[Acts xvi. 1] After Paul and Barnabas had continued for some Days at Antioch, St. Paul said to Barnabas[17], Let us return and visit our Brethren through all the Cities where we have planted the Gospel, to see in what Condition they are. Barnabas consented to this Proposal; but he had a Mind to take John Mark along with them, who had left them the Time before. This was opposed by St. Paul, and therefore caused a Separation between them. Barnabas and John Mark went together to Cyprus, and St. Paul making Choice of Silas, they cross'd over Syria and Cilicia, and came to Derbe, and afterwards to Lystra. Here they found a Disciple called Timothy, the Son of a Jewish Mother, but his Father was a Gentile, whom St. Paul took with him, and circumcised him, that he might not offend the Jews of that Country. When therefore they had gone over the Provinces of Lycaonia, Phrygia, and Galatia, the Holy Ghost would not allow them to preach the Gospel in the Proconsular Asia, which contain'd Ionia, Æolia, and Lydia. Therefore they went on to Mysia, and coming to Troas, St. Paul had here a Vision in the Night. A Man habited like a Macedonian presented himself before him, and said, Pass into Macedonia, and come to succour us. Immediately he set out on this Journey, not doubting but that God had called him into this Countrey.

Embarking therefore at Troas they sailed to Neapolis[18], a City of Macedonia, but very near the Frontiers of Thrace. Thence they came to Philippi, which is the first Roman Colony on that Side in Macedonia. Here on the Sabbath-day they went near the River, where the Jews had a Proseuche, or Place of Devotion, and where they found some religious Women, among whom was one call'd Lydda, a Dealer in Purple, who was converted, baptized, and invited Paul and his Company to lodge at her House. Another Day as they went to the same Place of Devotion, they happen'd to meet with a Maid-servant, who was possess'd with a Spirit of Python, or a Familiar, that discover'd many secret things to her. She began to follow Paul and his Company, crying out, that these Men were Servants of the most-high God, who declare to you the Way of Salvation. This she did for several Days together. At last Paul turning himself towards her said to the Spirit, I command thee in the Name of Jesus Christ to come out of the Body of this Woman; upon which it immediately left her. But the Masters of the Servant, who made great Profit by her, drew Paul and Silas before the Magistrates, and accused them of attempting to introduce a new Religion into the City. For this the Magistrates ordered them to be whipt with Rods upon the Back and Shoulders, and afterwards sent them to Prison.

Towards Midnight, as Paul and Silas were singing Hymns and Praises to God, on a sudden there was a great Earthquake, so that the Foundations of the Prison were shaken, and all the Doors flew open at the same Time, and the Fetters of the Prisoners burst asunder. The Goaler being awakened at this Noise, and seeing all the Doors open, he drew his Sword with an Intention to kill himself, imagining that all the Prisoners had made their Escape. But Paul cry'd out to him, that he should do himself no Mischief, for they were all safe. Then the Goaler entering, and finding all the Prisoners there, he brought out Paul and Silas from this Place, asking them what he must do to be saved. Paul and Silas instructing him and all his Family, gave them Baptism. After this the Goaler set before them something to eat; and when the Morning was come, the Magistrates sent him Word that he might release his Prisoners, and let them go about their Business. But Paul returned this Answer to the Officers; that after they have publickly whipp'd us with Rods, being Roman Citizens, they have thrown us into Prison, and now they would privately dismiss us: But it shall not be so, for they shall come themselves to fetch us out. The Magistrates hearing that they were Roman Citizens, came to excuse themselves; and having brought them out of Prison, they desired them to depart out of their City. Paul and Silas went first to Lydia, where having visited and comforted the Brethren, they departed from Philippi.

Then passing through Amphipolis and Apollonia, they came to Thessalonica the capital City of Macedonia, where the Jews had a Synagogue.[19] Paul enter'd therein, according to his Custom, and there preached the Gospel to them for three Sabbath-days successively. Some Jews, and several Proselytes, believed in Jesus Christ, and united themselves to Paul and Silas. But the greatest Part of the Jews, being led away by a false Zeal, rais'd a Tumult in the City, and went to the House of Jason where St. Paul lodged. But not finding him there, they took Jason and led him before the Magistrates, where they accused him of harbouring in his House People that were disobedient to the Ordinances of the Emperour, and who affirm'd, that there was another King besides him, one Jesus whom they preach'd up. But Jason having given Security to answer for the People who were accused, he was dismissed to his own House; and the Night following the Brethren conducted Paul and Silas out of the City, who went to Berea, where they began to preach in the Synagogue. The Jews of Berea heard them gladly, and many of them were converted; as also several of the Gentiles, and many Women of Distinction that were not Jewesses.

The Jews of Thessalonica being inform'd that Paul and Silas were at Berea, they came thither and animated the Mob against them; so that St. Paul was forced to withdraw, leaving Silas and Timothy at Berea, to finish the Work he had so happily begun. Those who conducted St. Paul, embarked along with him, and brought him as far as Athens,[20] where he arrived in the fifty-second Year of Jesus Christ. As soon as he was got thither, he sent back those that had brought him, with Orders to tell Silas and Timothy, that he desired them to follow him to Athens, as soon as possible. In the mean Time he went into a Synagogue of the Jews, and preached to them as often as he had Opportunity; and disputing with the Philosophers who were frequent in that Place, they at last brought him before the Areopagus, accusing him of introducing a new Religion. St. Paul being come before the Judges, thus made his Defence; that among other Marks of Superstition that he had found in their City, he had observed an Altar inscribed To the unknown God. 'Twas therefore this God, whom they confessed that they knew not, that he came to make known to them. Afterwards he spoke to them of God the Creator of Heaven and Earth, of the Superintendence of a Providence, of the last Judgment, and of the Resurrection of the Dead. But after that they had heard of the Resurrection, some made Scorn of him, and others desired to hear him another Time. However some of them embraced the Christian Faith, of which Number was Dionysius a Senator of the Areopagus, and a Woman called Damaris, and several others with them.

St. Timothy came from Berea to Athens, according to the request of St. Paul; and informed him of the Persecution with which the Christians of Thessalonica were then afflicted. This obliged the Apostle to send him into Macedonia, that he might comfort them, and keep them stedfast.[21] After this St. Paul left Athens, and went to Corinth, where he lodged with one Aquila a Jew, by Trade a Tent-maker; and with him St. Paul work'd, as being of the same Trade himself. But however he did not neglect the preaching of the Gospel, which he performed every Sabbath-day in the Synagogue, shewing both to Jews and Gentiles, that Jesus was the Messiah. There he made several Converts, and he tells us himself, that he there baptized Stephanus [1 Cor. i. 14, 16, 17. xvi. 15.] and his House, with Crispus and Gaius. About the same Time Silas and Timothy came to Corinth[22], and brought him great Comfort, acquainting him with the good State of the Faithful of Thessalonica; and a little while after he wrote his first Epistle to the Thessalonians[23], which is the first of all the Epistles that he wrote. Therein he comforts the Faithful of Thessalonica, he commends their Zeal, Constancy, and Charity towards all the Christians of Macedonia; he gives them some Advice concerning the Use of Marriage, the avoiding Idleness, the Manner of Mourning for the Dead, the Cautions they must use not to be surprized by Antichrist, and concerning several other Points.

The second Epistle to the Thessalonians was written[24] not long after the first. He wrote it to dissipate the Apprehensions that some false Teachers had inspired them with, that the World was just going to have an End; for which they even produced a suppositious Letter of the Apostles, to confirm their Assertions. He reproves those that live in Idleness, and exhorts the Thessalonians patiently to endure their Persecution. St. Paul now finding himself encouraged by the Presence of Silas and Timothy, went on with the Work of his Ministry with new Ardor, shewing and proving, that Jesus Christ was the true Messiah. But the Jews opposing him with blasphemous and opprobrious Words, he shook his Clothes at them, and said, Your Blood be upon your own Head; as for me, I am innocent of it. From henceforth I shall go to the Gentiles. He then quitted the House of Aquila, and went to lodge with one called Titus Justus, who was originally a Gentile, but one that feared God. In the mean Time the Lord encouraged him by a Vision, and told him, that in Corinth he had much People; and this was the Reason that he continued there eight Months.

[Acts xix. 1, 2, 3, &c.] But Gallio the Proconsul of Achaia being at Corinth, the Jews of Corinth rose up against Paul, and brought him to his Acts xviii. 1, 2, 3, &c. Tribunal[25], accusing him of attempting to introduce a new Religion among them. But Gallio sent them away again, saying he would not meddle with Disputes that were foreign to his office. Paul continued still some Time at Corinth, but at last he went for Jerusalem, where he had a Mind to be present at the Feast of Pentecost. Before he went on Ship-board he cut off his Hair at Cenchrea, a Port of Corinth[26], because he had compleated his Vow of Nazariteship, in which he had engaged himself. He arrived at Ephesus with Aquila and Priscilla, from whence he went to Cæsarea of Palestine, and thence to Jerusalem. Here having performed his Devotions, he came to Antioch, where he stayed some Time; and then passing from thence, he made a Progress through all the Churches of Galatia and Phrygia successively. And having gone over the higher Provinces of Asia, he returned to Ephesus, where he abode three Years; that is, from the Year of Christ 54, to the Year 57.

At St. Paul's Arrival at Ephesus, he found there some Disciples that had been initiated by Apollos, who had only baptized them with the Baptism of John the Baptist. St. Paul instructed them, baptized them with the Baptism of Jesus Christ, and layed his Hands on them; upon which they received the Holy Ghost, the Gift of Languages, and of Prophecy. He afterwards went into the Synagogue, and preached to the Jews for three Months, endeavouring to convince them that Jesus Christ was the Messiah. But as he found them very obstinate, he separated himself from them, and taught daily in the School of one Tyrannus. He did not omit to go by Day or Night, even to private Houses, to confirm those that believed, and to convince the Unbelievers, working with his Hands at the same Time, that he might not be burthensome to any. He did there several Miracles; even so much as that the Linnen that had but touched his body, being afterwards apply'd to the Sick, they were presently cured of their Diseases, or delivered from the Devils that possessed them. He also suffered much there, as well from the Jews as the Gentiles; and he himself informs us, that after the manner of Men he fought with Beasts at Ephesus, that is to say, that he was exposed to wild Beasts in the Amphitheatre[27]; so that it was expected he should have been devoured by them, had not God miraculously deliver'd him.

Some are of Opinion,[28] that the Fight mention'd by St. Paul, 1 Cor. xv. 31, 32. was nothing else but the Scuffle he had with Demetrius the Silver-Smith and his Companions, who were disappointed in their Attempt of putting the Apostle to Death. But this Opinion cannot be supported, since his first Epistle to the Corinthians, wherein this Fight is mentioned, was written before that Sedition raised by Demetrius the Silver-Smith. St. Jerome[29] by these Beasts understands the Demons, who raised up an infinite Number of Enemies against St. Paul.

But the most natural Sense of the Text is this, that he was exposed to Beasts at Ephesus, and was delivered from them by a Miracle. This was the Opinion of St. Chrysostome, of Theodoret, of Ambrosiaster, of St. Cyprian[30], of St. Hilary[31], and of most modern Commentators. Nicephorus[32] quotes the Apocryphal Book of the Travels of St. Paul, which implies, that Jerome Governour of Ephesus condemned the Apostle to be expos'd to wild Beasts. Being in Prison, he was visited in the Night-Time by two Women called Tabula and Artemilla, who requir'd Baptism of him. He freed himself from his Bonds, went out of Prison as far the Sea-shore, where he baptized them. He returned to Prison, and put on his Fetters again without any one perceiving it. When he was expos'd in the Theatre, they let loose a Lion at him, which went to him and lay down at his Feet; and several other Beasts did in like Manner. At the same Time there fell such a violent Storm of Hail, that many that were present were kill'd by it, Jerome himself was converted, and received Baptism. The Antients have often spoke of this Apocryphal Book of the Travels of St. Paul; yet however we cannot much relie upon it.

'Twas during the Time of his Abode at Ephesus that he wrote his Epistle to the Galatians[33], whom he had converted, and whom false Teachers had seduced and disturbed, persuading them that to attain Salvation, they ought to be circumcised, and submit themselves to the Observation of the whole Law. St. Paul therefore writ to them with much Zeal and Earnestness, magnifying his Apostleship, and painting their false Teachers in very lively Colours. He proves by the Scriptures, that Christians were exempt from the Yoke of the Law. He adds several Exhortations for regulating their Manners, and for the Conduct of their Lives. He writ it all with his own Hand, whereas his usual Custom was to make Use of an Amanuensis in the Writing of his other Epistles.

After this St. Paul purposed, at the Instigation of the Holy Ghost, to pass through [Acts xix. 21, 22. Acts xix. 23, 24.] Macedonia and Achaia, and afterwards to go to Jerusalem, saying, that after he had been there, he must also see Rome. And having sent Timothy and Erastus before into Macedonia, he tarry'd for some Time in Asia. During this Time he received Intelligence, that domestick Troubles were risen in the Church of Corinth, that Divisions reign'd amongst them, and that Abuses had begun to creep in. This made him resolve to write them his first Epistle[34], in which he reproves the Corinthians for their Divisions, for the extravagant Liberty that some took in eating Meats offered to Idols, without concerning themselves about the Scandal it gave to their Brethren. He exclaims against the incestuous Person that had marry'd his Mother-in-Law, and against those that did not scruple to implead their Brethren before secular Tribunals; against those that were puffed up with Pride, because of the supernatural Gifts that God had bestow'd on them; lastly against the Disorders that had obtained in their Assemblies, where every one pretended to speak, and even the Women undertook the Province of teaching in Publick. After having given Directions for correcting those Abuses, he reads them excellent Lessons for the reforming of their Manners. This Letter was written at Ephesus, and sent to the Corinthians by Stephanas, Fortunatus, and Achaicus.

Before St. Paul left Ephesus, the Way of the Lord was disturbed by a Sedition raised by Demetrius the Silver-Smith, whose chief Trade consisted in making little Models of the Temple of Diana at Ephesus, which he sold to Strangers and Pilgrims, who flock'd from all Parts to see the famous Temple of Ephesus, which pass'd for one of the Wonders of the World. First he tamper'd with the other Workmen and Silver-Smiths, representing to them, that the Religion which St. Paul preached would ruin all their Traffick, by subverting the Worship of their Goddess. From the Workmen the Spirit of Mutiny spread among the other People, and presently the whole City was in an Uproar. They hurried away Gaius and Aristarchus to the Theatre, who were the Macedonians that had accompanied St. Paul in his Journey. St. Paul would have presented himself among them, but his Friends dissuaded him from it. The Magistrate of the City, or the Town-Clerk as the Text has it, had much ado to be heard by them, and to appease the Tumult; telling the People, that if Demetrius had any Thing particular to lay to the Charge of any one, that hindered the Worship of their Godess Diana, he might have Recourse to the Proconsul, and not raise a Sedition in the said City. Having said this, he dismissed the Assembly, and St. Paul taking his Leave of the Disciples, departed to go to Macedonia[35].

[2 Cor. ii. 12.] He embarked at Troas, and took Timothy with him, with whom he passed into Macedonia. Titus came thither to him, and acquainted [2 Cor. vii. 5, 6, 7. 2 Cor. vii. 6——15.] him with the good Effects that his Letter had produced among the Corinthians; and told him that the Collections were now ready, that had been made by the Church of Corinth for the Faithful in Palestine. This engaged him to write a second Letter to the Corinthians[36], in which he exalts himself against those false Teachers, that had endeavoured to vilifie and depreciate him in the Minds of the Corinthians. He sets forth the Usefulness of his Ministry, and speaks of himself with some Advantage, but yet with great Modesty. He speaks of his Revelations, of his Disinterestedness, of his Persecutions, of his Sufferings. He exhorts the Corinthians to Works of Penance and Mortification, lest when he comes himself, he should be obliged to use his Power against the Offenders. He grants a Pardon to the incestuous Person, and exhorts the Corinthians to have their Alms in a Readiness, that they might be no Hindrance to him at his Arrival at Corinth. This Letter was sent by Titus, to whom he joyn'd a Brother, whom the Churches had associated with him, to collect the Alms of the Faithful. Some think this Brother was Silas, others Barnabas, and others St. Luke.

St. Paul having passed through Macedonia [Acts xx. 2.] , came into Greece, or Achaia, and there continued three Months. He visited the Faithful of Corinth, and having received their Alms, as he was upon the Point of returning into Macedonia, he writ his Epistle to the Romans[37], in which he chiefly applies himself to explain the Doctrine of Grace and Predestination. He shows, that it was neither the Works of the Law, that have merited to the faithful Jews the Grace of their Vocation, nor yet the good Moral Works that might have been practised by the Gentile Philosophers, that have merited for them the same Favour; but that it was to the meer Grace of God that they ow'd this Advantage. St. Paul had not yet been at Rome, when he wrote this Epistle to the Romans; but he promises to come to see them, and salutes many of the Faithful of this Church. The Letter was dictated by St. Paul, and written by Tertius. 'Tis thought it was carry'd by Phebe the Deaconess of the Church of Chenchrea; St. Paul recommends her herein to the Romans in a particular Manner:

[Acts xx. 6, 7.] At last he left Greece and came into Macedonia[38], intending to be at Jerusalem at the Feast of Pentecost. He stay'd some Time at Philippi, and there celebrated the Feast of the Passover. From hence he embarked and came to Troas, where he continued a Week. On the first Day of the Week the Disciples being assembled to break Bread, St. Paul being to depart the Day following, made a Discourse to them which held till Midnight. During this Time a young Man call'd Eutychus happening to sit in a Window, and fall asleep, fell down three Stories high, and was killed by the Fall. St. Paul came down to him, embraced him, and restored him to Life again. Then he went up again, broke Bread and eat it, and held on speaking to them till Day-break, at which Time he departed. Those of his Company took Ship at Troas, but as for himself he went on Foot as far as Assos, otherwise call'd Apollonia, and then embarked along with them at Mitylene. From whence he came to Miletus, whither the Priests of the Church of Ephesus came to see him; for he had not Time to go to them, because he was desirous of being at Jerusalem at the Feast of Pentecost.

[Acts xxi. 1, 2, &c.] When these Bishops and Priests were arrived at Miletus, St. Paul discoursed with them, saying he was going to Jerusalem, without certainly knowing what should happen to him; but he did not doubt but that he had much to suffer there, since in all the Cities the Holy Ghost had given him to understand, that Chains and Afflictions waited for him there. But he declared to them, that all this did not terrifie him, provided he could but fulfil his Ministry. After having exhorted them to Patience, and having prayed along with them, he went on Board, going strait to Coos, then to Rhodes, and thence to Patara, where finding a Ship that was bound for Phœnicia, they went on Board, and arrived safe at Tyre. Here they made a Stop for seven Days, and then going on they arrived at Ptolemais, and thence to Cæsarea, where they found Philip the Evangelist, who was one of the seven Deacons. While St. Paul was there, the Prophet Agabus arrived there also from Judæa; and having taken St. Paul's Girdle, he bound his own Hands and Feet with it, saying, Thus shall the Jews of Jerusalem bind the Man that owns this Girdle, and shall deliver him up to the Gentiles. But St. Paul's Constancy was not shaken by all these Predictions, and he told them, that he was ready, not only to suffer Bonds, but Death it self for the Name of Christ.

When he was come to Jerusalem the Brethern received him with Joy; and the Day following he went to see St. James the Lesser, Bishop of Jerusalem, at whose House all the Priests assembled. Paul gave them an Account of what God had done among the Gentiles by his Ministry. Then St. James informed him, that the converted Jews were strangely prejudiced against him, because they were informed he taught the Jews that lived among the Gentiles, and out of Palestine, that they ought to renounce the Law of Moses, and no longer circumcise their Children. Therefore, continued St. James, we must assemble them here together, where you may speak to 'em your self, and undeceive them. Moreover do this, that your Actions may verify your Words: Join your self to four Men that are here, and who have taken upon them a Vow of Nazariteship; and that you may share in the Merit of their Action, contribute to the Charge of their Purification, and purifie your self also, that you may offer with them the Offerings and Sacrifices ordained for the Purification of a Nazarite. See what is said before in the Article NARAZITE.

St. Paul exactly followed this Advice of St. James, and on the next Day went into the Temple, where he declared to the Priests, that in seven Days these four Nazarites would compleat their Vow of Nazariteship, and that he would contribute his Share of the Charges. But towards the End of these seven Days, the Jews of Asia having seen him in the Temple, moved all the People against him, laid hold of him, and cried out; Help ye Israelites, this is he that teaches every where against the Law, and against the Temple, and has brought Gentiles into the Temple, and prophaned this holy Place. At the same Time they laid hold on him, shut the Gates of the Temple, and would have killed him, had not Lysias the Tribune of the Roman Garrison there run to his Rescue, took him out of their Hands, and brought him into the Citadel. St. Paul being upon the Steps, desired the Tribune to suffer him to speak to the People, who followed him thither in a great Multitude. The Tribune permitted him, and St. Paul making a Sign with his Hand, made a Speech in Hebrew, and related to 'em the Manner of his Conversion, and his Mission from God to go and preach to the Gentiles. At his mentioning the Gentiles, the Jews began to cry out; Away with this wicked Fellow out of the World, for he is not worthy to live.

Immediately the Tribune made him come into the Castle, and ordered that he should be put to the Question by whipping him, that he might confess the Matter, why the Jews were so incensed against him. Being now bound, he said to the Tribune; Is it lawful for you to whip a Roman Citizen before you hear him? The Tribune hearing this, caused him to be unbound, and calling together the Priests and the Senate of the Jews, he brought Paul before them, that he might know the Occasion of this Tumult of the People. Then Paul began to speak to them to this Purpose. Brethren, I have lived in all good Conscience before God until this Day. At which Words Ananias Son of Nebedeus, who was the Chief-priest, ordered the Bystanders to give him a Blow in the Face. At which St. Paul said to him, God shall smite thee, thou whited Wall; for sittest thou to judge me after the Law, and forgetting the Duty of a Judge, commandest me to be smitten contrary to the Law? Those that were present said to him, Revilest thou God's High-priest? St. Paul excused himself by saying, that he did not know he was the High-priest, for it is written, Thou shalt not speak Evil of the Ruler of thy People. Then perceiving that Part of the Assembly were Sadducees, and Part Pharisees, he cried out, Brethren I am a Pharisee, the Son of a Pharisee; of the Hope and Resurrection of the Dead I am called in Question.

