from the Court, and retired into Ethiopia, where he appeared in arms, and ingaged a celebrated City to join with him in his rebellion, pretending to render it impregnable by the secret charms of his magick. But Moses disappointed all his endeavours, and made himself master of the City. Balaam escaped, and fled into Arabia. Some of the Hebrews confound him with Elihu, Job's friend: and S. Jerom takes notice of this opinion in his Hebrew Questions. Others take Laban and him for the same person, and make him the Father of Jannes and Mambres, two eminent Magicians. They say he squinted, and was lame. They pretend that he was the Author of that passage in Numbers, wherein his history is related, and that Moses inserted it in his work, in like manner as he inserted, for example, the last words of Jacob; and some passages of the Book concerning the Wars of the Lord. Some of the Fathers were of opinion[3], that the wise men who came to worship Jesus Christ at Bethlehem, were Disciples and Descendants of Balaam, and from him learned, that upon the rising of a miraculous Star, a new King, and the Messiah would appear in Israel.

The Mahometans maintain, that he was by nation a Canaanite, of the race of the Anakims, or Giants of Palestine; that he had read Abraham's Books, wherein he had learnt the ineffable name of God[4], by virtue whereof he foretold things to come, and obtained of God all that he asked for. The Giants of the country astonished at the great number of the Israelitish Army, and the prodigies which God wrought in its favour, sent to Balaam, desiring him to come to curse his people. They brought him large presents, and sollicited him very earnestly to devote this people. At first he vigorously refus'd to comply with them; and had not at last submitted, but for the pressing sollicitations of his Wife, whom the Canaanites had won upon by their presents.

Balaam therefore setting forth, in order to pronounce his curse against Israel, God, who was offended with his proceeding, so wrought upon his memory, as to make him forget his ineffable Name, withdrew his graces from him, and gave him up to his own sense, so that, as Mahomet expresses it, he may be compared to a dog hanging out his tongue always, and shewing his teeth when he is left, after having been pursued. See above Balaam's Ass.

It is made a question, whether Balaam were a true Prophet of the Lord, or no more than a Diviner, a Magician, or Fortune-teller, Hariolus as he is called in Numbers, xxii. 5. Upon this point opinions are divided. Origen says[5], that all the power this man had consisted in Magick and Cursing; because the Devil, by whose influence he acted, can only curse and do mischief, but cannot bless. Theodoret thinks[6], that Balaam did not consult the Lord, but that the Lord inspired him, whether he would or no, and put those things into his mouth, which he had no inclination to pronounce. S. Cyril of Alexandria says[7], that he was a wicked Wretch, Wretch, a Magician, an Idolater, a false Prophet, who spoke truth against the grain, and contrary to his usual custom. S. Ambrose[8] compares him to Caiaphas, who prophesied without knowing what he said. The generality of Commentators think likewise[9], that Balaam was a Magician and Idolater.

But S. Jerom seems to have adopted the opinion of the Hebrews[10], which he relates, and was to this purpose, viz. that Balaam knew the true God, that he erected Altars to him, and was a true Prophet, tho' very corrupt in his manners. Moses says expressly, [Numb. xxii. 8, 9, 12, 18, 19, 20,] that he consulted the Lord, and Balaam calls the Lord his God, Numb. xxii. 18. I cannot go beyond the word of the Lord my God. S. Austin did not venture to decide this question[11], he says, Balaam will be one of those who at the day of Judgment shall say to God, Lord, have I not prophesied in thy name? which intimates that he believed him to be a true Prophet, tho' a very bad man, and among the reprobate. Tostatus and other Commentators are of the same opinion.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Translators' note. It is our Author's opinion, that by Chittim is meant Macedonia. The Hebrew original כתיים is translated in the Latin Vulgate, Italia, and by the Septuagint νωάιτικ νῶριεχ κἐמיד כתיים ςοῖαιτικ. In the Vulgate, Veniunt de Trieribus in Italia. This word however is by others understood rather of the Greeks than Romans; wherefore Alexander in the first Book of Maccabees, l. i. is said to be ἐκ τῆς γῆς Χεττιίμ. Josephus says, that Chethimus or Kittim the Son of Javan possessed the Island Chethima, afterwards called Cyprus, καὶ ἀπ' αὐτῆς νῆσοί τε πᾶσαι, καὶ τὰ πλείων τῶν παρὰ θάλασσαν Χεθίμ ὑπὸ Ἑβραίων ὀνομάζεται. Joseph. Antiq. l. i. c. 7.

Vide vitam Mosis à Gaulmino editam, & Archiva V. T. Scipionis Sgambati &c. l. ii. p. 252. Denique Fabricii Apocrypha V. T. pag. 807. & seq.

Origen. l. i. contra Celsum. Author. Oper. imperfecti in Matth. Homil. 2.

Bibl. Orient. p. 180.

Origen. Homil. 13. in Num.

Theodoret. quæst. 39. & 42. in Numer.

Cyrill. Alexand. lib. iv. & vi. de Adorat. in Spiritu.

Ambros. Ep. 50. & Class. nov. Edit.

Lyr. Cajet. Burg. Janf. Oleast. Tir. &c.

Hieronym. quæst. Hebr. in Genes.

August. l. ii. de divers. quæst. ad Simplic. art. 9. quæst. 48. in Num.

Baladan

BALADAN, King of Babylon, by profane [Is. xxxix. 1. 2 Kings xx. 12.] Authors called Belesis, or Belesus, Nabonassar, or Nanybrus[1]. Baladan at first was no more than Governour of Babylon. He entred into a confederacy with Arbaces, Governour of Media, and rebell'd against [In the Year of the World 3254, of the Julian Period 3964, before the vulgar Æra 750.] Sardanapalus King of Assyria. These two Generals marched against Sardanapalus with an Army of four hundred thousand men. The conspirators lost the three first battles. But the Bactrians coming over to their party, and deserting the King's, Baladan and Arbaces attacked the Enemy in the night, and made themselves masters of his Camp. After this misfortune, Sardanapalus retreated to Nineveh, and left the command of his Army to his Brother-in-law Salæmen. The conspirators attacked Salæmen and defeated him in two great Battles; after which they laid siege to Nineveh. Sardanapalus sustained the siege for three years; but the third year the Tigris overflowing its banks, beat down twenty furlongs or two thousand five hundred paces of the walls. Whereupon the Conspirators entred, and Sardanapalus burnt himself with all that he had most valuable, upon a funeral pile erected for this purpose in his palace. Arbaces was acknowledged King of Media, and Baladan King of Babylon. Berodach-Baladan, who sent Ambassadors to Hezekiah, was the Son of Baladan.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Vide Usher. Annal. ad an. per Jul. 3966, 3967.

Balak

[2 Kings xx. 12.] BALAK, the Son of Zippor, King of the Moabites. He seeing the multitude of Israelites which were incamped upon the confines of his Country, and apprehending they would attack him as they had the Amorites, sent deputies to Balaam the Diviner, desiring him to come and [Numb. xxii. xxiii. xxiv. xxv. — xxv. & seq.] curse or devote this people. Balaam came, as is related in the Article belonging to him, but instead of cursing the Israelites he heaped blessings on them. Balak inraged at this, dismissed Balaam, without rewarding him so well as he intended. But Balaam having advised him to ingage the Israelites to sin, by inviting them to the Feasts of Peor, Balak followed his counsel, which was equally pernicious to him, who gave it, to those who followed it, and to those against whom it was given. The Israelites who were thus betrayed into this crime, were killed by that part of their Brethren, who continued faithful to the Lord. Balaam was involved in the slaughter which was made of the Midianites; and lastly the Midianites, who had been most zealous in [— xxxi. 1, 2, &c. Ibid.] corrupting the Hebrews, were cut in pieces, and their country plundered. We know nothing concerning the Death of Balak, God not permitting them to attack the Moabites, by reason of their Father [Deut. ii. 1.] Lot, Abraham's Nephew.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Balsam-Tree

BALSAM-TREE, or Balsam. The word Balsamon may be derived from Baalshemen[1], that is, royal Oil, or the most precious of perfumed Oils. It is a word no where to be met with in the Hebrew books of the Old Testament; but in [Cant. i. 14.] the Song of Solomon we find the Vineyards of En-geddi, which are believed to be gardens of the Balsam-tree. In Ezekiel we [Ezek. xxvii. 17. פנגPannag.] read the word Pannag, which the Vulgate has translated Balsamum; and is understood in the same sense by the Chaldee and many other Interpreters.

The Balsam-tree is a Shrub which scarce grows taller than the Granada-tree. Dapper says, it is much in the form of Agnus castus, and about as high as the Privet. It has few leaves, shoots out abundance of branches set with little rounding leaves, always green; the wood of it is gummy, and of a reddish colour. Its branches are long, slender, and have but few leaves on them; the blossoms of it are small, white, and very fragrant; the fruit of it is a kernel covered with a dry brown skin; it generally has a small almond in it, but sometimes the seed of it falling out of season, this kernel is filled with a yellow liquor like honey, bitter to the taste, and pungent to the tongue. The Balsam-tree is cultivated much after the manner of the vine. Its plant does not become large, nor is it suffered any more than the vine to grow tall. Marmol[2] allows it to be three feet high, and says its branches are like the twigs of a vine, and of the same colour, and that the kernel is red.

Some Authors have affirmed, that the Balsam-tree was peculiar to Judæa. Diodorus Siculus[3] and some others assure us, that it grows in no part of the world besides the neighbourhood of En-geddi and the Dead Sea; that the truly good was to be met with here only: but we know beyond a possibility of doubting, that this Shrub is peculiar to Arabia; that it comes naturally as it were all about Mecca and Medina[4]; that upon the plains and mountains, upon cultivated and uncultivated lands, and even upon the sands there grows an infinite number of gummy trees; that the inhabitants, to make advantage of them, take them up out of barren and uncultivated places, and transplant them into richer and more fertile soils; that they which grow in sandy places produce but very little Balm, but abundance of seed, which is sent to Europe and sold there. The Arabians inform us, that their country has never been without it: from thence the Queen of Sheba brought it into Judæa, and had it cultivated in the plains of Engeddi, and Jericho. That which grows in Egypt about Matara comes originally from Arabia. Ever since the Arabians have perceived the great advantage which may be made of the Balsam-tree, they have multiplied the species of it: Nevertheless there is a Law forbidding any to sow or multiply this tree without the permission of the Grand Signior.

The juice of Balm is drawn from the tree we have been speaking of during the months of June, July and August, by making incisions in the bark, or it naturally distills[5] from it. These incisions are made with knives of glass, stone[6], or ivory[7]; and some assert, that iron is mortal[8] to this tree[9]. The juice of it in the beginning is white; soon after it becomes green, and then of a gold colour, and when it comes to be old it is of the colour of honey. The smell of it is agreeable, and very penetrating, the taste of it bitter, sharp and astringent. It is very light when it is fresh; if it is laid in water, it does not sink, but rises immediately and spreads over the whole surface of it, mixes with it and dissolves presently; but soon after it coagulates, and becomes as white as milk, and then it is taken out of the water. Some say that if the plant is strip'd of its leaves on the side which is exposed to the rising Sun, and an incision made in it, a very odoriferous liquor will immediately flow from it.

The Balm which is carried from Arabia to Cairo, tho' it smells well, is not all the true gum of this Shrub, nor drippings from the bark of it; for it issues from it in very small quantity. The Balm which is sold by the Merchants is made of the wood and green branches of the tree distilled at the fire, and besides it is not pure; it is adulterated with a mixture of Egyptian Turpentine. Moreover, there is a liquor extracted from the seed, which is pass'd upon the world for true Balm, tho' it has not so strong a scent, and is more bitter to the taste.

Besides the Balsam of Arabia or Mecca, there are several sorts brought from America; the most considerable are those of Peru, Tholu, and Capaïba. But as they were not known to the Ancients, it is needless to speak of them in this Dictionary, which is composed with a design only to clear the Text of the Bible.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

בעל שמן

Marmol. l. xi. c. 12.

Diodor. Sic. l. ii. c. 48. Vide Jos. Antiq. Plin. Dioscorid.

Dapper Description de l'- Egypte p. 61.

Translators' note. Hence it is called Opobalsamum, i.e. the Gum or Unguent coming by distillation from the Balsam-tree; for Balsamum properly signifies the Balsam-tree, and Opobalsamum the Unguent distilling from it; 'Οπὸς being Greek for any Gum, Juice, or Liquor distilling from any tree or from elsewhere. See Prideaux'

Translators' note. Josephus, who must be particularly well acquainted with this matter, 'Οξὴ λίθῳ, or ὄξεσι λίθοις. From Judæa as our Author observes, it was transplanted into Egypt, and there, as travellers tell us, it still grows. Gemmatis alii per totum Balsama tectum Effudere cadis, duro quæ faucius ungue, Niliacus pingui defudet vulnere cortex. —— Claudian. in Epithol. Palladii.

Theophrast. Plin. Dioscor.

Translators' note. This is not true unless the incision be made too deep, of which there is danger from a sharp iron knife; for this reason only no such knife was made use of in this operation. Prid. Hist. P. ii. p. 339. of the Folio Edition.

Plin. l. xii. c. 25. Tacit. l. v. Hist. c. 6. Marmol.

Baltis

[1 Kings x. 1, &c.] BALTIS, Balchis or Balkis. This name the Eastern people give the Queen of Sheba who came to visit Solomon. They inform us, that she was Queen of Arabia, of the posterity of Jarab the Son of Cathan; she reigned in the City of Mareb the capital of the Province of Sheba. Her Father was Hadhad, Son to Scharshabis, twentieth King of Yemen, or Arabia the Happy. Others make her to be the Daughter of Sarabil, who was descended in a right line from Sheba, Son of Jakh-Schab, Son of Jaarab, Son of Cathan or Jaktan. The Mahometans tell us abundance of fabulous particulars, concerning a journey which Solomon is pretended to have made into Arabia, and the messages which he conveyed by a certain Bird which he always carried with him, and we call a Hoop; they give an account likewise, after their particular manner, of Queen Baltis's journey into Palestine to invite Solomon, of the presents she sent, and the marriage which she contracted with this Prince. All this as it is related in their history is much[1] more proper to furnish matter for a Romance, than to give any lights to the recital made by the sacred Authors of the Jews. See the article Candaule, the name given by Josephus to the Queen of Sheba; and Sheba, Queen of Sheba.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Hist. Pt. ii. p. 339 of the Folio Edition.

Bamah

BAMAH, in Hebrew signifies an Eminence.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Bamoth

BAMOTH, Numb. xxi. 19, 20. Moses says, that the Hebrews went from Nahaliel to Bamoth, and from Bamoth to the valley, which is the plain of Moab. Eusebius says, Bamoth is a City of Moab, upon the river Arnon.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Bamoth-Baal

BAMOTH-BAAL, a City beyond Jordan, [Josh. xiii. 17.] which was given to the Tribe of Reuben. Eusebius says, it is situated in the plain where the river Arnon runs.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Bane

BANE, the name of an Essenian Hermit, under whose discipline Josephus the Jewish Historian put himself from the sixteenth year of his age to the nineteenth. Joseph. lib. de Vitâ suâ.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Bani (I)

I. BANI, the Children of Bani returned from Babylon to the number of six hundred and two and forty. See Ezra ii. 10.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Bani (II)

[1 Chr. vi. 46.] II. BANI, the Son of Shamer, a Levite, of the Family of Merari.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Bani (III)

III. BANI, the Gadite, one of the Heroes [2 Sam. xxiii. 36.] in David's Army.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Baptism

BAPTISM. This term comes from the Greek Baptismos or Baptisma, derived from the Verb Baptizo, To wash, dip, baptize. The Hebrews had many sorts of Baptisms or Purifications. Sometimes they washed themselves all over, and plunged their whole body in water: sometimes they washed their cloaths only, and at other times both body and cloaths. The most superstitious among them wash'd their arms from their elbows to the extremities of their hands, when they returned from market, or came out of the street, [Mark vii. 4.] fearing they had touched something or person that was polluted. They washed their hands likewise with great exactness before and after meals. Lastly, they washed the furniture and utensils of their table and kitchen, as often as they had the least suspicion of their having [Mark vii. 2. 2 John ii. 6.] been polluted by any accident.

When they received a Proselyte to their Religion, they both circumcised and baptized him, pretending that this Baptism was a kind of regeneration, whereby the Proselyte was made a new man: of a slave he became free. They who were his relations before this ceremony were, after it, no longer accounted such. Our Saviour is thought to have alluded to this in his expression to Nicodemus, that it was necessary he should be born again, in order to become his Disciple. The whole Law and [John iii. 10.] History of the Jews abound with Lustrations and Baptisms of different sorts: Moses enjoined the people to wash their garments, and purify themselves, to prepare for the reception of [Exod. xix. 10. Exod. xxix. 4. and Levit. viii. 6. and Numb. viii. 6, 7, 8. Levit. xiii. 6, 34. xvi. 6, 7, & seq. xi. 25, 28. xxii. 6. Numb. xxxi. 24. xix. 14. Exod. xxix. 21. Lev. viii. 11. Lev. xvi. 14, 15. Lev. iv. 32. Lev. xiv. 7. Mark i. 4. Matth. iii. 2. Numb. xx. 12, &c.] the Law. The Priests and Levites, before they enter upon the exercise of their Ministry, wash themselves with water. All legal pollutions were cleansed by Baptism, or by plunging into water. There are even certain diseases and infirmities natural to men and women, which were thought uncleannesses, and were to be purified with bathing. To touch a dead body, and to be present at funerals made people unclean and required purifications.

But these purifications were not uniform: generally people dipp'd themselves intirely under the water, and this is the most simple and natural notion of the word, baptize. Sometimes likewise they were satisfied with Baptism by aspersion, or such a lustration as included no more than scattering lightly some lustral blood and water on the person; for example, when Moses consecrated the Priests and Altar, when the Tabernacle was sprinkled with blood upon the day of Solemn Expiation, or when the Sacrifice was offered by him for the sins of the High-Priest and multitude, and he tinged the horns of the Altar with the blood of the Victim, when a leper was purified after his cure, or a man polluted by touching or meeting a dead body, they did no more than lightly sprinkle them with lustral water.

When S. John Baptist began to preach Repentance, he instituted a sort of Baptism, which he gave in the waters of Jordan. He did not attribute the virtue to it of forgiving Sins, but made use of it as a preparation only for the receiving Baptism at the hands of Jesus Christ, and remission of sins by penitential acts, wherewith he required this ceremony to be attended. He did not exact only sorrow for sin, but a change of life, and such practices as might atone for the commission of sin. The Baptism of John was much more perfect than that of the Jews, but less perfect than that of Jesus Christ. It was, says S. Chrysostom [2], as it were a bridge which from the Baptism of the Jews made a way to that of our Saviour, and was more exalted than the first, but inferior to the second. That of S. John promis'd what that of Jesus Christ executed. After the Baptism of John, that of Jesus Christ was still necessary, to receive, says S. Austin[1], forgiveness of Sins, and the grace of Sanctification.

Notwithstanding that S. John did not enjoin his Disciples to continue the Baptism of Repentance, which was of his institution, after his death, because after the[2] manifestation of the Messiah and the establishment of the Holy Ghost, *it be*came of no use, yet there were many of his followers who still administered it, and several years after the Death and Resurrection of Jesus Christ, did not so much as know that there was any other Baptism, than that of John. Of this number was Apollos, a learned and zealous man, who was of Alexandria, and came to Ephesus twenty years after the Resurrection of our Saviour. And when S. Paul came after Apollos to [Acts xviii. 25. Acts xix. 1.] the same City, there were still many Ephesians, who had received no other Baptism, and were not informed, that there was any Holy Ghost, which was received by Baptism in Jesus Christ.

As to this last Baptism, our Saviour sending his Apostles to preach the Gospel thro'out all [Matth. xvii i. 16. Mark xvi. 14. John iii. 1.] the world, said, Go, teach all Nations baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost. Whosoever believeth and is baptized shall be saved, but he that believeth not shall be damned. Baptism therefore is absolutely necessary to Salvation; and the first mark whereby the true Disciples of Jesus Christ are distinguished, is, that they believe and are baptized in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost. We do not enlarge on this subject, because it comes but indirectly within the design of our Dictionary.

The word Baptism is often taken in the Scripture for Sufferings. For example, Can ye [Mark x. 38.] drink of the Cup that I drink of, and be baptized with the Baptism, which I am baptized with? And elsewhere; I have a Baptism to be [Luke xii. 50.] baptized with, and how am I straitned till it be accomplished? Expressions whereof we find some footsteps in the old Testament, where [Ps. lxix. 2, 3.] waters denote often tribulations, and where, to be swallowed up by the waters, and to pass the great waters, signify to be overwhelmed with miseries and misfortunes.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Aug. l. 5. contra Donatist. c. 10. Enchirid. de fide, spe, & charitate, c. 49.
Chrysost. Tom. I. Homil. xxiv. p. 312.

Baptism by Fire (II)

II. BAPTISM by Fire. The words of S. [Matth. iii. 11.] John Baptist saying, that for his part he baptized only with Water, but that he who was to come after him would baptize with the Holy Ghost and with Fire, give us an opportunity to examine what is meant by this Baptism by Fire. Many of the old Fathers[1] believed, that all the faithful, before they entred Paradise, would pass through a certain Fire, which would purify them from the pollutions that might still remain with them to be expiated. This opinion is proposed, but [Gen. iii. 24.] with some difference, by the generality of the Ancients: it is founded upon what is said in Genesis, concerning the Cherubims being placed at the entrance into Paradise with a flaming sword, and upon the following words [1 Cor iii. 12, 18.] of S. Paul, Now if any man build upon this foundation, gold, silver, precious stones, wood, hay, stubble; every man's work shall be made manifest, for the day shall declare it, because it shall be revealed by fire, and the fire shall try every man's work, of what sort it is.

Other Fathers[2] explain this Fire by that of Hell; others[3] by the fire of Tribulations and Temptations; others[4] by an abundance of Graces; others suppose it to mean the descent of the Holy Ghost upon the Apostles in the form of fiery tongues; lastly, others have pretended, that the word Fire is an addition in this place, and that we are to read no more than this in S. Matthew, viz. I baptize you with Water, but he that shall come after me will baptize you with the Holy Ghost. It is certain that the word Fire is not to be met with in several manuscript copies of S. Matthew; but we read it in S. Luke, and in the oriental Versions of S. Matthew.

Some old Hereticks[5], such as the Seleucians and Hermians, understood this literally, and maintained, that material Fire was necessary in the adminisration of Baptism; but they do not tell us either how, or to what part of the body they applied it, or whether they were satisfied with obliging the baptized to pass over or thro' the flames. Valentinus rebaptized those who had received Baptism out of his Sect, and drew them thro' the Fire[6].

Bis docuit tingui, traducto corpore flammâ.

Heraclion, who is cited by Clemens Alexandrinus[7], says, that some applied a red hot iron to the ears of the baptized as if they were to impress some mark upon them. We are told that the Ethiopians[8] still at this day make prints with a hot iron on their newly baptized Children in three places, viz. the nose, eyes, and temples. Father Eugenius Roger says, that they use for this purpose a small twoedged hot iron. We are assured that the Jacobites, Christians in the East, print a hot iron upon their Childrens fore-head after having circumcised them.

But M. Renaudot[9] affirms, that whatever is said of this pretended Baptism by Fire, and the practice of it among the Ethiopians, is all false: and M. Ludolf[10] confesses, that neither Gregory the Ethiopian, whom he consulted, nor the Missionary Jesuits had said any thing of it; but he remarks, that the people of Africa, as well Heathens as Mahometans, have a custom of applying a caustick to the temples of their Children, in order to preserve them from Catarrhs; that some Ethiopians do the same, and that this probably is what gave occasion to believe, that this was an act of their Religion.

From all that has been said we may infer, that the Church never approved of those, who, understanding the words of the Gospel literally, asserted Fire to be necessarily used in the ceremony of Christian Baptism; but has left people at liberty to explain this Fire, as meaning either the abundance of Graces pour'd forth into our souls by Baptism, or the Fire which accompanied the descent of the Holy Ghost on the Apostles, or the fire of Tribulations, Grief, and Repentance, which ought always to go along with Baptism.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Origen. Homil. 3. in Ps xxxvi. and Hom. 24. in Lucam. & n. 12. Ambros. in Ps. cxviii. 11, 12, 13, &c. Lactant. l. vii. c. 21. Hilar. in Ps. cxviii. n. 5.
Basil. l. v. contra Eunom. Theoph. Antioch. l. i.
Auth. operis imperfecti in Matt. Hom. 5. hæres. 59. & Philast. de hæres. c. 55, 56, 57.
Chrysost. Hom. xi. in Matt.
Apud. Aug.
Tertull. Carmin. contra Marcion. l. i.
Clem. Alex. Ἔνιοι πυρὶ τὰ ὦτα τῶν σφραγιζομένων κατεσημήναντο.
Paul. Jovin. hist. l. xviii. Leon. Rauchwolff. Itiner. orient. l. iii. c. 17.
Renaudot. t. 4. Perpetuité. 84.
Ludolf. Hist. Æthiop. l. iii. c. 6. n. 41, 42.

Baptism in the name of Jesus (III)

III. BAPTISM in the name of Jesus Christ. Many difficulties have been raised [Acts xi. 38.] with relation to the following words of S. Luke in the Acts of the Apostles. Be baptiz'd every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of Sins. And again, [— viii. 16.] The Holy Ghost as yet was faln on none of them; only they were baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus. It has been a question whether Baptism ever was administred in the name of Jesus Christ only, without making express mention of the other Persons in the Trinity? and whether such Baptism is valid or lawful?

Many of the Fathers, and some Councils, believed that the Apostles sometimes had baptized in the name of Jesus Christ only, and herein, says S. Hilary, we are not to charge them with prevarication, nor condemn the Scriptures, as if they were selfcontradicting, because they enjoin Baptism to be performed in the name of Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, and nevertheless inform us, that the Apostles baptized in the name of Jesus only. An old Author[1], who wrote against S. Cyprian on the subject of Baptism, believes that Baptism administred in the name of Jesus Christ only is not sufficient without confirmation, wherein the Holy Ghost is received; but then he thinks too, that Baptism in this manner is not to be reiterated as null, for the invocation of the name of Christ ought not to be esteemed unprofitable. S. Ambrose asserts[2], that tho' one person only of the Trinity were expressed, the Baptism is perfect. Si unum sermone comprehendas, aut Patrem, aut Filium, aut Spiritum Sanctum, plenum erit Fidei Sacramentum cramentum: For, adds he, whosoever names one Person of the Trinity, means the whole. Quia qui unam dixerit, Trinitatem signavit.

Venerable Bede[3], S. Bernard[4], Pope Nicholas I.[5] the Councils of Frejus in the year 791, and of Nîmes in 1284. Hugh of S. Victor[6] the master of Sentences, Peter of Poitiers, Alexander Hales, S. Thomas, and many other Schoolmen, Theophylact, Denys the Carthusian, and Cardinal Hugo, believe without scruple that the Apostles sometimes baptized in the name of Jesus Christ alone, and that this Baptism was good and lawful.

But as this opinion is founded only on a dubious fact, and an obscure Text, it is not at all impossible, but that the Fathers and Doctors, and even the particular Councils above cited, might be mistaken, first as to the fact, and explanation of the Text in S. Luke, and afterwards in the consequence which they drew from it. Besides, it is certain, that the Latin Authors and Councils here produced by us, rested principally upon the authority of S. Ambrose; who to them seemed decisive for the validity of this Baptism. Now it may be shewn, 1. That the Text in the Acts of the Apostles is not any way clear for this opinion. 2. That it is very dubious whether the Apostles ever baptized in the name only of Jesus Christ; and 3. That even S. Ambrose is not favourable to this opinion.

By baptizing in the name of Jesus two things may be signified: either to baptize with invocation of the name of Jesus Christ alone, without making express mention of the other Persons of the Trinity; or to baptize in his name, by his authority, and with the Baptism instituted by him, in expressing the three Persons of the Trinity, as he has clearly and plainly commanded in S. [Matth. xxviii. 19] Matthew. Since therefore we have a positive and explicit Text, who is it that obliges us to quit it, and follow another which is capable of different senses? Who will believe that the Apostles forsaking the form of Baptism prescribed by Jesus Christ, instituted another quite new without any necessity?

The Text of S. Ambrose is farther liable to some difficulties; for first in several other places[7] he instructs us, that there is no merit in Baptism without the express invocation of the three Persons in the Trinity, how then could he contradict himself in so evident a manner, by saying, as is pretended, that Baptism confer'd in the name of Jesus Christ alone is good and valid? Besides it is very credible, that S. Ambrose in the passage which is here perplexing to us, followed, as was usual with him, S. Basil. Now S. Basil[8] has maintained, that in order to the validity of Baptism, the invocation of the three Persons in the Trinity is absolutely necessary; for altho', says he, the Apostle often makes no mention either of the Father, or of the Holy Spirit, but of the Son only, yet should we not infer from thence that he excludes them: for the invocation of the name of Jesus Christ is a kind of profession of Faith that we believe the Holy Trinity entire, the Father who gave the Unction, the Son who received it, and the Holy Spirit who is himself this Unction. In like manner, adds he, notwithstanding the Scripture in other passages seems to mention only the Holy Spirit, we should not from thence conclude that such Baptism, wherein the Holy Spirit only is invoked, is perfect; for the tradition which we have received should continue inviolable. To separate the Holy Spirit from the Father and the Son, is a dangerous attempt in him who baptizes, and unprofitable to him who is baptized.

But let us come to the passage of S. Ambrose, and see if he really says what is imputed to him. He asserts, the Baptism of John to have been of no force, because there was no acknowledgment in it, either of Jesus Christ, or the Holy Spirit; and that Baptism is then only full and compleat, when the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost are confessed in it: Plenum autem est si Patrem, & Filium, Spiritumque Sanctum fatearis. He who denies but one Person, destroys the whole Mystery, but he who in words expresses but one of them, without however denying either Father, Son, or Holy Ghost, does not fail to receive the Sacrament of Baptism fully and compleatly. It is visible in all this that S. Ambrose does not speak of the Minister who baptizes, but of his Faith who is baptized. He supposes the Minister of Baptism to have done his duty, but believes that he who denies one of the Persons in the Trinity, at the time of his receiving Baptism, receives not the Grace belonging to it, and that the Sacrament with respect to him is neither full nor perfect; and on the contrary, that tho' he should expresly mention one only of the Persons, yet if he believes them all as he should do, the Sacrament with regard to him is intire and compleat. He receives the whole effect of it, quia qui unum dixerit Trinitatem signavit. All this relates to him only who has received Baptism.

Finally, the opinion which maintains that Baptism ought necessarily to be confer'd in the name of the whole Trinity; and with the express invocation of the three Persons, and that where one only of the three Persons is called upon it is invalid, the opinion, I say, asserting this is followed by the most learned Divines[9] who have written on this matter.

[1 Cor. xv. 29.] IV. Baptism for the Dead. S. Paul in his first Epistle to the Corinthians, endeavours to prove the Resurrection of the Dead; and having given several reasons for it, says, If the dead rise not at all, what shall they do who are baptized for the dead? The question is, what is here meant by this Baptism for the Dead? The first thought which occurs to the mind on this occasion is, that they whom S. Paul wrote to procured themselves to be baptized for their friends and relations who died without having received Baptism, hoping that the Baptism so received for them would be serviceable to them in another Life, in proportion as, after the same manner, the prayers and alms which are offered for the Dead are of use in obliterating such venial Sins, as might not be atoned for by them; and procuring for them a more speedy enjoyment of bliss.

No one pretends to say, that the Apostle here approves this practice, or authorizes these opinions. It is sufficient that there were people who thought and acted according to these principles, this will justify the Apostle's producing here an argument which we call ad hominem; he does not say, that the Corinthians caused themselves to be baptized for the Dead, but what shall they do who are baptized for the Dead? How will they support this practice? upon what will they found it, if the dead do not rise again, and if the Souls of the departed do not subsist after their decease?

We have nothing more to do than to shew, that there were persons at this time who called themselves Christians, and obliged themselves to be baptized for the Dead, for the service of the Dead, for their relief and advantage. Now we know, that when the first Epistle to the Corinthians was written, that is to say, three and twenty years after the Resurrection of our Saviour, several Hereticks, such as the Simonians, Gnosticks, and Nicolaitans, were in being, who denied the real Resurrection of the Dead, and acknowledged no other, besides that which was received in Baptism, by the sanctifying grace of this Sacrament.

We know farther, that the Marcionites, who appeared some time after, embraced the same principles, denied the Resurrection of the Dead, and what is more particular, received Baptism for the Dead. This we learn from Tertullian[10], when he tells the Marcionites, that they ought not to make use of S. Paul's Authority for establishing their practice of receiving Baptism for the Dead, and that if the Apostle takes notice of this custom, it is with a design only of proving the Resurrection of the Dead against themselves. Ut tantò magis sisteret carnis resurrectionem, tantò illi qui vani pro mortuis baptizarentur, fide resurrectionis hoc facerent. In another place he confesses[11], that in S. Paul's time there were people who were baptized a second time for the Dead, with hopes that it would be of service to others as to their Resurrection.

S. Chrysostom[12] is more particular in this matter. He says, that among the Marcionites, when any of their Catechumens die, they lay a living person under the bed of the deceased, that advancing near to the dead body, they ask, whether he be not willing to receive Baptism? He who is under the bed answers for him, that he desires earnestly to be baptized; and accordingly he is so instead of the dead person, thus making a piece of mummery of the business, more becoming the theater than so sacred an administration. S. Epiphanius[13] asserts, that the Marcionites received Baptism not only once, but twice or three times, and as often as they thought proper; that they had themselves baptized in the name of those among them, who died without Baptism, and that S. Paul had these Hereticks in view, while he was confirming the doctrine of the Resurrection in the first Epistle to the Corinthians.

The opinion we have been proposing has been followed by the most learned and eminent Commentators of the first Epistle to the Corinthians, such as Hilary the Deacon, or Ambrosiastes, the Author printed under the name of Anselm, Theophylact, S. Thomas, the common Gloss, Walfridus Strabo, and a very great number of the Moderns. See Bochart's Dissertation on this matter tom. 2. Geogr. p. 1026. Daniel Grade's Dissertation on the same subject. Solomon Deiling t. 2. Observat. Sacr. c. 44. and our Dissertation prefixed to S. Paul's Epistles.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Tom. I. Concil. p. 770, 773, 775.
Ambros. de Spirit. San. l. i c. 3. n. 41, 42.
Beda in Acta.
Bernard. Ep. 403. nov. edit. l. i. de Sacrament. c. 13.
Nicolaus I. Respons. ad Consult. Bulgaror. c. 104.
Hugo Victorin.
Ambros. de Mysteriis c. 4. n. 20. & in Luc. l. viii. n. 67. Et de Sacrament. l. ii. c. 5. & 7.
Basil. de Spiritu Sancto, l. x. xi. xii. distinct. 3. §. 5. Natal. Alex. Sæcul. 3. Dissert. 13. c. 4. Harduin. de Bapt. in nomine Christi.
Bellarm. de Sacram. Bap. l. i. c. 3. Estius in 4. Sentent. Notæ in novam edit. S. Ambrosi. in l. i. de Spiritu Sancto. Mabillon Notæ in Ep. 103. D. Bernardi.
Tertull. l. v. c. 10. contra Marcion.
Idem de resurrect. carnis. c. 48.
Chrysost. in 1 Cor.
Epiphan. hæref. 42. & hæref. 28. Homil. 40.

Barabbas

BARABBAS, a remarkable thief, guilty besides of sedition and murder, and prefer'd to Jesus Christ by the Jews, when Pilate asked them at the feast of the Passover which of the two they would have delivered to them, Jesus [John xviii. 40.] or Barabbas. Origen says[1], that in many Copies Barabbas was called Jesus likewise. The Armenian has the same reading, Whom will ye that I deliver unto you, Jesus Barabbas, or Jesus; who is called Christ.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Origen. in Matth. tract. 35. p. 125. B.

Barachel

BARACHEL, the Father of Elihu the Buzite. Job xxxii. 2.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Barachias (I)

I. BARACHIAS, the Father of Zachary mentioned in S. Matthew xxiii. 37. Jerusalem, thou that killest the Prophets, and stonest them which are sent unto thee: That upon you may come all the righteous blood shed upon the earth, from the blood of righteous Abel, unto the blood of Zacharias Son of Barachias, whom ye slew between the Temple and the Altar. There is great diversity of opinions concerning the person of this Zacharias the Son of Barachias. Some take him to be[1] Zechariah the Son of Jehoiada, who was killed by Joash's orders, between the Temple and the Altar. They pretend, [2 Chron. xxiv. 21.] that Jehoiada had two names, Barachias and Jehoiada, and in the Gospel of the Nazarens, cited by S. Jerom, instead of Zacharias the Son of Barachias, was put Zacharias the Son of Jehoiada.

Others[2] are of opinion, that this Barachias was the Father of Zacharias, the [Zach. i. 1.] last of the twelve small Prophets. But we have no proof of this Barachias's dying a violent death, nor that he was killed in the Temple, between the Altar of Burnt-offerings and the porch of the Temple.

Several of the Ancients thought[3], that Zacharias the Father of S. John Baptist, was the Son of Barachias, who is here spoken of; and in some old apocryphal Books it was said[4], that in effect Zachary was killed in the Temple; because he found a way to secure his Son from the fury of Herod, when he gave orders for the massacre of the Children of Bethlehem. But nothing can be more uncertain than this story.

[If. viii. 2.] There is a Zacharias the Son of Barachias (or Jeberechiah,) to whom the Prophet Isaiah addressed himself[5], to be witness to the Prophecy he was then writing, concerning the Birth of the Messiah. But we know nothing of the life and death of this Barachias and his Son Zechariah.

Lastly, several of the Moderns[6] conjecture, that this Barachias is no other than Baruch, the Father of Zechariah mentioned by Josephus in his books concerning the Jewish War[7]. Zechariah was killed between the Porch and the Altar, by the Zealots a little before the taking of Jerusalem by the Romans. We are at liberty to choose which of these opinions we please; for there is something probable in every one, and every one too has its difficulties.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Hieronym. Beda. Mald. alii in Matt. xxiii. c. ult. Natal. Alex. in Matth. xxiii.
Strab. in Matth. xxiii. Sanct. ad Zach. i. 1. Chrysost. Theophil. Euthym. in Matt. xxiii. Basil. de human.
Origen. Christ. Gener. Tertull. Sorpiac. Epiphan. alii. upon S. Matth. xxiii.
Vide Protevangellum Jacobi.
See F. Martianay Lud. de Dieu, on S. Matt. M. de Tillemont, tit. 1. of the Jud. l. v. c. 1. in Lat. & l. iv. c. 15. in Græc. p. 883. G.
Grot. Hammond, Emperors, art. 54.
Joseph. de Bello,

Barachias (II)

II. BARACHIAS, the Son of Zerubbabel. 1 Chr. iii. 20.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Barachias (III)

III. BARACHIAS, the Father of Asaph, a Levite. 1 Chr. vi. 39.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Barachias (IV)

IV. BARACHIAS, the Son of Asa, a Levite. 1 Chr. ix. 16.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Barak

BARAK, Son of Abinoam, having been chosen by God to deliver the Hebrews out of that state of bondage, under which they had been held, by Jabin King of the [Judg. iv. 4, 5, & seq.] Canaanites; refused to obey the Lord's orders, which were signified to him by Deborah the Prophetess. Go, says she, lead the Army to mount Tabor, take ten thousand men of the Tribes of Zebulun and Naphtali, and at the river Kishon I will bring Sisera the general of Jabin's Army, I will deliver him into your hands. Barak answered, if you will go with me, I will go, if not, I will not go. I will surely go, said Deborah, but the honour of the Victory will not be yours; for the Lord shall sell Sisera into the hands of a Woman. She meant either Jahel, who killed Sisera, or herself, who had the greatest share in the success of this expedition. Deborah therefore immediately departed, and marched with Barak towards Kedesh, the Capital of Naphtali; and having got together ten thousand men, they advanced towards mount Tabor.

Sisera having notice of it, gave orders for his Army to march, with nine hundred chariots of War, and incamped near the river Kishon. Then said Deborah to Barak, This is the day in which the Lord hath delivered Sisera into thine hands. At the same time Barak descended from mount Tabor, and the Lord having spread terror through Sisera's Army, Barak easily defeated it, and obtained a compleat Victory. Sisera disordered by his fears, left his chariot, that he might be swifter in his flight, and coming to the Tent of Heber the Kenite, was killed by Jael the Wife of Heber, as shall be more particularly related in another place. Barak in some little time after came to Jael's Tent, who shewed him the body of Sisera dead upon the place. Thus was Israel delivered from the servitude of Jabin King of Hazor. Barak and Deborah hereupon composed an hymn of thanksgiving to the Lord, and the land continued in [Judg. v.] peace for forty years, from the year of the World 2719 to 2759, before J.C. 1241, before the vulgar Æra 1245.

Some have been of opinion[1], that Barak was the Son of Deborah: others, that he was her Father; others again, that he was her Husband, and that Barak and Lapidoth are the same persons[2]. But S. Jerom maintains, that it is a great argument of ignorance to say, that Deborah was a Widow, and that Barak was her Son. It seems certain by the Text, that Deborah was married to Lapidoth, and that Barak had no relation to her.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ambros. lib. de Viduit. c. 8.
Rab. David. Hugo & S. Victore, alii plures.

Barasa

BARASA, the same in all probability as Bazora or Bozra, the Capital of the Eastern part of Edom. See Bozra.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Barbarians

BARBARIANS. This word is to be met with but once in the Latin translation of the sacred Books written in Hebrew, and this is in Psalm cxiii. 1. *In exitu Israel de Egypto, dom*ûs Jacob de populo barbaro. The word Loez which is rendred Barbarian[1] in the Hebrew sense of it, signifies a Stranger, who knows neither the holy language, nor the law of God. Barbarians, according to the notion which the Greeks had of them, were they who were not Greeks, or were not governed by laws like the Greeks; thus the Persians, Egyptians, Hebrews, Arabians, Gauls, Germans, and even the Latins were in their sense Barbarians. S. Paul, for example, comprehends all mankind under the names [Rom. i. 14.] of Greeks and Barbarians. I am debtor both to the Greeks and to the Barbarians, to the wise and to the unwise. S. Luke calls the [Acts. xxviii. 2, 4.] inhabitants of the isle of Malta, Barbarians, S. Paul in his Epistle to the Colossians uses the terms Barbarian and Scythian, as if they were almost of the same signification: [1 Cor. xix. 1] and in the first Epistle to the Corinthians he says, that if he who speaks a strange language in an Assembly be not understood by those to whom he is discoursing, with respect to them he will be a Barbarian; and reciprocally, if he understand not those who speak to him they to him will be Barbarians. Barbarian therefore is used for every stranger, who does not speak our language, whether we are Greeks, Latins, or Hebrews, &c.

People do not agree in their opinions concerning the original of the word Barbarian: some derive it from Bar, which in Arabic signifies Desart. Others suppose it to come from the Chaldee adverb Bara, without: others from Barbar, which signifies to murmur. Others again will have it, that this word comes originally from a sound which signifies nothing, and that the Greeks imitating in the way of raillery the language of Strangers, said Barbar, from whence they formed Barbaros, or Barbarizein. The Council of Chalcedon calls the Bishops, whose Sees lay without the limits of the Roman Empire, Barbarians. We for many ages have termed that part of Africk, which is situated upon the Mediterranean, with E gypt to the East, the Bildalgerid and mount Atlas to the South, the Ocean to the West, and the Mediterranean to the North, Barbary. It is thought to be so called, because part of this country was not subject to the Roman Empire; now the Romans, as has been observed, named those Barbarians who were not within their Dominions.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

לעזLohez 70. Βάρβαρος.

Bar-Chocheba

BAR-CHOCHEBA, or Chochebas, or Chochibus a famous Impostor. It is said that he assumed the name of Cochebar or Bar- Cochebar, that is to say, Son of the Star, by reason of these words of Balaam, which he applied to himself, pretending to be the Messiah[1], There shall come a Star out of Jacob, and a Scepter shall rise out of Israel. Others are of opinion that he derived his name from the town of Cochaba, situated beyond Jordan, in the neighbourhood of Astaroth-Carnaïm, and beyond Adrac or Edrai[2]. Scaliger observes upon the authority of the Rabbins, that his true name was Gazeb or Casseb, Liar; or Bar-Cosebah, the Son of Lies[3]; but being ashamed of this name he changed it into that of Bar- Cochebar, Son of the Star. He ingaged the Jews in a revolt under the reign of Adrian. The famous Jew Akiba[4] supported him, and maintained that he was the Messiah. Spartian[5] says, that the motive which induced the Jews to rebel at this time, was an order, forbidding them to be circumcised. It is said that Bar-Chochebar, to impose upon the Jews, put kindled straw into his mouth, and made a shew of vomiting flame[6]. He fortified himself in abundance of places, and massacred an infinite number of men. His rage was principally set against the Christians[7], of whom he destroyed great multitudes.

The Emperor Adrian sent Julius Severus against him and his party, who attacked them separately, and took them in several places; at last he shut them up in Bether[8]. The Siege of this place was long and the defence which the Jews made, very obstinate. At last the town was taken, and soon after the War was finished. Bar-chochebar perished in it[9], and the multitude of the Jews, who were put to death and sold during this War and after it, is almost innumerable[10]. Abundance of them was sold at the fair of Terebinthus; and they who were not put off at this market, were exposed to sale at Gaza; and such of them as they could not get rid of at Gaza, they carried into Egypt, where they perished by shipwreck, or famine, or by the hands of the Heathens. After this Adrian published an Edict, forbidding the Jews on pain of death to go to Jerusalem[11], and Guards were placed purposely at the gates to prevent their entring[12]. The rebellion of the Jews under Bar-chochebas happened in the 17 and 18th years of Adrian, in the year of J. C. 178, 179.

The Jews say, there were two Impostors in their nation of this name[13], the Grand-father and Grand-son. That Cacheba or Coziba I. was elected King by the Jews two and fifty years after the destruction of the first Temple, and died at Bether, a City in the neighbourhood of Jerusalem, and the Capital of his Empire. His Son succeeded him, after whom reigned his Grand-son Romulus, called Coziba, This last was he whom the Jews acknowledged for the Messiah. The Emperor Adrian being inform'd of Coziba's revolt, and the insurrection of the Jews, came with an Army into Judæa, took Bether, and destroyed a great number of the Jews in the year 73 from the destruction of the Temple. Others say Coziba was killed by his own people in the City of Bether, because he had not that particular character of the Messiah, which consisted in discerning by the smell if any man were criminal. It is to no purpose to confute facts so ill concerted, and so visibly fabulous.

Bar-chochebas gathered a numerous Army, and committed very great disorders in Judæa. His rage was bent chiefly against the Christians, many of whom it is said, were destroyed by his direction: others of them in great numbers he forced into Apostacy, obliging them, as the Talmudists mention, to be circumcised again, and return to Judaism, which they had before forsaken. Tinnius Rufus was the first who opposed him, afterwards the Emperor sent Julius Severus against him, who took the City of Bether, and put him to death. The Jews say, that Adrian, to whom his head was brought, had the curiosity to see his body; but when they were going to take it up, a Serpent was found about his neck, which terrified the bearers; and this Prince hereupon acknowledged that God alone could kill such a man.

Akiba's Scholars, who had defended the City, were tied together with their Books, and thrown into the fire. We are told farther, that the massacre was so great, that more Jews perished in this War than came out of Egypt. The Skulls of three hundred Children were found upon one stone only: the streams of blood were so large, that they carried away stones of four pound weight to the Sea, which was four miles distant from it. Lastly, the inhabitants of these places did not dung their lands for seven years after, they being sufficiently manured with dead bodies. In the Fast celebrated on the 18th of the month Ab, which answers to our July and August, they call Adrian a second Nebuchadnezzar, and pray to God to remember this cruel Prince, who destroyed 480 Synagogues. This is part of what the Jews tell us relating to Bar-chochebas.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Numb. xxiv. 17. דרך כוכב מיעקוב

Vide Epiphan. l. i. adverf. hæres. p. 126. & 142.

בר כיבה

Translators' note. See an account of this eminent Doctor in Rabbi Ganz's Tzemach David, p. 99. The Jews say, he had 25000 Disciples; that God revealed such things to him as he had concealed from Moses; that a whole Volume was not sufficient to contain his remarkable actions and expressions. לאיכיל ספר להגיד דבריוZachutus in Juchasin, p. 62.

Spartian. in Adriano. c. 14.

Hieronym, Apolog. & advers. Rufin.

Justin. Martyr. Apolog. ad Anton. pium. who tore off his skin with iron pincers, and that he died thus miserably. & in Zach. xi. Vide & Chronic. Alex. p. 596.

Translators' note. The Jews call it the House of Spies ביתתרBethar, because after the destruction of Jerusalem Centinels were placed there to observe those who went to Jerusalem.

The Jews say he fell into the hands of the Romans; who tore off his skin with iron pincers, and that he died thus miserably.

Hieronym. in Jerem. xxxi.

Hieronym. in Isai. vi. Euseb. l. iv. c. 6. Hist. Eccles.

Translators' note. The wretched condition of the Jews after the desolation of their Country is represented by Juvenal, who had opportunities of observing it, both in Italy and Egypt: He tells us to what miser- able circumstances they were reduced. Cophino Fænoque relicto, Arcanam Judæa tremens mendicat in aurem, Interpres Legum Solymarum, at magna Sacerdos Arboris ac summi fida Internucia Cœli. Implet & illa manum, sed parcius Ære minuto, Qualiacunque voles Judæi somnia vendunt.——Juven. Sat. 6. verf. 544. & seq.

Basnage Hist. des Juifs. t. ii. p. 123, 124.

Bar-Jesus

[Acts xiii. 6.] BAR-JESUS, or according to some copies, Bar-jéu, was a Jewish Magician living in the isle of Crete. S. Luke calls him Elymas, which in Arabick signifies, a Sorcerer. He was with the Pro-consul Sergius Paulus, who was a wise and prudent man. The Pro-consul sending for Paul and Barnabas, desired to hear the word of God. But Bar-Jesus resisted them, and endeavoured to hinder the Pro-consul from imbracing Christianity. Whereupon Paul filled with the Holy Ghost, and looking stedfastly on this man, said, O full of all subtilty and all mischief, thou child of the Devil, thou enemy of all righteousness, wilt thou not cease to pervert the ways of the Lord? And now, behold, the hand of the Lord is upon thee, and thou shalt be blind not seeing the Sun for a season. Immediately he was struck blind, and he went about seeking some to lead him by the hand. The Pro-consul, who was an Eye-witness of this miracle, was converted by it. Origen[1], and S. Chrysostom[2], think that Elymas or Bar-Jesus was converted likewise, and that S. Paul restored his sight.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Origen. in Exod. edit. Huet. p. 22, 23.
Chrysost. in Acta homil. 28. Isidor. Grot. alii.

Bar-Jona

[Matt. xvi. 17.] BAR-JONA, or Son of Jonah, or Son of a dove: This is the firname which our Saviour sometimes gives S. Peter. There are persons, who think that Bar-Jona is put for Bar-Johanna, the Son of John[1].

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Hieronym. in Matth. xvi.

Baris

BARIS. This was the name of the Palace begun by John Hircanus upon the mountain of the Temple, which was afterwards made use of for the abode of the Asmonæan Princes[1]. Herod the Great perfected it, and made a Citadel of it, which he called Antonia, in honour of his friend and protector Mark Antony. This building was square, situated upon a steep rock, fifty cubits high from the side of the valley which looked towards the City of Jerusalem; but it was upon a level with the Temple. The whole edifice was two furlongs about, that is to say, sixty three paces and something more in every front. In this palace the pontifical ornaments of the High-Priest were kept, and lockt up after they had been worn upon great festival days.

The Septuagint use the name Baris to denote a palace, a great house closed on all sides, in the form of a Tower[2]. This word is derived from the Chaldee, Berah, which we often meet with in the same sense, in the Hebrew books written after the Captivity of Babylon, such as Daniel, Esdras, Nehemiah, Esther. S. Jerom says, it is a term peculiar to Palestine, for signifying what we have just now mentioned. The plural number of Baris is Bareis, which is something ambiguous, because it may come from Barus which signifies heavy. Hence some of the Latins, in their interpretation of the xliv. Psalm, ver. 10. where we read à domibus eburneis, read à gravibus eburneis, which has no sense, and has produced another fault; for others attempting to correct these words have read à gradibus eburneis, from steps of ivory, which have no relation to the passage in the Psalm. Thus in Psalm xlvii. 14. where we read distribuite domos ejus, others deceived by the same ambiguity of the term Bareis, have read Graves ejus; and others desiring to outdo the rest, and spin the matter finer, distribuite gradus ejus.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Joseph. Antiq. l. xviii. c. 6. & de Bello, l. vi. c. 15.
Hyeron. in Jerem. xvi. in Osee ix. in Ps. xliv. ad principium. Usque hodie domus ex omni parte conclusæ, & in modum ædificatæ turrium Βαρεις appellantur.

Barley

BARLEY. In Palestine Barley was sown in Autumn and reaped in Spring, that is to say, at the Feast of the Passover. The Rabbins sometimes call Barley the food of Beasts, because in reality they fed their cattle [1 Kings iv. 28.] with it; in Homer and others of the Ancients we find Barley always given to horses, and at the trial of women under the accusation of adultery, the offering was of Barley-meal, by reason of the bestial and infamous crime which they stood charged with, and upon this Barley-meal they neither poured oil nor put frankincense because it was a Sacrifice of Jealousy, as Moses says. Herodotus tells us, that the Egyptians eat neither Wheat nor Barley, nor any thing made with them. They had a particular sort of Corn, which was their sustenance.

The Hebrews frequently used Barley-bread, as we see by several passages of Scripture. For example, David's friends brought to him in his [2 Sam. xvii. 28.] flight, wheat, barley, flour, pease, beans, and pulse. Solomon sent wheat, barley, wine and oil to the servants whom King Hiram had supplied him with, in order to carry on works at Libanus. And in the Gospel Jesus Christ and [2 Chr. ii. 15. John vi. 9.] his Apostles had no other provision besides five Barley-loaves. Elijah had a present made him of twenty Barley-loaves, and Corn in the husk, which a certain man brought to him as first [2 King iv. 42.] fruits.

Moses remarks, that when the hail fell in Egypt, the flax and the barley were bruised and destroyed, because the flax was at its full growth, and the barley began to form its green [Gen. ix. 31.] ears; but the wheat and more backward grain were not damaged, because they were as yet only in the blade, and the hail bruised the young shoots which produce the Ears. All this happened some days before the departure of the Israelites out of Egypt, or before the Passover. In Egypt the Barley-harvest does not begin till towards the end of April[1].

[Acts i. 23. Ezek. xiii. 19. Hosea iii. 2.] Barley is sometimes used to signify some mean thing of low price. Ezekiel complains of the false Prophets who seduced the people of the Lord, and made vain promises to them for a handful of Barley, and a morsel of Bread. The Prophet Hosea says, that he bought his Wife for fifteen pieces of Silver, and an Omer and an half of Barley.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Plin. l. xviii. c. 18. Leo. Afer. Cassian. collat. xv. c. 4, &c.

Barnabas

[About the year of J.C. 42. Acts ix. 22, 24.] BARNABAS, a Disciple of Jesus Christ[1], and S. Paul's companion in apostolical labours. He was a native of the Isle of Cyprus, and of the Tribe of Levi. His name signifies the Son of Consolation or Prophecy. He had farther the name of Joseph or Joses; and some Greek Copies instead of Barnabas call him Barsabas, who drew lots with S. Matthias to fill the place, which Judas had in the Apostolical College. It is believed that he renounced all his temporal fortune, sold what he had, and laid the price of it at the Apostles feet. It is said likewise, that he was brought up with S. Paul at the feet of Gamaliel. When the Apostle came to Jerusalem three years after his Conversion, S. Barnabas introduced him to the other Apostles, and made him acquainted with them. [27.] — ix. 26,

About the year 37 of [Æra] the vulgar

[v. 15.] [— xii. 1, 2, 3, &c.] Five years after, the church of Jerusalem understanding the progress, which the Gospel made at Antioch, sent S. Barnabas thither, who beheld with great joy the wonders, which the Grace of God had wrought there. He exhorted the faithful to persevere in the service of the Lord, and some time after went to Tarsus, to enquire after S. Paul, and bring him to Antioch. In this City they dwelt together for two years, where they converted great numbers, and there the Disciples began first to be called Christians. These two Saints left Antioch in the year of J. C. 44 to convey the Alms which were sent by the believers of this Church to that of Jerusalem. After their return they brought with them John Mark, Barnabas's Cousin.

[— xiii. 50, 51, 52. — xiv.] While they were in this City, the Holy Ghost ordained, that they should be separated and consecrated to him, in order to be imployed in those offices, for which he had appointed them. After prayer therefore and fasting they received imposition of hands, and departed from Antioch to go to Seleucia. From thence they passed into the Isle of Cyprus, and being at Salamis, they there preached the Gospel, and converted Paulus Sergius the Pro-consul. There S. Paul struck Bar-Jesus the Sorcerer with blindness, as we have before observed in the Article relating to him. From Salamis they went to Paphos, where they imbarked for Pamphilia. In the mean while John Mark, Barnabas's Cousin separated from them, and returned to Jerusalem.

They preached at Perga in Pamphylia without much success, by reason of the obstinacy and malice of the Jews. They left this place, shaking off the dust of their feet against them, and came to Iconium, where they made many converts. But the Jews, on whom no impression could be made, stirr'd up a sedition against them, and obliged them to retire to Derbe and Lystra in Lycaonia. Here S. Paul having cured one Æneas, who had been lame from his birth, the people of Lystra took them to be Gods, and would have offered Sacrifices to them, calling Barnabas Jupiter, and Paul Mercury. The two Apostles hereupon tearing their cloaths, and running into the midst of the crowd, with with a great deal of difficulty hindered them from sacrificing.

In some little time after, several Jews came to Lystra from Antioch in Pisidia and Iconium, and having informed those of Lystra who Paul and Barnabas were, and representing them as disturbers of the publick peace, they dragg'd Paul out of the City and stoned him, and having left him there for dead, the Disciples took [Acts xv.] him up, and carried back into the City. The next day he departed with Barnabas, and went to Derbe. At length having visited once more all the Cities through which they had passed, and where they had preached the Gospel, they returned to Antioch in Syria, from whence they set out.

In the year of J. C. 51. S. Barnabas was sent with S. Paul from Antioch to Jerusalem, upon the occasion of some disputes, which had arisen concerning the observation of the legal Ceremonies, to which the Jews had an inclination to subject the Gentile Converts. Paul and Barnabas were present in the Council of Jerusalem, where they were acknowledged for Apostles of the Gentiles, and the poor of Judæa were recommended to their care. They returned immediately to Antioch, where S. Peter arriving soon after, and being prevailed with to authorize in some sort the observation of the Mosaick Ceremonies by his example, Barnabas too was ingaged to use the like dissimulation. But S. Paul reproved S. Peter with great freedom, insomuch that he and Barnabas were made sensible of their mistake, and others who in this particular had followed them.

S. Paul having afterwards determined to visit these Churches which he had founded in the Isle of Cyprus, and in Asia Minor, Barnabas desired John, whose firname was Mark, to bear them company in this journey, as he had done in the former. But S. Paul would by no means consent to this, because Mark had deserted them the first time; whereupon the two Apostles separated. Paul took his way towards Asia, and Barnabas with Mark went to Cyprus. This is all that we know certainly concerning Barnabas; for we can scarce rely upon the supposed Acts which go under the name of Mark, nor upon his life written by a Monk of Alexandria. It is said, that he was stoned to death at Salamis by the Jews of Cyprus; and so much is true, that his body was discovered in this Island in the reign of the Emperor Zeno[2]. His grave being opened, his body was found in it; and upon his breast the Gospel of S. Matthew, written in Greek with his own hand. This discovery was made about the year of J. C. 488. The Greeks and Latins observe his Festival upon the 11th of June.

We have an Epistle[3] under the name of Barnabas which has been cited by several of the Ancients[4], and by some of them has been ranked among the canonical Scriptures. And it is certainly very inconvenient to own it for S. Barnabas's without believing likewise that it is Canonical. But as the Church never has received it as an inspired Book, we have good reason to question whether it be the genuine work of this Apostle. It is certainly very ancient, and was written in the times of the Apostles. The principal design of it is to prove, that the Law is abolished by the Gospel, that the legal Ceremonies are useless, and that the Incarnation and Death of Jesus Christ were necessary. Some impostors have composed a spurious Gospel under the name of Barnabas, which was condemned by Pope Gelasius.

The modern Greeks[5] tell us of one Aristobulus, Brother, as they call him, to S. Barnabas, of whom they relate many wonders. [Rom. xvi. 10.] They pretend that S. Paul speaks of him to the Romans, Salute them which are of Aristobulus's houshold. But we have nothing very certain concerning this Aristobulus, who was not known to the Ancients as the Brother of Barnabas.

Some have reputed S. Barnabas to be the Author of a spurious Gospel, mentioned by Pope Gelasius in his Decree against apocryphal Books. This work is lost, and we know of no manuscript or printed copy of it: but the Turks have maliciously composed a counterfeit Gospel, under the name of S. Barnabas[6], wherein they have crowded in abundance of things injurious to Jesus Christ, and honourable to their false Prophet. The manuscript of this work is in Prince Eugene's Library. It was composed in Arabick, as M. de la Crose thinks, in the reign of the Emperor Frederick II. who wore the Imperial Crown from the year 1211 to 1245, and was afterwards translated into Italian about the middle of the fifteenth Century: it is to be met with only in this last language, and was never printed; nay some believe, that Prince Eugene's is the only Manuscript of it in being.