Then the Assembly being divided in Interests and Opinions, and the Clamour increasing more and more, the Tribune gave the Word to the Soldiers, and they fetched him away out of the Assembly, and brought him into the Castle. The following Night the Lord appeared to Paul, and said to him; Take Courage, for as you have bore Testimony of me at Jerusalem, so must you also at Rome. The Day following more than forty Jews engaged themselves by an Oath, not to eat or drink till they had killed Paul. They came therefore, and made known their Design to the Priests and chief of the People, saying to them; To Morrow cause Paul to appear before you, as if you would inquire more accurately into his Affair, and before he can come to you we will lye in wait for him and kill him. But St. Paul being informed of this Conspiracy by his Sister's Son, acquainted the Tribune with it, who gave Orders that the Night following he should be sent to Cæsarea, to Felix the Governor, who had his ordinary Residence there. Felix having received Letters from Lysias, and being informed that St. Paul was of Cilicia, he told him he [Acts xxiv.] would hear him when his Accusers should arrive.

Five Days after Ananias the High-priest, and some of the Senators, came to Cæsarea, bringing with them Tertullus the Orator to plead against Paul. Tertullus accused him as being a seditious Person, a Disturber of the publick Peace, who had put himself at the Head of the Sect of the Nazarens, and who made no Scruple even to profane the Temple. But St. Paul easily refuted all these Calumnies, and defied his Accusers to prove any of the Articles which they had exhibited against him. He ended his Discourse with saying, that for the Doctrine of the Resurrection from the Dead his Adversaries would have him condemned. Felix having heard these Discourses, put off the farther hearing of his Cause to another Time, and said he would determine the Matter when Lysias should come from Jerusalem. Some Days after Felix and his Wife Drusilla, who was a Jewess, being at Cæsarea, they made Paul come before them, to hear what he had to say concerning the Faith in Jesus Christ. Paul spoke to 'em of Justice, Charity, and of the last Judgment, in such Manner that Felix was terrified at it, made him finish his Discourse, and told him he would hear him farther when he was more at Leisure. And being in hopes that St. Paul would have purchased his Liberty with a Sum of Money, he used him well, often sent for him, and had frequent Conversations with him.

But two Years thus passing away[39], Felix made Way for his Successor Portius Festus[40]; and being willing to oblige the Jews, he left Paul in Prison. Festus being come into his Province, three Days after he went to Jerusalem, whither the chief Priests desired him to send for Paul, having a Design to fall upon him by the Way. But Festus told them they might come to Cæsarea, where he would do them Justice. As soon as he returned to this City, the Day after he made Paul appear before the Tribunal. Here the Jews accused him of several Crimes, of which they were able to prove nothing. And Paul so well defended himself, that Festus could find nothing in him that deserved Punishment. He proposed to him to go to Jerusalem, and be tried there; but he answered, that he was now at the Emperor's Tribunal where he ought to be tried, and that he appealed to Cæsar. Festus having conferred with his Council, told him; that to Cæsar he had appealed, and therefore to Cæsar he should go.

Some Days after King Agrippa and his Queen Berenice coming to Cæsarea to salute Festus, the Governor spoke to 'em concerning Paul, telling them he did not know what he was guilty of, nor how he should represent his Case to the Emperor. Agrippa having desired to hear him, Festus sent for him, and told him he had Liberty to speak. Then St. Paul related to [Acts xxv. Acts xxvii.] Agrippa the Manner in which he had been converted, on his Journey to Damascus. He spoke to him of Jesus Christ, and of his Resurrection. But while he was enlarging upon these Things, Festus cried out to him; Paul you are besides your self, your much Learning has made you mad. To this Paul replied; I am not mad, most excellent Festus, but speak the Words of Sobernes and Truth: And King Agrippa is well acquainted with these Things. O King Agrippa, added he, do you not believe the Prophets? I know you believe them. Agrippa then made Answer to Paul, you have almost persuaded me to become a Christian. I would to God, says Paul, that not only almost, but altogether you were such as I am, except these Bonds; and not you only, but all those that now hear me. Then King Agrippa, Berenice, and Festus rose up, and Agrippa said to Festus, This Man might have been acquitted, and set at Liberty, if he had not appealed to Cæsar.

As soon therefore as it was resolved to send Paul into Italy, he was put on Board a Ship of Adramyttium, a City of Mysia; and having passed over the Seas of Cilicia and Pamphylia, they arrived at Myra in Lycia, where having found a Ship that was bound for Italy, they went on Board. But the Season being far advanced, for it was at least the latter End of September, and the Wind proving contrary, they arrived with Difficulty enough at the Fair-havens, a Port in the Isle of Crete. St. Paul advised them to winter there, but others were of Opinion they had better go to Phenice, another Harbour of the same Island. But as they were going thither, the Wind drove them upon a little Island called Clauda, where the Mariners fearing to strike upon some Bank of Sand, they lowered their Mast, and surrendered themselves to the Mercy of the Waves. Three Days after they threw over Board the Tackling of the Ship. Neither the Sun or Stars had appeared now for fourteen Days. In this extream Danger an Angel appeared to St. Paul, and assured him that God had given him the Lives of all that were in the Ship with him, which were in all two Hundred and seventy six Souls. St. Paul told 'em of his Vision, exhorted them to take Courage, and promised them that they should all come alive into an Island, and that the Vessel only should be lost. On the fourteenth Night the Seamen cast out the Lead, and thought by their Sounding that they approached near to some Land. They were attempting to save themselves by going into the Boat; but St. Paul told the Centurion and the Soldiers, that except the Sailors continued in the Ship, their Lives could not be saved. Then the Soldiers cut the Ropes of the Boat, and let her drive.

About Day-break St. Paul persuaded them to take some Nourishment, assuring them that not a Hair of their Heads should perish. At his Example they took some Food, and when they had eat they lightened their Vessel, by throwing the Corn into the Sea. Day being come, they perceived a Shore, where they resolved, if possible, to bring the Ship to. But the Vessel having struck against a Neck of Land that run out into the Sea, so that the Head remained fixed, and the Stern was exposed to the Mercy of the Waves; the Soldiers fearing lest any of the Prisoners should make their Escape by Swimming, were for putting them all to the Sword. But the Centurion would not suffer them, being willing to save Paul; and he commanded those that could swim to throw themselves first out of the Vessel, and others got Planks, so that all of 'em came safe to shore. Then they found that the Island was called Malta, the Inhabitants of [Acts xxviii. 1, 2, 3, &c.] which received them with great Humanity.

They being all very wet and cold, a great Fire was lighted to dry them; and Paul having gathered up a handful of Sticks, and put them upon the Fire, a Viper leapt out of the Fire, and took hold of his Hand. Then the barbarous People said to one another, without doubt this Man is a Murderer, and though he has been saved from the Shipwrack, yet divine Vengeance still pursues him, and will not suffer him to live. But Paul shaking the Viper into the Fire, received no Injury from it. The People seeing this, changed their Opinion of him, and took him for a God; which Opinion of theirs was more confirmed, when he cured the Father of Publius, the chief Man of the Island, of a Fever and Bloody-Flux. After which Miracle they all brought out their Sick to him, and they were healed. We are assured that from this Time no venomous Creatures have been found in the Isle of Malta. See MALTA.

At the End of three Months they embarked again, and arrived, first at Syracuse, then at Rhegium, and lastly at Puteo li. Here St. Paul found some Christians, who detained him for seven Days, then he set out for Rome. The Brethren of this City having been informed of St. Paul's Arrival, came out to meet him as far as Appiiforum, and the three Taverns. And when he was come to Rome, he was allowed to dwell where he pleased, having a Soldier to guard him, who was joined to him with a Chain. Three Days afterwards St. Paul desired the Chief of the Jews there to come to him. He related to 'em in what Manner he had been seized in the Temple of Jerusalem, and the Necessity he was under of appealing to Cæsar. The Jews told him, that as yet they had received no Information about his Affair; but as for Christianity, they knew nothing of it yet, but only that it was spoken against every where, and that they should be very willing to have an Account of it from him. A Day was appointed for this, and St. Paul preached to 'em concerning the Kingdom of God, endeavouring to convince them from Moses and the Prophets, that Jesus was the Messiah. Some of 'em believed what he had said to 'em, and others disbelieved, so that they returned from him divided among themselves.

Paul dwelt for two whole Years at Rome[41], in a Lodging that he hired, where he received all that came to him, preaching the Kingdom of God, and the Religion of Jesus Christ, without any Interruption. Hitherto we have had the Acts of the Apostles for our Guide, in compiling the History of St. Paul; what we shall add hereafter will be mostly taken from his own Epistles. His Captivity did not a little contribute to the Advancement of Religion, and he converted several Persons even [Philip. i. 12, 14, 18. iv. 22.] of the Emperor's Court. 'Tis said that while he was at Rome, he had a great Correspondence by Letters with Seneca[42]; but the Letters that are now extant are rejected by every Body, though St. Austin[43] and St. Jerome[44] seem to have thought them genuine, and therefore for this Reason St. Jerome has placed Seneca in the List of Ecclesiastical Writers. The Church has never acknowledged those that are ascribed to St. Paul, as written to Seneca; and those that we now have under Seneca's Name, are not worthy of that great Man. These Letters have not the Style of either of those Authors; and without mentioning the Inconsistencies that Baronius has observed therein, Lipsius[45] maintains, that both of 'em discover the Hand and Style of the same Impostor.

The Christians of Philippi in *Macedo*nia hearing that St. Paul was a Prisoner at [Phil. ii. 25. iv. 18.] Rome, they sent Epaphroditus their Bishop to him, to bring him Money, and otherwise to assist him in their Name. Epaphroditus fell sick at Rome, and when he went back to Macedonia, the Apostle sent by him a Letter to the Philippians[46], in which he gives them Thanks for the seasonable Relief they had sent him, speaks to them of the Fruits of his Bonds, and exhorts them to live as Children of Light in the midst of the Heathen that surrounded them. He fortifies them against the false Teachers of Judaism, conjures them to live together in a perfect Union, and in a sincere Humility. He expresses some Hopes that he should soon come to see them; for though he could wish to die, yet he perceived that God would still continue his Life.

Onesimus the Slave of Philemon having run away from his Master's House, which was at Colossus in Phrygia, came to Rome and found out St. Paul, and was very serviceable to him. St. Paul made him a Convert, and sent him back to his Master Philemon with a Letter[47]. See the Articles ONESIMUS and PHILEMON. He also sent a Letter by him to the Believers in the City of Colossae[48]. St. Paul had not preached in this City, and was not personally acquainted with the Faithful there; but he had been informed by Epaphras, who was then a Prisoner at Rome with him, and who had been their Apostle, in what Manner they had received the Word of Truth; and at the same time, how the Enemy had there sown Tares among the good Seed. For some false Apostles would have persuaded them, that we ought not to approach to God by Jesus Christ, because he is raised too high above us; but by the Angels, who (they said) were our Mediators. St. Paul therefore writ to them, to undeceive them. He exalts the Majesty of Jesus Christ, and his Quality of being a Mediator. He gives them Cautions against these false Teachers, and lays down excellent Rules for the Conduct of their Lives. He recommends to them, to cause his Letter to them to be read in the Church of Laodicea, and to read in their Church that which the Laodiceans had written to him. Some have thought, that St. Paul had also written to the Laodiceans. See the Article LAODICEA.

'Tis not known by what Means St. Paul was delivered from his Prison, and discharged from the Accusation that the Jews had brought against him. There is great Probability, that they durst not prosecute him before the Emperor, not having sufficient Proof of what they alledged against him. This is certain, that he was set at Liberty in the sixty-third Year of Christ, after having been two Years a Prisoner at Rome. He was still in this City, or at least in Italy, when he writ his Epistle to the Hebrews[49]. He addresses it to the Faithful of Palestine, to confirm them against the Evils they were forced to suffer, from the unbelieving Jews. His chief End in his Epistle is to shew, that true Justification cannot proceed from the Observation of the Law, but from Faith in Jesus Christ, and from his Grace; and that the ancient Priesthood and the Legal Ceremonies, are all abolished by the Priesthood of Jesus Christ, and by the Christian Religion.

Very many Difficulties have been started upon this Epistle. It has been ascribed to St. Clement, to St. Luke, to St. Mark, to St. Barnabas, to Apollos, to another Paul different from the Apostle; but lastly, it has been generally imputed to St. Paul the Apostle of the Gentiles. It has been disputed what Language it was writ in, whether Greek or Hebrew. Some have thought that it was first written in Hebrew by St. Paul, and then translated into Greek by St. Clement, or some other. Others have maintained, that the Original of this Epistle was the Syriac that is still extant. 'Tis pretty well agreed, that it was written before the Destruction of the Temple of Jerusalem; but the Time when, and the Place where, are Circumstances not so well agreed on. He speaks therein of the Brethren of Italy; but it is unknown [Hebr. xiii. 24.] whether it was composed at Rome, while St. Paul was in his Bonds, or after he was at Liberty, in some other City of Italy. Lastly, there has been a long Dispute about the Authenticalness of this Epistle. The Arians maintain'd it was not St. Paul's; the Marcionites pretended it was corrupted; the Greeks have for a long time received it as canonical, but the Latins have hesitated for several Ages. This is not a Place to inquire scrupulously into these Points; the Commentaries upon this Epistle may be consulted, and our Preface to the same Epistle.

[Hebr. xiii. 24. 1 Tim. i. 3] St. Paul being out of Prison, went over Italy, and according to some of the Fathers[50], passed into Spain, then into Judea, went to Ephesus, and there left Timothy, preached in Crete, and there fix'd Titus to take care to cultivate the Church he had there planted. Probably he might also visit the Philippians, according to the Promise he had made them. And it is believed, that it was from Macedonia he writ his first Epistle to Timothy[51], in which he shews him what are the Duties of a Bishop, and gives him Advice for his particular Conduct. He recommends to him to apply himself to Study and Reading, and to drink a little Wine for the Weakness of his Stomach. He sends him Word he had excommunicated Hymenæus and Alexander, the first of which affirmed, that the Resurrection of the Dead was already over.

Some time after he wrote to Titus[52], whom he had left in Crete. He desires him to come to him at Nicopolis, from whence probably he sent this Letter. He lays before him the Duties of a Bishop, and the Qualifications he ought to have, that he might fulfil what God expected from him in this Office. He tells him he must restrain by Force those that are hardened and obstinate, and gives him several Instructions for the Management of Persons of all Conditions. The Year following he went into Asia, and came to Troas[53], where he left a Cloak and some Books, with one called Carpus, who was his Host. Thence he went to visit St. Timothy at Ephesus, then to Miletus, where he left Trophimus sick. Lastly, he went again to Rome, where the Fathers believe, that God had revealed to him he should suffer Martyrdom. He arrived here in the sixty-fifth Year of our Lord Jesus Christ.

St. Chrysostom says[54], it was reported that St. Paul going to see a Cup-bearer and a Concubine of Nero's, to convert them to the Faith, he actually made a Convert of the Concubine. This so provoked Nero, who was very fond of her, that he caused St. Paul to be apprehended and clapt into Prison. The Apostle tells us himself, in his [2 Tim. iv. 16.] second Epistle to Timothy, that when he made his first Appearance he was forsaken by all the World. In his Prison he was much assisted by Onesiphorus, who found [2 Tim. i. 16.] him at last after much Enquiry. 'Twas in this last Prison that he writ his second Epistle to Timothy, which St. Chrysostom[55] looks upon as the Apostle's last Testament[56]. He there desires Timothy to come to see him before Winter. He exhorts him to fulfil the whole Duty of a Bishop, and never to forget those Instructions he had received from him.

[Phil. ii. 24. i. 25, 26. 2 Tim. iv 12.] He tells him he had sent Tychicus to Ephesus; which gives room to conjecture, he sent him thither to deliver the Epistle he had wrote to the Ephesians, and to the other Churches of Asia[57]. His Design in this Epistle is to instruct them in the principal Mysteries of Faith, of Redemption and Justification by the Death of Christ, of free Predestination, of the calling of the Gentiles, of the Reunion of two People in one only Body, of which Jesus Christ is the Head; and of the Elevation of this Divine Head above all Creatures both spiritual and corporeal. This Epistle is perhaps the most sublime and most difficult of all those written by St. Paul.

This great Apostle at last consummated his Martyrdom, on the 29th Day of June, in the 66th Year of our Saviour Christ. He had his Head cut off at a Place called the Salvian Waters. Some have said[58], that his Head spouted out with Milk instead of Blood, and that this Miracle converted the Executioner and two others, who suffered Martyrdom along with him, or a few Days after him, that is, on the second of July; but these Particulars have not the Sanction of Antiquity to vouch for them. He was buried on the Way of Ostium, and a magnificent Church was built over his Tomb, which is in Being to this Day. His Chains were preserved at Rome with great Veneration, where they performed many Miracles [2 Tim. iv. 20.] [59].

Besides the fourteen Epistles of St. Paul, which we have mentioned in the Course of his History, Clemens Alexandrinus[60] quotes several of his Discourses which are now no more. We have seen before, that it was supposed he had writ Letters to Seneca. There is also now extant a spurious Epistle to the Laodiceans, which bears his Name in several Manuscripts. It has been pretended also, that he writ a third Epistle to the Thessalonians, a third to the Corinthians, and a second to the Ephesians. There are ascribed to him an Apocalypse and a Gospel, which were condemned by the Council at Rome under Gelasius. The Simonians had composed a Book under his Name called, The Preaching of St. Paul; and a Priest of Asia composed the Voyages of St. Paul, and of St. Thecla. But he being convicted of Imposture, was deprived of his Priesthood by the Apostle St John[61].

Peace

[Wisd. iii. 3.] PEACE, Pax. This Word is used in the Scripture in different Manners. Generally it is put for Peace and Tranquillity, either publick or private; but often it stands for the Prosperity and Happiness of this present Life. To go in Peace, to die in Peace. God give you Peace. Let Peace be within this [Ps. cxxii. 6.] House. Pray for the Peace of Jerusalem, that is, wish it all sorts of Happiness and Prosperity. Is it Peace? That is, Is all well? The Just in the other Life are in Peace; they enjoy a perfect Tranquillity, and wait in Peace for their happy Change. St. Paul in the Titles of his Epistles generally wisheth for Grace and Peace to the Faithful, to whom he writes. Gratia vobis & pax. Jesus Christ recommends to his Disciples, to have Peace with all Men, and with each other. God promises his People to water [Isai. lxvi. 12. Ezek.] them as with a River of Peace, and to make with them a Covenant of Peace. These Expressions are very intelligible.

Peacock

PEACOCK, Pavo, in Hebrew, Teuchiim[1]. Interpreters are pretty well agreed about the Signification of this Word. The Septuagint have not expressed it in their Translation. Some understand by Tuchiim a sort of Ape or Monkey. The Fleet of Solomon that went to Ophir brought back to this Prince a great Number of Peacocks, whether they had them at Ophir it self, or whether they took them in from any other Place upon their return, is altogether uncertain.

The Peacock is a tame Fowl very well known. That which makes it valuable is the Beauty of its Plumage. It has a very long Tail, diversify'd with several Colours, and adorned with many Marks at equal Distances in the Form of Eyes. It has a little Tuft or Crown upon its Head, like a bushy Tree. Its Wings are mixt with Azure and Gold-colour; its Cry is very shrill and disagreeable. 'Tis said to have the Head of a Serpent, the Train of an Angel, and the Voice of a Devil. Its Feet are ugly, and not suitable to its fine Feathers. It frequently makes a Turn, especially in Spring, to admire its Tail, the Splendor of which is increased by the Light, which does not only set off its Colours, but also multiplies them.

'Tis said the Flesh of the Peacock is not apt to corrupt. St. Austin relates[2], that being at Carthage, they served up a baked Peacock at a Table where he was. The Company had a mind to make the Experiment, whether the Flesh of this Animal would corrupt or no. They took several Pieces of the Stomach or Crop, which they set by. After some Days they inspected it; and found it as entire as at first. They kept it after that above a Month, without any Appearance or Tendency towards Corruption. Finally, at a Year's End they viewed it again, and observed no other Alteration in it, but that it was grown something drier, and a little shrunk up. Scaliger testifies the same thing, and says, that he had made the same Experiment himself.

Pearl

PEARL. The Arabians, Persians, and Turks make use of the Word Merovarid to signify Pearls. The Word Margarites, or Margarita, used by the Greeks and Latins, seems to be derived from thence. The finest Pearls are fish'd up in the Persian Gulph, now called the Sea of Catif, because of the City Catif that stands upon its Shore. They fish for them also in the Island of Kis, and upon the Coast of Babrein, so called from the City of that Name, which lies upon the Borders of Arabia. Idumæa and Palestine being not far from this Sea, it is not to be wonder'd at that Pearls were so well known to Job, and the Hebrews. Since that Time they have been found in several other Places; and now many are brought from America. 'Tis said that the smaller Pearls, that is, those Shell-fish which are called Pearls, follow the great ones called Mother-of- Pearls, like Bees. They are known to be big with Pearls, when their Shells have Bunches on each Side.

The Oriental Pearls have a Water which inclines towards Carnation, those of America are green, and those of the North are gridelin. Pearls are found in Bohemia, in Rivers of fresh Water, and in Silesia, and in Lorrain. They are sometimes found also in common Oysters. Pearls, that have been long wore, turn yellow, and moulder away at the end of fourscore or an hundred Years. They are made in the Mother-of-Pearl, by Beds, after the manner of Onions. They have discovered in some Mother-of-Pearls as far as an hundred and fifty, but not all perfect. Some are compleat, and others but just beginning to be form'd. They come to Perfection in the Oyster. They are often found in the Sea-sand. 'Tis an ancient Error, that Pearls are formed of the Dew, and that they are lost in the Sea. We have treated of the Nature of Pearls in a Dissertation made on purpose, and inserted in the Journal of Trevoux.

[Prov. iii. 15. viii. 11. xx. 15.] As to the Passages of Scripture, wherein Pearls are spoken of, Job says[1], No mention shall be made of Coral, or of Pearls, for the Price of Wisdom is above Rubies. Solomon has nothing finer or more precious than Pearls, by which to extol the Value of Wisdom. He makes use of the Simile of Pearls three times, to express his Esteem for Wisdom.; and says, that a good Woman comes as far off, is as hard to find, and of as great Value as Pearls. Jeremiah speaking of the Nazarites of Jerusalem, says[2], that they were more ruddy or more vermilion than Pearls[3]. 'Tis known that Pearls are not commonly ruddy; but we have observed before, that the Oriental Pearls incline towards Carnation; which is exactly what the Prophet intended, by commending the vermilion Complexion and wholsome Faces of the Nazarites.

THE BREAST PLATE OF JUDGEMENT.