Barnabas, who says he was particularly commissioned to write it, sets himself out there for an Apostle, who lived in great familiarity with Jesus Christ, and the Blessed Virgin, better instructed than S. Paul in the merit of Circumcision, and the use which should be made of such meats as were allowed or prohibited the Faithful: there we find, that the infernal torments of the Mahometans will not be eternal; Jesus Christ is called no more than plainly a Prophet, is said not to have been crucified crucified, but that having been transported to the third Heaven, Judas suffered in his stead; that the very Virgin Mary and the Apostles believed Jesus to have been nailed upon the Cross, so much he resembled Judas; that Jesus had obtain'd permission to come and comfort his Mother and his Apostles; that God to punish him for the liberty which men had taken, in giving him the name of God has suffered him, and still will suffer him to the end of the world to be the Sport of mankind, who continue persuaded that it was he who died upon the Cross. Such is the Work whereof the Mahometans will have this holy Disciple to be the Author, a person doubtless very different from him who was proscribed by Gelasius.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Clem. Alex. Strom. l. 2 Euseb. Hist. Eccl. l. i. c. 12. Epiphan. hæres. 20. c. 4.

Theod. Lector. l. ii, p. 557.

Translators' note. This Epistle which goes under the name of Barnabas, is stuffed with allegorical and mystical interpretations of Scripture. The expression of God to our first Par- ents, Increase and multiply, the Author understands as spoken of the Christian Church and Progress of the Gospel. He has much of that Cabbalistical Spirit which appeared with great perfection in many of the Fathers.

Vide Hieronym. de Viris illustr. Euseb. l. iii. c. 25. Clem. Alex. Origen.

Doroth. in Synopf. Menæ p. 392.

See M. de la Monoy's Notes upon the Menagiana, l. iv. Ed. Amsterd. 1716. p. 321. & Fabricius Apocryph. N. T. tom 2. p. 373, &c.

Bar-Panther

BAR-PANTHER, or the Son of Panther. S. John Damascenus says, that Levi, who was descended from David, by his Son Nathan, had two Sons, Melchi and Panther. Panther begat Bar-Panther, and from Bar-Panther[1] came Joachim the Virgin's Father. The Jews in the scandalous lives which they have published of our Saviour, give it out that he was begotten in the act of Adultery, committed between Panther and his Mother Mary. The name of Panther is to be met with in Origen[2], and the Talmud[3], which shews the antiquity of those calumnies and fables, which the Jews invented concerning Jesus Christ. As to the genealogical System of Johannes Damascenus, it is not to be maintained, it being directly contrary to the Gospel, which, between Levi and the Holy Virgin places Eli only, who probably is the same as Joachim.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Translators' note. Whatever we may think of Celsus, Epiphanius is certainly inexcus- able, who assures us, that Joseph was the Son of Jacob sirnamed Panther. Rabanus Maurus speaks of Panther and Bar-Panther. And the learned Grotius makes use of this Tradition in explaining his account of the Virgin Mary's Genealogy. See Grot. in Luc. c. iii. v. 23.

Origen. contra Celsum, l.i. p. 25.

Talmud. Tract. Sanhedrin.

Bars

BARS. This word signifies properly the Bars of Gates, belonging both to private houses and cities; is is sometimes taken for all sorts of obstacles and defences. God says, for example, that he has placed Doors and Bars to the Sea, to prevent its spreading over the Earth. In another place he [Job xxxviii.] says, that he will break the Bars of Egypt, its Fortresses, its Barriers. He promises Cyrus that he will go before him, and will in his presence break in pieces the Gates of brass, and the Bars of iron; that is to say, he will make him master of the strong Cities. And Amos i. 5. I will break the Bars of Damascus, Jonah xi. 7. describing the condition he was in, while he was swallowed up by the large Fish, says, The Earth with her Bars were about him, Vectes terræ concluserunt me, that is to say, that he was enclosed on every side in the deep, as in a prison made fast with strong Bars.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Barsabas (I)

I. BARSABAS. Joseph Barsabas, sirnamed the Just was one of the first Disciples [Acts i. 21, 22, &c.] of Jesus Christ[1], and probably one of the seventy. After the Ascension of our Saviour, while the Apostles were together, expecting the descent of the Holy Ghost according to their Master's promise, S. Peter proposed to the Assembly to fill the place of Judas the traitor, by choosing one of those Disciples who had been all along eye-witnesses of our Saviour's actions from the time, when he first began to preach. Two persons were therefore offered Barsabas, sirnamed Justus, and Matthias; and lots being drawn, it was determined for Matthias. Papias[2] informs us that Barsabas having drunk poison, the Grace of Jesus Christ prevented the ill effects of it. We know nothing particularly of his life. The Martyrologists fix his Festival to the 20th of July, and tell us, that after he had suffered much for the Gospel, he died in Judæa, and made a very glorious end.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Vide Eufeb. l. i. c. 12. ex Clem. Alex. Beda in Acta. Epiphan. de Christo, c. 4.

Apud Eufeb. l. iii. c. 39.

Barsabas (II)

II. BARSABAS. Judas, one of the principal Disciples, mentioned in the Acts of the Apostles, was sirnamed Barsabas; Judas sirnamed Barsabas and Silas, chief men among the Brethren. He and some others were sent by the Apostles with Paul and Barnabas to Antioch, and carried a Letter with them from the Apostles, signifying what the Council of Jerusalem had decreed. When they came to Antioch, they convened the faithful and presented this Letter to them: It was read, and the whole Assembly received great joy and comfort from it. Judas and Silas staid here for some time, instructing and confirming the Brethren, after which Judas and Barsabas returned to Jerusalem. This is all we know of Barsabas.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Bartholomew

BARTHOLOMEW, or Bartholomaios, that is to say, the Son of Ptolemy was of Galilee, as well as the other [Acts i. 13, xi. 7.] Apostles. But where particularly he was born we cannot tell. The Gospel says very little of his person, nor have we any certain history of his life or death. It is generally believed, that he preached the Gospel in the Indies[1], and we are assured, that he carried thither the Gospel of S. Matthew written in Hebrew, and that S. Patenus found it there an hundred years after[2]. We are told likewise, that he preached in Arabia Felix, and Persia, which does not at all contradict their accounts, who assert that he preached in the Indies; for he might have passed through this Country, in order to penetrate farther into India; perhaps these nations may have been un derstood as included in the name of the Indies.

We know not with any certainty either the time, place or manner of his death. The modern Greeks and Latins agree in saying, that he died in the City of Albana or Albanopolis, which probably is Albana in Albania, upon the Caspian Sea, and confines of Armenia. This Country has sometimes been described under the name of the Indies. It is believed that S. Bartholomew was flea'd alive by Astyages, Brother to Polemon King of Armenia, out of hatred to the Christian Religion, which the Apostle had prevailed with Polemon to embrace. But these facts are very uncertain.

Many are of opinion[3], that Nathanaël and Bartholomew are the same person. This conjecture is founded 1° upon this, that no notice is any where taken of Bartholomew's Vocation, unless his and that of Nathanaël be the same. 2° The Evangelists who speak of Bartholomew, say nothing of Nathanaël, and S. John who speaks of Nathanaël, says nothing of Bartholomew. 3° The name of Bartholomew is not a proper name; it signifies the Son of Ptolemy, besides which he might bear the name of Nathanaël. 4° S. John seems to rank Nathanaël with the Apostles, when he says, that Peter and Thomas the two Sons of Zebedee, Nathanaël, and two other Disciples, being gone a fishing, Jesus shewed himself to them. See our Comment on S. Matthew. Ch. x. p. 218.

There is a spurious Gospel whereof S. Bartholomew is said to have been the Author, which Pope Gelasius placed among the apocryphal Writings. S. Bernard and Abbot Rupert[4] were of opinion, that he was the bridegroom at the marriage of Cana.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Eufeb. l.v. c. 10.
Eufeb l.v. c. 11 p. 175. Hieronym. de Viris illustrib. c. 36.
Rupert. in Joan. i. Jansen. Cornel. à Lapide. Hamm. in Joan. Tostat. in Matth. x. Bern. Ser. de S. Joan.
Rupert. in Joan. i.

Bar-Timæus

BAR-TIMÆUS, or the Son of Timæus, a blind man of Jericho, who sat near the publick road, when our Saviour passed that way, on his journey to Jerusalem. S. Mark [Mark x. 46—52.] says, that Jesus coming out of Jericho with his Disciples, attended by a great crowd of people, a blind man called Bar-Timæus sat by the way side, begging: And when he heard that it was Jesus of Nazareth, he began to cry out and say, Jesus, thou Son of David, have mercy on me. Then Jesus stood still and commanded him to be called. Bar-Timæus immediately came. Jesus said unto him, What wilt thou that I shall do unto thee? the blind man answered, Lord, that I may receive my sight. Jesus said unto him, Go thy way, thy Faith hath made thee whole, and immediately he received his sight, and followed him.

[Matt. xx. 30.] But S. Matthew relating the same story says; that two blind men sitting by the way side, and understanding that Jesus was passing by that way, began to cry out, Have mercy on us, O Lord, thou Son of David. Whereupon Jesus called them, and asked them what they would have: they answered, That our Eyes may be opened. Jesus moved with compassion touched their Eyes, and they recovered instantly their sight, and followed him. S. Mark thought fit to set down Bar-Timæus only, because he was more known, or expressed more faith and zeal, that he spoke to Jesus Christ, and distinguished himself most on this occasion. The cure of another blind man mentioned in S. Luke xxiii. 35 — 43. is different from this. That in S. Luke happened, when Jesus was entring into Jericho, the other the next day, as he was going out.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Baruch

[Jerem. li. 61.] BARUCH, the Son of Neriah, and Grandson to Maaseiah, was of an illustrious birth and of the tribe of Judah. Seraiah his Brother had a considerable imployment in the Court of King Zedekiah. Baruch kept close to the person of Jeremiah the Prophet, and was his most faithful Disciple. He served him as long as he lived as his Secretary, and never left him till his death. In the reign of Jehoiakim King of Judah, [Jerem. xxxvi. 1, 2, 3, &c. In the Year of the World 3898, before J. C. 601, before the vulgar Æra 605.] while Jeremiah was in prison, this Prophet received orders from the Lord to set down in writing all the Prophecies which he had published till that time. He sent for Baruch therefore, and dictated them by heart to him. Some time after, he sent him with directions to read them to the people, who were then assembled in the Temple.

But Michaiah the Son of Gemariah having heard them read, thought himself obliged to give notice of them to the King's [In the Year of the World 3899, before J. C. 601, before the vulgar Æra 605.] Counsellors, who were then together in the Palace. They commanded Baruch to be sent for, and obliged him to repeat to them what he had read publickly in the Temple. He did, and they, when they had heard him, expressed great surprize, and told him, that they could by no means avoid informing the King of these things which he had read to them. They then asked him, how he had written all these particulars. Baruch said, Jeremiah had dictated them by rote to him, with the same ease as any one would peruse them in a book. The King's Counsellors hereupon said, Go, hide thee, thou and Jeremiah, and let no man know where ye be. They took the book which had been written by Baruch, and deposited it in the chambers of Elishamah the Scribe.

After this, they waited on the King, and told him what had passed. The King sent Jehudi to bring the book; and having brought brought it to Jehoiakim, this Prince commanded it to be read in his presence, and in the presence of those great men who stood about him: when Jehudi had read four or five pages of it, the King took the book, cut it with the Secretary's pen-knife, and threw it into the fire, which was burning before him. At the same time he ordered some of his people to seize on Baruch and Jeremiah; but as God would have it they were not to be found.

God afterwards commanded Jeremiah once more to set down his prophecies in writing. Baruch wrote them as he repeated them to him, and the Prophet added several others which were not inserted in the former book. Baruch's constant adherence to Jeremiah drew upon him several persecutions, and a great deal of bad treatment. One day he seemed to be mightily discouraged, and complained bitterly of the evils which he suffered; but God encouraged [Jerem. xlv. 2, 3. In the year of the World 3409, before J. C. 591. before the vulgar Æra 595. Jer. l. li.] him by the mouth of Jeremiah, and from that time he continued more firm and undisturbed. In the fourth year of Zedekiah, Baruch went to Babylon with his Brother Seraiah, and carried a long Letter from Jeremiah, wherein the Prophet foretold the misfortunes which should befal Babylon, and promised the Captives, that they should one day be set at liberty. Baruch executed the Prophet's orders, read Jeremiah's Letter to King Jehoiachim and other Captives, after which he threw it into the Euphrates, as the Prophet had commanded him.

The Captives upon hearing Jeremiah's Letter read, were touched with compunction, and gave Baruch some money, to offer therewith Sacrifices to the Lord in his Temple at Jerusalem. They wrote likewise a long Letter to their Brethren of Jerusalem, in all probability by Baruch's hand, which is to be found in the first five chapters of the book which bears his name. After his return to Jerusalem he continued still his constant attendance on Jeremiah; and when Jerusalem was besieged by Nebuchadnezzar, Jeremiah being put into prison, Baruch was confined there too; and after the surrender, Nabuzaradan shewed him great favour, set him at liberty, and permitted him to go where he pleased with Jeremiah[1].

The remains of the People who had been left behind in the country, under the conduct of Gedaliah, having taken a resolution to go into Egypt, as Jeremiah opposed this journey, the people laid the blame on Baruch, and pretended, that he had ingaged the Prophet to declare against [Jerem. xliii. 1, 2, 4, &c.] it, and had diverted him from this design. At last Jeremiah and Baruch being obliged to follow the people into Egypt, Jeremiah died there, and Baruch retired to Babylon, where the Rabbins say he died, in the twelfth year of the Captivity. This is all that we know with certainty concerning Baruch.

As to the Book of Baruch, which is generally placed with that of Jeremiah, at the end of this Prophet's writings, we have it not in Hebrew, but in Greek only. The Jews, among whom it is a standing rule to receive no books into thir Canon, but what are written in their language, excluded that of Baruch. S. Jerom speaks of this work in a manner, which shews, that he had not the same esteem for this as for other canonical Books of Scripture. He says[2], he did not think proper to make a Comment on the Book of Baruch, which in the edition of the Septuagint is join'd with Jeremiah: because it was not read among the Hebrews, and contains an Epistle which falsly bears the name of Jeremiah. He says in another place[3], that he did not translate it, as he had done Jeremiah, because it was not in Hebrew, and the Jews did not receive it in their Canon. We do not find Baruch in the ancient catalogues of the Scriptures cited in the Fathers and Councils. The Protestant, and even some Catholick Writers[4], do not reckon it among the canonical Books.

But the answer made to these objections is, that the example of the Jews, who do not receive Baruch into their Canon, is not a reason for our rejecting this Book. There are other Books which by them are not admitted as canonical, which notwithstanding are received by us as such. The ancient catalogues of the Church do not particularly mention it, because they comprehended it under the name of Jeremiah. The Councils of Florence and Trent have inserted it by name into the Canon, and the old Fathers, such as Irenæus, Cyprian, Clemens of Alexandria, Eusebius, Ambrose, Julius Firmicus, Austin, Basil, Chrysostom, Epiphanius, and others who came after, have cited this Book, as a part of holy Scripture; but very frequently they quote it under the name of Jeremiah, as the Church does at this day, whenever it makes use of the writings of Baruch in its office. The Reader may see our Preface upon Baruch, where we treat on these questions more at large.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Joseph. Antiq. l. x. c. 11.
Hieronym. Præf. in Exposit. Jerem.
Idem Præfat. in Versionem Jerem.
Driedo Descript. & Dogmat. Eccles. l. i. cap. ult. Lyran. Dionys. Carthus.

Baruth

BARUTH, otherwise Berytus. See Berytus.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Barzaphernes

BARZAPHERNES, Commander in chief of the several Armies belonging to Pacorus King of Parthia. Barzaphernes being sent into Palestine, to the assistance of Antigonus King of the Jews against Hircanus, and Herod; he took Hircanus prisoner, re-established Antigonus at Jerusalem, and obliged Herod to fly. As may be seen more at large in the Articles of Antigonus, and Hircanus, and in Josephus, Antiq. l. xiv. c. 25.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Barzillai (I)

[In the year of the World 3964, before J. C. 36. before the vulg. Æra 40. 2 Sam. xvii. 27, 28. 2 Sam. xix. 33, 34, &c.] I. BARZILLAI, a native of Rogelim in the land of Gilead. He was an old friend to David, and assisted him in his misfortunes, when he was forced from Jerusalem by Absalom. He came to meet this Prince at Mahanaim beyond Jordan, and offered him all manner of refreshments. After the defeat of Absalom, when David returned to Jerusalem, Barzillai attended him as far as Jordan; and David inviting him to Court, to pass the rest of his days there in repose, Barzillai answered him, How long have I to live that I should go up with the King to Jerusalem? I am this day fourscore years old; and can I discern between good and evil? my senses are no longer in a condition to distinguish sweet from bitter, nor to take pleasure in eating or drinking, in the sound of instruments, or the voices of musicians. Wherefore then should thy servant be a burden unto my Lord the King? Thy servant will go a little way over Jordan with the King, then I will beg permission to return, that I may die in mine own City, and be buried, by the grave of my Father and my Mother. But behold my Son, thy servant Chimham, he will have the honour to accompany my Lord the King, who may do to him what shall seem good unto him. The King answered, Let Chimham come, and I will grant whatever you shall ask of me. After therefore that the King and all the people had passed over Jordan, David embraced Barzillai, wished him all sorts of blessings; and Barzillai returned into his own country. This fell out in the year of the world 2981, before J. C. 1019, before the vulgar Æra 1022.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Barzillai (II)

II. BARZILLAI, a native of Meholath, in the Tribe of Simeon. This Barzillai was the Father of Adriel; who married Michol, formerly the Wife of David. 2 Sam. xxi. 8.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Barzillai (III)

III. BARZILLAI, of the race of the Priests; he married one of the Daughters of Barzillai the Gileadite. Nehem. vii. 63.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Basara

BASARA, a City of Galilee, twenty furlongs from Gaba, in the neighbourhood of Ptolemais[1].

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Joseph. lib. de Vita sua.

Basca

BASCA, a town where Jonathan Maccabæus was killed[1]. The Author of the first book of the Maccabees calls it Bascama.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Antiq. lib. xiii. c. 1.

Bascama

BASCAMA, the same probably as [1 Macc. xiii. 23. Judg. i. 4, 5, 6. Josh. xv. 39.] Bezek or Boskath in the Tribe of Judah. See Basca. Bezek was not far from Bethsan, where they who went into the land of Gilead passed the Jordan. Tryphon having killed Jonathan at Bascama, immediately returned into Syria. Read 1 Macc. xiii. 22, 23, 24. in the Greek.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Bashan

BASHAN, the land of Bashan, otherwise called Batanæa in the Peræa, that is to say, beyond Jordan, Northward of the Tribes of Gad and Reuben, and in the country belonging to the half Tribe of Manasseh. This country is bounded Eastward by the mountains of Gilead, and the land of Ammon and East Edom; Northward by mount Hermon, Southward by the brook Jabok, and Westward by the river Jordan. Og King of the Ammorites possessed the Kingdom of Bashan when Moses made the conquest of it. In this country is the Canton of Argob, mentioned in Deut. iii. 4, 14. and 1 Kings iv. 13. Bashan was thought to be one of the most fruitful countries in the world; its rich pastures, its oaks and fine cattle are principally commended[1].

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Reland. Palæst. l. i. p. 200, 201, 202.

Bashmath

BASHMATH, the Daughter of Elon the Hittite. Esau married her against the [Genes. xxvi. 34. Genes. xxxvi. 10.] consent of his Father and Mother Isaac and Rebeccah. She was Mother to Reuel.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Basilisk

BASILISK, in Latin, Basiliscus, or Regulus, a very dangerous sort of Serpent, which kills, as they say, by its breath or sight only. It was called Regulus, which answers to the name of Basiliscus or little King, because it wears a kind of crown upon its head, and is the most dangerous of all Serpents. Galen[1] says, that it is of a colour inclining to yellow; that it has three little eminences upon its head, speckled with whitish spots, which have the appearance of a sort of Crown. Ælian[2] says, that its poison is so penetrating as to kill the largest Serpents with its vapour only. If it bites but the end of any man's stick it kills him. It drives away all other Serpents with the noise of its hissing. Pliny[3] says, it kills those who look upon it. In some apothecaries shops there are little dead Serpents shewn, which are said to be Basilisks. It is a kind of small bird almost like a cock, but without feathers, its head is lofty, its wings are almost like a bat's, its eyes large, and its neck very short.

But the most eminent Physicians and modern Philosophers look upon all that is said of the Basilisk as fabulous and mere invention; invention; they say that no one ever saw any real Basilisks, that those which are shewn and sold at Venice, and in other places, are nothing but little thornbacks artificially put into a form like that of a young cock, by stretching out their fins, and contriving them with a little head and hollow eyes. And this we have in reality observed in a supposed Basilisk, at an apothecary's shop in Paris, and in another at the Jesuits of Pont-a-Mousson.

See our Comment on Psalm xc. 13. The Hebrew term Pethen[4], which is translated Basilisk, signifies an Asp, as the best Interpreters agree.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Galen. de Theriaca ad Pison.
Ælian. lib. ii. c. 5. & c. 7.
Plin. lib. viii. c. 22.
פתן Pethen. 70. Βασιλίσκος, vel ἀσπὶς, vel δράκων.

Basiothia

BASIOTHIA, or Bizjothjah, a City in [Josh. xv. 28.] the Tribe of Judah. This term is not made use of by the Septuagint; instead of it they read Josh. xv. 28. their towns and their farms.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Basmath

BASMATH, the Daughter of Solomon, married Ahimaaz of the Tribe of Naphtali. 1 Kings iv. 15.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Bason

BASON, or Laver of the Tabernacle. [Exod. xxxviii. 8.] Moses observes, that it was made of the brass looking-glasses belonging to those devout women, who watched, and stood centinels at the door of the Tabernacle. Athenæus[1] informs us, that among the Persians there were women who watched all night, and kept guard at the King's palace door. They slept in the day time, and passed the night in singing and playing upon instruments with the help of that light which they received from lamps. This ancient custom of the women keeping guard at the palace gate of the Eastern Kings, is still continued at this day[2]. It was probably after this manner, tho' more modestly, that the Israelitish women passed the night at the door of the Tabernacle, as it were at the door of their Lord, and Monarch.

As to looking-glasses, they were made formerly of all sorts of metals, of silver, copper, pewter, and a mixture of copper and pewter. In the East almost all looking-glasses are still at this day made of metal: It was very easy therefore for Moses to melt them, that he might form out of them the Bason for the Tabernacle. A great number was necessary to compose so large a vessel; but according to the meaning of the original, these women came in troops like a kind of Army to the door of the Tabernacle; so that there might be sufficiently for this use, and an overplus besides.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Athen. l. xii. Dipnosoph. c. 2.
Chardin. Voyage de Perse. l. ii. p 229.

Bassus

BASSUS, Lucilius Bassus succeeded Cerialis Vitalianus in the government of Judæa. As the revolted Jews continued in their rebellion even after the taking of Jerusalem, Bassus pursued them wherever they retreated. He took the castles of Herodium and Macharus, and extinguished the remains of the rebellion. He died in his government, and was succeeded by Flavius Silva. See Josephus's seventh Book of the Jewish Wars, chap. 30.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Bastonade

BASTONADE, a punishment in use among the Greeks and Romans, some instances whereof we find too among the Hebrews [2 Macc. vi. 19.] . It is said, that the holy old man Eleazar was led to the torture, and being upon the point of expiring with the blows which he received, he said with groans, It is manifest unto the Lord, that I now endure sore pains in body, by being beaten. This punishment was called Tympanum, because the patient was beat with sticks like a [Heb. xi. 35.] drum. S. Paul says, that some of the Saints suffered the torture of the Tympanum hoping for a better Resurrection.

This penalty is in use at this day in the East. The criminal is laid upon his belly; his feet are raised and tied to a stake, which is held fast by soldiers: in this posture he is beaten with a cudgel on the soles of the feet, the chin and back, and sometimes receives five hundred blows; the common stint is an hundred. They who receive a thousand seldom survive this punishment.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Bat

BAT, an unclean Bird, that is a composition of a bird and a mouse, having the body of a mouse and the wings of a bird; not with feathers, but with a sort of skin, which is extended, and makes wings, such as this creature uses in flying. It produces its little ones alive, and suckles them after the manner of the four-footed animals; and does not like birds, lay its eggs only. The Hebrew term Hatalaph, which expositors commonly interpret, Bat, signifies a Swallow, according to the Rabbins. There is a sort of Bat in the East, that is larger than ordinary, and is salted and eaten.

The Bat never grows tame, feeds upon flies, insects, and fat things, such as candles, oil, and grease. It appears only by night, nor then unless when the weather is fine, and the season warm. These creatures in Africk and Ethiopia have tails as long as those of mice, which extend beyond their wings. There are some that have four ears, others only two. They build no nests, but bring forth their young in some hole or cleft in the tops and coverings of houses: There are some black, some white, fallow and ash-coloured. The old one suckles its young as they are fastned to its teats; and when she is obliged to leave them, in order to go and seek for food, she takes them from her teats and hangs them up against the wall, from which they do not get loose. There are Bats in China, as some say, as large as pullets, and are as delicate eating. Those of Brasil, Madagascar gascar and the Maldives are as large as ravens, and have a head like a fox's: they cling to trees by little clasps which grow at the joints of their wings, and suck the blood of men while they are sleeping in the night, fastening upon the first member which they find uncovered.

THE LAVER OR BRASEN BASON.which was in the Court of the Tabernacle.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Batanæa

BATANÆA. This is the country of Bashan beyond Jordan. See above Bashan.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Bath

BATH[1], or Bathus, or Epha, a sort of Hebrew measure, containing the tenth part of an Omer, or seven gallons and four pints, as a measure for things liquid, and three pecks and three pints, as a measure for things dry. Some have imagined without any reason, that there was a sacred measure of this name, different from the common one: the first, they tell us, contained a Bath and an half of the other; which they endeavour to prove, by what is said in the first book of Kings, of Solomon's molten Sea, that it contained two thousand Baths, compared with what is said in the second book of Chronicles iv. 5. that it held three thousand Baths. But this difference is easily reconciled by saying that the brazen Sea itself contained two thousand Baths only, as is mentioned in the third book of Kings, but that the foot of this vessel was hollow and contained a thousand more; in all three thousand Baths, as the book of Chronicles has it.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Translators' note. בת קולThe Septuagint render it sometimes by the word Βαιθ; sometimes by μετρητὴς, 2 Chr. c. iv. sometimes by κεράμιος, If. c. v. The ancient Latin version translates it lagena. It was the tenth part of the Chomer in liquid things, as the Ephah was in dry. Ezek xlv. 11. The Ephah and the Bath shall be of one measure, that the Bath may contain the tenth part of an Homer; and the Ephah the tenth part of an Homer. Arbuth. Tables &c. p. 99.

Bath-Kol

BATH-KOL, or Daughter of the Voice. This is the name, whereby the Jewish Writers[1] distinguish the revelation of his will, which God made to his chosen people, after that all verbal Prophecy had ceased in Israel; that is to say, after the times of the Prophets Haggai, Zechariah, and Malachi. The generality of their traditions, and the customs of their nation, are founded on this Bath-Kol. They pretend that God revealed them to their Elders, not by any articulate Prophecy, but by some secret inspiration, or by some tradition, which they call the Daughter of the Voice[2].

The Rabbins acknowledge three ways of prophesying usual in their nation. First, by the means of Urim and Thummim, the voice of which Prophecy was heard from the extremity of the Sanctuary, or from the High-Priest's Pectoral; the second sort was the Spirit of Prophecy inspiring the Prophets as well before the Law, as after Moses; the third was the Daughter of the Voice, or Bath-Kol.

The first continued, as they say, from the building of the Tabernacle to the Temple. The second from the beginning of the world to the death of Malachi, the last of the Prophets, under the second Temple, tho' the use of it was most frequent under the first Temple. The third began after Malachi, and has subsisted to this day in their nation,

They pretend, that the Daughter of the Voice is a voice from Heaven, heard in an articulate manner, much after the same way as the voice which called young Samuel, when God revealed to him what was to befal the High-Priest Eli, and his Family: God then called him three times [1 Sam. iii. 4, 5, &c.] with an articulate voice. Samuel replied in the same manner as he would have answered a man, not knowing as yet how to distinguish the voice of God; or the Daughter of the Voice resembles that which was uttered from the Sanctuary, when the Lord spoke to Moses, or answered the High-Priest, who consulted him by the Urim and Thummim. These two sorts of voices were, as we may say, the Mother of that other voice which succeeded them, and was called Bath-Kol, Daughter-Voice, or Daughter of the Voice, because it was as it were the Daughter of this first Voice: it was a much less perfect way of inspiration; but notwithstanding as certain as the first.

But it would be a great mistake to imagine, that the revelation of Bath-Kol was performed always by an articulate voice from Heaven, and heard distinctly by those to whom God communicated his will in this manner. We cannot certainly affirm, that even the old Prophets heard articulate voices when the word of God came to them: Factum est verbum Domini ad Isaiam, &c. It is sufficient to believe, that it was some inward speech, some inspiration, motion, or light which wrought upon them, and discovered to them in a clear and lively manner, what it was the good pleasure of God they should declare to mankind. Thus in proportion, when God manifested his will by the Daughter of the Voice, he did so either with an articulate voice distinctly heard, or by some lively impression in the mind or imagination, or lastly by a voice heard by chance, which was understood as an Oracle proceeding from Heaven.

An Example of this I shall here lay before you taken from the Talmud. Two Rabbins Rabbins desirous of visiting their friend Rabbi Samuel Doctor of Babylon, said to one another, Let us follow the direction of Bath-Kol; as they were passing by a school, they heard a young lad reading this passage of the first book of Samuel c. xxv. v. i. And Samuel died. From hence they concluded, that Samuel was dead: the event justified what they had prognosticated, for they found that at that time Rabbi Samuel of Babylon had departed. We might cite many other examples of the same sort scattered up and down the writings of the Jews. These casual and odd Oracles were esteemed as voices of God's appointment, much after the same manner as in the Church, people for many Ages drew presages of what was to befal them from the first words they read in any book which they opened at random.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Talmud. Sotha. c. 9. p. 48.

Translators' note. The Bath-Kol, as Dr. Prideaux shews, was a phantastical way of Divination, invented by the Jews, like the Sortes Virgilianæ among the Heathens. For as with them the words first dipt at in the book of that Poet was the Oracle whereby they prognosticated those future events which they desired to be informed of; so with the Jews, when they appealed to Bath-Kol, the next words which they should hear from any one's mouth were the same. See more on this subject in Prid. Connect. &c. Part. II. Book 5.

Bath-Sama

BATH-SAMA. Joseph. lib. vi. Antiq. c. 2. The same in all probability as Beth- Shemesh.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Bath-Sheba

BATH-SHEBA. The Daughter of Eliam or Ammiel, and Wife to Uriah the Hittite. She dwelt at Jerusalem, in a house very near David's palace. This Prince rising one day from his bed, after he had been sleeping at noon-day, as is customary in warm countries, went upon the terras of his [2 Sam. xi. 2, 3, & seq.] Palace, and in the court or garden belonging to a neighbouring house saw Bathsheba bathing herself[1]. As she was a woman of an uncommon beauty, David sent to inquire who she was. He was told that her name was Bathsheba, and that she was the Wife of Uriah the Hittite. Immediately he had her brought to him, and abused her. She returned to her own house, purified herself, and some time after sent David word, that she was with child. Hereupon David sent [In the Year of the World 2969, before J. C. 1031, before the vulg. Æra 1034.] to Joab, General of his Army then imployed in the siege of Rabbah, the capital City of the Ammonites, to dispatch Uriah to him. Joab obeyed; and upon the arrival of Uriah, David asked him news of what passed in the Army, and afterwards bid him go home wash his feet, and rest himself. At the same time he sent him provision from his own table, that he might eat and drink at home with his Wife. David proposed by this means to conceal his Adultery, because the child which Bathsheba was to be delivered of, might pass for Uriah's, if he returned, and spent a night with her. But Uriah instead of going home, spent the night with the King's guards at the Palace gate. David being inform'd of it, asked why after returning from his journey he did not go home; to which Uriah answered, The ark and all the people abide in tents, and my Lord Joab and the servants of my Lord are incamped in the open fields, shall I then go into mine house to eat and to drink, and to lye with my Wife? As thou livest and as thy soul liveth, I will not do this thing. The next day the King invited him to his own table, and there made him drunk. But Uriah instead of going home, lay in his bed with others of the King's guards; for he was in David's service, and as is believed, one of his guards. David perceiving that he was not able this way to secure Bathsheba's Honour, resolved to get rid of Uriah, and marry her. He sent orders therefore to Joab, to expose Uriah in places of the greatest danger, that so he might be killed. Uriah was himself the bearer of these orders; which were too punctually executed.

[2 Sam. xii. 1, 2, 3, &c.] Bathsheba hearing of her Husband's death, mourned after the customary manner; and when the season for this ceremony was over, David brought her to his own house and married her. Soon after this she was delivered of a Son. Now this action was extremely displeasing to the Lord, who therefore sent the Prophet Nathan unto David, to reproach him with his sin. Nathan upon this occasion proposed the Parable to him of a rich man, who had abundance of sheep and oxen, but instead of taking any out of his own flocks to entertain his friend, who was come out of the country, he went to a poor man's, who had only one ewe-lamb, took it and dressed it for his friend the traveller. David at first did not discern that this picture was drawn for himself; but said to Nathan, As the Lord liveth, he who hath done this action shall surely die: the lamb he shall restore fourfold. Then said Nathan to him, Thou art the man; and continuing to reproach him with his ingratitude and infidelity to God, who had bestowed so many blessings on him; he threatned him in a terrible manner, and said, The sword shall never depart from thine house; I will take thy wives before thine eyes, and give them to thy neighbour: and he shall lye with thy wives. Thou hast done this action secretly, but I will do this thing before all Israel, and before the Sun.

David said to Nathan, I have sinned against the Lord Nathan answered, The Lord has transferr'd the punishment of thy sin; thou shalt not die, but the Child which is born unto thee shall surely die. Accordingly the Child was struck by God, and its health very soon despaired of. David intreated the Lord for him, fasted, retired, and continued lying on the earth; the principal persons of his family came and pressed him earnestly to rise, and receive some nourishment, but he refused, and persisted in this state of humiliation and repentance. On the seventh day the Child[1] [In the year of the World 2971, before J. C. 1029. before the vulgar Æra 1033.] Child died: and David's servants did not dare to tell him of it. But he observing their perplexity, and knowing he was dead, rose from the earth, bathed himself, anointed himself with oil[2], changed his dress, entred into the house of the Lord, worshipped him, returned to his house, and took nourishment. His Officers thought this behaviour very singular, and were surprized at it; but when they asked him the reason of it, he told them, that he had fasted and wept while the Child was yet living; because he had then room to hope that God would restore him to his health; now he is dead, says he, wherefore should I fast and mourn? can I bring him back again? I shall go to him, but he shall not return to me.

After this David comforted Bathsheba, and she conceived a Son, who was named Solomon. Nathan came and told David, that the Lord loved this Child, and called him Jedidiah, that is to say, the well-beloved of the Lord. God afterwards declared, that he should succeed David in the Throne, that he should build a Temple to him, that he should be blessed with [Psalm cxxxi. 11. 2 Sam. vii. 12, 13, &c.] a great measure of wisdom, riches, and understanding. Towards the end of David's life and reign, Adonijah having formed a party, presumed upon the privilege of his Age, and pretended that he ought to reign preferably to Solomon, who was much younger than himself. Nathan gave notice of his design to Bathsheba, and advised her to speak of it to the King, promising her, that he would come himself and second what she should say.

[1 Kings i. 15.] Bathsheba went therefore to David; she found him in his chamber, and bowed with great respect before him. He asked her what it was she desired of him. My Lord, said she, you promised my Son Solomon your servant with an oath, that he should reign after you, and be seated in your Throne, nevertheless Adonijah has proclaimed himself King, without your knowledge or approbation. He hath slain many sheep and oxen, and hath made a great entertainment, to which he has invited all the King's Children together with Abiathar the High Priest, and Joab the General of your Armies; but Solomon he did not invite. In the mean time the eyes of all Israel are upon you, expecting you to declare your Successor. For when it shall come to pass, that my Lord the King shall sleep with his Fathers, I and my Son Solomon shall be treated as criminals.

She was still speaking to the King when notice was given him that the Prophet Nathan was there, and waited for admission. When he was called in, he made his reverences in a very profound manner to the King, and said, My Lord, O King, have you appointed Adonijah for Successor in the Throne? for he has this day made a great entertainment for the King's Sons, the High Priest Abiathar, and Generals of the Army, and the cry is, Long live King Adonijah. But he did not invite Zadok the High Priest, nor Benaiah the Son of Jehoiada, nor Solomon, nor myself, who am thy servant. The King directed immediately that Bathsheba should be called in again; and when she entred, he said to her, As the Lord liveth, who hath delivered me from so many dangers, I will this day execute the promise which I have sworn to perform, saying, Solomon thy Son assuredly shall reign after me. Bathsheba threw herself prostrate on the earth before him, and said, Let my Lord King David live for ever. The King said farther, Call me Zadok, Nathan and Benaiah; when they came, he commanded them to put Solomon on his own mule, and conduct him to Gihon; that there the High Priest Zadok and the Prophet Nathan should crown him; that they should sound the trumpets and say, Long live King Solomon; then return and seat him on his Throne: for, says he, he shall be King in my stead, and I have appointed him to be Ruler over Israel and over Judah. All this was executed, as we shall shew elsewhere; and after the death of David, Solomon reigned peaceably over all his Dominions.

Now when Adonijah saw Solomon thus seated on the Throne of David, he came to [1 Kings xi. 12, & seq.] Bathsheba and said, You know that the Kingdom of right belonged to me, and that all Israel had chosen me for their King: but the Lord hath otherwise disposed of it, and the Kingdom has been given to Solomon. Now therefore I have only one small favour to ask, which is, that Solomon would give me Abishag the Shunamite, that I may marry her. Bathsheba promised to propose it to the King, and accordingly went to him. Solomon seeing her, rose from his Throne, met her, saluted her with profound respect, sat down on his Throne, and commanded another to be placed on his right hand for his Mother. Bathsheba then told him, that she had an inconsiderable favour to ask of him, which she desired him not to refuse her. Solomon encouraged her to proceed, and said it would by no means be just for him him to send her back dissatisfied. Whereupon she said, Give Adonijah thy Brother the Shunamite Abishag for his Wife. Solomon penetrating the design of Adonijah, replied to his Mother, Why dost thou ask Abishag the Shunamite for Adonijah? ask for him the Kingdom also. Thou knowest, that Abiathar the High Priest, and Joab the Son of Zerviah General of the Troops are for him, and that he is my elder Brother. I swear therefore by my life and by my throne, that Adonijah shall be [In the Year of the World 3990, before J. C. 1010, before the vulgar Æra 1014. 1 Chr. iii. 5. 2 Sam. v. 14.] put to death this day. Accordingly he sent Benaiah the Son of Jehoiada, who fell upon Adonijah and killed him. From this time, we have no more mention of Bathsheba.

The first book of Chronicles, and the second book of Samuel take notice of other Sons, which Bathsheba had by David, such as Shammuah, Shobab and Nathan, besides Solomon, of whom we have been speaking. Some Interpreters are of opinion, that these three Sons Shammuah, Shobab, and Nathan, were the Sons of Uriah the Hittite; but the generality maintain, that they were the Sons of David. The Text in the second book of Samuel is very clear for this opinion; and S. Luke gives us the genealogy of Nathan the Son of David, as one of the Messiah's ancecтors. The passage in the [Prov. iv. 3.] Proverbs, where Solomon says, that he was the beloved Son of his Father, and the only Son of his Mother, proves no more than the very tender affection which David and Bathsheba had for him, by reason of the promises of God, and the favours he vouchsafed to him.

The xxxist Chapter of the Proverbs is commonly believed to be Bathsheba's instruction to her Son Solomon, to consecrate the memory whereof this Prince determined to place it in the collection of his Proverbs, or Maxims of Morality. There are some who go so far as to say, that Bathsheba was inspired, as she intimates in these words, The Prophecy that his Mother taught him. And if it be acknowledged, that this Chapter as it stands in the book of Proverbs, was written by Bathsheba, it must be necessarily owned to be inspired. But it is very possible, that Solomon to do honour to his Mother, might have reduced the instructions which he received from her into this form, and published them as if she herself had either dictated or written them.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

The Vulgate says that David saw her bathing on the terras of his house; but this is not in the Hebrew Text.

Translators' note. It was customary with them to anoint themselves with precious oil after bathing; So Judith x. 2. So Naomi to Ruth, Wash thyself therefore and anoint thyself. So Homer. Odyss. 6. of Nausicaa and her Maids, Αἱ δὲ λοεσσάμεναι καὶ χρισσάμεναι λίπ' ἐλαίῳ Δεῖπνον ἔπειθ' εἵλοντο παρ' ὄχθῃσιν ποταμοῖο.

Bathyra

BATHYRA, a City built by Herod in the Batanæa to secure the Jews, who came from Babylon against the inhabitants of the Trachonitis, who attacked them often in the way[1].

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Antiq. l. xvii. c. 2.

Bath-Zacharias

BATH-ZACHARIAS, a place situated [1 Macc. vi. 32, 33.] in the neighbourhood of Bethsura. Epiphanius in his book of the Lives of the Prophets says, that the Prophet Habbakuk was born within the territories of Bath-zacharias. S. Luke tells us, that the holy [Luke i. 39, 40.] Virgin went to salute Elizabeth, and entred the house of Zacharias, which may be understood of Bath-zacharias, or Bethzachar, this, signifying the house of Zacharias, which is in the mountains of Judah, and neighbourhood of Hebron. But it is more natural to say, that S. Luke did not set down the name of the City, where Zechary dwelt, but only that the Virgin entred into the place where he lodged.

Bath-zacharias is celebrated for the battle fought between Antiochus Eupator and Judas Maccabæus. Antiochus seeing himself braved by Judas, and understanding that he was retired to the narrow pass of Bath-zacharias, commanded his Army to march against him. It was composed of an hundred thousand foot, twenty thousand horse, and two and thirty elephants [1 Macc. vi. 30.] prepared for battle. But because the ground was not large enough, he was obliged to give orders, that his numerous Army should march in three lines. Every elephant carried a tower full of archers, and was attended by five hundred horse and a thousand foot; the rest of the troops were directed to gain the two sides of the mountain. In this condition Antiochus's Army advanced to the charge, the soldiers shouted so lowd, that the inhabitants of the neigbouring country were frightned, and the Sun shining on their gold and brass shields, they dazzled the eyes of all the world. But Judas Maccabæus, whose heart was incapable of fear, received them with great vigour, so that six hundred men at the first shock fell dead upon the spot. His Brother Eleazar firnamed Savaran, seeing an elephant more magnificently harnassed than the rest, thought the King was upon it; wherefore exposing his life for the deliverance of his people, he moved forward, and made his way through a crowd of enemies, killed many of them, and slipping under the elephant's belly pierced him with his sword, and the animal falling immediately, Eleazar was crushed with his weight, and so ended his life gloriously. Judas hereupon, seeing it impossible for him to resist any longer so numerous and strong an Army, retreated to Jerusalem, with a resolution to sustain the siege of it.

I do not at all call in question the great actions performed by the Maccabees , in the several wars which they maintained against the most formidable powers of Asia. [* Observations on the Combat between Judas Maccabæus, and the Army of Antiochus Eupator, in the narrow Pass of Bethzacharias.] If the Scripture had said nothing of them, I should have believed Josephus in his History of the Jews, an Author who deserves credit; but that these wars should have escaped the observation of Polybius, a contemporary Author, and that no notice should be taken by him of the very names of these great men, who acquitted themselves with so much glory in them, is what must surprize every one beyond expression, since the Greek and Latin Historians, who wrote after him concerning the events which happened in Asia, have made no mention of them. These wars must certainly not have been so considerable as is pretended, so that the fame of them could not come to the knowledge of people who lived remote from Judæa. As much convinced as I am, of the great atchievements accomplished by these Heroes of the Jewish people, and of the victories obtained by them, I am persuaded, that there is a little aggravation used with respect to the number of their enemies against the nothing, as I may say, which made head against them; for so I call a body of troops consisting of between eight and ten thousand men, and very often fewer, against Armies of sixty thousand fighting men. Here we have one of an hundred thousand foot and twenty thousand horse against another in all probability of between eight and ten thousand men; for the Scripture says nothing particularly of Judas's forces: I am confident that he had scarce a greater number, and am not at all surprized, that this great Captain should dare to attack the enemy's Army, and should get a considerable advantage over it. I know sufficiently what bold and intrepid valour is capable of, when under good conduct, and how many small Armies have been victorious against the greatest, tho' oftentimes made up of the bravest and most disciplined troops. Ancient and modern History abound with examples of this sort, and some there are beyond even those of the Maccabees. As to the surprizing of Armies, I refer the Reader to Polybius's History for his conviction in this point.

As to the number of these prodigious Armies brought in opposition to the Maccabees, I know not what to say of them. If they had been such as the Author represents them, their defeat would have produced so much noise in the world, that there can be no doubt but Polybius, a contemporary Author, would have spoken of them. When we reflect on them, so great a disproportion cannot but surprize us. As to the elephants loaded with towers, machines of war, and thirty fighting men, I am of Bochart's opinion, who looks upon this to be exaggerated; and believes that these Armies were not such as the Author represents them; but in comparison with the forces of these celebrated Jewish Captains, they were very great, and the elephants very large and powerful, without having so great a burthen upon them.

The Scripture explains very clearly to us the disposition of Antiochus's Army, and the situation of the places, where the action passed. It says not a word of that under the command of Judas Maccabæus, whose conduct and courage appear to me very astonishing. He made his onsets doubtless in separate bodies drawn up very deep, which was an admirable and prudent way of engaging, and the method of the Jews: as they were always or almost continually inferior to their enemies, the necessity of defending themselves against the formidable power of their neighbours, who endeavoured to subdue them, animated as they were with zeal for the true God, whose cause they maintained; all this joined together inspired them with that vigorous way of combating, so proper for small Armies. These eminent Captains, weak as they were, considering the small number of their troops, had no other refuge but in the skilful use of military discipline, in surprize, most frequently under the cover of darkness, and in the advantages of places, where they waited for their enemy, without fear of being hemm'd in, and hereby obliged them to engage in a front equal to theirs; and oftentimes they attacked them in the plains, so proper was their way of drawing up for every thing, and so ready were their soldiers to do and to attempt every thing.

The action here in question was neither general nor decisive; it happened in the narrow part of a valley; Antiochus's Army took up the entrance, and Judas drew up in the closest part of the Defile: Josephus says plainly, that the post of Bathzacharias was a very narrow Pass; but as almost all valleys, which open into a plain, grow wider and wider, as rivers towards their mouths, Antiochus first of all posted himself at the opening of the valley; and as it grew straighter in proportion as he advanced, he saw himself under a necessity of sending some troops to the top of the Mountains, perhaps with a design of inclosing the Jews, and cutting off their retreat, and to march with several Phalanxes doubled. This is a conjecture which I venture to make, and not so inconsiderately but that to me it seems very probable; it is the more so, in that I am persuaded the combat which begun at the first line with the cavalry intermixed among the elephants, brought the second into disorder. Nothing can be more exact and clear than the description of the order of battle on Antiochus's side, and his march into the valley. The first line, where he had placed the elephants, was alone capable of infusing terror, it was disposed in admirable order, and in each Army there was another to support it, so that to me it seems to have been stronger than their prodigious Phalanx. The enemies [1 Macc. vi. 35.] , says the Scripture, divided the beasts among the Armies, that is to say, by Brigades, and for every elephant they appointed a thousand men armed with coats of mail, and with helmets of brass on their heads; and besides this, for every beast were ordained five hundred horsemen of the best, that is to say on the side, as I suppose them to be placed. I imagine a second line to be formed of a thousand men, who supported the first: both thus disposed were of as much service as the Phalanx, or more properly speaking, the preservation of it depended on them; for if Judas had broke through that of the elephants, it had overset, or very much disordered the second rank; and if these had been routed, the Phalanx had not been able to resist: as that was composed of one mass alone without intervals, the run-aways must have put it into confusion, and borne it down without a possibility of procuring the least remedy. The ancient Greeks and Asiaticks drew up in Phalanx, and when the ground would not allow them to extend themselves with their whole front, they doubled it, that is to say, they disposed themselves into two Phalanx's which was very dangerous; for by this absurd method a small body of troops engaging with an equal front, might beat an Army infinitely superiour, because it was sufficient to overthrow the first, it being certain, that the defeat of one would draw after it that of all the rest. This is what happened to Hannibal at the battle of Zama, where his glory and reputation lost ground miserably. He had drawn up his people in three lines like Phalanx's, one behind the other, at a certain distance; and tho' he had an Army of fifty thousand men used to action, he was nevertheless defeated by Scipio, whose whole forces consisted in twenty two thousand men ranged in columns: and thus this small Army broke through these three Phalanx's. To beat the first was sufficient in order to be assured of routing the other two without Hannibal's having it in his power to redress the evil; at least he did not think it possible to repair so great a blunder.

To return to the order of battle in Antiochus's Army, I have said, that as to the two first lines I thought it excellent: as to the Phalanx I have spoke my sentiments of it; he drew it up according to the common custom, which was as ancient perhaps as War; but this usage of so long prescription, and which still continues, does not prove the goodness of it, as I have demonstrated in the sixth book of my Comment upon Polybius. As to the Cavalry, it was placed upon the wings to support the Infantry. Altho' this Army of Antiochus was formidable, yet this perhaps had never put a stop to Judas after his first advantage: he knew very well by experience, that to beat the first line was sufficient for him to have had afterwards a good account of the rest, without the loss of many men: nevertheless he retreated. The reason whereof has been above mentioned; which was, he was afraid of being intercepted by the troops, which marched by the way of the high lands; and as there is no mountain without some back passage, he thought it proper to disengage himself out of this danger, that he might not be stop'd in his retreat. As to Eleazar's devoting himself, who crept under an elephant's belly which was adorned more magnificently than the rest, and stab'd him with his sword, believing the King to be upon him, and so was crushed to death with his fall, this was a very handsome action, and worthy of a truly brave man; but people's devoting themselves in this manner is so common in History, that we are too much accustomed to it to look upon it as a prodigy of Valour.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Bavar

BAVAR, the Son of Henadad was one of those, who when the Jews returned from the Captivity, contributed towards the building of Jerusalem. Neh. iii. 18.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Bealiah

BEALIAH, one of the thirty brave Officers in David's Army. 1 Chr. xii. 5.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Bean

BEAN. It is said in the first book of Maccabees, Ch. v. 4, 6. that the Children of Bean were a shame and an offence unto the people of Israel, they having laid ambushes for them in their way. We do not know whether Bean is the name of a Man or a City. Some think it is the name of a City called Bean, beyond Jordan. Numb. xxxii. 3. Others, that Bean is put for Batanæa; others again, that it is the name of a Man.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Bear

BEAR, in Latin, Ursus, in Greek, Arctos, and in Hebrew, Dob. Bears were very common in Palestine. David says, [1 Sam. xvii. 34, 36.] that he had often fought with Bears and Lions. The Prophet Elisha having cursed some of the children of Bethel, for crying out in an insulting manner, Go up, thou Bald-pate, go up, thou Bald-pate, two Bears issued out from a neighbouring [2 Kings xi. 23, 24.] forest, and devoured two and forty of them. The sacred Writers to aggravate the transports of a man in passion say, He is [2 Sam. xvii. 8. Prov. xvii. 12. Hosea xiii. 8.] chaf'd in his mind as a bear robbed of his whelps. The Hebrew word Dob is given them by reason of the shagged hair with which every part of their body is loaded. Their claws are very hooked, and they make use of them in ascending to the tops of trees: they feed upon fruits, honey, bees, and flesh. There are white Bears to be seen in the Northern countries. Many of them are to be found in Poland, Muscovy, Lithuania, and the great forests of Germany. Some have believed, that Bears bring their young into the world shapeless, and that their dams lick them into form. There are particular Writers who derive Ursus from the verb ordiri to begin, as if it were said orsus begun, rough-drawn; but this is a popular error. Aristotle and Pliny[1] say, that Bears when they are first littered are scarce bigger than a mouse, and that they grow as long as they live; that they have neither eyes nor hair, and that their claws only appear. The dams go no longer than thirty days, and generally produce five young ones. Pariunt trigesimo die, ut plurimum quinos. Hi sunt candida informisque caro, paulò muribus major, sine oculis, sine pilo, ungues tantum prominent. Hanc lambendo paulatim figurant.

They lye hid all the winter and asleep. The male continues in this condition forty days, and the female four months. They sleep so soundly for the first fourteen days, that blows will not wake them. During these forty days they are said to have no nourishment but from licking their feet. It is certain that in all this time they eat nothing, and that at the end of it the males are very fat. The flesh of Bears was much esteemed by the Ancients. Even at this day the paw of a Bear well salted and smoaked is served up at the tables of Princes. This animal, as rough and stupid as it seems to be, is capable of discipline, it leaps, dances, and plays a thousand little tricks at the sound of a trumpet. Some affirm, that it is [Isai. xi. 7.] even susceptible of love for women.

Isaiah describing the happiness of the Messiah's reign, says, that then the Ox and the Bear will be seen feeding together, and their young living peaceably in the same stable; by the Bear the Gentiles, by the Ox the Jews were signified, these two people [Dan. vii. 5.] will be united in the Church, and compose but one flock. Daniel in his description of the four great Monarchies, represents that of the Chaldæans under the idea of a Lioness; that of the Persians under the notion of a Bear; that of the Greeks under the figure of a Leopard, and that of the successors of Alexander the Great, under the idea of a terrible Animal. The Bear described by the Prophet had three rows of teeth in his jaw; by this Cyrus was principally represented.

[Rev. xiii. 2.] S. John in the Revelations describes to us the persecutors of the Church, under the idea of a Beast with seven heads, having ten horns with ten diadems upon them, and the names of blasphemy. His body resembled that of a Leopard; his feet were like those of a Bear, and his mouth like that of a Lion. Some believe that by this Beast with seven heads the seven Roman Emperors were meant who persecuted the Church from the time of S. John the Evangelist, namely, Dioclesian, Maximian, Galerius, Maximinus, Severus, Maxentius and Licinius; in these there met together the cruelty, strength, voracity and malice of the Leopard, the Bear, and Lion.

The Author of Ecclesiasticus says, That the anger of a woman changeth her countenance; she puts on a melancholy, fierce look like a Bear; her complexion turns livid like a sackcloth. xxv. 17. A Bear when angry is terrible. This animal has of itself an hideous look, but when it is enraged it makes people tremble.

[If. lix. 11.] Isaiah compares the despair of the wicked to the roarings of a Bear. Rugiemus quasi ursi omnes: The cries of Bears grown furious are sufficient to frighten the most intrepid.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Plin. lib. viii. c. 36.

Beard

BEARD. The Hebrews all wear a Beard [Levit, xix. 27. Jerem. xli. 5. and xlviii. 37. If. xv. 2. Baruch vi. 30.] upon their chin, but not upon the upper lip or cheeks. Moses forbids them to cut off intirely the angle, or extremity of their Beard, that is to say, to manage it after the manner of the Egyptians, who left only a little tuft of Beard at the extremity of their chins; whereas the Jews still at this day suffer a little fillet of hair to grow from the lower end of their ears to their chins, where, as well as upon their lower lips, their Beards are in a pretty long bunch. While they mourned they intirely shaved the hair of their Heads and Beards, and neglected to trim their Beards, that is to say, to cut off what grew upon their upper lips and cheeks. In times of grief and affliction they [2 Sam. xix. 24. Ezra ix. 3. 2 Sam. x. 4, 5. and 1 Chr. xix. 5.] pluckt off the hair of their Heads and Beards, as was the practice of other Nations under great calamities.

The King of the Ammonites designing to insult David's Ambassadors, cut off half their Beard and half their Cloaths, that is to say, he cut off all their Beard on one side of their faces, and David did not permit them to appear at Court, till their Beards were intirely [Lev. xiv. 9.] grown again.

When a leper was cured of his leprosy, he washed himself in a bath, and shaved off all the hair of his body, after which he returned into the camp or city, and seven days after he washed himself and his cloaths again, shaved off all his hair, and offered the Sacrifices appointed for his purification. a Plin. lib. viii. c. 36.

[Numb. viii. 7.] The Levites, on the day of their consecration, were purified by bathing and washing their bodies and cloaths, after which they shaved off all the hair of their bodies, and then offered the Sacrifices appointed for their consecration. See hereafter To Shave.

Altho' the Hebrews took great care of their Beards, to make them grow in a certain manner, at times when they were not in mourning, and on the contrary did not trim them when they were in mourning ; yet I do not observe that they had any veneration for their Beard. “ On the “ contrary, the Arabians[1] have so much “ respect for theirs, that they look upon “ them as sacred ornaments given by God, “ to distinguish them from women.” They never shave them, but suffer them to grow from their youth. Nothing can be more infamous than for a man to be thus shaved ; they make the preservation of their Beards a capital point of Religion, because Mahomet never cut off his. It is likewise a mark of authority and liberty among them, as well as among the Turks. The Persians who clip them, and shave above the jaw, are reputed Hereticks. The razor is never drawn over the Grand Seignior's face : they who serve in the Seraglio, have their Beard shaved, as a sign of their Servitude. They do not suffer it to grow till the Sultan has set them at liberty, which is bestowed as a reward upon them, and is always accompanied with some employment.

Young people, who are not married, may cut their Beards ; but when they are married, or have a child, they forbear doing so, to shew that they are become wiser, have renounced the vanities of youth, and think no longer of any thing but their honour and salvation. When they comb their Beards, they hold a handkerchief upon their knees, and gather very carefully the hairs that fall, and when they have got together a certain quantity, they fold them up in paper, and carry them to the place where they bury the dead.

Among them it is more infamous for any one to have his Beard cut off, than among us to be publickly whipt or branded with a hot iron. There are abundance of people in this country, who would prefer death to this kind of punishment. -- -- The wives kiss their husbands Beards, and children their fathers, as often as they come to salute them : the men kiss one another's Beards reciprocally on both sides, when they salute one another in the streets, or come off from any journey. ---- They say, that the Beard is the perfection of the human face, which would be more disfigured by having this cut off than the nose.

They admire and envy those who have fine Beards. Pray do but behold, they cry, that Beard ; the very sight of it would persuade any one, that he whom it belongs to is an honest man. If any one with a fine Beard is guilty of an unbecoming action ; what a disadvantage is this, they say, to such a Beard, how is such a Beard to be pitied. If they would correct any one's mistakes, they will tell him often, for shame of your Beard, does not the confusion that follows such an action light upon your Beard ? If they entreat any one, or make use of oaths in affirming or denying any thing, they say, I conjure you by your Beard, by the life of your Beard to grant me this : or by your Beard this is or is not so. They say farther in the way of acknowledgment, May God preserve your blessed Beard ; may God pour out his blessings on your Beard. And in comparisons, This is more valuable than one's Beard.

One of the principal Ceremonies observed in serious visits, is to throw sweetscented water on one's Beard, and to perfume it afterwards with aloes-wood, which sticks to this moisture, and gives it an agreeable smell, &c. This is something like what is said in Psalm cxxxiii. v. 2. of the precious ointment which was poured on Aaron's head, and ran down upon his Beard and the skirts of his garments.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Mœurs des Arabes par M. Darieux. p. 173. c. 7.

Beast

BEAST, an animal destitute of reason, appointed for the service of Man, and the ornament of the Universe. God in the beginning created the fishes of the Sea, and the fowls of the Air on the fifth day of the [Gen. i. 20, 21, 23. — i. 24, 26, 31. — xi. 19.] world : he afterwards created the Beasts of the Earth and Man upon the sixth day : lastly, he brought the fowls of the Air, and the animals of the Earth to Adam, that he might call them by their particular names, and thereby begin the exercise of that Dominion which God had granted [— i. 28.] him over all Creatures. The Lord blessed man, the fowls, fishes, and beasts of the Earth ; commanded them to multiply, and gave them all the fruits and herbs of [— i. 29. — ix. 3.] the Earth for their food. It was not till after the deluge that he granted the use of flesh-meat to mankind ; and even then he forbad the eating blood, threatning to punish the effusion of it with a penalty answerable, and to chastise even Beasts [— ix. 5. Exod. xxi. 28, 29. Lev. xx. 15, 16. Deut. xiii. 15.] which should shed human blood.

Accordingly in the Law of Moses, every Beast which should have killed a man, or have been made use of in a certain abominable crime, is punished with death. Cities guilty of apostacy are devoted to the fire, with their inhabitants and cattle. When Noah went out of the Ark, together with his children and the animals which he had preserved there with him, God said that he had made a covenant with Noah, with his family, and descendants, and with all the several creatures which came out thence with him, and that he engaged himself never to send such a deluge again upon the [Gen. ix. 9. Isa. xx. 10.] earth. God enjoining rest upon the Sabbath, declares it to be his pleasure, that cattle as well as slaves should enjoy the benefit of this repose. God smote in Egypt the first-born of men and beasts; and as a memorial of his having spared the Hebrews, he commands the first-born of men and beasts to be consecrated to him.