[Matth. vii. 6.] Jesus Christ forbids his Apostles to cast their Pearls before Swine. Neque mittatis margaritas vestras ante porcos. That is to say, expose not the sacred Truths and Mysteries of Religion to the Raillery of prophane Libertines and hardened Atheists. The Author of Ecclesiasticus means the same Thing, when he advises us not to speak when we [Ecclus. xxxii. 6.] find the Persons we speak to not disposed to hear, Ubi auditus non est, ne effundas sermonem. The Hebrews call Pearls Peninim, the Greeks Margaritæ, the Latins Unio, Margarita, or Perula. We find Margaritum in Prov. xxv. 12. but the Hebrew has[4] a Chali of Gold. Now Chali probably signifies a Collar or Necklace. As for the Word Peninim, it is mentioned Job xxviii. 18. Prov. iii. 15. viii. 2. xx. 15. xxxi. 10. Lament. iv. 7. where the Seventy and the Vulgate translate it by precious Stones, or Things hid, or Ivory[5]. But certainly Peninim signifies Pearls; and the Word Pinna, which stands for the Shell-fish that produces them, is probably derived from Peninim. Pearls grow in the Sea, and in the Shells of Fishes; and precious Stones are found in Mines. These are Things of a very different Nature, and yet are often confounded.

Pectoral

PECTORAL, Rational, or Breast-plate of Judgment. They call by this Name the Piece of Embroidery of about ten Inches square[1], of very rich Work, which the High -priest of the Jews wore upon his Breast, and which was set with four Rows of precious Stones, upon every one of which was engraven the Name of one of the Tribes of Israel. The Breast-plate was double, or made of two Pieces folded one upon the other, like a kind of Purse or Bag, in which, according to the Rabbins, the Urim and Thummim was inclosed. This Piece had the Name of the Breast-plate of Judgment, probably because it discovered the Judgment and the Will of God; or because the High-priest who wore it [Prov. xxxi. 10.] was the Fountain of Justice, and put on this Ornament when he exercised his judicial Capacity in Matters of great Consequence.

The Hebrew has simply[2] Coshen, and sometimes Coshen Mishphat, which the Seventy have rendered by Logion, or Logion criseos, and St. Jerom by Rationale, or Rationale judicii. It is not well known what the literal Signification of Coshen is. 'Tis generally derived from the Arabic Casan, which signifies big, thick, and unequal, as indeed this Pectoral must be. The Reader may see what has been said upon the Article EPHOD, and what will be said upon the Article URIM and THUMMIM.

Pedagogue

[1 Cor. iv. 15.] PEDAGOGUE. This Word in our Tongue carries with it a kind of Idea of Contempt; for when we mention a Pedagogue, without any other Word to qualifie it, it expresses a Pedant, who assumes an Air of Authority over others, which does not belong to him. But among the Antients it was otherwise. With them a Pedagogue was a Person to whom they committed the Care of their Children, to lead them, to observe them, and even to instruct them in their first Rudiments. This Office of Pedagogue nearly answered to what we call a Governor or Tutor, who is always to attend his Pupil, to teach him to live, and to form his Manners upon all Occasions.

[Galat. iii. 24, 25.] St. Paul speaking to the Corinthians, says; For though you have ten Thousand Instructors (or Pedagogues) in Christ, yet have ye not many Fathers. That as to himself, he is their Father in the Faith, since he has begotten them in the Gospel. The Pedagogue indeed may have some Power over his Pupil, and may exercise some Authority over him; but he can never have the natural Inclination and Tenderness of a Father.

In his Epistle to the Galatians he says, that the Law was our Schoolmaster (or Pedagogue) to bring us unto Christ. It has pointed out Christ to us in the Scriptures, in the Figures, and in the Prophecies of the Old Testament. But since we have embraced the Faith, we have no longer any Need of Schoolmasters or Pedagogues; as they are of no further Use to young People, when they have attained to Mens Estate. But after that Faith is come, we are no longer under a Schoolmaster.

Then the Lord said to him, Son of Man, these are the Men that have Thoughts of Iniquity, and who are forming pernicious Designs against this City, saying: Have not the Houses been built a long Time? Jerusalem is the Pot, and we are the Flesh. Thus saith the Lord: You have made great Havock in this City, and have filled its Streets with dead Bodies. These Men are the Flesh, and the City is the Pot. Peleg

[Gen. xi. 16. x. 25.] PELEG, or Phaleg, Son of Eber, was born in the Year of the World 1757, before Christ 2243, before the Vulgar Æra 2247. The Scripture says his Father gave him the Name of Peleg, signifying Division, because in his Time the Earth began to be divided, whether it was that Noah had begun to distribute the Earth among his Descendants, some Years before the building of Babel[1]; or that Peleg came into the World the same Year that Babel was begun, and at the Division of Languages; or that Eber by a Spirit of Prophecy gave his Son the Name of Peleg some Years before the Tower of Babel was begun. That which here perplexes the Interpreters is, first that Peleg came into the World not above one hundred Years after the Deluge. But it should seem that the Number of Men was not then sufficient for such an Undertaking as that of Babel. Secondly, Joktan the Brother of Peleg had already thirteen Sons at the Time of the Dispersion, which happened after the Confusion of Babel. Peleg being born in the thirty-fourth Year of Eber, Gen. xi. 16. it is impossible his Brother Joktan should have such a Number of Children at the Birth of Peleg. It seems therefore that he was not born at the Time of the Dispersion. To this may be answered, that Moses has there enumerated the Names of the thirteen Sons of Joktan in Gen. x. 26. by Way of Anticipation, tho' they were not born till a good while after the Confusion of Babel. But as they possessed a very large Country, it was convenient to take Notice of them, and to name them among the other Descendants of Noah, who divided the Provinces of the East among themselves. However this were, at the Age of thirty Years Peleg begat Reu[2], and died at the Age of two Hundred and thirty nine.

Pelican

PELICAN, Pelicanus. The Author of the Commentary upon the Psalms, which bears the Name of St. Jerome[1], says, there are two Sorts of Pelicans One lives upon the Water, and feeds upon Fish, the other keeps in Desarts and feeds upon Serpents and other Reptiles Eusebius says[2], that the Pelican has a peculiar Tenderness for its young. It generally places its Nest upon a craggy Rock, that the Serpents may not come at it; but the Serpent that is an Enemy to this Bird observes the Wind, and when it blows towards the Pelican's Nest, it squirts out its Venom, and kills the young ones. The Pelican to bring them to Life again mounts up above the Clouds, and striking its Sides with its Wings, makes the Blood to come forth, which falling on its Nest through the Clouds, restores the young to Life again. St. Austin[3], and Isidore of Sevil[4], take Notice of the same Thing, but with some Diversity. They say the Pelican draws Blood from it self by striking with its Bill, and so by shedding it on its Nest brings the Young to Life. But these Histories may be placed among the Errors of the old Philosophy.

The Hebrew Word Kaath[5], which the Seventy have translated by Pelicanus, Ps. cii. 6. and Levit. xi. 18. is elsewhere translated by Mergulus, a Dipper, as Deut. xiv. 17. elsewhere by Birds, as Isai. xxxiv. 11. and elsewhere by Lions, as Zeph. ii. 14. St. Jerome has translated it by Onocrotalus in Levit. xi. 18. Isai. xxxiv. 11. and Zeph. ii. 14. Others by this Word understand the Bittern, or the Hern, or the Swan, or the Lapwing, or the Cuckow Bochart[6] thinks the Hebrew Word Kaath signifies the Pelican, a Bird of the aquatick Kind, which they say gorges its Crop with Shell-fish, and when they are opened by the Heat of its Crop, disgorges them again, that it may have the Fish to eat. Kaath comes from Kaab, which signifies to vomit.

Pella

PELLA, a City beyond Jordan. Pliny puts it in Decapolis, and commends it for its fine Waters[1]. Stephanus places it in Cœle- Syria. There is nothing inconsistent in this, no more than in what others affirm, that Pella was in Perea, in Batanea, in the Country of Basan[2]. Perhaps also that when Josephus[3] speaks of Pella in the Country of Moab, he means the City of which we are speaking, which was situate in Perea, in Batanea, in the Country of Basan, which prophane Authors sometime call Cœle-Syria, and in the Country which belonged to the Ammonites, the Brethren and Allies of the Moabites; unless he confounds Pella with Abila in the Country of Moab, called by Moses Abel-Shittim, Numb. xxxiii. 49, and by Josephus Abila, Antiq. l. iv. c. 7. l. v. c. 1. de Bello, l. v. c. 3. As to the Situation of Pella, it was between Jabesh and Gerasa, six Miles from Jabesh[4]. It was also of the Number of the Ten Cities known by Geographers, as also in the Gospel, by the Name of Decapolis.

[Matth. iv. 25. Mark v. 20.] Josephus relates[5], that under the Reign of Alexander Jannæus, the Jews were Masters of Pella, and that they destroyed it because the Inhabitants would not embrace their Religion and Ceremonies. The first Christians being told by our Saviour, that the City and Temple of Jerusalem should be demolished, took Refuge at Pella[6], as soon as they saw the Fire of War against the Romans began to be kindled. St. Epiphanius says[7], that the Disciples were warned by the Revelation of an Angel to withdraw thither. This City belonged to the Kingdom of Agrippa, who did not enter into this War but on the Side of the Romans, and to assist them at the Siege of Jerusalem.

I suspect that Pella takes its Name from Abila, or Abela. There were more Cities than one that were known by the Name of Abila; but that I mean is called by Geographers Abila of Batanea, and in Scripture Abel of the Vines. Polybius[8] distinguishes Abila from Pella, since he says, that Antiochus the Great took Pella, Kamos, Gephros, Abila, Gadara, &c. Stephanus the Geographer says, that the City of Pella had Alexander the Great for its Founder, probably in Memory of the City of Pella in Thessaly, where he had his Birth. Abila and Pella were afterwards Episcopal Cities of the second Palestine. Josephus says[9], that Pella was one of the seven Toparchies of Judæa; but elsewhere he calls it Betlephtepha[10], and Pliny gives it the same Name[11]. 'Tis unknown where Betlephtepha was. The Name of Pella is not in the Scripture, but it is famous enough to deserve a Place here.

Pelusium

PELUSIUM, a City of Egypt, situate at the Mouth of the most Eastern Arm of the Nile, and the nearest to Palestine. Pelusium, otherwise Damietta, was as it were the Key of Egypt, towards Phœnicia and Judæa. Ezekiel[1] speaks of it under the Name of Sin, and calls it the Rampart or Strength of Egypt. The Hebrew Word Sin, which signifies Mud, answers very well to the Greek Pelusium, which comes from Pelos, of the same Signification. The Septuagint have read Sais instead of Sin, in this Place of Ezekiel. The Scripture speaks of the Desart of Sin, between Elim and Sinai, Exod. xvi. 1. Numb. xxxiii. 11.

This is the Prophecy that Ezekiel pronounces [Ezek. xxx. 13, 14, 15, 16, &c.] against Pelusium. Thus saith the Lord God: I will also destroy their Idols, and I will cause their Images to cease out of Noph, and there shall be no more a Prince of the Land of Egypt, and I will put a Fear in the Land of Egypt. And I will make Pathros desolate, and will set Fire in Zoan, and will execute Judgments in No. And I will pour my Fury upon Sin the Strength of Egypt, and will cut off the Multitude of No. And I will set Fire in Egypt, Sin shall have great Pain, &c. 'Tis thought these Threats had Regard to the Expedition of [Ezek. xxix. 18, 19.] Nebuchadnezzar against this Country. For the Lord says to Ezekiel; Son of Man, Nebuchadrezzar King of Babylon caused his Army to serve a great Service against Tyrus; every Head was made bald, and every Shoulder was peeled, yet had he no Wages, nor his Army, for Tyrus, for the Service that he had served against it. Therefore thus saith the Lord God, Behold, I will give the Land of Egypt unto Nebuchadrezzar King of Babylon, and he shall take her Multitude, and take her Spoil, and take her Prey, and it shall be the Wages for his Army. Afterwards the Prophet foretels the Calamities before mentioned. Pelusium by its Situation was as it were the Key, the Rampart, and the Strength of Egypt, It suffered the first Efforts of the King of Babylon, and of the Chaldean Army[2].

[2 Kings xix. 35.] Before Nebuchadnezzar's Time the City of Pelusium had been already attacked by the Army of Sennecharib King of Assyria. This Prince set upon Sethon, otherwise Sevechus, King of Egypt, and lay down before Pelusium[3]. Sethon was a Prince devoid of Prudence, and but little capable of Government. He had alienated the Minds of his Soldiers, and found himself forsaken of all those that could defend him. Yet having addressed himself to Vulcan, whose Priest he was, he was bid to advance as far as Pelusium, there to meet Sennecharib, and God would send him Assistance. He therefore put himself at the Head of such People as he could get together, and God sent against Sennecharib's Army a great Multitude of Rats, which in the Night Time gnawed the Strings of the Bows, and the Thongs of the Bucklers of the Assyrians, by which their Arms became useless to them. This is what the Egyptians relate. But the sacred Books of the Hebrews inform us, that it was an Angel of the Lord, who in one Night put to Death eighty-five Thousand Men of Sennecharib's Army.

We are assured[4], that Cambyses King of Persia, being desirous to make War in Egypt, and resolving to become Master of Pelusium, which was as it were its Rampart, to take it with less Difficulty he devised this Stratagem. In an Assault which he made against the Town, he placed a great Number of Cats, Dogs, Sheep, and such other Animals as the Egyptians held for sacred, in the Front of his Troops. Thus the Soldiers that defended the City, who were altogether or mostly Egyptians, durst not throw their Lances, or shoot any Arrows on that Side, for Fear of wounding any of those Animals. By which Means Cambyses became Master of the Place without any Oppositiona.

Peniel

PENIEL, Phanuel, or Penuel, a City beyond Jordan, near the Ford or Brook Jabbok. This was the Occasion of its Name. Jacob upon his Return from Mesopotamia[1], made a Stop at the Brook Jabbok; and very early the next Morning, after he had sent all the People before, he remained alone, and behold an Angel came and wrestled with him, till the Day began to appear. Then the Angel said to Jacob, Let me go, for the Morning begins to appear. Jacob answered, I shall not let you go from me, till you have given me your Blessing. The Angel blessed him then in the same Place, which Jacob thence called Peniel, saying: I have seen God Face to Face, yet continue alive.

[1 Sam. i. 2, 3, &c.] In following Ages the Israelites built a City in this Place, which was given to the Tribe of Gad. Gideon returning from the Pursuit of the Midianites, overthrew the Tower of Peniel[2], and put all the Inhabitants of the City to Death, for having refused Sustenance to him and his People, and having answered him in a very insulting Manner. Jeroboam the Son of Nebat rebuilt the City of Peniel[3]. Josephus says[4], that this Prince there built himself a Palace.

Pentateuch

PENTATEUCH. This Word is derived from the Greek[1], and signifies literally, the Collection of the five Instruments or Books of Moses, which are Genesis, Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers and Deuteronomy. We have spoke of each of these Books under their proper Articles. See also Moses, and the Commentators upon the Pentateuch, where they endeavour to prove at large, that Moses was the Author of those five Books, and to confute such as have advanced any thing to the contrary. These are the Arguments of some modern Criticks, who have disputed Moses's Right to the Pentateuch. We find in this Work, as they affirm, several Things that agree neither to the Age nor Character of this Legislator. The Author speaks of Moses in a manner much to his Advantage, he commends his Moderation and Meekness. Now the Man [Numb. xii. 3.] Moses was very meek, above all the Men which were upon the Face of the Earth. He speaks always in the third Person, The Lord spake unto Moses, saying, &c. Moses said unto Pharaoh, &c. Moses would never have spoke of himself in this Manner, at least sometimes he would have express'd himself in the first Person.

Besides, the Author of the Pentateuch sometimes abridges his Narration like a Writer who collected from some antient Memoirs. Sometimes he interrupts the Thread of his Discourse; for Example, he [Gen iv. 23. Gen. xii. 6.] makes Lamech the bigamous to say; Hear my Voice ye Wives of Lamech, hearken unto my Speech; for I have slain a Man to my Wounding, and a young Man to my Hurt: Without informing us before-hand, to whom this related. These Observations for Example, And the Canaanite was then in the Land, cannot be reconciled to the Age of Moses, since the Canaanites continued to be the Masters of Palestine all the Time of Moses. The Passage out of the Book of the Wars of the Lord, quoted in the Book of [Numb. xxi. 14.] Numbers, seems to have been clap'd in afterwards, as also the first Verses of Deuteronomy. The Account of the Death of Moses, which is at the End of the same Book, cannot certainly belong to this Legislator; and the same Judgment may be made of other Passages, wherein it is said, that the Places mention'd lay beyond Jordan; that the Bed of Og was at Ramah to this Day; that the [Numb. xxxii. 41. Deut. iii. 14.] havoth of Jair, or the Cities of Jair, were known to the Author, tho' probably they had not that Name till after Moses's Time.

'Tis observed also in the Text of the Pentateuch, that there are some Places that are defective; for Example, in Exodus we see [Exod. xii. 8.] Moses speaking to Pharaoh, where the Author omits the Beginning of his Discourse. The Samaritan inserts in the same Place what is wanting in the Hebrew. In other Places the same Samaritan Copy adds what is deficient in the Hebrew Text; and what it contains more than the Hebrew seems so well connected with the rest of the Discourse, that it would be difficult to separate them. Lastly, they believe they observe certain Stroaks in the Pentateuch, which can hardly agree with Moses, who was born and bred in Egypt; as what he says of the earthly Paradise, of the Rivers that water'd it, and ran through it; of the Cities of Babylon, Erech, Resen and Calneh; of the Gold of Pison, of the Bdellium, of the Stone of Sohem, which was to be found in that Country; these Particulars observed with such Curiosity seem to prove, that the Author of the Pentateuch liv'd beyond the Euphrates. Add what he says concerning the Ark of Noah, of its Construction, of the Place where it rested, of the Wood wherewith it was built, of the Bitumen of Babylon, &c.

These last Observations have made some surmise, that the Levite that was sent by Esar-haddon to the Cushites who were settled [2 Kings xvii. 24, 27.] in Samaria, might possibly have composed the Pentateuch, and that the Jews might have received it with some little Variation from the Hands of the Samaritans. Others have imagin'd that the Pentateuch, in the Condition wherein we have it, was but the Abridgment of a larger Work, compos'd by some publick Writers, who had this Trust committed to them in the Republick of the Hebrews.

But not to undertake here to enter into an Examination of all these Proofs, or to refute all the Opinions upon which they are founded, on which so much has already been written; we shall content our selves to make these three Reflexions. First to divest Moses of a Possession he has maintain'd for so many Ages, as the Author of the Pentateuch; a Possession supported by the joint Testimony both of the Synagogue and the Church, of the sacred Writers both of the Old and New Testament, of Jesus Christ and his Apostles; this certainly requires Proofs to which there can be no Reply, evident Demonstrations. But it is plain that the Objections brought against this Assertion are even below convincing Arguments. For secondly the Additions, the Dislocations, the Confusions, the Omissions, which we cannot refuse to allow therein, will not determine that Moses is not the Author of those Books. They only prove that some Amendments have been made, either by adding or expunging. God has suffer'd that the sacred Books should not be exempted from such kind of Alterations, as proceed from the Hands of Copiers, or which are a Consequence of the Length of Time. If a slight Addition, or some Change made in the Text of an Author, should be thought sufficient to deprive him of his Labours, what Writer could remain in the quiet Possession of his Work for even one Century? Thirdly, the Conjectures of M. le Clerc and of F. Simon, about the Author of the Pentateuch, have been so often confuted, that it would be quite needless to touch upon that Matter here. The publick Writers of F. Simon are purely chimerical. The Priest or Levite sent by Esar-haddon to the Cushites, could not have composed the Pentateuch. This Book was wrote long before his Time. It is quoted in Works that were extant before the Time of this Levite. The Law was in constant Practice from Moses down to the Captivity, and was therefore written. A Copy of it was lodg'd in the Ark, and was found in the Days of King Josiah. The Jews and Samaritans had too much Aversion for each other, to communicate their sacred Writings to one another. By comparing the Samaritan Pentateuch with that of the Jews, it may be easily perceived that they are both derived from the same Original; but one may also easily perceive, that one of them is not copy'd from the other, and that the Samaritans have touch'd up their Copy, to support certain Pretensions that they had against the Jews, in the Business of Mount Gerizim, upon which their Temple was built. The Samaritans have preserved the Hebrew Pentateuch written in the antient Phenician Characters, which are the Hebrew Characters used before the Captivity of Babylon. See under the Title SAMARITAN.

Pentecost

PENTECOST. This Word is derived from the Greek Word Pentecoste, which signifies the fiftieth, because the Feast of Pentecost was celebrated the fiftieth Day after the sixteenth of Nisan, which was the second [Levit. xxiii. 15, 16.] Day of the Feast of the Passover. The Hebrews call it[1] the Feast of Weeks, because it was kept seven Weeks after the Passover. [Deut. xvi. 9, 10. Levit. xxiii. 15, 16.] They then offer'd the first Fruits of this Wheat-harvest, which at that Time was compleated. These first Fruits consisted in two Loaves of leaven'd Bread, of two Assarons of Meal, or of three Pints of Meal each[2]. Besides which they presented at the Temple seven Lambs of that Year, one Calf, and two Rams, to be offer'd for a Burnt-offering, two Lambs for a Peace-offering, and a Goat for a Sin-offering. We do not find in the Text of Scripture, or in Josephus, that the Pentecost had an Octave, tho' it was one of the three great Solemnities, in which all the Males were to appear before the Lord. Besides the Victims appointed in Leviticus, Chap. xxiii. 18, 19. to be offer'd on the Day of Pentecost, they offer'd also two Calves and a Ram for a Burnt-offering, seven Lambs for a Peace-offering, and a Goat for a Sin-offering. See Numb. xxviii. 27. Josephus puts all these Sacrifices together. Antiq. l. 3. c. 10.

The Feast of Pentecost was instituted among the Jews, first to oblige the Israelites to repair to the Temple of the Lord, there to acknowledge his absolute Dominion over the whole Country, and on their Labours, by offering to him the First Fruits of all their Harvests. Secondly to call to their Memory, and to render Thanks to God for the Law which he had given them from Mount Sinai on the like Day, which was the fiftieth Day after their coming out of Egypt[3].

The modern Jews[4] celebrate the Pentecost for two Days, and these two Days are kept by them as Festivals of the Passover, that is to say, they abstain from all Labour, and meddle with no Business, no more than on the Sabbath-day, excepting that they may make Fires, dress Victuals, and carry what they want from one Place to another. They hold by Tradition, that this Day the Law was deliver'd from Mount Sinai; for which Reason they are used to dress the Synagogue and the Places appointed for the Reading of the Law, and even their Houses, with Roses and Flowers knit together in Crowns and Garlands, and that in great Quantities.

The Prayers are accommodated to the Festival, and they read from the Pentateuch the Sacrifice that was offer'd on that Day, with a Lesson out of the Prophets, which has some Relation to the Feast of Pentecost. Afterwards they pronounce a Blessing for the Sovereign, and make a Sermon in Commendation of the Law.