Eve conversed with the Serpent without being [Gen. iii. 1.] at all surprized to hear him speak and reason. Balaam in like manner discourses with his Ass, and replies to her as he would have answered a reasonable man. After the fall of Adam and Eve, [Numb. xxii. 28.] God spoke to the Serpent, cursed, punished him, and foretold his misery, with as much form and [Gen. iii. 14.] circumstance as he did the same to Adam and Eve. Moses observes, that the Serpent was more subtle than any beast of the field, and our Saviour enjoins us to have the prudence of the Serpent, and the simplicity of the Dove; the wise man refers the idle to the Ant, and describes these creatures as composing a little commonwealth, in [Matth. x. 16. Prov. vi. 6.] which abundance of activity and providence was visible. In the Prophets God threatens to extirpate utterly both the people and the cattle of such countries as incurr'd his indignation. Jonah [Prov. xxx. 25.] having preached at Nineveh, that God was ready to display his wrath against the City; the Ninevites were converted, covered themselves [Jerem. l. 51. Ezek. xiv. Zeph. i. 1. Jonah iii. 5, 6.] with sackcloth from the greatest to the meanest, the King himself descended from his Throne, and forbad both man and beast to eat or drink. Why are beasts thus required to fast, if they are not capable of reason, of merit or demerit? And when God moved with the humiliation of the Ninevites had forgiven their sin, and Jonah complained of his indulgence, he was told, Why should I not pardon this City wherein there are so many who do not know how to distinguish their right hand from their left, and so great a number of beasts! As if this multitude of animals [Jonah iv. 11.] was a motive to the forgiving Nineveh.

The Egyptians, among whom the Hebrews dwelt for so long a time, adored Beasts, and consequently believed them not only to be reasonable, but likewise to be superior to man. These also were probably the principles of the Israelites, since they paid their worship to the golden Calf in the wilderness, and after Jeroboam's Schism, continued to adore the like Deities.

The Doctrine of Transmigration so common throughout all the East, and even among the Hebrews, a Doctrine the remains whereof were visible among the Israelites of our Saviour's time[1], and even in the Apostles before they had received the Holy Ghost; this opinion supposes manifestly, that Beasts are reasonable, because the same souls which animated the wisest and most understanding men, pass successively into the bodies of Beasts.

[2] Omnia mutantur: nihil interit: errat & illinc Huc venit, hinc, illuc, & quoslibet occupat artus, Spiritus, éque feris humana in corpora transit, Inque feras noster, nec tempore deperit ullo.

These opinions are neither new nor uncommon among the Jews: they are however to be observed with some variety in Philo[3] and in the most celebrated Rabbins[4].

Many affirm that Birds have a sort of language intelligible to themselves. Porphyry relates, that Tiresias and Apollonius Tianæus understood this language, and there are still at this day people in Arabia[5], who value themselves upon this knowledge. They tell us, that they have been acquainted with it ever since the time of Solomon and the Queen of Sheba, who had a Bird called Huddud, which is the Hoop, made use of by them in sending amorous messages to one another. Some Arabian Authors[6] have believed, that there were Elephants of the Mahometan Religion, and which adored God. Pliny[7] and others after him have asserted in their writings, that Elephants were capable of Religion, that they worshipped the Sun and Moon.

The Philosophers of Antiquity, such as Empedocles, Pythagoras, Galen, Cleanthes, Eudoxus, Porphyry, Ælian, Pliny, and many more, did generally believe that Beasts reasoned. Diogenes Laertius[8] tells us, that Eudoxus a Pythagorœan Philosopher translated out of Egyptian into Greek a Dialogue between Dogs. Lastly, all the world almost, Philosophers and others, in Europe particularly believed Beasts to be rational, before Descartes invented his System of Machines. It is true indeed, that before him a Spanish Physician, whose name was Gosnesius Pereira, had advanced, that Beasts were mere Machines: he was thirty years in composing his Book, and published it in 1554; but so little notice was taken of it, that no one condescended to confute it. Father Pardies a Jesuite wrote a book concerning the knowledge of Beasts, to shew that they are not destitute of thought or understanding.

Thomas Thomas Willis has likewise written a treatise concerning the Souls of Beasts: there is another on the same subject by M. Le Grand, and a Book intitled, Of the Souls of Beasts, printed at Lions in 1676, composed by Antony D'Illy Priest of Ambrun.

Solomon in the book of Ecclesiastes, whether he proposes his own thoughts or those of the Philosophers and Free-thinkers of his time, expresses himself in a manner to persuade people that Beasts have understanding [Eccles. iii. 18, 19, 21.] and a reasonable soul: I said in my heart concerning the estate of the Sons of Men, that God might manifest them, and that they might see that they themselves are Beasts; for as the one dieth, so dieth the other, yea they have all one breath, so that a man hath no pre-eminence above a Beast. --- Who knoweth the spirit of man that goeth upward, and the spirit of the beast that goeth downward to the earth? The Scripture speaks of the death of Animals and [Ps. civ. 29. Job xxxiv. 14.] Men much in the same manner: Thou takest away their breath and they die, and return to their dust. And Job, If he gather unto himself his spirit and his breath, all flesh shall perish together.

But we are not to carry the consequences of these passages too far, nor should we infer from them that Beasts are in every respect equal to Man, that they reason like him, that they are capable of Religion, of knowing God, of attaining to a state of Beatitude, and of acting by supernatural views. The knowledge, reasoning, desires and designs of Beasts are limited to the knowledge and discernment of what may contribute to their temporal happiness, the preservation of their bodies, and the multiplication of their species. Their Souls may indeed judge and distinguish between hot and cold, what is advantageous and dangerous to their health; but will never enable them to discern between moral good and evil, between what is just and unjust, lawful and unlawful; they will be, if any one will have it so, immortal and eternal, because if they think, they must necessarily be spiritual; but this is a privilege which is common to them with bodies, and matter, the essence whereof is indefectible, nor can their nature perish. Matter may change in figure or situation, be at rest or in motion; but it cannot be annihilated, nor cease to be, unless God ceases to preserve it; and in this sense the Angels themselves, and the Souls of Men have no more privilege than Matter.

But what becomes of the Souls of Beasts when separated from Matter? To this we can make no reply, because we have no principle which can discover it to us; neither revelation, nor experience, nor reasoning by effects and causes can furnish us with the least light in this particular. We know that God created all things for his Glory, that the Souls of Beasts are incapable of being elevated to such a degree, as to have a knowledge and love of their Creator; he therefore must be glorified by them some other way which is not known to us. Why then should we desire to fathom the secrets of his Wisdom, and judge of things which lye beyond our reach?

We know the great objection which is borrowed from S. Austin[9] against the Souls of Beasts; under a just God, no one can be unhappy that does not deserve it: Neque enim sub Deo justo miser esse quisquam, nisi mereatur, potest. Now if Beasts have sense and reason they are unhappy, they therefore have deserv'd to be so; nor can they by any thing have merited to be so but by sin. Now supposing they have sinn'd, they are therefore capable of Religion, of the Love and Knowledge of God; which is contrary to all that has been said above. Let it be granted that they are miserable, for this cannot be denied, since men kill and eat them, subject them to the hardest and most extream labours, beat, use them ill, and persecute them, without any other reason than their will, their good pleasure, or diversion. If Beasts had a Soul capable of sense and reason, would God have given sinful Man so intire and absolute a dominion over them?

To this we may reply, that God being absolute Lord over his creature, may dispose of it as he pleases without being obliged to give an account to any one of his conduct. Has not the potter full power to do every thing which he thinks proper with his clay, to make either a vessel of honour, [Rom. ix. 21. Wisd. xv. 7, 8.] or one designed for ignominious uses? God created Beasts for Man, to Man he has given an absolute empire over them; these are truths very well known: he has permitted Man to eat, and consequently to kill them: Man uses this power, this liberty; so far things are right. What then can Beasts, whom we suppose reasonable, complain of? Will they tell God, that they are innocent, and he subjects them to wicked, brutal, and foolish Men, who manifestly abuse the power and dominion which he hath given them over them? Shall the sinful and unhappy Child, the Son of wrath and indignation, born for misery and labour, shall he say unto his Father, What begettest thou? or to the Woman, What hast thou brought forth? Shall the clay say to him that fashioneth it, What makest thou? or thy work, He hath no hands?

Do we not see in the instance of Job, that God sometimes punishes the just, tho' innocent, [Job ix. 17.] He multipheth my wounds without a cause; a cause; and in another place God says to the Devil; Thou movedst me against him to destroy him without a cause. And in the [John ix.] Gospel, the Disciples seeing one born blind, asked our Saviour, Whether he had merited this misfortune by his own sins, or by those of his parents? He answered, By neither one nor the other; but God had so ordained, that his works might be manifested in him. We know that the Blessed Virgin and S. John the Baptist lived in a state of innocency, and brought none of the blemishes of original sin with them into the world; yet the Holy Spirit informs us, that the sword of grief pierced the very soul of Mary: and that S. John after having suffered much in prison, died [Matth.] by the sword of the wicked. The innocent and just therefore are not always exempt from pain and suffering; and to return to Beasts, God exercises his sovereign power over them, he makes use of that right which he possesses as a Father and Creator, and does injustice to no one. It was in his choice either to create Beasts or leave them in the state of non-entity. In the midst of their unhappiness they are infinitely obliged to him, since after all they derive from him being, life, action, and all the good that they enjoy.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

See hereafter the Article Transmigration.
Ovid. Metam. l. xv.
Philo de Somniis.
Basnag. Hist. des Juifs. t. IV. l. vi. c. 30.
D'Herbolet. Bibl. Orient. p. 443. col. 1.
Idem p. 349. col. 2.
Plin. l. viii. c. 1.
Diogen. Laert.
Aug. Op. Imp. contra Julian. l. i. art. xxxix.

Beauty

BEAUTY. The Hebrew word Naveh, which signifies Beauty, is likewise taken frequently for a Dwelling. The Lord hath loved the Beauty of Jacob, his Temple, his Place of abode which he hath chosen in Jacob. [Ps. xlvi. 5.] Elegit nobis hæreditatem suam, speciem Jacob quam dilexit. This other passage of Psalm xlix. 2. Sion species decoris ejus may be expounded after the same manner. And again Psalm lxvii. 13. Speciei domus dividere spolia: In the Hebrew, the habitation of the house, they who continued at home divided the spoil with those, who went to war. The Temple of the Lord and his Tabernacle, which are the places of his abode among men, are likewise called his habitation. God delivered the Beauty of the Israelites, the Ark of the Lord, into the hands of the Philistines. Jeremiah xxxi. 23. calls the Temple Pulchritudo Justitiæ, Mons sanctus. And in another place, he compares it to a Lion, and calls it, Pulchritudinem robustam by reason of its strength. Job says, that he cursed the Beauty of the wicked. Job v. 3. in the Hebrew, his Habitation. Concerning the Beauty of Jesus Christ, see the Article Jesus Christ.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Bdellium

BDELLIUM, is a Gum which comes from a tree, that is very common in Arabia, and many other places of the East. Pliny saysm, that the best Bdellium comes [Genes. ii. 11.] from the Bactrian; that the tree, which produces it, is black, as large as an olive-tree with leaves like those of an oak, and fruit like that of the caper-tree. Bdellium should be transparent, and yellow as wax, bitter to the taste, and oily; it smells like the unguis odoratus, when it is burnt. There is Bdellium to be found likewise in the Indies, in Media and Babylonia. In Hebrew it is called Bdolack. Moses says, there is some of it in the country through which the river Pison runs, and that the Manna of the Israelites was of the colour of Bdellium, that is, inclining to yellow.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Bebai

BEBAI, the children of Bebai returned from Babylon to the number of six hundred twenty three.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Bebethen

BEBETHEN, a City eight miles Eastward from Ptolemaïs[1].

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Euseb. Onomast. voce Βαιβαί.

Becah

BECAH or Bekah, half a Shekel[1]. Every Israelite paid an hundred Bekahs a head every year for the support of the [Exod.] Temple. See Matth. xvii. 23. and hereafter under the title Didrachma.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Translators' note. Plin. l. xii. c. 9.

Becher (I)

I. BECHER, the Son of Ephraim; chief of the Family of the Bachrites. Numb. xxvi. 35.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Becher (II)

II. BECHER, the Son of Benjamin, and Father of Zemira, &c. Genes. xlvi. 21. and 1 Chr. vii. 6, 8.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Bechorath

BECHORATH, the Son of Aphia, and Great-Grandfather of Kish the Father of Saul. 1 Sam. ix. 1.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Bectilet

BECTILET. See Judith ii. 21. in the Greek. It is said that Holofernes departing from Nineveh, after three days march arrived with his Army at Bectilet, and incamped near the mountain, which is to the left of Cilicia. We take Bectilet to be the country of Bagdania, to the left or North of Mount Argeé, in the Vulgate called Mount Ange.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Bedad

[Genef. xxxv. 35.] BEDAD, the Father of Hadad the Edomite. The Septuagint in Genesis and in the Chronicles call it Barad.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Bedan

[1 Chr. i. 46.] BEDAN. It is said in the first book of Samuel, xii. 11. that the Lord sent several Deliverers for the preservation of Israel, such as Jerubbaal, Bedan, Jephthah, and Samuel. Jerubbaal and Gideon we know are the same, but we no where find the name of Bedan among the Judges of Israel. The Septuagint instead of Bedan read Barak. Others[1] assert, that Bedan is the same as Jair of the Tribe of Manasseh, who judg'd Israel for three and twenty [Judg. x.3. 1 Chr. ii. 21, 22.] years. There was one Bedan Great-grandson to Machir. Jair was descended from a Daughter of Machir. The Chaldee, the Rabbins, and after them the generality of the Commentators[2], have affirmed[3] affirmed, that Bedan was Samson, who was of the Tribe of Dan. But I should prefer rather their opinion, who make Bedan and Jair to be the same person. The names of Samson and Barak were added in many Latin Copies[4], before the corrections of them by the Roman Censors were published.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Jun. Piscat. in 1 Reg. xii. 11.

Lyr. Est. Menoch. Tir. Cornel. Sanct. &c.

Translators' note. A Bekah in Dr. Arbuthnot's table of reductions is 13*d* 11/16. In Dr. Prideaux's com- putation 1.6. The half Shekel was called Bekah from the verb Baka, which signifies divided in two parts.

Ita Sixt. V. Editi. Jerobaal, & Baldan, & Samson, & Barak, & Jephte.

Bedeiah

BEDEIAH, was one of those who after the return from Babylon separated from their Wives which they had married contrary to the Law.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Beeliada

BEELIADA, the Son of David. 1 Chr. xiv. 7.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Beel-Meus

BEEL-MEUS. Nine miles from Esbron. Eusebius says, that there are warm waters at Baal-meus. It is the same as Baal -meon.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Beel-Teem

[Ezra iv. 9. & seq.] BEEL-TEEM, or Rehum Beel-teem. Rehum was his name, Beel-teem was that of his dignity, which some believe to have been that of Counsellor, or Secretary, or Chief-Treasurer. He was at the head of those Officers of the King of Persia, who commanded in Samaria and Palestine. He wrote to Artaxerxes, otherwise called Smerdis or Oropastes the Successor of Cambyses, to oppose the rebuilding of the Temple of Jerusalem. His Letter had the effect he desired; for Artaxerxes hereupon sent orders to discontinue the works.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Beel-Zebub

BEEL-ZEBUB, or Belzebub. The God Fly, a Deity adored by those of Ekron. There are disputes concerning the form and quality of this ridiculous God. We have treated at large on this matter in our Dissertation concerning the Gods of the Philistines, printed before our Comment on the first book of Kings, p. 27. Beel-zebub, or as he is often called in Greek and Latin, Beel-zebul or Beel-zebut, had a celebrated Temple and Oracle at Ekron. Ahaziah King of Israel, having fallen from the terrass of his house into the dining [2 Kings i. 2, 3, &c.] -room, and received thereby some dangerous hurts, sent to consult Beel-zebub to know if he should be cured of his wounds. [Matt. xii. 24. Luke xi. 15. Mark iii. 22.] In the New Testament Beel-zebub is often called the Prince of the Devils.

Some Commentators will have it, that the name of Beel-zebub is not the true name of this Deity, but Bel-samin the God of Heaven, whom the Hebrews in derision called Beel-zebub, the God Fly, or Beelzebul the God of Ordure. Others are of opinion, that this Deity of the Ekronites was called the God of Flies, because he defended people from the Flies, in like manner as the Eleans adored Jupiter the Driver away of Flies[1], under which quality the Romans too worshipped him[2]. Lastly, others[3] believe that the fly or beetle, and the figure of this Insect was adored. Pliny[4] assures us, that the Egyptians, who lay so near to the Philistines in whose country Ekron was, paid divine honours to the Beetle. It is observed that there are Beetles in the picture of Isis, on which Pignorius has made a Comment. The Author of the book of Wisdom, having [Wisd. xii. 8.] said that God sent flies and wasps to drive the Canaanites and Ammonites by degrees out of their country, adds, that God made those very things, to which they paid divine honours, the instruments of their punishment; they therefore adored Flies and Wasps. There are said to be medals and old seals, on which Flies and Beetles are represented. Why the Jews in Jesus Christ's time should call Beel-zebub the Prince of the Devils we do not very well know.

Some Authors are of opinion, that the name of Achor[5] the God invoked at Cyrene against Flies, comes from Accaron, the City where Beel-zebub was worshipped. Others think, that the true name which the Philistines gave their Deity was Beelzeback, God of Sacrifice, or Beel-zebaoth, God of Hosts, or Beelzebul, God of the Habitation or of Heaven; and that the Jews, who delighted in disfiguring the names of false Gods, and were scrupulous of calling them by their proper appellations, gave them in derision that of God [Ps. xvi. 4. Exod. xxiii. 13.] Fly, or God of Ordure. The name of Beelzebuth is not very different from that of Beelzebaoth, God of Hosts. The worship of this false God must have been in reputation in our Saviour's time, since the Jews accused him with driving out Devils in the name of Belzebub Prince of the Devils, that is to say, of Satan, Lucifer, or Chief of the rebellious Angels, whom the Jews of our Saviour's time called Belzebut or Belzebub. This appears clearly by our Lord's answer and way of [Matth. xii. 24. Ibid. verf. 26, 27. 2 Kings i. 12.] arguing; If Satan cast out Satan, he is divided against himself, how then can this kingdom stand?

It is a question which is the true reading of S. Matthew's Text, xii. 24. whether Belzebub, as we find in the Vulgate; or Belzebul, as the old Greek Copies, and the Oriental Translations from the Greek read it; or Belzebuth, as the French pronounce it. It is certain that in the Hebrew books of the Old Testament we always read Belzebub v, that is to say, the God Fly, or the God of the Fly. The[6] Septuagint translate it Baal the Fly, and consequently they read Belzebub. Some think that the originals of the New Testament had the same reading, and that the Copiers through ignorance or derision substituted Belzebul in the room of it, which signifies the God of Ordure ; but of this there is no proof. As for Belzebuth, some would justify it by saying that it is the Plural of Sebub, and that at first the name was Beelsebuboth, God of Flies, and in the way of abbreviation Beelsebuth ; but there is no other passage to be produced, wherein we find Beelsebuboth instead of Beelsebub. See Bochart. de Animal. Sacr. P. 2. l. iv. c. 9. & Selden, De Diis Syriis. Syntag. 1. c. 6.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Plin. l. x. c. 29. Solin. c. 1.

Translators' note. Not as the Eleans and others by the name of Jupiter but of Hercules Apomyius, tho' we no where read that killing Flies was one of his labours.

Clem. Alex. in Protreptico, & Pausan. in Eliac.

Plin. l. xxx. c. 11. Plutarch. Sympos. l. iv. c. 5.

Plin. l. x. c. 28. Cyrenaici Achorem Deum, &c.

70 .νωρακκΑ νοεΘ ναιυμ λααΒצבוב בעל.

Beer

BEER, or Beera. This word signifies a Well in Hebrew[1]. There is a City of this name four leagues from Jerusalem, in the way to Schechem or Naplouse[2]. It is very probable, that Jotham the Son of Gideon retired to this place, to prevent his falling [Judg. ix. 21.] into the hands of his Brother Abimelech.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

באר*Beer*, a Well.

Mundrel's Journey from Aleppo to Jerusalem.

Beer-Elim

BEER-ELIM, or Puteus-Elim in Isaiah xv. 8. that is to say, the Well of the Princes, is probably the same with that [Numb. xxi. 17.] mentioned in the book of Numbers, under the name of the Princes Well, Beersarim.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Beeroth (I)

I. BEEROTH, a City belonging to the Gibeonites, which was yielded afterwards [Josh. ix. 17. 2 Sam. iv. 2.] to the Tribe of Benjamin. Eusebius says, that Beeroth was situated at seven miles distance from Jerusalem, in the way towards Nicopolis. S. Jerom instead of Nicopolis, reads Neapolis, or Naplouse. M. Reland prefers Eusebius's reading. The Reader may examine his proofs[1].

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Reland. Palæst. lib. iii. p. 618, 619.

Beeroth of the Children of (II)

II. BEEROTH of the Children of Jaakan. It is spoken of in Deuteronomy x. 6. and Eusebius says, that this station of the Israelites was shewn ten miles from the City of Petra[1]. Moses in Numb. xxxiii. 31, 32. reads only Bene-Jaakan, instead of Beeroth-bene-Jaakan. Deut. x. 6.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Euseb. Onomast. in voce Beeroth.

Beerah

BEERAH, Head of the Tribe of Reuben. He was carried away into captivity by Tiglath-pilesér. 1 Chr. v. 6.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Beeri (I)

I. BEERI, Father of the Prophet Hosea. Hos. i.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Beeri (II)

II. BEERI, Father of Judith the Wife of Esau. Genes. xxvi. 34.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Beer-Sheba

BEER-SHEBA, the Well of an Oath, or the Well of Seven ; because here Abraham made an alliance with Abimelech [Genes. xx. 31.] King of Gerar, and gave him seven ewelambs, to serve as a monument of that [Genes. xxi. 30, 31.] Covenant which they had sworn to. Beersheba was at first given by Joshuah to the Tribe of Judah, and afterwards a cession [Josh. xv. 28. — xix. 2. 2 Sam. xvii. 11, &c.] of it was made to that of Simeon. It was situated twenty miles from Hebron, towards the South, and there was a Roman Garrison there in Eusebius's and S. Jerom's time[1]. The limits of the Holy Land are often expressed in Scripture by these terms, From Dan even unto Beer-sheba. Dan was at the Northern, and Beer-sheba at the Southern extremity of the Land.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Euseb. & Hieron. in locis.

Bees

BEES, a sort of Flies producing honey. See hereafter Honey. Bees were declared to be unclean by the Law. Levit. xi. 23.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Beestera

BEESTERA. This is the same as Bostra or Bozra, capital of the Eastern part of Edom. See Bozra.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Begabar

BEGABAR, a City beyond Jordan ; the Prophet Naham's Country[1]. It is probably the same as Beth-abara.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Epiphan. de Vita & Morte Prophetàrum.

Begging

BEGGING, to beg, mendicare, mendicus [Deut. xv. 4, 7. — xv. 11.] . Moses exhorting the Israelites to Alms -giving, says, To the end that there be no poor among you ; for the Lord shall greatly bless thee in the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee for an inheritance to possess it. And a little lower ; If there be among you a poor man of one of thy Brethren, within any of thy gates, in thy land, which the Lord thy God giveth thee, thou shalt not harden thine heart, nor shut thine hand from thy poor Brother. The Hebrew Text of this place does not speak of begging. Besides we very well know, that there were at all times poor persons and beggars among the Jews as well as among other people. God himself in the same Chapter says, The poor shall never cease out of the land. And we see by the Gospel, that there were several beggars in Jerusalem, and other places in the land[1]. Lazarus was poor, and forced to beg ; and so was the man born [Mark x. 46. Luke xviii. 35. John ix. 8. Luke xvi. 20.] blind, who was cured by Jesus Christ, and some other blind men at Jericho. The true sense therefore of the passage in Moses is, that God will so plentifully bless the lands of the Hebrews in the sixth year, that tho' there be no harvest in the sabbatical year, nevertheless there will be no poor among them, provided they faithfully observe his precepts ; or it was his design to recommend charity and alms-giving to them in such a manner that there should be no poor among them. Be so charitable and liberal of your alms, that there may be no indigent person seen in Israel. The Jews still at this day observe great discipline, in order to prevent as much as possible, there being any poor among them[2]. They give alms, and make collections in publick and private for the poor ; and it[3] is very rare to see any beggars of their Nation, in places, where they are numerous and powerful e.

Some have been of opinion that Jesus Christ and his Apostles were reduced to such a degree of poverty, as to beg. The Author of a Sermon upon Sunday in the Octave of the Epiphany, printed under the name of S. Bernard, but written in reality by Alfred Abbot of Rieval, of the Cistercian Order in England, who lived in the twelfth Age[4], says expressly, that Jesus Christ begg'd from door to door during his three days stay at Jerusalem, when he remained there without the knowledge of his parents, being at that time twelve years of age. Quasi unus è turba pauperum stipem per ostia mendicabat. S. Thomas[5] in his Answer to William of S. Amour, who had attacked the Preaching Friars, on the score of their begging, and maintained, that neither our Saviour nor his Apostles ever begg'd, endeavours to prove, that Jesus Christ in reality did beg; for example at Jericho, when he said to Zachæus, Make haste and [Luke xix. 5.] come down; for to day I must abide at thy house. But it must be confessed, that this passage does no way prove, that our Saviour begg'd on this occasion, and Alfred's opinion is of no consequence, because it is founded only upon a conjecture, and a very uncertain fact. But we know indubitably, that our Saviour had some persons, who followed him, and supplied his wants, they [— viii. 3.] ministred unto him of their substance. He had a common purse, into which was put whatsoever was voluntarily offered to him. Judas had the bag, and bare what was put [John xii. 6.] therein. Lastly, Jesus Christ before his preaching, was of a trade, and worked at it with his Father Joseph, Is not this the Carpenter? The Disciples also had trades, [Mark vi. 3.] which they exercised even during their preaching. See what S. Paul says, Acts xx. 34. These hands have ministred to my necessities, and to them that were with me. See also 1 Cor. iv. 12. Ephes. iv. 28. Acts xviii. 2, 3, &c. See hereafter the Article Poor.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Talmud. apud Seldenum de Jure Naturæ lib. iv. cap. 6. p. 728.

Translators' note. In the more considerable Towns where they are settled, they have several Confraternities, one whereof has the care of collecting Alms for the Poor ; another for the Redemption of Captives ; and a third for endowing young Maidens. The Talmudists have a maxim, that they were never to send away a poor Man without giving him something, if it were but a grain of corn.

Leo. Mod. p. 1. c. 14. & Selden. de Jur. Nat. & Gent. l. vi. c. 6.

Vide in Edit. Oper. S. Bern. t. 2. 578. Edit. Mabill. & in Bibl. PP. t. 23. p. 154. Opusc. l. xix. c. 7.

D. Thom. l. 17.

Beghai

BEGHAI, and his Sons returned from Babylon with Zerubbabel. Ezra ii. 2, 14. See Biguai.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Behemoth

BEHEMOTH. Job speaks of an Animal, [Job ix. 10. בהמות] which he calls Behemoth, the particular properties whereof are described at large by him. Bochart has taken a great deal of pains to make it appear, that it is the Hippopotamus, or River-horse. Sanctius thinks it to be an Ox. The Fathers suppose the Devil to be meant by it; but we agree with the generality of Interpreters in their opinion, that it is the Elephant. Behemoth in Hebrew signifies Beasts in general, particularly the larger kind of animals, which are fit for service. The Rabbins tell us, that Behemoth is the largest four-footed creature that God has created; that in the beginning he made two, male and female; the female he killed and salted, to reserve it as an entertainment for the Elect, whenever the Messiah shall come: the male is still living, but when this time comes, God will kill it, and give it to the Israelites, who shall then rise from the dead. They are so fully convinced of these extravagancies, that they often swear by the share they are to have of Behemoth.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Beiza

BEIZA or Beizath. This word in Hebrew signifies an Egg[1], and a certain measure in use among the Jews. They say that an Egg contains the sixth part of a Log, and consequently three cubick inches and this fraction □□□□□□/□□□□□□. The Beiza is likewise a sort of gold coin common among the Persians: it weighs forty drachma's, and from this word, not from the City Byzantium the Besam was formed. A Besam is worth two Dinars, and every Dinar twenty or five and twenty Drachma's[2]. The Persians say Philip of Macedon owed Darius King of Persia a thousand Beizaths, or gold Eggs, for Tribute-money; and that Alexander the Great succeeding Philip, refused to pay them, saying, the bird which laid these Eggs was flown into the other world.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

ביצה*Ovum*.

Bibl. Orient. p. 286. B.

Bekah

BEKAH, see Becah.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Bel

BEL or Belus, the first King of Babylon, who after his death received divine honours in this City, and throughout all Chaldæa. We do not know exactly whether it were Nimrod, or Belus the Father of Ninus, or some other of their Kings, whom they worshipped under the name of Belus; or whether it were the Sun, or Saturn, or Jupiter. See above the [Jerem. 1. 2.] Article Baal. Jeremiah speaking of the Destruction of Babylon by the Medes and Persians, Babylon is taken, Bel is confounded, Merodach is broken in pieces, her Idols are confounded, her images are broken in pieces. The same Prophet in another [Id. 1. 44.] place says, And I will punish Bel in Babylon, and I will bring forth out of his mouth that which he hath swallowed up, and the nations shall not flow together any more unto him; yea the wall of Babylon shall fall. This was seen to be executed under Cyrus, Darius the Son of Hystaspes, and the Princes who succeeded them. See Babylon.

The Babylonians worshipped Bel as a living God; they attributed to him the gift of healing diseases, and believed he [Baruch vi. 40.] eat and drank like a living person. Baruch says, that one dumb was presented to him, that he might restore him to the use of speech, as tho' he were able to understand. [Dan. xiv. 2.] And Daniel relates in what manner he discovered the cheat of Bel's Priests, who came every night through private doors, to eat what was offered to this false Deity.

Herodotus[1] describes the Temple of Belus at Babylon, as one of the most wonderful works in the World. It was a prodigious Tower, the basis whereof was a square, every side of which was a Furlong or an hundred twenty five Paces, and consequently an hundred Paces in circuit; it consisted of eight Towers built one upon another. Strabo[2] in his description of it, calls it a Pyramid, because it decreased as it rose higher, and says it was a Furlong or an hundred twenty five Paces in height. People went up it by stairs which were carried round about the outside of it. The eight Towers were as it were so many stages, wherein several large Chambers were contrived, supported by Pillars. Upon the very top of the Tower was the Temple of Belus, wherein were many Statues of massy Gold; one among the rest forty foot high. This Temple[3] with its riches was in being till the time of Xerxes; who returning from his unfortunate expedition into Egypt, demolished the Temple, and carried off the immense wealth, which was inclosed in it; consisting not only in golden Statues, but in furniture and instruments appointed for the worship of them. See above Babel, Tower of Babel.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Herod. l. i. c. 181.
Strabo lib. xvi.
Diodor. Sicul. l. ii.

Bela (I)

I. BELA, the same as Bala, or Zohar. See Zohar.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Bela (II)

II. BELA, the Son of Beor, King of [Genes. xxxvi. 32.] Dinhabah, in the Eastern part of Edom.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Bela (III)

III. BELA, the Son of Benjamin, a chief of the family of the Belites. Numb. xxvi. 38.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Beleus

BELEUS or Belus, a little river of Galilee, which falls into the Mediterranean, at the distance of two Furlongs from Ptolemais[1]. Pliny says[2], it springs up in a lake, and does not run above the space of four miles. Its waters are not good to drink, and the bottom of it is marshy; but the water of the Sea flowing with the tide into its channel, washes away the sand, and of this they make Glass. The bank, from whence the sand is taken for this use, is not in extent above five hundred Paces, and tho', for so many Ages, so much has continually been carried away, yet it remains inexhaustible, and furnishes perpetually a fresh stock. Josephus and Tacitus[3] speak of it as well as Pliny; but the Authors who treat of the Holy Wars, take no other notice of the sands of Belus, than of something which in their time was out of use, and known only by the writings of the Ancients.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Traite des Caravannes par M. Bugeron, p. 83.
Plin. l. xxxvi. c. 26.
Tacit. hist. l. v.

Belga

BELGA, Chief of the fifteenth Band of [1 Chron. xxiv. 14.] Priests established by David.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Belgai

BELGAI, of the sacerdotal family, was one of those who signed the covenant with the Lord, when the Jews returned from [Nehem. x. 8.] Babylon.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Belial

BELIAL. This term is plainly Hebrew[1]; it signifies a wicked worthless Man, one who is resolved, to endure no subjection, a Rebel, a disobedient Fellow. Thus the Inhabitants of Gibrah, who abused the Levite's Wife, have the name of Belial [Judg. xix. 22. 1 Sam. xi. 12.] given them. Hophni and Phineas, the High -Priest Eli's Sons, are likewise called Sons of Belial, upon the score of the several crimes they had committed, and the unbecoming manner with which they behaved themselves in the Temple of the Lord.

Sometimes the name of Belial is taken to denote the Devil. For example, St. Paul [2 Cor. vi. 15.] says, What concord hath Christ with Belial? From whence we may conclude, that in his time the Jews, under the name of Belial, commonly understood the Devil to be meant, in the places where this term is to be met with in the Old Testament.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

בליעלBelial absque jugo.

Bell

BELL. Moses ordain'd, that the lower part of the blew Robe, which the High-Priest wore when he perform'd religious Ceremonies, should be adorned with Pomegranates and gold Bells intermixed equally, and at equal distances. The Pomegranates were of Wool, in colour blew, purple and crimson, and the Bells were of Gold. Moses [Exod. xxviii. 33, 34.] adds, And it shall be upon Aaron to minister; and his sound shall be heard when he goeth in unto the holy place before the Lord, and when he cometh out, that he dye not. Some of the Hebrews believe these little Bells to be round like ours; others that they were such as were then commonly in use.

The Kings of Persia are said to have had the hem of their Robes adorned like that of the Jewish High-Priest, with Pomegranates and gold Bells[1]. The Arabian Ladies who are about the King's Person[2], who serve and divert him, have little gold Bells fastened to their legs, their neck, and elbows, and when they dance, the motion of these Bells makes a very agreeable harmony. The Arabian Princesses[3] wear large hollow gold Rings, which are filled with little flints, that sound like little bells when they walk: Or they are large circles with little rings hung all round, and produce the same effect. These rings are open in in one place in the form of a crescent, through which they get in the small of their legs. Besides these they have abundance of flat bobs fixed to the end of their hair, which is matted and hangs long behind; these make a noise as often as they stir, and give notice that the Mistress of the house is going by, that so the Servants in the family may behave themselves respectfully, and Strangers may retire, to avoid seeing the Person who is passing.

It was therefore in all probability with a design of giving notice, that the High-Priest was passing by, that he too wore little Bells at the hem of his robe; or it was as it were a kind of publick notice that he was going into the Sanctuary. In the King of Persia's Court no one entered the apartments without some warning, not by knocking or even speaking, but by the sound of something. Thus the High Priest out of respect did not [Judith xiv. 8, 9.] knock as he went into the Sanctuary, but by the sound of the little Bells fastened to the bottom of his robe, he in some sort desired permission to enter, that the sound of the Bells might be heard, and he not punished with death, says Moses.

As to the number of Bells worn by the High-Priest, Authors are not agreed. Some say there were twelve, others fifty, others sixty six, some again seventy two, and others fourscore: but there is nothing certain in any of these suppositions; it depending on the size which they were made of; for if they were small Bells, there might be a good many of them used in embellishing the bottom of the High-Priest's tunick.

There is frequent mention in the Scripture of Bells, which were sometimes made use of in the Temple. The figure of them is [1 Chron. xv. 19.] not known to us. The Hebrew[4] terms them Mizeloth, or Mizlothaim. They were of copper, the sound of them was sharp, and heard at a great distance. The Prophet Zachary speaks of Bells hung to the bridles of War-horses, that thereby they might be [Zach. xiv. 20.] accustomed to noise. In that day, says the Prophet, shall there be upon the bridles of the horses Holiness unto the Lord. A horse which had not been trained, nor used to wear Bells by the Greeks, was called one that had never heard the noise of Bells. The mules that were employed in the funeral pomp of Alexander the Great had at each jaw a gold Bell w.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Joseph. l. ii. de Bello, c. 9.
Tergum Scheni, in Esther vi. 10.
M. Darvieux Coutumes des Arabes, c. 17. p. 265.
מצלותים נחשת להשמיעw Vide Scholiast. Aristoph. in Ranis, & Etymologic. in κυνοδέζω; & Hen. Steph. in Thes. in κωδωνοφαλεροπώλης.

Belly

BELLY, is often taken for Gluttony, [Tit. i. 12. Philip. iii. 19.] The Cretians are always liars, evil beasts, slow bellies; and elsewhere, There are many whose God is their Belly. And to the [Rom. xvi. 18.] Romans, People of this sort serve not the Lord Jesus but their own bellies.

Belly is used likewise for the heart, the bottom of the Soul. The words of a talebearer go down into the innermost parts of [Prov. xviii. 8. — xx. 27.] the Belly, and wound the very bottom of the Soul. And in another place, The spirit of man is the candle of the Lord searching all the inward parts of the Belly. The Spirit of man is like the light of God, which penetrates the very bottom of the Soul. And [— xxii. 18.] again, Preserve the lessons of Wisdom, if thou keep it within thy Belly, in thy heart, it will not break out upon thy lips.

The Belly of Hell, the grave, or some imminent danger of death. The Author of Ecclesiasticus says, that he was delivered de [Eccl. li. 7. Jonah ii. 3.] altitudine ventris inferi; and Jonah that he cried to the Lord out of the Belly of Hell, from the bottom of the Sea, from the whale's Belly.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Belma

[Judith. vii. 3.] BELMA. The Book of Judith speaks of Belma, or Belmon, near the valley of Esdraelom.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Belmen

BELMEN. Judith iv. 4. in the Greek mentions Belmen, the same probably as Beel-maïn; perhaps Abel-maïn, of the Tribe of Naphtali, 2 Chr. xvi. 4. or Abelmehira, as the Syriac reads it, Judith iv. 4. and vii. 3. So that Belmen, Belma, Belmaïm and Abel-mehola may be all the same place.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Belshazzar

BELSHAZZAR, the Son of Evilmerodach, and Grandson to the Great Nebuchadnezzar. This Prince made an entertainment for a thousand of his most eminent [Dan. v. 1, 2, &c.] Courtiers, at which every one drank according to his Age[1]. The King overpowered with wine, commanded the gold and silver vessels to be produced before him, which Nebuchadnezzar his Grandfather brought from the Temple of Jerusalem, that he might drink out of them with his Wives, his Concubines, and the Grandees of his Court. They began therefore to drink and praise their false Gods; at that very instant there was an appearance seen as it were of a man's hand and fingers, writing upon the wall of the King's hall over against the candlestick.[2] Belshazzar observing this, was very much astonished, made a great outcry, and commanded all the Diviners and Sages of Babylon to be sent for, in order to have that explained which was written on the wall.

When they came the King promised, that whoever should expound this writing, should be clothed with scarlet, should wear a gold chain round his neck, and should be the third person of his Kingdom in place and power. The Magi could comprehend nothing at all of this writing, which increased the disorder and uneasiness that the King was in and his whole Court. In the midst of this disturbance, the Queen Mother, Wife[3] to the late Nebuchadnezzar the Great, coming into the room of entertainment, told Belshazzar, that there was one Daniel in his Dominions, who had more knowledge than all the Magi and Soothsayers of Chaldæa, and had given proofs of his sufficiency in the reign of Nebuchadnezzar. Hereupon the King immediately sent for him, and directed him, if he could, to interpret what was written on the wall, with an assurance, that he should have the third place in his Kingdom, should be clothed in scarlet, and wear a gold chain about his neck. Daniel thanked him for the presents which he mentioned, and promised to perform what he required of him.

He reproached him with great freedom for his ingratitude to God, who had advanced him to the rank and authority of a Sovereign, and for his profanation of the Vessels which were consecrated to the Lord; then he said, the writing is this, Mene, Tekel, Upharsin, which is to be thus interpreted, Mene God hath computed the days of thy reign, and hath appointed the end of it. Tekel, thou hast been weighed in the balance, and found light. Peres thy Kingdom is divided and given to the Medes and Persians.

Daniel hereupon was clothed with scarlet, had a gold chain put on, and was proclaimed the third person in the Kingdom: and that very night Belshazzar was killed, and Darius the Mede succeeded him in his Kingdom at the age of sixty two years. This is what we read in the fifth chapter of Daniel concerning Belshazzar. But we are infinitely perplexed, when we attempt to reconcile profane History with the account of this particular in the sacred Writings. It is generally believed, that Evil-merodach was succeeded by Nerigliffor, and that Nerigliffor was succeeded by Laborosoardoch; and that Belshazzar is the same as Nabonidas or Labynites. See our Comment upon Dan. v. 1. pages, 627, 628, 629, and 638. and the Discourse concerning the four great Monarchies prefixed to our Comment on Isaiah, pages 57 and 58.

All the marks whereby Nabonidas is described in History, agree with Belshazzar. Herodotus[4] says, that Nabonidas, otherwise called Labynites, was the last King of Babylon, that he was not of Nerigliffor's or Laborosoardach's Family, but was the Son of the great Queen Nitocris. Belshazzar in like manner is the last King of the Chaldæans, Son to a King of Babylon, [Dan. v. 2.] who can be no other than Evilmerodach. Daniel somewhere calls Belshazzar the Son of Nebuchadnezzar; but this is because the Grandsons, in the stile of the Hebrews have often the name of Sons given them. Lastly, Jeremiah says expressly, that all the [Jerem. xxvii. 6, 7.] nations shall be subject to Nebuchadnnezzar his Son, and Grandson, till the time shall come when vengeance is to be taken on himself and his country.

Xenophon[5] says, that Cyrus took Babylon by stratagem, having cut the channel of the Euphrates in several places: and diverted the Waters of it into ditches dug long before by Queen Semiramis; that his Army entred into the City by the channel of the river, and the gates through which it had a passage into Babylon; that the whole City was then engaged in debauchery and joy, by reason of some Festival which was that day celebrated; that the King of Babylon was put to death in his palace by the people belonging to Gadutas and Gobrias Babylonians, who had deserted to the party of the Medes, in order to revenge themselves on the King of Babylon.

Berosus and Megasthenes[6] relate, that Nabonidas was attacked by Cyrus in the seventeenth year of his reign; Nabonidas gave him battle and lost it. He fled for security with some few of his troops to Borsippe. Cyrus by this means became master of Babylon, and having demolished the outward walls of it he marched directly to Borsippe; but Nabonidas did not think it proper to stand a siege, he surrendered therefore to Cyrus, who treated him with humanity, and gave him a retreat in Carmania, where he passed the rest of his life. This doubtless is very different from what the Scripture tells us of Belshazzar.

But what variety soever may be observed in the different Historians, the result of their accounts is always this, that the Prophecies against Babylon were for the most part literally fulfilled at the death of Belshazzar. This City was besieged by an Army composed of Medes, Elamites, and Armenians, according to the Predictions of Isaiah and Jeremiah, that the fords of the [If. xiii. 17. xxi. 2. Jerem. l. 11, 27, 28, 29, 30. Jerem. l. 38. li. 36.] river should be seized, that confusion and disturbance should prevail throughout the City, that the bravest of the inhabitants should be in a consternation, that the river Euphrates should be made dry, and the City taken in a time of rejoicing, that its Princes, Sages and Captains should be overwhelmed with drunkenness, and pass from a natural to an eternal sleep, out of which they never should awake, that the City [Jerem. li. 39, 57.] which was formerly so beautiful, so powerful, and so flourishing, should become a dwelling for bitterns [Isaiah xiv. 23.] and birds of bad omen.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Diodor. Sicul. Bibl. l. xviii.

Belshazzar ascended the Throne of Chaldæa in the year of the world 3444. He made this great Entertainment in the year 3449. So that we allow him to have reigned but four years.

Vide Origen. & Theodoret. apud Hieronym. in Dan. v.

Herodot. l. i.

Xenoph. Cyropæd. l. 7.

Berof. apud Joseph. l. i. contra Appian. p. 1045. & Megasthen. apud Euseb. Præpar. l. ix. c. 41.

Belshazzar (II)

II. BELSHAZZAR, one of the wise men who came to worship Jesus Christ at Bethlehem, is called by this name: but we have no proof that any one of them was so denominated.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Belteshazzar

[Dan. i. 7.] BELTESHAZZAR. The name given Daniel at the court of Nebuchadnezzar.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Belus

BELUS. See Bel or Beleus.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Belzephon

BELZEPHON or Belsephon. See Baal-zephon.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Bemeselis

BEMESELIS, otherwise Bethome, a city subdued by Demetrius King of Syria. Compare Josephus de Bello, l. i. c. 3. & Antiq. l. xiii. c. 22.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ben-Abinadab

BEN-ABINADAB, governor of the country of Dor, married Taphath, the daughter of Solomon. 1 Kings iv. 11.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Benaiah (I)

I. BENAIAH, the Son of Jehoiada, Captain of David's guard. He took the two lions [2 Sam: xxiii. 20.] of Moab, that is to say, the two cities of Ar or Ariel, or the city Ar[1], divided in two by the river Arnon. He killed also a lion that had fall'n into a pit in a time of great snows. He fought a giant five cubits high, armed with sword and spear, tho' he had a staff only in his hand, and left him dead upon the spot. He adhered to Solomon's party against Adonijah, was sent by Solomon to kill Joab, and was [1 Kings i. 36. ii. 29.] made Generalissimo in his place.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Translators' note. In the Hebrew we read שני אראל, Schene Ariel, two lions, as the Author observes. The word El in composition with Ari, signifies a Lion of God, or a very strong lion; as by the Cedars of God are meant very tall Cedars.

Benaiah (II)

II. BENAIAH, or Bananias, the Son of Pahaih-Moab. After his return from Babylon, [Ezra x. 30.] separated from his wife, whom he had married against the Law.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Benaiah (III)

III. BENAIAH, the Son of Banai, and Benaiah the Son of Parosh, both Jews, who left their wives after their return from the Captivity, because they had married them contrary to the Law. Ezra x. 25 & 35.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ben-Dekar

BEN-DEKAR, Governor of the cities of Makaz Shaalbim, Bethshemesh, Elon and Bethanan, in the reign of Solomon. 1 Kings iv. 9.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Bene-Berak

BENE-BERAK, a city in the Tribe of Dan. The Vulgate makes two cities of it, [Josh. xix. 54.] Bane and Barak.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Benediction (I)

I. BENEDICTION. The Hebrews under this name often understand the presents which friends make to one another; in all probability because they are generally attended with blessings and compliments, both from those who give, and those who receive them. See Gen. xxxiii. 11. Jos. xv. 19. 1 Sam. xxv. 27. xxx. 26. 2 Kings v. 15, &c.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Benedictions (III)

III. BENEDICTIONS. Solemn Blessings, given the people by the Priests in certain ceremonies; for example, Moses says [Numb. vi. 23. &c.] to Aaron the High-Priest, On this wise shall ye bless the children of Israel, saying unto them, The Lord bless thee and keep thee, the Lord make his face to shine upon thee, and be gracious unto thee, the Lord lift up his countenance upon thee, and give thee peace. He pronounced these words standing, with a loud voice, and hands elevated and extended. The Prophets also, and inspired men, frequently blessed the Servants of God, and People of the Lord: The Psalms are full of Benedictions of this nature. The Patriarchs on their death-bed blessed their children and [Gen. xxvii. 49. Deut. xxxiii. Tob. vii. 7. Deut. xi. 26, 29. &c. xxvii. xxviii.] families. God ordains, that upon the arrival of the people of Israel in the promis'd land, the whole multitude should be convened between the mountains of Ebal and Gerizim, and that blessings should be published on mount Gerizim, for those who should observe the Laws of God, and curses on mount Ebal against the violators of these Laws. This was executed by Joshua, after he had conquered part of the land of Canaan. See the article [Jos. viii. 30, 31. 2 Cor. ix. 6.] Ebal.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Benediction (III)

III. BENEDICTION, signifies likewise abundance; He that soweth sparingly shall reap sparingly; and he who soweth with benediction, shall reap with benediction, with [Job vi. 5.] abundance. And again, I exhorted the brethren that they would go before unto you, and make up before hand your blessing, that it [Gen. xlix. 25.] may be, as it really is, a blessing and not of covetousness: And Jacob wishes his Son Joseph the blessings of heaven above, or rain and dew in abundance, blessing of the deep that lieth under, or water from the springs, blessings of the breasts and of the womb, fruitful women and cattle. And the Psalmist, [Psal. cxlv. 16. 2 Chron. xx. 23, &c.] Thou fillest all things living with benediction, with abundance of thy benefits

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Benediction (IV)

IV. BENEDICTION, Valley of Blessing. A place situated in the Tribe of Judah, near the Dead-sea and En-geddi. It was called the Valley of Berachah, or Blessing, after the miraculous Victory which Jehosaphat obtained over the confederated army of the Ammonites, Moabites and Edomites, in the year of the world, 3108. before J. C. 892. before the vulgar Æra 896.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ben-Gaber

BEN-GABER, the Son of Gaber, of the Tribe of Manasseh; he possessed the cities of Jair, and all the region of Argob, beyond the river Jordan. 1 Kings iv. 13.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ben-Hadad (I)

I. BEN-HADAD, Son of Tabrimon King of Syria; he came to the assistance of Asa King of Judah, against Baasha King of Israel; and obliged Baasha to return and succour his own country, and abandon Ramah, [1 Kings xv. 18.] which he had undertaken to fortify. This happened in the year of the world 3066. before the vulgar Æra 938. This Ben-hadad is [1 Kings xi. 25.] probably Hadad the Edomite, who rebelled against Solomon at the end of this Prince's reign.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ben-Hadad (II)

II. BEN-HADAD, King of Syria, Son [1 Kings xx. 34. Ibid. per totum.] of that Ben-hadad we have been speaking of, made war against Ahab King of Israel, in the year of the world 3103. that is to say, seven and thirty years after the war of Ben-hadad I. against Baasha King of Israel. We have discoursed very particularly of this war, under the article Ahab. Benhadad [In the Year of the World 3103, & 3104. before the vulgar Æra 900, and 901.] was defeated, and lost all his baggage. His generals told him, that the God of the Hebrews was the God of the mountains, and that if he intended to subdue this people, he must set a new army on foot, and attack them in the plain. Ben-hadad pursued this advice, and in the beginning of the year following came to Aphek with a powerful army. Ahab took the field likewise, with his troops; both armies were seven days in sight of each other, without coming to blows: At last, on the seventh day they engaged, and the Israelites killed an hundred thousand of Ben-hadad's people; and the remainder of his army endeavouring to secure themselves in Aphek, the walls of the city fell upon them, and crushed to death seven and twenty thousand more. Ben-hadad concealed himself in the most private part of his palace, to prevent his falling into the hands of Ahab.

Then Ben-hadad's servants said to him, we are inform'd that the Kings of Israel are mild and merciful, let us therefore put sackcloth on our loins, and ropes about our necks, and beg our lives of king Ahab. They went to him therefore, and said, thy servant Ben-hadad sent us to ask life of thee: If he is yet alive, said Ahab, he is my brother, Go, bring him to me. Ben-hadad being come, Ahab obliged him to get up into his chariot, and the king of Syria said to him, I will restore the cities which my Father took from thy Father, and thou shalt make streets for thee in Damascus, as my Father made in Samaria, and give me liberty. Ahab accepted these conditions and let him go. Hereupon God sent a Prophet to him, to reprove him for thus giving a wicked Prince his liberty; and Ahab, transported with indignation, imprisoned the Prophet, and laughed at his predictions.

About twelve years after, the same Ben [In the Year of the World 3115. 2 Kings vi. 8. & seq.] -hadad declared war against Jehoram, the Son and successor of Ahab; but the Prophet Elisha discovered all Ben-hadad's designs to Jehoram, and thereby disappointed them. Ben-hadad suspected some treachery in his officers, but he was told, that all his projects were revealed by Elisha, to his enemy. He resolved therefore to lay hold of Elisha, and understanding that he was at Dothan, he sent some of his best troops to invest the city, and seize him, but the Prophet struck them with blindness, so that they were not able to distinguish him when he spake to them, and was in their company. He led them as far as to Samaria before they perceived any thing of it, and when they were there, he prayed to God to open their eyes, and desired Jehoram to furnish them with provisions, and dismiss them without offering any violence to them.

[In the year of the World 3119, before J. C. 881. before the vulgar Æra 885.] Some years after, when Ben-hadad besieged Samaria, the famine was so extremely great in the place, that the head of an ass, which the Hebrews look upon to be an unclean sort of food, was sold for fourscore shekels, and about a pint of a particular kind of pease[1] for five shekels: in short matters were at such a pass, that a certain mother eat her own child. Jehoram being informed of these calamities, attributed them to Elisha, and sent orders to put him to death; but before his people could get into the Prophet's house, he came [2 Kings vii.] thither himself; and Elisha foretold, that the next day about the same hour, a measure of fine flour would be sold at the gate of Samaria for a shekel, which accordingly happened; for in the night-time a panick fear spread through the Syrian army: They imagined that Jehoram had procured an army of Hittites and Egyptians to come to his assistance, and leaving their horses, tents, and provisions, they thought of nothing more than of saving themselves by flight.

Four lepers, who were without the city, their disease not allowing them to dwell with other men, ventur'd into the Syrian camp, and finding it to be deserted, and withal observing it to abound with all sorts of riches, they gave notice of it to Jehoram. The King immediately rose, for it was night, but thought the Syrians designed only to insnare him; he sent people therefore to make what discoveries they could, and they reported, that all the way they went, they found cloaths and arms which the Syrians had thrown away, that they might be more expeditious in their flight. As soon as this news was confirmed, the people of Samaria went out, and pillaged the Syrian camp; then was seen the perfect completion of Elisha's prediction who had said, that a measure of fine flour should be sold at the gate of Samaria for a [Year of the World 3120, before J. C. 880, before the vulg. Æra 884. 2 Kings viii. 7, 8, & seq.] shekel. The next year, Elisha being gone somewhere towards Damascus, Ben-hadad, who was then fallen sick, sent Hazael with presents to meet the Man of God, and learn from him, whether there were hopes of his recovery. Hazael departed therefore from Damascus with forty camels loaded with the most valuable things that were to be procured in that City, and said to Elisha, Ben-hadad, thy Son, King of Syria, would be glad to know of thee, whether he shall recover of his illness. Elisha answered, Go, tell him, Thou mayest certainly recover, however the Lord hath shewed me, that he shall surely die. At the same time Elisha foretold to Hazael, that he should himself reign at Damascus, and would do infinite mischief to Israel. Hazael therefore returning to Damascus, told Ben-hadad, that his health would be restored; but the next day he took a thick cloth, which he dipp'd in water, then spread it over the King's face and stifled him. After which he took possession of the Kingdom, and reigned at Damascus according to the prediction of Elisha. Such was the end of Ben -hadad.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

The Vulgate translates the Hebrew, חרי יונים, pigeons dung, Bochart supposes it to mean a sort of pulse of the nature of Chich-pease, Bochart de An- imal. sacr. t. 2. l. i. c. 7. art. 7.

Ben-Hadad (III)

[2 Kings xiii. 3, 24, 25. In the year of the World 3168.] III. BEN-HADAD, the Son of Hazael, whom we have been speaking of. Jehoash King of Israel recovered all from Ben -hadad, that Hazael had taken from Jehoahaz King of Israel, his Predecessor. Jehoash beat him three several times, and compell'd him to surrender all the Country beyond Jordan, that is to say, the lands belonging to Gad, Reuben, and Manasseh, which Hazael had made himself master of in the foregoing reigns.

Josephus[1] calls these two last Princes Hadad, who in Scripture have the name of Ben-hadad, or Son of Hadad; and adds that[2] the Syrians of Damascus paid divine honours to the last Hadad, and Hazael in consideration of the benefits of their Government, and particularly because they adorn'd the City of Damascus with magnificent Temples. They carried their Statues every day in procession, and boast of their Antiquity, tho' they are by no means ancient, and it is not eleven hundred years from their time to ours, says Josephus. But according to our Chronology, from the death of the second Ben-hadad and beginning of Hazael's reign, to the Death of Jesus Christ, there are not above nine hundred and seventeen years.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Antiq. l. viii. c. 8. & l. ix. c. 2. גיא הנום Geh-hennon.
Idem l. ix. p. 306.

Ben-Hail

BEN-HAIL, was one of those whom Jehoshaphat sent to the several cities of his Dominions, in order to instruct the people, and recover them from Idolatry. 2 Chr. xvii. 7.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ben-Hennon

BEN-HENNON, or Ben-hinnon, or Gehhinnon, or Geh-bene-hinnon, the Valley of [Josh. xv. 8. 2 Kings xxiii. 10.] the Children of Hinnon. It lay South East of Jerusalem[1]. Some say it was the Sink to Jerusalem, and an emblem of Hell; for which reason Hell is called Gehenna, derived from Gehennon the Valley of Hinnon. See Gehenna. This Valley was likewise called Tophet. See under the name of Tophet.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Vide Euseb. ad vocem Γαι ἐννοὺμ. בן ימין Ben-jamin.

Ben-Hesed

BEN-HESED, was Governor of Socoh and the Canton of Hepher, in the reign of Solomon. 1 Kings iv. 10.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ben-Hur

BEN-HUR, was Governor of the Province of Ephraim in the reign of Solomon. 1 Kings iv. 8.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ben-Jamin

BEN-JAMIN, the youngest Son of Jacob and Rachel. Jacob being upon his journey from Mesopotamia, as he was proceeding Southward with Rachel in his company, she was surprized with the pains of child-bearing, about a quarter of a league from Bethlehem[1], and died after the delivery of a Son, whom with her last [Genes. xxxv. 16, 17, &c.] breath she named Ben-oni, that is to say, the Son of my sorrow. But Jacob changed this name, and called him Ben-jamin, the Son of my right hand. He is often called in Scripture Jemini only, that is my right hand.

During the great famine which laid waste the land of Canaan and the Countries round about, Jacob having sent his [Genes. xlii. xliii.] Sons into Egypt to buy corn there, kept Benjamin at home, to be a comfort to him, and to prevent any misfortune, which might happen to him in the way. Joseph knew very well his Brethren, tho' they did not discover who he was, and seeing Benjamin was not among them, he enquired in a very artificial manner, whether he were living, and would give them no corn but upon condition they would bring him to him; and for the better security of their promise, detained Simeon in custody till their return. Jacob with all the uneasiness in the world at last permitted Benjamin to undertake this journey; the extremities he was reduced to by famine, and the sollicitations of his Sons with great difficulty prevailed; he committed him therefore to their care, and they set out for Egypt.

[Gen. xliii. 16, 17, &c.] Joseph seeing Benjamin with the rest of his Brethren, carried them to his house, made them eat with him, but not at his own table, because he was not willing to discover himself as yet to them, nor that the Egyptians should eat with the Hebrews. Joseph appointed his Brethren to be placed according to their age, and in the distribution which he made of the meat he sent to them, took care that Benjamin's portion should be five times larger than that of any of the rest. After this, Joseph, as a trial of their fidelity and friendship for their Brother Benjamin, commanded his Steward [Gen. xliv. 1, 2, 3, &c.] to fill their sacks with corn, and in that belonging to the youngest of them, to put the silver cup which he made use of, and the money which Benjamin brought to pay for the quantity of corn he was to purchase. This order was executed; and when Joseph's Brethren were gone out of the City, he sent his Steward after them; who reproached them with robbery, and told them they had carried off his Lord's cup with them. They excused themselves, and declar'd that they were with all their hearts consenting, that he who should appear to be guilty of this theft, should immediately be put to death, and that the rest should become Joseph's Slaves. The Steward answered, that he had to do with him only, who had committed this fact, and for the rest, they were at liberty to pursue their journey.

At the same time he searched all the sacks, and in that of Benjamin the cup was found. Then they rent their clothes, and returned to the City. Joseph reproached them with their treachery; and Judah said what he could to excuse it. He conjured Joseph to detain him as his slave in the room of his Brother; told him, that their Father was an old Man, and would never be able to survive the loss of his Son; that moreover he had charged himself with him, and was to be responsible for him. Hereupon Joseph could no longer contain his tears, revealed himself to them, fell on Benjamin's neck and kissed [Gen. xlv.] him, and all his Brethren after him. He invited them to come and settle in Egypt, and bring their Father thither. He gave to each of them two suits of raiment, that is to say, two coats and two cloaks, but to Benjamin five suits, with three hundred pieces of silver. He gave them likewise presents for his Father, and so dismissed them, recommending peace and union to them.

From this time the Scripture says nothing particularly of Benjamin's person; for that I count for nothing which is related in the Testament of the twelve Patriarchs, which, as is very well known, is an apocryphal piece and of no authority. Jacob on his death-bed says to Benjamin; Benjamin shall ravin as a wolf, in the morning he shall devour the prey, and at night he shall divide the spoil. And Moses in his last Song says of Benjamin, The beloved of the Lord shall dwell in safety by [Deut. xxxiii. 12.] him; and the Lord shall cover him all the day long, and he shall dwell between his shoulders. These words, Benjamin is a ravening wolf, are generally explained either of S. Paul, who was of the Tribe of Benjamin, or of the valour of those, belonging to this Tribe, who carried on a War against all the other Tribes, in defence of the crime committed by the inhabitants of Gibeah, that violated the Levite's Wife, as she passed through their City.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

בן אוניBen-oni.

Benjamin of Tudela

BENJAMIN of Tudela, a celebrated Jew, originally of the Kingdom of Navarre, and a native of Tudela; he lived in the twelfth Century. He travelled to all places where he thought that there were Synagogues, in order to make himself acquainted with the state of his Nation. After he had employed many years in his travels, he returned to France in the reign of Lewis the Young, and in 1173 went to Castile, where he died the same year. He has written an account of his travels, wherein we find several particulars relating to the Jewish Nation; but he is very unaccurate, a bad Geographer, and oftentimes a fabulous Historian. Notwithstanding which he is very proper to give us a general idea of the Jews and their condition, as well in the East as West, during the twelfth Century. He is reproached with very strong prejudices in favour of his Nation. His work was first of all printed in Hebrew at Constantinople in the year 1543. Arias Montanus translated it into Latin, and had it printed at Antwerp in 1575. Constantine L'Empereur has since re-printed it with Annotations at Leyden in 1633. See Fabricius de Apocryphis veteris Testamenti p. 1168. and a Criticism of this Author by M. Basnage, in his History of the Jews, tom. iii. l. v. c. 6. p. 111, &c. of the Paris Edition.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Benoni

BENONI, the Son of my Sorrow. This is the name which Rachel gave her Son, who was called Benjamin by Jacob. Gen. xxxv. 18.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Beon-Zoheth

BEON-ZOHETH, the Son of Ishi. 1 Chr. iv. 20.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Beon

BEON, Numb. xxxii. 3. otherwise Bean 1 Macc. v. 4, 6. a City beyond Jordan, Eusebius says it belonged to the Tribe of Reuben. Euseb. ad Βαισὰν.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Beor

BEOR, the Father of Bela King of Dinhabah in Edom. Genes. xxxvi. 32.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Bera

[Gen. xiv.] BERA, King of Sodom, lived in the time of Abraham. This Prince was tributary to Chedorlaomer King of Elam. We do not know by what accident this King of Elam, who was so remote from Palestine, subdued the Kings of Pentapolis. But however this might be, Bera and four other Kings of the neighbouring Cities supported probably by the people round about them, shook off the yoke of the Elamites. Chedorlaomer having entred into a confederacy with three other Kings, came and attacked Sodom, Gomorrah, Admah, Zeboïm, and Zohar, took, plundered them, and carried off the spoil as far as Hobak, a little beyond the springs of Jordan. Abraham pursued, overtook, and dispersed them, recovered the booty, and restored to Bera, and the other Kings of Pentapolis, what had been taken from them. This is the first War, whereof there is any express mention in the Scripture. It happened in the year of the world 2092, before J. C. 1908, before the vulgar Æra 1912.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Bera (II)

II. BERA, or rather Beera. Eusebius places a City of this name at eight miles distance from Eleutheropolis, towards the North. See Beer.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Beræa

BERÆA, or Beroe, a City of Macedonia, where S. Paul preached the Gospel with great Success. Acts xvii. 10, 13.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Bered

BERED, a City in the Tribe of Judah situated in the neighbourhood of Kadesh. The Chaldee calls it Agara the Syriac, Gedar, the Arabic Jader. It is the same perhaps as Arad or Arada[1], mentioned Numb. xxxiv. 4. in the Southern part of Judah.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Translators' note. In the Hebrew Text it is חצר־אדר, in the Vulgate ad Villam Adar. Our English Translation keeps to the Original, and renders it Hazar-Addar.

Berenice (I)

I. BERENICE, the Daughter of Agrippa, sirnamed the Great, King of the Jews, and Sister to young Agrippa, King also of the Jews. She was first of all betrothed to Mark the Son of Alexander Lysimachus, Alabarch of Alexandria; afterwards she married Herod King of Chalcis, her own Uncle by the Father's side[1]. [The death of Herod King of Chalcis happened in the year of J. C. 48.] After the death of Herod a proposal was made with her consent to Polemon King of Pontus, and part of Cilicia, that upon condition he would be circumcised, she would marry him. Polemon accepted this offer, and the match was consummated. But Berenice did not continue long with him. She returned to her Brother Agrippa, with whom she lived after such a manner, as made all the world talk of her[2]. She was one day present with her Brother Agrippa, and heard the discourse which S. Paul made before [Acts xv. 13---25.] Festus at Cæsarea of Palestine. Titus the Son of Vespasian had a friendship for Berenice, and Vespasian himself made her large presents[3].

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Antiq. l. xx. c. 5. p. 693.

Translators' note. Juvenal takes notice of this incestuous commerce between the Brother and the Sister. Satyr. VI. v. 156. Deinde Adamas notissimus, & Berenices In digito factus pretiosior: hunc dedit olim Barbarus; incestæ dedit hunc Agrippa Sorori.

Tacit. l. ii. Hist. c. 81.

Berenice (II)

II. BERENICE. Many are of opinion, that this is the name of a Holy Lady, commonly called Veronica, who presented her handkerchief to our Saviour, as he was going to Mount Calvary; he wiped his face with it, and imprinted his picture upon it. This is believed to be the very image preserved at Rome, and called the Holy Face, or the Veronica. All that has been published hitherto concerning Veronica, as her journey with S. Martial to Gaul, and afterwards to Rome to see S. Peter; and lastly her return to Bourdeaux to S. Martial, never seemed to deserve much credit with understanding Criticks. There are some who believe, that there never was any Berenice or Veronica that received the impression of our Saviour's Face upon her handkerchief, and that the Veronica, as it is called, is only Vera Icon, the true Image, which some imprudently have made a person, whom others of the moderns have ranked among the Saints, and observe her Festival on the fourth day of February, or upon other days. But she is not inserted in the Roman Martyrology, tho' it is pretended that she died at Rome. Some will have it, that this is she, who in some places is honoured under the corrupt name of S. Venice[1].

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

See Bolland. 4. Februar. & M. de Tillemont. tom. i. Hist. Eccles. not. 33. in J. C. p. 471.

Bereschith

BERESCHITH. This is the name, which the Hebrews give the book of Genesis, because it begins with the word Bereschith[1], which in Hebrew signifies[2], In the Beginning .

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Translators' note. Solomon Meir, a celebrated Cabbalist, who became a Convert to Christianity, undertaking to ex- plain the motives of his Conversion to David an eminent Jew called Il Duca delli Ebrei, took the first word of Genesis Berefchith for his Text, and in this discovered all the Mysteries of Christianity. Berefchith is likewise the name given to the second Part of the Cabbala, which includes the study and contemplation of this sublunary World; as the first Part called Mercava relates to the knowledge of God's Perfections, and of heavenly Intelligences. Maimonides More Nevochim, c. xxxix. p. 273.

בראשיתIn Principio.

Beri

BERI, the Son of Zophah, of the Tribe of Asher. 1 Chr. vii. 36.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Beria

BERIA, the Son of Asher, and Father of Heber and Malchiel. Gen. xlvi. 17. The Family of the Beriites so called from him. Numb. xxvi. 44.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Berith

BERITH or Baruth, a City of Phœnicia, lying upon the Mediterranean, between Biblos and Sidon, four hundred furlongs Northward from this last City[1].

It is a question whether the Scripture speaks at all of this place. Some are of opinion, that the God Berith, taken notice of above by us, under the name of Baalberith, was worshipped here, and gave this City its appellation; others derive it from Beroe, the Daughter of Venus and Adonis, who was the Deity most honoured in this Country; others again think the word Berith comes from Bearoth, Wells or Springs. There are more Cities than one of this name in [2 Sam. viii. 8.] Palestine. David carried off a great deal of brass from the towns of Betah and Berothac in Syria.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Strabo. l. xvi.

Berodach Baladan

BERODACH BALADAN, the Son of Baladan King of Babylon. He sent Ambassadors to Hezekiah King of Judah[1] [2 Kings xx. 1, 2, 3, &c. In the Year of the World 2292, before J. C. 708, before the vulgar Æra 712.] with letters and presents, upon receiving information, that he had been sick, and was recovered in a miraculous manner, the Sun or at least the shadow of it, with drawing ten lines backward to confirm the truth to him of Isaiah's promises; who assured him that his health would be restored, and he live fifteen years longer. Hezekiah was extremely pleased with the arrival of these Ambassadors; and shewed them all that was rich and beautiful in his Palace. God disapproved of his conduct in this particular, and sent Isaiah to tell him, that every thing in his Palace, and all the riches which he and the Kings his Predecessors had amassed together, with the sight whereof he had entertained these foreigners, would be carried to Babylon.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Translators' note. Rabbi Nachmenides, who was Head or President of the Academy of Sora, and died in 322, wrote a Comment upon the first Book of Moses, containing the History of the holy Land, together with the literal and mystical sense of this Book. It was called Berefchith Rabba, but is to be distinguished from another work of the same name, which is a Comment on Judah the Holy's Mishnah composed by one of his Disciples.

Berosus

BEROSUS, the Babylonish Historian, was by nation a Chaldean, and Priest of Belus, the God of Babylon. Tatian[1] says, he lived in the time of Alexander the Great, and that he dedicated his work to King Antiochus, the third after Alexander, that is to say, to Antiochus Theus; for Seleucus Nicanor was the first King of Syria, Antiochus Soter the second, and Antiochus Theus the third. If any would include Alexander the Great in the number of the three, it would be necessary to say, that Berosus lived under Antiochus Soter; and indeed the many years elapsed between Alexander and Antiochus Theus (for some reckon 64 from the death of Alexander to the first year of Antiochus Theus) might induce one to believe, that in reality we should understand it in this sense. But let this be as it will, Berosus having learned the Greek tongue, went first to the Isle of Cos[2], where he set up a School, and taught Astronomy and Astrology; from thence he came to Athens, where he acquired so much reputation by his astrological predictions, that in the Gymnasium, where the youth performed their exercises, a Statue with a golden tongue was erected for him. Josephus[3] and Eusebius have preserved some excellent fragments of Berosus's History, which give great light to many places in the Old Testament, and without which it would be difficult to produce an exact Series of the Kings of Babylon.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Tatian. contra Gentes.
Vitruv. l. ix. c. 7. Bello, c. 2. & lib. ii. c. 25. & lib. de Vita sua, p. 1013. l. vi. c. 10. p. 919.
Plin. l. vii. c. 37.

Beroth

BEROTH. See 2 Sam. viii. 8. a City conquered by David. This is probably Beroe of Syria, or Berytus in Phœnicia, otherwise called Baruth.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Berothah

[Ezek. xlvii. 16.] BEROTHAH or Berothai, between Hethalon and Emesa, is perhaps Berytus or Beroth, which David obtained by conquest from Hadadezer King of Syria.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Bersaba

BERSABA, a town in Galilee. It lay to the South of upper Galilee, and to the North of lower Galilee[1]. Josephus the Historian procured this town to be repaired and fortified.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Joseph l. iii. de

Beryl

BERYL, the eighth Stone belonging to [Exod xxviii. 10.] the High-Priest's Pectoral. The Vulgate and the Septuagint call it Beryl, and the Hebrew, Jasphe. It has been already observed, that the proper signification of the Hebrew names of precious stones was for the most part unknown to the Hebrews and the Commentators.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Besara

BESARA or Bezara, a City in the neighbourhood of Ptolemaïs[1] twenty furlongs from Gibeah[2].

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Joseph. de Bello, y Euseb. in locis.
Lib. de Vita sua. v Origen. in Joan. Tom. VIII.

Besetha

BESETHA, one of the mountains on which the City of Jerusalem was built. It lay on the North side with respect to the Temple s.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Besimoth

BESIMOTH, the same with Beth-Jesimoth beyond Jordan.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Besira

BESIRA, the same as the Well of Sirah mentioned in the second book of Samuel. [2 Sam. iii. 26.] Josephus places Besira[1] at twenty furlongs, or seven leagues distance from Hebron.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Joseph. Antiq. l. vii. c. 1. w Chrysost. Homil. 16. in c. 1. Joan.

Besodeiah

BESODEIAH, the Father of Meshullam. Nehem. iii. 6.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Besor

BESOR, or Bosor, a Brook which falls into the Mediterranean, between Gaza and Rhinocorura; or rather between Rhinocorura and Egypt, according to S. Jerom, on the sixth Chapter of Amos. This is the brook of the wilderness, which many have taken unadvisedly for the brook or river of Egypt, which is spoken of in some places of Scripture, and is no other than the Nile, or the most Eastern branch of this river.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Betah

[Amos vi. 14. Josh. xv. 4, 47. 2 Chron. vii. 8.] BETAH, or Beten, a City of Syria, taken by David from Hadadezer. It is the same possibly with Beten, which Joshua sets down as belonging to the Tribe of Asher; or Bathne in Syria, between Berœa and Hierapolis.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Bethabara

BETHABARA. At this place beyond Jordan S. John the Baptist baptized. The Latin Text of S. John instead of Bethabara reads Bethania; but the true reading is Bethabara, as Origen v, S. Chrysostom w, and Epiphanius[1] observe. Bethabara, which in Hebrew signifies the House of Passage, is thought to be the place where the Israelites passed the river Jordan under Joshuah, and that there was the common ford of this river.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Epiphan. l. ii. contra hæres. p. 435.

Bethacad

BETHACAD, a village fifteen miles from Legio, in the great plain y.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Beth-Achara

[Jerem. vi. 1.] BETH-ACHARA, or Beth-haccerim, Jerem. vi. 1. a City situated on an eminence between Jerusalem and Tekoa. Malchiah the Son of Rechab, was Prince of Bethacara. Nehem. iii. 14.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Beth-Agabra

BETH-AGABRA, or methogabri, or Bethogabria. Peutinger's Tables place Bethogabri between Askelon and Jerusalem. Ptolemy puts down Bethogotria at 65½. degree of latitude, and the 31½ of longitude. Josephus[1] fixes Begabris in the midst of Idumæa. William of Tyre says, that the Arabians called Beersheba, Bethgabril, and that it was twelve miles from Askelon. Benjamin tells us, that Bethgaberin is five parasangs from Hebron, and is the same as Maresa; and the acts of S. Ananias place it in the territory of Eleutheropolis. All these characters joined together, determine us to set it down between Eleutheropolis and Hebron.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Debello, l. v. c. 4. vid. Hos. iv. 15. v. 8. x. 5.

Bethanath

BETHANATH, a city in the Tribe of [Jof. xix. 38. John xi. 18.] Naphtali.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Bethany

BETHANY, was fifteen furlongs, or about two miles from Jerusalem, at the foot of the Mount of Olives, eastward of Jerusalem, on the way from Jericho to Jerusalem. There it was that Martha and Mary dwelt with their brother Lazarus, whom Jesus Christ rais'd from the dead. There it was likewise, that Mary pour'd out the perfume upon our Saviour's Head. We have already taken notice in the article of Bethabara, that the Latin copies of S. John, ch. i. 28. read Bethania instead of Bethabara. See Suidas on Bethania; several Greek as well as Latin copies are in this place altered.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Bethanim

BETHANIM, a village four miles from Hebron, and two from Abraham's turpentine tree[1].

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Euseb. ad vocem, Ἀρ.

Beth-Arabah

BETH-ARABAH, a city belonging to the Tribe of Judah, Joshua. xv. 6. and afterwards given to that of Benjamin. Joshua xviii. 22.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Betharan

[Jof. xiii. 27. Numb. xxxii. 36.] BETHARAN, or Beth-haram, or Betharamphta, afterwards called Livias, beyond the Jordan, towards the Dead-sea. Antiq. l. xviii. c. 3.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Bethaven

BETHAVEN, the same as Bethel. After Jeroboam the Son of Nebat had set up his golden calves at Bethel, the Hebrews, who were in the interest of the house of David, in derision called this city Bethaven[1]; that is to say, the house of nothing, or the house of iniquity, instead of Bethel, the House of God, the name which Jacob formerly gave it, when he had the vision there of the mysterious Ladder, made use of by the Angels in ascending and descending from Heaven to Earth. See hereafter Bethel.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

בית אוון, Bethaven, בית-אל, Bethel.

Beth-Baal-Meon

BETH-BAAL-MEON. Joshua xiii. 17. The same as Baal-meon. Numb. xxxii. 37.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Beth-Barah

BETH-BARAH, a place beyond the river Jordan, Judg. vii. 24. It is probably the same as Bethabara, whereof we have before said something.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Beth-Basi

BETH-BASI, a city in the Tribe of Judah, which the two Maccabees, Simon and Jonathan fortified; and where Bacchides besieged them without any success.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Beth-Car

BETH-CAR, a city in the Tribe of Dan, 1 Sam. vii. 11.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Beth-Dagon (I)

I. BETH-DAGON, a city in the Tribe of Asher, Josh. xix. 27. Beth-dagon signifies the house or temple of Dagon.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Beth-Dagon (II)

II. BETH-DAGON, a city in the Tribe of Judah; so called, in all probability, because there was a temple of Dagon there, before the Israelites possessed it.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Betheked

BETHEKED or Beth-akad, which some construe in a general sense, to signify a Shearing-house, or the House of Shepherds binding Sheep[1]. But the Septuagint, and several good Interpreters, explain it to be a place situated between Jezreel and Samaria. It is the same perhaps as Bethker.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ita Vulg. in 2 Reg. x. 12.

Bethel

BETHEL, a city to the west of Hai, upon the confines of the Tribes of Ephraim and Benjamin. The Patriarch Jacob flying from the anger of his brother Esau, and going into Mesopotamia, arrived at sun-set in a certain place, where he had a mind to pass the night, and taking one of the stones that lay there, he placed it under his head and fell asleep. While he was thus sleeping, he dreamed that he saw a ladder, the bottom whereof rested on the Earth, and the top of it reached to Heaven, and Angels ascending and descending by this ladder. Upon the upper part of it he saw the Lord, who said to him, I am the Lord, the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, I will give to you and your posterity, the land wherein you now are sleeping. Your generation shall be as numerous as the sea sand, and all nations shall be blessed in you, and in him who shall issue from you. I will be your Conductor wheresoever you go, and will bring you again into this land. Jacob waking after this vision, said, surely the Lord is in this place, and I knew it not; and he was afraid and said, how dreadful is this place? this is none other but the House of God, and this is the Gate of Heaven.

He rose up therefore early in the morning, and took the stone which he had made his bolster, and set it up for a pillar, poured oil upon the top of it, and called the name of that place Bethel, the name whereof before was Luz; that is to say, the wilderness, wherein he passed the night, he called Bethel; and this was near a village named Luz, which the Hebrews called Bethel, when they made themselves masters of the land of Canaan. Eusebius says[1], that Bethel was twelve miles or four leagues from Jerusalem, in the way to Sichem.

The Rabbins tell us, that the stone on which Jacob rested his head at Bethel, was put into the sanctuary of the temple, which was built after the return from the Captivity; that the Ark of the Covenant was placed upon this stone; and that long after the ruin of the temple, the Jews had a custom of lamenting their calamities upon it. The Mahometans believe their temple of Mecca to be founded on this very stone, and have a great veneration for it. From Jacob's pouring oil upon the stone of Bethel, came up the superstition of the ancients for the Betuli, which were stones anointed and consecrated to the memory of great men after their death. Sanchoniathon, or rather Porphyry, the Author of the Fragment which Eusebius has preserv'd[2] under the name of Sanchoniathon, attributes the invention of these Betuli to Saturn. Damascius, who is cited in Photius's Bibliotheca, says, that these Betuli were consecrated to the heathen Gods, to Saturn, the Sun, and other Deities. And Hesychius assures us, that the ancients called the stone Betulus, which Saturn swallowed, thinking to devour his son Jupiter. Asclepiades, who is cited by Damascius, relates many surprizing things of the Betuli dedicated to Venus of Aphek.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Euseb. Onomast. in Ἄγγαι.
Euseb. Præpar. l. i. p. 37.

Bethella

BETHELLA, in the neighbourhood of Gaza. See Bethulia.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Beth-Emek

BETH-EMEK, a frontier city of Asher. Joshua xix. 27.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Bether

BETHER. There is mention of the Mountains of Bether in the Song of Solomon[1]. The Author of the Vulgate reads the mountains of perfume, Cant. viii. 14. and several Latin copies read Bethel instead of Bether, Cant. ii. 17. But the Hebrew in both places reads Bether. Enquiry has been made, what this Bether is, and how it is situated. Some take it to be Bethoron, called Bether in Eusebius, Bethara in Josephus, and Bethra in an old Itinerary. There is frequent mention of Bether in the writings of the Hebrews; it was taken by the Emperor Adrian in Barchochebas's rebellion. The number of Jews inclosed in it was so great, says the Gemara[2], That the blood which run from the dead bodies into the Sea, carried stones along with it as large as four Seahs, (the Seah or Satum[3] was a hollow measure which held a peck and a pint) and that it ran four miles into the Sea: you will say perhaps, that it was a maritime Town, no, it was four miles distant from the sea. Several, as we have observed, are of opinion, that it is the same as Bethoron. Others will have it to be Betharis, between Cæsarea and Diospolis, set down in the antient Itinerary, which we have spoken of; or lastly to be Bæther, mentioned in the Septuagint, Jos. xv. 60. among the cities of Judah. For my part, I take it to be Upper Bethoron or Bethora, between Diospolis and Cæsarea. Eusebius[4] speaks of Betharim near Diospolis, and when he mentions Bether, which was taken by Adrian, he says it was in the neighbourhood of Jerusalem[5]. Hist. l. iv. c. 6.

The Rabbins[6] say, that in this one city only, there were four hundred Colleges, in every College four hundred Professors, and that every Professor had four hundred Scholars, who when assembled together composed a large army. They stood the first shocks of the Siege, tho' they had no other weapons besides bodkins, which they used in writing upon table books covered with wax after the manner of those times. A famous Rabbin, whose name was Tryphon, having spoke something of surrendering the city, was put to death by Barchochebas; notwithstanding his resistance and that of the besieged, the city was taken, Barchochebas killed, the Scholars, who had so well defended the place, were tied up with their books and cast into the fire. The Massacre, 'tis added, was so great, that more perished in this war than came out of Egypt with Moses; and that upon one stone were found the Skulls of three hundred Infants that had been dashed to pieces against it.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Cant. ii. 17.

Gemar. Jerosol. Gittim. fol. 57. t. 2. p. 137. l. iv. c. 8.

Translators' note. Satum or Seah is one of the oldest measures for dry things, as of meal, Gen. xviii. 1 Kings xviii. 2 Kings vii. It was the third part of the Ephah. The lxx render it variously; sometimes by μέτρον, sometimes very improperly by μέτρητής, which is a measure for liquids and much larger than a Seah; sometimes they render it Οἰφί. The old Latin version translates it Satum, and Modius. See Arbuthnot's tables of ancient Coins, &c. According to this Author a Seah held a peck and one pint.

Euseb. in Arem.

Translators' note. But there were two cities of this name one twelve, and the other, two and fifty miles from Jerusalem.

See Basnage hist. des Juifs,

Bethesda

BETHESDA, or, as it is called in the copies of the Vulgate, Bethzaida, or Piscina [John v. 2.] probatica[1], because the sheep were washed in it, which were appointed for the Sacrifices, and were called in Greek, probata. Bethesda, as many Interpreters expound it, signifies[2] the House of Mercy, probably by reason of the Sick, who lay under the porticos that surrounded it; or as others explain it[3] the sink house or drain, because the waters which came from the temple, and the place where the victims were washed, flowed hither. Eusebius and S. Jerom say, that in their time there were two fish-pools, or a kind of double reservoir, shewn at Jerusalem. One of which which conservatories of water was filled every year with rain water; the other with water of a deep red colour, as if some of the blood of such victims as formerly were washed there, were still remaining. The Gospel informs us, that there were five galleries about this fish-pool, probably because it was made in the figure of a pentagon; and many sick persons were always waiting there in order to descend into it, when the water was stir'd; for the Angel of the Lord came down at some certain time and stir'd the water; and the first sick person that then plunged into it, was cured, let his disease be what it would. Travellers tell us, that this fish-pool was to the East of Jerusalem.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ἐν τῇ προβατικῇ κολυμβήθρᾳ.
,בית חסדהBeth Chezda, domus misericordiæ.
,בית אשורהdomus effusionis.

Bethezoba

BETHEZOBA, the native place of the Woman mentioned by Josephus[1], who during the last siege of Jerusalem by the Romans eat her own Child.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Joseph. de Bello, l. vii. c. 8.

Beth-Gabris

BETH-GABRIS, or Beth-gabril. See above Beth-agabra.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Beth-Gader

BETH-GADER, the name of a Man, who was of Caleb's Family. 1 Chr. ii. 51.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Beth-Gamul

BETH-GAMUL, a City of the Moabites, in the Tribe of Reuben. See Jerem. xlviii. 23.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Beth-Jeshimoth

BETH-JESHIMOTH. A City in the Tribe of Reuben. Joshua xiii. 20. It was afterwards possessed by the Moabites. Ezekiel foretold the destruction of this and [Ezek xxv. 9.] other Cities of Moab. Eusebius says, Beth-Jeshimoth is ten miles from the river Jordan. But it is very probable that he confounds it with Jeshimon, mentioned in 1 Sam. xxiii. 24. which lay on this side Jordan.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Beth-Lebaoth

BETH-LEBAOTH, a City in the Tribe of Simeon. Josh. xix. 6. It is sometimes called Lebaoth. Josh. xv. 32.

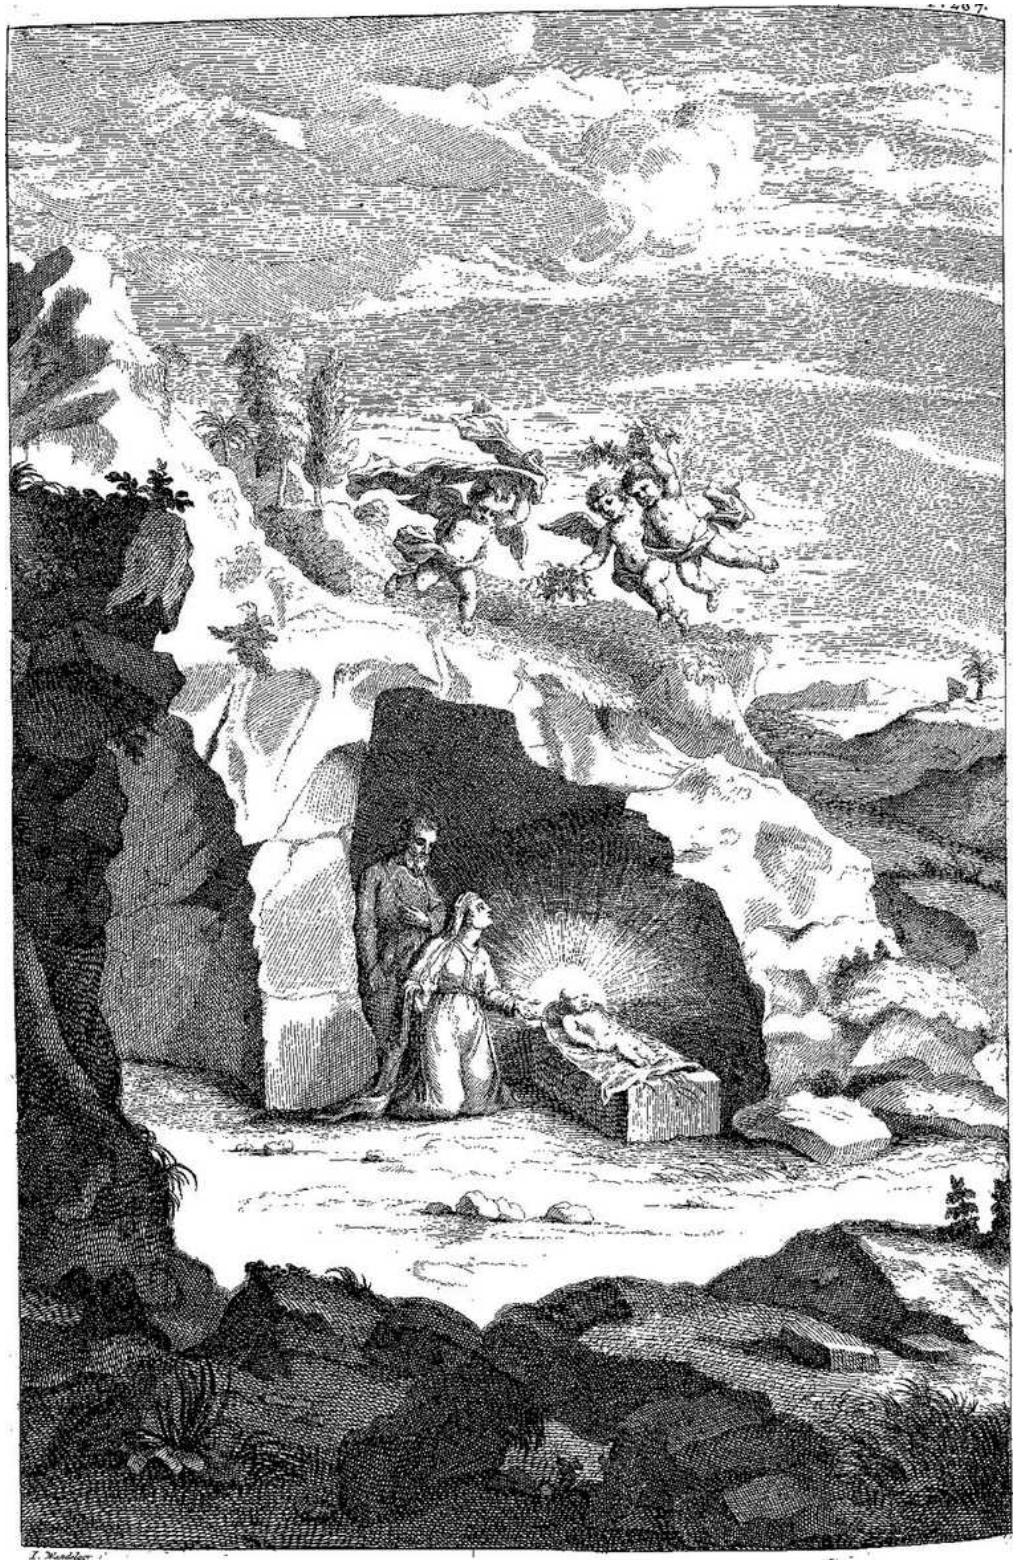
Read this article in its place on the printed pages



Beth-Lehem (I)

I. BETH-LEHEM, or Beth-lechem, the house of bread, a City in the Tribe of [Josh. xvii. 7.] Judah, generally called Bethlehem of Judah, to distinguish it from another of the [Josh. xix. 15.] same name in the Tribe of Zebulun. It is called likewise Ephratah, and its inhabitants [Genes. xlviii. 7. Mich. v. 2. Ruth i. 2. and 1 Sam. xvii. 12.] Ephrateans. This City was not at all considerable for its extent or riches, but was infinitely so on the score of the Messiah's Birth. Micah extolling this advantage peculiar to Bethlehem, says, Thou Bethlehem Ephratah, though thou be little among the thousands of Judah, yet out of thee shall he come forth unto me, that is to be Ruler in Israel[1]. He had no design certainly of describing David, who was born at Bethlehem so many Ages before; but Jesus Christ who came into the world here many Ages after.

Several difficulties are proposed relating to the Prophecy of Micah, which foretells the Birth of the Messiah at Bethlehem. [Matth. xi. 6. Micah v. 2.] In the first place S. Matthew reads, And thou Bethlehem of Judah art not the least of the Cities of Judah; whereas the Text of Micah runs thus, And thou Bethlehem though thou be little among the thousands of Judah. And secondly Micah says, Out of Judah shall he come forth unto me, that is to be the Ruler in Israel, whose goings forth have been from of old, from everlasting. It is objected therefore that there is a contrariety between S. Matthew and Micah, one of whom says that Bethlehem is too small to be reckoned among the most considerable Cities of Judah; the other on the contrary says, that it is not one of the smaller Cities of Judah.

But to this it is answered, that S. Matthew might have read the Text of Micah with an interrogation, in this manner, And thou Bethlehem, art thou too small to be ranked with the great Cities of Judah? Thus he had very well explained the sense of the Prophet, Thou art not one of the small Cities of Judah. Besides some Criticks[2] maintain, that the Hebrew, Zehir, which is generally translated small, signifies likewise the contrary, and for a proof of it, Jeremiah is cited xlviii. 4. xlix. 20. Zach. xiii. 7. where Zehir[3], as the Jews agree, signifies Heads, Principal of the people. [Micah v. 2.] Lastly, S. Jerom[4], and several others after him, are of opinion, that S. Matthew produced the passage in Micah historically, not as it was written in that Prophet, but as it had been proposed by the Priests, with an intention by the way, of reflecting on their ignorance and negligence.

As to the second difficulty, the Jews are generally very ready to acknowledge, that the Messiah should come out of Bethlehem, but they maintain, that this Messiah is not Jesus, and that the Prophecy of Micah has no regard either to Jesus or the Messiah. He whom Micah speaks of, shall be Ruler in Israel: And ver. 3. The remnant of his Brethren shall be converted, and reunited with the children of Israel. Jesus never reigned over Israel, and if he is God, can have no Brethren. Besides, to confine the Kingdom of the Messiah to Israel would be too much a limitation of it. Ex te egredietur, qui sit dominator in Israel. The answer to this is, that Jesus, as God, had no Brethren, but as the Son of Mary he had. The Prophet in this place very well distinguishes his temporal Birth at Bethlehem, and his eternal Birth, His goings forth have been from of old, from everlasting. It is no more contrary to the greatness of the Messiah to say, that he will reign over Israel; than it is for God to call himself in so many places the God of Israel. This does not exclude the dominion either of the one, or of the other over the rest of mankind, and over other creatures.

A VIEW OF THE CAVE IN BETHLEHEM WHERE OUR SAVIOUR WAS BORN.Vol. I. X.

Bethlehem is situated upon the declivity of a hill, six miles[5] or two leagues from Jerusalem. Josephus[6] seems to place it at the distance only of thirty furlongs, or three miles and seven hundred and fifty paces from Jerusalem: Justin Martyr[7] at five and thirty furlongs, which make four miles three hundred and seventy five paces. But it is very probable, that the cyphers which denote this distance, are changed in these two Authors; for all others, as well ancients as moderns, constantly describe the distance to be two leagues between Jerusalem and Bethlehem. S. Jerom[8] makes it six and forty miles from Joppa to Bethlehem.

[Josh. xix. 15.] The Cave where our Saviour was born is not exactly in the City, but rather without Bethlehem. S. Jerom[9] says it was on the South side. Justin Martyr[10], and Eusebius[11], say no more, than that it was without the city, and in the fields. The Inn whither the Virgin Mary and Joseph retired, was probably a caravanseras or publick house, where guests were received gratis; where nothing was allowed but shelter. But as the crowd was great, when Joseph and Mary came thither, they were oblig'd to get into a cave, which served as a stable for the caravanseras. It is certain, that the Ancients mention the Birth of Jesus Christ to have happened in a cave[12]. Travellers tell us, that the place where our Saviour was born was about forty foot deep, and twelve wide, growing narrower towards the roof. S. Jerom informs us[13], that the Emperor Adrian, in order to erase the memory of the place, where Jesus Christ was born, planted over the cave a grove of tall trees in honour of Tammuz or Adonis; so that when the Festivals of this infamous Deity were celebrated, the holy Grotto was heard to echo with the lamentations, which were made in commemoration of Venus's lover. In specie ubi quondam Christus parvulus vagiit, Veneris Amasius plangitur.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Translators' note. Pocock Hottinger. Frisohmath. Hammond. Mill. in Matth. ii.

Pocock Hottinger. Frisohmath. Hammond. Mill. in Matth. ii.

צעיר להיות באלפי יהודה

Hieronym. in Mich. v. D. Thom. in Matt. Melchior Can. l. ii. c. 14 Maldonat. Jun. &c. Or the Messiah, as the Chaldee Paraphrast has translated it. See Jonathanis Targum, Bibl. Polyg. Lond.

Ita Euseb. Hieron. Sulpitius Severus, Phocas, alii.

Joseph. Antiq. l. v. c. 2.

Justin. Martyr. Apolog. 2.

Hieronym. Ep. ad Dardanum.

Hieronym. Ep. 24. ad Marcel.

Just. Mart. dialog. cum Tryphone.

Euseb. l. ii. c. 4. Demonstr. Evangel.

Origen. l. i. contra Celsum. Hieron. sæpe. Epiphan. hæres. c. 1. Nyssen. orat. de S. Christi Nativitate. Athanas. Theodoret. &c.

Hieronym. Ep. ad Paulin.

Beth-Lehem (II)

II. BETH-LEHEM, of the Tribe of Zebulun, is scarce known but by its bearing the same name as that City which gave birth to King David, and Jesus Christ the King of Kings.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Beth-Lephthepha

BETH-LEPHTHEPHA, a City and Toparchy of Judæa, mentioned in Josephus[1] and Pliny[2]. It lay South of Jerusalem, and may very well be the same with Beth-lebaoth spoken of above.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Joseph. de Bello, l. v. c. 4. p. 890.

Plin. l. v. c. 14.

Beth-Maaka

BETH-MAAKA, or Abel-maacha, or Abel-beth-maacha. See Abel-maacha.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Beth-Maon

BETH-MAON, a City belonging to the Moabites in the Tribe of Reuben. Jerem. xlviii. 23.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Beth-Marchaboth

BETH-MARCHABOTH, a City in the Tribe of Simeon.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Beth-Maus

BETH-MAUS, in Galilee, between Sephoris and Tiberias, five furlongs from this last City. Joseph. lib. de Vita sua, pag. 10. This place is called Beth-meon in the Talmud, as is observed by Lightfoot[1].

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Lightfoot. Centur. Chorograph. c. 78.

Beth-Millo

BETH-MILLO, a place near Shechem. 2 Kings xii. 20.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Beth-Nabris

BETH-NABRIS, beyond the lake of Gennesareth, five miles North from Bethzaida[1].

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Euseb. Onomast. ad Bethnabram.

Beth-Nimrah

BETH-NIMRAH, a City in the Tribe of Gad, Numb. xxxii. 36. I should take it to be the same as Nimrim, Jerem. xlviii. 34. or Bethnabris whereof we have been speaking, which was five miles Northward from Livias. The difficulty lies, in extending the Tribe of Gad so far as Nimrim to the South, or to Bethnabris, Northward.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Bethoannaba

BETHOANNABA, or Beth-hannaba. Eusebius says, it is a town four miles Eastward from Diospolis. S. Jerom, that it is placed by many at eight miles distance from Diospolis. Bethoannaba seems to preserve still some remains of the word Nob, where the Tabernacle continued for some [1 Sam: xxi. 1.] time in the reign of Saul. S. Jerom in S. Paula's Epitaph, says that Nob was not far from Diospolis.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Bethogla

BETHOGLA. There are two places of this name; one fixed by Eusebius[1] at eight miles distance from Gaza; the other by S. Jerom[2] two miles from Jordan. Joshua makes Bethogla to be part of the Tribe of Judah. Joshua xv. 6. This probably is the place mentioned by Eusebius. And the same Joshua xviii. 21. makes another Bethogla, which S. Jerom speaks of, to belong to Benjamin.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Euseb. in Βηθαλαιμ.
Hieronym. in Area Athad.

Bethom

BETHOM, or rather Bethora, or Bethoran, otherwise Julias the birth-place of the Prophet Joel[1].

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Epiphan. de Vita & Morte. Prophet. Chronic. Paschale. Vide Reland. in Bethom.

Bethome

BETHOME, a City belonging to the Jews, which having rebel'd against Alexander Jannæus[1], was taken, and its inhabitants sent captives to Jerusalem. It is the same as Bethom.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Joseph. lib. xiii. c. 22. p. 461.

Bethonea

BETHONEA, or Beth-oanea, fifteen miles from Cæsarea Eastward, where Eusebius febius and S. Jerom say, that there are hot baths, very beneficial to the health of those who use them[1].

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Euseb. ad vocem Ανιπ.

Bethora

BETHORA. The same probably as Bethoron. See Joseph. Antiq. l. v. c. 1. & lib. xii. c. 10.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Bethoron

BETHORON. The same in all probability as Bethora, Bethra, Bether and Bitthar. The Scripture mentions two cities of this name, one called Upper Bethoron, the other Lower Bethoron. The Israelites of the Tribe of Ephraim, having received Bethoron as part of their allotment, made a [Jos. xxi. 22.] cession of it to the Levites. It was, according to Eusebius, twelve thousand paces, or four leagues from Jerusalem, towards Sichem or Naplouse, that is to say, to the north of Jerusalem. He adds, that the upper Bethoron was built by Solomon, and the lower resigned to the Levites for their habitation. Josephus places Bethoron at about an hundred furlongs from Jerusalem[1]. S. Jerom says, that S. Paula passed through both the Bethorons in her way from Naplouse to Jerusalem.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Lib. 2. de Bello. c. 11. collatus cum lib. xx. Antiq. c. 4.

Beth-Palet

BETH-PALET, or Beth-peleth, a city situated in the most southern part of the Tribe of Judah, Jos. xv. 27. Nehemiah, xi. 26. This city was one of those which were yielded up to the Tribe of Simeon.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Beth-Pazzez

BETH-PAZZEZ, a city in the Tribe of Issachar, Jos. xix. 21.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Beth-Peor

BETH-PEOR, a city of Moab, given to [Deut. iv. 46.] the Tribe of Reuben. There the God Peor was worshipped.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Bethphage

BETHPHAGE, a little village at the foot of the Mount of Olives, between Bethany and Jerusalem. Jesus Christ being come from Bethany to Bethphage, commanded his Disciples to seek an Ass for [Matt. xxi. 1. Mark ii. 2.] him, that he might make use of it at his triumphant entrance into Jerusalem. The distance between Bethphage and Jerusalem, [John xii. 14.] is computed at fifteen furlongs, or eighteen hundred and seventy five paces[1].

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Translators' note. See Lighfoot's Chorog. Marco praemissa. cap. 4.

Bethrapha

BETHRAPHA, the son of Eshton of the Tribe of Judah, 1 Chron. iv. 12.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Bethsaida

BETHSAIDA. The Latin copies of S. John read Bethzaida, instead of Bethesda, speaking of the fish-pool near the sheep market in Jerusalem. But the true reading is Bethesda, as we have observed in the article belonging to this word. There are some who believe, that Jeremiah and the Priests hid the sacred fire in this pool, then without water, where in the time of Nehemiah, instead of fire was found thick water, [2 Macc. i. 20, 21, 22.] which being poured upon the Altar of Burnt-offerings, took fire as soon as the sun began to shine upon it. But this opinion is without any solid foundation.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Beth-Shalisha

BETH-SHALISHA, probably the same as Baal-salisa. Beth-shalisha in Eusebius's account1 is fifteen miles from Diospolis northward, in the Canton of Thamna.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Beth-Shan

BETH-SHAN, more generally known by the name of Scythopolis. The second book of Maccabees, xii. 29. places it at six hundred furlongs distance from Jerusalem, or seventy five miles, which make two and twenty leagues, at three miles to the league. Josephus says[1], it was an hundred and twenty furlongs from Tiberias; according to which computation it cannot be so near the lake of Tiberias, as some Geographers pretend it is. It lay on this side Jordan westward, at the extremity of the great Plain. Abulfeda says, there is a small river, which falls into the river Jordan at Scythopolis. The name of Scythopolis, or the city of the Scythians, came, according to George Syncellus[2], from the Scythians, who made an irruption into Palestine in the reign of Josiah, Son of Amos, King of Judah. Stephens the Geographer and Pliny call it likewise Nysa. In the Hebrew text of the Old Testament it is named Bethshan. But the Septuagint Judg. i. 27. read Bethshan, otherwise called the city of the Scythians. And in the books of Maccabees and Josephus, it goes very frequently by the name of Scythopolis. After the battle of Gilboa, the Philistines having taken the bodies of Saul and Jonathan, hung them upon the walls of Bethshan. But the inhabitants of Jabesh-Gilead, on the other side of Jordan, came in the night, carried off the bodies, and interr'd them honourably, under a grove of Oaks, near their city.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Joseph. lib. de vita sua, 1025.
Georg. Syncel. p. 214.

Bethshemesh (I)

[1 Sam. xxxi. 10, &c. Jos. xxi. 16. 1 Sam. vi. 12. 2 Kings xiv. 11. 1 Kings iv. 9. 1 Chron. vi. 59.] I. BETHSHEMESH, a city belonging to the Priests, and in the Tribe of Judah. In Eusebius's[1] account, it is ten miles from Eleutheropolis, eastward, in the way to Nicopolis, or *Ema*üs. M. Reland thinks we should distinguish Hir-schemesh in the Tribe of Dan, from Beth-shemesh in the Tribe of Judah; but his reasons are not persuasive. The very passages which he produces out of Joshua, xix. 41. compared with 1 Kings iv. 7. where Hir-schemesh is placed as parallel to Beth-shemesh, convince us, that it is not the same city. Hir-shemesh, signifies the city of the Sun, and Bethshemesh, the House of the Sun. As the Tribes of Dan and Judah are adjacent, the same city is set down sometimes as belonging to one, sometimes to another. The Philistines having sent back the Ark of the Lord, it was brought to Beth-shemesh; and some of the people being desirous to look with too much curiosity into it, the Lord destroyed seventy of the principal men in the city, and fifty thousand of the common people.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Euseb. Onomastic. in Βαιθσαφισαθ.

Beth-Shemesh (II)

II. BETH-SHEMESH, a city in the Tribe of Issachar, Joshua xix. 22. There are some who take notice of a third in the Tribe of Naphtali. Jos. xix. 38. Judg. i. 33.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Beth-Shittah

BETH-SHITTAH. Gideon pursued the Midianites to this place, Judges vii. 22.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Bethsura

BETHSURA. See Bethzur.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Beth-Tappua

BETH-TAPPUA, that is to say the apple or orchard house, a city in the Tribe [Jos. xv. 58.] of Judah. Eusebius ° says, that Beth-tappua is the last city of Palestine in the way to Egypt, and is situated fourteen miles from Raphia.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Bethuel

BETHUEL, the Son of Nahor and Milcah, was Abraham's Nephew, and father to Laban and Rebekah, Isaac's wife. Bethuel does not appear in all this affair, but Laban only, Gen. xxiv. 50.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Bethul

BETHUL, or Bethuel, a city in the Tribe of Simeon, Jos. xix. 4. the same probably as Bethelia, which Sozomen speaks of in his history. He says it is a town belonging to the inhabitants of Gaza, that it is very well peopled, and has several Temples in it remarkable for their structure and antiquity. Particularly there is a Pantheon there, or Temple, dedicated to all the Gods, situated on an eminence made of earth, brought thither for that purpose, which commanded the whole city. It is my conjecture, continues Sozomen, that the name of Bethelia, which signifies the House of God, was given to this place, by reason of this Temple consecrated to all the Gods. S. Jerom, in his life of S. Hilarion, speaks likewise of Bethelia, and says, that from thence to Pelusium was five short days journey. Lastly we find a Bishop of Bethelia among the Bishops of Palestine[1].

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Vide Reland. l. i. c. 35. p. 208.

Bethulia

BETHULIA, a city celebrated for the siege Holofernes laid to it, at which he was [Judith vi. 7.] killed by Judith. We have said in our Comment upon Judith[1], that this city was no other than that of Bethel or Bethuel, whereof we have been speaking. Judith and her Husband, and the principal men of Bethulia, were of the Tribe of Simeon. [Judith vi. 11. & viii. 1, 2, 3. & ix. 2.] Holofernes's design was to go into Egypt. He had subdued all Galilee, all beyond the brook Kison, and even the mountains which separated the kingdom of Judah from the territories of Samaria. He had nothing more therefore to conquer besides the lands of Judah and Simeon, and so open a passage into Egypt.

But, it will be objected, how can this be [Judith iv. 3. vii. 3.] reconciled with Scripture? which [Judith vii. 1, 2. Judith iv. 5.] says, that Bethulia was near Dothaim and Esdraelon, cities in the great plain and country round about, very remote from Bethulia. I answer, that in this place, the Author of the book of Judith describes the march of Holofernes's Army, and the camp which he left when he broke up to go and undertake the siege of Bethulia, not the camp which he took possession of when he set down before this place. Holofernes commanded all his people, that they should remove their camp against Bethulia. They prepared therefore to make war against the children of Israel. And they camped in the valley near unto Bethulia, and they spread themselves in breadth over Dothaim. Their camp extended from Belmaim unto Cyamon which is overagainst Esdraelon. The High- Priest Joacim wrote to all those who were overagainst Esdraelon, toward the open country near to Dothaim. Hitherto there is nothing contrary to our account of Bethulia, situated towards Gaza in the Tribe of Simeon.

It is true, travellers tell us of a city of this name situated in the Tribe of Zebulun, a league from Tiberias at the same distance from Abilene, three leagues from Dothaim, and to the north of Scythopolis: but this city was not known to any of the antients. Neither Joshua, nor Josephus, nor Eusebius, nor S. Jerom, had any knowledge of a Bethulia in this place; which persuades me, that the city of this name, which has been shewn there, since the Croisades, was fixed there only by conjecture. Travellers having often given old names at random to places, which they imagined to be upon the spot, where old cities stood, that were known to them in history. We shall relate the history of the siege of Bethulia in the article of Judith.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Comment. p. 411, 412.

Bethzaida

BETHZAIDA, a city lying beyond the river Jordan, upon the Sea of Tiberias, in the place almost where the Jordan discharges itself into this Sea. Philip the Tetrarch inlarged and adorned the city of Bethzaida, and called it Julias. Josephus takes notice particularly, that Bethzaida was in the Gaulonitis, and on the other side of Jordan[1]. In our Dissertation on the Geography of the Holy Land, we have examined the arguments which are produced to shew on the contrary, that Bethzaida lies to the west, and not to the east, of the Sea of Tiberias[2].

Bethzaida is not known by the name of Julias in the New Testament. The Apostles S. Peter, Andrew, and Philip [Mark viii. 22.] were of this City. Our Saviour was there frequently: he cured a blind man there, by putting spittle on his eyes, he led him out of the town, and laying his hands up[3] on him, asked him if he saw any thing. He said he saw men walking, who appeared to him like trees; and Jesus putting once more his hands upon his eyes, the blind man was so perfectly cured, that he saw all things distinctly. Our Saviour wrought a great many miracles here; but the inhabitants were not benefited by the instructions which he gave them, nor by the miracles which they saw performed by him: the consideration whereof obliged him one day to say, Woe unto thee Chorazin, woe unto [Luke x.

13.] thee Bethzaida; for if the mighty works which had been done in you, had been done in Tyre and Sidon, they had a great while ago repented, sitting in sackcloth and ashes. The Hebrew word Bethzaida, signifies the hunting or the fishing-house.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Antiq. lib. xviii. c. 3. & de Bello, l. 2. c. 13. Vide Cellar. Geograph. antiq. p. 387. & Reland. t. 2. p. 653, 654.
Differt. sur la Geograph. á la tête de Josue xlix.
Eufeb. Onomast. in Bethtaphat.

Beth-Zecha

BETH-ZECHA, the same probably as Bezek, or Bazek, Bassah, &c. See above.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Beth-Zur

BETH-ZUR, or Bethsura, a fortress of great consequence, principally in the time of the Maccabees. Rehoboam King of Judah [2 Chron. xi. 7.] had it fortified. Lysias, Regent of the Kingdom of Syria under young Antiochus, the Son of Antiochus Epiphanes, laid siege to Bethzur with an Army of sixty thousand foot and five thousand horse. Judas Maccabæus coming to succour the place, Lysias was obliged to raise the siege. Judas [1 Mac. iv. 28. vi. 7.] put his Army to flight which was very strong, and afterwards making the best use of the arms and booty which were found in the enemy's camp after their rout, the Jews hereupon became stronger and more [1 Mac. iv. 6.] formidable.

Judas Maccabæus was too experienced a [Observations on the rout of Lysias's army by that of Judas Maccabæus.] General not to engage Nicanor and Gorgias before their forces were joined; he attacked them therefore separately, and routed them: Lysias being in a consternation upon receiving so dishonourable a defeat, levied an Army of sixty thousand foot all chosen men, and five thousand horse in order to extirpate the Jews, says the Author of the Maccabees. This Army marched into Judæa, encamped near Bethsura[1], and Judas met them with ten thousand men. The party, my readers will say, was not equal; and I should think so too, if a General of but a moderate degree of courage and understanding had attacked another of greater skill than himself; but here the case is otherwise, and an excellent Commander, bold and enterprizing, attacks one of no capacity, tho' six times stronger in the number of troops; and miracles of this kind are very common without there being any necessity for the interposition of the Deity to produce them. Ancient and modern History furnish us with Victories in great abundance of this sort, and much more surprizing than any obtained by the Maccabees. For the contempt of a weak enemy, whose forces are so disproportionate to the numerous Army which opposes them, is one of the greatest dangers that can be in War; because people are less upon their guard, and do not think their enemy capable of daring to undertake any thing against them, or even of appearing in the field; witness the Action of Uladus Prince of Walachia, who attacked Mahomet the Second's Army, tho' a hundred thousand strong, taking the advantage of a night, when the Moon did not shine, tho' he had not more than between five and six thousand horse; notwithstanding which he struck a prodigious Army with terror and consternation, and put it into such confusion and disorder, that if a body of Janizaries had not stood their ground resolutely, and given the rest an opportunity to recover out of their fright, this Army had been routed.

Judas, who saw that Lysias had entered Judæa, marched directly to his camp under Bethsura. The Author, contrary to his custom in an affair of this importance, tells us nothing of the disposition and distribution of the troops in both armies; but as we cannot be mistaken in the method of the Jews, and in their manner of fighting, when their weakness would not allow them to attack with a front equal to the enemy's, that is to say, with a perfect phalanx, and particularly the Maccabees, who were never at the head of such a number of troops as might be called an Army, we shall have recourse to their common method. Judas, it is probable, divided his ten thousand men into four or five bodies, drawn up very deep, as always was the practice of the Maccabees in all the battles they were concerned in. The Author makes no mention of horse; and it is certain that the Maccabees scarce ever had any, their way of fighting, as it were in columns, not making them so necessary. If Judas had been provided with cavalry, the Scripture would not have failed to have inform'd us of it, since it takes notice of that belonging to Lysias, and particularly specifies the number. As the people of Asia and others threw their horse upon the wings, and the infantry into the center, I range Lysias's army in the same order; and it is probable that he covered the wings of his foot with his horse. They joined battle, says the Author, and five thousand men of Lysias's Army were cut in pieces. To have only five thousand men killed in an army of sixty five thousand, is a very inconsiderable matter. This Victory has all the air of a defeat given to people levied in haste rather than true soldiers; which makes me suspect that the Author of the Maccabees, with respect to the number of the enemy, may enlarge a little.

The year following, being that of the world 3841. before J. C. 159. before the vulgar Æra 163. Lysias attacking it again, [1 Mac. vi. 31, 32. & seq. 1 Mac. xi. 65. 1 Mac. iv. 61. 2 Macc. xiii. 19.] took it, and it continued in the possession of the Syrians, till the government of Jonathan Maccabæus, who by conquest got it from them, in the year of the world 3860. before J. C. 140. before the vulgar Æra 144.

Bethzur belonged to the Tribe of Judah, Joshua. xv. 38. It lay opposite to south Edom, that is to say, it defended the passages into Judea from the side of Edom. We read in the second book of Maccabees, Chap. xi. 5. that Bethzur was five furlongs from Jerusalem; but this is a visible mistake. Eusebius places it at the distance of twenty miles or seven leagues from Jerusalem, in the way towards Hebron. At the foot of Mount Bethzur there is a fountain shewn, wherein some assert, that Queen Candace's Eunuch was baptized[2].

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Translators' note. Not Bethoron, as is here mentioned by the Author. This is plain from the original Text in the above cited Chapter of the Maccabees, v. 29. Καὶ ἦλθον εἰς τὴν Ἰδυμαίαν, καὶ περιεν΄ βαλον ἐν Βαιθσούροις This mistake is repeated in another passage of this article.

Euseb. & Hieron. in locis, voce Bethzur. Ita alij plerique.

Betomestham

BETOMESTHAM, a city so called in Judith, iv. 6. xv. 3. Instead of the Greek Betomesthon, the Latin reads Esthamo, which is a city of Judah.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Betonim

[Jos. xiii. 26.] BETONIM, a city in the Tribe of Gad, towards the north extremity of this Tribe, and bordering on Manasseh.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Betrothing

BETROTHING. See Marriages, where we shall say something likewise of Betrothing.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Beyond

BEYOND, Trans. The Hebrew word Heber[1], which is generally translated trans, signifies likewise, on this side; at least we find it in several places, wherein by the sequel of the discourse it seems, that we should read on this side. For example, Gen. I. 10. Ad aream Athad, quæ sita est trans Jordanem, The floor of Atad was to the west of Jordan; it looks therefore as if it ought to be translated cis Jordanem, on this side of the river with relation to Palestine, where the Jews dwelt; and again Numb. xxii. 1. Trans Jordanem, Jericho fixa est, Jericho is situated beyond Jordan: We know that this city lay to the west of this river.

It may be said, that Moses when he wrote these things, was eastward of Jordan, and consequently that with respect to him Atad and Jericho were trans Jordanem. Joshua who dwelt on this side, and westward of this river, expresses himself in the same manner. He calls, as well the country which lay on this side, as that which was beyond Jordan, trans Jordanem, See Chap. xii. 1. Hi sunt Reges quos percusserunt filij Israel trans Jordanem ad solis ortum. After this he names Sehon and Og, whose dominions were beyond Jordan; and to the east of it. In the same Chapter ver. 7. Hi sunt Reges quos percussit Joshua trans Jordanem ad occidentalem plagam. Then he names the Kings of Jericho, Jarmuth, Eglon, Debir, and the others who dwelt westward on this side Jordan, whence I conclude, that the Hebrew Heber, is taken both for in and trans; or rather that it signifies ultra, beyond, and only the passage of the river, without our being able to conclude that it means this or the other side, unless the Author further explains himself.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

,עברTrans.

Bezek

BEZEK, or Beseca, Bezeca, Bezaca, or Bezecath. Some are of opinion that Adonibezek, who was taken and put to [Judg. i. 4, 5, 6, 7.] death by the Children of Judah, and valued himself upon his cruel treatment of the seventy Kings, the extremities of whose hands and feet were cut off by his order, was king of Bezek, and that this city was the capital of his Kingdom. Saul before he marched against Jabesh Gilead, reviewed his army at [1 Sam. xi. 8.] Bezek. Eusebius says, that there are two cities of this name pretty near one another, seven miles distant from Sichem, in the way to Scythopolis. We are of opinion, that Bezek or Bezekat, was indeed situated somewhere near the passage of the river Jordan, which was at Scythopolis, or thereabouts.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Bezer

[Deut. iv. 44.] BEZER, or Bozra, or Bostra, a city beyond Jordan, given by Moses to the Tribe of Reuben; was designed by Joshua to be made a city of refuge to those who had [Jos. xx. 8, xxi. 6. Jos. xxi. 27.] committed involuntary murder. It was made over to the Levites of Gershom's family, to be a place of habitation for them. As often as the scripture speaks of Bezer, it adds always in the wilderness; because it lay in Arabia Deserta, and the eastern part of Edom, encompassed on all sides with desarts. Isaiah threatens Bozra [Isa. xxxiv. 16. Isai. lxiii. 1. 1 Mac. v. 26, 27, 28.] with very great misfortunes, and describes a Conqueror coming from Bozra, with his cloaths all covered with Blood. This Conqueror is believed to be Judas Maccabæus, who took Bezer or Bozra, and made great ravages in it. He killed all the males he found there, plundered the city, and then set fire to it. [Jerem. xlviii. 24, 25. xlix. 13, 22, &c.] Jeremiah likewise threatens Bozra in a terrible manner, and we believe his menaces were then accomplished, when Nebuchadnezzar carried his arms into Edom and the neighbouring Provinces[1], five years after the taking and desolation of Jerusalem. Eusebius[2] places Bozra at four and twenty miles distance from Adraa or Edrai. This city is said to belong sometimes to Reuben, sometimes to Moab, and again to Edom; because as it was a frontier to these three Provinces, it sometimes was in the hands of one, sometimes of the other, as force and the chance of war decided. There are medals found belonging to this place, which was celebrated among the antients. There are Bishops of Bostra, whose names were subscribed to the Decree of several Councils. It is sometimes made part of the land of Gilead, sometimes of the Trachonitis, at others again of the Auranitis, and most frequently of Arabia or Idumæa. Some Geographers allow of several cities of this name, but we see no necessity to multiply them.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

JosephAntiq. l. x. c. 11. Hieronym. in Jerem. xxv. 32. 1 Genesis, in the Hebrew Bereschith. In princi- 3 Leviticus, in Hebrew, Vaiikra. 17 Jeremiah, and the Lamentations, and the Epistle

Euseb. in Onomast. voce Bozra.

Bezeth

[1 Macc. vii. 19.] BEZETH, a city on this side Jordan, which Bacchides surprized, and threw all the inhabitants into a great pit; it is probably the same as Bezecath.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Bezetha

BEZETHA or Betzeta, a particular part of Jerusalem, situated on a mountain, and incompassed with good walls. It was as it were a new city added to the old. Betzeta was to the north of Jerusalem and the Temple[1].

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Joseph. de Bello, l. vi. cap. 6. p. 919.

Bible

BIBLE. This word comes from the Greek Biblos, which signifies a book. We give this name to the collections of the Sacred Writings, and call it Bible or Book in the way of eminency and distinction: The Hebrews call it Mikra[1], which signifies Lesson, Lecture or Scripture. They acknowledge no more than two and twenty books of the Bible to be Canonical, which we shall here set down in their order. The order of the several books of the Bible according to the Hebrews.

pio. 2 Exodus, in Hebrew, Veelle Schemoth. Et hæc sunt nomina.

The Law Et vocavit.

Numbers, in Hebrew, Bammidbar. In deserto. 5 Deuteronomy, in Hebrew, Elle haddebarim. Hæc sunt verba.

6 Joshua. 7 Judges. 8 The first and second book of Samuel, of both which the Hebrews make but one. The first Prophets.

9 The first and second book of Kings, of these the Hebrews make but one.

10 Isaiah.

11 Jeremiah and Baruch.

12 Ezekiel.

13 The twelve small Prophets make but one Book. viz. Hosea. Joel. Amos. The last Obadiah. Prophets.

Jonah. Micah. Nahum. Habakkuk. Zephaniah. Haggai. Zechariah. Malachi.