When the second Day of the Festival is over, in the Evening they perform the Ceremony of the Abdala, that is, Distinction, to distinguish the Day of the Feast from a working Day, and to shew that they pass from the Feast to a Day in which it is allowed to work. This Ceremony consists in repeating certain Prayers, and certain Blessings, and in wishing one another good Health, and all kind of Prosperity. After which every one employs himself as he sees proper, the Feast being at an End.

This Abdala, or Distinction, is also performed at the Passover and the Sabbath; but on the Day of the Sabbath there is more Ceremony. When every one is come home to his House, they light a Torch, or a Lamp with two Cottons, the Master of the House takes Wine in a Cup, and sweet-scented Spices: And when he has said some Passages out of the Psalms, and what is read at the End of the eighth Chapter of the Book of Esther; The Jews had Light, and Gladness, and Joy, and Honour, &c. Then he blesses the Wine and the Spices, and enjoys the Flavour of them as it were to begin the Week with Pleasure; he blesses the Brightness of the Fire, of which no Use has yet been made, looks upon his Hands and Nails, because he is then beginning to work, and throws the Wine upon the Ground, as a Token of Joy and Gladness. Then wishing each other a happy Week, they begin to go about their Business. But at the End of the Feast of the Passover, and of the Pentecost, they make the Abdala with Words only.

To these Practices Buxtorf[5] adds some other Ceremonies, peculiar perhaps to the Jews of Germany. To call to Mind in a more sensible Manner the Mount of Sinai, upon which the Law was given, they make a very thick Cake, made of seven Layers of Past; they call it Sinai, and inculcate, that these seven Thicknesses of Past represent the seven Heavens, which God was obliged to re-ascend, from the Top of this Mountain to the Heaven of Heavens, where he makes his Abode. They reckon up exactly all the Days that pass after the Passover, that they may not be mistaken in the Moment upon which the Pentecost is to begin. The King, they say, has promised Liberty to a Prisoner, and his Daughter in Marriage, at the End of seven Weeks. Is it not fit that this Prisoner should count the Days, the Hours, the Moments, at the End of which his Happiness is to begin? This King is God, who has promised Liberty to the Jewish Nation, and also his Law.

And that they may not be mistaken in their Calculation, they celebrate two Festival Days for the greater Security. They did the same Thing formerly at other Festivals, as may be seen from Judith[6]. And Buxtorf affirms they did the same Thing at the Passover; and it is from hence that he removes the Difficulty arising from our Saviour's eating the Paschal Lamb a Day before the Jews.

To return to the Pentecost. Twice they bring the Book of the Law, five Persons read it one after another. The Synagogue and the Windows of the Houses are adorned with Flowers, to insinuate, that every Thing was dressed in Verdure about Mount Sinai, when the Israelites received the Law.

The Christian Church also celebrates the Feast of Pentecost fifty Days, or seven Weeks after the Passover, or the Resurrection of our Saviour. We are convinced that the true Day of the Passover, in the Year that our Saviour died, fell upon the Saturday, and that the Pentecost fell on Sunday the 24th of May, fifty Days after our Saviour's Resurrection. The Church has always kept the Pentecost on the Sunday, at least it is a Tradition very express[7] among the Fathers[8], and the Ecclesiastical Writers[9]. After the Ascension of Christ, the Apostles having withdrawn together into a House at Jerusalem, which 'tis said was that of Mary the Mother of John[10], which was upon the Mount of Sion[11], they there waited for the Holy Ghost, which our Saviour had promised to send them. And on the Day of Pentecost, about the third Hour of the Day, that is, about Nine a-Clock in the Morning, on a sudden they heard a great Noise, as it were the rushing of a mighty Wind, which came from Heaven, and which filled the [Acts ii. 1, 2, 3.] whole House where the Apostles were assembled together. At the same Time they saw appear among them as it were Tongues of Fire, which were parted or cloven, and rested upon each of them, who were then immediately filled with the Holy Ghost, and began to speak different Tongues or Languages, according as the Spirit gave them Utterance.

There were then at Jerusalem Jews of all Nations, pious Men and fearing God; and at the Noise that was made in the House where the Apostles were assembled, a great Number of Persons came together, who were very much surprized to hear all those in the House, to speak such a Variety of Languages. Some of 'em were very much astonished at the Event, while others made a Mock of them saying, that these People were full of new Wine. Then St. Peter took up their Defence, and said, The People that you see here are by no Means drunk, for it is yet but the third Hour of the Day. On Festival Days they did not eat before Noon[12], especially they tasted nothing before Nine in the Morning, which was an Hour of Prayer. But added he, you see [Acts iii. 1.] here the Accomplishment of what was spoke by the Prophet Joel. I will pour out my Spirit upon all Flesh; your Sons and your Daughters [Joel ii. 28.] shall prophesie, your young Men shall have Visions, and your old Men shall dream Dreams. I will cause Prodigies to appear in the Heavens above, and extraordinary Wonders on the Earth below. And then, whoever shall call upon the Name of the Lord shall be saved. After this he spake to 'em of Jesus Christ, of his Death and Resurrection, and of the Descent of the Holy Ghost, the Effects of which were so evident to them.

At these Words, those that heard St. Peter were moved with Compunction, and said to him, and the rest of the Apostles, Brethren, what must we therefore do? St. Peter answered them, Repent, and let every one of you be baptized in the Name of Jesus Christ, to obtain the Remission of his Sins, and you also shall receive the Holy Ghost. He continued to instruct them by several other Discourses, and that Day were baptized about three Thousand Men. This is what passed on the Day of Pentecost, in the 33d Year of the Vulgar Æra

Some Interpreters think, that each Family was obliged to give two Loaves for First-Fruits, but others maintain, and I think with more Reason, that they offered but two Loaves in the Name of the whole Nation; this is sufficiently hinted by Josephus, who puts but one Loaf of two Assarons. Antiq. l. iii. c. 10.

Penula

[2 Tim. iv. 13.] PENULA. St. Paul in his second Epistle to Timothy says, Penulam quam reliqui Troade apud Carpum veniens affer tecum. When thou comest bring with thee the Cloak which I left with Carpus at Troas. Penula is here rendered by a Cloak, because this is the proper Signification of that Latin Word, which stands for a Riding-coat, or upper Garment, to defend us from the Rain or the Cold[1]. Tertullian says[2], it was invented by the Lacedemonians, that they might be present at the publick Games without Injury from the Cold. At first among the Romans it was only used by Slaves, or Men of mean Condition, who wore them in the City. They were more generally worn upon a Journey, to defend them against bad Weather. They were used even by the Women in the Country[3]. Aftewards they came to be more generally worn, even in the City, and by People of Fashion. The Tribunes of the People commonly made Use of this Habit. Dio observes[4], that the Emperor Tiberius put on a Cloak, Penulam, that he might be present at an Assembly when it rained. Alexander Severus[5] allow'd old Men (or Senators) to make Use of the Penula in the City; but he forbid the Use of it to Women, in the City, and allowed them only to wear it in the Country. Yet Spartian[6] says, that the Emperors never made Use of it. [2 Tim. iv. 13.] Ambrosiaster, Haimo, and the Commentary upon St. Paul ascribed to St. Anselm, think the Penula was a long Robe, or Senators Gown; that St. Paul's Father had received one as a Present, which he used as being a Roman Citizen and a Senator. They think that he had given it to St. Paul, who having left it at Troas, desired St. Timothy to bring it with him to Rome. But these are Fictions, which do not deserve a serious Confutation. In St. Paul's Time the Penula was not yet become the Habit of a Senator; and what Proof is there, that the Father of St. Paul was ever a Senator?

By the Word Phenole or Phelone, the Greek Fathers[7] understand either a Book-case,or a Garment. But they generally contend for the Interpretation of a Book-case, wherein St. Paul used to keep his Books, which he mentions in the same Place. Penulam affer tecum, & libros, maxime autem membranas. St. Jerome also takes Notice of this Opinion, when he says[8], Volumen Hebræum replico, quod Paulus phelonen juxta quosdam vocat. M. Brucmas has supported this Acceptation of Phenole, in a Dissertation made on Purpose, and printed by Masius at the End of his Book, concerning the Authority of Princes in Matters of Religion. M. Boileau, Dean of the Holy Chapel at Paris, has also maintained the same Opinion in his Book de re vestiaria hominis sacri. See also Hammond and Estius upon St. Paul. I should rather take it for a Garment. Penula in Latin had never any other Signification, and it is plain this Word comes from the Greek Phainole. The Form of the Penula was pretty much like that of the antient Chasuble or Cope, which covered the whole Body, was without Sleeves, and had no other Opening but at Top, to admit the Head through.

Peor

PEOR, or Phogor, a famous Mountain beyond Jordan, which Eusebius places between Hesbbon and Livias[1]. The Mountains Nebo, Pisgah, and Peor were near one another, and probably made but the same Chain of Mountains. It is very likely that Peor took its Name from some Deity of the same Name, which was worshipped there; for Peor, or Phegor, or Baal-peor was known in this Country. See Numb. xxv. 3. Deut. iv. 3. Psalm cv. 28.

Peor was a City of the Tribe of Judah, which is not read in the Hebrew, nor in the Vulgate, but only in the Greek of Josh. xv. 60. Eusebius says it was near Bethlehem, and Jerome adds, that in his Time it was called Paora.

PEREA. This Word comes from the Greek, Peran, beyond, and signifies the Country beyond Jordan, or on the East Side of this River. Josephus says[1], that Perea had its Limits westwardly at Philadelphia, Jordan to the East, Macberon to the South, and Pella to the North. Sometimes the Word Perea is taken in a more extensive Signification, for the whole Country beyond Jordan. Perfection PERFECTION. The Son of God commands us, saying; Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father which is in Heaven is perfect. Not that we can ever attain his [Luke vi. 36. Matth. xix. 21. Luke vi. 40. 1 Cor. i. 10. xiv. 10, &c.] Perfection, but yet we ought always to be making Advances towards it. We ought always to propose it to our selves as our Pattern, in the Exercise of all Sorts of Virtue, and chiefly his Mercy and Charity. Whence St. Luke says in the Passage parallel to this; Be ye therefore merciful as your Father also is merciful. In another Place our Saviour says, that he that would be perfect, must forsake all and follow him. And again, that the Disciple that would arrive at Perfection must become like his Master. St. Paul often exhorts his Disciples to be perfect, that is to say, to acquire the Perfection of Christianity, to be convinced of the Excellence of it, and to practice its Truths.

In the Books of the Old Testament, the Words perfect and Perfection answer to the Hebrew Words Tham and Thummim, which properly signifie intire and compleat, without Blemish or Defect, irreprehensible, perfect. [Gen. vi. 9. Gen. xvii. 1. Deut. xviii. 13. Josh. xxiv. 14. 2 Kings xx. 3.] Thus it is said, Noah was a just Man, and perfect in his Generations. And God says to Abraham, I am the Almighty God; walk before me, and be thou perfect. And speaking to his People, Thou shalt be perfect with the Lord thy God. In all these Places perfect is put for without Reproach, unreprovable, sincere. And in like Manner, to serve God with a perfect Heart, is to serve him faithfully, purely, without admitting a Rival. Perfect Knowledge, a perfect Law, perfect Charity, a perfect Work; in all which Expressions the Word Perfect is used to signify, whatever may make those Things compleat, finished, intire, and where nothing is wanting. St. Paul says, The Law made nothing perfect; it [Heb. vii. 19.] may be said to give only Sketches of Things, and to enjoin Things that have less Perfection than what the Gospel requires.

A perfect Captivity is when a whole People [Jer. xiii. 18. Amos i. 6, 9. Deut. xxiii. 8. Vulg.] are transported into a strange Country, without leaving any to cultivate the Land, And in Deuteronomy, Perfectio tua & doctrina tua stand for the Urim and Thummim, that the High-priest carried about him. See those two Words.

Perfumes

PERFUMES; the Use of Perfumes was frequent among the Hebrews, and among the Orientals in General, before it was known to the Greeks and Romans. Pliny says[1], that they knew not who was the first Inventor of Perfumes, and that they were unknown even at the Siege of Troy. Ovid[2] imputes the Honour of this Discovery to Bacchus. Arnobius maintains[3], that they were unknown in the Heroic Times. But in the Time of Moses they must be known in Egypt, since he speaks of the Art of the Perfumer, and gives [Exod. xxx. 25.] the Composition of two Kinds of Perfumes, of which one was to be offered to the Lord, upon the Golden Altar which was in the holy [Exod. xxx. 34, 35, &c.] Place; and the other was appointed for the anointing of the High-priest and his Sons, as also of the Tabernacle, and all the Vessels that were used in divine Service.

The first of these Perfumes was composed of Stacte, the Onyx or odoriferous Shell-fish, of Galbanum, and Incense, all of equal Weight. This Perfume was a sacred and inviolable Thing, and it was forbid on Pain of Death, for any Man whatever to make Use of it. It was set every Morning and Evening upon the Golden Altar which was in the Sanctum. This was the Office of one of the Priests of the Week. 'Twas this Perfume that Zacharias the Father of John the Baptist went to offer, when the Angel appeared to him, and foretold to him the Birth of the Prodromus of the Messiah. The other kind of Perfume, which was rather an Ointment, to anoint the Priests and the sacred Vessels of the Tabernacle, was composed of the best Myrrhe, of the Weight of five hundred Shekels, of Cinnamon the Weight of two Hundred and fifty Shekels, of Canna Aromatica a like Quantity, of Casia Aromatica the Weight of five hundred Shekels; and one hin of Oil Olive. The whole being well mingled served to make a pretious Ointment, with which Aaron and his Sons were anointed, and every Thing that appertained to the Tabernacle. But 'tis thought they did not afterwards anoint the Successors of Aaron, because their Dignity being successive in his Family, this Unction did not seem necessary. God reserved this Ointment, or this Perfume, to his own Service; and whoever should make of it, either for himself or another, was to be cut off from his People. I have spoke of the Altar of Perfume under the Title ALTAR.

The Hebrews had also Perfumes which they made Use of for the embalming of their Dead. The Composition is not exactly known, but 'tis known they generally made [John xix. 49.] Use of Myrrhe, Aloes, and other strong and astringent Drugs, proper to prevent Putrifaction, Infection, and Corruption; and consequently they were of a saline, sharp, and astringent Nature. The Reader may see what Herodotus[4] says of the Manner in which the Egyptians embalmed their Dead; for it seems to be from the Egyptians that the Hebrews borrowed this Custom.

Besides the Perfumes we have mentioned above, there are still others which are known to us from Scripture. Those for Example which King Hezekiah preserved in his Repositories. The Spices and precious Ointment. [2 Kings xx. 13.] And those that were burned with the Body of King Asa. They laid him in the Bed [2 Chron. xvi. 14.] which was filled with sweet Odours, and diverse Kinds of Spices prepared by the Apothecary's Art. Judith perfumed her Face when she was to appear before Holofernes. They [Judith xvi. 10.] prepared the Virgins which were to appear before the Kings of Persia, for six Months together, by the Use of Oil of Myrtle, and for six other Months, by other Perfumes, and other sweet-scented Oils. The Spouse in the Canticles commends the Scent of the Perfumes of her Lover; and her Lover in Return says, that the Scent of the Perfumes of his Spouse surpasses the most excellent Odours. He names particularly the Spikenard, the Canna Aromatica, the Cinnamon, the Myrrhe, the Aloes, as making a Part of these Perfumes. The voluptuous Woman described by Solomon says, that she had perfumed her Bed with Myrrhe, Aloes, and Cinnamon. The Epicures in the Book of Wisdom encourage one another to the luxuriant Use of Odours and costly Perfumes.

Isaiah reproaches Judæa, whom he describes as a Spouse faithless to God, as being painted and perfumed to please Strangers. Thou wentest to the King with Ointment, and didst increase thy Perfumes. Ezekiel seems to accuse the Jews with having profaned the Odours and Perfumes, the Use of which was reserved to sacred Things, by applying them to their own Use. Thou sattest upon a stately Bed, and a Table prepared before it, whereupon thou hast set mine Incense and mine Oil. Amos inveighs against the rich Men of Ephraim, who drank the most excellent Wines, and perfumed themselves with the most precious Oils. The She-sinner in St. Luke, and Mary Magdalen in St. John, anointed our Saviour's Feet with costly Perfume. That of Mary Magdalen was Spikenard.

All these Examples shew us in general, what was the Taste of the ancient Hebrews, what was and still is the Taste of the Orientals, who made much Use of Scents and Perfumes. They prove also that Men and Women used them indifferently, and that wise and serious Men condemned the two frequent and affected Use of them. It may also be observed, that to abstain from Perfumes, Scents, and Unction, was esteemed as a great Piece of Mortification. Esther refrained from Perfumes and Ointments during the Time of the Humiliation of her People. Daniel did not anoint himself all the three Weeks that he was urgent in Prayer, to obtain the Communications that he desired of God.

Solomon says, that dead Flies cause the Ointment of the Apothecary to send forth a stinking Savour. One Fly is sufficient to spoil the Smell of a whole Box of Perfumes: So one Fault is enough to destroy a Man's good Name. Qui in uno peccaverit, multa bona perdet; muscæ morientes perdunt suavitatem unguenti. The Hebrew says literally, one dead Fly will make the most excellent Perfume to stink.

Pergamus

PERGAMUS. Jesus Christ in the Revelations, speaks thus to the Angel, or to the Bishop of Pergamus; I know thy Works, and where thou dwellest, even where Satan*'s Seat is: And thou holdest fast my Name*, and hast not denied my Faith, even in those Days wherein Antipas was my faithful Martyr, who was slain among you where Satan dwelleth. But I have a few Things against thee, because thou hast there them that hold the Doctrine of Balaam, who taught Balac to cast a Stumbling-block before the Children of Israel, to eat Things sacrificed to Idols, and to commit Fornication. So hast thou also them that hold the Doctrine of the Nicolaitans, which thing I hate. Repent, or else I will come unto thee quickly, and will fight against them with the Sword of my Mouth. Some have [Lyran. Aureol. Euseb. Hist. Eccl. lib. 4. c. 15.] thought, that the Angel of Pergamus, mentioned here, was St. Carpus, who suffered Martyrdom at Pergamus, as we learn from Eusebius. But he does not acquaint us that he was then Bishop of this Church. The Roman Martyrology makes him Bishop of Thyatira; but besides, St. Carpus died under the Empire of Decius. Therefore it is not at all credible, that he could be Bishop of Pergamus under Dioclesian.a Now Pergamus was a City of Troas, very considerable in the Time of St. John the Evangelist. 'Twas at Pergamus, as they say, that Parchment was invented, called thence Pergamena.

Peribolus

[Ezek. xlii. 7, 10. Vulgat. וגדר אשר לחוץ] PERIBOLUS. Ezekiel makes use of this Term, to signify a Wall of the Court of the Priests, which was Fifty Cubits long, and was the whole Length of the Apartments that surrounded this Court. Peribolus properly signifies an Enclosure, and comes from the Greek, Periballo, to surround. The Hebrew calls it Geder, which signifies a Partition-Wall.

Peripsema

PERIPSEMA. This is a meer Greek [1 Cor. iv. 13. Περίψημα.] Word. St. Paul makes use of it to shew, that himself and all Christians of that Time were considered by the Heathen, as the Offcast and Filth of the Earth. Tanquam purgamentum hujus mundi facti sumus, omnium peripsema usque adhuc. The most learned Interpreters think,[1] that in this Place St. Paul alludes to a Custom then in Use among the Heathen, where they sometimes took Men, to make them serve as an Expiation for a City, or for a whole People, at the Time of a Pestilence, or other publick Calamity. This Custom is observed to have obtained among the Gauls, the Romans, and the Athenians. After having fed these unfortunate Victims for some Time at the publick Charge, they were brought forth upon the Day of their Death, with

Rev. ii. 13. Garlands of Flowers or Leaves, to the Places they intended to expiate. The People there loaded them with Curses, and prayed the Gods to pour out all their Indignation upon them. Afterwards they threw them into the Sea, or whipped them to death, or burned them alive, and scattered their Ashes into the Sea, saying, Be thou our [Suidas. Περίψημα ἡμῶν γένου.] Victim or Expiation, to turn away the Anger of the Gods from us. So that one might thus translate the Text of St. Paul; They use us like human Victims, that are sacrificed for publick Crimes; as those miserable Wretches that are put to death, to atone for the Offences of others.

Periscelides

PERISCELIDES. This is a Greek Word, and signifies an Ornament which Women used to put about their Legs. It is mentioned in Isaiah iii. 20. and in Numbers xxxi. 50. Moses says, That the Israelites, when they had defeated the Midianites, offered to the Lord the Garters, (Periscelides) the Rings, Bracelets, and Collars that they had taken from the Enemy. This shews the Custom of those People, and the Ornaments which even Men brought with them to the War. We see the same thing in the Victory which many Years after, Gideon obtained over the same People. The Hebrew Word, which here is [Judg. viii. 25, 26, 27. אצערה Azada 70. χλιδῶνα. 2 Sam. i. 10.] translated by Periscelides, comes from a Root, which signifies to walk; which favours the Translation of those that understand it of costly Garters, or Ornaments which the Midianites wore about their Legs. The Septuagint translate it by a Bracelet; it is certain it has this Signification in the Second Book of Samuel, where the Amalekite that had slain Saul, says, That he took off the Bracelet (Azadah) from the Arm of that Prince.

Isaiah makes use of the same Term in the Enumeration that he makes of the Ornaments of Women. The Chaldee translates it by the Chains of the Foot. Clemens Alexandrinus[1] calls those silver or golden Circlets that Women put about their Legs, Fetters or Bonds. Profane Authors call them in the same manner, shining Fetters, golden Shackles.

Martial, A pedibus niveis fulserunt aurea vincta.

And Seneca, Crura distincta religavit auro.

The Women of Syria and Arabia at this Day wear great Rings at their Legs, at which are fastned a great Number of other lesser Rings, which make a Noise like little Bells, whenever they walk or[2] stir.[3] These Rings are fixed above the Ancle, and are made either of Gold, Silver, Copper, Glass, or even of varnish'd Earth, according to the Substance and Condition of the Person that wears them.

The Princesses of Arabia wear large hollow Rings of Gold, within which are inclosed little Pebbles, that sound like Bells. Others have lesser Rings called Kelkal, hung all round them, which have the same Effect when they walk. These great Circles or Rings are open in one Place, in form of a Crescent, by which they pass over the Small of the Leg. The Egyptian Ladies wore also very valuable ones; for we read in an Inscription found in Spain, that the Statue of Isis had Ornaments of Gold upon its Legs, set with two Emeralds, and with eleven other precious Stones. The Roman and Grecian Women also made use of them, as we have seen before. Trimalchio in Petronius, speaking of his Spouse, said, See what she wears upon her Legs. Videtis mulieris compedes. As it were by way of Complaint at her Expensiveness.