14 The Psalms. These the Hebrews divide into five Books.

15 Proverbs. The Sacred 16 Job. Books, or Ha- 17 Solomon's Song. The giographa. Jews place the Lamentations and the book of Ruth after the Song of 18 Ecclesiastes.

Solomon.

19 Esther.

20 Daniel. 21 Ezra and Nehemiah. 22 The two Books of Chronicles. Here follows a Catalogue of the Sacred Writings, as they are received by the Jews, taken from Origen, tom. 1. Edit. Huet. p. 47.

1 Genesis. 2 Exodus. 3 Leviticus. 4 Numbers.

5 Deuteronomy. 6 Joshua.

7 Judges and Ruth. 8 The first and second Book of Samuel. 9 The first and second Book of Kings. 10 The first and second Book of Chronicles.

11 The first and second Book of Esdras. 12 The Psalms. 13 The Book of Proverbs. 14 Ecclesiastes. 15 Solomon's Song. 16 Isaiah.

to the Captives. 18 Daniel. 20 Job. 21 Esther. 22 The small Prophets. The order and division of the Books of the Bible, as well of the Old as the New Testament, according to the division made by the Council of Trent. Session iv. Decree 1.

Genesis Genesis. Exodus. Leviticus. Numbers. Deuteronomy. Joshua. Judges and Ruth. The first Book of Kings. The second Book of Kings. The third Book of Kings The fourth Book of Kings. The first Book of Chronicles. The second Book of Chronicles. The first Book of Esdras. The second Book of Esdras, or Nehemiah, Tobit. Judith. Esther. Job. The Psalms. The Proverbs. Ecclesiastes. The Song of Solomon. The Book of Wisdom. Ecclesiasticus. Isaiah. Jeremiah and Baruch. Ezekiel. Daniel. Hosea. Joel. Amos. Obadiah. Nahum. Jonah. Micah. Habakkuk. Zephaniah. Haggai. Zechariah. Malachi. The first Book of Maccabees. The second Book of Maccabees.

The Books of the New Testament, are The Gospel of S. Matthew. The Gospel of S. Mark. The Gospel of S. Luke. The Gospel of S. John. The Acts of the Apostles.

The Epistles of S. Paul. The Epistle of St. Paul to the Romans. The first Epistle of S. Paul to the Corinthians. The second Epistle to the Corinthians. The Epistle to the Galatians.

———to the Ephesians. ———to the Philippians. ———to the Colossians. The first Epistle to the Thessalonians. The second Epistle to the Thessalonians. The first Epistle to Timothy. The second Epistle to Timothy. The Epistle to Titus.

———to Philemon. ———to the Hebrews.

Catholick or general Epistles. The Epistle of S. James. The first Epistle of S. Peter. The second Epistle of S. Peter. The first Epistle of S. John. The second Epistle of S. John. The third Epistle of S. John. The Epistle of Jude. The Revelations of S. John.

Of the Apocryphal Books of the Bible. The Apocryphal Books of the Old [Vid. Jude 14.] Testament are, the Book of Enoch, the third and fourth Books of Esdras, the third and fourth Books of the Maccabees, the Prayer of Manasseh, the Testament of the twelve Patriarchs, the Psalter of Solomon, and some other Pieces of this nature .

The Books which are now lost and are cited in the Old Testament, are these; the Book of the Righteous, Jos. x. 13. and 1 Sam. xvii. 18. the Book of the Wars of the Lord, quoted Numb. xxi. 14. the Annals of the Kings of Judah and Israel, so often cited in the Books of Kings and Chronicles. The Authors of these Annals were the Prophets who lived in the kingdoms of Judah and Israel. We have likewise but a part of Solomon's three thousand Proverbs, [1 Kings iv. 32. 1 Kings iv. 33.] and his thousand and five Songs. And we have intirely lost what he wrote upon Plants, Animals, Birds, Fishes, and Reptiles. The Prophet Jeremiah's writing is [2 Mac. ii. 1.] not extant, wherein he injoined the Captives who went to Babylon, to take the Sacred Fire and conceal it; nor the precepts which he gave them to secure themselves from Idolatry. Lastly, It is a question, whether we have the Lamentations which he composed upon the death of Josiah King of Judah; for the taking of Jerusalem, and the destruction of it by Nebuchadnezzer[2], seem to be the objects of those, which we have remaining of this Prophet.

The Apochryphal Books of the New Testament are, the Epistle of S. Barnabas, the pretended Epistle of S. Paul to the Laodiceans, several spurious Gospels, Acts of the Apostles, and Revelations, the Book of Hermas, intitled, The Shepherd, Jesus Christ's letter to Abgarus, the Epistles of S. Paul to Seneca, and several other pieces of the like nature, which may be seen in the collection of the Apochryphal Writings of the New Testament made by Fabricius.

Of the Language wherein the Books of the Bible were written.

The Books of the Old Testament were written for the most part in Hebrew. There are [Ezra iv. 7, 8. v, vi. 1.-19. vii. 1, 2.-- 34. Dan. ii. 12.--27. 4. & seq. Dan. iv. iii. 14, 15. & v. 17. &c. vi 21, &c.] are some places of Esdras, and Daniel, which are written in Chaldee; Tobit, Judith, the Maccabees, and Ecclesiasticus were likewise written in this Language, or in Syriac; but for the Book of Wisdom, it was never written in any other than in Greek. The Reader may consult our Prefaces upon all these Books in particular.

The Books of the New Testament were all written in Greek, except S. Matthew, which was written in Hebrew, that is to say in Syriac, which was the language spoken at that time in Judæa. It is disputed, whether S. Mark wrote in Greek or Latin, and whether the Epistle to the Hebrews was not at first written in Hebrew. But we think that we have shewn very clearly in our several Prefaces to these Books, that they were originally composed in Greek.

Of the Translations of the Books of the Bible.

The Hebrews were at first very reserved in communicating themselves to strangers[3]. As they despised and shun'd the Gentiles, they would not condescend to disclose any thing to them, of those treasures which were concealed in the Holy Scriptures; and the people bordering upon the Jews, such as the Egyptians, Arabians and Phœnicians, for their parts, were not very curious to know the Laws or History of a people whom they reciprocally hated and contemned. It was not till after the several Captivities of the Jews, that foreigners admiring the singularity of their Laws and Ceremonies, were inclined to have a more particular knowledge of them.

Josephus, who studied the Antiquities of his Country with an almost incredible diligence, could discover only some slight footsteps of the Jewish History, interspersed in the Egyptian, Chaldean and Phœnician History. Nor has he there observed any notice to be taken of their Laws or Religion, except in times very modern, compared with the Antiquity of the Hebrews. The Author was so sensible of this, that he thought himself obliged to enquire into the reasons, why foreign writers were so silent in affairs relating to his Nation[4]. And all he has to say after this consideration is, that they never read books written by the Hebrews. He adds, that Demetrius Phalereus, Philo the Elder, and Eupolemus, did indeed speak of the Jews, but with very little accuracy and success, because they were not able to apply themselves with all necessary care to the reading of their History; which want of opportunity to use such application proceeded from hence, viz. that the Sacred Books were not as yet translated into Greek, nor known to the writers of that Nation.

Aristeas indeed says, there was a translation, tho' an imperfect one, of the Jewish Scriptures before the time of Demetrius Phalereus, and that Theopompus intending to insert something of them in his verses, was deprived of his understanding; but all this is affirmed by Aristeas without any proof or probability. For whose use could this version have been made? Not sure for the heathen Greeks, for there were none of them in the East, who could be any way concerned to have this done. And the Jews themselves had still less occasion for any such Translation of their Sacred Books. It was sometime therefore after Alexander the Great, that the Jews who dwelt in great numbers in the Provinces, and had not a sufficient understanding of the Hebrew, desired a Greek Translation of their Scriptures. To this we may add, that the Curiosity of the Philosophers, and learned Heathens, and if you please the great inclination of the Egyptian Kings to embellish and enrich their Library, produced the first Translations of the Scripture. These are the true reasons which first induced the undertakers to think of translating the Jewish Scriptures out of Hebrew into Greek.

The Greek Bible of the Septuagint.

In the article of the Septuagint, we shall examine the History of Aristeas, and what he says of the Version[5] procured by Demetrius Phalereus, Library-keeper to Ptolemy Philadelphus. In the mean time we take this opportunity to declare, that we are not inclinable to believe the Greek Version attributed to the Septuagint, to be much later than the reign of Ptolemy; and further we believe, that there is not any more antient. Nor can we be easily persuaded, that the whole Bible was at once translated into Greek. It is very certain, that the Translations of the other Books of Scripture are not near so correct and exact as that of the five Books of Moses; and that in the other Books the Criticks observe considerable differences as to the style, and ways of expressing, and translating the same term.

Chaldee Translations.

The Chaldee translations of the Scripture are thought generally to be antient, and there are some Criticks, who believe them to be made before the time of Jesus Christ. But they are certainly of a later date, as may be seen in F. Morinus's critical Comments on the Bible, l. ii. Exercit. 8. c. 2. They are not plain literal Translations of the Hebrew Text, but rather Paraphrases or Expositions. We shall speak of them more at large in the article Targum, or Chaldee Paraphrases.

The Syriack Bible.

The Syrians have in their Language a Translation of the Old Testament out of Hebrew, which they give out to be of great antiquity. They pretend, that a great part of this Version was made in Solomon's time, and the rest in the time of Abgarus King of Edessa. Hiram King of Tyre, and Solomon's Friend, desir'd, as they say, this Prince to communicate the use of Letters, and writing to the Syrians, and to translate for them the Sacred Books of the Hebrews, which were then in being, into Syriac; namely, the Pentateuch, Joshua, Judges, Ruth, the two Books of Samuel, the Psalms, Proverbs, Ecclesiastes, Solomon's Song, and Job. Solomon granted very readily the favour which Hiram requested of him; and from this Prince's reign to the time of Jesus Christ, the Syrians had no other Books of Scripture than those which we have just now mentioned. But after the preaching of S. Thaddæus, (not the Apostle of this name, who was sent to them after the Ascension of our Saviour) they received all the other Books of Scripture, which were then translated into Syriac by the care of Abgarus King of Edessa, who had a knowledge of Jesus Christ, even before his Passion, and embraced Christianity. This is the Tradition of the Maronites relating to their translation of the Scripture out of Hebrew.

But all that they say of their Translation made in the time of Solomon and Hiram, is looked upon as fabulous. Nor is it agreed that even the Syriac Translation, which we now have, was of Abgarus's time; tho' we must allow it to be very antient[6], since it is very frequently cited by the Fathers. Who the Author of it was we cannot tell, nor in what time particularly it was made. Pocock[7] quotes a Syriac Version by one Thomas of Heraclea, but he confesses that there was one very antient before it. Abbot Renaudot says, Thomas was a Jacobite, or of Dioscorus's Sect; and that when he came into Egypt, he took the pains to compare the Syriac Bible with the old Copies, which were preserved in the Monastery of S. Antonius. From that time therefore all the Sacred Writings of the Syrians are collated with and corrected from this Edition of Thomas of Heraclea, which is esteemed to be the most accurate and correct of all. But there is no proof that he himself ever composed any Translation.

Besides this old Syriac Version from the Hebrew, which is printed in the Polyglotts of Paris and England, the Syrians have another made from the Greek. The original of it is not distinctly known. Masius[8] says, that he had in his possession, Deuteronomy, Joshua, Judges, Kings, Chronicles, Esdras, Judith and Tobit, translated in the Year of J. C. 615. from the Greek Copies corrected by Origen. But these Versions, which Masius speaks of, have never yet appeared, and several doubts as to this point must necessarily arise, when we consider the extreme difference between the Greek and Syriac Languages, and the impossibility of placing all Origen's Obelisks and Asterisks in a Language, wherein are none of those articles or other particles which are in the Greek. One Syriac Version from the Greek we know of, and we know too that one Mar-Abba[9] was the Author of it.

Latin Bibles.

The Latin Translation of the Bible is one of the most antient; but does not exceed the beginning of Christianity: The Jews who liv'd in the Roman Empire, never thought of translating the Old Testament into Latin; because they all understood Greek or Hebrew; and as they came out of Asia or Greece, Greek was very well known among them: But as soon as Christianity began to prevail, several Heathens, who understood the Latin tongue only, having embraced the Faith of Jesus Christ; there was a necessity to procure for them a translation of the Scripture in this language. The Author or rather Authors, for there were several imployed about it[10], are not known; and their manner of translating the Greek into Latin, shews rather, that they themselves were not masters of all the delicacies of the Latin tongue, or that they for whose use they made it, were plain, ignorant and illiterate people. And it is certain, that there were many of this sort upon the first prevalency [1 Cor. i. 26, 27.] of Christianity[11]. Now, scarce any besides these had occasion for a Latin Translation: for persons of qua lity and learning, and they who were of any rank in the world, understood Greek, and had no occasion to consult Translators: besides, the first Christians in general despised the charms of worldly Wisdom; solid truth was what they aimed at: all that they sought for in the Sacred Writings, was to be edified and made better men, not to be diverted or amused with the beauty of words, and the order and disposition of a discourse.

The first Latin version of the Old Testament was made from the Greek of the Septuagint, which was the only one that the Latin Translators had any knowledge of. There were no thoughts of translating the Old Testament from the Hebrew, till Saint Jerom's time: Among the many Latin Editions, which were extant before S. Jerom, the old or the Italick was always distinguished, as the cleareft and most literal interpretation.[12] But after S. Jerom had finished his Translation from the Hebrew, the whole Latin Church insensibly forsook the old Italick, and adopted that of this Father, which is at this day in our printed and manuscript Bibles.

The old Italick is nowhere, that we know of, to be found intire; but some fragments of it are preserved in our common Bibles; for example, The Psalter, the book of Wisdom, Ecclesiasticus, and the additions to Daniel, and the book of Esther, Baruch, the Maccabees, and the Epistle of Jeremiah. As to the New Testament, the same S. Jerom translated it intirely from the Greek; and the Church at this day makes use of his Translation, which was declared authentick by the Council of Trent.

The old Italick of the New Testament is not intirely lost, nor would it be impossible to recover it. The four Gospels according to this Version, were found in a very old Manuscript at Corbie; indorsed 195, the various readings whereof have been produced by us in our Supplement printed at the end of the Revelations. F. Martianay has published the Gospel of S. Matthew from other old Manuscripts, as well as the Epistle of S. James. Luke of Bruges says, he[13] had an antient Latin Manuscript in his possession, belonging to the Abby of Malmedy, that contained the old Italick, which was in use before S. Jerom's time. To these we may add the Greek and Latin Manuscript of S. Paul's Epistles, whereof there is a copy in the King's Library, and another in that of St. Germain des Prez, the Latin column whereof contains the old Vulgate. I make no question but that if diligent search were made in Libraries, all this old Version might be found. But we are not to imagine that it would be all uniform, since S. Jerome and S. Austin inform us[14], that the old Copies differ'd very much from one another.

We shall have another opportunity to speak of the Latin Translation of the Bible under the article Vulgate.

Arabic Bibles.

Pocock and Walton observe, that there are two Arabic Versions of the old Testament in use among the eastern Christians, one in the Church of Alexandria, the other in that of Antioch, and in the Churches which depend upon these two principal Metropolis's of the East. Cornelius a Lapide thought he had discovered Copies of them both in the great Duke of Tuscany's Library[15]; but Abbot Renaudot[16] assures us, that the Greek Church of Alexandria makes use of the Greek language in its Office, and of the Version of the Septuagint; and that in private, where the publick Offices are not used, it makes use of the Arabic Translation of the Septuagint. But the Coptic, or heretical Egyptian Church of the same Country, uses the Coptic language in the publick Office, tho' it be no longer common in Egypt.

The same Abbot adds, that the Greeks of Antioch, or Syrian Melchites, who follow the Greek Ritual, perform the Office, and administer all the Sacraments in Greek; but the Syrian Jacobites or Nestorians use the Syriac Version in their publick Office, and an Arabic Translation from the Syriac in private, and consequently one pretty near the Hebrew, from which the Syriac itself was formed. This is what Walton and Pocock were not very particularly acquainted with. M. Renaudot farther remarks, that tho' the Syrians have likewise a Syriac Translation from the Greek, they never make use of it in the Office of the Church, nor in their theological Disputes.

Besides the Arabic Translation from the Syriac, there is another from the Septuagint by Hareth the Son of Senan. The diversity to be observed between the several Copies of this Version is so great that it is impossible to reconcile it. The use of it is not general in the East, but is limited to some Churches of the Melchites, or orthodox Greeks, who perform the Office in Greek, and in private read the Scripture in Arabic, according to the Version of the Septuagint. The Coptites have also an Arabic Arabic Version, made either immediately from the Greek, or from the Coptic itself, which is translated from the Greek; for this is a particular which still seems dubious to Abbot Renaudot, who has furnished us with these remarks.

The Arabic Translations printed in the Polyglotts of Paris and London, are in all points different from the Arabic Versions used in the East; and what is very singular, no eastern Church could know its own Translation by those which we have been speaking of. The Arabic Version of the Pentateuch, printed in the Polyglotts, is taken for the most part from that which Saadias Gaon a Jew of Egypt, made from the Hebrew Text, for the service of his Brethren. But the Christians having interpolated, and fashioned it for their own particular use, Gabriel Sionita, who had the chief direction of the edition of the Arabic in the Polyglott of Paris, made use of this Translation thus changed and interpolated: The other Books of Scripture are Translations by different hands; and the Arabic Versions are made sometimes from the Greek, and sometimes from the Syriac; they who had the care of this edition, concerning themselves no further than to provide an Arabic Version of such or such a book, without giving themselves the trouble to examin it with a critical exactness. So that these Arabic Versions are of no Authority among the eastern Christians.

The Jews have likewise several Arabic Translations of the Scripture, some whereof are to be met with in Libraries; but they are not very antient, and considered by themselves are of no authority. Some are written in Arabic, others in Hebrew characters; that of Saadias Gaon is perhaps the first of all those which have been made from the Hebrew; but it would be convenient to have it all intire in its purity.

Ethiopic Bibles.

The Ethiopic Version of the Old Testament is made immediately from the Greek Text, or from the Coptic or Arabic Text, which are themselves translated from the Greek of the Septuagint. M. Ludolphus[17] observes, that there is a very sensible agreement between this Translation and the Alexandrian Manuscript. The order of the chapters, the inscriptions of the Psalms, and every thing besides, are all together alike. The Ethiopians attribute their Version of the Scripture to Salama, who is thought to be the same as Frumentius the Apostle of Ethiopia, sent into this Country by S. Athanasius. The Martyrology of the Abyssinians, supposes him to be the Author of it. But others[18] believe it to be the work of the nine first Apostles of this Nation, and that it was made from the Arabic. But M. Ludolphus is of opinion, that under the name of Sacred Books, we are to understand the Apostolical Canons and Constitutions, which are indeed translated from the Arabic into Ethiopic.

But Mr. Renaudot[19] and M. Simon, maintain,[20] that the Ethiopic Version of the whole Scripture, both of the Old and New Testament, is made from the Coptick or Egyptian. Thus the Egyptian Version being made from the Septuagint, and old Copies agreeing with the Alexandrian Manuscript, it is not at all surprising, that there should be observed to be so much conformity between the Ethiopic Version and that of the Septuagint in this Manuscript. It is certain, that since the Mahometans have been masters of Egypt, the Church of Ethiopia has been always subject to the Church of the Jacobites in Egypt; and so it is not strange, that it should take from thence the Text of Scripture, from which it procured that Translation to be made into the Ethiopic language, which is in use among the Christians of this Country.

Coptic or Egyptian Bibles.

The word Coptic is formed from that of Egyptos, or Aiguptos; and the Coptic Version is the Translation into the Egyptian tongue. Learned men agree, that this Version is made from the Greek of the Septuagint, that it expresses literally the sense of these Interpreters; and M. Renaudot[21] observes something particular to this purpose, which is, that the Egyptians were so punctual in preserving the old Greek Version of the Septuagint, which their Church of Alexandria had made use of from the beginning, that they refused to take any advantage from the labours of Origen or others, who had been at great pains in comparing the Greek Version with the Hebrew Text; and we read in the life of Demetrius Archbishop of Alexandria, that Origen quite destroyed the old prophecies relating to the Messiah, and after being excommunicated by his Bishop, retired among the Jews. Such was the idea which the Egyptians had of Origen.

There are disputes concerning the antiquity of the Egyptian Version. Some are of opinion, that from the beginning of Christianity, there was a Translation of the the Scripture in this language, made by S. Mark, for the service of such Christians, as did not understand Greek. Athanasius observes[22], that S. Antony, who understood no Language but the Egyptian[23], having one day heard these words read in the Church, [Mat. xix. 31.] Go, sell that ye have and give it to the poor, supposed them to be directed to himself only, and immediately resolved upon putting them in practice. From hence it is concluded, that there was therefore at that time an Egyptian Translation of the Scripture, which was read publickly in the Church. But others are of opinion, that S. Antony heard these words from the Priest who explained that in Egyptian, which he had read in the publick Office in Greek; for it is certain, that in Egypt[24], from the beginning, the Liturgy was read in Greek, as some particular parts of the Office still shew, which are recited in this Language: This however does not hinder, but that the common Prayers of the Church might be celebrated in Coptic in upper Egypt, where Greek was not so generally known, and in the mean time continued in Greek at Alexandria, and in lower Egypt w.

However this may be, the original of the Coptic Version is what we are not acquainted with, nor do we know whether that which we have at this day, be that very antient one which is presum'd to have been used when S. Antony was living, and in the following ages, wherein we see the Councils of Ephesus and Chalcedon subscribed by some Bishops in Egyptian, who knew not how to write in Greek, wherein too there were many Monks and Abbots living, who understood no other Language but Egyptian. Now it is not at all credible, that so many Bishops and Religious should have lived without reading or explaining Holy Scripture. There was therefore at that time an Egyptian Translation. But, as I said, we have reason to doubt, whether that which we now have, is this old Version, or whether it be one more modern. I should be more inclinable to believe it is the old one; for to what purpose should a new one have been made, if there already was another? Besides if any one had undertaken to make a new Translation since the seventh and eighth Ages, we should in all probability have known the Author, and the particular time of its production; but as we are ignorant of both, it is very reasonable to believe, that the Version which we have, is the old one.

T he Coptic Language, which is that of the Egyptian Version, is the primitive Egyptian Language[25], at least as to the ground and substance of it: but it is blended with many words and phrases in imitation of the Greek. The very character is copied from the Greek. Altho' the Coptic is now no longer common in Egypt, and this language is not understood by the people, yet the publick Prayers are still performed in it, but the Gospel and Epistle are explained in Arabic, which is the vulgar Language of the country.

Persian Bibles.

There are several Persian Translations both of the Old and New Testament, composed by different Authors, for the most part unknown, who have performed some one part, some another. But there is not one intirely made by one Author only, and acknowledged as authentick by all those who use the Persian Language. Among those which we meet with in Libraries, some are in Hebrew Characters; these in all probability were made purely for the service of the Jews, others in Persian Characters, and the greatest part of them are still in Manuscript[26].

There is a Version of the Psalms in Persian by one Father John, a Carmelite, and another of the same Book made from the Latin by the Jesuits. We have the Gospels likewise in Persian, copied in the Year 1388. from an Original of greater antiquity. Walton in the London Polyglott has published the Gospels translated from the Syriac, by one Simon the Son of Joseph, a Christian of Persia, who lived in 1341. This Walton made choice of as the best and oldest of all those which we know any thing of in this Language[27]. Wheelock, in 1657. printed a Persian Translation of the Gospel, which is different from that of Simon the Son of Joseph, of Tabriz; but it is made from the Greek, as well as those printed in the London Polyglott, except the Translation of the Pentateuch, which was made from the Hebrew, by one Jacob a Jew, the Son of Joseph of Tavas.

Bibles in the Turkish, Armenian and Georgian Languages.

We have some manuscript Translations of the Scripture in the Turkish Language. For example, John Vugnadius procured a Translation of the whole Bible to be made into this Language, as Thuanus tells us in his History of what was transacted in the year 1565. Albert Bobavius, a Polish Renegade, after his Abjuration called Alibeg, made likewise a Turkish Version of the Scripture, at the instance of Levinus Varnerius. We have no knowledge of any thing printed in this Language from the Old Testament; but in the Year 1666. there was a Turkish Translation of the New Testament printed at London, which differs from the pure Arabick and Persian.

The Armenians have an Old Translation of the Bible in their Language taken from the Greek of the Septuagint. Gregory, Bishop of Alexandria, who lived in 620. says, that while S. Chrysostom was in exile at Cucusa, a city of Armenia, he there very fortunately found out some persons who understood Greek, and ingaged them to undertake an Armenian Translation of the New Testament and Psalter, for the service of the common people[28]. But the truth of this fact is very disputable, as well as the sincerity of Gregory of Alexandria, whom Photius accuses with having sometimes advanced facts against the truth of History.

We are assured[29] that the first Translations, which were seen, of Scripture in Armenian, were of the Emperor Arcadius's time and S. John Chrysostom's. Three learned Armenians were imployed about them, viz. Moses, sirnamed the Grammarian, David the Philosopher, and Mampræus, these translated most of the Books both of the Old and New Testament out of Greek into Armenian.

Others attribute the honour of this performance to Abbot Mesropus, assisted by his two Disciples John and Joseph, in the time of Theodosius the younger. Gretzer cites a Greek Fragment, which tells us, that in the time of Theodosius the Great, and Bahram King of Armenia, who lived about the Year 380. some persons translated the Psalms into Armenian, at which Theodosius was offended, and complained, that the Tradition received by the Armenians from Gregory their Apostle, was neglected by them. See Gretzer, Defens. Bellarm. l. ii. c. 16. col. 881. But the truth of this relation is very much to be questioned; the eastern people are not very exact, nor very scrupulous in their accounts of historical Facts.

We are told likewise[30], that Bartholomew le Petit, and John l' Ange, two preaching Friars, with two Armenians, whose names where John and James, translated the whole Bible out of Latin into Armenian, in the Year of J.C. 1316. But this particular too is very dubious, and attested by no antient Author.

The Armenians in 1666. procured an Impression of the Bible in their Language, to be made at Amsterdam, under the direction of an Armenian Bishop, who had the principal care of this Edition. It was translated from the Greek of the Septuagint, and not very well liked by the Armenians. Another therefore was printed at Antwerp in 1670. by the care and procurement of Theodorus Petræus; and the New Testament separately in 1668 and 1669. M. Pique, Doctor of the Sorbonne, was of opinion, that the Armenian Translation was of great Antiquity, and might be very useful in correcting the Greek Text, from which this Version was made.

The Georgians[31] have likewise a Translation of the Bible in the old Georgian Language; but as this Language is known to very few persons, and the people of the country are extremely ignorant, there is scarce any one to be found, who either reads or understands this Version, except some women, who have learned some historical Passages of the Gospel by rote out of it.

French Bibles.

We shall not enlarge much on the French Translations of the Bible; there are already several Books printed on this Subject, which may be consulted by those who would have a more particular knowledge of it. The first French Bible, whereof we have any certain and distinct knowledge, is that of Peter de Vaux, the Author, and principal of the Waldenses, who lived about the Year 1160. We do not know whether there are any Copies of it still remaining or not in some old Libraries[32].

Innocent III. in a Letter to Bertram Bishop of Metz, tells him[33], that several Laymen, who were desirous of reading Holy Scripture, had procured a French Translation of the Gospels, S. Paul's Epistles, the Psalter, Job's Morals, and several other Books. This Epistle of Innocent III. was written in the Year 1200.

Several modern Writers have ascribed an old French Translation of the Bible to Nicholas Oresme; but F. le Long[34] maintains, that Oresme was not the Author of the Bible translated into French under Charles V. King of France, but Raoul de Presle, who set about it by the King's command, as he declares expressly in his Epistle Dedicatory to this Prince, sirnamed the Wise. This Translation was finished about the Year 1380.

And consequently it is later than Guiard des Moulins, which was compleated in 1294. as he himself says in his Preface. This Translation is to be found in Manuscript in several Libraries. Guiard acknowledges, that he inserted several marginal Annotations in the text of the Bible, and several remarks taken from the Scholastick History of Peter Comestor; and that he hath omitted divers things, which he thought it was not necessary to translate, as the particulars of Genealogies, and things of that nature. This Bible was printed oftner than once under this title, Bible historiale, or historical Bible.

Besides these Versions, wherein the whole Bible is contained, there are other old ones of some parts of Scripture, as the Psalter or the New Testament; the Catalogue whereof may be seen in F. le Long's Bibliotheca Sacra, t. 2. p. 21, 22, 23.

William le Menard, about the Year 1484. printed a French Bible after the Latin Translation of Peter Comestor. Perhaps it may be that only of Guiard de Moulin's revis'd, and put into a new dress.

John de Rely reviewed likewise des Moulins's Bible in the Reign of Charles the Eighth. James le Fevre of Estaples, translated the whole Bible out of Latin into French, and had it printed at Paris in 1528. The New Testament had been printed in 1523. and the Psalter in 1525. It has been since several times reprinted in different places of the Kingdom.

The Doctors of Louvain having translated the Bible out of Latin into French by the Emperor Charles the Fifth's order, they printed it at Louvain in 1550. Charles the fifth's Licence is dated 1546, and this Bible has been very frequently reprinted. The Doctors of Louvain have been reproached[35] with doing nothing more in their Translation than copying almost throughout, and correcting in some places the Version of Geneva published by Olivetan. But

M. Simon[36] remarks, that in the year 1530, or rather 1534, Martin L'Empereur printed a French Bible at Antwerp translated by Nicholas de Leuse Doctor of Louvain; and that this Bible is the same in Substance with that which appeared some years after, under the name of the Louvain Doctors, printed principally by the care of the same Nicholas de Leuse, who had been imployed in the first Translation. And from this Version of de Leuse, Olivetan himself made his which was printed at Geneva in 1535.

In 1566, Renatus Benoist published a French Bible at Paris, with Marginal Notes on some difficult places. This Edition was censured by the Faculty of Divinity at Paris, in 1567, as being no other than the Version of Geneva, which Renatus Benoist thought he had sufficiently purged; but it was still found to be very full of faults. F. Veron in his Preface to the New Testament, which he had translated into French, asserts, that the French Versions, which appeared afterwards under the names of Peter Frizon, and Peter de Besse, were the same with that of Renatus Benoist, or rather that of Geneva, and were likewise very faulty.

James Corbin in 1643, printed a French Bible, which he translated by Lewis the XIIIth's order; but it is generally thought to be too barbarous, and to keep close too servilely to the Latin Text; the very turn whereof, and particular phrases, the Translator has endeavoured to imitate.

Cardinal Richelieu had begun to set some at work about a new Translation of the Bible into French; but his death put a stop to the execution of this undertaking.

Michael de Maroles having translated the Bible into French, and added Annotations to it from Pereira, set about the printing of it, and had already proceeded as far as the xiii. chap. of Leviticus, when on a sudden a stop was put to the impression by Chancellor Seguier, about the year 1671; I have seen the printed sheets of it in the King's Library, and the publick, in my opinion, has lost nothing by the suppression.

Isaac le Maitre de Sacy, in the year 1672, published his Translation of the Bible, with Explanations of the literal and spiritual meaning of it, and it was received with wonderful applause and approbation. It has been since corrected very much, and printed very often in different forms. The person who procured the edition by Broncard in 1701, revised and mended it in several places. We likewise have made some farther amendments of it in the edition of this Text, which is prefixed to our literal Comment.

As to New Testaments which have been printed separately, and by particular Authors, one of those which has made the most noise, and deserved most consideration, is that of F. Amelotte of the Oratory, composed by the direction of some French Prelates, and printed with Annotations, in the years 1666, 1667, and 1670, viz. The Gospels and Acts in 1666, the Epistles of S. Paul in 1667, the general Epistles and the Revelations in 1670. This Author tells us in his Preface, that in order to make his Translation the more perfect, and to be convinced the more fully, that the Latin Text of the Vulgate agrees with the most ancient Greek Originals, he had taken care to have search made in all the Libraries of Europe, for the oldest Manuscripts that could be found there, some whereof appear'd to be of twelve or thirteen hundred years standing; that he had made extracts out of them; that he had had the inspection of twenty Manuscripts belonging to France, and of all those in the Vatican or other Libraries in Italy; of sixteen Manuscripts belongbelonging to Spain, without reckoning those which Cardinal Ximenes made use of in his Edition of the Complutensian Polyglott. Lastly, that he had had the use of several Manuscripts out of England, and the northern Countries, and of many others, which were in Greece, &c. But when we examine F. Amelotte's Annotations[37], we find, that excepting three or four Manuscripts consulted by him, which too are not above four or five hundred years old, he has produced no various Lections that are in any degree considerable, which had not been before taken notice of, either in the London Polyglott, or elsewhere. And when he has been pressed close upon this Point, he has made no scruple of confessing, that all which he had said of this matter was no more than a figurative way of speaking, which he had made use of to give the World a greater Idea of his Performance.

The New Testament of Mons, which was printed in 1665, with the Archbishop of Cambray's Permission, and the King of Spain's Licence, has made so much noise, that it deserves to be particularly considered. The first Author of this Work was M. le Maitre, who having translated the four Gospels into French, M. Antony Arnaud, and M. le Maitre de Sacy, corrected them in several places. M. de Sacy composed a new Preface to them, with the help of M. Nicole and M. Claude de Sainte Marthe: But in the Licence, Mr. Arnaud alone is taken notice of; for that informs the World, that the Translation is the work of a Doctor of the Sorbonne. The Manuscript written with M. le Maitre's hand, with Emendations in the Margin of M. Arnaud's and M. de Sacy's Handwriting, was given to M. Toinard by one of the Elzevirs[38], who printed it; for tho' we read in the Title Page, that it was printed at Mons by Gaspard Migiot, it is nevertheless very true, that no Copies of it were ever printed at Mons. M. de Cambout Abbot of Pont Chateau, went to Amsterdam on purpose to have it printed by the Elzevirs.

This Book has met with a great deal of Opposition, the account whereof has no relation to my Subject. It was condemned by Pope Clement IX. in 1668, by Pope Innocent XI. in 1679, and in several Bishopricks of France at several times. All which notwithstanding it has gone through many Editions, and the generality of those who, since that time, have attempted to translate the New Testament into French, have made use of this Version as a Foundation to work upon, and have endeavoured to correct and purge it of every thing disagreeable to them; and which might draw upon them the Censure of the Pope and Bishops; for both the Version which is in M. de Sacy's Bible, and that which is published with F. Quesnel's Reflections, and that in M. Huré's New Testament, are the same in Substance with the Translations of Mons, revised and reformed by them in all those places, which gave uneasiness to the Censors.

M. Antony Godeau Bishop of Vence, printed his Translation of the New Testament at Paris in 1668; but it is, properly speaking, neither a literal Translation, nor a Paraphrase; but it is a medium between both, and adds some particular words to the Text, which explain the sense of it.

The New Testament published at Trevoux in French by M. Simon in the year 1702, with literal and critical Annotations upon difficult Passages, was condemned by the Bishops of Paris and Meaux, who in 1702, 1703, prohibited the use of it in their Dioceses.

F. Bouhours a Jesuit, in the year 1697, published a Translation of the New Testament, which he composed in conjunction with his Brethren FF. Michael Tellier and Peter Besnier. During the Impression of this Work, the Archbishop of Paris named Revisers of it, in order to examin and correct it. The Translation for the most part is harsh and obscure, which was owing to the Author's Inclination to keep too scrupulously close to the Latin Text, which he translated. F. Lallemant a Jesuit, in his Exposition of the New Testament put out by him some years since, has adopted this Translation.

We have likewise a new Version of the New Testament by F. Martianay, printed at Paris in 1712, with Annotations, and literal Explanations borrowed, as he says, from the pure Fountains of the Scripture.

Lastly, Abbot Fleury, heretofore Preceptor to the Children of France, and at present Confessor to King Lewis XV. has prepared a French Translation of the New Testament, by express orders from the King and Cardinal de Noailles, which has not yet been printed. These are the principal Translations of the Old and New Testament, which have been made by Catholick Writers.

French Translations of the Bible by Pro-

The first French Bible which the Protestants published, was that of Robert Peter Olivetan, printed at Geneva in 1535, and since reprinted often with the Corrections of John Calvin, and some others. But the first Editions of Olivetan were very defective, because the Author did not speak good French, and understood not the original Languages of the Old and New Testament. His Version is said to be the same as Dr. Nicholas de Leuse's Bible, printed at Antwerp by Martin l'Empereur in 1534. and indeed, when we compare them together, we may observe, that they differ only in those places, wherein Olivetan thought it necessary to forsake the Vulgate, and adhere to the Hebrew of the Old Testament, translated by Pagninus, and to the Greek of the New, translated by Erasmus. Olivetan therefore might very easily boast, that in the space of one Year he had translated the whole Bible into French, the Old Testament from the Hebrew, the New from the Greek; for this is what he values himself upon, in the Edition published at Neufchatel, in 1535. at the expence of the Vaudois.

Sebastian Castalio, or Chateillon, published a French Translation of the Old Testament from the Hebrew, and of the New from the Greek, at Basil, in the Year 1555. But this Translation had no manner of success, and did no honour to its Author, because he did not understand French. He made himself ridiculous by particular ways of expressing himself, which were never used by good judges of the Language; for example, instead of transgresser he put trespasser, instead of circoncision he would say rognement, instead of prepuce he would use the word avantpeau. An instance whereof we have in his Translation of the 25, 26 and 27th Verses of the second Chapter of the Epistle to the Romans, which runs thus, Si tu viens á tréspasser la loi, ton rognement devient avantpeau. Que si un empellé (he means one uncircumcised) garde les ordonnances de la loi, certes son avantpeau lui sera compté pour rognement, Et celui qui de nature est empellé, et garde la loi, te condamnera, toi qui as la lettre et rognement, et si trespasses la loi.

John Diodati published a French Bible translated from the Greek and Hebrew, with Annotations of his own; this was printed at Geneva in 1644. The Reformed extremely approved it, and they still make use of it as much or more than of Olivetan's, tho' that has been revised so often, and both the sense and expressions have been corrected by the most learned Protestant Divines. But Diodati's method is found fault with; he does not keep close enough to the Letter, and that he may make himself the more intelligible to all the world, he rather paraphrases the Text than translates it, and inserts words frequently in his Translation to make it more clear.

We are assured, that M. Charles le Cene and M. Le Clerc have both composed intire Versions of the Bible, but they have not yet been published.

As to the New Testament, printed separately by Protestant Authors, the principal Translation of it is that of John le Fevre of Estaples, revised and accommodated to the use of the reform'd Churches in Piedmont, and printed in 1534.

The New Testament translated into French by Peter Dolet, appeared before the Year 1545. the Year wherein the Author was burnt.

John Daillé the Son, and Valentine Conrart, printed a French New Testament at Paris, in 1671. compiled from the Translations of Mons and F. Amelotte; but the Edition was scarce finished before it was intirely suppressed[39].

M. John le Clerc printed a New Testament in French at Amsterdam for De Lorme, in 1703. with Annotations taken for the most part from Grotius and Hammond. M. Bayle says, that this Edition was prohibited and proscribed in Holland, by order of the States General, and by the Decrees of several Synods of the Protestant Churches there; and in Prussia by the Consistory of Berlin, as a work tending to renew the errors of Sabellius, and foment those of Socinus.

Italian Bibles.

Sextus Senensis[40], and after him Antony Possevin[41], speak of an Italian Translation of the Bible, made by James de Voragine, who lived in 1270. But it is questioned with good reason, whether there ever was such a Bible, since James de Voragine himself says nothing of it in the Catalogue of his Works, published by him in his History of Genoa, in the Year 1292. and no Copy of any Translation of the Bible under his name is to be met with in the Libraries of Italy o. The Italian Bibles which are to be found in Manuscript in the Libraries there have no name of any Author prefix'd to them.

The first Italian Bible published by the Catholicks, is that of Nicholas Malerme, or Malherbe, a Benedictine Monk of the Order of Camaldulenses, printed at Venice in August 1471. There was another put out under the name of the same Author, in October of the same Year 1471. very different from the first as to the Old Testament, but much the same as to the New. There is no name to it either of the Printer or the place of Impression. Malerme's Bible has been printed several times in Italy. It was translated from the Vulgate.

Antony

Antony Brucioli made another Version of the Old Testament from the Hebrew, and of the New Testament from the Greek, which was printed at Venice in 1532. But this Bible was placed among the Books which were prohibited by the Council of Trent. This Translation of the New Testament has been printed ever since the year 1530.

Santes Marmochinus revised Brucioli's Edition, and printed it at Venice as a new Translation, in 1538, and there have been several Editions of it since.

Gregorio Leti[42] informs us, that Sixtus V. ordered a Translation to be made of the whole Bible in 1590, but that Philip II. King of Spain, and the Cardinals, having made Remonstrances to him concerning it, he was pleased to suppress it. He says, that there are Copies of this Version still to be seen in the Library belonging to the Great Duke of Tuscany, in the Ambrosian Library at Milan, and in that of Geneva[43]. But this whole account is contradicted;[44] and it is confidently asserted, that there never was such a Translation, nor that any Copies are to be found in any Library of an Italian Bible, published by the Directions of Sixtus V.

The Calvinists have likewise their Italian Bibles. An Italian Bible translated from the Hebrew of the Old, and from the Greek of the New Testament, was published at Geneva for their use in 1562. This is Brucioli's Translation revised, and rendred much purer, and more elegant. The New Testament is taken rather from Fabius Tudesque's Edition of 1560, than from that of Brucioli.

John Diodati published an Edition of the Bible in Italian, first of all in 1607, then again in 1641, wherein he has observed the same method, as in his French Version; that is to say, he is rather a Paraphrast than a literal Translator. His New Testament was published separately at Geneva in 1608, and at Amsterdam and Harlem in 1665.

Maximus Theophilus printed likewise an Italian Translation of the new Testament at Lions in 1551, which was dedicated to Francis de Medicis Duke of Tuscany.

The Jews of Italy have no intire Version of the Bible in Italian, the Inquisitors constantly refusing to allow them the liberty of printing one. To supply in some sort what was wanting in this particular, Leo of Modena in the year 1612, published a Dictionary in Italian and Hebrew, wherein he explains all the most difficult passages of the Bible in Italian[45]. So that this Work may serve in the room of an intire Translation of the Bible in this Language.

Spanish Bibles.

James the first King of Arragon, who died in 1276, made a Constitution, which ordered, that whosoever had the Books of the Old and New Testament in the language called Romance[46], or in the vulgar language of the Country, and did not bring them to the Bishop of the place, in order to be burnt, should be looked upon as one suspected of Heresy, whether he were of the Laity or Clergy[47]. These Books were probably translated by the Albigenses.

Alphonso King of Castille gave Directions for translating the Books of holy Scripture into the Castilian language, if Mariana is to be credited in this particular[48]. Gesner says,[49] that John King of Leon and Castille had likewise the holy Scriptures translated into his language: He adds, that these Books were still in being. We have indeed some Spanish Translations of several parts of the Bible; which are to be found in many Libraries, but the Authors of them are not named.

The first Spanish printed Bible that we know of, is that which Cyprian de Valera speaks of; and which he says was published about the year 1500. This Author declares he had seen it. Who the Translator was, we cannot tell, but it is believed, that he lived about the year 1420, and that he translated the whole Bible into Spanish, as it was then spoken in the Kingdom of Valencia.

The same Cyprian de Valera in the year 1602, printed at Amsterdam a Bible of his own translating into Spanish from the Hebrew, which in reality is the same as that of Cassiodore de Reyna a Calvinist, revised and published under Valera's name.

In 1512, Ambrose de Montesin published the Epistles and Gospels of the whole Year, which he had translated into Spanish. I take no notice here of the Psalms. and other lesser parts of the Bible transla ted into this language by several Catholick Writers: Such a particular account would carry me too far.

Cassiodore de Reyna, a Calvinist, published his Translation of the Bible in Spanish, from Pagninus's Latin Version of the Hebrew, and printed it at Basil in 1569. Cyprian de Valera, as we have said, revised it, and had it reprinted in 1602.

Francis Enzinas, otherwise called Driander, in 1543, published at Antwerp the New Testament in Spanish, translated from the Greek, and dedicated it to the Emperor Charles V.

The Jews in Spain have the Old Testament in Spanish, translated out of Hebrew for their use. Gilbert Voetius[50], and after him Henry Hottinger[51] have affirmed, that the famous Rabbi David Kimchi, who lived sometime in the thirteenth Age, translated the Bible into Spanish. But this Fact we very much question, nor have we any knowledge of this Version, unless it be that, the Pentateuch whereof was printed at Constantinople in Hebrew Characters in the year 1546.

The first Bible which was printed in Spanish for the use of the Jews, was that printed at Ferrara in 1553, in Gothick Characters, and dedicated to Hercules d'Est Duke of Ferrara, whose Licence was annexed to the Translation. The Pentateuch of this Edition is almost intirely like that, which was printed at Constantinople in 1546 in Spanish, but in Hebrew Characters. Without doubt this Version is very ancient[52], and was probably in use among the Jews of Spain, before Ferdinand and Isabel expell'd them out of their Dominions in the Year 1492. And altho' the Jews in the Preface to their Bible of Ferrara, give out, that they have followed the Translation of Pagninus the Dominican, yet it is plain that they did this only to avoid Prosecution from the Inquisitors, who are very careful in prohibiting the Publication of the Bible in the vulgar tongue of their translating. The Spanish Bible of Ferrara was reprinted in 1630, at Amsterdam, under the Inspection of Manasseh Ben-Israel; and in 1661, by the Care and Diligence of Samuel de Cazéres.

German Bibles.

As the several Dialects of the German Language have made it very extensive, and it has produced very many different Versions, we do not take upon us here to mention all exactly, but those only which are the best and principal of them: They who have a mind to be more particularly informed of them, may consult those Books which treat expressly of them.

The first and most ancient Translation of the Bible in the German Language, that we have, is that of Ulphilas Bishop of the Goths[53], made about the Year 360. But this Bishop did not think it proper to translate the Books of Kings, which treat much of War; because the Goths were already but too much inclined to this Exercise, and he was afraid of encouraging their martial humour still more, by a recital of the Wars recorded in these parts of Scripture. We have no more remaining of this old Version, than what was found of it in the Abby of Verden near Cologn, in a Manuscript written in Silver Letters; for which reason it is called Codex Argenteus. This Monument having fallen into the hands of M. De la Gardie Chancellor of Sweden, who bought it for five hundred Ducats; he permitted Francis Junius to take a Copy of it, and he printed it in 1665, with M. Marechal's Notes, and a Dictionary to explain it. This Manuscript is still preserved at this day in the Library of Upsal, and it contains the four Gospels, not altogether entire, but with many Breaks and Interstices, because the old Copy has suffered by time, and the Negligence of those who have been Masters of it.

Some Authors tell us[54], that Charlemain appointed a Translation to be made of the New Testament in the Frank or German Language; but these Writers produce no old Evidence to warrant what they advance. We know that Charlemain took a great deal of pains to have the Latin Vulgate corrected, and that he made use of the Greek and Syriac Texts, in order to restore the New Testament to its purity. This appears by the Historians of his time[55], but they do not say, that he had the New Testament translated into the Frank Language then in use, which was the same as the German.

Others[56] assert, that Lewis the Debonnaire gave orders to translate the Scripture into Saxon: But this particular is not founded on any good historical proofs. We find here and there in Libraries several German Versions of the Bible which are in Manuscript, and pretty antient; but no one can assure us certainly, that they were made in the time of Charlemain, or of Lewis the Debonnaire. There was a Psalter kept in the Library of S. Gal, S. Gal, which was some Years ago destroyed by the Swiss Protestants, and the Book of Job, translated by Notkar Labeon Abbot of this Abby, who lived in the reign of the Emperor Arnold, about the Year 890. And Goldast assures us, that he had in his possession at the time, when he was writing, a German Psalter, written by Ekhardus the Younger, about the Year 1004. for the use of the Empress Cunegunda, Wife to the Emperor Henry II. This is all we know of the antiquity of these manuscript Translations.

As to the German Bibles which are printed, we see some very ancient, but for the most part they are without the date of the Impression, unless it be added by some hand to them[57]; for which reason these dates are very much to be suspected. The oldest with the Year fixed to it, and most certainly known by us, is that of Nuremburg, printed in 1477. and that of Augsburg, of the same Year. Of these there were several Editions in the Cities which we have named, before the appearance of Luther, and at Strasburg in 1485. but who the Authors are of this old Translation, we cannot tell.

John Dietemberger translated the Bible from the Vulgate into German; his Version was printed at Mentz in 1534. and has been since several times reprinted. The Criticks remark, that the Translator copied almost throughout the German Translation of the New Testament made by Jerom Emzer, Chaplain to George Duke of Saxony. Emzer undertook his Translation in opposition to that of Luther, when this Reformer began first to shew himself.

John Eckius translated the Old Testament from the Vulgate, but he declares in his Epistle dedicatory, that he joined Emzer's New Testament to it, which we lately mentioned; he being unwilling to imitate their injustice, who have put out his performance under their own name, without doing honour to him, who is the true Author of it. Eckius's Bible was printed in 1537.

Ferdinand Duke of Bavaria, and Elector of Cologn, procured a new Translation of the Bible to be made by Gaspar Ulembergius; it was printed at Cologn in 1630. but as Ulembergius was of Westphalia, and was not master of the German Tongue in all its purity, the Divines of Mentz revised his Version, and had a new Edition of it published in 1662. These are the principal German Translations, which have been produced by the Catholicks.

Martin Luther published his Translation of the Old and New Testament from the Hebrew and Greek Originals, after having been imployed eleven Years in this work. The Pentateuch was put out in 1522. the historical Books of the Old Testament and the Psalter in 1524. Solomon's Books are supposed to have been printed in 1527. Isaiah in 1529. the Prophets in 1531, and 1532. the other Books of the Old Testament in 1530. the New Testament in 1522. Several Editions of the whole have been since published of Luther's translating. The Learned agree that the Language of it is pure, and the Version clear, and without any intricacies. But the Author is oftentimes rather a Paraphrast than a true Interpreter[58].

Luther's Bible was corrected several times by himself while he was living, and by others after his death. But these are particulars that do not properly come under our consideration in this place. The German Bibles which have been printed in Saxony, Switzerland, and elsewhere, are for the most part the same, as to the substance and foundation of them, with that of Luther, with very little variation. For example, that of Zurick, which is the most celebrated, and that about which the greatest pains have been employed, delivers the sense of the Old Testament almost throughout, according to the Interpretation of Leo de Juda a German Minister who translated the Bible out of Hebrew into Latin. Nevertheless in many places it copies the expressions which Luther had made use of in those Books of the Bible which he had then published, for his whole Bible was not as yet printed.

In 1604. John Piscator published a new Translation of the Bible in the German Tongue, made by him, from the Latin Version of Junius and Tremellius. He confined himself so much to the sense of these Authors, and their manner of delivering it, that it was the opinion and complaint of many, that his Translation abounded with turns of Expression, which were purely Latin, and not at all agreeable to the genius of the German Language.

The Anabaptists have likewise their German Bible, printed at Worms in 1529. and translated by Lewis Hetzerus, with the assistance of John Denkius. These Translators are said to have made great use of the Zurich Version.

John Crellius publish'd his German Translation of the New Testament at Racovia in 1630. And Felbinger printed another Translation of it at Amsterdam in 1660.

The Jews of Germany have some Versions of the Bible in their Language, part whereof are printed in Hebrew, the rest in German Characters. The objection to their Translations is, that they are too literal, and render servilely the Hebrew Text word for word in German.

Flemish Bibles.

The Flemish Bibles, which were prepared for the use of the Catholicks, are very numerous, and for the most part have no name of any Author prefixed to them, till that of Nicholas Vink appeared, which was printed at Lovain in 1548, and the same year at Cologn. The Author confesses that he was assisted in his undertaking by two Divines of Louvain, whose names he does not mention.

The Flemish Versions, which the Calvinists made use of till the Year 1636. or 1637. were copied from that of Luther, or that of Zurich in Switzerland. But their Synod of Dort having in 1618. and 1619. appointed a new Translation of the Bible to be made into Flemish, Deputies were named for this work, which was not finished till 1636. and 1637. since which time there have been very many Editions of it.

Danish Bibles.

The first Edition of the Danish Bible printed in 1550. was made by Peter Palladius, Olaus Chrysostom, John Synningius, and John Maccabæus, wherein Luther's first German Version was the model which they followed. This Edition was revised and reprinted in 1589.

John Paul Resenius, Bishop of Zealand, published likewise in the Year 1605. a new Danish Bible, translated from the original Hebrew. The Translator has too servilely endeavour'd to render his original literally, by which means he has made himself almost unintelligible in his own Language. His Version is harsh and obscure. But in 1633. Christian IV. King of Denmark, gave orders to have it corrected, and put into a better Style.

John Michel translated the New Testament into Danish, and printed it at Lipsick in 1524. and at Antwerp in 1529. and Christian, Son to Peter Canon of Lunden, put out a Translation of it likewise in 1531. Upon the first Edition of this Version it was thought very barbarous, but in the following Editions it was corrected.

Swedish Bibles.

The Author of S. Bridget's Life[59] says, that this Saint who lived in the fourteenth Age, was a diligent reader of the Holy Bible; and that she procured it to be translated into her mother Tongue. Matthias Canon of Lincolp, and Confessor to this Saint, is said to be the Author of this Translation; but there is now no Copy of it that we know of, to be found any where.

In 1534. Olaus, and Lawrence the Son of Peter, published a Swedish Bible which they had translated from the German Version of Martin Luther. Gustavus Adolphus King of Sweden had it revised about the Year 1617. so that afterwards it was almost generally followed; for tho' it has been since frequently corrected, yet the substance of it is still the same.

English-Saxon, and modern English Bibles.

We are assured that Adelmus Bishop of Sherburn[60], who lived in 709. made an English-Saxon Version of the Psalms, and that Eadfridus or Ecbertus, Bishop of Lindisferne[61], who lived about the Year 730. translated several Books of Scripture into the same Language[62]. It is said likewise[63], that venerable Bede, who died in 735. translated the whole Bible into Saxon. But Cuthbert, Bede's Disciple, in the enumeration of his Master's Works, speaks only of his Translation of the Gospel, and says nothing of the rest of the Bible[64].

Some will have it that Alfred King of England, who lived in 890. translated likewise a great part of the Scripture into his own Language, at least that he set about a Translation of the Psalter[65], which he did not live to finish. Balæus cites also William of Malmesbury, who says, that King Ethelstan directed a Translation to be made of the Old Testament out of Hebrew into English-Saxon. It is very probable that some Jew converted to Christianity had the care of this Work.

We find an old Version in this Language, of several Books of the Bible made by Elfrick Abbot of Malmesbury. William Lille an Englishman, in the Year 1638. printed the Fragments of the Bible translated by this Elfrick, at London; but Edmund Thwaits published Elfrick's genuine Translation at Oxford, in 1699. There are several manuscript Translations of particular Books of Scripture in this Language but without the Authors names, which are to be seen in the Libraries of England[66].

Matthew

Matthew Parker, in the Year 1571. published at London the four Gospels in the English-Saxon Language. They were of some very old Translation, the Author whereof was not known. Thomas Marefchal reprinted them in 1665. in English- Saxon Characters, with remarks of his own added to them. Dr. Mill observes, that this old Version was made from a Latin Copy of the old Vulgate, which was in use over all the western part of the World, before S. Jerom published his new Translation; for which reason the Author of it is believed to be very antient.

As to the English Versions of the Bible, the first Author of them is thought to have been John Trevisa, who finished his Translation in the Year 1357[67]. The second that we know of, who undertook a Work of this kind, was Wickliffe, the Manuscript of whose English Translation is in several Libraries in England; but we do not know that it was ever printed. Several other Manuscripts of English Versions are to be met with, but generally without the name of any Author affixed to them.

The first English Bible printed for the service of the Catholicks, is that which was published at Doway in 1609 and 1610. and at Paris in 1635. This Bible contains only the Old Testament, and is translated from the Vulgate, with Notes by some Divines of Doway. The New Testament was published at Rheims in 1582. with the Annotations of the English Divines in this place.

The English Bible was translated for the use of Protestants, partly by William Tindal, and partly by Miles Coverdale. It was published at London in 1535. This Book, as well as the Authors of it, had very unaccountable fortune; but at last after much contradiction it passed, and King Henry VIII. commanded it to be printed, and placed in all the Churches in England, in order to be there publickly read[68].

Thomas Matthew's or John Rogers's Version, which was published at London in 1537. scarce differs in any thing from that we have been speaking of. That which was put out at London in 1541. by the authority of King Henry VIII. was revis'd and corrected by Cuthbert Tunstal and Nicholas Heath, the first, Bishop of Durham, the second, Bishop of Rochester. The Year following, this very Version was prohibited by Act of Parliament and the King's Proclamation[69]; so that during the remainder of Henry VIII.'s reign, there was no Version of the Scripture in the vulgar Language publickly approved and authorized in England. But as soon as Edward was seated on the Throne, Cranmer procured a new Edition of the Bible translated by Tunstal and Heath, to which he added a Preface of his own. It was published at London 1549.

In Queen Mary's reign, several of the English, who had lived in exile at Geneva[70], undertook to make an English Translation of the Bible from that of Geneva. It was put out in 1561. and dedicated to Queen Elizabeth; it was afterwards several times reprinted. But all the English were not pleased with it; for which reason Matthew Parker's Bible, called the Bishop's Bible, was[71] reprinted in 1568. Vid. le Long Bibl. Sacr. t. 2. p. 264.

Lastly, in 1612. in the reign of James I. the Bible, called the King's Bible, was published: This was translated from the Greek and Hebrew by Andrews Bishop of Winchester, and several other Divines, to the number of seven and forty, who shared the Work among them, and took great pains about it. These are the principal Editions of the Bible in English.

Sclavonian Bibles.

It is believed that S. Jerom, who was of Dalmatia, translated the Holy Scripture of the Old and New Testament into the Language of his own Country[72]; but this opinion is not supported by any good proofs: for first, S. Jerom was of Dalmatia, and not of Sclavonia; and secondly, when this Saint tells Sophronius in his Letter to him, that he had translated the Scripture suæ linguæ hominibus, for such as used his Language; we are to understand the Latin Tongue, which was very familiar and as it were natural to him.

Others are of opinion, that the Sclavonian Version was the Work of S. Cyril and Methodius, who were imployed in the conversion of the Sclavonians, about the Year 880. and this opinion is supported by two Historians of Bohemia, one of whom lived in 993. the other in 1200. This old Version was printed by the Muscovites in 1581.

The first Bible printed in this Language, is that which was translated by John of Glogow, and printed at Cracow. This Author died in 1507. and we have not the whole Bible of his Translation, but several Books of it only, printed as we have said at Cracow. Nor do we believe that there is an intire Version of the whole Bible printed in this Language; but only the Psalter, and the Epistles and Gospels for the whole Year.

Bohemian, Bohemian, Polish, Russian, or Muscovite

Bibles.

The Taborites, a sort of Bohemian Hereticks, procured a Bible to be printed in their Language at Venice, in 1506. This they had themselves translated from the Vulgate; it has been several times reprinted. But as the Text from which it was taken, did not please the new Reformers, their Brethren in the year 1579, printed the whole Bible translated from the Greek and Hebrew, by eight of their own Doctors, whom they had sent to the Schools of Wittemberg and Basil, particularly to study the original Languages in these places. This Bible was printed at the Castle of Cralitz in Moravia. The first Part, or Tome was published in 1579, and the sixth and last not till 1593.

The first Version of the Polish Bible that is any where known, is, they say, that composed by Hadewich Wife to Jagellon Duke of Lithuania, who imbraced Christianity in 1390. We are told likewise of a Polish Version of the Bible by Andrew de Jassowitz, and written in 1455, by the Order of Sophia, wife of Jagellon King of Poland. But these Bibles are in Manuscript only.

In 1599, there was a Polish Translation of the Bible published at Cracow, which was the Work of several Divines of this Nation, wherein James Wieck a Jesuit had a principal Share. Another was published in 1608, at Hanovia, probably Hayin in Bohemia, in the Province of Silesia, translated by Jerom of Leopolis, or as Sixtus of Sienna calls him, John of Leopolis.

In 1596, the Protestants published a Polish Bible from Luther's Version. It was reprinted in 1632, and dedicated to Uladislaus IV. King of Poland.

The Socinians have likewise their Bible in this Language, it was translated from the Greek and Hebrew, and printed at Brestia a City of Lithuania, in 1562. Some time after, viz. in 1572, another was put out by them at Caslaw, a City of Lithuania, revised and corrected by Simon Budneus. They have besides the New Testament translated by Martin Czechovick, and another by Valentine Smalcius.

The Russians or Muscovites in 1581 published the Bible in their Language at Ostrowick, translated from the Greek by S. Cyril the Apostle of the Sclavonians. But as this old Translation was too obscure, Ernest Gliik, who had been carried captive to Moscow after the taking of Nerva, undertook to make a new Translation of the Bible in Sclavonian; and Gliik dying in 1705, the Czar of Muscovy now reigning, gave Directions to continue the Work which he had begun, and appointed some particular Divines for this purpose[73]. But this new Translation has never yet been published, that I know of.

I shall say nothing more particularly in this place of the several Bibles translated into vulgar Languages. This is sufficient for a Dictionary. They who would have a more exact Knowledge of this matter, may consult such Authors as have written expresly on this Subject: For example, the critical Works of M. Simon on the Old and New Testament, and F. le Long's Bibliotheca Sacra, from whence we have borrowed almost all that we have here related.