Perjury

PERJURY. The Law of God severely condemn'd Perjury, all false Oaths and Vows, and Promises made without an Intention to perform them; as also all Oaths made in the name of false Gods. Perjury offends against the Veracity and Justice of God himself, and is a great Insult upon his Power and Majesty, by appealing to him as a Witness to a Lye, and making use of his tremendous [Levit. v. 4, 5, 6. vi. 2, 3. Heb. vii. 18. Gal. ii. 16. Rom. viii. 3. Heb. ix. 9, 13.] Name to commit Evil.

specialibus legibus. Moses in Leviticus, seems to assign Sacrifices to atone for Perjury; which is contrary to St. Paul, who assures us, that the Sacrifices and Ceremonies of the Law did not remit internal Sins, but only external and legal Faults. It must therefore be affirmed, that these Sacrifices ordained by Moses, had only respect to the Ignorance or Temerity of him, who had made a rash Promise, or only to him that had made a secret Oath or Promise. Or else he supposes, that he to whom it was appointed to offer this Sacrifice, had already expiated his internal Fault, by a perfect Repentance and Contrition; and that the external Sacrifice prescribed, is only, as we may say, to satisfy for the Faults he might have committed, by approaching holy Things in a State of Defilement. 'Tis otherwise known, that wilful Perjury, pronounced in publick, and before the Judge, was not to be remitted by Sacrifices, even according to Moses's Law. He was punished by the Sentence of the Judges, when he was found guilty. Portabit iniquitatem suam; which is usually understood of capital Punishment. Perizoma PERIZOMA. This word is wholly Greek. It signifies a kind of Breeches, or a very broad Girt, which covered the Reins, and what Modesty requires to be concealed. The Latins call it Subligaculum. Moses [Gen. iii. 7. Vulgat.] says, that our first Parents, after their Sin, sewed together the broad Leaves of the Fig-tree, to make themselves Aprons, Perizomata, to cover their Nakedness.

Perizzites

PERIZZITES, or Pheresæi, the antient Inhabitants of Palestine, mingled with the Canaanites. There is also great Probability, that they themselves were Canaanites, but having no fix'd Habitations, and living after the Manner of the Scythians and the Nomades, sometimes dispersed in one Country, and sometimes in another, they were for that Reason called Perizzites, which signifies scattered or dispersed. Pherazoth stands for Hamlets or Villages. The Perizzites did not inhabit any certain Portion of the Land of Canaan; there were some of them on both Sides of the River Jordan, in the Mountains, and in the Plains. In several Places of Scripture the Canaanites and Perizzites are mentioned as the two chief People of the Country. It is said, for Example, [Gen. xiii. 7.] that in the Time of Abraham and Lot, the Canaanite and Perizzite were in the Land. The Israelites of the Tribe of [Josh. xvii. 15.] Ephraim complained to Joshua, that they were too much pent up in their Possession: he bid them go, if they pleased, into the Mountains of the Perizzites and Rephaims, or Giants, and there clearing the Land, to cultivate and inhabit it. Solomon subdued the Remains of the Canaanites and Perizzites, which the Children of Israel had not rooted out, and made them Tributary to him. There is still mention made of the Perizzites in the Time of Ezra, after the Return from the Captivity of Babylon; and several Israelites had married Wives from that Nation.

Perperam

PERPERAM. St. Paul makes use of this Term in his first Epistle to the Corinthians. Much Dispute has been about the Signification of this Word. St. Chrysostom, Theophylact, and the greatest part of Interpreters, explain it by Rashness, Lightness, Precipitation. Charity is wise, steady, constant, serious, and grave in its Behaviour. It never acts lightly or with Precipitation. Theodoret; Charity does not mingle itself in other People's Business: It does not meddle with what it has nothing to do. Others maintain[1] that the Greek Word in this Text properly signifies, to be puff'd up with Pride, to boast, to make a vain Shew of one's Understanding or Capacity.

The Word Perperam is very common among Latin Authors. Agere perperam in this Language signifies to act incongruously or unadvisedly. But the Greek Word περπερεύομαι is not found in antient Greek Writers, which makes it probable, that it is taken from the Latin Word perperam, and that it has in Greek a more extensive Signification than in Latin. It signifies properly, to boast or brag, to set a Value on one's self, to display one's own good Qualities.

Persecution

PERSECUTION, to persecute. Persecution in all Ages has been the Portion of the Elect, and of good Men. Cain persecuted Abel. Joseph was persecuted by his Brethren. The Israelites in Egypt were persecuted by Pharaoh, David by Saul, Elijah and Elisha by Ahab, the Prophets by the Kings and People of their Time, Jesus Christ by Herod and the chief of the Jews, John the Baptist and the Apostles by all wicked Enemies of Piety, Truth, and Justice. Lastly, 'tis a Maxim laid down by our Saviour, that all those that would lead a godly Life shall suffer [2 Tim. iii. 12.] Persecution. Omnes qui pie volunt vivere in Christo Jesu persecutionem patientur. But happy are those that shall suffer Persecution [Matt. viii. 10.] for Righteousness Sake. Beati qui persecutionem patientur propter justitiam.

But the Verb to persecute, persequi, is not always to be taken in this odious Sense; it is often put purely for following an Enemy in their Flight or Retreat, or [Deut. xvi. 20.] for applying one's self vigorously to any thing. For Example, Juste quod justum est persequeris; You may apply yourself [Ps. xxxiii. 15. Prov. xiii. 21. Ecclus. xxxiv. 2.] diligently to the Practice of Justice. And elsewhere, Inquire pacem, & persequere eam. And in the Proverbs, Peccatores persequitur malum; Punishment pursues Sinners. And in Ecclesiasticus; He that depends upon deceitful Visions is compared to one that catches at a Shadow, or grasps at the Wind. Quasi qui apprehendit umbram, & sequitur ventum.

Persepolis

PERSEPOLIS, the capital City of Persia. The Persians call it Esthekar. It lies in 88° 30' of Longitude, and 30 Degrees [D'Herbelot Bibliot. Orient. p. 327.] of Latitude, according to the Arabick Tables. The Author of Lebtariskh writes, that Kischtasb Son of Lobarab, the fifth King of Persia, of the Race of the Caianides, there fix'd his Residence, and there caused several of those Temples to be built, dedicated to Fire, which the Greeks call Pyrea, or Pyrateria, and the Persians, Athesch Khane, and Athesch Gheda. And that very near to this City, in a Mountain adjoining to it, he order'd Sepulchres to be dug into the Rock for himself and his Successors. The Ruins of 'em are still to be seen at this Day, with some Remains of Figures and Columns; which though much defaced by Length of Time, yet still sufficiently shew, that the antient Kings of Persia had chose this Place for their usual Residence. We may see Descriptions of these in Chardin's Travels, and 'tis said that M. le Bruin, a famous Traveller, will soon publish them in a more exact Manner than has been yet done.

These Monuments are to be distinguish'd from a magnificent Palace, which Queen Homai, Daughter of Bahuman, built in the Midst of the City of Esthekar. 'Tis now call'd in the Persian Tongue, Gihil, or Tchilminar, the forty Pharos's or Columns. The Mussulmen formerly made a Mosque of it. But the City being entirely ruin'd, they made use of the Materials for building that of Schiraz, which is not above the Distance of twelve Parasangs from it, and which is become the Capital of the Province of Persia, properly so call'd.

The same Author, speaking of antient Persepolis, or Esthekar, makes it twelve Parasangs long, and ten broad, which without doubt is extravagant. But certain it is, that all the Persian Historians speak of it as the most antient and the most magnificent City of all Asia.

They believe Giamschid to have been the first Founder of it; and some advance its Antiquity as high as Houschenk, and even to Caiumarask, the first Founder of the Persian Monarchy. This however is certain, that it derived its chief Splendor from the second Dynasty of Kings, who forsook their Residence at Balkhe in Corassan, to dwell at Esthekar.

The fabulous Tradition of the Persians is, that this City was built by the Peri, that is to say, by the Fairies, at the Time that Gian-ben-gian govern'd the World, a long Time before Adam; which is not said of any other City of Asia, but of Esthekar [Idem p. 395.] and Baalbek. They say also, that when the Foundations of Esthekar were laying, they found a Vessel of Turquois Stone, which held four Pints, or two Pounds of Liquor. This valuable Vase was for its Excellence call'd Giamschid; which in Persian signifies, the Vase of the Sun. And the Persian Poets allegorize a thousand Ways upon this famous Vessel, and transform it into an hundred different Figures to embellish their Poetry.

[2 Maccab. ix. 1,2,&c.] It is said in the second Book of the Maccabees, that Antiochus Epiphanes being gone to Persepolis, with an Intent to pillage a rich Temple that was there, all the People run to their Arms, and drove him away with his Followers. In the first [1 Maccab. vi. 1,2,&c.] Book of the Maccabees, where the same History is related, 'tis said that it was at Elymais, where Antiochus Epiphanes met with with this Opposition, intending to plunder the Temple of Nannea. See the Article of [2 Maccab. i. 13, 15.] NANNEA before. As to the Cities of Elymais and Persepolis, 'tis certain they were very different and distant from each other. Elymais was upon the Euleus, and Persepolis [Strabo l. 15.] upon the Aranei. Besides, Persepolis was in Ruins in the Time of Antiochus Epiphanes, Alexander the Great having set it on Fire and entirely destroy'd it[1]. We must then admit, that there is a Mistake in the Text of the second Book of the Maccabees, or that the Author has put Persepolis to stand for the capital City of Persia, though its true Name were Elymais.

Persia

PERSIA, a Kingdom of Asia. The Persians became very famous from the Time of Cyrus, the Founder of the Persian Monarchy. Their antient Name was Elamites; and in the Time of the Roman Emperours they went by the Name of Parthians. At present they are now generally call'd Persians. See what has been already said under the Article PARTHIANS.

[D' Herbelot. Bibl. Orient. p. 340.] Persia is bounded to the East by the Province of Kerman; to the West by Chusistan; to the South by the Gulf of Persia; and to the North by a great Desart that separates it from Chorassan. It is about three hundred French Leagues in Extent, along the Ocean. Jazd is the most eastern City of this Province, Hamadan the most western, Gireft or Sireft the most southern, and Rei the most northern.

The Arabians say, that Fars, Father of the Persians, was Son of Azaz, or Arphaxad Son of Shem. Others derive him from Japheth; but the Persians maintain, they derive their Original from Kaiumarath, who is among them what Adam is with us. They assure us that they have always had Kings of their own Nation, whose Succession has not been interrupted but for a Space of Time altogether inconsiderable.

The Dilemites, the Curdes, and even the Oriental Turks, according to some Authors, are descended from the Persians. The Dilemites inhabit along the Shores of the Caspian Sea, call'd also the Sea of Dilem, because of its Neighbourhood to that Nation. The Curdes are scatter'd in Assyria, to which they have given the Name of Kurdistan. The Turks are withdrawn beyond the River Oxus, into a Country which from them is call'd Turkestan.

[Herodot. Clio, seu l. 1. c. 31.] Authors speak differently of the Religion of the antient Persians. Herodotus is the first who has given any Account of it. He tells us, " That they had neither " Temples, nor Statues, nor Altars. They " look upon it as a Piece of Folly to " make any, or to suffer any, because " they did not believe as the Greeks, that " the Gods were of human Original. They " sacrificed to Jupiter on the highest " Mountains. They gave the Name of " God to the whole Circuit of the Heavens. They sacrificed also to the Sun, " and the Moon, and the Earth; to the " Fire, and the Water, and the Winds. " They knew no other Gods antiently but " these. Since that Time they learn'd " from the Assyrians and the Arabians, to " sacrifice to Urania, or heavenly Venus, " whom the Assyrians call Militta, the " Arabians, Alitta, and the Persians, " Mithra. Strabo copies from Herodotus almost Word for Word, but they do not agree that the Persians gave the Name of Mithra to Venus; he says it is the Sun they call so, and all Authors in this agree with Strabo. " They sacrifice, says he, in a " pure Place, where they offer up their " Prayers, and bring thither their Victim " crown'd. After the Magus has divided " the Flesh, each takes his Part; they " leave nothing for the Gods, saying, that " God is contented with the Soul of the " Sacrifice. Some throw into the Fire a " small part of the double Fat that is " wrapt about the Intestines. They chiefly " sacrifice to the Fire and the Water. " They put upon the Fire dry Wood, " without Bark, upon which they throw " Fat, and then Oil also. They light " the Fire without any Bellows, only " making a Wind with a kind of Fan. If " any one blows the Fire, or throws any " Carkass or Dirt into it, he is punish'd " with Death. " The Sacrifice to the Water is perform'd in this Manner. They come together near a Lake, a River, or a Fountain, and make a Ditch, where they kill the Sacrifice, taking Care that the neighbouring Water is not defiled with the Blood, which would make it unclean. After which they put the Flesh upon Myrtle, or upon Lawrel. The Magi put Fire to it with little Sticks, and sprinkle their Libations of Oil mix'd with Milk and Honey, not upon the Fire, or upon the Water, but upon the Ground. Then for a long Time they make their Enchantments, holding a little Bundle of Heath. The Cappadocians have a great Number of Magi, whom they call Pyrethes, and several Temples of the Gods of the Persians. They kill their Victims without making use of Knives, but of a Lever, with which they strike as with an Axe. They have great Enclosures which they call Pyrethees, in the Midst of which is an Altar, on which the " Magi preserve Ashes and a perpetual Fire. They enter therein every Day, and there make their Enchantments for the Space of an Hour, holding Whisps of Rods, and wearing Mitres that come down so low, as to cover their Lips and Cheeks. "The Sacrifices of the Persians, says [Herodot. loco citato.] Herodotus, are perform'd after this Manner. They erect no Altars, nor use any Fire. They have no Libations, nor any Players upon Musick, nor Garlands, nor Meal. But he that offers the Sacrifice brings the Victim into a pure and clean Place, and invokes the God to whom he would sacrifice, having his Mitre crown'd with Myrtle. It is not allow'd the Priest to pray for himself in particular, but he must pray for the King, and the whole Nation. After he has roasted the Flesh of the Victim, being cut into several Pieces, he spreads young Grass, or especially Clover, and lays them thereon. Afterwards a Magus comes to sing the Theogony, a kind of Song in use among them; and they are not allow'd to sacrifice without a Magus. A little while afterwards the Priest takes away these Pieces of Flesh, and does with 'em what he pleases. [Plutarch. de Iside & Isiride.] Plutarch informs us of some Articles of their Creed. "Among those that admitted of two Principles, the one good and the other bad, was, as he says, the famous Zoroaster, who lived, according to some, five thousand Years before the Trojan War. One of these Gods he named Oromazes, and the other Arimanius; and said, that one had a Relation to sensible Light, and the other to Darkness and Ignorance. That there was still another between these two, who was of a middle Nature, and whom he call'd Mithras; and that it is for that Reason that the Persians call'd him Mithras, who has the middle Place. He taught, that the first was to be sacrificed to, to obtain Favours, and the other, to be defended from Evils. This is the Manner in which they invoked Pluto and Darkness. They bruised in a Mortar an Herb call'd Omomi, which afterwards they mingled with the Blood of a sacrificed Wolf, and taking it all away, they threw it into a dark Place, where the Sun never shines. They believed that some Plants and Trees belonged to the good God, and others to the evil one; and that among Animals, Dogs, Birds, and Urchins belong to the good God, and all those of the Waters, to the evil one. Oromazes, according to them, was born of the purest Light, and Arimanius of the Darkness. They are always at variance. Oromazes has produced six Gods, of which the first is the Author of Benevolence, the second of Valour, the third of Equity, the fourth of Wisdom, the fifth of Riches, the sixth of such Pleasures as attend good Actions. Arimanius also, by way of Emulation, has produced a like Number of Gods. "Oromazes having made himself three Times greater than he was at first, withdrew as far from the Sun, as the Sun is from the Earth. He adorn'd the Heaven, placing the Stars there. He made a Star which is more excellent than the rest, and, as it were, their Guardian. This is Sirius, or the great Dog. He made besides four and twenty Gods, and put them all into an Egg. Arimanius made the same Number, who broke the Egg in which the good ones were inclos'd, and then the good and evil were mingled together. They say there is a Time fix'd, in which Arimanius must die, and then the Earth being united, all happy Men shall live in a perfect Union, being assembled into the same City, and speaking the same Language. Theopompus adds, that according to the Opinion of the Magi, for Three thousand Years one of the Gods shall be too powerful for the other; for three thousand Years more they shall make War, and shall endeavour to destroy each other. At last Pluto shall be overcome, and then Men shall be happy, and shall no longer have any need of Eating."

Tho' the Persians at first would make use of no Images, yet they had them afterwards, as Berosus says in the third Book of his Chaldean History, as he is quoted by [Clem. Alex. l. protrept.] Clemens Alexandrinus. 'Twas Artaxerxes Son of Darius, and Father of Ochus, who introduced this Custom, and was the first that erected the Statue of Venus Tanaides, at Babylon, at Shushan, and at Ecbatana, and taught the Persians, the Bactrians, the People of Damascus and Sardis, that it was to be worshipped as a Goddess. Such was the Religion of the antient Persians, according to those Authors that lived at a Time, when they had the best Opportunity of being inform'd of it.

A modern Author, very skilful in the Eastern Languages, and who has purposely studied the Religion of the Persians, pretends that these People had just Notions concerning the Deity, and believ'd but one only God. That indeed they admitted of two Principles; but one of 'em was uncreated, and the other created. The created Principle was the World. He maintains, that the Worship they paid the Sun and Fire was merely civil and relative. The modern Persians refer their Religion to Abraham, whom some confound found with Zoroaster, and others will have him to have been the Master of Zoroaster. They think the World was created in six Days; that at the Beginning God created a Man and a Woman, from whom Mankind are derived. That there are several Terrestrial Paradises, one universal Deluge, one Moses, one Solomon. All this, without doubt, is taken from the History of the Jews, and from the Traditions of the Mahometans.

[D'Herbelot. Bibl. Orient. p. 340.] They hold one eternal God, call'd in their Tongue Jesdan, or Oromazdes, who is the true God, call'd by the Arabians, Allah, the Author of all Good. And also another God produced by Darkness, to whom they give the Name of Ahermen, who is properly the Eblis of the Arabians, or the Devil and the Author of all Evil. They have a very great Veneration for Light, and a very great Aversion to Darkness. God the Creator of all Things has produced Light and Darkness, and from a Mixture of these two Things, of Good and Evil, Generation and Corruption, and the Composition of all the Parts of the World is effected, and will always subsist, 'till the Light withdrawing itself on one Side, and the Darkness on the other, shall cause a Destruction and Dissolution. This is an Abridgment of the Doctrine of Zoroaster, which is still espoused by the Magians and Guebres, who are Worshippers of Fire, and who always when they pray turn themselves to the Rising Sun.

Here is a List of the Kings of Persia, who had any Relation to the sacred History of Scripture.

Cyrus the Founder of the Persian Monarchy, reign'd nine Years after the taking of Babylon; that is, from the Year of the World 3466 to 3475, before Christ 525, before the vulgar Era 529.

Cambyses, call'd Ahasuerus, Ezr. iv. 6. reign'd seven Years and five Months. He died in the Year of the World 3482, before Christ 518, before the vulgar Era 522.

Oropastes the Magian, call'd Artaxerxes, Ezr. iv. 7. pretending to be Smerdis the Brother of Cambyses, reign'd five Months. He was kill'd by seven Conspirators, one of which was Darius the Son of Hystaspes.

Darius Son of Hystaspes; he is call'd Ahasuerus in the Hebrew of the Book of Esther, and Artaxerxes in the Greek of the same Book. He reign'd thirty-six Years, from the Year of the World 3482 to the Year 3519, before Christ 481, before the vulgar Era 485.

Xerxes I. reign'd twelve Years, from the Year of the World 3519 to 3531, before Christ 469, before the vulgar Era 473.

Artaxerxes Longimanus reign'd forty-eight Years, from 3531 to 3579, before Christ 421, before the vulgar Era 425.

Xerxes II. he reign'd but one Year, died in 3580, before Christ 420, before the vulgar Era 424.

Secundianus, or Sogdianus, his Brother and Murderer, reign'd seven Months.

Ochus, or Darius Nothus, reign'd nineteen Years, from the Year of the World 3581 to 3600, before Christ 400, before the vulgar Era 404.

Artaxerxes Mnemon reign'd fortythree Years, died in 3643, before Christ 357, before the vulgar Era 361.

Artaxerxes Ochus reign'd twenty-three Years, from the Year of the World 3643 to 3666, before Christ 334, before the vulgar Era 338.

Persis

PERSIS, a Roman Lady, whom St. Paul salutes in his Epistle to the Romans, xvi. 12. and whom he calls his beloved Sister. He says she has labour'd much for the Lord, and still labours. Nothing else of her Life is come to our Knowledge, nor do we see that she is honour'd by any Church; which is something singular.

Pestilence

PESTILENCE, or Plague. In the Hebrew Tongue, as well as in most others, the Word Plague or Pestilence is put for all Sorts of Distempers and Calamities. It answers to the Hebrew Word Deber, which properly signifies the Plague, and which is extended to all other epidemical and pestilential Diseases. Commonly the Prophets connect together the Sword, the Pestilence, and the Famine, as three Evils, which hardly go one without the other, by taking the [Prov. xv. 12. Vulg.] Word Plague in the Sense we have mentioned.

The Pestilent Man is the Scorner, the Fleerer, the pretended Free-thinker, who diverts himself with the Simplicity of good People, and with the Timorousness of pious Souls. The Hebrew Word Lez, which is translated by pestilent, signifies a Scorner. The Chair of Pestilence, [or Seat of the Scorner,] mention'd in the first Psalm, is the Seat of such pernicious People. [Ibid. Prov. xix. 25.] Solomon in many Places cautions his Readers against their Discourse. Non amat pestilens (the Hebrew has derisor) eum qui se castigat. The Scorner loves not him that reproves him. And elsewhere, Pestilenti flagellato, stultus sapientior erit. The Correction of such Scoffers is a [Prov. xxix. 8.] great Instruction for the Weak, the Low, the Foolish, those that want Light and Understanding, Homines pestilentes dissipant civitatem. Such kind of Men are only fit to draw down the Anger of God upon a Community, in order to its Destruction. Tertullus, the Advocate of the Jews, says, that St. Paul was a pestilent Fellow, a common Disturber and Mover of Sedition, because he maintained that Jesus was the Christ. Jeremiah gives to Babylon the Name of the contagious Mountain. Ecce ego ad te, mons pestifer; because it spread the Infection of Idolatry and Superstition through the whole World. [Hos. xiii. 14.] The Messiah says in Hosea, O Death, I will be thy Plagues; O Grave, I will be thy Destruction. St. Jerom translates it; Ero mors tua, ô mors, morsus tuus ero, inferne. And in Psalm xc. 3. instead of these Words, Ipse liberavit me de laqueo venantium, & à verbo aspero; the Hebrew has, He shall deliver me from the Snares of the Hunter, and from the dangerous Pestilence. The same Letters that signify a Word, dabar, also signify the Pestilence, deber.