As to the Authors of each respective Book of the Bible, the time wherein they wrote, their admission into the Canon, and other questions which are generally proposed concerning every one of them, the Reader may have recourse, if he pleases, to our Prefaces, and turn to such Articles in this Dictionary, wherein the names of these Books and of their Authors are to be met with.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Translators' note. מקרא Scriptura sacra, quasi lectura dicta, quod ab omnibus hominibus, quibus salutis causâ data est, legi debeat. Buxtorf.

See our Preface on the Lamentations of Jeremiah.

Joseph. contra Appion. l. i. p. 1038.

Ibid. p. 1021.

Translators' note. See his account of the Septuagint confuted by Dr. Prideaux, in his Connection of the History of the Old and New Testament. Part II. Book I. See likewise M. Dupin's Dissertation Preliminaire, sur la Bible. l. i. c. 6. Histoire Critique du veiux Testament par M. Simon, l. 2. c. 2. and Dr. Hoddy de Bibliorum textibus originalibus versionibus Græcis, & Latinâ vulgatâ. These Authors are refer'd to by Dr. Prideaux for a more accurate account of this matter.

Translators' note. Dr. Prideaux, is of opinion that it was made within the first Century after Christ, that the Author of it was some Christian of the Jewish Nation, well acquainted both with the Hebrew and Syriac Languages; and that it is the best Translation of the Old Testament. See Connect, &c. Pt. II. B. I.

Pocock. Præfat. gener. in Joel. Nuncupator. Comment. in Josue.

Masius Proëm. Comment. in Barcepha de Paradiso. Et Ep.

Hebed-Jesu Catalog. lib. Chaldæorum.

Aug. de Doctr. Christ. l. ii. c. 11. Qui Scripturas in linguam Græcam verterunt, numerari possunt. Latini autem Interpretes, nullo modo. Ut enim primis fidei temporibus, in manus venit codex Græcus, & aliquantulum facultatis sibi utriusque linguæ habere videbatur, ausus est interpretari. Vide Mill. Proleg. in nov. Test. Græc. p. 50.

Vide Justin. Martyr. Apolog. Chrysost. ad cap. 11. primæ ad Corinth.

Aug. l. 2. de Doct. Chr. c. 15.

Vide Brugens. in notationib. in sacra Bibl. in quib. variantia loca discutiuntur. In catalogo MSS. quib. usus est.

Aug. loco supra citato. Hieronym. Præfat. in quatuor Evangelia.

Cornel. aLapide argumento in comment. ad prophetas minores.

Euseb. Renaudot. apud P. le Long. Bibliot. Sacr. c. 2. Sect. 5. p. 176. Vide eundem Commentar. in Liturg. Copticam S. Basilii. p. 208.

Ludolf. Hist. Æthiop. l. iii. c. 4.

Epist. P. P. Societ. Jes. de annis 1607, and 1608. c xv.p. 28.

Renaudot apud P. le Long. in addendis, Bibliot. Sacr. p. 666.

Si- mon. Hist. critique Du vieux Test.

Renaudot. Liturg. Oriental. Tom. i. Comment. in Liturg. Coptic. Basilii, p. 207.

Athan. in vitâ Antonij.

Pallad. sub finem, c. 26. hist. Lausiacæ.

Renaudot. tom. 1. p. 206. Liturg. Orient. w Idem t. 1. p. 43.

Vide P. le Long. Bibliot. Sacr. t. 1. p. 236. & addenda.

Vide Jacobi le Long. Bibliot. Sacr. tom. 1. p. 219, 220, 221.

Idem p. 222.

Greg. in vita Chrysost. tom. 8 Oper. D. Chrysost. Edit. Savill. f. 59.

Vide Jacobi le Long Bibl. Sacr. tom. 1. p. 230, 231. & seq.

Altamur. Bibliot. prædicat. ad an. 1333.

Chardin Voyage de Perse, & le Long Bibliot. p. 235.

See F. le Long. Bibl. Sacr. tom. 2. p. 3.

Innocent. III. Ep. 171. p. 472. Edit. Balus.

Le Long. Bibl. Sacr. t. 2. p. 4. & 17.

Franc. Veron's Preface on the New Test. in French. c. xxix. See F. le Long. t. 2. p. 31, 32.

Simon's critical History of the New Test.

Hist. critique des Versions du Nov. Test. c. 32.

Le Long. Bibl. Sacr. t. 2. p. 58, 59.

Vide P. le Long. Bibl. Sacr. t. 2. p. 93.

Sext. Sen. l. iv. Bibliot.

Possevin. in Apparatu Sacr.

Greg. Leti vita Sixti V. Hetrusco Idiomate anni 1688. l. iv. p. 399.

Ibid.

Le Long Sacr. l. ii. p. 106, 107.

Richard Simon t. 1. Epist. Select. Ep. 25. initio. Vide P. le Long Bibliot. Bibliot. Sacr. t. 2. p. 114, 115.

Translators' note. The several dialects of Piedmont, Provence, Catalonia, and the Grisons Country may be called by this name: For tho' they have several Phrases derived from the languages of the People round about them; yet they seem originally to come from the Roman, as it was used in the Ages of its greatest Corruption: or rather from the old Italick, Gallick and Spanish Idioms, generally termed Langue Romance, according to Du Fresne's Observation, under the word Romancium. t. 3. Glossar. Latin. See F. le Long's Bibl. Sacr. t. 1. in the Article Biblia Lingua Romanensi.

Cangius ad vocem Romancium. t. 3. Glossar. Latin.

Mariana de Reb. Hispan. l. xiv. c. 7.

Gesner Partition. Theol. tit. 2. Sect. 6. lib. ult.

Voet. Bibliot. Studii Theol. l. ii. p. 511.

Henric. Hotting. Dissert. de Translat. Bibl. in linguas vernaculas. Vide & P. le Long. t. 2. p. 123. Bibliot. Sacr.

Idem. p. 129, 130.

Socrat. l. iv. Hist. Eccl. c. 33 Sozomen. l. iii. Hist. Eccl. c. 37. Philostorg. l. ii. c. 5, &c.

Vide Vit. Amerbach. Præfat. Dedicatoria ad Carol. V. Imp. & Ferdin. Cæsar. in Constitut. Caroli Magni. Hotting. Bibliothecarii quadripart. l. i. c. 3.

Vide apud Andr. Duchesne, t. 2. n. 7. p. 277.

Vide apud P. le Long. t. 2. p. 145, 146. Bibliot. Sacr.

Vide le Long, p. 150, 151.

Vide P. le Long. Bibliot. Sacr. t. 2. p. 163, 164. & Autores ab eo laudatos. We are assured, that in order to improve the purity and beauty of his Translation, he got it revised by several persons of quality, who were perfect masters of all the delicacy of the German Language. See the Life of Luther set forth in Medals.

Apud Surium 23. Julii.

Balæus Script. Britan. cent. 1. c. 88.

Translators' note. Lindisfern in Holy Island, was a Bishop's See belonging to the King- dom of Northumberland. In the Year 995. Aldhun Bishop of this place, to secure himself from the Danish Invasion, re- moved to Durham, transported thither the Relicks of S. Cuthbert, his Predecessor in the See of Lindisfern, erected a Cathedral, and fixed his See there. See Camden's Britan. p. 947. Bede l. iv. c. 27. Dunelm. Histor. de Dunelm. Eccles. p. 27.

Idem cent. 2. c. 4.

Joan. Foxius Præf. in Evang. Anglo-Sax. an. 1571. Joan. Caius l. i. de antiq. Academ. Cantabrig. p. 150. Balæus cent. 2. c. 1.

Acta SS. Ord. S. Bened. t. 3. parte 1. p. 537.

Guillelm. Malm. l. ii. de Gestis Reg. Angl. l. v. ad an. 893.

See F. le Long's Bibl. Sacr. t. 2. p. 238. &c.

Vide le Long. Bibl. Sacr. tom. 2. p. 250.
Acta Erudit. Lips. an 1694. p. 319. & Supplem. p. 184. 1. tom.
Joan. Durell. Vindic. Eccl. Angl. c. 27. p. 306.
Idem sub finem c. 9. p. 72.
Translators' note. The Author here mistakes, for the first impression of this Bible was made in the Year 1568.
Vide le Long & Autores ab eo laudatos, p. 277.
Vide le Long Bibl. Sacr. p. 295, 296.

Bibliotheca

BIBLIOTHECA. The Collection of the holy Scriptures of the Old and New Testament is sometimes called Bibliotheca Sacra, or Sacred Library. Thus we say, S. Jerom's Sacred Library, meaning the Collection of the Sacred Writings translated by him. We do not read that there were any Libraries formed among the old Hebrews, before the time of Nehemiah, and Judas Maccabæus. But the Annals of the Kings of Judah and Israel, which are mentioned after so summary a manner in the Books of Kings and Chronicles, may be considered as so many Libraries. Solomon complained so early as in his time, that there was no end of making Books. He [Eccl. xii. 12.] himself had written a great many, and among other Effects of his Magnificence, it [1 Kings iv. 32, 33.] is very probable, that he did not forget to compose a large and royal Library.

Ezra, who revised and put in order most of the historical Books of Scripture, had doubtless abundance of Memoirs, Annals, genealogical and other Registers, which are cited by him principally in the Chronicles. It is particularly remarked in [2 Macc. ii. 13.] the second Book of Maccabees, that Nehemiah founded a large Library in Jerusalem, composed of the Acts of the Kings, the Prophets, and of David, and the Epistles of the Kings concerning the holy Gifts. Judas Maccabæus imitated [Ibid.] the Diligence of Nehemiah. He collected what the War with Antiochus Epiphanes had dispersed, and repaired what that had destroyed. There is mention likewise in [Prov. xxv. 1.] the Book of Proverbs of several Sentences or Proverbs collected by the command of Hezekiah. Benjamin of Tudela, a Jewish Traveller[1], says, That on the Banks of Euphrates, near the Prophet Ezekiel's Sepulchre, there was a large Library, which contained the Books that were in being under the first and second Temples. Among others, there was to be seen there the Volume of Ezekiel's Prophecy written with his own hand; there were also many other Books there; and it is the custom, says our Author, for all those who have no Children, to leave their Books as a Legacy to this Library.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Translators' note. This Benjamin was of Tudela a City of Navarre, and lived in the eleventh Century. He travelled to all those places where he thought there were any Synagogues, in order to make him- self well acquainted with the State and Condition of the Jews.

Biblus

BIBLUS, a City of Phœnicia. See hereafter Byblos.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Bichri

BICHRI, the Father of Sheba, who was remarkable in his Rebellion against David, 2 Sam. xx. 1, 2, &c.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Bidkar

BIDKAR, Captain of the Guards to Jehu King of Israel: He was commanded by this Prince to cast the Body of Jehoram Son of Ahab into the Field of Naboth the Jezreelite, 2 Kings ix. 25.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Bigthan

BIGTHAN. An Officer of the Guards to King Ahasuerus, or Darius the Son of Hystaspes, who having conspired against the King his Master, was discovered by Mordecai, Esth. ii. 21. The term Bigthan or Bagathan is not very different from Bagoas, which signifies an Eunuch. The Chaldee, and some Copies of the Septuagint imply, that Bigthan and Teresh his Companion conspired against the King, because they feared the future Elevation of Mordecai the Queen's Uncle. Others are of opinion, that they being very closely attached to Haman and his Interest, had formed a Design of setting him upon the Throne, and murdering Ahasuerus. This is certain, that the cause of their Discontent was not known.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Bigvai (I)

I. BIGVAI and his Children returned from Babylon with Zerubbabel, Ezra ii. 2. 24.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Bigvai (II)

II. BIGVAI returned from Babylon with Ezra, Ezr. viii. 14.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Bildad

BILDAD, the Shuhite, one of Job's Friends, descended from Shuah the Son of Abraham and Keturah. Shuah's Family lived in Arabia Deserta, eastward of the Holy Land.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Bileam

BILEAM, a City in the Tribe of Manasseh, on the other side of Jordan. It was given to the Levites of Kohath's Family, 1 Chr. vi. 70.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Bilgah

BILGAH, Principal of the fifteenth Band of Priests established by David, 1 Chr. xxiv. 14.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Bilhah

BILHAH, Rachel's Handmaid, given by her to her Husband Jacob, that at least through her means, she might have [Gen. xxx. 3, 4, 5, &c.] a Son. Bilhah conceived and brought forth Dan, which word signifies Judgment. She had a second Son also called Naphtali. The Testament of the twelve Patriarchs[1], an antient but Apocryphal Book, says, that Reuben Jacob's Son committed that act of Incest with which he is so sharply reproached in Gen. xlix. 3. with Bilhah his Father's Concubine; and that Rachel dying in labour of Benjamin, the Child was given to Bilhah to be brought up[2].

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Testament. xii. Patriarch. in Reuben, c. 3.
Idem in Benjamin. initio.

Bilhan

BILHAN, the Son of Jediael, and Father of Jeush. 1 Chr. vii. 10.

To BIND and loose, are taken in Scripture for condemning and absolving: I will [Matt. xvi. 19.] give unto you the keys of the kingdom of heaven, and whatsoever ye shall bind on earth, shall be bound in heaven; and whatsoever ye shall loose on earth, shall be loosed in heaven.

By binding and loosing, in the language of the Jews[1], is understood likewise permitting or forbidding, or declaring any thing in a judicial manner to be permitted or forbidden; and in the Promotion of their Doctors, they put Keys into their hands, with these words, Receive the power of binding and loosing.

[Mat. v.17.] I am not come to unloose the law, but to compleat it, says our Saviour; that is to say, I am not come to destroy the Law, but to perfect it. Religion has perfected the Law of Moses, discovered the true Spirit of it, unravel'd all its secret Meanings, and accomplished all the Figures of it; and if it has abrogated some of its ceremonial Institutions, it was only with a design of making the essential points of it observ'd the better.

[Deut. xxv. 4. Judg. xv. 10.] Ye shall not bind or muzzle the Ox's mouth that treadeth out the corn. See to Thresh. To Bind is used for putting in Bonds, and in Prison. We are come to bind Samson, to make him our prisoner.

To bind the Law upon one's hand for a [Deut. vi, 8.] sign; to wear it like a Bracelet on one's arm. And Prov. vi. 21. Bind my precepts about thine heart, and tie them about thy neck. And again, vii. 3. Bind my Commandments upon thy fingers, and write them upon the table of thine heart. In Isai. viii. 16. Liga testimonium, signa legem, is to be understood in another sense. Seal what thou hast been writing, bind it about with thread or ribband, and put thy seal to it.

It is said that Daniel was found to be the most learned of the Diviners, Magi, and Interpreters of Dreams, and things hidden. Spiritus amplior—, & interpretatio somniorum, & ostensio secretorum & so lutio ligatorum inventæ sunt in eo. And lower, Quod possit obscura interpretari & ligata dissolvere, &c. Where we see, that loosing things which were bound, is used as an expression to explain things concealed. Dan. v, vi. 16.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Lightfoot hor. Thalmud. in Matt. xvi. Maim. Tract. Sanhedrin.

Binnui

BINNUI, an Israelite, who separated from his Wife, he having married her contrary to the Law. Ezra x. 30.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Bird

BIRD, or Fowl. It is a disputed Point, whether Birds come out of the Earth or Water; and whether as to the use of them, they may not be placed in the Category of those Fishes, which are permitted to be eaten on fast days, when the Church forbids the use of Flesh; or whether they are really as much flesh-meat, as the four footed beasts. Opinions are divided on this question. Moses speaking of the Creation [Gen. i. 20.] of Birds, says, Producant aquæ reptile animæ viventis, & volatile super terram, sub firmamento cœli. Let the Waters produce living Fishes, and Fowls upon the Earth, under the Firmament of Heaven. The literal construction of the Hebrew runs thus, Let the waters produce creeping things that have life, and let the birds fly upon the earth. This Text does not clearly prove, that Fowls proceed from the Waters, as well as Fish. And Chap. ii. v. 19. of Genesis, seems to intimate, that Birds are taken from the Earth; Out of the ground the Lord God formed every beast of the field, and every fowl of the air. As to the Consequence which some would draw from it, viz. That the use of Fowl as well as Fish is allowable on Fast-days, it is manifestly wrong, since Fowls are more delicate than the Flesh of four-footed beasts, and are neither less juicy, nor less contrary to the Spirit of fasting, which is Abstinence, and the Mortification of the Senses. Nec ideo te carne vesci non putes, says S. Jerom, si suum agrestium, leporum atque cervorum, & quadrupedum animantium esculentias reprobes; non enim hæc pedum numero, sed suavitate & gustu comprobantur. Hieron. Ep. 9. ad Salvinam.

The opinion of Birds proceeding from Water as well as Fish, seems to be better founded on Scripture and the Fathers. The Text of Moses very much favours it. He relates in the same place, Chap. i. v. 20. the Creation of Fish and of Fowls. He says not a word of Fowls on the sixth day, where he speaks of the Production of terrestrial Creatures, Gen. i. 24, 25. And in the Recapitulation of the Works of the fifth day, Chap. i. v. 21. he says expresly that God created Fishes, and Sea Monsters, and all the winged Fowl, according to their species. Lastly, he says, that God blessed what he had created the fifth day, and said to the Fishes, Multiply and fill the waters in the seas; and to the Fowls, Multiply in the earth. The Fathers, and the generality of Interpreters[1] have understood the Text of Moses in this Sense. They believed Fishes and Fowls to have had the same Original, and to have been created the same day.

Another proof which shews, that the Antients believed Fishes and Fowls to have sprung both from the Waters, is this, viz. They allowed themselves the use of Poultry upon days of Abstinence and Fasting; as appears in Socrates the Historian[2], and Nicephorus[3], who say, that formerly many did eat indifferently of Fish or Fowl, upon this Supposition, that both proceeded from Water. There were several Examples of holy Persons who used Fowls, tho' they professed Abstinence from Flesh. Epiphanius having served up a Fowl before S. Hilarion, this holy Monk refused to touch it[4], saying, that he never eat any thing which had had life. S. Epiphanius was not, certainly, unacquainted with the rules of a monastick life, and was far from tempting S. Hilarion that he might violate them. S. Jerom in his Letter to Salvina, supposes Fowls to be sometimes used on fasting days, tho' he did not approve the abuse which some made of this Permission, in giving a loose to their Sensuality. Bede[5] relates, that S. Cuthbert one day put a Duck before some Monks, who came to visit him. Altho' S. Bennet forbids his Monks to eat the Flesh of four-footed Beasts,[6] he does not expresly prohibit that of Birds; and there are several Examples which prove, that in his Order they did eat it without scruple upon certain days in the year[7]; for example, four or eight days at Christmas, and as many at Whitsuntide; and this at such times, when his Rule was most strictly observed. Concerning this matter, see the Commentators upon Genesis, Chap. i. v. 20, 21, 22. and the Authors, who have explained S. Bennet's Rule, Chap. xxxix. See in particular F. Haeften in his monastick Disquisitions, and F. Martenne in his Comment on S. Bennet's Rule.

Some Interpreters[8] have asserted, that Birds were made of the Earth as well as fourfooted Creatures; and others have maintained,[9] that they rather proceeded from the Air, because the Air and Water are are something related; and it is natural for animals to live in the Element, whence they sprang, as we see that animals produced from the Earth, live upon the Earth, Fishes as they proceeded from Water, live in Water. Thus they say, Birds living in the Air, is a strong presumption that they were made of Air. These things are treated more at length in the Commentators, as may be seen by those who have a mind to consult them.

If any one would know what Birds were clean or unclean, according to the Law, he may have recourse to Leviticus xi. 13---24, and Deut. xiv. 11, 12. and we have said something of each of them in particular under their proper titles in this Dictionary.

Birds were offered in Sacrifice upon many Occasions; for example, in the Sacrifices ordained for sin, he who had not a Lamb or a Kid, might offer two turtles or [Lev. v. 7, 8. Lev. i. 14 15, 16.] two young pigeons, one for a sin-offering, and the other for a burnt-offering, these he presented to the Priest, who offered that first which was for the sin-offering, and wrung off his head from his neck, but did not divide it asunder: the other he was to offer for a burnt-offering, according to the manner: In another place Moses relates more at length [Lev. i. 15] the manner wherein the Sacrifice of Fowls was performed. The Priest took that which was appointed for the Burnt-offering, brought it unto the altar, wrung off his head, and burnt it on the altar: and the blood thereof he wrung out at the side of the altar: and he pluckt away his crop with his feathers, and cast it beside the altar on the east-part, by the place of the ashes: and he clave it with the wings thereof, but did not divide it asunder; and he burnt it upon the altar, upon the wood that is upon the fire.

Some Interpreters[10] will have it, that the head of the Bird was pulled off, but others maintain, that there was only a hole opened with the nails between the head and the throat, without separating intirely the head from the body. The Text of Moses does not intimate what was done with the Head thus separated; and it is observed, that when Abraham offered Birds for a Burnt-offering, he did not cut them asunder, but placed them intire upon the other Victims which he sacrificed, Aves autem non divisit. In the [Gen. xv. 10.] other places where Moses speaks of the Sacrifices of Birds, he does not command the Heads to be pluckt off. See Levit. v. 7, 8. When a Man who had been smitten with a Leprosy, was healed, he came to the entrance into the Camp of [Lev. xiv. 5, 6.] Israel, and the Priest went out in order to discover whether he were well cured. After this the leprous person came to the door of the Tabernacle, and offered two Sparrows or two Birds alive, and pure, whereof it was lawful to eat; he made a Wisp with the Branches of Cedar and Hyssop tied together with a Thread, or Scarlet Ribbon; he filled an earthen Pot with running Water, so that the Blood of the Bird was mingled with it; then the Priest dipping the bunch of Hyssop and Cedar into the Water, sprinkled the Leper with it who was healed, after which he let the living Sparrow loose, that it might fly where it would.

As to what relates to the distinction of clean and unclean Birds: See the distinction of them above in the Article Animal.

Dead Bodies were sometimes left in Palestine, exposed to Birds of prey, as appears from several passages of Scripture. But [Deut. xxxii. 24. and 2 Sam. xxi. 10. 1 Kings xiv. 11. Jerem. vii. 13. Deut. xxi. 23. xxii. 6, 7.] generally they were buried in the evening; and the very Bodies of Criminals were taken down from the Gallows. There were only some extraordinary Cases wherein dead Bodies were thrown into the common Sewers.

Moses, in order to inspire the Israelites with Humanity, requires them, if they find a Bird's Nest, not to take the Dam with the Young, but to suffer the old one to fly away, and take the Young only; that, says he, it may be well with thee, and that thou mayest prolong thy days.

It appears from Scripture, that the [Baruch iii. 17.] Antients hunted Birds; Baruch speaking of the Kings of Babylon, says, That they had their pastime with the fowls of the air. [Dan. iii. 38.] Daniel tells Nebuchadnezzar, that God had made the Fowls of the Air subject to him.

The Prophets speak often of Birds of passage, of the Swallow and the Stork that [Prov. xxvii. 8; xxvi. 2. Jer. viii. 7. Hos. ix. 12. xi. 12. Jer. xii. 9. 10.] return to the place of their first Habitation, whereas Man does not acknowledge the Lord his God. God says, that he will recall his captive People like a Bird that cometh from a far Country.

The Lord speaking of his People, says in Jeremiah[11], Mine heritage is unto me as a speckled bird: come ye, assemble all ye beasts of the field, come to devour. As if he said, Judah was like a Bird of charming beauty, yet have I spared him whenever he offended me: have I not given him up to Birds of prey, to be devoured by them? The Hebrew may be literally translated thus, Is not mine heritage as a speckled bird, is it not with respect to me a bird shut up? one of the most beautiful birds for a cage; nevertheless have I not given

Nnnn given it to the beasts of prey? Some translate the Hebrew i, is not mine heritage become like an Hyena against me? is not all mine heritage filled with wild beast? &c.

The Hebrew word Zippor, translated generally Sparrow, is taken likewise in general for a small bird, and sometimes for a Pullet. The Preacher speaking of old men, [Eccl. xii. 4.] says, that they rise up at the voice of the bird, that is to say at the crowing of the Cock. The Greek, Ornis, signifies a Bird, a Hen ; and the Translator of Origen[12] has used pullet for bird.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Vide Ambros. l. v. c. 14. in Hexaëmer. & hymno feriæ 4. ad Vesper. Cyrill. l. i. in Genes. Damasc. de fide Orthod. l. ii. c. 9. Basil. Homil. 9. in Hexaëmer. Hieronym. Ep. ad Oceanum. Vide Perer. & alios Interp. ad Genes. i. 20, 21, 22.
Socrat. l. v. Hist. c. 21.
Nicephor. Hist. l. xii. c. 34.
Monument. Eccl. Græc. t. 1. p. 428.
Bede in vita S. Cutbert.
S. Benedict. Reg. c. xxxix.
Vide Theodemar. Epist. ad Carol. August. & Martenne, Comment. in Reg. S. Bened. c. xxxix. p. 525, 526.
Cajet. Cathar. Lipom. Vielmias, Zurich, &c.
Augst. l. iii. de Genes. ad Litt. 3. Rupert. l. i. c. 50. de Trinitate. f 70 .νήλαφεκ ιεσίνκοπἈ מלאת ראשו Rabb. alii plures.
מלק את ראשו 70. Ἀποκνίσει κεφαλήν. Rabb. alii plures.
נחלתי לי העיט צבוע העיט כבוב עלוה i 70 & Bochart. de Animal Sacr. t. 1. l. iii. c. 11.
Origen.

Birsha

BIRSHA, King of Gomorrah, who was at war with Chedorlaomer, and his Allies, Gen. xiv. 2.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Birzavith

BIRZAVITH, the Son of Malchiel, 1 Chron. vii. 31.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Bishlam Mithridath

BISHLAM Mithridath, one of the King of Persia's Officers on this side the Euphrates, who with Reum Beelteem, wrote to King Artaxerxes, desiring him to give his orders to the Jews, not to go any further with their building of the Temple, Ezra iv. 7.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Bishop

BISHOP, in Greek, Episcopos, in Latin Episcopus, which signifies an Overseer, one who has the inspection and direction of any [Nehem. xi. 22.] thing. Nehemiah speaks of the Overseer of the Levites[1] at Jerusalem, Et episcopus Levitarum in Jerusalem Azzi filius Bani[2]. Uzzi had the inspection of the other Levites. The Hebrew word Pekid, which we render Episcopus, has the same signification. The Athenians gave this name to the person, who presided in their Courts of Justice, and the Digest to those Magistrates, who had the inspection of the Bread Market, and other things of this nature. But the most common notion of the word Bishop, [Acts xx. 28.] is that which occurs to us in the Acts, and in S. Paul's Epistles, where it signifies [Philipp. i. 1 1 Tim. iii. 2 Tit. i. 7. 1 Pet. ii. 25.] the principal and first Pastor of some considerable Church, with other inferior and subordinate Pastors under him.

Bishops are the successors of the Apostles, and chief Judges of such controversies as relate to the Faith of Christians. S. Peter calls Jesus Christ, the Shepherd and Bishop of our souls. And indeed he is the Pastor and Bishop of all those who have either of these denominations. S. Paul describes the qualities requisite in a Bishop, [1 Tim. iii. 1, 2, &c.] after this manner : If a man desire the office of a bishop, he desireth a good work. A bishop then must be blameless, the husband of one wife, vigilant, sober, of good behaviour, given to hospitality, apt to teach, not given to wine, no striker, not greedy of filthy lucre, but patient, not a brawler, not covetous, &c. From Episcopus comes Episcopatus, which [Psal. cviii. 8. of the Vulgate Translation. Acts i. 20.] the Psalmist makes use of to signify office, inspection and government. And S. Peter produces the same term, to denote the Apostleship, which the traitor Judas had forfeited by his perfidiousness. S. Matthias was substituted in his room, and admitted to his charge of Bishop. Et episcopatum ejus accipiat alter, and his bishoprick let another take.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

70 .νῶτιυεΛ ϛοποκσίπἘεπ הלוים פקיר.
Translators' note. The Jews here in England, under the first Norman Kings, had one over them, who was li- censed by them to this office, and stiled Episcopus Judæorum. See Selden's Marmora Arundeliana, cited by Dr. Prideaux.

Bithiah

BITHIAH, the Daughter of Pharoah, and Wife of Mered, 1 Chron. iv. 18.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Bitter

BITTER. Bitterness. I will send the [Hab. i. Judg. xviii. 25. 2 Sam. xvii.] Chaldeans against you that bitter nation; and in another place[1], take care left people, who are bitter of Soul amari animo, or, as in the Vulgate, animo concitati, run upon thee; and again, David in his flight was accompanied with men bitter of Soul, or chafed in their minds, as a Bear robbed of her Whelps. The energy of these expressions is sufficiently discernible; it denotes [1 Sam. i. 10.] anger, vexation, fury. Sometimes bitterness of Soul signifies only grief. Thus Hannah the Mother of Samuel, was in bitterness [2 Kings iv. 27.] of soul; and of Elisha's Landlady, whose son was dead, it is said, her soul is vexed or bitter within her. Job complains that God wrote bitter things against him, that were matter of grief, sadness, and [Job xiii. 26.] affliction.

The waters of jealousy, which Women suspected of adultery were obliged to [Numb. xv. James iii. Is. xxxviii. 17.] drink, are called bitter waters, by reason of their effects, they produced great sorrows in those who were guilty. Bitter envying in S. James, denotes mortal and permanent hatred, the effects whereof cause abundance of bitterness to those who are the objects of it. King Hezekiah in his Hymn says, that in the midst of the peace which he enjoyed, he was attacked with great bitterness, that is to say, with a very dangerous disease, Ecce in pace amaritudo [Jer. xi.] mea amarissima. And Jeremiah, Learn how hard and bitter it is to be forsaken of the Lord ; to how many evils and calamities this exposes you.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

מרי נפשfall upon thee.

Bitumen

BITUMEN, a fat, combustible, oily matter, to be found in many places, particularly about Babylon, and in Judea, in the lake Asphaltites, or the Dead-Sea[1]. Noah [Gen. vi. 14. Gen. xi. 3.] did over the Ark with Bitumen, and the Builders of the Tower of Babel made use of this matter for a cement. The little vessel also wherein Moses was exposed, near to the banks of the river Nile, was [Exod. ii. 3.] daubed over with Bitumen.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Translators' note. Demetrius, while he was encamped upon the Dead-Sea, observing the nature of this Bitumen, formed a project, whereby the royal Revenue might be encreased by it; this he laid before Antigonus, by whom it was ap- proved; and Jerom the Cardian sent to see it executed. But while he and his workmen were imployed there, the Arabi- ans fell upon them, and dispersed them, and the design was never after prosecuted, Diodor. Sic. l. 19. See Prid. Connect. &c. P. 1. B. viii.

Blasphemy

BLASPHEMY. A man is guilty of the sin of Blasphemy, when he speaks of God or his Attributes in an injurious manner, when he ascribes such qualities to him as do not belong to him, or robs him of those which do. The Law passes sentence of death upon [Levit. xxiv. 12. 16.] Blasphemers. Whosoever heard another blaspheming, and was a witness to his offence, laid his hand upon the criminal's head, to express as it were by this ceremony, that he laid the whole blame and punishment of this action upon him. The guilty Person was led out of the city, and all the people stoned him.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Blind

BLIND. Blindness. Blindness is sometimes taken for a real privation of light, sometimes for no more than a dimness of sight; for example, the blindess of the man in the Gospel who was born blind, and that of Tobit were real, and they had truly lost their sight. The men of Sodom, who endeavoured to find Lot's door, and could not, and S. [Gen. xix. 11. Acts ix. 9.] Paul, for the three first days of his being at Damascus, lost the use of their sight only for a season, the offices of their eyes were suspended. The Septuagint[1] have extremely well represented the situation wherein the inhabitants of Sodom were, by expressing that they were struck aorasia, as if they had said avidentia, with an actual inability of seeing.

[Levit. xix. 14.] Moses forbids the putting any thing before the blind with a design of making them fall: thou shalt not put a stumbling block before the blind, which may be understood simply and literally; or as if Moses had thereby recommended that humanity and charity which should be shewn to them, who want light and counsel, to put those in the way, who are in danger of going out of it, to instruct the ignorant, not to offend the poor and weak. Moses seems to explain his meaning [Deut. xxvii. 18.] in Deuteronomy, where he says, Cursed be he that maketh the blind to wander out of his way.

The Jebusites in the way of insult to David and his army, who besieged [2 Sam. v. 6.] Jerusalem, mocked them in these words, Thou shalt not come in hither except thou take away the blind and the lame, who defend the place, as if in reality to make their insult appear greater, they had produced people of this sort upon their walls, or as if their meaning were, that they desir'd none but the blind and the lame to defend their city. Jerusalem notwithstanding was carried, and David forgave none of those blind and lame people who insulted him, he smote [Job xxix. 15.] the lame and the blind that were hated of David's soul. Job says that he had been eyes to the blind, that he had given good advice to those who stood in need of it, that he had taken pains to set [Matt. xv. 14.] them right who through want of light and understanding had gone astray. Our Saviour almost in the same sense says, that if the blind lead the blind they will both fall into the ditch. His design was, to describe the presumption of the Pharisees, who as blind as they were in the ways of God, yet pretended to lead others. Again he tells them [John ix. 40, 41.] in another place, that he came into the world to the end that they who see not might see, and that they which see might be made blind. And as the Pharisees perceived that this was said with a view to them, they replied, Are we blind also? he answered them, If ye were blind, ye should have no sin; but now ye say, we see, therefore your sin remaineth. If you had been sincere and humble enough to acknowledge that you wanted light, and had you addressed yourselves to him, who is the light of the world, you might have avoided sin, &c.

[If. xxix. 18. xxxv. 5. xlii. 16.] One of the principal characters of the Messiah taken notice of in the Prophets is, that the blind shall be enlightened by him. This therefore Jesus Christ proposed to the observation of John's Disciples, who came from their master to be inform'd whether he were the person whom they expected. Tell John, says he to them, what ye have seen [Matth. xi. 5.] and heard; The blind see, the deaf receive their hearing, &c. The Evangelists have preserved the memory of more miraculous cures than one which were wrought by our Saviour on the blind.

[Mark iii. 1. Isa. vi. 9. 16.] Blindness of Heart in the obdurate Jews is often taken notice of, particularly in the Books of the New Testament, our Saviour saw and was afflicted at it. Isaiah foretold it, and God speaking to him of it said, Go, tell this people, see ye indeed but perceive not, make the heart of this people fat, and their ears heavy, and shut their eyes. That is to say, prophesy and tell them, that they will be blind and obdurate, that they shall neither see nor understand what is designed in order to procure salvation for them.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

70 .αίσαρολΆבסכורים.

Blood

[Gen. ix. 4, 5, 6. Levit. xvii. 11. Deut. xii. 23.] BLOOD. God from the beginning of the World forbad the eating either of blood alone, or of blood mixed with flesh, that is to say, creatures suffocated and killed without drawing their blood from them; because the soul of the creature is in its blood; that is to say, the animal life does so depend upon the blood, that no creature can live without it[1]. From hence proceed the several acceptations of the word Blood.

It is taken for life. God will require the blood of a man, that is to say, he will punish murder, in what manner soever it shall happen. His blood be upon us, let them impute his death to us. The voice of Abel's Blood crieth unto the Lord. The Murder committed in his person crieth [Numb. xxxv. 24. 27.] for Vengeance. Propinquus sanguinis ultor sanguinis; he who is to revenge Murder committed in the Person of his Relation.

Blood, means Relation. No one shall come near to any Woman who is near of kin to him. Ad proximam sanguinis sui. [Lev. xviii. 6.] Haman was a Stranger from the Persian [Esth. xvi. 10.] Blood; he was of a foreign Race.

Blood is taken for that which commonly happens to Women. Qui coierit [Lev. xx. 18.] cum Muliere in fluxu menstruo, ----ipsaque aperuerit fontem sanguinis sui, interficientur ambo. And, Si coierit cum ea vir tempore [Lev. xv. 24.] sanguinis menstrualis, immundus erit septem diebus----. Si pepererit masculum, [Lev. xii. 4.] triginta tribus diebus manebit in sanguine purificationis suæ. 4. Flesh and Blood are often set in opposition to Wit and Reason. Flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee, but my Father which is in Heaven. Flesh and blood [Mat. xvi. 17.] cannot inherit the kingdom of God. We [1 Cor. xv. 50.] wrestle not against flesh and blood, against visible Enemies composed of Flesh and Blood, but against principalities and the powers of this world, against Devils, &c.

Wine is also called the pure Blood of the Grape. Sanguinem uvæ bibent meracissimum. [Deut. xxxii. 14. Gen. xlix. 11.] And Judah shall wash his Garments in the Blood of the Grapes.

The Priests are established by God to judge between Leper and Leper, between Blood and Blood; that is to say, to judge in criminal matters, and where the Life of a Man is at stake; whether the Murder be casual, or voluntary; whether it deserves Death or Pardon.

David said, he would not drink the [1 Chr. xi. 19.] Blood of his Heroes, who had exposed their Lives to bring him Water from the Well of Bethlehem; that is to say, he would not drink of that Water, which had been so near costing them their Lives.

God reserved to himself the Blood of all Sacrifices, as absolute Master of Life and Death. The Blood of Animals was poured upon his Altar, or at the foot of his Altar, according to the nature of the Sacrifices; and if the Temple was too remote, it was poured upon the ground, and covered with dust. This Blood of the Sacrifices in the Old Testament, was only a figure of that Blood which Jesus Christ has poured forth for us, and which merits for us the forgiveness of our Sins.

Blood. A Man of Blood: An Husband of Blood; that is to say, a cruel and sanguinary Man, a Husband purchased with much Blood, or who is the occasion and innocent cause of the effusion of his Son's Blood; thus Zipporah called her Husband Moses, when she had circumcised her Sons, in order to preserve them from Death, with which they were threatned. To build one's [Hab. ii. 12.] house with Blood; that is to say, with Oppression, and the Blood of the unhappy. To wash one's Feet in Blood, to obtain a signal [Psal. lvii. 11.] and bloody Victory. The Vulgate reads to wash his hands; but the Hebrew imports, he shall wash his feet. The revenger of [Numb. xxxv. 27.] Blood is he who, according to custom, had the charge, as nearest Relation, to pursue the Murderer of his Kinsman, and seek Blood; that is to say, to take vengeance on him.

[Ps. l. 16. Hos. i. 4. Hos. iv. 2. Joel ii. 31.] Libera me de sanguinibus, deliver me from Blood, forgive me the Murther of Uriah, whom I slew. I will visit the Blood of Jezreel, I will revenge the Blood which Jezabel hath shed there. Sanguis sanguinem tetigit; they committed Murder upon Murder: The Blood was no sooner wiped away, but more was shed. The Moon shall be changed into Blood, it shall appear red like Blood. I said unto thee [Ezek. xvi. 6. Zech. ix. 11.] even when thou wast in thy Blood, live. I saw thee all over polluted with the Blood of thy Birth, and I said to thee, notwithstanding this Impurity which is upon thee, I will give thee Life. As for thee also, by the Blood of thy covenant I have sent forth thy prisoners out of the pit, where there is no water. He speaks of Jesus Christ. Thou hast delivered thy Captives the holy Fathers, who were in Hell; thou hast redeemed them with the Blood of thy Covenant, which thou hast shed for them. Some explain it of the Deliverance of the Hebrews out of Egypt; God relieved them out of this Prison by the Blood of his Covenant, of his Paschal Lamb. It is said, that his Blood crieth from the Ground, [Gen. iv. 10, 11. Is. xxxiv. 7.] that their land is drunken with Blood. That Blood is in any one's hands, upon any one's head, &c. All which Expressions are better understood by the particular Energy that goes along with them, than by all the Comments that can be made to explain them.

The Blood of Jesus Christ is the Price of our Salvation; it is by his Blood that he has [Acts xx. 28.] purchased his Church. Quam acquisivit sanguine suo. It is by the Merit of his Blood that we acquire Justification, and the remission [Rom. v. 9.] of our Sins. We are justified in his Blood. And again, We have redemption through his Blood. By his Blood he hath [Eph. i. 7. and Colos. i. 14. Colos. i. 20.] pacified all things in Heaven and Earth; Pacificans per sanguinem crucis ejus sive quæ in terris, sive quæ in cœlis sunt. By his Blood he hath entred into Heaven and procured admission for us: By his own Blood he [Hebr. ix. 12.] entred in once into the holy place, having obtained eternal redemption for us. His Blood is the Blood of the new and everlasting Covenant, [Heb. xiii. 20. Luke viii. 43.] shed for the Sins of Mankind, which is drunk by us, and is an earnest to us of Immortality.

The woman having an issue of Blood; she is mentioned in the Gospel, and said to have had this Indispolition twelve years, and to have spent her whole Fortune on Physicians, without any Succels. She came behind our Saviour and touched the border of his Garment, and immediately her Issue of Blood stanched. Hereupon Jesus said, who is it that hath touched me? S. Peter answered, Master, the Multitude throngs and presses thee, and thou sayest, who touched me? But Jesus said, Some body hath touched me; for I perceive that vertue hath gone out of me. Then the Woman came trembling all over, and declared before all the People what had induced her to touch him, and how she had been healed; and Jesus said unto her, Daughter, be of good comfort, thy Faith hath made thee whole; go in peace.

Saint Ambrose is of opinion, that this Woman was Martha[2]. John Malala and Codinus call her Veronica. But Eusebius assures us, that she was a Gentlewoman of the City of Paneas, near the source of Jordan, who, in acknowledgement of this Miracle, erected a Statue to our Saviour, which Eusebius affirms, that he had seen with his own Eyes. Sozomen[3] and Philostorgius[4] relate, that it was in being [Psal. lxxx. 13.] till the Emperor Julian's time.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Translators' note. According to which notion is Virgil's expression in his ninth Æneid describing the death of Rhætus. Purpuream vomit ille animam.

Ambr. de Solomone. c. 5.

Sozom. l. v. c. 20. Hist. Eccl.

Philostorg. Hist. l. vii. c. 3.

Boanerges

BOANERGES, that is to say, The Son of Thunder. This is the name given by our [Mark iii. 17.] Saviour to the Sons of Zebedee, James and John, upon the occasion probably of their request to him, that he would call for Fire from Heaven, and reduce a certain Village belonging to the Samaritans to Ashes, [Luke ix. 53. 54.] which had refused to entertain them. The term Boanerges is neither Hebrew nor Syriac. There is some reason to believe, that the Greek Transcribers have not copied it exactly, and that instead of Baneregem,[1] Son of Thunder, or Bane-reges,[2] Son of Tempest, they wrote Boanerges. Or lastly, Boanerges may be an ill way used by the Galilæans of pronouncing Banereges.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

בני רעם Bene-Rekem or Regem.
בני רעש Bane-Rahasch or Ragasch.

Boar

BOAR, Aper, or singularis ferus. This Beast was unclean, as well as the Hog. The Prophet complains in the Psalms, that the wild Boar of the Forest hath rooted up the Lord's Vine. Singularis ferus depastus est eam. Which is understood either of Sennacherib, or Nebuchadnezzar, or Antiochus Epiphanes, who ravaged Judea. The Hebrew word Sis, is taken in general for all wild beasts. See Psalm xlix. 11. The Syriac understands it in the place cited of the wild Ass, and the Chaldee of the wild Cock.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Bocheru

BOCHERU, the Son of Azel, of the Tribe of Benjamin. 1 Chr. viii. 38.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Bochim

BOCHIM, the place of Mourners, or of Mulberry Trees. See hereafter Clauthmon.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Body

BODY. An Assembly or Community is [1 Cor. x. 17.] called a Body; for Example, all the Faithful make but one Body: Unum corpus multi [James iii. 6.] sumus. S. James says, that the Tongue pollutes the whole Body, maculat totum corpus, the whole Body of our Actions; or that in all the Sins which we commit, it influences us by the other Members of the Body. Thus our Saviour in the Gospel, If [Matt. vi. 22.] thine eye be single, thy whole Body shall be full of light. If thy Intentions are right, thy whole Conduct will be agreeable to God. Or otherwise, If thine eye be single, if thou art liberal and beneficent, all the rest of thy actions will be good; at least thou wilt avoid many Sins, which are the consequence of Avarice, and a too great fondness for earthly things.

[1 Cor. xv. 44.] S. Paul speaks of a spiritual Body, in opposition to one which he calls animal, Seminatur corpus animale, surget corpus spirituale. The Body which we animate, and returns to the Earth, is an animal Body; but that which will rise again will be spiritual, will be no more gross, heavy, frail, &c. nor subject to the wants which we are now sensible of.

Body is opposite to Shadow, Figure, [Colos. ii. 17. Colos. ii. 9] Which are a shadow of things to come, but the Body is of Christ. The Ceremonies of the Law, the Festivals of the Jews are but Figures and Shadows, which are realized in Jesus Christ, and the Christian Religion. The Jewish Passover for example, is but the Figure of the Christian Passover; the Sacrifice of the Paschal Lamb, is but a Shadow of the Sacrifice of Christ; the fulness of the Godhead resides bodily in Jesus Christ. In ipso inhabitat omnis plenitudo divinitatis corporaliter, really, essentially. God dwells in the Saints as in his Temple; he dwells there by his Spirit, his Light, his Grace, but in Jesus Christ, the whole fulness of the Godhead dwells, not allegorically, figuratively, and cursorily, but really and essentially. The Body of any thing in the Stile of the Hebrews is the very reality of the thing. The Body of Day, the Body of Purity, the Body of [Gen. xvi. 13. xvii. 23. xii. 17. Lev. xxiii. 4.] Death, the Body of Sin, signify broad day, Innocence itself; the substance, reality, force of Sin; or our Body begotten in Sin. The Body of Death, signifies either our mortal Body, or the Body which vio lently engages us in Sin by Concupiscence, which fets up its Empire in our Members.

Ubicunque fuerit corpus, illic congregabuntur & aquilæ. Matt. xxiv. 28. This is a fort of Proverb made use of by our Saviour in the Gospel, and borrowed from the Book of Job xxxix. 30. where it is said, that the Eagle hath its dwelling on the highest Rocks, viewing its prey at a great distance; and that as soon as there is a dead Body any where, it immediately resorts thither to devour it. Our Saviour compares the Nation of the Jews to a Body, which God in his wrath hath given up to Birds and Beasts of prey; wherever there shall be any Jews, there will be likewise Enemies to pursue and pillage them. Corpus in good Latin Authors is sometimes used to signify a Carcase or dead Body.

[Exod. xxi. 3.] To come in with his Body, and go out with his Body, are Expressions, by which is meant a Servant's coming to, and going from his Master alone, without Wife and Children. If a Slave enters the House with his Wife, he shall depart out of it with her in the Sabbatical Year. S. Jerom translates it, Cum quali veste introierit, cum tali exeat. But the best Interpreters understand it as we have just now shewn: Gaph in Hebrew signifies the Body, and the Lappet of a Garment.

Body is often used in the way of opposition [Rom. viii. 10.] to spirit. The Body is dead because of Sin, but the Spirit is Life because of Righteousness. We are born Sinners and mortal, but Jesus Christ restores us to Life, and merits eternal Happiness for us by his Death, and Grace if we persevere in the practice of what is good.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Boethius

BOETHIUS, the Father of Simon. This last was High Priest of the Jews, from the year of the World 3981, to 3999.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Boni Portus

BONI PORTUS, The fair Havens upon the southern Coast of Crete, near Thalassus or Lassus. See Acts xxvii. 8.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Bonnets of the Hebrew Priests

BONNETS of the Hebrew Priests. See hereafter Cidaris, and the article of Priests.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Book

BOOK; in Latin Liber, in Hebrew, Sepher, in Greek Biblos[1]. Several sorts of Materials were used formerly in making Books. Plates of Lead and Copper, the Barks of Trees, Bricks, Stone and Wood, were the first Matter imployed to engrave such things and Monuments upon, as Men were willing to have transmitted to Posterity. Josephus speaks of[2] two Columns, one of Stone, the other of Brick, upon which the Children of Seth wrote their Inventions, and astronomical Discoveries. Porphyry[3] makes mention of some Pillars preserved in Crete, on which the Ceremonies were recorded that were practised by the Corybantes in their Sacrifices. Hesiod's Works were at first written upon Tables of Lead, which were preserved in the Temple of the Muses in Bœotia. God's Laws were written upon Stone, and Solon's upon wooden Planks.[4] Tables of Wood, Box, and Ivory, were likewise very common among the Antients. When they were of Wood only, they were oftentimes covered with Wax, that any one might write on them with more ease, or blot out what they had written with a Style.

The Leaves of the Palm-Tree were used afterwards in the room of wooden Planks, and the finest and thinnest Bark of such Trees as the Lime, the Ash, the Maple and the Elm. From hence comes the word Liber, which signifies the inner Bark of Trees. And as these Barks were rolled up, in order to be removed with more ease, these Rolls were called Volumen a Volume; a name given likewise to such Rolls of Paper or Parchments as we are going to speak of.

Paper, Papyrus,[5] is a kind of Reed which grows upon the Banks of the Nile. The Trunk of this Plant is composed of several leaves lying one upon the other, which are taken off with a Needle. They are afterwards spread upon a Table, so much whereof is moistned, as is equal to the Size, which it is intended that the leaves of the Papyrus shall be of. This first bed of leaves is covered with a layer of fine Paste, or with the muddy Water of the Nile warmed: Then a second bed of Paper leaves is laid on upon this Paste, and so the whole left to dry in the Sun.[6] Such was the Egyptian Papyrus, from whence our Paper takes its Name, tho' it be so very different from it.

The Kings of Egypt having collected a great Library at Alexandria, the Kings of Pergamus were inclined to imitate their example: But the Egyptian Monarchs, either out of Envy, or for some other Reason, prohibited the Exportation of of Paper out of their Dominions, which obliged the Kings of Pergamus to invent Parchment, called Pergamenum from the City of Pergamus; or Membrana, because made of the skin wherewith beasts and the several members of them are covered. With these leaves of Vellum or Parchment, two sorts of Books were made; the one were rolls composed of many leaves of Vellum sewed or glewed together at the end. These Books were written on upon one side only, and they were to be unroll'd and spread before they could be read. The others were like ours made up of many leaves fastened to one another, were written upon both sides, and were opened like our Books. The Jews still make use of rolls in their Synagogues, and the Bibles which they read there in a solemn manner, are made after the manner of the old Volumes.

The Antients wrote likewise upon linen. Pliny says[7], the Parthians even in his time wrote upon their clothes; and Livy[8] speaks of certain Books made of linen, lintei libri; upon which the names of Magistrates, and the history of the Roman Commonwealth were written, and preserved in the Temple of the Goddess Moneta.

As to the paper at present used by us, which is made of rotten rags beaten small, and reduced to a kind of pulp; the original of it is what we are not acquainted with[9]. We see no Book written on this paper which is above five hundred years old; and perhaps the most antient Author wherein there is any mention of it, is Peter the Venerable[10], who speaks of paper made of old rags, ex rasuris veterum pannorum. F. Bernard de Montfaucon has treated likewise of cotton paper, charta bombycina, which he shews to have been in use above six hundred years ago[11]. The original of this paper is not very well known; but the matter of it is certainly cotton, and the use of it has been very common ever since the tenth Age.

[Numb. xxi. 14.] Book of the Wars of the Lord. This Book is cited by Moses, where he is speaking of his passing the river Arnon with the Israelites, in their way to the country of the Amorites. The particular passage which he quotes is this, What he did in the Red-Sea, and in the brooks of Arnon, and at the stream of the brooks that goeth down to the dwelling of Ar, and lieth upon the border of Moab. This description is adapted only to the brook or river Arnon, which flows round the City of Ar, and sets bounds to the land of Moab. The Book of the Wars of the Lord related some particulars which happened when the Hebrews passed this brook. It declared that this river became dry, and retired as the Red-Sea had done, a circumstance which we read no where else.

Enquiry has been made what this Book of the Wars of the Lord was[12]; some think it was a work of greater antiquity than Moses, and contained a recital of those Wars, which the Israelites had begun or carried on in Egypt, or out of Egypt, before their withdrawing out of this country under Moses. Indeed it is not natural to quote a Book, which is not more antient than the Author who is writing, particularly when any extraordinary and miraculous Fact is to be supported and confirm'd. The Hebrew of this passage in the printed Bibles is perplexed. As it is written in the Book of the Wars of the Lord; at Vaheb in Suphah and in the brooks of Arnon, and at the stream of the brooks that goeth down to the dwelling of Ar, and lieth upon the border of Moab. We do not know who or what this Vaheb is. M. Boivin the elder is of opinion, that some Prince is meant by it, who had the government of the Country, watered by the river Arnon, and was defeated by the Israelites, before they came out of Egypt. Others think, that Vaheb was a certain King of Moab, who was overcome by Sihon King of the Amorites.

Grotius, instead of Vaheb, reads Moab, and translates it, Sihon beat Moab at Suphah. I should rather read Zared instead of Vaheb after this manner, As it is written in the book of the wars of the Lord, the Hebrews came from Zared and incamped at Suphah, and about the stream of the brook of Arnon, which reaches as far as the dwelling of Ar, and leaneth upon the frontiers of Moab. Zared we know; see Numb. xxi. 12, 13. from thence they came to Suphah, which too is mentioned in Deut. i. 1. and perhaps in Numb. xxii. 36. From thence they came to the brook of Arnon, which flows down to Ar the capital City of the Moabites. All this is cited very seasonably in this place, to confirm what is said in the preceding Verses; whereas if we explain this Quotation after any other manner, we cannot find to what purpose Moses here produced it. Zared may easily be made from Vaheb in the Hebrew[13].

[Jos. x. 13.] Others[14] are of opinion, that the Book of the Wars of the Lord, is the very Book of Numbers, wherein this passage is cited, or that of Joshua, or Judges; they do not translate as we do, It is written in the book of the wars of the Lord, but thus only, It is said in the recital of the wars of the Lord, &c. Others assert, that this Narration of the Wars of the Lord is contained in the hundred thirty fifth, and the hundred thirty sixth Psalms. Tostatus will have it, that the Book of the Wars of the Lord, and the book of Jasher, referr'd to in Joshua, are the same. Cornelius a Lapide conjectures, that this place and citation are here added to the Text of Moses, and that the Book of the Wars of the Lord, contained the Wars which the Israelites carried on under the conduct of Moses, Joshua, the Judges, &c. that therefore it was later than Moses. S. Austin[15] supposes, that this Book might possibly be written by the Moabits, and contain an historical account of the Wars, which they had been ingaged in, and in particular what happened when the Israelites came upon their frontiers Lastly, It may be said, Moses either wrote himself, or procured a Book to be written, wherein he took care to have all the Wars of the Lord inserted. This Book was continued under the Judges and the Kings, and was called Annals; and from these Annals came those Sacred Books, which contain the Histories of the Old Testament. But however this may be, this Book of the Wars of the Lord is not now in being; and we have no reason to doubt of its being very certain and authentick, at least in the particular passage, which is here cited. The Reader may consult the Commentators on Numb. xi. 14.

Book of Jasher or the Upright. There is a citation from this Book in Joshua, and in the Book of Samuel, and the same difficulties almost are proposed concerning this, as concerning the Book lately mentioned of the Wars of the Lord. Joshua, after having related how miraculously he put a stop to the course both of the Sun and Moon, adds, Is not this written in the book of Jasher? So the sun stood still in the midst of heaven, and hasted not to go down about a whole day. There is a great diversity of opinions concerning this Book[16]. Some will have it to be the same with that of the Wars of the Lord, whereof we have been speaking; others that it is the Book of Genesis, which contains the lives of the Patriarchs, and other good Men[17]; others again comprehend under this name all the Books of Moses. But the opinion which seems most probable is this, viz. that there were publick persons among the Hebrews from the very beginning of their Commonwealth, who were imployed in writing the Annals of their Nation, and the most memorable Events which at any time happened to it. These Monuments were lodged in the Temple or Tabernacle, whither upon occasion recourse was had to them. The Book, therefore, of the Wars of the Lord, the Book of Days or Chronicles, and the Book of Jasher or the Righteous, are properly speaking the same thing differently express'd according to the difference of times. Before there were any Kings over the Hebrews, these monuments were intitled, The Book of the Wars of the Lord, or the Book of Jasher, or Right. After the reign of Saul they were called the Book of the Chronicles of the Kings of Israel or Judah.

It is matter of dispute with some, whether the citation from the Book of Jasher, were inserted by Joshua himself, or by those who digested his Memoirs, and put his Book into the form wherein we now find it. It is very credible, that this passage was inserted afterwards, and we may easily observe, that the Book of Joshua is not in the condition that he himself left it, but that some additions have been made to it. This Book of Jasher is intirely lost. See the Commentators upon Joshua x. 13.

The Book of Chronicles or Days, in Hebrew, Deberei Jamim[18]. This Book contained the Annals and Journals which were written in the Kingdoms of Israel and Judah. These Memoirs or Journals are not now in being, but are cited in every page almost of the Books of Kings and Chronicles, which are composed chiefly from such old Memoirs as the Author had in his possession, and which in all probability were still subsisting even after the return of the Jews from the Babylonish Captivity. See our Preface to the two Books of Chronicles, and those of Kings. The Authors of the Books of the Days, or Chronicles, were generally Prophets, and inspired Persons.

Book of Life, or Book of the Living, or Book of the Lord. It is very probable, that these several ways of speaking, which are [Exod. xxxii. 32. Psalm. lxviii. 29. Psalm cxxxviii. 16. Philip. iv. 3. Ecclus. xxiv. 33. Rev. iii. 6. Rom. ix. 3.] frequent in Scripture, are taken from the custom observed generally in the Courts of Princes, of keeping a State, a List of all those who are in their Service, of the Provinces which obey them; of the Officers of their Armies, of the number of their Troops, and sometimes even of the names of their Soldiers. Thus Moses's begging of God rather to blot him out of his Book, than to reject his People Israel, is the same almost as S. Paul's expression, when he declared, that he would consent in some sort to be accursed, separated from the company of the Saints, and struck out of the Book of the Lord, if thereby he might be able to procure the Salvation of his People. And when it is said, that any one is written in the Book of Life, nothing more is meant by it, than that such an one in a particular manner belongs to God, that he is in the number of his Friends and Servants. And on the contrary, when it is said, that such an one is blotted out of the Book of Life, this signifies, that he is razed out of the List of God's Friends and Servants, in like manner as they who die, or are guilty of any sort of Treachery, for which they are dismissed the Court, are struck off the Roll of Officers belonging to the Prince.

In a more exalted sense, the Book of Life, signifies the Book of Predestination to Glory, Faith and Grace. They who are predestinated to Faith or Grace only, may fall, and be blotted out of the Book of Life, but they cannot, who are predestinated to Glory. This Predestination is absolute and irrevocable; and if the Elect sometimes incur the Guilt of mortal Sins, God never finally forsakes them, but gives them Grace to repent, and so to return to him.

[Dan. vii. 10.] Book of Judgment. Daniel speaking of God's Judgment, says, The Judges were seated, and the Books opened, Judicium sedit, & Libri aperti sunt. Judgment was set, and the Books were opened. This is an allusion to what is practised, when a Prince calls his Servants to account. The Accounts are produced, and what every one owes is inquired into. It is possible he might allude also to a custom of the Persians, among whom it was a constant practice every day to write down what happened, the Services which [Esth. iv. 1, 2, 3, 4.] were done the King, and the Rewards given to those who had performed them, as we see in the History of Ahasuerus and Mordecai. When therefore the King sits in Judgment, the Books are opened, he obliges all his Servants to reckon with him; he punishes those who have been failing in their duty, or erases their name out of his Register; he compels those to pay who are indebted to him, and rewards those who have done him any important Services. There will be in Proportion the same way of proceeding at the day of God's final Judgment.

[Isa. xxxvii. 14.] Book is sometimes put for Letters, Memoirs, an Edict, or Contract; in short, the word Book, in Hebrew, Sepher, is much more extensive than the Latin, Liber. The Letters which Rabshakeh delivered from Sennacherib to Hezekiah, are called a Book[19]. The Contract which Jeremiah confirmed [Jerem. xxxii. 10, 11, &c.] for the purchase of a Field, is called by the same name. Ahasuerus's Edict in favour of the Jews, is likewise called a Book. Job [Esth. ix. 20, 30, &c. Job xxxi. 35.] writes, that his Judge or his Adversary would himself write his Sentence. Librum scribat ipse qui judicat. (Hebr. homo litis meæ) ut in humero meo portem illum, &c. The Writing likewise which a Man gave to his Wife when he divorced her, was called a [Deut. xxiv.] Book of Divorce . See our Dissertation concerning the matter and form of old Books, prefixed to our Comment upon Genesis.

[Isai. xxix. Rev. v. 1, 2, 3.] The Book that is sealed, mentioned by Isaiah, and the Book sealed with seven Seals, spoken of in the Revelations, are Isaiah's and S. John's Prophesies, which were written in a Book or Roll after the manner of the Antients, and were sealed; that is to say, were unknown enigmatical, obscure and mysterious, had respect to Times remote, and Events that were to come; so that no knowledge could be had of them, till after that which was foretold should happen, and the Seals were taken off. In old times, Letters, and other Writings that were to be sealed, were first wraped up with Thread or Flax, and then the Seal was applied to them; to read them, it was necessary to cut the Thread and Flax, or [Zech. v. 1, 2.] break the Seals.

Book, or flying Roll, spoken of in Zachary, Volumen volans, twenty Cubits long, and ten wide, was one of those old Rolls, composed of many Skins or Parchments glewed or sewed together at the end. This Volume which appeared to Zachary in a Vision, in all probability never had any real existence. Tho' some of these Volumes were very long, yet none were ever made of such a size. This was written, written, and contained the Curses, Menaces and Calamities which should fall upon the Jews. The extreme length and breadth of it shew the excessive enormity of their Sins, and the terrible nature of the Evils with which they were threatned.