Petasus

[2 Macc. iv. 12. ὑπὸ πέτασον ἦγεν.] PETASUS. This was a Cap usually worn by Travellers. 'Tis observed commonly upon the Head of antient Figures of Mercury. It had Brims, but not so broad as those of our Hats. It was peculiar to Travellers. Mercury wore it in the Quality of the God of Travellers and Merchants.

In the Greek of the Second Book of the Maccabees, Chap. iv. it is said that Jason, High-priest of the Jews, obliged the robust young Men, and such as approved themselves best in Horsemanship, to pass under the Petasus. Hesychius and Pollux say, that the Petasus was given to the Ephebi, to young Men that were just become Striplings; and to Mercury, to whom it is supposed that the Theatre of Jerusalem was dedicated: St. Jerom, and many other Interpreters, have understood this Passage of the Second Book of Maccabees, of Places of Prostitution, wherein these young People were obliged to enter themselves. He translates it, Optimos quosque epheborum in lupanaribus ponere.

Junius thinks that Petasus, in the Passage that we are now inquiring into, has the same Signification as Petaurus; and, indeed, both Hesychius and Phavorinus intimate, that these two Words were sometimes confounded. But Petaurus signifies a Wheel, across which the Petaurists us'd to pass with surprizing Agility. The Author of the Maccabees would therefore affirm, that Jason caus'd such Youth as succeeded best in the first Exercises of the Gymnasium, to perform those other dangerous Exercises.

Peter

[John i. 42, 43.] PETER. St. Peter the chief of the Apostles was born at Bethsaida, Son of John, Jona, or Joanna, and Brother of [Acts xxiv. 5.] St. Andrew. His first Name was Simon or Simeon, but when our Saviour called him to the Apostleship, he changed his Name into Cephas, that is, in Syriac, a Stone or a Rock, in Latin, Petra, whence Peter. He was a marry'd Man, and had his House, his [Mark i. 29. Matth. viii. 14. Luke iv. 38.] Mother-in-Law, and his Wife at Capernaum, upon the Lake of Gennesareth. St. Andrew having been first call'd by Jesus Christ, met his Brother Simon and told him,[1] we have found the Messiah, and then brought him to Jesus. Jesus beholding him, said to him, You are Simon Son of John, henceforth you shall be call'd Cephas, that is, Stone or Rock. After having pass'd one Day with our Saviour, they return'd to their ordinary Occupation, which was Fishing. Yet it is thought they were present with him at the Marriage of Cana in Galilee.

[Luke v. 1, 2, 3.] Towards the End of the same Year, Jesus Christ being on the Shoar of the Lake of Gennesareth, saw Peter and Andrew busy about their Fishery, and were then washing their Nets. He enter'd into their Boat, and bid Peter throw out his Nets into the Sea, in order to fish. Peter obey'd him, tho' he had already fish'd the whole Night without catching any thing. They took so many Fishes at this Draught, that their own Vessel, and that of James and John Sons of Zebedee, were fill'd with them. Then Peter threw himself at the Feet of Jesus, and said to him, Depart from me, Lord, for I am a Sinner. Then Jesus said to them, Follow me, and I will make you Fishers of Men. He said the same thing to James and John, and immediately they quitted their Boats and Nets, and follow'd our Saviour.

Some time after[2] Jesus coming to Capernaum, enter'd into the House of St. Peter, where his Mother-in-Law lay sick of a Fever. He immediately heal'd her, and she began to minister to him. A little while before the Feast of the Passover of the following Year, being the 32d of the vulgar Era, after Jesus return'd into Galilee, he made [Matth. x. 2. Luke vi. 13.] Choice of Twelve Apostles, among which St. Peter has always the first Place. One Night that Jesus Christ walked upon the [Matth. xiv. 28, 29.] Waters of the Lake of Gennesareth, St. Peter asked him Leave to come and meet him. Jesus gave him Leave, but he seeing a great Wave coming, was afraid, and therefore began to sink. Then Jesus held him up, and said to him; O Man of little Faith, why was you afraid? Afterwards landing on the other Side the Lake, and the Multitude that he had fed the Day before beyond the Lake, being come to him at Capernaum, he spoke to them of his Body and of his Blood, which he was to give to his Disciples to eat and drink; [Matth. xvi. 13, 14.] this so offended the Multitude, that several of them quitted him thereupon. He therefore asked his Apostles if they would leave him also; to which Peter reply'd, To whom shall we go, Lord? for thou hast the Words of [John vi. 53, 54, &c.] eternal Life.

One Day as our Saviour was near Cesarea Philippi, he asked his Apostles who Men took him to be. They answered him, that some said he was John the Baptist, others Elias, and others Jeremiah, or some one of the old Prophets. And you, says he, who do you say I am? Simon Peter answer'd him, You are the Christ, the Son of the Living God. Jesus then said to him, Happy are you, Simon Son of Jona, for 'tis not Flesh or Blood that has reveal'd these things to you, but my Father which is in Heaven. And I say further to you, that as your Name is Peter, so upon this Rock I will build my Church, and the Gates of Hell shall not prevail against it. And I will give you the Keys of the Kingdom of Heaven, and whatsoever you shall bind upon Earth shall be also bound in Heaven, and whatever you shall loose upon Earth shall be loosed in Heaven. About eight Days after, a our Saviour being transfigured upon the Mountain apart from the rest, took with him Peter, James, and [Matt. xvii. 1, 2, 3, &c. Luke ix. 28.] John, and shew'd them a Glimpse of his Glory. Then St. Peter being in an Ecstacy, and seeing Moses and Elias with Jesus, cry'd out to them, Lord, it is good for us to be here; if you please we will make three Tents, one for you, one for Moses, and one for Elias.

Jesus returning from thence to Capernaum, upon the Road the Apostles disputed among themselves, which of them should be the greatest in the Kingdom of God, which [Matt. xvii. 23, 24. Luke ix. 46. Mark ix. 32.] they thought to be very near. Jesus and St. Peter came first to Capernaum, a pretty while before the rest; and those that gather'd the half Shekel a-head for the Use of the Temple, came and asked Peter if his Master would pay it then. Jesus bid Peter throw his Line into the Sea, and he should find wherewith to pay the Toll for them two, in the Mouth of the first Fish he should take. Peter obey'd; and found a Shekel in the Mouth of the Fish, which he gave to the Toll-gatherers for Jesus and himself. Then the Apostles came to them, and Jesus inquir'd of them about the Conversation they had had by the Way, and gave them good Instructions of Humility and Modesty; shewing plainly, that though absent, he knew very well what Discourse had passed among them.

One Day as Jesus was speaking concerning the Forgiveness of Injuries, St. Peter asked him how often they must forgive, and [Matt. xviii. 21, 22.] whether it was not sufficient to pardon an Offender Seven times. Jesus told him, I say, you must pardon not only as far as Seven times, but even Seventy times Seven. Upon another Occasion,[3] as our Saviour was speaking of the Danger of Riches, Peter said to him; Lord, we have left all Things to follow thee; what Reward shall we have for it? Jesus answer'd him; I tell you in truth, that you who have left all Things to follow me, shall receive an hundred-fold, even in this World, and in the other Eternal Life; and at the last Day, when the Son of Man shall come to judge the World, you shall sit upon twelve Thrones, to judge the twelve Tribes of Israel.

[Mark xi. 12—24.] On the Tuesday before our Saviour's Passion, Peter shewed him the Fig-tree he had cursed, the Evening before, which was now dry'd up and wither'd; and the Day following as they sat upon the Mountain of Olives, he, with the other Apostles, asked Jesus when the Temple was to be destroy'd. On Thursday he was sent with St. John to prepare all Things for the [Mark xiv. 1, 2. Luke xxii.] Passover; and at Evening, when Jesus was come into the City with his Apostles, and being sat down at Table, began to speak of him that should betray him, Peter made Signs to John to ask him who this should be. After Supper, the Disciples enter'd into [John xiii. 24.] a Dispute which should be the Greatest among them; whereupon Jesus Christ laying aside his Garments, betook himself to wash their Feet, to give them an Example of Humility in his own Person. St. Peter at first made some Difficulty, and would not suffer his Master to wash his Feet; but Jesus telling him, that if he did not wash his Feet, he could have no Part in him; St. Peter reply'd, Lord, wash not only my [John xiii. 6- --10. Luke xxii. 31, 32, &c.] Feet, but my Hands and Head also.

Some time after, Jesus said to him, Peter, Satan has desired you, and the other Apostles, to sift you as Men sift Wheat: But I have pray'd for you, that your Faith may not fail; and when you are converted, confirm your Brethren. By this he warn'd St. Peter of his Fall, that was just at hand, and of his renouncing him; from which, by the Assistance of God, he was afterwards to recover. St. Peter then asked him, where he was going, and said, he was ready to follow [Luke xxii. 33.] him every where, not only to Prison, but to Death itself. But Christ declared to him, that he would be so far from following him to Death, that he would abjure him three times that very Night, before the Cock should crow, or before Break of Day. When Supper was ended, he went to the Garden of Olives, where taking Peter, James and John, he[4] went with them apart, that they might be Witnesses of his Agony. Peter, tho' before he had shew'd so much Resolution, yet fell asleep with the rest, which occasioned Jesus to say to him; Do you sleep, Simon? Could [Mark xiv. 37. Matth. xxvi. 40. &c.] you not watch with me one Hour?

Judas being come with the Soldiers to seize Jesus, Peter drew his Sword, and cut off the right Ear of one called Malchus, who was Servant to the High Priest: But Jesus bid him put up his Sword into the Scabbard, and told him, that all those that fought with the Sword should perish by the Sword: And at the same time healed [John xviii. 10, &c.] Malchus's Ear. Peter follow'd Jesus afar off, as far as the House of Caiaphas, and was let in by means of another Disciple, who was known in the Family. The Soldiers and Servants that had brought Jesus, having lighted a Fire in the Middle of the Hall, Peter mingled amongst them to warm himself [John xviii. 15, 18.] also; when a Maid Servant having look'd earnestly upon him, said, Surely this Man was with Jesus of Nazareth. But Peter made answer, I know not what you say, for I do not so much as know the Man. Presently after he went out into the Porch, when immediately the Cock crew. A little while after another Maid said to those that were present, This Man was with Jesus of Nazareth. But Peter deny'd it with an Oath. About an Hour after, one of the Company affirm'd, that Peter was a Disciple of Jesus. Others insisted upon the same thing, and said, that surely he was one of them, for his very Speech betray'd him to be a Galilean. Lastly, one of them, being a Kinsman to Malchus, whose Ear Peter had cut off, affirmed the same thing, and asked him, Did not I see you with him in the Garden? Peter again deny'd it with an Oath, protesting that he did not know the Man. And at the same time the Cock crow'd the second Time. Then Jesus being in the same Hall, and not far from Peter, look'd upon him; and Peter then remembring that Jesus had said to him, Before the Cock should crow Twice he should deny him Thrice, he went out of Caiaphas's House, and wept [Matt. xxvi. 73, 75. Mark xiv. 34, 72.] bitterly.

Very probably he remain'd in Secret, and in Tears, all the Time of our Saviour's Passion, that is, all Friday and Saturday following; but on Sunday Morning Jesus being risen, and Mary having been at the Tomb, and not finding the Body of Jesus, she came in haste into the City, to tell Peter and John that they had taken away their Master, and that she could not find where they had put him. Peter and John made haste thither, and John coming first, did not go into the Sepulchre. Peter then coming up to him, presently stoop'd down, and saw the Linen Cloths wherein the Body [Vide Joan. xx. 1, 2, 3, &c. and Luc. xxiv. 12, &c. Mark xvi. 7. Luke xxiv. 34. Chrysost. in 1 Cor. hom. 38.] had been wrapt. He went then into the Sepulchre, and John with him, after which they return'd to Jerusalem, not knowing what had come to pass. But soon after Jesus appeared to the Holy Women, who had come first to the Sepulchre, and bid them give his Apostles Notice of his Resurrection, and particularly St. Peter. And the same Day our Saviour also appeared to Peter, to comfort him, and assure him, that his Repentance had been acceptable to him.

Some Days after, St. Peter being return'd into Galilee, as Jesus had commanded him, and going to fish in the Sea of [John xxi. 1, 2, &c.] Galilee, or in the Lake of Gennesareth, with some other of the Apostles; Jesus appeared to them on the Shoar, and bid them throw out their Nets on the right Side of the Vessel. They threw them out, and took such a Multitude of Fishes, that they could not draw up their Nets again. Then St. John said to Peter, 'Tis the Lord. Peter immediately girded up himself, for he was naked, and swimming to Shoar he came to Jesus; then drawing their Nets to Shoar, Jesus dined with them. After Dinner, Jesus said to Peter; Simon Son of Jona, do you love me more than these? He answered, yea, Lord, you know that I love you. Jesus says to him, Then feed my Lambs. He put the same Question to him again, and Peter making the same Answer, our Lord said to him again, Feed my Lambs. This he repeated a third Time, at which St. Peter was troubled and said, You know, Lord, that I love you. Jesus reply'd to him, " Feed my Sheep. I tell you " for a Truth, that when you were young, " you girded your self and went where you " pleas'd; but now you are old another shall " gird you, and lead you where you would " not go." This he said to let him know what Death he was to dye. At the same time Peter seeing St. John the Evangelist, said to our Saviour, Lord, what must become of him? Jesus answered, " If I will " have him continue as he is, what does that " concern you? Do you follow me." Thus he refused to declare, in what manner St. John should end his Life.

After that Jesus Christ had ascended into Heaven, and that the Apostles had been Witnesses of his Ascension, they returned to Jerusalem, to wait there for the Holy Ghost, whom our Saviour had promised to send them; and being assembled together in a House, they continued there in Prayer, and in the Union of Charity, till the Time that the Holy Ghost descended upon them, in the Form of Tongues of Fire. During this Interval, St. Peter proposed to the Apostles, and to the rest of the Assembly, to fill up the Place that the Traitor Judas had left vacant in the Apostleship. The Proposal was agreed to by all, and two Persons were presented, Joseph Barsabas and Matthias. They all betook themselves to Prayer, to desire of God that he would declare his Pleasure in the Choice of one of these two Persons. The Lot was cast, which fell upon Matthias, who from that time was admitted as one of the Apostles.

The tenth Day after the Ascension of our Saviour, the Holy Ghost having descended upon the Apostles, and upon all the Faithful that were there assembled with them, and having replenished them with supernatural Gifts, and especially with the Gift of Tongues, all those that were Witnesses of this Miracle, express'd their Admiration at it: And it being the Day of Pentecost, and there being then at Jerusalem Jews from all the Provinces of the East; they could not comprehend by what means these People, who generally were Galileans, should speak the Languages of all these Pagan Nations. Some of them said, that the Apostles were full of Wine: [Acts ii. 1, 2, 3, &c.] But St. Peter standing up in their Defence, told them, That what they heard and saw, was not the Effect of Drunkenness, but it was the Completion of the Promise that the Holy Ghost had made by the Prophet Joel, [Joel ii. 28.] to send his Spirit upon all Flesh, and to give the Spirit of Prophecy to Young and Old, to Men and Women. He afterwards spoke to them of Jesus Christ, and told them, that he was the true Messiah, and that he was risen from the Dead, as the Scripture had foretold he should; declaring, that himself and the other Apostles were Witnesses of his Resurrection, of his Ascension into Heaven, and of the Mission of the Holy Ghost, the visible Effects of which they saw with their own Eyes, in the Gift of Languages wherewith they were replenish'd.

Then those that heard him were touched with Compunction, and asked the Apostles saying, Brethren, what shall we do? Peter answer'd them; Repent and be baptized, and you shall receive the Holy Ghost. Then he instructed them, baptized them, and that very Day Three thousand Persons were added to the Church. Some Days after St. Peter and St. John were going to [Acts iii. 1, 2, 3.] the Temple at the Hour of Prayers, and found at the Gate of the Temple a Man of more than forty Years of Age, who from his Birth had been a Cripple, so that he could not walk. This Man seeing Peter and John, asked an Alms of them. Then Peter said to him; I have neither Silver or Gold, but what I have I will give you. In the Name of Jesus of Nazareth, rise up and walk. Presently he got up, walked, and went into the Temple along with them, lifting up his Voice, and glorifying God. He held St. Peter, telling the People then assembled, all that happened unto him. Then St. Peter taking this Occasion, told the People, that it was not by his own Power, that he had performed the Miracle they wonder'd at so much, but it was by the Power of Jesus Christ that this Man was healed. He then laid before them the great Crime they had committed, in putting Jesus Christ to death, who was the Saviour of the World and the Messiah. And after he had shewn them by all the Prophecies that Christ was to dye thus, he exhorted them to Repentance, and to make a proper Use of the Death of Christ.

[Acts iv. 1, 2, 3, &c.] He was thus speaking to the People, when the Priests and Sadducees coming upon them, they laid hold on Peter and John, and put them in Prison till the Day following, for now it was late. But the Number of those that were converted this Day, at this second Preaching of St. Peter, was about Five thousand. The Day following, the Senate, the Magistrates, and the Chief of the Priests being assembled, they made the two Apostles appear before them, when they were asked, in whose Name they had performed the Miracle of healing the lame Man. St. Peter answered them, That it was in the Name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth, whom they had crucified, and whom God had raised again from the Dead. This is he, said they, who is the Corner-stone whom you have rejected, but who is he alone in whom we can hope for Salvation. The Boldness of Peter and John surprized them all, and causing them to be taken out of the Assembly, that they might deliberate among themselves on what Resolution to take, they agreed to order them to speak no more in the Name of Jesus Christ; then making them to come in again, they strictly charged them to teach no more in this Name. But Peter and John told them; Judge your selves which is most just before God, whether to obey you or to obey God; for we cannot help speaking of what we have heard and seen. The Senate then dismissed them with great Threats, if they should persist in being disobedient to their Orders.

[Acts v. 1, 2, 3. Acts iv. 23, 24, &c.] The two Apostles returned then to their Brethren, and related to them all that had passed. Having heard this, they raised their Voices to Heaven, and begged of God to give them Strength and Courage to declare his Word with perfect Liberty, and having finished their Prayers, the Place shook wherein they were assembled, and they were again filled with the Holy Ghost. At this time many of the Faithful sold their Estates, and brought the Money, and laid it at the Feet of the Apostles. Of this Number was a Man called Ananias, with his Wife Sapphira, who, by a private Agreement between themselves, concealed a Part of the Money for which they had sold their Land, and brought the rest to [Acts v. 15, 16,17, &c.] to St. Peter as if it were the whole Sum. Ananias came first, and St. Peter said to him; Ananias, how came Satan to seduce you, and to prevail with you to lye to the Holy Ghost, by concealing part of the Price of your Land? 'Tis not Men that you thought to impose on, but God. Immediately Ananias fell down dead, and they carried him out and buried him. About three Hours after his Wife Sapphira came in, and St. Peter said to her almost the same Things he had before said to her Husband, and immediately she fell down also, and gave up the Ghost. This Accident infused a great Awe in the whole Church, and amongst all those that heard of it.

[Acts viii. 1,2, 3, &c.] The Number of Believers considerably increased every Day, so that they even brought out the Sick into the Streets, and laid them where Peter was to pass, that at least his Shadow might cover some of them, by which means they were healed of their Distempers. Then the High-priest and his Associates, that is, the Pharisees, caused the Apostles to be apprehended and put into Prison. But an Angel brought them forth, and bid them go into the Temple, and there boldly declare all the Words of Life which God had taught them. This they perform'd, upon which the Princes and Priests caus'd them to be brought before them, and having demanded why they had disobey'd their Orders, in continuing to speak still in the Name of Jesus Christ; Peter and the Apostles answer'd, that it was more necessary to obey God than Man. This Answer provok'd them very much, and they were going to condemn them to death, when Gamaliel prevail'd with them to change their Resolution, by representing to 'em, that if this Matter proceeded from God, 'twas in vain for them to oppose it; but if otherwise, then it would soon vanish of itself. So they dismiss'd the Apostles, after giving them thirty-nine Stripes apiece, and charged them to speak no more in the Name of Jesus Christ.

After the Martyrdom of St. Stephen, a Persecution was carry'd on against the Faithful at Jerusalem, and they were obliged to take Shelter in several Places. The Apostles alone continued at Jerusalem; St. Philip the Deacon going to Samaria, the Samaritans received the Word of the Lord, and several of them were baptized. Then St. Peter and St. John repair'd thither also, to give them the Holy Ghost; which St. Philip, being only a Deacon, had not Power to do. Simon the Magician was also baptized among others, and admiring the Power that the Apostles had, of conferring the Holy Ghost, would have Era 35. bought the same Power of the Apostles, and accordingly offer'd Money to St. Peter. But Peter with Indignation reply'd to him, Thy Money and thou perish together, who thinkest the Gifts of God can be bought with Money! Thou hast no part with us, nor hast any Pretensions to this Ministry, for thy Heart is not right before God. Repent therefore of this Wickedness, and pray to God if perhaps he will pardon the wicked Thoughts of thy Heart. After this Peter and John return'd again to Jerusalem.

[Acts x. 1, 2, 3.] The Fire of Persecution being now pretty well extinguished, St. Peter departed from Jerusalem,[5] and visiting the Disciples from City to City, he came also to see the Saints that dwelt at Lydda. Here he found a Man call'd Æneas, who had been paralytick for eight Years. St. Peter said to him, Æneas, rise up; Jesus Christ the Lord cures you. He presently got up, and all that dwelt at Lydda that saw the Miracle were converted to the Lord. There was also at Joppa a certain holy Woman named Tabitha, who happening to die while St. Peter was at Lydda, the Disciples sent to desire him to come to them. Whereupon St. Peter came, and entering into the Chamber where Tabitha lay dead, he caus'd every body to go out, and betook himself to Prayers. Then turning himself towards the Corps, he said, Tabitha arise. At which Instant she open'd her Eyes, and seeing St. Peter, she sat up. This Miracle was much fam'd at Joppa, and was the Occasion that many were converted. St. Peter stay'd there a good while, taking up his Lodging with one Simon a Tanner.

Now there was at Cesarea of Palestine a Centurion call'd Cornelius, a Man that fear'd God, and to whom it was reveal'd by an Angel, that he should send to Joppa to Peter, who should tell him what he had to do. Cornelius immediately sent two of his Servants, and while they were upon the Road, the Lord sent a Vision to Peter, to prepare him to go to this Man without any Scruple, although he was not a Jew. For as yet the Door of the Gospel had not been to open'd the Gentiles. St. Peter then being upon the Terrass of his Host Simon, was seized with an Ecstasy, and saw, as it were, a great Sheet of Linen let down from Heaven, which was full of all Kinds of Animals and Reptiles, both clean and unclean. He had this Vision three times, and heard a Voice, saying, Arise Peter, kill and eat. But Peter answered, Lord, I have never eaten any thing unclean. The Voice reply'd, Call not that unclean which God has purified. After which the Sheet was again taken up into Heaven. At the same same Time the Men came in that had been sent by Cornelius. They acquainted him with what had happen'd to their Master, and desir'd him to go along with them to Cesarea. The Day following St. Peter went along with them, and some of the Brethren of Joppa accompany'd them also.

He found Cornelius with his Kindred and Friends in Expectation of him. When Cornelius [Acts x. 14, 15,16,&c.] first saw him, he fell at his Feet as if to worship him. But Peter lifting him up, told him; I am but a Man as well as you. Coming into the House, Peter said to those that were assembled together, You know what Aversion the Jews have for those that are uncircumcis'd, and with what Caution they avoid all Correspondence with them, and will not so much as go into their Houses. But God has shew'd me, that I ought not to esteem any Man as unclean and defiled, whom he has sanctify'd; for which Reason I have made no Difficulty of coming to you. I pray you therefore to declare to me, for what Reason you have sent for me. Then Cornelius related to him what had happen'd; and Peter giving Thanks to God, who had no Respect to the different Circumstances of Persons, began to preach Jesus Christ to Cornelius, and to all those that were present. While he was yet speaking, the Holy Ghost descended upon all that heard him, and they spoke with Variety of Tongues. Then Peter said, Can any one refuse Baptism to those that have already receiv'd the Holy Ghost as well as ourselves? And he commanded that they should be baptized in the Name of our Lord Jesus Christ.

When St. Peter was return'd to Jerusalem, the Faithful of the Circumcision said to him, Why have you gone unto those that are not circumcis'd, and why have you eat with them? But when Peter had related to 'em all that had passed, they were satisfy'd, and glorify'd God, who had given the Gift of Repentance, leading to Life, to the Gentiles as well as to the Jews. 'Tis thought that Peter went to Antioch a little [Acts xi. 1, 2, 3, 4, &c.] after this, a where he founded the Christian Church, of which he was first Bishop. St. Chrysostom says, he continued there a long while; 'tis believed he was there seven Years, [Chrysost. t. 1. homil. 42. p. 503. Greg. l. 6. Ep. 37. Euseb. l. 3. c. 1. Hist. Eccl.] not continually, but at several Times. For during this Time he went to Jerusalem, into the Provinces of Asia Minor, to Bithynia, Cappadocia, and Pontus, as is concluded from the Epistle that afterwards he address'd to the Faithful of those Provinces. From thence he went to Rome, in the 42d Year of the vulgar Era, and the 2d Year of the Emperor Claudius, about five and twenty Years before his Martyrdom; which is the Time that the Church of Rome generally allows to the Bishoprick of St. Peter. 'Tis thought that at his leaving Antioch, he there fix'd St. Ignatius in his Place.

'Tis said,[6] that while he was at Rome under Claudius, he there contracted an Acquaintance with Philo, the Alexandrian Jew, and had several Conversations with him. See the Article PHILO. 'Tis thought also, that the chief Occasion of his Journey[7] was to oppose Simon Magus, who by his Deceits had perverted a great Number of Persons, and was honour'd there almost as a God. The Presence of St. Peter, and the true Miracles that he opposed to the Tricks of Simon, ruin'd or much diminish'd the Reputation of this Impostor. If at this Time St. Peter did not continue long enough at Rome, to undeceive those that had been seduced by Simon, yet he did it effectually afterwards, at his Return, when he entirely defeated him, as we shall see in its Place.

[Acts 12. 1, 2, 3, &c.] St. Peter being come to Jerusalem, at the Passover of the 44th Year of the vulgar Era, Herod Agrippa began a Persecution against the Church. He put to the Sword St. James the Greater, Brother of John; and perceiving that his Death was acceptable to the Jews, he moreover caused Peter to be apprehended, and put him in Prison, with a Design of putting him to death publickly after the Passover. In the Interim Intercession was made for him continually to God, by the Church. But the very Night that Herod thought of putting him to death, as Peter loaded with Chains was sleeping between two Soldiers, the Angel of the Lord awakened him, broke his Chains, open'd the Door of the Prison to him, and brought him the Length of a Street. Then the Angel leaving him, he said, Now I find that the Lord has deliver'd me from the Hands of Herod, and from all the Expectation of the Jews. From thence he came to the House of Mary the Mother of John, where many of the Faithful were assembled at Prayers. He knock'd at the Door, and a Damsel call'd Rhode coming to open it, when she heard his Voice, instead of opening the Door to him, she run in a Transport of Joy to acquaint the Family, that Peter was at the Door. Those that heard her could not believe it, and said it was his Angel, and not himself. But he continuing to knock, they let him in, when he inform'd them of what had happen'd to him.[8]

He then left Jerusalem, but we are not told what became of him, 'till the Time of the Council held at Jerusalem, in the Year 51. 'Tis likely that before this Time he made his second Journey to Rome, from whence he writ his first Epistle, about the 50th Year of the vulgar Era. a It is dated from Babylon, that is, from Rome, as the Antients have explain'd it.[9] 'Tis thought that St. Mark, who was his Interpreter, was assisting to him in composing it, as to the Style. It is address'd to the Faithful of Bithynia, of Pontus, of Galatia, and of Cappadocia. It has a principal Regard to the converted Jews, though it speaks also of the Gentiles made Proselytes to the Church. It was sent by Silvanus, who is probably the same so famous in the Acts by the Name of Silas. It was written in Greek, and in it may be seen a Strength and Vigour not unworthy of the Prince of the Apostles.

St. Peter was obliged to leave Rome[10] by Order of the Emperor Claudius, who had banish'd all Jews from thence, because of the Tumults they continually rais'd there, excited by one Chrestus, as Suetonius [Sueton. l. 5. c. 25.] says, meaning probably by this Name Jesus Christ. The Chief of the Apostles return'd into Judea, where was held the Council of Jerusalem, in which, after a strict Examination of the Matter proposed to Peter and the Apostles, he spoke to them with much Wisdom, saying, that God having given his Holy Ghost [Acts xv. 7, 8, &c.] and the Gift of Faith to the Gentiles as well as to the Jews, they ought not to impose the Yoke of the Legal Observances on the new Converts, which (as he says) neither we nor our Fathers have been able to bear. But we believe, that 'tis through the Grace of Jesus Christ that both we and they shall be saved. St. James the Less, Bishop of Jerusalem, seconded this Opinion of St. Peter; and the Council came to this Conclusion, That no new Obligation should be imposed on the Gentiles, but only that they should be required to abstain from Fornication, from the Use of Blood, and from Meats offer'd to Idols. The Resolution of this Council was written to the Faithful of Antioch, because it was there this Question was first started.

Some Time after St. Peter coming to Antioch,[11] he eat and drank with the Gentiles, without regarding that Distinction of Meats enjoin'd by the Law. But after that, when some of the Faithful of Jerusalem came to Antioch, being converted Jews, St. Peter out of Fear to offend them separated himself from the converted Gentiles, and would no longer eat with them as before. St. Paul fearing, that what St. Peter did, might be interpreted, as if he had a Desire to oblige the Gentiles to Judaize, and to submit themselves to the Yoke of the Law, and so to revoke and annul what he himself had determined in the Council of Jerusalem: St. Paul, I say, withstood him to his Face, and openly expostulated with him, telling him, he was much in the wrong to endeavour to oblige the Gentiles, at least tacitly by his own Manner of acting, to live as the Jews do. St. Peter received this Reprehension with Silence and Humility, without having Recourse to his Primacy, to support what he had done; and the whole Church, says Pope Pelagius [Tom. 5. Concil. p. 622. b. c. d.] , reverences the Humility with which St. Peter submitted to the Reasons of St. Paul, and came into his Sentiments. Every body knows the Dispute heretofore agitated between St. Austin and St. Jerome, upon the Occasion of this Reproof of St. Peter by St. Paul. But as this does not belong to our Subject, we refer the Reader to the Letters of these two Fathers.

The Particulars of St. Peter's Life are little known, from the 51st Year of the vulgar Era, in which the Council of Jerusalem was held, 'till his last Journey to Rome, which was some Time before his [Athanas. de fuga. Vide 2 Pet. i. 14.] Death. Then being acquainted by Revelation, that the Time of his Death was not far off, he had a Mind to write to the Faithful that had been converted by him, to put them in mind of the Truths he had before taught them. He sent them therefore his second Epistle,[12] in which he exhorts them to persevere in the Doctrine of the Apostles, and in the Practice of good Works, without suffering themselves to be seduced by false Teachers. 'Tis thought he means by those the Disciples of Simon Magus. He speaks with Commendation of the Epistles of St. Paul, of which even then some ignorant Pretenders began to make an ill Use. However, for some Time the Canonicalness of this Epistle was made a Question,[13] because it was thought to have some Difference of Style from the former Epistle. But this Diversity may proceed from the several Interpreters; for [Clem. Alex. l. 7. Stromat. p. 764.] the Antients tell us, that besides St. Mark he had also Glaucias for an Interpreter, whom Basilides the Arch-heretick boasted to have for his Master. Our Preface may be seen to this Epistle.

St. Peter[14]

St. Peter and St. Paul came to Rome about the same Time, that is, about the Year of Christ 65, where they perform'd many Miracles, and made many Converts. Simon Magus, by his Tricks, continued to deceive the People, pretending himself to be the Messiah, and even attempting to ascend into Heaven. But he having caused himself to be carry'd up into the Air by his Demons, in a fiery Chariot,[15] St. Peter and St. Paul betook themselves to their Prayers; and then the Impostor, being forsaken of his Demons, fell down upon the Ground, and died by his Fall; not indeed immediately, but having broken his Legs, he was carry'd to Brunda, where, through Rage and Shame, he threw himself headlong from the Top of his House. This Place call'd Brunda was probably in Rome, for several of the Antients expresly affirm, that he died at Rome. St. Ambrose [Ambr. Serm. 68.] relates, that the Pagans being provoked against St. Peter, because of what had happen'd to Simon Magus, were in search of him to kill him, and that the Believers were urgent with him to quit Rome, in order to secure himself from their Fury. He was got already to the Gates of Rome, when he saw Jesus Christ coming in at the same Gate. Peter said to him, Lord, whither are you going? to which our Saviour answer'd, I am coming to Rome to be crucify'd over again. St. Peter understood, by these Words, that our Lord would have him stay there, and glorify him by his Death. He return'd, and related to the Faithful what had happen'd to him; he was taken and put into Prison, where, 'tis said, he continued for nine Months. Lastly, he was crucify'd at Rome in the Via Ostia, the 29th of June, on the same Day and in the same Place that St. Paul was beheaded. We are assured that he was fix'd to the Cross or Gibbet with his Head downwards, as he had desired himself of his Executioners.[16] This he did out of a Sense of Humility, for fear it should be thought, as St. Ambrose says, b that he affected the Glory of Jesus Christ, and the more to augment [Ambros. de interpell. Job. t. 2. l. 1. c. 1.] the Pain of his Execution[17].

'Tis said, that the Body of St. Peter was at first buried in the Catacombs, two Miles [Greg. Mag. l. 3. ep. 30.] from Rome, from whence it was afterwards transported to the Vatican, where it has lain ever since. His Festival is celebrated with that of St. Paul, on the 29th of June. St. Peter died in the 66th Year of the vulgar Era, after having held the Primacy of Rome for about 24 or 25 Years. His Age might be about 74 or 75 Years. It is generally agreed, [Niceph. l. 2. c. 37.] that St. Linus was his Successor. This is the Pourtraiture that Nicephorus gives us of St. Peter, which he has probably taken from the antient Pictures that were preserved of this Apostle. He was not fat, but pretty tall and upright, having a fair and palish Countenance. The Hair of his Head and Beard was thick, frizzled, and not long. His Eyes were black, and blood-shot, his Eye-brows protuberant and lofty, his Nose something long, and rather flat than sharp.

[Vide Aug. l. 13. c. 53. de Civit. Dei.] Some of the Pagans heretofore accused St. Peter of Magick, and said he had committed several evil Practices; that he had even kill'd and cut in Pieces a Child of a Year old, that he might procure Jesus Christ to be adored for three hundred and sixty-five Years, after which the Christian Religion was to cease. The Ebionites imputed [Epiphan. hæres. 20. c. 15. In Excerptis Clem. p. 807. Sozomen l. 7. c. 19. Origen. de Princip.] several of their Superstitions to him, among others was their bathing every Day after eating, and their abstaining from the Flesh of Animals, and all Things that proceeded from Animals. All these Forgeries they had inserted in a Book intitled, The Voyages of St. Peter, which they ascribed to St. Clement. He has been made also the Author of several Books,[18] such were his Acts, his Gospel, his Revelation, a Work about Preaching, and another about Judgment. We have still a large History of St. Peter, call'd the Recognitions, imputed to St. Clement. St. Clemens of Alexandria cited the Revelation of St. Peter in his Hypotyposes. They read this false Revelation in some Churches of Palestine on Good -Friday, in the fifth Age. Origen rejects the Book of St. Peter's Preaching; but Clemens Alexandrinus often quotes it[19]. The Nazarene Hereticks made use of St. Peter's Gospel. Origen relates something from it. The Orientals ascribe some Liturgies to him, but it is agreed that he had no Hand in 'em. These Things may be seen more at large in Baronius, and M. de Tillemont, T. 1. Hist. Eccl. St. Peter, Art. 39, 40. and in M. Fabricius, Cod. Apocryph. N. T. p. 374, 761, 800, 801, 802, &c.

[Euseb. l. 6. c. 12. Hist. Eccl.] St. Serapion, who was Bishop of Antioch about the Year 200, for the Sake of Peace allow'd the Reading of St. Peter's Gospel in the Church of Rhossos in Cilicia; but being inform'd afterwards that use was made of it to support the Heresy of the Docetes, he read it, and acknowledg'd the greatest Part of the Rules of this Book to be good, but that however there was a Mixture of such as were evil and false. He therefore made an Extract from it, and a Refua Refutation of it, which he sent to the Church of Rhossos, 'till he could have Opportunity to go thither himself in Person.

We have already observed, that St. Peter was a marry'd Man. But the Fathers inform [Clem. l. 7. Stromat. Chrysost. de Virgin. c. 82.] us, that after his calling to the Apostleship he renounced the Use of Marriage, and regarded his Wife afterwards only as his Sister. Some pretend that the Wife of St. Peter, as also [Vide S. Arit. t. 1. Miscel. Baluz. p. 357.] those of the other Apostles that were marry'd, follow'd their Husbands, and assisted them in the Preaching of the Gospel, according to their Abilities, visiting and instructing those of their own Sex.

We are assured[20] that St. Peter's Wife suffer'd Martyrdom, and that this holy Apostle seeing her led to be put to death, cry'd out to her with great Resolution, Wife, remember the Lord. 'Tis said also, that he had a Daughter named Petronilla, or Petrina, whose Name is to be found in some Martyrologies on the 31st of May. [Clem. Alex. l. 5. Strom. p. 445. Epiphan. hæres. 30. c. 22. Aug. in Adimant. c. 17.] Clemens Alexandrinus and Epiphanius acknowledge, that St. Peter had Children, and St. Austin mentions a Daughter of this Apostle. The Acts of Nereus and Achilleus relate several Things concerning her. The Bollandists may be consulted on May 31.

Pethor

PETHOR, a City of Mesopotamia, of which the false Prophet Balaam was a Native. The Hebrew[1] calls this City Pethura. Ptolemy calls it Pachora, and Eusebius Phathura. He places it in the upper Mesopotamia.[2] We think it to be towards Thapsacus, beyond the Euphrates. St. Jerome in his Translation of the Book of Numbers, xxii. 5. has omitted this Name. He has only, To Balaam who dwelt upon the River of the Ammonites. He read the Hebrew otherwise than we do now. The Septuagint have it, To Balaam Son of Beor Pathura, who dwells upon the River of the Country of his People. Certain it is, that Balaam was of Mesopotamia. See Deut. xxiii. 4.

Petra

PETRA, the capital City of Arabia Petrea. It is appropriated to Palestine in the antient Notitia Ecclesiastica, and it was the Capital of what was call'd the Third Palestine. Sometimes Eusebius and St. Jerome also extend Palestine as far as the Red-Sea, to Elath, a City lying upon this [רקם Petra. Joseph. Antiq. l. 4. c. 4, 7. Euseb. & Hieron. ad Arkem.] Sea; so that it comprehended Idumea and Arabia Petrea. But it was not so in the Ages before. The old Name of Petra, they say, was Rekem, or as Josephus and Eusebius read it, Arke, or Arkeme, or Arkem. Josephus says, that the City of Rekem takes its Name from a King of Midian call'd Rekem. This is he mention'd by Moses, Numb. xxxi. 8. But we no where find in Scripture, that Rekem was the Name of a City.

In the second Book of Kings it is said,[1] that Amaziah King of Judah took Selah (the Rock, the Stone) by War, and call'd the Name of it Joktheel unto this Day, as it is there said. It is commonly thought that he means the City of Petra, the Capital of Arabia Petrea, but we cannot be certain of it. Amaziah may have taken by Storm some Rock, (Selah) to which the Idumeans had fled, and may afterwards have given to this Rock the Name of Joktheel, that is, the Obedience of the Lord.

The Word Petra, in Greek, signifies a Rock, and was probably given to this City because of its Situation upon a Rock, or because it is encompass'd by Rocks, or because, as they say, the greatest part of the Houses are dug into the Rock. It is call'd also by the Antients Agra, or Hagor, whence comes the Name of Agarenians. But neither can those Names be found in Scripture; so that unless it be meant in the second of Kings, xiv. 7. and Isaiah xvi. 1. xlii. 11. under the Name of Selah, or Rock, I do not see that it is any where mention'd in Scripture.

[Strab. l. 16.] Strabo says, that Petra was the Capital of the Nabatheans, that the Mineans and the Gerreans brought their Perfumes thither to vend them; that the City was situate in a Plain full of Gardens, and water'd with Fountains, but all encompass'd [Plin. l. 6. c. 28] with Rocks. Pliny speaks of it almost in the same Terms. He says the Nabatheans inhabit the City of Petra, situated in a Plain of about two thousand Paces over, water'd by a River, and surrounded on all Sides by inaccessible Mountains. This Description is very different from that given by the Geographer of Nubia, who says, that most of the Houses of Petra were dug out of the Rock; and Herodian gives us a [Nubiens. climat. 3. part. 5. Herodian. l. 3. p. 528. Dio Cassius l. 68. p. 785, 786.] Description of the Capital of the Agarenians, standing upon the Point of a very high Mountain. This Author calls it Atra. Dion does not name it, but in the Manner he speaks of it, it must be upon a steep Rock, in a very dry and barren Country. Trajan besieg'd it, and tho' he had made a Breach in it, yet he was forc'd to raise the Siege. It appears, that the City he mentions was in Mesopotamia,[2] and therefore must be very different from the City of which we are now treating.

[See Cellar. Geog. vet. l. 3. c. 14.] Some Geographers think, that there were more than one Petra. St. Athanasius distinguishes[3] two, one in Palestine and the other in Arabia. He calls Arius or Macarius Bishop of Petra in Palestine, and Asterius Bishop of Petra in Arabia. Also the Paraphrasts Jonathan and Onkelos distinguish Rekem and Petra as two [Vide ad Gen. xx. 1. xvi. 14. Joseph. Antiq. l. 3. c. 2. Antiq. l. 4. c. 4. p. 110. c. Antiq. l. 4. c. 7. p. 117.] different Cities. Josephus speaks of Petra situated in the Country of the Amalekites, which is the same as Rekem or Petra, near which Aaron died; and he confounds it with Petra in the Land of the Midianites, which took its Name from King Rekem. Lastly, I am of Opinion, that we should distinguish Petra or Selah in the Country of Moab, or in the Eastern Idumea, of which Mention is made in Isaiah xvi. 1. xlii. 11. 2 Kings xiv. 7. which was afterwards call'd Joktheel, from the other Petra, call'd Rekem, situate in the South Idumea, or in Arabia Petrea, or in the Country of the Amalekites.

As to the Situation of this last City, it will be difficult enough to determine it. [Strab. l. 16.] Strabo places it three or four Days Journey from Jericho, and five Days Journey from the Forest of Palm-trees, which is upon [Plin. l. 6. c. 28.] the Red-Sea. Pliny places it six hundred Miles from Gaza, and an hundred and twenty-five Miles from the Persian Gulph. But Cellarius and Reland think that the Numbers have been changed, so that it ought to be read, an hundred and twenty-five Miles from Gaza, and six hundred Miles from the Persian Gulph. Eusebius places Theman five Miles from Petra, Carcaria a Day's Journey from the same City, Beeroth Bene-jacan at ten Miles, and the City of Elath at ten Miles towards the East.

'Tis thought that the City of Krak, or Karak, lying on the Confines of Arabia and Syria, inclining towards the South, is the antient City of Petra in Arabia, which formerly was its Metropolis, and which we find in Ptolemy by the Name of Charat Moab, or Charat Moba, in Stevinus, Mobucharas; and perhaps Caraca in in 2 Macc. xii. 17. and Carcar in the Book of Judges, xi. 3. Carach or Crat signifies a Fortress, in Chaldee and Syriack. It is known to our Historians by the Name of Crak of Montreal. It was for a long Time in the Possession of the Christians at the time of the Holy War; but at last Saladin became Master of it in the 584th Year of the Hegira, and the 1188th of Jesus Christ. The Ajubites, his Successors, enjoy'd it 'till they were driven from thence by the Mamlukes [D' Herbelot. Bibl. Orient. p. 419, 420, 256.] . Mr. D'Herbelot thinks, that the Name Krak was given it from that of Arak, as it was called by the Jews.

Since that Time it has obtain'd the Name of Hag, or Hagiar, which signifies a Stone or Rock. It stands in the Province of Higiaz, and is no farther distant from Jemamah, on which it depends, than by a Journey of twenty-four Hours. The City of Agr, or Hagiar, has given its Name to a Country which is between Syria and Arabia, and which we call Arabia Petrea, where the People of Saleh, that is to say, the Themudites, inhabited heretofore. There are still to be seen in this Country, as the Mussulmen affirm, the Rocks and Caves where they hid themselves, to avoid the Anger of God, with which they were threatned by the Prophet Saleh. There are also seen the Graves of those that were kill'd in fighting against the false Prophet Museilemah, who pretended to do in the Jemen what Mahomet had done in the Higiaz.