[Gen. i. 1.] The Book of the Generation of Adam signifies the History of his Life, in like manner as the Book of the Generation of Noah, or of Jesus Christ, signifies in the Stile of the Hebrews, their History, what has happened to them, and what they have done, [Nehem. vii. 5.] Liber census, signifies the Roll, and enumeration of those who returned from the Captivity of Babylon. For, as has been already observed, Liber with the Hebrews signifies all sorts of Writings, Letters, Ordinances, Memoirs, Rolls, &c.

[Eccl. xii. 52.] Solomon said so long ago as his time, that there was no end of composing Books. Faciendi plures libros nullus est finis; that is to say, that to write upon all sorts of Subjects, and to compose Discourses upon theological as well as natural things, was an infinite Work; but that it was a grand Point, and the Sum of all, to fear God, and observe his Precepts. This cuts short an infinite number of Discourses, Writings, and difficult and curious Questions: Of making many Books there is no end. Les us hear the conclusion of the whole matter; Fear God and keep his Commandments; for this is the whole Duty of Man.

[Isai. xxxiv. 4.] Isaiah describing the Effects of God's Wrath, says, that the Heavens shall be folded up like a Book, Complicabuntur sicut liber cœli. He alludes to the way among the Antients, of rolling up Books, when they had a mind to close them again. A Volume of several Foot in length, was on a sudden reduced to a very small one. Thus the Heavens should be shrunk into themselves, and disappear in some sort from the Eyes of God, when his Wrath should be kindled. These ways of speaking are figurative, and full of Energy.

[Macc. iii. 48.] It is said in the Books of Maccabees, that the Jews, under the Persecution of Antiochus Epiphanes, laid open the Book of the Law, wherein the Gentiles endeavoured to find the Figures of Idols: Expanderunt libros legis de quibus scrutabantur Gentes similitudinem simulacrorum suorum. Some believe, that the Jews laid open before the Lord the Sacred Books, wherein the Gentiles in vain sought for something wherewithal to support their Idolatry; others, that they laid open the Sacred Writings, wherein the Gentiles were desirous to paint their Idols. Or otherwise; the Hebrews laid open their Sacred Books, wherein the Gentiles had sought diligently if they could not find some Figures which the Jews adored. The Heathens imagined that they should discover some Flourishes or Figures in the front of some Jewish Books, which would manifest to them what was the God whom they adored; for the Gentiles were very uneasy on this Article, some believing that they worshipped an Ass, or a living Man, or Bacchus, or something else which they would not own. With some small variation in the Greek Text, it might be translated thus, They laid open the Book of the Law at the same time that the Gentiles consulted the Images of their false Gods.

[Ps. xxxix. 11. Vulg.] We read in Psalm xl. 7. In the volume of the Book it is written of me, I delight to do thy will, O my God. In capite libri scriptum est de me ut facerem voluntatem tuam. S. Paul has left us no room to question the sense of this passage, since he applies it to the Incarnation of Jesus Christ. Some of the antient Fathers[20] have explained this in capite libri of the Book of Genesis, which imports, that in the beginning God created the Heavens and the Earth; that is to say, God created the whole Universe by his Son, his Word, his Wisdom, which in this sense is the beginning of all things. Others, as Chrysostom, &c. explain it of S. John's Gospel, which begins with these words. In principio erat Verbum. The Hebrew reads[21] In the volume of the Book it is written of me; that is to say, in the Body of the Sacred Writings in general: The Greek may receive the same sense: Kephalis i, which is rendred Caput, or beginning, signifies likewise a Roll, a Volume.

The Book of Heaven. Some of the Antients have asserted, that Heaven was as it were a great Book wherein every thing was written which was to happen upon Earth. The[22] Rabbins, and some Christian Authors have revived this opinion, and improved upon it, by saying, that there were Hebrew Characters to be distinguished in the Vault of Heaven, which form'd a certain Writing legible, and intelligible to those who understood it, wherein whatever is in Nature may be found. Picus of Mirandola[23] says upon this matter, that as the Astrologers see certain Images in Heaven, from which they draw their Consequences, the Jewish Masters have likewise their Alphabet in Heaven, and maintain that they find there the Elements and Characters of their Language. Agrippa[24] asserts the same thing, and Gaffarel[25] adds to their opinion the Authority of many celebrated Rabbins, such as Maimonides, Nachman, Aben-ezra, Kimchi, Abrabanel. Among the Antients Origen[26] has advanc'd, that what is to come may be written in Heaven, which is as it were a great prophetick Volume; for this reason, adds he, Jacob said to his Sons, Read in the leaves of Heaven what is to befall you and your Children. He says further, that the Book is with difficulty enough legible to Men, but that Angels have the advantage of knowing perfectly this Writing.

Books Sacred, or Canonical, are those printed in our Bibles. See Bible and Canon, and enquire under the names of the several Books and Sacred Writers, for a critical account and Judgment of their Books.

Books Apocryphal. See above Apocryphal.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Sepher. Græc. Biblos. Liber.

Joseph. Antiq. l. i. c. 3.

Porphyr. l. ii. de Abstinentia.

Plutarch. in Solone. Vide & Laert. in Solone.

Translators' note. Varro observes, and Pliny from him, that the use of the Papyrus for writing on, was first discovered in Egypt, at the time of Alexander's building Alexandria. To this time the following Verses of Lucan have a reference. Nondum flamineas Memphis contexere biblos Noverat, in saxis tantum volucresque feraeque Sculptaque servabant magicas animalia linguas. Lucan l. iii.

Translators' note. As to the way of preparing the Papyrus for use, see Pliny's Natural History. l. xiii. c. 11, 12. Guilandinus de Papyro, and Salmasius's Comment on the Life of Firmus in Vopiscus, who was one of the Writers of the Historia Augusta.

Plin. l. xiii. c. 11.

Tit. Liv. Decad. 1. lib. iv. & x.

Translators' note. Dr. Prideaux says, that this invention seems to have been brought out of the East. For most of the old Manuscripts in Arabic, and the other Oriental Languages, which we have from thence, are written on this sort of paper, and some of them are certainly much antienter than any of the times here mentioned about this matter. But we often find them written on paper made of the paste of silk, as well as of linen. It's most likely the *Sara*cens of Spain first brought it out of the East into that Country, of which Gallicia being a Province, it might from thence according to Mr. Ray, have been first brought into Germany. Prid. Connect. &c. P. 1. B. vii.

Petrus Venerabil. contra Judæos in Bibl. Clun. p. 1070. Vide Mabill. de Re Diplom.

Paleograph. Græc. l. i. c. 2. p. 17.

Translators' note. The Learned Diodati thinks, it might be some poem or antient writing upon the subject of the peoples voyages; and it is uncertain whether it was a Sacred Book written by any Prophet. See Diodat. Annot. upon Numb. xxi. 14. And other Interpreters agree with Diodati in this account: Non librum, sed carmen, ἐπινίκιον alij interpretantur; carmen, inquam, tritum ore vulgi ad victorias Ebræorum concelebrandas, statim post pugnam conditum, quod in rei testimonium affert Moses, cum Pentateuchum diu post rem gestam scriberet. Huet. Demonstr. Evang. Propositio iv. lxiv.

Ethbaheb Besuphah. בסופה את והב

Rabbini quidam.

Aug. quæst. 42. in Numer.

Translators' note. Grotius is of opinion, that this Book was a triumphant Song made with a design to celebrate the success of Joshua, and the prodigy attending it. And M. Dupin declares for this opinion, as the most probable, because the words cited by Joshua from this Book, Sun stand thou still upon Gibeon, and thou Moon in the valley of Ajalon, are poetical expressions not very proper for historical Memoirs. And 2dly, Because a Book under the same title is referred to in the passage of Samuel abovementioned, where David's Song is repeated upon the death of Saul and Jonathan. For these reasons he is persuaded that the Work here in question did not contain Annals. See Dupin Differt. Prelimin. sur la Bible, l. i. c. 3. §. 2.

Ita Rabbini quidam.

דברי ימיםVerba dierum.
Translators' note. The English indeed reads Letter, but the 70 Βιβλίον, and the Hebrew Text † .הספרים*So the Original* .כפר כריתת Tertull. contr. Praxeam Ambros. Hieron. in Psal. xxxix. Hilar. in Psal. ii.
ובמגלת ספר כתוב קלי 70. ἐν κεφαλίδι Βιβλίου γέγραπται περὶ ἐμοῦ.
See Basnage Hist. des Juifs. t. 6. l. 9. c. 22.
Pic. Mirand. in Astr. l. viii. c. 50.
Agrippa de occultâ Philosoph. l. 3. c. 30.
Gaffarel. Curiositez inouies, c. 13. p. 279.
Origen. apud Eufeb. de præpar. l. 6. c. 11. See the Testament of the twelve Patriarchs.

Booty

BOOTY, Spoil. Moses, or the Lord [Numb. xxxi. 27.] rather, requires in the Law, that the Booty taken from the Enemy, should be divided equally betweeen those who were in the battle, and the rest of the people. That is to say, that the whole Booty should be divided into two parts, the first whereof was for those who had been in the action, the other for the People, who continued in the Camp. Thus suppose the Army which fought consisted only of twenty thousand Men, and they who remained in the Camp, were forty thousand, the former had one whole Moiety of the Spoil, tho' fewer considerably in number

Moses adds, Ye shall likewise separate the Lord's share, which ye shall take out of the whole Booty belonging to the men of war; and of every five hundred men, oxen, asses, or sheep, ye shall take one, and give it to the High-priest, because these are the Lord's first-fruits. As to the other moiety which shall belong to the children of Israel, who did not fight, out of every fifty men, oxen, asses, or sheep, or other animals whatsoever ye shall take one, ye shall give unto the Levites, who have the charge of the tabernacle of the Lord. So that Eleazar's and the Priests share was much larger in proportion than that of the twelve thousand Soldiers who had been in action, and than that of the Levites. And what was practised upon this occasion was a Law for ever after. An Example of this may be seen in what happened under David, after the defeat of the [1 Sam. xxx.24,25.] Amalekites, who had plundred Ziklag.

The Rabbins[1] pretend, that under the Kings of Israel, another Rule was followed in the distribution of the Spoil. First, Every thing was given to the King, which belonged to the conquered King; his Tent, his Slaves, his Cattel, his Spoils, his Treasure. After this the rest of the Booty was divided into two equal parts, whereof the King had one moiety, and the Soldiers who were concerned in the Engagement the other. This last part was distributed equally between the Soldiers, who were in the action, and those who continued behind to guard the Camp. They assert, that these Rules had been in force ever since the time of Abraham: It is difficult indeed to prove it; but we know that Abraham [Gen. xiv. 20.] offered to the Lord the tenth of what he had taken from the five Kings, and made a present of it to Melchizedeck.

Almost the same usages with those here taken notice of by us, were observed among prophane Nations. Among the antient Greeks the Spoil was all placed in common, after which the King or General divided it equally among them[2]. They presented also to the Gods their share of the Spoils won from the Enemy: Numa ordained[3], that the first part of them should be offered to Jupiter Feretrius, the second to Mars, the third to Quirinus. Sometimes that part of the Booty which was intended for the Gods, was burnt in honour of them; and at other times it was lodged in their Temples. In the Alcoran, under the Title of Anfal, it is mentioned, that four parts in five of what was taken from the enemy should be the Soldiers share, and the fifth should belong to God, the Prophet Mahomet and his Relations, to Orphans, the Poor and Pilgrims. Several Mahometan Interpreters maintain, that the giving any part of the Spoil to God, is mentioned only out of ceremony and respect; but others on the contrary assert, that this is what they are obliged to, and that this Portion ought to be employed in the Repairs and Ornament of the Temple of Mecca, and of other Mosques. As to the share belonging to the Prophet and his Relations, some say, that it is sunk by his Death and theirs, and that therefore the fifth part of the Spoil belongs intirely to Orphans, to Pilgrims and the Poor. Others are of Opinion, that the Prophet's Portion ought to be employed in the general affairs of Mussulmen, or given to the head of the Mosque upon the Spot, or in the places where there was most need of it. This is of very little concern to us; but it is visible, that the Impostor borrowed this from the Laws of Moses.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Vide Selden. de Jure Nat. & Gent. l. vi. c. 16.
Homeri Iliad. Δ.
Servius in Æneid. l. i.

Booz

BOOZ, the Son of Salmon and Rahab. Rahab, we know was a Canaanite of Jericho, richo, Salmon, who was of the Tribe of Judah, married her, and had Booz by her, one of our Saviour's Ancestors in the flesh. Some say there were three of this name[1], the Son, Grandson, and Great-Grandson of Salmon; the last Booz was Ruth's Husband and the Father of Obed. They pretend that the Scripture can no other way be made reconcilable with itself, since it reckons three hundred and sixty six Years between Salmon's marriage, and the birth of David, and owns there were but three persons between Salmon and David, viz. Booz, Obed and Jesse. But altho' it be difficult to fill such a space as that of three hundred and sixty six Years with four persons from Father to Son succeeding one another, and it is uncommon to see four persons in the same Family successively living very long, and having Children in a far advanced age, yet there is nothing absolutely impossible in the thing, particularly at this time, wherein we find that there were persons who had lived above an hundred Years. Salmon at the age of an hundred and twenty might beget Booz, about sixty six Years after the Israelites had entred into the Land of Promise. Booz at that age, suppose of an hundred, might beget Obed, who at something more or less than this age might have Jesse; and lastly, Jesse, when an hundred Years old, might possibly have David: This indeed is all but supposition. However it is sufficient, that there is no contradiction or impossibility, to make it necessary for us to reject this opinion of there being three persons of this name, instead of that one Booz only, whom the Scripture speaks of.

Some Rabbins[2] will have it, that Ibzan, who was Judge of Israel, and is mentioned Judg. xii. 8. is the same as Booz. The foundation of this opinion is no more than this, that Ibzan was of Bethlehem, and that there is some relation between this name and that of Booz. But Ibzan having governed Israel from the Year of the World 2823 to 2830. he cannot be the same as Booz, who could not be born later than in the Year of the World 2620. his Father Salmon having married Ruth in 2553. Now supposing him to be born in 2620. he must have been two hundred and ten Years old in 2830. when he died, which does not seem to be at all credible.

Booz, or rather Boaz, the name of one of [1 Kings vii. 21.] those two brazen pillars which Solomon erected in the Porch of the Temple. The other Column was called Jachin. This was on the right hand of the entrance into the Temple, and Booz on the left. Jachin signifieth God hath strengthened it[3], and Booz strength[4], firmness. They were together thirty five cubits high, as is said in the [2 Chron. iii. 15.] Chronicles, that is to say, each separately seventeen cubits and an half[5]. The Text of the first Book of Kings, and of Jeremiah, says [1 Kings vii. 15. Jerem. lii. 21. Jerem. lii. 21. 1 Kings vii. 25. Jerem. lii. 22. 1 Kings vii. 16.] eighteen cubits; but it is believed that the Sacred Writer chose to set down a round, rather than a broken number. The thickness of these Columns was, as Jeremiah says, of four fingers, for they were hollow. The circumference of them was twelve cubits, or four cubits diameter. The Chapiter of each was in all five cubits high. These Chapiters in different parts of Scripture are said to be of different heights, of three, four or five cubits; because they were composed of different Ornaments, which were considered sometimes separately, and sometimes as united with the Chapiter. The body of the Chapiter was of three cubits, the ornaments wherewith it was joined to the shaft of the pillar, were of one cubit, these make four cubits; the row which was at the top of all the Chapiter was also of one cubit, in all five cubits.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Quidam in Rab. Salom. Lyran. in Ruth ii. & iv. Catharin. alij. Jerosol. Rabbini Sal. Kimchi, Levi fil. David. Abraham Zaccuta, &c.
Targum Ruth. Talmud.
יכיןStatuet.
בועזFirmitas, Robur.
Vat. Grot. Sanct.

Borith

BORITH. There is mention of the herb Borith in Jeremiah xi. 22. Si multiplicaveris tibi herbam Borith, maculata es iniquitate tua. The herb Borith is thought to be the Kali or Saltwort, of the ashes whereof some make Soap, and a very good Lye to wash Linen withal. It is confidently affirmed, that the leaves of Saltwort bruised and rub'd with the hand, take spots out of the Skin. John Michael Langius has made a large Dissertation on the herb Borith. We have a long discourse on it in our Comment on Jeremiah, Chap. xi. 22.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Bosom

BOSOM. We put the things which we [Job xix. 27.] most value into our Bosoms. Job concealed the hope of his restoration in his own Bosom, there he locked up the words and promises of his [Job xxiii. 12. Prov. xvii. 23. Luke vi. 38. Luke xvi. 22, 23. Ecclus. ix. 1. 1 John i. 18.] God. The wicked Man receives presents taken out of the bosom, things of the greatest value. And Jesus Christ in the Gospel says, that if we do good to others, we shall receive the reward of it, which will be poured forth plentifully into our Bosom.

The Wife of our Bosom; be not jealous over the Wife of thy Bosom, or her who rests in thy bosom, is an expression very familiar in Scripture, signifying a lawful Wife.

Lazarus was carried into Abraham's bosom, as a favourite Child is received within the Arms and Bosom of his Father. S. John tells us, that the Son of God is in the bosom of the Father, thereby describing his perfect union with him. The well beloved Apostle lay with his head in our Saviour's bosom at his last Supper with his Apostles; because it was then customary to lie down at Table with the head turn'd towards it, and the feet from it. Thus S. John who was below Jesus, was near him with his head, and as it were in his bosom.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Bosor

BOSOR or Bosra, is four days journey southward from Damascus[1]. There is a very strong Castle belonging to it, a Gate twenty cubits high, and one of the largest Basons or Pools of Water in all the East, as the Persian Geographer assures us. See Bezer, ver. 20. ספרד*Sepharad*.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Bibl. Orient. p. 211. col. 2.

Bosphorus

BOSPHORUS. The Prophet Obadiah speaking of the Jews, and their return from the Captivity, says, And the captivity of this host of the children of Israel, shall possess that of the Canaanites, even unto Zarephath, and the captivity of Jerusalem which is in Sepharad, or Bosphorus, shall possess the cities of the South. There are three Bosphorus's whither the Hebrews might have been carried. 1. The Cimmerian Bosphorus, at the extremity of the Euxine Sea, between this Sea and the Lake Mœotis. 2. The Thracian Bosphorus, which is that of Constantinople, or the arm of the Sea between Chalcedon and Constantinople. 3. The Bosphorus or Arm which separates Spain from Africk: Each of these Streights is called in Greek, Bosphorus, or rather Bosporus, because an Ox may swim over them; and because the Daughter of Inachus, transformed into an Heifer, swam over the Thracian Streights between Constantinople and Chalcedon. This narrow passage of the Sea is not above five furlongs or five hundred paces over.

Interpreters are divided concerning the Streights which Obadiah speaks of. The Jew whom S. Jerom consulted upon such difficulties as occurr'd to him in the Hebrew[1], told him, that the Bosphorus mentioned by the Prophet, was the Cimmerian Bosphorus, whither the Emperor Adrian had banished many of those Jews, whom he had taken prisoners during the War in Palestine; which notwithstanding is a circumstance that we have no account of in History. Others believe, with more reason, that the captives taken notice of by Obadiah were such as Nebuchadnezzar had sent away as far as the Palus Mœotis, about which the country is generally thought to be one of the most frightful in the world, and hither the great Persecutors of the Christians sent frequently the Confessors of our Religion. Lastly, There are others, and those in good number, who understand the Hebrew of Spain, and translate Obadiah thus, The captives of Jerusalem which are at Sepharad, that is to say, in Spain, shall possess the cities of the south. Profane Historians, as Megasthenes[2] and Strabo[3] assert, that Nebuchadnezzar extended his conquests as far as Africk and Iberia, beyond the Pillars which we apprehend to be those called Hercules's Pillars. Now in this expedition against Spain, some say that he transported many of the Jews thither. Thus they reconcile the Version, which reads Bosphorus, with the opinion of the Jews, and of such Authors as have followed them in interpreting Sepharad to mean Spain.

But we may very well question whether Sepharad signifies Spain. Some suppose France to be denoted by it, and the old Greek Interpreters have kept to the Hebrew term without changing it in the Translation. In S. Jerom's time, the Hebrews explained it by Bosphorus. The Septuagint read Ephrata instead of Sepharad. I should think some country beyond the Euphrates to be meant by Sepharad, such as that of the Sapires or Saspires, towards Media; or the city of Hippara in Mesopotamia.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Hieronym. Abdiam.
Megasthenes apud. Euseb. Præp. Evang. l. ix. c. 41.
Strabo l. xv.

Bottle

BOTTLE, a Kag made of Goat's Skin with the hair on the inside, well pitched and sewed together, wherein Oil and other Liquors were preserved: The mouth of the Bottle is through one of the animals paws, which furnishes the matter of it. There is frequent mention of Bottles in Scripture, and as every one is not acquainted with the nature of them, it may not be unprofitable to say a word or two of them in this place. When Abraham dismissed Hagar, he gave her and her Son bread, and water in a Bottle [Gen. xxi. 14, 15.] for their journey. The Gibeonites the better to deceive Joshua and the Elders of the people, shewed them their old Bottles, telling them, that they had brought them new from their own homes, thereby hoping to convince them that they came from some remote [Josh. ix. 4. 13. Judg. iv. 19. Ps. xxxii. 7. Ps. lxxvii. 13. Ps. cxix. 83.] country. Jael the wife of Heber the Kenite opened a Bottle full of Milk, and offered Sisera some of it to drink.

The Psalmist in order to exalt the power of God, says, that he holdeth the waters of the Sea, shut up as it were in a Bottle, or a Portmantle; and speaking of the passage through the Red-Sea, he says in like manner, that he shut up the waters as in a Bottle. He locked them up, drew them back, bound them up. In another place he compares himself to a Bottle exposed to the Frost. Factus sum sicut uter in pruina, or exposed to the smoak, as a bottle dried, blackened, shrivelled. Our Saviour says, that men [Matth. ix. 17.] do not put new wine into old bottles, else the bottles break, and the wine runneth out. His Apostles were, as it were, old Bottles before the descent of the Holy Spirit upon them, they were not capable either of comprehending or practising all the perfection which Jesus Christ came to teach mankind.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Bow

BOW. Every one knows what this is: It was a sort of Arms very well known among the Israelites, who had many very expert Archers in their Troops. When there is any mention in Scripture of bending the Bow, the verb tread under foot is generally made use of; because in effect it was their custom to put their feet upon their Bow that they might bend it with more ease. David thanks God for giving him the strength of a brazen Bow in his Arms. Posuisti ut arcum [Ps. xvii. 35.] æreum brachia mea. Their Bows were commonly of wood. When they would say that God will destroy the power of such or such a people, they make use of this expression; God will break their Bow. Confringam arcum Ælam, and Hosea conteram arcum Israel. A deceitful Bow, They are like a deceitful [Hos. i. 5. Hos. vii. 16.] bow, signifies one that is not well strung, which does not carry strait to the mark. King Uzziah provided good Arsenals, wherein he lodged abundance of Arms, among others a large quantity of [2 Chron. xxvi. 14.] Bows and Slings. God is represented in Scripture with his Bow and Arrows, as Warriors and Conquerors are described [Hab. iii. 9.] with them. Thy bow was made quite naked according to the oaths of the tribes. Thou wilt awaken thy Bow, thou wilt bend it, and put it in a condition to be drawn, &c. The Children of Ephraim, who prided themselves in being such expert Archers, [Ps. lxxviii. 9.] fled in the day of battle. The Lord promises to deliver up the Nations, like stubble driven by the wind, to the bow of the righteous man, of Cyrus, of the Messiah. The [Isaiah xli. 2.] Persians, who in the Scripture are called Elamites, were the most expert Archers in the world.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Bowels

BOWELS. The Bowels are the seat of mercy, tenderness, and compassion. Joseph's bowels were moved at the sight of his [Gen. xliii. 30.] brother Benjamin; he perceived himself to be softned, and concerned. The true Mother of the Child, whom Solomon commanded to be divided into two parts, felt her Bowels to be moved at this proposition, and consented, that he should be given to [1 Kings iii. 26.] her who was not his real Mother. She was touched with compassion. God through the [Luke i. 78.] bowels of his mercy, hath visited us by sending the Messiah to us. S. Paul recommends it to the faithful, to have [Colos. iii. 12. Philem. 7. Ibid. 12. Job xxi. 24. Vulg. Edit.] Bowels of mercy for their Brethren. He praises Philemon for having refreshed the Bowels of the Saints; and begs of him to receive Onesimus as his own Bowels. Et viscera mea suscipe.

Job describing a merciless, hard-hearted, rich Man, says, that his Bowels are loaded with fat. Solomon in his Proverbs, that the Bowels of the wicked are cruel. And S.- [Prov. xii. 10.] Paul 2 Cor. vi. 12. reproaches, as it were, the Corinthians in a friendly manner, saying, Ye are not straitned in us, but ye are straitned in your own bowels.

[Job xxxviii. 36. Psal. li. 10. Isaiah xix. 3.] The Hebrews likewise place wisdom and understanding sometimes in the Bowels: Who hath put wisdom in the inner parts, says Job. And the Psalmist, Renew a right spirit in my Bowels, within me. And Isaiah, The spirit of the Egyptians shall fail, shall be annihilated in the bowels, or in the midst thereof, and I will destroy the counsel thereof. It shall fall into disorder, [Jer. xxxi. 33.] mistake, and uncertainty. And Jeremiah, I will engrave my law in their bowels, or inner parts. And Habakkuk, There is no spirit in the intrails, in the midst of the idol; it [Hab. ii. 19.] has neither soul, spirit nor understanding.

Wisdom speaks of certain Canaanites, who eat the entrails of men, who were devourers [Wisd. xii. 5.] of human flesh. See Flesh. Formerly men were sacrificed to Bacchus in the Isle of Chios[1], and were torn to pieces alive. They did as much in the Isle of Tenedos. And in the ninth Century[2] human flesh was sold at China in the publick markets. As to eating the Flesh and Bowels of living animals, this was common in the feasts of Bacchus[3].

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Porphyr. de abstin. l. iii.
Voyage de deux Arabes a la Chine. p. 55.
Arnob. l. v. contra Gentes. Lucian. proslalia. Clem. Alex. Protreptic. p. 19. Theodot. Σαραβάροις Sym. Ἀναξυρίδας.

Bozez

BOZEZ. The name of a Rock which Jonathan the Son of Saul climbed up, when he went to attack the Philistines. 1 Sam. xiv. 4.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Bozra

BOZRA. See Bezer, Bosor.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Bracca

[Dan. iii. 21.] BRACCA. It is said in Daniel[1], that his three companions were thrown into the fiery furnace with their hozen cum braccis suis. The Hebrew reads Saraballa, which were a sort of Breeches, wherewith the Persians covered their Legs and Thighs[2].

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

בסרבליהיןAqu.
Vide Brisson. l. i. de Regno Persar.

Branch

BRANCH. The Prophets sometimes give this name to the Messiah, Behold the man, whose name is the Branch, says [Zech. vi. 12. Zech. iii. 8.] Zechary. And in another place[1], Behold, I will bring forth my servant the branch. And so the Hebrew reads, what the Vulgate translates Oriens. Jesus Christ is the Branch[2] of the house of David. He is likewise Oriens, the Sun of Righteousness, which is risen in order to enlighten us, and deliver us out of the shadow of death.

The The Messiah is called likewise by the same name of Branch in Isaiah, iv. 2. Jeremiah, xxiii. 5. xxxiii. 15. and this denomination is a kind of prophecy of his miraculous birth of a Virgin.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

צמחTzemach.
Translators' note. The Antients were used to call their Heroes Deorum Germina; of this we have frequent examples in the Poets. One is called Ἔρνος Ἄρνος, Germen Martis. Another Διὸς ἔρνος, Jovis germen. And Ζηνὸς θάλος, Jovis ramus. Huet. Dem. Evang. Prop. ix. c. lix.

Bread

BREAD. In the Scripture style Bread is [Gen. iii. 19.] taken for every sort of food; In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread. I will fetch a morsel of bread, says Abraham to his Guests, [Gen. xviii. 5.] and comfort ye your hearts. If God give me bread to eat, said Jacob when he made his Vow at Bethel. Call him that he may eat [Gen. xxviii. 20. Exod. ii. 20. Exod. xvi. 15.] bread, invite him to come and eat with us, &c. Manna is called Bread from Heaven; God in giving it says, that he feeds his People with Bread; that he gives them Bread in abundance, &c.

The antient Hebrews had several ways of baking Bread. They often baked it under the Ashes. Abraham served the three Angels, whom he received into his Tent, with Loaves baked upon the Hearth[1]; the [Gen. xviii. 6.] Hebrew, Huggoth, signifies Loaves, or little Cakes, much like our broad thin Cakes, which are baked under the Ashes, or upon round Copper Plates well warmed, or in Pans, or Stews made on purpose, and heated.

[Exod. xii. 39.] The Hebrews at their departure out of Egypt made some of these unleavened Loaves for their Journey. Elijah in his flight found a Cake at his Bolster, which had been baked upon the Coals, and a cruse [1 Kings xix. 6. 1 Kings xvii. 13.] of Water. The same Elijah desired the Widow of Sarepta to make a little Bread for him, and bake it under the Ashes. The Hebrew Text of the first Book of Kings, Ch. xix. 6. calls them Huggoth; and the [Hosea vii. 8.] Prophet Hosea compares Ephraim to these Huggoth, which were not turned, were baked on one side only. Busbequius[2] says, that in Bulgaria this sort of Loaves is still very common. They are there called Hugaces: As soon as they see a Guest come, the Women immediately make these unleavened Loaves which are baked under the Ashes, and sold to Strangers; for there are no Bakers in this Country.

The Arabians[3], and other eastern People, among whom Wood is scarce, often bake their Bread between two Fires made of Cow-dung, which burns slowly, and bakes the Bread very leisurely. The Crumb of it is very good, if it be eat the same day, but the Crust is black and burnt, and retains a smell of what was used in baking it. [Ezek. iv. 9, 10, 12, 13.] This may serve to explain a passage in Ezekiel, which is extremely shocking to the generality of Authors. The Lord commands this Prophet to make a Paste composed of Wheat, Barley, Beans, Lentils, Millet, and Fitches, and of this a Loaf baked under the Ashes, and to cover it with human excrements in the sight of all the People. The Prophet expressing an extreme reluctancy to this, God permitted him to cover it with Cow-dung instead of human dung. We are not to imagine that it was God's design to make the Prophet eat Man's dung; but he only enjoined him to bake his Bread under such kind of excrements. Afterwards he allowed him to have it baked under Cow-dung, as the Arabians do.

The Hebrews, and other eastern People, have still at this day a kind of Oven called Taanour, which is like a large Pitcher of gray Stone open at top, in which they make a Fire. When it is well heated, they dilute Flour in Water, as we do to make Putty for Sashes; this Paste they apply to the outside of the Pitcher with the hollow of their hand; thus it is baked in an instant, and the moisture of it being dried up, it is taken off in thin fine pieces like our Wafers.

The Easterlings believe Eve's Oven to have been of this kind, that it was left to Noah, and that the boiling Water which ran over occasioned the Deluge. Strange Extravagancies!

A third sort of Bread in use among the People of the East, is that which is baked in a great Pitcher half full of certain little Flints that are white and glistering, on which they cast the Paste spread in the form of little flat Cakes. The Bread is white, and smells well, but it is good only for the day on which it was baked, unless there is some Leaven mingled with it to preserve it longer. This is the most common way in Palestine.

During the whole Octave of the Passover, the Hebrews use only unleavened Bread, as a memorial, that at the time of their departure out of Egypt, they wanted leisure to bake leavened Bread; and having left the Country with precipitation, they were content to bake Bread which was not leavened, under the Ashes. This is what [Ex. xii. 8, 9.] they practise still at this day with scrupulous Exactness. See the Article Azuma.

[Numb. xv. 20.] Moses enjoined the Israelites upon their arrival in the promised Land, to offer up a Cake of the first of their dough for an heave -offering in their generations. These First-fruits of Bread or Dough were given to the Priest or Levite, who dwelt in the place where the bread was baked; and if there was no Priest nor Levite there, the part of the Dough designed for the Lord or his Minister was thrown into the Fire or the Oven. The quantity of Bread to be given for First-fruits was not settled by the Law; but Custom and Tradition had determined it, says S. Jerom[4], to be between the fortieth part of the whole Mass, at most, or at least the sixtieth. Philo[5] remarks, that something was set apart for the Priest, as often as they kneaded, but does not say how much this was.

Leo of Modena[6] tells us, that the modern custom of the Jews is, when the Bread is kneaded, and a piece of Dough made as big as forty Eggs, to take a small part of it and make a Cake, which is instead of the First-fruits appointed by the Law. It had been a custom to give this Cake to the Priest; but at present it is thrown into the fire, where they let it burn away intire. This is one of the three Precepts which should be observed by the Women, for they generally make the Bread. The Prayer to be recited by them, when they throw this little Portion of Dough into the Oven, or the Fire, is as follows, Blessed art thou, O Lord our God, the King of the World, who hast sanctified us by thy Precepts, and hast commanded us to separate a Cake of our Dough.

Shew-Bread, or according to the Hebrew Text, the Bread of Faces, was Bread offered every Saturday to God upon the [Exod. xxv. 30.] golden Table placed in the Holy. The Hebrews affirm, that these Loaves were square, and with four Surfaces, and covered with leaves of Gold. They were twelve in number, in memory of the twelve Tribes of Israel, in whose names they were offered. Every Loaf was composed of two Asserons of Flour, which make about five Pints 1/ 10. These Loaves had no Leaven in them. They were presented very warm every Sabbath day, and at the same time the old were taken away, which were to be eaten by the Priests only. With this Offering there was Salt, and Incense, and even Wine too, according to some Commentators. The Scripture mentions only Salt and Incense, but it is presumed that Wine was added, because it was not wanting in other Sacrifices and Offerings. It is believed that these Loaves were placed one upon the other in two Piles, of six each; and that between every Loaf there were two thin Plates of Gold folded back in a Semicircle for the whole length of them, to let in Air, and hinder the Loaves from growing mouldy. These Golden Plates so turned in, were supported at their extremities by two golden Forks, which rested upon the Ground.

We have remarked, that the Shew-bread was eaten by none but the Priests. Nevertheless David having received some from the High-Priest Abimelech, eat of it [2 Sam. xxi. 3, 4. Mat. xii. 4.] without scruple in his necessity; and our Saviour makes use of this Example to justify his Apostles, who eat ears of Corn and bruised them on the Sabbath day. The Priest Abimelech calls those Laicos Panes, which every one was allowed to partake of, and those Panes Sanctos, which the Priests only were to eat of.

Under the Article Offerings, we shall speak of the different sorts of Bread which were offered in the Temple, as well with the Sacrifices as with the Offerings of Flour, Cakes, Loaves, Grains, &c. It appears from several places of Scripture, that [Exod. xxix. 32. Numb. vi. 15.] there was always near the Altar a Basket full of Bread, in order to be offered together with the ordinary Sacrifices. Panes qui sunt in canistro; & canistrum panum azymorum.

[Lev. xxii. 25.] Moses forbids the Priests to receive Bread from the hands of Strangers, or any thing else that they would give, because all these Gifts are corrupted.

There are different opinions concerning the meaning of this Law. Some, as Tostatus, Cajetan, and others, pretend, that under the name of Bread we are to understand all sorts of Sacrifices and Offerings, because the Victims that were slain are in Scripture sometimes called the Bread of God. Others, that God forbids the receiving Sacrifices of any kind, or any real Offering immediately from the hands of infidel People, but only Money wherewithal to purchase Offerings and Victims. Lastly, others explain it literally of Offerings of Flour, Bread, or Cakes; that none of these are to be received in the Temple from the hand of an Idolater or Infidel.

God threatens to break the Staff of [Lev. xxvi. 26. Ezek. iv. 16. v. 16. Ezek. xiv. 13. Isai. iii. 1. Ps. civ. 16. Numb. xiv. 9.] Bread, Baculum panis, or Virgam panis, or Robur panis, or Firmamentum panis; that is to say, to send the scourge of Famine among the Israelites, or to order it so, that the Bread which they should take, should not sustain them, to send them a canine and insatiable Appetite.

To eat, to devour any one like Bread; that is to say, to devour, to destroy him without resistance, without scruple, to make sport, and a diversion of doing so. See Ps. xiii. 4. lii. 5.

Man doth not live by Bread only, but by every word which proceedeth out of the mouth of God. That is to say, God can sustain us, not only with Bread and ordinary Food, but likewise with every thing besides, if he thinks fit to communicate a nourishing virtue to it. Thus he fed the Israelites Israelites in the Wilderness with Manna, and five thousand Men with five Loaves distributed by the hands of Jesus Christ and his Apostles. Verbum is put for thing. In the Hebrew Text of Deuteronomy we do not read verbo, but only, In omni quod procedit ex ore Dei.

Bread and Water are used for all Sustenance in general. Thus it is said, that [Deut. ix. 9, 18. Deut. xxiii. 4.] Moses continued forty days upon Mount Sinai, without eating Bread, or drinking Water. God complains of the Moabites and Ammonites, because they did not meet the Israelites with Bread and Water; Nabal in answer to David's Message, said, Shall I take my bread and my water, and give them to men whom I know not? [1 Kings xviii. 13.] Obadiah the Governor of King Ahab's House, fed an hundred Prophets of the Lord with Bread and Water. The chief thing for Life is Water and Bread, says the Author of Ecclesiasticus, xxix. 21.

The Bread of Affliction, and the Water of Affliction in the first Book of Kings, are [1 Kings xxii. 27. 2 Chr. xviii. 26. If. xxx. 20.] the same thing as a little Bread and a little Water. Isaiah threatens the Jews with the Wrath of God, and says, that he will give them so little Bread and Water, that they will not have what is sufficient to satisfy them. Dabit vobis Dominus panem arctum & aquam brevem.

As the Hebrews generally made their Bread very thin, and in the form of little flat Cakes or Wafers, they did not cut it with a Knife, but broke it; which gave rise to that expression so usual in Scripture, of breaking Bread, to signify eating, sitting down to table.

It is remarked likewise, that they who undertook Journeys, commonly made Provision of Bread; because in those times there were neither Inns nor Bakers in Palestine, at least they were very rare. Jesus Christ tells his Disciples, that when they went upon any Journey, in order to preach the Gospel, there was no occasion [Mark vi. 8.] for their troubling themselves to provide Bread; nevertheless they generally had some, while they followed our Saviour; and one day they shewed great concern for having forgotten to carry any with [Mat. xvi. 5, 6, 7, 8.] them; whereupon Jesus severely reproved them: O ye of little faith, why reason ye among yourselves, because ye have brought no Bread?

[Ps. xli. 4. Ps. lxxx. 5. Ps. cxxvii. 2.] The Psalmist speaks of the Bread of Tears, Fuerunt mihi lacrymæ meæ panes die ac nocte; and in another place, Thou feedest them with the bread of tears; and again, Thou that eatest the bread of sorrows. We may easily comprehend, that by all this is meant continual Sorrow and Tears, which make us lose the thoughts and desire of eating and drinking.

[Prov. iv. 17. Prov. xx. 17. xxiii. 3.] The Bread of Wickedness, the Bread of Deceit, is Bread acquired by criminal and fraudulent practices. By the Bread of Mourners in Hosea ix. 4. is meant impure and polluted Bread. Some are of opinion, that this passage of Jeremiah xi. 19. Mittamus lignum in panem ejus, let us put Wood in his Bread, signifies to poison his Bread, by mingling Wood in it of a venomous nature; or let us throw wood upon his Body, overwhelm him with cudgelling; the Hebrew Lechem, which signifies bread, being taken likewise for the Body.

[Eccles. xi. 1.] Cast thy Bread upon the waters, for thou shalt find it after many Days, says Solomon; that is to say literally, Sow thy Corn in a Soil which is well watered, and thou shalt reap a plentiful Harvest; or in a moral sense, Be liberal of thine Alms, do not refuse thine Assistance to any one, and thou shalt receive a Reward suitable to thy Generosity, and the extent of thy Charity.

The Eucharist or Sacrament of the Body and Blood of Jesus Christ, contained really and substantially under the appearances of Bread and Wine , is very often described in the New Testament by the word Bread, the Bread of Life, Bread which giveth Life; the Bread which we break; and the holy Communion is mentioned under the term breaking of Bread. The same Sacrament is represented by Manna, the Bread of Heaven, the Bread of Angels, the Bread which contained all sorts of Delights and Sweets.

[Isai. lviii. 7.] Breaking of Bread; an Expression familiar to the Hebrews, signifying the eating of Bread, or making a Meal. Frange esurienti panem tuum; and Jeremiah, Neither shall [Jer. xvi. 7. Lament. iv. 4.] men break bread for them in mourning to comfort them from the dead. And again, the young children ask bread, and no man breaketh it unto them. In the Institution of the Eucharist, our Saviour broke the Bread which he had consecrated and distributed it to his Apostles; from whence it is, that to [Mat. xxvi. 26.] break Bread, and the breaking of Bread, in the Books of the New Testament, are used likewise for celebrating the holy Eucharist.

The natural and literal reason for these expressions, arises from hence, viz. That the Hebrews in Palestine, as well as the Syrians, Arabians and Egyptians, generally bake their Bread very thin, so as to have no need of Knives to cut it. They eat it new, and break it with their Fingers. See what we have remarked upon the word Bread.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Heb. עגות*Huggoth*, 70. ἐγκρυφίαι.
Busbeq. Constantinop. p. 36.
D'Arvieu Coutumes des Arabes, c. 14.
Hieron. in c. xlv. Exod. Part. ii. c. 9.
Philo de præm. Sacerd.
Leon de Modene Cerem. des Juifs.

Brook

BROOK, Torrens; in Greek Cheimarros; in Hebrew Nachal[1]. A Brook is distinguished from a River; a River flows at all times, a Brook at some particular times only: For example, after great Rains, or the melting of the Snow. As the Hebrew word Nachal signifies a Valley as well as a Brook, one is often placed in Scripture for the other; for example, the Brook of Gerar, for the Valley of Gerar. This Ambiguity is not very dangerous, since generally there are Brooks in Valleys: But it may deserve to be taken notice of, because sometimes that is attributed to the Valley which belongs only to the Brook; for example, to the Valley of Kidron, which should be understood of the Brook so called.

The distinction between a Brook and a River is not always observed in Scripture, and one is often taken for the other; by giving great Rivers, such as the Euphrates, the Nile, and Jordan, and other Rivers which flow the whole year, such as Jabok and Arnon, the name of Brooks. The Euphrates in Isaiah is called the Brook of Willows, Isai. xv. 7.

[Joel iii. 18.] The Brook of Thorns, mentioned in Joel, is called in the Hebrew, the Brook of Shittim; and in the Septuagint the Brook of Cords[2]. I take this Brook to be the same as that of Kidron, which discharged itself into the Dead Sea.

The Brook Kidron, runs between the City of Jerusalem to the West, and the Mount of Olives to the East. See Kidron.

Brook of Egypt. This is probably the Nile, or the most eastern arm of this River. See Egypt.

The Brook Besor, is commonly placed between Gaza and Rhinocorura: But S. Jerom, upon the vi. Ch. of Amos, says, it lies between Rhinocorura and Pelusium. See Besor, and 1 Sam. xxx. 9, 21.

The Brook of Grapes, or Cluster of [Numb. xiii. 25. Deut. i. 24.] Grapes, in Hebrew Nachal Eshcol[3]. We are of opinion that it lay to the South of Judah, and the Lot of Simeon, not far from the Valley of Sorek.

The Brook Zered, Deut. ii. 13, 14. It is further southward than the Brook Arnon.

The Brook Arnon. This is rather a River than a Brook. See Arnon.

The Brook Jabok. This is rather a River than a Brook. See Jabok.

The Brook or Valley of Gerar, near the City of this name, southward of the promised Land, in Arabia Petræa.

The Brook of Jeruel, or rather the Brook opposite to the Wilderness of Jeruel [2 Chr. xx. 16.] , in the southern part of Judah.

The Brook Kishon, springs up at the foot of Mount Tabor, and falls into the Mediterranean, between Carmel and Ptolemais. See Kishon.

The Brook Cadumim. This, in my opinion, is the same as Kishon. See Judg. v. 21.

[Josh. xxiv. 30. Judg. ii. 9. Judith ii. 14.] The Brook Cherith, beyond Jordan, towards Succoth. See Cherith, and 1 Kings xvii. 3.

The Brook of Gaash, 1 Chr. xi. 32. was probably in the Tribe of Ephraim, at the foot of Mount Gaash, upon which the City of Timnath-Serah was situated, when Joshua was buried, Josh. xxiv. 30. His Tomb was still shewn on Mount Gaash in Eusebius's time.

The Brook of Mamre. This is the Valley of Mamre, Genes. xiii. 18. xiv. 13, &c. We have already observed, that the Hebrew Nachal signified equally a Valley and a Brook.

[Psal. lxxiii. 15.] The Brook of the South. Psal. cxxv. 11. Sicut torrens in austro, signifies probably the Brooks which are to the South of Palestine, or no more than the flux of Water, which was seen when the south Wind dissolved the Snow. The Hebrew word[4] is not Nachal, which signifies a Brook, but Aphikim, which signifies drains of Water, Inundations.

The Brooks or Rivers of Ethan. See Ethan.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

נחלNachal χειμαῤῥος, Torrens.
νωίνιοχ νῶτ νοῤῥαμίεχנחלהשטים. Torrentem funium.
נחל אשכלNachal Eshcol. Torrens or Vallis. Botri. Num. xiii. 24. xxxii.
Hebr. בנגב אפיקיםEffusiones in Austro. t 70 ϛοχῶρΒארבה.

Brother

[Prov. xviii. 9. Job xxx. 29.] BROTHER. This word is understood, not only in the common and literal Signification of it, but likewise in general for a Relation, a Man of the same Country, of the same Nation, and still more universally for a Man in general, for our Neighbour, in the notion which our Saviour requires us to have of all the World, and whom he hath commanded us to love as our selves.

Brother is likewise used sometimes for one who resembles another in either good or evil; He that is slothful in his work, is brother to him that is a great waster. And Job, I am a brother to dragons, and a companion to ostriches. I have imitated them in their doleful cries, and in their flying from [Ecclus. xxxiv. 27.] Mankind. And Ecclesiasticus, He that sheddeth blood, and he who defraudeth the labourer of his hire, are brothers. These two crimes are equal.

Brother is likewise to be understood for Friend, or Husband, as Sister, for Wife. O [Cant. viii. 1. Cant. iv. 9.] that thou wert as my brother that sucked the breasts of my mother! And, Thou hast ravished my heart, my sister, my spouse. A nd Job, I said to the worm thou art [Prov. vii.] my sister. And Solomon in his Proverbs, Say unto Wisdom, Thou art my sister.

According to the Law of Moses, the [Deut. xxv.] Brother of a Man who died without Children, was obliged to marry the Widow of the deceased, in order to raise up Children to him, that his name and memory might not be extinct in Israel. See lower the Article Widow.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Bruchus

BRUCHUS. A sort of Locusts. The Hebrew Arbe[1], is differently translated, by the Septuagint and Vulgate generally Bruchus, and by other Interpreters Locusta. Now Locusta and Bruchus differ, as S. Austin says[2], like the Parent and the Child. Locusta is a perfect Locust, Bruchus a young one, as yet without its wings. There were several species of Locusts [Lev. xi.] which the Hebrews were allowed by God to eat. And we know that this sort of food was the common diet which S. John [Matth. iii.] Baptist made use of. There were several other people, who eat of them, as is shewn in the Comments on S. Matthew.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

ארבה 70. Βρῦχος.
Aug. in Psal. civ.

Bubalus

BUBALUS. There is frequent mention [Deut. xiv. 1 Kings] of the Bubalus in Scripture. Moses suffered the Hebrews to eat of it; and it was served up at Solomon's Table. The Hebrew Jachmur[1], signifies a certain Animal which is found about the Euphrates, with horns like a Stag, and red hair. After this manner the Arabians describe the Jachmur, which the Vulgate has translated Bubalus.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

יחמורBubalus.

Bubastus

BUBASTUS, a famous City of Egypt. Ezekiel speaks of it under the name of פי בסתPi-bezeth, Ezek. xxx. 17. It is situated on the eastern shore of that arm of the Nile which extends furthest towards Arabia. Ezekiel threatens it with the utmost calamities, which would be brought upon its inhabitants by Nebuchadnezzar King of Babylon.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Bugeus

BUGEUS; this is the firname which [Esth. xii.] the Scripture gives Haman the great enemy of the Jews. The Greek Bugeus or Bougaios, signifies a vain Man, one puffed up with pride. We do not read Bugeus in the Hebrew, but in the Greek only. I am of opinion, that it is put for Bagoas, which signifies an Eunuch, an Officer belonging to the King of Persia's Court.

To BUILD. Besides the proper and literal signification of this word, it is used likewise to signify producing Children and a numerous posterity. Sarah desires Abraham to take Hagar to wife, that so by her [Gen. xvi.] means she may be builded up, that is to say, have Children to support her family. The Midwives who refused obedience to Pharaoh's orders, when he commanded them to put to death all the male Children of the Hebrews, were rewarde dfor it, because God built them houses, gave them a numerous posterity.

The Prophet Nathan promises David on the part of God, that he would build his house for him, that he would give him Children and Successors. The Scripture speaking of the formation of the first Woman, says, that God built her with the Rib of Adam. To edify, in the moral sense of the word, is used with relation to the good instructions and examples which we give our Neighbour, in order to inspire him with the love of virtue, to keep him in those sentiments, and improve them in him.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Bukki (I)

I. BUKKI, the Son of Jogti, of the Tribe of Dan, Numb. xxxiv. 22.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Bukki (II)

II. BUKKI, High-Priest of the Jews, the Son of Abishua, and Father of Uzzi, 1 Chron. vi. 5.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Bukkiah

BUKKIAH, a Levite, who played before the Ark, 1 Chron. xxv. 4.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Bul

BUL, the eighth month in the Hebrew Kalender, since called, Marshevan; it answers to our October. It is the second Month of the Civil, and the eighth of the Ecclesiastical Year. It is composed of nine and twenty days. The sixth Day of this Month was a fast, because on this Day Nebuchadnezzar put to death the Children of Zedekiah in the presence of this unhappy Prince, whose Eyes, after they had been witnesses to this sad spectacle, he ordered to be put out. See 2 Kings xxv. 7. We find the name of Bul mentioned only in 1 Kings vi. 38. in the reign of Solomon.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Bull

BULL. Bullock. This animal was reputed by the Hebrews to be clean, and was generally made use of by them for Sacrifices. The Septuagint and Vulgate have often rendred that Ox which signifies a Bull,[1] under the word Ox comprehending rather the Species than the Sex or Quality of the Animal. The antient Hebrews in general never cut any Creature, and where in the Text we read Ox, we are to understand a Bull by it.

The beauty of Joseph is compared to that of a Bullock. The Egyptians had a particular veneration for this Animal, they paid divine honours to it; and the Jews imitated them in their worship of the golden Calves, that is to say, golden Bulls in the Wilderness, and in the Kingdom of Israel. Jacob reproaches his Sons Simeon and Levi for having dug down the Wall of the Sichemites[2]; or, according to another Translation of the Hebrew, for hamstringing a Bull. Thus the Septuagint have translated it, and many of the antient Fathers[3] have followed their Ver sion, and explained this passage of Jesus Christ, and his being put to death by the Jews. The Hebrew, Shor, signifies a Wall, and a Bull.

This last word, in a figurative and allegorical sense, is taken likewise for powerful, fierce, insolent Enemies. Fat bulls (in the Hebrew, Bulls of Bashan) kept me in on [Pf. xxii. 13. Pf. lxviii. 31.] every side, says the Psalmist. And in another place, Rebuke the beast of the reeds, the multitude of the bulls: Lord smite in thy wrath these Animals which feed in large Pastures, these herds of Bulls. And Isaiah, The Lord [If. xxxiv. 7.] shall cause his Victims to be slain in the land of Edom, a terrible slaughter will he make, he will kill the Unicorns and the Bulls, that is to say, those proud and cruel Princes who oppressed the weak.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

שורSchor. Taurus or Bos.
70 .νορύατ νασηπόκορυενЁעקרו שור.
Origen homil. xvii. in Genes. Tertull. contra Judæos, c. 10.

Bunah

BUNAH, the Son of Jerahmeel, 1 Chr. ii. 25.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Burial

BURIAL. The Hebrews have at all times been very careful in the burial of their dead; to be deprived of it was thought to be one of the greatest dishonours that could be done to any Man: this last duty was denied to none, not even to Enemies; but it was not allowed to those who were self-murderers[1], till after Sun-set, and the Souls of such Persons were believed to be plunged into Hell[2]. This mighty concern for burial proceeded from the persuasion they were under of the Soul's immortality[3]. The Scripture threatens the wicked with being deprived of it, as if it were one of the greatest calamities that could happen to them. If a man beget an hundred children, and live many years, so that the days of his years be many, and his soul be not filled with good, and also that he have no burial; I say that an untimely birth is better than he. Jeremiah threatens the [Eccles. vi. 3.] Kings, Priests and false Prophets who had adored Idols, that he would have their bones thrown out of their graves like dung upon the Earth. The same Prophet foretold [Jer. viii. 2. Jer. xxii. 18, 19.] that Jehoiakim King of Judah, who built his house by unrighteousness, and gave himself up to avarice, violence, and all manner of vice; he foretold that this Prince should be buried with the burial of an Ass, that he should be cast out of the Gates of Jerusalem into the common sewer. It is observed that Jason who had denied the rites of burial to [2 Mac. v. 10.] many of the Jews, was himself treated in the same manner, that he died in a foreign Land, and was thrown like carrion into the fields without being laid [1 Kings ii. 10. xi. 43. xiv. 31. xv. 8. 2 Kings xxiv. 12, &c. xxxi. 18. 26. John xix. 41. xx. 15. 2 Macc. xiii. 25, 27, 28, 29.] even in a stranger's grave. Good Men made part of their devotion to consist in interring the dead, as we see by the example of Tobit.

There was nothing determined particularly as to the place of burying the dead. There were graves in the town and country, upon the highways, in gardens and mountains. Those belonging to the Kings of Judah were in Jerusalem, and the King's gardens. Ezekiel intimates, that they were dug under the mountain which the Temple stood upon, since God says, that for the future his Holy Mountain should not be polluted with the dead bodies of their Kings. The Sepulchre which Joseph of Arimathea had provided for himself, and wherein he placed our Saviour's body, was in his garden. That of Rachel was upon the highway from Jerusalem to Bethlehem. That of the Maccabees at Modin, upon an eminence, from whence it was visible at a distance both by Sea and Land. We have given the description of it under the articles Maccabees and Jonathan. The Kings of Israel had their burying places in Samaria. Samuel was interr'd in his own house. Moses, Aaron, Eleazer and Joshua in mountains. King Saul and Deborah, Rebekah's Nurse under trees. It is affirmed, that the Sepulchres of the People of Jerusalem were in the Valley of Kidron. There likewise were the burying places for foreigners.

The Jews call what we term a Churchyard, the house of the living[4], to shew their belief of the Immortality of the Soul, and of the Resurrection; and when they come thither bearing a dead body[5], they address themselves to those who lie there, as if they were still alive, and say, Blessed be the Lord who hath created you, fed you, brought you up, and at last in his justice taken you out of the world. He knows the number of you all, and will in time revive you. Blessed be the Lord who causeth death, and restores life. Their respect for Sepulchres is so great, that they build Synagogues and Oratories near those of great Men and Prophets. For example, They have Synagogues near the Tombs of Ezekiel, Zachary, Mordecai and Esther. They go and pray near them, being persuaded, as we are, of the efficacy of prayers for the dead, and the intercession of the Saints[6]. The Rabbins teach, that it is not lawful to demolish Tombs, or disturb the repose of the dead, by burying another dead person in the same grave, even after a long time; nor to carry an aquæduct cross the common place of burial, or through an high-way, nor to go and gather wood there, or suffer cattle to feed there.

When the Jews are come with the Funeral to the Burying place, the blessing directed to the dead, as above mentioned, is repeated; the body is put down upon the ground, and if it be a person of consideration, a kind of funeral Oration and Encomium is made of him; then they walk round the grave, reciting a pretty long prayer, which they call the Righteousness of Judgment; because therein they return thanks to God for having pronounced an equitable judgment concerning the life and person of the deceased. It begins with these words of Deuteronomy, He is the rock, his [Deut. xxxii. 4.] work is perfect; then a little sack full of earth is put under the dead person's head, and the coffin is nailed down and closed. If it be a man, ten persons take ten turns about him, and say a prayer for his soul; the nearest relation tears a corner of his clothes, the dead body is let down into the grave with his face turned towards Heaven; and they cry to him, Go in peace, or rather, Go to peace, according to the Talmudists. The nearest relations are the first that throw earth upon the Body; after them, all who are there present do the same with their hands, or with shovels. This done they retire walking backwards, and before they go out of the Burying-ground, they pluck bits of grass three times, and cast them behind their backs saying, They [Ps. lxxii. 16.] shall flourish like grass of the earth.

I do not observe in all Antiquity, any example of an Epitaph inscribed upon the tombs of the Hebrews; for that which is reported of Adoniram's found in Spain, and some others of the like authority, do not deserve our notice. Monuments were erected in memory of a King, a Hero, a Prophet, or a Warrior: the tomb itself spoke sufficiently, and the memory of the person was perpetuated among the people. King Josiah destroying the tombs of the false Prophets of Baal, and of the Priests belonging to the Golden Calf, took notice of a sepulchral Stone among the rest, which was said to be the tomb built up for the man of God, who came and declared to Jeroboam, that a King by name Josiah should burn the bones of the false Prophets [1 Kings xiii. 2.] upon the Altar at Bethel. There was therefore no Epitaph upon it. Absalom called his tomb, The Hand of Absalom. The [2 Sam. xviii. 18.] tombs belonging to the Kings which were in caves dug in a rock, were certainly not adorned with Epitahps.

The set form of Epitaphs used at this day by the Jews, is as follows; This Stone is placed at the head of N. the Son of N. who was buried on such a day in the year N. May he rest in the Garden of Eden with all the righteous who have been there from the beginning: Amen, Amen, Selah. Or else; Let his Soul be buried in the Garden of Eden. Amen, Amen, Amen, Selah. Or otherwise, This Monument or this Pillar is erected near the head of the most illustrious, most holy, and most pure Virgin Rebekah, the Daughter of Samuel the Levite, who died in good reputation such a day of the month N. in the year N. May her Soul be buried in the Garden of Eden. Amen, Amen, Amen, Selah. But these set forms are neither ancient nor uniform. Benjamin of Tudela says, that as he travelled through Palestine, he observed this inscription on Abraham's Tomb, Here is the Sepulcher of Abraham our blessed Father. But this had been but lately made.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Joseph. de Bello, l. iii c. 25. in Græco, p. 852, 853. Exercent ubi festa mero pede Sabbatha

Translators' note. Here likewise we find them in Virgil's description of this place Æneid. l. vi. 434. Proxima deinde tenent mœsti loca, qui sibi lethum Insontes peperêre manu, lucemque perosi Projecêre animas. Quam vellent æthere in alto, Nunc et pauperiem et duros perferre labores!

Tacit. Hist. l. v. c. 5.

Leo of Modena part 5. c. 8.

Buxtorf. Synag. Jud. c. 35.

Johan. Nicolai de Sepulcr. Hebr. l. iv. c. 6. Basnage hist. des Juifs, l. 7. c. 24. n 24.

Burning Bush

[Exod. iii. 2.] BURNING BUSH, wherein the Lord appeared to Moses at the foot of Mount Horeb. Not far from hence Moses was feeding his Father-in-law Jethro's flocks, when he perceived a Bush all on fire without consuming. Hereupon he said within himself, I will go near that I may see this great vision; but as he approached, God called out to him from amidst the Bush, and said, Put off thy shoes from off thy feet, for the place whereon thou standest is holy ground. This nakedness of the Feet is a Ceremony which has been imitated by several people, as a mark of their respect when they enter into their Temples. The Egyptians, Mahometans, Indians, and Ethiopians practise it still at this day, when they go into their places of Prayer. God injoined the Hebrew Priests to wash their feet and hands, when they approached the Altar, and entered [Exod. xxx. 19.] into the Sanctuary. The Rabbins[1] believe, that even the common people among the Israelites left their shoes behind them, when they went into the Temple. Juvenal seems to say the same thing[2].

Reges.

But I do not know whether these Authors were rightly informed; for I see nothing like it appointed in the Law.

As to the person that appeared in the [Exod. iii. 2, 6, 13, 14, &c.] Bush, the Scripture in several places calls him by the name of God. He says himself, that he is the Lord, the God, who is the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, the God who was to deliver his people out of bondage in Egypt; [Deut. xxxiii. 16.] and Moses blessing Joseph, says, Let the blessing of him that dwelt in the Bush come upon the head of Joseph. But in the places of Exodus, which we are examining, instead of the Lord appeared to him, the Hebrew and the Septuagint import, the Angel of the Lord appeared [Acts vii. 3.] to him. S. Stephen in the Acts reads it in the same manner; S. Paul [Gal. iii. 19.] writing to the Galatians says, that the Law was given by Angels. S. Jerom[3], S. Austin[4], and S. Gregory the Great[5] teach the same thing. It was an Angel who represented the Lord, and spoke in his name: Angelorum vocabulo exprimuntur, qui exterius ministrabant, & appellatione Domini ostenditur, qui eis interius præerat, says S. Gregory. It is nevertheless true, that the Ancients generally hold the Son of God to be the person who appeared in the Bush[6], and S. Austin[7] acknowledges, that both opinions may be maintained without any prejudice to the true Faith. Duæ sunt sententiæ quarum quælibet vera sit, ambæ secundùm fidem sunt.

The Mahometans believe, that one of Moses's Shoes put off by him as he drew near towards the burning Bush, was placed in the Ark of the Covenant, in order to preserve the memory of this Miracle.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Rab. Salom. in Levit. xix. 30. Maimonid. in Misna de Benedict.

Juvenal. Satyr. 6.

Hieronym. in Ep. ad Galat. c. iii.

Aug. l. iii. de Trin. c. 11.

Greg. Mag. l. xxviii. Moral. c. 1.

Tertull. contra Judæos. Justin. dialog. cum Tryph. Iren. l. iv. c. 16. Basil. l. ii. & iv. contra Eunom. Hilar. l. iv. & v. de Trinit. Theodor. qu. 5. in Exod.

Aug. Ser. 7. de Script. Vet. & Nov. Test.

Butter

[Job xxxii. 2.] BUTTER, is taken in Scripture, as it has been almost perpetually in the East, for Cream or liquid Butter. See our Comment upon Genesis, xviii. 8. and the Supplement at the end of the Revelations. Children were fed with Butter and Honey. Isai. vii. 15, 22. that is to say, with Milk-diet, with Cream, and Honey, which was very common in Palestine. Some think that by the name of Butyrum, in the Scripture, we are to understand Cheese. But we cannot be of their opinion. The Hebrews have a particular name to signify Cheese, different from that which they make use of to signify Cream or Butter.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Buz (I)

I. BUZ, the Son of Nahor and Milcah, and Brother to Huz, Genes. xii. 21. Elihu one of Job's friends was descended from Buz the Son of Nahor. The Scripture calls him the Aramean or Syrian; Elihu the Jebusite of the kindred of Ram. Ram is put [Jerem. xxv. 23.] for Aram. The Prophet Jeremiah threatens the Buzites with the effects of God's wrath. They dwelt in Arabia deserta.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Buz (II)

II. Buz, the Son of Abdiel, and Father of Jahdo, of the Tribe of Judah. 1 Chron. v. 14.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Buzi

BUZI, a Priest, the Father of the Prophet Ezekiel. Ezek. i. 3.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Byblos

BYBLOS, a City of Phœnicia, lying between Sidon and Orthosia, and famous for its constant adherence to the worship of Adonis, who was believed to have been wounded by a boar in Libanus, above Byblos. The river Adonis, which descends from Mount Libanus, passes by to Byblos, its waters are sometimes as red as blood, occasioned by the particular sort of earth through which it runs, and carries off with it in great quantities as often as it overflows. This is the time when the inhabitants of Byblos lament Adonis, pretending that their river is then coloured with his blood[1]. The Egyptians had a custom every year at the Feast of Adonis, to throw a Box into the Sea, made in the shape of a head, which they said was the head of Osiris, and in it was a Letter directed to the inhabitants of Byblos, who lived at the distance of above fourscore leagues from them. They pretended that this Box of itself went to Byblos in seven [Isai. xviii. 2.] days time. The Prophet Isaiah is believed by some to allude to this custom, when he says, Wo to the land that sendeth Ambassadors by Sea, even in vessels of bulrushes upon the waters.

Some are of opinion, that they who in [1 Kings v. 18.] the Scripture are called Giblii, and whose dexterity in cutting wood and building vessels is there commended, were the inhabitants [Ecclus. xxvii. 9.] of Byblos, in Hebrew called Gebal. It was seated at the foot of Libanus, upon the Mediterranean, almost opposite to the place, where we still see some Cedars at this day.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Lucian. de Dea Syria.

Byssus

BYSSUS. By this word we generally understand that fine Egyptian Linen to be meant, which the Priests Tunicks were made of. But we are to distinguish carefully three sorts of things, which are generally confounded, and are comprehended under the name of Linen[1]. 1. The Hebrew, bad, which signifies Linen. 2. Schesch, which signifies Cotton. 3. Buz, which is what we commonly call Byssus, which is the Silk growing under a certain shell-fish called Pinna.

Philo[2] says, that the Byssus is the clearest, and most beautiful, the whitest, strongest, and most glossy sort of Linen; that it is not made of any thing mortal, that is to say, of woollen or the skin of any animal, but that it comes out of the earth, and becomes always whiter and more shining, when it is washed as it should be. There is a sort of Pumice-stone in the confines of Arabia, and in the isle of Cyprus[3], called Amiantus, or incorruptible which is beaten and dissolves much after the manner of our making paper, then being dried, it is spun like cotton. Of this the Arabians make them socks, stockings and drawers, to defend themselves from the burning heats of the sands in Arabia. This sort of linen cloth is incorruptible, and does not burn, but is cleansed in the flames. Pliny[4] calls it Linum vivum, and says, that the Romans made tablecloths and napkins of it, which were clean ed and became more beautiful by passing through the fire. One would think Moses should not have forgotten this kind of Linen among those mentioned by him. But has he spoke of it under the name of Byssus? This is what no one can affirm certainly without temerity.

In our Comment upon Exodus and the Chronicles, we have declared ourselves in favour of that kind of Silk, which is to be found at the tail of a certain Fish called Pinna, and fastens it to the Earth with a sort of tuft, in colour like a yellow gilded Silk, and of this formerly the richest Mantles were made for Kings[5]: Procopius says, the Emperor Justinian had a Mantle of this sort of Silk, which he made use of upon occasions of Ceremony.

Nevertheless, I have still some doubt concerning this opinion; for I do not find the name of Buz in the Hebrew Text of Moses, tho' the Greek and Latin Interpreters have made use of the word Byssus, to signify the fine Linen of certain Habits belonging to the Priests. There is room therefore to believe, that it was not the design of Moses to speak of it. The word Buz is not to be met with in the Bible, excepting in the Chronicles, in Ezekiel, and Esther. In the Chronicles we see David [Ezek. xxvii. 16. Esth. i. 6. 1 Chr. xv. 27 and 2 Chr. v. 12. Esth. viii. 15. 2 Chr. ii. 14. and iii. 14. 1 Chr. iv. 21.] dressed in a Mantle of Buz, with the Singers and all the Levites. Solomon uses Buz in the Vails of the Temple and the Sanctuary. Ahasuerus's Tents were upheld by Cords of Buz, and Mordecai was cloathed with a Mantle of Purple and Buz, when King Ahasuerus honoured him with the first Employment in his Kingdom. Lastly, it is observed, that there was a Manufacture of Buz in the City of Beersheba in Palestine. I can hardly persuade myself, that the Silk of the Fish Pinna could have been so frequent in this Country, so early as in the time of David and Solomon. Nevertheless it is certain, that this Buz must have been different from common Linen, since in the very same place, where it is said, that David had a Mantle of Byssus upon him, we read likewise, that he wore a Linen Ephod. See the Article Cotton.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

בר Linnen. שׁ Schesch, Gossypium. בוץ Butz, Byssus.

Philon. de Somniis p. 592. Λινῶν δὲ βύσσου τῆς καθαρωτάτης πεποιημένον ἀναλαμβάνει, ἡ δὲ ἐπὶ, &c.

Relation des Caravannes imprimée à Nancy, 1707. par M. Bugnon. Geograph. de S. A. R.

Plin. l. xix. c. 1.

Basil. in Hexaëmeron. Orat. 7. Πόθεν οἱ κόχλοι τοῖς βασιλεῦσι τὰς ἁλουργίδας χαρίζονται.

The Letter C

Cabbala

CABBALA. This word, according to the Hebrew Style, has a very different signification from that wherein we understand it in our Language. The Hebrew Cabbala signifies Tradition[1], and the Rabbins, who are called Cabbalists, study principally the Combination of particular Words, Letters and Numbers; and by this means pretend to discover what is to come, and to see clearly into the sense of many difficult passages in Scripture. There are no sure and certain Principles of this Knowledge, but it depends upon some particular Traditions of the Antients; for which reason it is termed Cabbala. The Cabbalists have abundance of names which they call sacred; these they make use of in invoking Spirits, and imagin that they receive great Lights from them: They tell us, that the Secrets of the Cabbala[2] were discovered to Moses on Mount Sinai, and that these have been delivered down to them from Father to Son, without interruption, and without any use of Letters; for to write them down, is what they are by no means permitted to do. It is said, that there are many of the Jewish Cabbalists in Poland, and other places in the North. See Basnage's continuation of Josephus, t. 6. l. ix. c. 7.

The manner wherein Maimonides[3] explains the Cabbala, or Tradition of the Jews, is as follows.

God not only delivered the Law to Moses on Mount Sinai, but the explanation of it likewise. When he came down, and entred into his Tent, Aaron went to visit him, and Moses acquainted him with the Laws which he had received from God, together with the Explanation of them. After this, Aaron placed himself at the right hand of Moses, Eleazar and Ithamar the Sons of Aaron were admitted, and Moses repeated to them what he had been saying just before to Aaron. These being seated one on the right, the other on the left hand of Moses, the 70 Elders of Israel came in, who composed the Sanhedrin; Moses again declared the same Laws to them, with the Interpretations of them, as he had done before to Aaron and his Sons. Lastly, All whoever pleased of the common People were invited to enter, and Moses instructed them in the same manner as the rest. So that Aaron heard four times what Moses had been taught by God upon the Mountain, Eleazar and Ithamar three times, the 70 Elders twice, and the People once.

Moses afterwards reduced the Laws which he had received into writing, but not the Explanations of them. He thought it sufficient to trust them to the Memory of the persons abovementioned, who being perfectly instructed in them, delivered them to their Children, and these again to theirs from Age to Age. The written Laws of Moses are to be read in his Books, in Exodus, Leviticus and Numbers, but the Explanation, Tradition or Cabbala of these very Laws, is preserved to this day in the memory of the Hebrews. This is termed likewise the Oral Law, because it passed from Father to Son, from Mouth to Mouth, in order to distinguish it from the written Laws.

Some of these Traditions, or Cabbalas, the Patriarchs are supposed to be the Authors of, and to have been instructed by their Angels.[4] The Angel Raziel was Adam's Master, and taught him the Cabbala. Raphiel was Shem's; Zedekiel was Abraham's, Raphael Isaac's, Peliel Jacob's, Gabriel Joseph's, Metatron Moses's, and Malathiel Elias's. Thus the Rabbins endeavour to give great Authority to their Traditions and Explanations of the Law, against which our Saviour appeared with so much vehemence.

There is another Cabbala called artificial, which consists in searching for abstruse and mysterious Significations of a word in Scripture, from whence they borrow certain Explanations, by combining the Letters which compose it. This Cabbala is divided into three kinds, the Gematrie, the Notaricon, and the Temura or change. The Gematry consists in taking the Letters of a Hebrew word for Cyphers, or arithmetical Numbers, and explaining every word by the arithmetical value of the Letters whereof it is composed; for example, [Gen. xlix. 10.] the Hebrew Letters of שילה יבא Jabo-schiloh,[5] Shiloh shall come, make up the same arithmetical Number as משיח*Messiach*, the Messiah, from whence they conclude, that Shiloh signifies the Messiah.

The second kind of Cabbala, which is called Notaricon, consists in taking every particular letter of a word for an intire diction. For example, of Bereschith[6], which is the first word of Genesis, composed of the Letters B. R. A. SCH. IT. they make Bara-Rakia-Arez-Schamaim- Jam-Tehomoth[7]. He created the Firmament, the Earth, the Heavens, the Sea and the Deep; or in taking the first Letters of a Sentence to form one Diction only with them; for example,[8] Atah-Gibbor-Leholam-Adonai. Thou art strong for ever, O Lord. They put the first Letters of this Sentence together, and make the word Agla[9], which may signify, I will reveal, or a drop of Dew.

The third kind of Cabbala, called Themurah[10], that is to say, change, consists in making different Transpositions or changes of Letters, placing one for the other, or one before the other, much after the manner of making Anagrams in Latin, or any other Language; for example, of the word Bereschith[11], with which Genesis begins, they make

A-betisri, the first day of the Month Tizri; and infer from it, that the World was created the first day of the Month Tizri, which answers very near to our September.

Among Christians likewise, a certain sort of Magick is by mistake called Cabbala, which consists in using improperly Passages of Scripture for Magick Operations, or in forming Magick Characters or Figures, with Stars and Talismans. Such are the Abraxas so well known among the Antiquaries. Under the same name likewise is sometimes comprehended the hermetical Art, or the search after the Philosopher's Stone.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

קבלהCabala Traditio.

Translators' note. The first who delivered any thing of the Cabbala in writing was Simon Jochaides, Author of the celebrated Book called Zohar, to which great additions have been since made. The first part of this Work is entitled Zeniutha or Mystery, the second Idra Rabba, or the great Synod, the third Idra Lata, or the little Synod, which is Jochaides's last adieu to his Disciples. See Histoire des Juifs par Basnage, l. iii. c. 10. where and in the following Book this learned Author is very copious on this Subject.

Maimonidas's Preface to the Mishnah.

R. Abraham-Bendior præfat. in Jetzira.

יבא שילה: י 10, ב 2, א 1, ש 300, י 10, ל 30, ה 5 = 358. משיח: מ 40, ש 300, י 10, ח 8 = 358.

בראשיתIn principio.

א תהוסות'בר-רקיע-ארץ שמים-ים

אתהגבור לעלם אדני

אגלאVide Galatin Arcan. l. 2. c. 15.

תמורהChange.

1בראשית בתשרי - .א*in Tizri*.

Cabbalists

CABBALISTS. The Rabbinical Doctors among the Jews are called by this name, who receive not only the Text of Scripture, but also the Explanations of the Talmud, and the Traditions of the Antients, and who besides study to discover mysterious and concealed Meanings in the Scripture, of God's appointing, and left by him to the enquiries of Men; for, in their opinion, there is not a Word, Letter, or Accent in the Law, without some Mystery in it.

The first Cabbalistical Author that we know of, is Simon the Son of Joachai, whom the Jews, and some Christians glory in mightily, and affirm him to have lived some little time before the ruin of Jerusalem by Titus[1]; but others allow him to have appeared no earlier than in the tenth Century, and understand all that is said of this famous person to be fabulous. His Book entitled Zohar is printed; but it is agreed, that many additions have been made to it.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

See Basnage Hist. des Juifs. t. 6. l. ix. c. 7. p. 317.

Cabbon

CABBON, a City in the Tribe of Judah, Josh. xv. 40.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Cabul

CABUL. See Chabalon.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Cabus

CABUS or Cab, an Hebrew Measure, the sixth part of a Seah or Satum; and the eighteenth part of an Epha. A Cab[1] contained two pints □/□ of our Corn Measure. A quarter Cab was the Measure of Dove's Dung, or a sort of chich-pease, called by this name, which was sold at Samaria during the Siege of this City for five Shekels. This quarter of a Cab contained something above half a pint. It is called likewise Log or Robah. A Cab is very different from a Cad or Cadus.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Translators' note. A Cab contained three Pints ⅓ of our Wine Measure, and two Pints □ of our Corn Mea- sure. Arbuth. Tables of antient Coins, Weights and Measures.

Cad

CAD, or Cadus,[1] signifies in Hebrew a Pitcher, a Hogshead, a Bucket. But in S. Luke a particular Measure is meant by it. How much owest thou unto my Lord? And he said, an hundred Measures of oyl.[2] The Greek reads, an hundred Baths. Now the Bath or Ephah, contains ten Gallons, and some small matter over. A Cad is very different from a Cab, which is no more than the eighteenth part of an Ephah or Cadus.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Translators' note. Dr. Arbuthnot having enumerated the several Jewish Measures for things liquid, concludes his account of them with these words, In the Scriptures are also found, Nebel, Assa, Nod, Cad, Aboth. Purah, Bacbuc, which some Authors take for certain Measures; but they rather seem to have been the names of Vessels of no determinate Bigness. Tables of antient Coins, Weights and Measures, &c. p. 162.

Translators' note. The Vulgate reads, Centum cados olei.

Cadumim

CADUMIM. The Brook Cadumim is mentioned in Judges, Chap. v. 21. Many are of opinion, that this Brook ran from West to East, from the foot of Mount Tabor into the Sea of Tiberias. But we have no evidence of there being any such Brook in this place. Others think, Cadumim is only a synonymous term for the Brook Kishon: And there is nothing in the Scripture which contradicts this opinion. Torrens Cison traxit cadavera; torrens Cadumim, torrens Cison[1]. We know there was [Judith vii. 3. in Syriaco.] a City in these parts called Cadmon, mentioned in the Book of Judith, from whence the Brook Cadumim or Kishon might take its name. Eusebius speaks of a large place, called Cammon, in the great Plain, six Miles northward from Legio.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Ita Versio Vulg.

Cæsar

CÆSAR. This is the name of all the Roman Emperors, from Julius Cæsar to the Destruction of the Roman Empire. In Scripture the reigning Emperor was generally mentioned by the Name of Cæsar, without expressing any other, under which he was more known in History. For example, Jesus Christ calls Tiberius, Cæsar, without adding any other appellation, saying, Render unto Cæsar, the things [Mat. xxii. 21.] that are Cæsar's. And S. Paul mentions Nero under the same Title only. I appeal unto Cæsar; that is to say, to Nero, who then reigned.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Cæsarea

CÆSAREA in Palestine, before called Strato's Tower, and built by Herod the Great in Honour of Augustus, was situated on the eastern Coast of the Mediterranean, and had a very fine Harbour belonging to it. Josephus[1] says, it was six hundred Furlongs; that is to say, about five or six and twenty common Leagues from Jerusalem. Vespasian, after the Jewish War was ended, settled a Roman Colony in Cæsarea. Its Inhabitants were part Jews and part Greeks, or Idolaters: Hence arose those Seditions which were so frequent between these two People. Cæsarea is often spoken of in the New Testament. There it was that King Agrippa was smitten of the Lord, in neglecting [Acts xii. 23.] to give God the Glory, when the People were so liberal to him of their Praises. [Acts x. 1. & seq. Acts xxv. 10. Acts viii. 40. Acts xxi. 10, 11.] Cornelius the Centurion, who was baptized by S. Peter, lived at Cæsarea. There S. Philip the Deacon, with his four Maiden Daughters, had his Habitation. At Cæsarea the Prophet Agabus foretold to S. Paul, that he would be bound and confined by his Enemies at Jerusalem. Lastly, [Acts xxiii, xxiv, xxv.] the same Apostle continued two years a prisoner at Cæsarea, till he was conducted to Rome, where he had appealed to Nero's Tribunal. Whenever there is mention of the Cities in Palestine, and Cæsarea is named without the addition of Philippi, we are always to suppose that Cæsarea to be meant, whereof we are speaking in this place.

Cæsarea Philippi, before called Paneas, is situated at the foot of Mount Panéus, near the Springs of Jordan. Its ancient name is believed to have been Dan or Lais; and it is called Paneas by the Phœnicians only.[2] But Eusebius distinguishes Dan from Paneas, as if they were two different places near each other.[3] Cæsarea was at the distance of a day's journey from Sidon[4], and a day's journey and an half from Damascus.[5] Philip the Tetrarch built it, or at least embellished and enlarged it, and gave it the name of Cæsarea in honour of Tiberius; afterwards, in in respect to Nero, it was called Neronias.[6] The Springs from which the River Jordan proceeds, appear near Cæsarea Philippi, and pass through natural and subterraneous Channels from the Lake Phiala, which is at the distance of an hundred and twenty Furlongs, or five Leagues from this City.[7] The Woman who was troubled with an Issue of Blood, and healed by our Saviour, is said to [Mat. ix. 20. Luke viii. 43,] have been of Cæsarea Philippi, and to have returned thither after her cure, and erected a Statue to her Benefactor[8]. At the foot of this Statue there grew an Herb, which had the vertue of curing several Diseases. Julian the Apostate pulled down this Figure, and set up his own in the room of it. But the Christian Inhabitants of the City took this Statue of our Saviour, and placed it with Honour in their Church, and Fire from Heaven consumed that of Julian.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Joseph. de Bello, l. i. c. 3. Antiq. l. xiii. c. 19.
Euseb. Hist. l. 7. c. 16. Sozomen. Hist. l. 5. c. 21.
Euseb. ad vocem Βηθσαμύς. et ad vocem Δάν.
Antiq. l. v. c. 2.
Abulfeda apud Reland. Palest. t. 2. p. 920.
Joseph. Antiq. l. xx. c. 8.
Idem de Bello. l. i. c. 16.
Euseb. l. viii. c. 4. Nicephor. l. viii. c. 15.

Cain

CAIN, the eldest Son of Adam and Eve. He was born towards the end of the first year of the World's Creation, some believe, that Eve at the same time produced a Daughter, Cain's Sister, who is by some called Catmana, by others, Azura or Azrun: But the Scripture says nothing of any such person.

When Cain was grown up, he applied [Gen. iv. 2, &c.] himself to Agriculture, and his Brother Abel imployed himself in feeding his Flocks. Upon a certain day Cain having offered the first Fruits of his Labour to the Lord, and Abel the Fat or Milk of his Flock, God shewed by some sensible Sign, that Abel's Offerings were agreeable to him, and that Cain's were not so; which so inraged Cain, and stung him with envy, that his Countenance was intirely changed; whereupon the Lord said to him, why art thou troubled, and why is thy Countenance so dejected? If thou dost well, shalt thou not be accepted? and if thou dost not well, shall not Punishment be the consequence of thy Sin? Abel shall be subject to thee, and thou, as the First -born, shalt rule over him.

But Cain suffering himself to be governed by his envious Passion, said to his Brother, Let us go into the Fields, and when they were there, he rose up against him and killed him. Then said the Lord to Cain, where is thy brother Abel? He answered, I know not, am I my Brother's keeper? God said, what hast thou done? the voice of thy Brother's Blood ariseth unto me from the Ground on which thou hast shed it. And now thou art cursed from the Earth, which hath opened her Mouth to receive thy Brother's Blood from thy hand. When thou tillest it, it shall not henceforth yield unto thee her Strength: A Fugitive and a Vagabond shalt thou be in the Earth. Cain replied, My Punishment is greater than I can bear. Behold thou hast driven me from thy Presence, and I shall be a Vagabond on the Earth, and every one that findeth me shall slay me. It shall not be so, said the Lord; for whosoever slayeth Cain, Vengeance shall be taken on him sevenfold. And the Lord set a mark on Cain,[1] lest any finding him should kill him[2].

Cain went out therefore from the Presence of the Lord, and retired to the Land of Nod, which lies to the East of the Province of Eden. While he dwelt in this Country, he had a Son, whom he named Enoch, in Memory of whom he built a City of the same name. This is what we learn from Scripture concerning Cain. Several Questions relating to him are proposed by different Persons, which are treated of by the Commentators. For example, what the pretence or motive was, which induced Cain to kill his Brother Abel; what Instrument he made use of; whose Resentment and Revenge he apprehended; to what Country he retired, what the Mark was which God fixed upon him; and what death he died. As to this last Article, it is said, he was killed by Lamech one of his Nephews. Lamech, they tell us, by some accident became blind; but notwithstanding this Misfortune, he sometimes went a hunting; upon which occasions he was led by a young Man, who gave him notice when he saw any Game. One day he heard a rustling in the Thickets, whereupon his Guide thought there was some wild Beast there. In reality it was Cain; and Lamech shooting at the place killed him. As soon as he discovered his Mistake, he was so inraged, that he stab'd his Guide, and returning to his own House, he said to his two Wives, Adah and Zillah, Hear my voice ye wives of Lamech, hearken to my speech: for I have slain a man to my wounding, and a young man to my hurt. But there is no certainty at all in this Tradition.

Josephus

Josephus says[3], that Cain having settled at Naid or Nod, built a City there for himself and his Family; and instead of being reformed by this State of Exile, wherewith God had punished him, he grew more wicked, and gave himself up to all sorts of irregularities, and violence, and put himself at the head of a band of thieves, whom he had got together, and taught how to grow rich as well as he, at the expence of others. He quite changed the old simplicity and honesty, which reigned in the world, and introduced fraud and deceipt in trade by inventing weights and measures. He was the first, who set particular bounds to the fields, and who built and fortified a City.

We do not know how long Cain lived: Some say he was eight hundred; others seven hundred, others six hundred and fourscore; others again, that he was nine hundred and one and thirty years of Age, when he died. Some say he lived to the deluge. There are some too who believe that he was crushed in pieces under the ruins of an house; others, that he was killed, as we have said, by Lamech; and lastly others, that he killed himself[4]. There is nothing certain in all this, nor in the generality of those questions, which are proposed concerning other parts of his History. The Reader may hereupon consult the Commentators.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

There is great diversity of Opinions concerning this Mark; some will have it, that God produced a Horn upon his Fore-head; and others, that he ingraved a letter on it; for example, the first letter of the word Cain. Others are of Opinion, that God created such a trembling in all his Limbs, as shewed his evil Concience and Remorse for the Sin he had committed. This last Opinion is most followed by the Fathers. The Rabbins say, he had a Dog with him, which went barking continually before him.

He feared the resentment of Abel's Children, and of his other Brothers and Relations. He apprehended that they would pursue and kill him, unless he retired to such a distance from them, that it might be never possible for him to fall into their Hands. For at that time, and long after, people looked upon themselves to be obliged in duty to revenge the Death of their near Kinsmen. The Law appointed Cities of Refuge for involuntary Murderers, and in some sort tolerated Revenge in other Cases.

Joseph. Antiq. l. i. c. 3.

See Bayle's Dictionary, in the Article Cain.

Cains

CAINS, or Cainites, certain Hereticks, who appeared in the second Century, and believed Cain to have been produced by some greater and more excellent power than Abel; and that for this reason Cain prevailed over Abel. Upon the same principle they paid extraordinary honours and respect to all those persons, who are represented in the Scripture to be the worst and most infamous of mankind, such as the inhabitants of Sodom, Corah, Dathan, and Abiram, and in particular to the traitor Judas, who knowing that the Salvation of Men was to be procured by the Death of Jesus Christ, delivered him up to his enemies in order to be executed, notwithstanding the resistance of some certain powers, who were ill-wishers to our happiness, and would have prevented him. The Cainites collected, and adopted all that was most impure and ignominious in the Heresy of the Gnosticks, and other Hereticks of those times. See Epiphanius, Heresy 38. Tertull. De Præscriptionibus, c. 47, &c.

The Eastern people assert, that the children of Seth, who were the Sons of God, and the Faithful before the Deluge, had many wars to maintain against the Sons of Cain, in Scripture called the Sons of Men. They add that Caiumaras first

King of the East, in the account of the Persians, was very serviceable to the Sons of Seth, as well as his General, whose name was Dudasch[1].

In the first Ages of the Church there was an Heresy called Cainians or Cainites, which took its name from Cain, whom they looked upon as their Head and Father. These were one branch of the Gnosticks, who embraced very monstrous errors: they maintained, that Cain, Esau, Lot, the traitor Judas, the inhabitants of Sodom, and in a word all those, who are mentioned in the sacred Books with horror, and whose impious actions are related there, were born of some celestial and very mighty power; that Abel on the contrary, and other righteous men were produced by some weaker power. The examples of these wicked wretches, and the books whereof they are reputed to be the Authors, encouraged them in committing the most shameful actions[2], and most excessive debauches.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

D'Herbolet. Bibl. Orient. p. 323.

Vide Epiphan. hæres. 38.

Cainan (I)

I. CAINAN, the Son of Enos, was born in the year of the world 325. His Father Enos was at that time ninety years of Age. Genes. v. 9. We know no other particularity of his Life, except that at the Age of seventy, he begat Mahalaleel. Cainan died at the Age of nine hundred and ten, in the year of the World 1235, before J. C. 2765, before the vulgar Æra 2769.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Cainan (II)

II. CAINAN, the Son of Arphaxad, and Father of Salah, is neither in the Hebrew Text nor in the Vulgate, Genes. xi. 12, 13, 14. But he is named in S. Luke iii. 36. who places him betwen Salah and Arphaxad, which was the Son of Salah, which was the Son of Cainan, which was the Son of Arphaxad.

The Septuagint, Genes. x. 24. and xi. 12. admit him as well as S. Luke. Some have been of opinion, that the Jews suppressed the word Cainan, and expunged it out of their Copies with a design of rendring the Septuagint and S. Luke suspected, who had received it. Others have thought, that Moses purposely omitted Cainan, because he had a mind to reckon ten Generations only from Adam to Noah, and from Noah to Abraham. Others will have it, that Arphaxad was the Father of both Cainan and Salah, of Salah in a natural way, and of Cainan according to the Law. Lastly, others have asserted, that Cainan and Salah were the same person mentioned in the Septuagint and S. Luke by the two names belonging to him. This is what some say to support that opinion, which maintains Cainan to be really the Son of Arphaxad, and Father of Salah. We shall not stay here to confute these different rent opinions; but refer the Reader to our Comment upon Genesis x. 24. and those Authors who have written particularly on Cainan[1].

They who assert, that Cainan was surreptitiously inserted into the Septuagint, and from thence was taken by S. Luke, pretend, that the Authority of the Hebrew, Vulgate, Chaldee, and Syriac is much preferable to the Septuagint: that S. Luke having only copied these Interpreters, his Text in this place can be of no greater authority than the Septuagint: that the defalcations and changes which have been made in the years of the Patriarchs, are alone sufficient to destroy their Authority, wherever they contradict the Hebrew: and that upon comparing the Editions of the Septuagint, they are found not to agree with one another. Lastly, there are some, who affirm, that the name of Cainan is new and strange in the Text of the Septuagint; that these Interpreters did not put it there, and the most ancient of the Fathers did not read it there. And indeed neither Josephus, nor Philo knew any thing of Cainan's being the Son of Arphaxad; and the old Fathers generally reckon no more than ten Generations from Noah to Abraham. But there would be eleven, if Cainan were to be included in the number. If S. Luke therefore inserted his name in the Gospel, which he wrote, it was certainly at that time in some Copies of the Septuagint; and many learned men believe, that this name was not to be met with in the first Texts of S. Luke, but that it is an addition which has been made by the Transcribers.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

See Usher's Dissertation on Cainan; Cornel. a Lapide, in Genes. xi. Natal. Alex. Dissert. in V. T. Grot. in Luc. iii. 36. Mill. ibidem. Spanhem. Dub. Evang. Bochart. Phaleg. l. ii. c. 13. and our Comment. upon Genes. x. 24. and Luke iii. 36.

Caipha

CAIPHA, or Caïapha, or Hepha[1], a Town situated at the foot of Mount Carmel to the North, upon the Gulph of Ptolemaïs. Its ancient name was Sycaminas, or Porphyreon. The name of Sycaminos, or Sycaminon, was derived probably from the Sycomore-trees, which grew there; and that of Porphyreon from catching a particular kind of Fish there, which was made use of in dying purple. We may suppose that of Cepha or Caipha to have been given it, on the score of its rocks, which in Syriac are called Cepha: but the Hebrews write Hepha and not Chepha or Kepha. This City was separated from that of Acco or Ptolemaïs, by its harbour, which is very large and beautiful. From Acco to Cepha by Sea, and in a strait line, is not above fifteen miles or five leagues; but by Land the distance is double this length[2].

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

חיפאHeipha.
Vide Scherif ibn idris, seu Nubiens. apud Reland. t. ii. p. 819.

Caiphas

CAIPHAS, or Joseph Caiphas, High Priest of the Jews, succeeded Simon the Son of Camith in the High Priesthood, and after he had possessed this dignity for nine years, that is to say, from the year of the world 4029 to 4038. he was succeeded by Jonathan the Son of Ananus or Annas. Caïphas was High Priest in the year of the world 4037, which was that of Jesus Christ's Death. He was deposed by Vitellius Governor of Syria. Caiphas married one of the Daughters of Annas, who also is called High Priest in the Gospel, because he had for a long time enjoyed this dignity.

When the Priests deliberated, whether they should lay hold of Jesus Christ, and put him to death, Caïphas told them, that there was no room for debating on that matter, and that it was expedient for one man to die for all the people, that the whole nation might not perish. This was a [John xi. 49, 50.] prophecy, which God suffered to be pronounced by the mouth of the High Priest on this occasion, to shew, that the Death of our Saviour would be the Salvation of the World.

After that Judas had betrayed Jesus Christ, and our Saviour, the night before his Passion, had been apprehended and bound in the Garden of Olives, he was first carried by the Soldiers, who had seized him, to the house of Annas, Father-in-law to Caïphas. Annas proposed several questions to him concerning his Disciples, [John xviii. 21, 22.] and his Doctrine. Jesus answered, that he had taught nothing in secret, and that all the people were witnesses of his Doctrine and Opinions. Whereupon one of Caïphas's Servants struck him with the palm of his hand, saying, Answerest thou the High-Priest so? Annas however was not High Priest this year, but, as we have said, Caïphas. But as he had before been in this office, he still had the title given him.

Annas having thus heard what Jesus had to say, sent him back to his Son-in-law Caïphas, who perhaps lived in the same [John xviii. 24.] house. The Priests and Doctors of the law were there assembled to judge Jesus, and endeavoured to procure evidences against him, that they might be able to condemn him. The depositions of some false witnesses were heard; but their testimony not being sufficient to justify them in pronouncing sentence of Death against him, and Jesus continuing profoundly silent, Caïphas demanded of him, why he did not speak; but received no reply from him. Hereupon the High Priest said to him, I adjure thee by the living God that thou tell us, whether thou art the Christ, the Son of God. Jesus answered, Thou hast said: neverthe-less I say unto you, hereafter shall ye see the Son of Man sitting on the right hand of power, and coming in the clouds of Heaven. Upon hearing these words Caïphas rent his clothes, and said, What further need have we of witnesses? behold now you have heard his blasphemy. What think ye? they answered, he is worthy of death. Then Jesus was returned into the Soldiers hands, and the Assembly of the Priests separated, till early the next morning; when Caïphas and the rest of the Priests, the Doctors and the Senate, met again in the Sanhedrim, which was held in the Temple: thither Jesus was brought, and they asked him, Whether he was the Christ? He answered; tho' I should tell ye, yet would ye not believe me; and if I should entreat you to set me at liberty, ye would not hearken unto me: but I say unto you, that ye shall one day see the Son of Man sitting on the right hand of God. They said, Art thou then the Son of God? He answered, I am. Whereupon they concluded instantly, that he deserved death. And as the power of life and death was not lodged in their hands, but reserved to the Romans, they conducted him to Pilate, who was Governor of the Province, that he might confirm their Sentence, and give orders for his execution.

Two years after, that is to say, in the 35th year of the vulgar Æra, and 38th from the Birth of J. C. Vitellius Governor of Syria coming to Jerusalem at the time when the Feast of the Passover was celebrated, was received there very magnificently by the people; and as an acknowledgment for the honour done him, restored the custody of the High Priest's ornaments to the Priests, remitted certain impositions, which were levied upon the fruits of the earth, and deposed the High Priest Caïphas. Josephus seems to place this deposition among the other favours granted by Vitellius to the Jews. What the end of Caïphas was, and when he died, we cannot tell. His house is shewn still at this day in Jerusalem. But how can we depend on monuments of this kind after so many revolutions, as have happened to the City of Jerusalem?

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Caius Caligula

CAIUS CALIGULA, Emperor of Rome, and Successor to Tiberius. He took upon him the Government of the Empire in the year of J. C. 37, and reigned three years, nine months and twenty eight days. We do not find in the History of the Church, that he did any thing against the Christians. He undertook indeed to procure himself to be adored, and this design he easily accomplished among the Heathens. But having commanded Petronius Governor of Syria to place his Statue in the Temple of Jerusalem, the Jews so vigorously opposed him in the execution of these orders, that he, fearing a Sedition might ensue, and a general rebellion, wrote to Caïus[1], informing him, that the Jews could no way be persuaded to receive his Statue, and pay divine honours to it; for by this means he would have exposed himself to certain death, and drawn the utmost calamities upon the Jews; but that hitherto he had had no opportunity to obey his orders, because the Artificers, who were imployed about the Statue, required more time to finish it with all possible perfection, and to make it, if they could, a master-piece of Art. He added, that as yet he had not ventured to press the Jews in this particular, by reason of the season; because if the lands should not be sown, the whole country would be barren and produce nothing, and so the ordinary taxes could not be raised from them; and that want and famine would create an infinite number of thieves.

Caius received Petronius's Letters, and pretended not to disapprove the reasons of his delay. In a Letter which he directed to be written to him, he commended his prudence; but charged him to consecrate his Statue without farther loss of time. Nevertheless they, who were acquainted with him, and had observed his air, while he was reading these Letters, made no question but that the ruin of Petronius was resolved on.

In the mean while Agrippa returning from Judæa to Rome, without knowing any thing of what had happened, or of Petronius's Letters, came as usual to make his court to Caius. He found this Prince in great disorder, and not being able to divine the cause of his indignation, he was very much confounded, while he looked on Caius, and saw his Eyes fixed upon him. Hereupon the Emperor seeing him in this perplexity, said to him, Your Jews, a people indeed much to be admired, who alone of all mankind will not allow Caius to be a God, seem to run voluntarily upon their own destruction, by refusing, as they do, to obey me. I commanded the Statue of Jupiter to be placed in their Temple, and they under pretence of begging pardon, and forbearance, have every where rebel'd against me.

Agrippa, when he heard those words fainted away, and was carried home, where he continued till the evening of the next day without motion, or the knowledge of any any thing. At that time he began to open his eyes a little, and look upon those who were about him; then relapsed into the same drowzy state. Upon the third day, his understanding was entirely recovered, and he wrote a long letter to the Emperor, entreating him to forgive the Jews, and that he would not compel them to receive his Statue into their Temple. Caius was moved with Agrippa's reasons, who invited him to an entertainment at his house in Rome, where he treated him with all the magnificence he could devise. Caius was very well satisfied with his generosity, and in the warmth of his wine told him, that he was determined to make him happy, and heap abundance of favours on him. He afterwards press'd him to tell him, wherein he could most oblige him. Agrippa answered, that the only favour which he asked of him, was, that he would think no more of setting up his Statue in the Temple of Jerusalem. The Emperor immediately granted it, and in the Letter sent by his order to Petronius, commanded him to let his Statue remain in the Temple, if it were already placed there; if it were not, to pursue this matter no farther, adding withal, that he had changed his mind in consideration of Agrippa.

But as if he had repented of the favour which he had so lately shewn the Jews, instead of the Statue, which had been begun at Sidon, he appointed another to be made at Rome, of copper gilt, extremely large, with a design to have it carried privately to Egypt, when he went thither, as he proposed to do, in the beginning of the year following; and so have it placed without noise in the Temple of Jerusalem, before the Jews had any notice of it. He proceeded so far as to send a Letter to Petronius, wherein he told him, that since he had shewn less regard to his commands, than to the presents, which he had received from the Jews, he required him to be himself his own judge, and to treat himself in such a manner, as that man deserved, who had disobeyed his Prince. This was in effect commanding him to kill himself. But it pleased God that this Letter was not delivered to Petronius, till after the death of Caïus.

The Jews of Alexandria at the same time suffered strange persecutions from the Heathens of that City, who being supported by Flaccus their Governor, lost no opportunity of using them ill. Philo the Jew was sent with some other Deputies to the Emperor[2], to demand justice against the inhabitants of Alexandria. They presented a Memorial to him, which contained a short account of their sufferings.

Caïum. Caïus at first received them very civilly, and directed his Officers to acquaint them, that he would himself hear them, as soon as he had leisure. All the world believed, upon this favourable reception, that they would gain their cause. But Philo, whom age and experience had made more diffident than the rest, was apprehensive, that this Prince had already been engaged by the Alexandrians, and that these fair appearances would at last terminate in the loss of their cause.

At length Philo had his audience near the City in the pleasure-houses which were called Mecænas's. Caius ordered all the chambers of these palaces to be opened, that he might see them one after another, and while he was thus imployed he sent for the Jews. Upon his first accosting them, he said with a reproachful smile, Are you then those enemies of the Gods, who refuse to acknowledge me as a Deity, tho' all other people own me as such; and who choose rather to adore another, whom you cannot so much as name? At the same time lifting up his hands to Heaven, he spoke so blasphemously, that Philo, who relates this whole story, did not dare to mention what he said. Hereupon one Isidorus addressing himself to the Emperor told him, that he would still have a greater detestation for this people, if he knew the aversion which they had to him; for they, said he, are the only people, who have not sacrificed for your health, which all besides have done. At these words, the Jews all cried out together, that this was meer slander, that they had three times offered the most solemn Sacrifices, which their Religion prescribed to them for his prosperity. Grant it, said Caius, but you have sacrificed to another; and what honour have I received, since you did not sacrifice to me?

In the mean time Caius run over his apartments, and gave directions for the particular alterations, which he intended to have made in them. After which he returned to the Jews, and very gravely asked them, why they did not eat swine's flesh? The Jews represented to him, that every Nation had its peculiar Laws and Customs, and that there were some things, which their adversaries did not eat of. Whereupon one observing that there were many, who would not eat lamb's flesh; they are in the right, said Caius smiling, for there is no taste in it. After this, he asked them, upon what grounds they pretended to be free of Alexandria? They began to lay before him their right to this privilege; and without waiting till they had done, he broke off the discourse, and ran away into a large Hall, round which he he walked. As he came out of it, he asked the Jews with an air of more Moderation, if they had any thing further to say to him? and as they began to speak to him, he left them again, and went into another Hall, where several Pictures had been placed by his Orders. Some time after he dismissed them, saying, these People do not seem to me to be so wicked, as they are foolish and unfortunate, in not believing me to be a God. How he determined the matter of Complaint, we do not know; but we learn from Philo and Josephus, that in his Reign, the Jews of Alexandria were continually oppressed some way or other, and exposed to the Violence of their Enemies.

We do not relate here the particulars of Caius's Life; it is sufficient for us to take notice of his Actions, so far as they had any respect to the Jewish Nation; which is all that we are concerned about in this Work. This Prince was killed in a tragical manner by Chæreas, one of his Guards, as he was coming out of the Theatre, in the year of Jesus Christ 41, and the fourth of his Reign. He was succeeded by the Emperor Claudius.

Caius enriched King Agrippa, and gave him the Kingdom of Judæa: When this Prince returned to Judæa, his Uncle Herod Antipas, who was Tetrarch of Galilee, envying his good Fortune, and solicited by his Wife Herodias, believed that if he went to Rome, he too should obtain from Caius the Title of King. He therefore undertook this Journey. But Agrippa, who apprehended his succeeding, sent after he was gone, and accused him to the Emperor of carrying on a Correspondence with the King of Parthia against the Romans, and of having in his Arsenals wherewithal to arm seventy thousand Men[3]. When Herod came to Italy, he went directly to Baiæ, where Caius then was: And while he was there, Fortunatus, once a Slave belonging to Agrippa, but made free by him, arrived there likewise, and presented Letters from his Master to the Emperor. Caius immediately read them; and when he had done, asked Herod if it were true, that he had so large a quantity of Arms in his keeping. Herod could not deny it: Whereupon the Emperor, without giving him any opportunity to justify himself, instead of conferring the Title of King upon him, deprived him of his Tetrarchy, and all his Wealth, and banished him for his whole Life to Lions. Upon Information, that Herodias was Agrippa's Sister, he was inclined, for her Brother's sake, to pardon her: But she chose rather to follow her Husband into his Exile, since she had engaged him in this Misfortune. Thus God revenged the Death of John the Baptist, who had been executed at the Sollicitation of Herodias, and by the Command of Herod.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Vide Joseph. Antiq. l. xviii. c. 11. de Bello, l. ii. c. 17.
See Philo, de Legatione ad
See Joseph. Antiq. l. xviii. c. 8, 9.

Cakes

CAKES. The Hebrews had several sorts of Cakes which they offered in the Temple; they were made of the Meal either of Wheat or Barley; they were kneaded sometimes with Oil, and sometimes with Honey; sometimes they only rub'd them over with Oil when they were baked, or fryed them with Oil in a Frying-pan upon the Fire. In the Ceremony of Aaron's Consecration, they sacrificed a calf and two rams, and offered [Exod. xxix. 1, 2.] unleavened bread, and cakes unleavened tempered with oil, and wafers unleavened anointed with oil, the whole made of fine wheaten flour.

The Hebrew Text calls all Offerings Mincha[1], which were made of Grain of any kind, or of Flour, Paste, Bread, or Cakes, of any nature whatsoever: These Offerings were made either alone, or together with other things. Sometimes fine Flour was [Lev. ii. 1. Ibid. v. 4. 5.] offered[2], similia erit ejus oblatio, sometimes Cakes, or other things that were baked: Sacificium coctum in clibano: At other times Cakes baked in a Frying-pan: Oblatio de sartagine; or in a Frying-pan with holes, or upon a Grid-iron. Oblatio de craticulâ. Lastly, [Ibid. v. 7.] Ears of Corn were sometimes offered in order to roast them, and so get the Corn out, that it might be afterwards reduced to Meal or

All these several Offerings of Paste, Corn, Bread, Cakes or Meal, were instituted principally in favour of the Poor, who were not in a Condition to offer Sacrifices of greater value. This however is to be understood of voluntary Offerings, and such as were not appointed by the Law; for as to Sacrifices which they were oliged to make, the Law exchanged one Animal for another; for instead of two Lambs and an Ewe, it permits the Poor to offer only one Lamb, and two young Pigeons.

[Lev. ii. 4, 5.] As to the manner of offering these Cakes, it was to be observed in the first place, that they were salted and unleavened; for nothing which was not salted, or which had Leaven in it, was to be offered: But leavened and common Loaves might be given to the Priests for their Sustenance. If therefore the Cakes which were offered, were baked in an Oven, and sprinkled or kneaded with Oil, the whole was presented to the Priest, who waved the offering before the Lord, then took so much of it as was to be burnt upon the Altar, threw it into the Fire, and kept the rest for himself. If the Offering was a Cake a Cake kneaded with Oil, and dressed in a Frying-pan, it was reduced into pieces, and Oil poured upon it, then presented to the Priest, who took his hand full of it, threw it upon the Altar Fire, and the rest was his.

If these Cakes or Loaves were offered together with Sacrifices of Beasts, as was the common Practice, for with the great Sacrifices there were always Offerings of Cakes and Libations of Wine and Oil, the Loaves or Cakes were kneaded with Oil, and offered to the Lord. And the manner was not to pour the Wine and the Oil on the Animal's Head, which was going to be sacrificed, as was the custom of the Greeks and Romans, but they were spilt upon the Fire wherein the Victim was consumed. The Law regulated the quantity of Meal, Wine and Oil, which was to be used with every Victim; for they had different quantities for the Sacrifices of Bullocks, Sheep, Goats, Ewes and Lambs. To the Sacrifices [Numb. xxviii. 1, 2, 3, &c.] of Bullocks were added three Assarons of Flour, kneaded with half an Hin of Oil, and as much Wine: To those of Rams two Assarons, or two tenths of an Ephah of Flour, with the third of an Hin of Oil, and as much Wine; to those of Goats and Ewes, of Lambs and Kids, one tenth-deal of Flour kneaded with one fourth part of an Hin of Oil, and another of Wine. The Capacity of the Hin and Assaron may be seen in our Tables, where we reduce the hollow Measures of the Hebrews to our own.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

מנחה*Mincha*.
סלת simila.

Calah

CALAH, a City of Assyria, built by [Gen. x. 12.] Asher. See Cale.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Calamus Aromaticus

CALAMUS AROMATICUS, or Odoratus. A sort of Reed or sweet-scented Root. It is spoken of in some places of [Exod. xxx. 23. Isai. xliii. 24. Jerem. vi. 20. Ezek. xxvii. 19.] Scripture, where there is mention made of the particular Drugs whereof the sacred Perfumes were compounded. It is a knotty Root, redish without, and white within, which puts forth long and narrow Leaves. The true sweet Calamus comes from the Indies. The Prophets speak of it as a foreign Commodity, of great Value. Theophrastus[1] and Pliny mention the sweet Calamus, which grows in Syria, beyond Libanus, between this and another small Mountain, in a Lake, the Marshes whereof are dried up in the Summer; this Lake took up the space of above thirty Furlongs, and was an hundred and fifty Furlongs from the Sea: All which Circumstances persuade us, that they meant the Lake Semechon: These sweet scented Reeds have no smell while they are green; but when they are dry only. Their form is not at all different from other Reeds, and their smell is perceived as soon as any one enters the Marshes.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Theophrast. Hist. Plant. l. x. c. 7. Plin. l. xii. c. 22. and l. xiii. c. 11.

Calamus

CALAMUS, a sort of Measure; in [Ezek. xl. 3. Rev. xi. 1.] Hebrew Canna[1]. Ezekiel and S. John in the Revelations speak of this measuring Reed.[2] Ezekiel says, it was six Cubits long, and an Hand-breadth; or rather six Cubits and six Hand-breadths; that is to say, six Hebrew Cubits, every one whereof is larger by an Hand-breadth, than a Babylonish Cubit. The Prophet is obliged thus to determine the Cubit he is speaking of; because he was at that time beyond the Euphrates; and the Measures of that Country were not so large as those of Palestine. The Hebrew Cubit contained four and twenty Inches, or six Hand-breadths; or about twenty Inches and an half, reckoning twelve Lines to the Inch.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

קנה

Translators' note. See Dr. Arbuthnot on this Subject, where he treats of the Jewish Measures of Length, p. 66. of his Tables of antient Coins, Weights and Measures.

Calamus Scriptorius

[Ps. xlv. 2.] CALAMUS SCRIPTORIUS, a Reed or Rush to write with. The Antients made use of Styles to write on Tables covered with Wax, or of Reed or Rush to write on Parchment or Egyptian Paper; for our common Paper is of a new Invention. The Psalmist says, his Tongue is the Pen of a ready Writer.[1] Lingua mea calamus scribæ. But the Hebrew Text signifies rather a Style, than a Reed to write with. The Author of the third Book of Maccabees says, that the Writers employed in making a list of the Jews who were in Egypt, produced their Reeds quite worn out, declaring, that they were not able to prepare such a Roll as was required of them. Baruch wrote his Prophesies with [Jer. xxxvii. 8.] Ink, and consequently with the Reeds we have been speaking of; for it does not appear, that the use of Quills was known at that time. S. John in his third Epistle, says, it was not his design to write with [3 Jon v. 13.] Pen and Ink, Nolui per atramentum & calamum scribere tibi. This custom was common among the Gentile Nations[2].

Inque manus chartæ, nodosaque venit arundo.

The Arabians, Persians, Turks, Greeks, and Armenians still to this day make use of Reeds or Rushes as is testified by Travellers.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

לשגיעט ספר

Persius Satyr. 3.

Calcol

CALCOL, or Chalcol, the fourth Son of Mahol the Son of Zerah, a Levite and eminent Musician, 1 Chr. ii. 6. 1 Kings iv. 3

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Cale

CALE, or Chale, or Calah, or Chalach, a City of Assyria, built by Asher or Nimrod [Gen. x. 11, 12.] ; for some suppose the Text of Scripture, wherein the Foundation of this City is mentioned, to be ambiguous. But whoever founded it, it is certain that it was at a great distance from Nineveh; and that the City of Resen lay between Cale Cale and Nineveh. Chale is perhaps the Capital of the Chalacene Province, near the Springs of the River Lycus; or Chala may be the Capital of the Chalenitis, which is separated by mount Zagrus from Media[1].

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Strabo l. xi. & l. xxi.

Caleb

CALEB, the Son of Jephunneh, of the Tribe of Judah, was sent with Joshua, and ten other Deputies, chosen out of the twelve Tribes of Israel, to go and view the [Numb. xiii. 2. & seq.] Land of Canaan, which God had promised them. The Deputies performed exactly their Commission; they went through the whole Country, and brought some of the finest Fruits which it produced, to shew the Multitude of their Brethren; but some of them, after the Report which they had made of the beauty and goodness of the Country, added, It is indeed a Country flowing with Milk and Honey, but the Inhabitants of it are of an extraordinary Strength, and the Cities belonging to it are large, and inclosed within good Walls. In the mean time, as the People began to murmur, Caleb the Son of Jephunneh said to them; The Country is excellent, let us go boldly and take possession of it. But the [In the year of the World 2514, before the vulgar Æra 1490, Caleb was then 40 years of age.] other Deputies who had been with him, on the contrary told the People, that they could never make themselves Masters of it; because the Inhabitants, who possessed it, were stronger than they were. We have seen Giants there, said they, in comparison of whom, we appear but as so many Grasshoppers.

Hereupon the People openly declared against this Expedition, and said, Had we not better return into Egypt, than perish, we and our Children, in this Country? let us choose a Captain, and under his Conduct return into Egypt. At these words Moses and Aaron fell on their Faces before the whole multitude then assembled; and Joshua and Caleb rent their Clothes, and began to encourage the Israelites, telling them, that the Country which they had seen was excellent; and that if God were with them, they might easily make a Conquest of it. Only rebel not against the Lord, said they; our Enemies are without any succour, and we shall devour them like Bread. But the People being enraged, made a great outcry, and took up Stones to stone them. Then the Glory of the Lord appeared upon the Tabernacle, and threatned to exterminate the whole Multitude. But Moses prayed for them so earnestly, that God was pleased not to destroy them immediately; but protested with an Oath, that none of those who had murmured against him, should see the Land of Canaan, and that they should all die in the Wilderness. But for my Servant Caleb, added he, who hath faithfully followed me, him will I bring into the Land, and he shall possess it, he and his Children after him.

[Josh. xiv. 6, 7.] When Joshua therefore had entred into the Land of Canaan, and had conquered a great part of it, Caleb, with those of his Tribe, came as far as Gilgal to see him; and Caleb said to him, Thou knowest what the Lord said to Moses in my Favour, and the promises which he made me. I was forty years old, when Moses the Servant of the [In the year of the World 2559, before the vulgar Æra 1445, Caleb was then 85 years of age. Josh. xv. 13, 14.] Lord sent me from Kadesh-Barnea, to view the Country into which we are now entered. I made my Report with great Truth, and suppressed as far as I was able the Murmurs of the People. Then the Lord said to me, Thou shalt possess the Land which thou hast visited, thou and thy Posterity after thee, because thou hast followed the Lord. God hath preserved my Life unto this Day; five and forty Years are now past, since the Lord made me these promises; I am now above fourscore, my health and strength are not impaired: Give me, I pray thee, this Mountain, where the Anakims dwell, that I may take Possession of it. Joshua bestowed a great many Blessings on him, and granted him his Request.

Caleb therefore marched with those of his Tribe, against the City of Kirjath-arba, afterwards called Hebron; and having taken it, he killed three Giants of the Race of Anak, viz. Sheshai, Ahiman and Talmai. From thence he went to Debir, otherwise Kirjath-sepher. As this place was extremely strong, Caleb promised, that whoever took it, should marry his Daughter Achsah. Othniel the Son of Kenaz took it, and accordingly had Caleb's Daughter. This brave Israelite is thought to have survived Joshua. But the time of his death we are not acquainted with.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Caleb (II)

II. CALEB, The name of a Canton in the Tribe of Judah, wherein the Cities of [1 Sam. xxx. 14.] Kirjath-sepher and Hebron were situated, belonging to the Family of Caleb the Son of Jephunneh, of whom we have been speaking.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Caleb (III)

III. CALEB, or Chelubi, the Son of Hesron, married first Azuba, and afterwards Ephrath. There is some difficulty relating to this matter in the Hebrew Text, which it may be well to consider in the Text itself, 1 Chr. ii. 9. 18, and 24. and in the Commentators.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Calends

CALENDS. See Kalends.

Read this article in its place on the printed pages

Golden Calf

[Exod. xxxii. 4, 19, 20, &c.] GOLDEN CALF, which the Israelites worshipped at the foot of mount Sinai. " When the People saw that Moses delayed to come down from the Mount, " they gathered themselves unto Aaron, " and[1] [In the year of the world 2513, before J. C. 1487, before the vulgar Æra 1491, in the fourth month of the sacred year.] " and said unto him, Up, make us Gods which shall go before us: For as for this Moses, the Man that brought us up out of the Land of Egypt, we wot not what is become of him. And Aaron said unto them, Break off the golden ear-rings which are in the ears of your Wives, of your Sons, and of your Daughters, and bring them unto me. They brought them to him, and Aaron with the assistance of the Founder's art formed them into a molten Image. Then the people said, These are thy Gods, O Israel, which brought thee up out of the land of Egypt. Aaron having observed this, built an Altar before the Calf, and made publick proclamation by an herald, To-morrow is a Feast unto the Lord. And the people rose up early on the morrow, and offered Burnt-offerings, and brought Peace-offerings, and they sat down to eat and to drink and rose up to play.

" The Lord having informed Moses of what the people had done, commanded him to go down from the Mountain, and Moses as he came near the Camp, seeing the people dancing about the Calf, threw the tables of the Law, at that time in his hands, upon the ground and broke them at the foot of the Mountain; then taking the Golden Calf, he threw it into the fire, reduced it to powder, scattered the ashes of it in the water which the people drank, reproached Aaron sharply with his weakness in consenting thus to the people's request; stood at the gate of the Camp, and said, Who is on the Lord's side? let him come unto me. And all the Sons of Levi gathered themselves together unto him, took every man his sword, and passing backwards and forwards through the Camp, they killed all whom they met without distinction, and there fell of the people this day " about three and twenty thousand men.

But the Hebrew, Samaritan, Chaldee, Septuagint, and greatest part of the old Greek and Latin Fathers, instead of three and twenty, read three thousand.

The Hebrews without doubt[2] intended upon this occasion to imitate the worship of the God Apis, which they had seen in Egypt[3]. This false Deity was adored under the figure of a real and living Bull, and under the form of one made artificially; and lastly under the figure of a Man with a Bull's head: and it is certain, that several of the ancient Fathers[4], speaking of the Golden Calf, expressed themselves as if there had been no more than the Head of a Calf or Bull. Aureum caput bovis, says Lactantius, and, bibulum caput, says Tertullian; and, conflatum est bibulum caput. But however this may be, it must be agreed, that they designed to make a superstitious figure, with an intention to pay an idolatrous worship to it, as they sufficiently demonstrate in these words, Behold, Israel, these are the Gods, which brought thee up out of the land of Egypt.

Monceau in his book intitled Aaron purgatus, has endeavoured to shew, that the Golden Calf made by Aaron, was a figure in all respects like the Cherubims, upon which, as he pretends, the Lord sat, when he appeared to Moses on Mount Sinai. These Cherubims, in his account of them, were winged Oxen, after the model whereof Moses afterwards made the Cherubims of the Mercy-seat. This is the particular fancy of this Author. He adds, that Aaron's sin did not consist so much in making the Golden Calf, whereby he represented the Cherubims, on which the Lord was seated; but in giving the people an opportunity of paying a superstitious and idolatrous Worship: that the people without sin might have adored the Lord at the sight of this Cherub, or Golden Calf; and that his crime lay only in transferring the Worship which was due to God alone, to a creature, and sensible figure. He moreover is of opinion, that the Golden Calves made by Jeroboam, after the separation of the ten Tribes, were real Cherubims, and that neither Jeroboam nor the ten Tribes forsook the Worship of the Lord by receiving that of the Golden Calf; but only made a Schism, by separating from their Brethren, who at Jerusalem worshipped the same God seated on the Cherubims, whom the other Tribes adored as seated on the Golden Calves at Dan and Bethel. This is a very singular opinion, and has been justly censured and opposed by several Authors.

Aaron when he declared the Feast of the Golden Calf, said to the people, To-morrow will be a feast unto the Lord. They who endeavour to excuse this High Priest observe, that he made use of the word Jehovah, to try, say some Interpreters[5], whether he could induce the people to worship God in the presence of this Calf, as if this figure had been consecrated to the true God; but the people did not stop there, they paid their adorations to a Calf that eateth hay: [Ps. cvi. 19, 20.] They made a Calf in Horeb, and worshipped the molten Image: thus they turned their glory into the similitude of a Calf that eateth hay. It is sure very vain to attempt the making any apology for for Aaron upon this occasion: He does not excuse [Deut. ix. 20.] himself, and we read in Deuteronomy, that God was provoked at his sin, and would have slain him, if Moses had not made use of his prayers to disarm the anger of the Lord.

Some Rabbins[6] inform us, that Moses having reduced the Golden Calf to powder, and thrown the dust of it into the brook of Horeb, all, who drank of this water, and were guilty of worshipping this Idol, experienced the same effects, that the waters of jealousy produced upon such women, as were guilty of adultery. They were smitten with ulcers, whereby they were distinguish'd by Moses, and gave him an opportunity of chastising them with the utmost severity. Others[7] maintain, that by drinking of this water, the most zealous worshippers of the Golden Calf saw with amazement their beards turn of a goldcolour, and this mark, they say, was transmitted to their Children[8].

Nam rutilans auro monstrabat barba nocentes, Dum patulo latices fluminis ore bibunt.

The Golden Calves of Jeroboam the Son of Nebat. This Prince having been acknowledged King by the ten Tribes of Israel, and intending to separate these Tribes for ever from the house of David, thought fit to provide new Gods for them, whom they might worship in their own Country, without being obliged to go to the Temple of Jerusalem, there to pay their adoration. " He said in his heart, Now shall " the [1 Kings xii. 26, 27, 28, &c. In the year of the world 3030, before J. C. 970, before the vulgar Æra 974.] Kingdom return to the house of " David: If this people go up to do sacrifice in the house of the Lord at Jerusalem, then shall the heart of this " people turn again unto their Lord, even " unto Rehoboam King of Judah, and they shall kill me, and go again to " Rehoboam King of Judah. Whereupon he made two Calves of Gold, and " said unto the people, Behold thy Gods, " O Israel, which brought thee up out " of the land of Egypt. And he set the " one in Bethel, and the other put he in " Dan, at the two extremities of his Kingdom. And this thing became a sin; " for the people went to worship before " these Calves even unto Dan and Bethel.