The City of Hagiar, by its advantageous Situation, became the Capital and the Fortress of the Carmathes, from whence those Rebels for a long time infested the Dominions of the Chalifs of Bagdet, and so much harrassed the Pilgrims of Mecca, that the Pilgrimage was suspended for several Years. Abusaid built there a Castle called Hagiarah, which his Son Abouthaber exceedingly fortify'd, so that after that Hagiar passed for a Place that was impregnable.

There is another City call'd also Hagr, or Hagiar, lying farther into Arabia, which belongs to the Province of Baharain.

PHALANX. This is a Greek Word, given to the Macedonian Soldiery. The Phalanx was a Battalion of Two thousand or even of Eight thousand Footmen, of the best Troops of the Army. St. Jerome sometimes makes use of this Word to express the Troops of Israel, at a Time when the Macedonian Phalanges were then unknown. Goliah[1] stood and defy'd the Phalanges of Israel. The Hebrew reads it, the Ranks, or the Army of Israel drawn up in Battle Array.

Phalti

PHALTI, or Phaltiel, Son of Laish. He married Michal, after Saul had taken her from David; but David afterwards took took her away from Phalti. Some Interpreters are of Opinion[1] that Phalti did [2 Sam. iii. 15.] not meddle with Michal all the while she continued in his House, for fear that both of them should incur the Penalty of [Levit. xx. 10.] Death, to be inflicted on Adulterers, because Michal had not been legally divorced; but these Reasons are frivolous. Saul look'd upon David as a Rebel to his King, and an Outlaw, whose Goods and Wives belong'd to him, and which he could absolutely dispose of. He would not have given Michal to Phalti, nor would he have received her, if he had not thought he might use her as his Wife. If Michal had no Children by Phalti, by whom then were those Children that the [2 Sam. xxi. 8. 2 Sam. vi. 23.] Scripture says she had, since 'tis known she had none by David? See the Article MICHAL before.

PHANNIAS, or Phanasus, Son of Samuel, of the Race of the Priests, a Native of the Town of Aphtasi. He[1] was a brutish and ignorant Person, who was not only unworthy of the High Priesthood, but did not so much as know as he ought, what this Office was. After the Faction had made themselves Masters of the Temple, they usurped the Power of setting up and deposing the High Priests. Matthias the Son of Theophilus, was then in Possession of this Dignity. They pretended to appoint him a[2] Successor, and because that heretofore, according to their[3] Notions, the High Priesthood had been given by Lot, they proceeded by the same Way to the Election of an High Priest. They cast Lots upon the Sacerdotal Family of Eniakim, (which is probably the same as the Family of Jakim, 1 Chron. xxiv. 12. which was the Twelfth of the Sacerdotal Families) and the Lot fell upon Phannias. 'Twas under his Pontificate that the Temple was destroy'd by the Romans, in the 70th Year of the vulgar Era.

Pharaoh

[Antiq. l. 8. c. 2. p. 268.] PHARAOH, a common Name of the Kings of Egypt. Josephus says, that all the Kings of Egypt, from Minæus the Founder of Memphis, who lived several Ages before Abraham, have always had the Name of Pharaoh, down to the Times of Solomon, far more than Three thousand and Three hundred Years. He adds, that

1 Sam. xxv. 44. in the Egyptian Language, the Word Pharaoh signifies a King, and that these Princes did not assume this Name, but when they ascended the Throne, at which time they quitted also their former Name. From hence it comes to pass, says Josephus, that Herodotus names none of the Kings of Egypt after Minæus the Builder of Memphis, though he had Three hundred and Thirty Kings for his Successors, because they had all the Name of Pharaoh; but because this Name did not pass to Women also, he names an Egyptian Queen Nicaule, who succeeded them. Lastly, I find, adds Josephus, from the antient Records of our Nation, that from the Age of Solomon no King of Egypt any longer had the Name of Pharaoh.

[Herodot. l. 2. c. 4. 99, 100.] But Josephus is not very accurate in this Passage. True it is, Herodotus says, That Mines or Minœus was the first King of Egypt, and Founder of Memphis; that there were Three hundred and Thirty Kings after him in Egypt; that after them there was a Queen called Nitocris, and not Nicaule, as Josephus writes it; but it is not true that these Kings had no other Name but Pharaoh. Herodotus says expressly,[1] That in the Books of the Egyptian Priests were read the Names and the Catalogue of Three hundred and Thirty Kings; that in this Number of Three hundred and Thirty, there were eighteen Ethiopians, and a Woman that was a Foreigner, call'd Nicotris, and that all the others were Egyptians. These Princes therefore had every one his proper Name mentioned in the Catalogue of the Egyptian Kings. So likewise we see in the Fragments of Manetho,[2] that every King of Egypt had a Name peculiar to him; and we find the Name Pharaoh only in Scripture.

[1 Kings x. 1, 2, &c.] What Josephus adds, concerning Queen Nicaule, or Nicotris, whom he pretends to be the same as the Queen of Sheba, of whom mention is made in Scripture, is intirely fabulous; and as to what he says, that since the time of Solomon, the Kings of Egypt have no longer had the Name of Pharaoh, is manifestly false, since we still find this Name in the second Book of Kings, under Hezekiah, 2 Kings xviii. 21. under Josiah xxiii. 29, 30, 33, &c. where this Name is joined to Necho, which was the proper Name of this Prince, under Jehoiakim xxiii. 35. and in the Prophets Isaiah, Jeremiah and Ezekiel; who are much later than Solomon. It is very pro bable that the Egyptians gave the Name of Pharaoh to their Kings, as long as the Egyptian Language was in common use, and as long as their Kings were of their own Nation. But after the Conquest of Egypt by Alexander the Great, and that the Grecians introduced their Language with their Government, the Name of Pharaoh was known no longer among them. [De Animal. p. 2. l. 5. c. 17. Ezek. xxix. 3.] Bochart thinks, that Pharaoh properly signifies the Crocodile, and that Ezekiel alludes to this when he says, Behold I am against thee, Pharaoh King of Egypt, the great Dragon that lyeth in the midst of his Rivers, which hath said, My River is mine own, and I have made it for myself. M. le [Cleric. in Genes. xii. 15.] Clerc thinks he has found the true Root of the Word Pharaoh, in the Arabic Verb Pharah, to be exalted, to be superior. Abbot Renaudot[3] says, that Pharaoh is the same as the Egyptian Word Pouro, which [Kircher Oedyp. Ægypt. l. 1. c. 76.] signifies a King. F. Kircher derives Pharaoh from the Root Pharah, which sometimes signifies to deliver; and he would have Pharaoh to signify one who is exempted from the Jurisdiction of the Laws.

We shall here give in a few Words the History of the Pharaohs, of whom the Scripture makes any mention. The first known to us is he, in whose time Abraham [Gen. xii. 10, &c.] went down into Egypt, in the Year of the World 2084, before Jesus Christ 1916, before the vulgar Era 1919. When Abraham was compelled by the Famine to go down into Egypt, he told Sarah his Wife, who was a very beautiful Woman, that he desired her to say she was his Sister; easily foreseeing, that the Egyptians would be charmed with her Beauty, and might therefore take her away from him; and fearing they might also put him to death, for her sake, if they should know her to be his Wife. And, indeed, no sooner were they come into Egypt, but Sarah was brought to Pharaoh's Palace; and as she pass'd only for Abraham's Sister, he was very civilly treated, and grew rich in Egypt. He had there a great Number of Cattle and Slaves, in which consisted the chief Riches of those Ages.

But the Lord smote Pharaoh and his Family with great Infirmities, and gave him to know, that this Woman was Abraham's Wife. He order'd him to be sent for, and said to him; Why have you us'd me thus? Why did you tell me she was your Sister? Therefore take your Wife, and be gone. At the same time Pharaoh gave Orders, that his Servants should conduct them out of Egypt, with every thing [382 that belonged to them. The proper Name of this King of Egypt is unknown: But it may be seen from this History, that he feared God, and that the true Religion was not intirely suppressed in Egypt.

The second Pharaoh spoke of by the Scripture, is he that reigned in Egypt in the time of Joseph, when he was sold thither by the Ishmaelitish Merchants, who had bought him of his[4] Brethren. This Prince, or perhaps his Successor, having had the mysterious Dream of seven fat Kine, and seven full Ears of Corn, consumed by seven lean Kine, and seven barren[5] Ears; and having been informed of Joseph's Abilities in interpreting Dreams, sent for him out of Prison, declared his Dream to him, and was so well satisfied with his Explication of it, that he made him Governor of all Egypt, and of his whole House, reserving only to himself, as we may say, the Name of King. So that Joseph was respected as Pharaoh's Father, [Gen. xlv. 8, 9.] and Regent of the whole Kingdom. This is the same Pharaoh that sent for and entertain'd the Patriarch Jacob, and his whole Family in Egypt, and gave them the Land of Goshen for a Habitation.

The third Pharaoh known in Holy Writ, is he that persecuted the Israelites. Moses tells us, that he was a new King, and had no Knowledge of Joseph.[6] Surrexit interea Rex novus super Ægyptum, qui ignorabat Joseph. This Prince observing that the Israelites were become very numerous and powerful, resolved to depress them by Hardship and Labour. He made them build Cities of Tents, Pithom, and Ramases, and set cruel and pitiless Task-masters over them. But the more he oppressed them, the faster they multiply'd; insomuch that he gave Orders to the Egyptian Midwives, who assisted the Hebrew Women in their Labour, to put to death all the Male Children, and to save alive only the Females. But this Command was not strictly executed. The Midwives feared the Lord, and preserved alive not only the Female Children, but the Males also.

Pharaoh seeing this Project did not succeed to his Wishes, publish'd a Decree, that all the Male Children, born of Hebrew Women, should be thrown into the Nile, and that only the Females should be spared. This Order was perform'd with Rigour enough. Yet God suffer'd that Moses should be preserved, and even brought up in Pharaoh's own Court by his own Daughter, who by chance had found the Child as he was expos'd upon the Nile. a Moses being grown up, and having kill'd an Egyptian,[7] who had abused an Hebrew, was obliged to fly from Egypt, to avoid that Death that Pharaoh had threatned him with.

Several Years after,[8] being about Eighty Years old, he return'd again by an Order from God, and perform'd those Miracles before Pharaoh, which we have related under the Article MOSES. There is a good deal of Probability, that this Pharaoh before whom Moses appeared, and in whose Sight he smote Egypt with so many Plagues, was a different Person from him who would have laid Hands on him after he had slain the Egyptian. This same Pharaoh having at last been compelled to send away the Hebrews, and to suffer them to go out of Egypt, soon repented of the Leave he had given, and pursued them at the Head of his Army with his Chariots. But he was drowned in the Red Sea, wherein he had rashly enter'd in the Eagerness of his Pursuit. Some Historians pretend to give us the Name of this Pharaoh; some, as Appion, call him Amosis, or Amasis; Eusebius calls him Chenchris, Usher calls him Amenophis. But we may assure ourselves, that there can be nothing certain of all this.

The fifth Pharaoh known to us, is he that gave Protection to Hadad, Son of the King of Edom,[9] who gave him to Wife the Sister of his own Queen, enriched him with Lands, and brought up his Son Genubah in his own Court. Hadad return'd to Idumea after the Death of David.

The sixth Pharaoh is he that gave his Daughter in Marriage to Solomon King of the Hebrews; and having taken Gezer, he set it on fire, drove the Canaanites out of it, and gave it for a Present to Solomon, in lieu of a Dowry for his Daughter, whom he had marry'd to this Prince.

The seventh is Shishak,[10] who entertain'd Jeroboam in his Dominions, a rebellious Subject of Solomon's, and afforded him a Refuge against the King his Master. The same Shishak declared War against Reboboam, the Son and Successor of[11] Solomon, besieged and took Jerusalem, carried away all the King's Treasures, and those of the House of God, and particularly the golden Bucklers that Solomon had made; instead of which Rehoboam had others made of Brass, for the Use of his Guards. The second Book of the Chronicles informs us, that the Army of Shishak consisted of Twelve hundred Chariots, Sixty thousand Horse, and an infinite Number of Infantry that followed him out of Egypt. That this Army was composed of Libyans, Troglodytes, and Ethiopians,[12] not to reckon the native Egyptians; which gives us a grand Idea of the Power and Magnificence of Shishak.

The same Author adds, that he took the strongest Cities of Judah, and came and lay down before Jerusalem. And as Rehoboam and the Princes of Judah had shut themselves up in this City, resolving to hold out a Siege against Shishak, the Prophet Shemaiah declared to them from the Lord, that they should be delivered up into the Hands of the King of Egypt. Then they humbled themselves, acknowledged the Justice of the Sentence of God, and open'd the Gates to Shishak. See the Article of this Prince.

The eighth is that Pharaoh with whom Hezekiah made a League against Sennecharib King of[13] Assyria, in the Year of the World 3290, before Christ 710, before the vulgar Era 713. The Reader may see the whole of this Matter under the Articles SENNECHARIB and HEZEKIAH. This Pharaoh is probably the same whom [Herodot. l. 2.] Herodotus names Sethon, Priest of Vulcan, who came to meet Sennecharib before Pelusium, and to whose Assistance Vulcan sent an Army of Rats, which gnaw'd the Bowstrings and the Thongs of the Bucklers of Sennecharib's Soldiers.

The ninth is Pharaoh-Necho, or Nechos, Son of Psammitichus, who made War with Josiah, and subdued him.[14] Herodotus also mentions this Prince. See the Article NECHO.

The tenth is Pharaoh Ophrah, who enter'd into an Alliance with Zedekiah King of Judah, and attempted to come to his Assistance against Nebuchadnezzar King of Chaldea. 'Twas against this Pharaoh that Ezekiel pronounced several of his Prophesies. See Ezek. xxix. xxx. xxxi. xxxii. He is called Apries in Herodotus l. 2. c. 161. He is also mentioned in Habakkuk ii. 15, 16. See also Isaiah xix. xx. and Jeremiah xlvi. 16, &c.

And this is pretty nearly what the Holy Scriptures acquaint us with, concerning the Pharaohs, or the antient Kings of Egypt. To these the Mussulmen add some other Particulars, which have but little Certainty [D'Herbel. Bibl. Orient. p.345.] in them. Yet we shall mention something of them here, to gratify[15] P H A [3 8 4] P H A the Reader's Curiosity. They tell us, that the Pharaoh who reigned in Egypt when Jacob went thither, was called Rian; and that the Name of his Successor was Massaab, and he to whom Moses addressed himself was called Cahous, or Valid. The first exalted Joseph to great Honours; the second continued to have some Regard for the Jews, in Consideration of Joseph; but that the third had forgot Joseph and himself too, affecting to pass for a Deity, and saying to his People, I am your sovereign Master, or your God. But the Hebrews utterly [Alcoran. c. Nazcat.] refusing to acknowledge him as such, drew upon themselves a furious Persecution, which did not end till Moses led them out of Egypt.

Eutychius the Patriarch of Alexandria relates, that the Oriental Christians gave the Name of Amious to the Pharaoh who was drowned in the Red Sea, as he pursued the Hebrews. Some Mahometans name him Sen-an Ben-Ulvan. They tell also several Circumstances of the Manner in which he enter'd into the Channel of the Red Sea; being drawn thither by the Archangel Gabriel, mounted upon a white Pad; and that after his Death, he was successively cast upon each Shore by the Waves, first upon that where the Hebrews were, and upon the other in sight of the Egyptians, that each Nation might see him, and be Witnesses of his Death and Punishment.

We might here give a List of the Pharaohs, if we had any Certainty about their Successions, and the Beginning of their Reigns. Manetho, from whom Eusebius and Julius Africanus have borrow'd what they say of them, is very different from the antient Egyptian Chronicon, cited by the Monk Syncellus; and each of them give so great an Antiquity to the Egyptian Dynasties, that all our Chronologers are forced to reject them either in the whole or in part. So that we shall not undertake to give here the Successions of the Pharaohs, as being a Matter of so great Uncertainty. Those that would enter more deeply into this Affair, may consult the Chronicon of Eusebius as given by Scaliger, and the Chronicon of Georgius Syncellus, and Sir Robert Marsham's Canon Chronicus Ægyptiacus, &c.

Pharez

[Genesis xxxviii. 27 28, &c.] PHAREZ, Son of Judah and Tamar. Tamar being just ready to lye in, found herself with Child of Twins. Pharez appeared first, and putting his Arm out, he immediately drew it back again. The Midwife tied a Piece of scarlet String about his Arm, saying, Why do you bring Divisions into the Family? or, Why have you broken the Wall of Separation? meaning that by this Motion he had disturb'd the Order of Birth, and given an Occasion for a Scruple, to know which was the First-born. And from hence he had the Name of Pharez given him. The Year of the Birth of these two Twins is not set down in Scripture. The Sons of Pharez were Hesron and Hamul. Numb. xxvi. 20, 21.

Pharisees

[Hieron. in Isai. viii.] PHARISEES. The Sect of the Pharisees was one of the most antient and most considerable among the Jews, and its Original is not very well known. The Author of the fourth Book of Maccabees, Chap. 6. says, That in the time of John Hyrcanus the High Priest, there were three Sects among the Jews, the Pharisees, the Sadducees, and the Essenes. Josephus, after mentioning the Letter of Jonathan to the Lacedemonians, speaks of the three Sects here named; which Letter was writ in the Year of the World 3680, and Jonathan died in the Year following. Simon succeeded him, and govern'd eight Years. After Simon, succeeded Hyrcanus, who govern'd for nine and twenty Years. So that we may place the Rise of the Sect of the Pharisees about the Year of the World 3820, before Christ 180, before the vulgar Era 184.

[Joseph. Antiq. l. 14. c. 17. p. 434] St. Jerome places the Beginning of the Pharisees pretty late; for he says, The Scribes and Pharisees proceeded from the Division of the two famous Schools of Hillel and Shammai. To Hillel succeeded Akiba, Master of Aquila of Pontus, who lived in the second Age of the Church, and who translated the Holy Scriptures of the Old Testament out of Hebrew into Greek. 'Tis known from Josephus, that Shammai, or Samœas, lived in the Time of Herod the Great, and consequently not long before the Birth of our Saviour. The Rabbins also acknowledged Hillel as Founder of the Sect of the Pharisees, or at least as the chief Ornament of it. But we make no doubt but that it was more antient. We see by several Passages of Josephus,[1] that they were in Credit a long time before Herod, under the Reigns of Hyrcanus, Alexander Jannœus, and Salome his Wife.

[Joseph. Antiq. l. 18. c. 2.] The Pharisees take their Name from a Hebrew Word, which signifies Division or Separation, because they distinguished themselves from the other Israelites by a more strict Manner of Life, of which they made Profession. They imputed much to Destiny or Fatality, and to the eternal Decrees of God, which have appointed all things before Time was. Josephus, who himself was a Pharisee,[2] tells us, that the Opinions of this Sect nearly approached those of the Stoicks; who did not ascribe every thing to Destiny, but left to Men a Liberty of doing good Actions or not; so that their Notion of Fatality was not destructive of Free-will, as St. Epiphanius seems to have imagined. He adds, that they were much addicted to Astrology, thinking that by means of the Stars they might arrive at the Knowledge of the Secrets of Providence.

[Matt. xxiii. 27.] The Sect of the Pharisees was very numerous and far extended. The Reputation they gain'd by their Learning, and by the Regularity of their Lives, made them very early to become formidable even to Kings themselves. Alexander Jannæus King of the Jews was for his whole Life at variance with the Pharisees, and had often occasion to repent it. At his Death he told his Wife, that if she would reign peaceably after him, she must win the Pharisees to her Interest.[3] She follow'd this Advice, and the Pharisees taking the Opportunity, made themselves Masters of the Government, and the Queen let them dispose of every thing at their Pleasure.

When our Saviour Jesus Christ appear'd in Judea, the Pharisees were then in great Credit among the People, because of the Opinion they had conceived of their great Learning, Sanctity of Manners, and exact Observance of the Law. They fasted often, made long Prayers, paid their Tythes scrupulously, distributed much Alms: But all this was vitiated and corrupted by a Spirit of Pride, Ostentation, Hypocrisy, and Self-love. Like to whiten'd Sepulchres, they appear'd beautiful without, whilst within was nothing but Corruption and Deformity. They wore large Rolls of Parchment upon their Fore-heads, and Wrists, on which were written certain Words of the Law; and affected to have Fringes and Borders at the Corners and Hems of their Garments, broader than the other Jews wore, as a Badge of Distinction, and as greater Observers of the Law than others.

[Hieron. in Matt. xxiii. 27.] There were some of them, as St. Jerom says, who fix'd Thorns to the bottom of their Robes, which as they walked might prick their Legs, and draw Blood from them, that they might make Mortification familiar to them, and be continually obliged to think on God. They often wash'd their Hands, and pretended to a great external Purity, never entering their House, or sitting down at Table, without washing. When they had been in the Streets, or in the Market, for fear they [hæref. 16. Luke xviii. 2. Epiphan. hæref. 16. Matt. ix. 11. Luke vii. 39.] should have touched any unclean Thing, they wash'd from their Fingers Ends up to their very Elbows. They would not so much as touch a Publican, or any Man that they thought led an ill Life, nor would they eat, drink, or pray with him. All the Vessels they made use of, their Utensils, and very Beds, were often plunged in Water: And they often bathed themselves in [Joseph. in vita sua. Mark vii. 10, 11, 12.] cold Water, by way of Purification.

They kept many Fasts of Supererogation. The Pharisee in the Gospel boasts of his fasting twice a Week, that is, Monday and Thursday, according to Epiphanius; and they did it with greater Strictness than the other Jews. 'Tis these that our Saviour pointed at, when he says, Mat. vi. 16. Moreover when ye fast, be not as the Hypocrites, of a sad Countenance; for they disfigure their Faces, that they may appear unto Men to fast. Verily I say unto you, they have their Reward. But thou when thou fastest, anoint thy Head, and wash thy Face; that thou appear not unto Men to fast, but unto thy Father which is in Secret. And thy Father which seeth in Secret, shall reward thee openly. The Pharisees upbraided our Saviour and his Disciples, for eating and drinking as other Men, whereas they and the Disciples of John the Baptist [Mark vii. 4. Mark vii. 11.] fasted often. And Josephus gives an Account, that being young, he put himself under the Conduct of one called Banneus, a very austere Man, who eat nothing that was dress'd or prepared, but contented himself with what the Earth produced of its own accord.

In Matters of Religion the Traditions of the Antients were the chief Subject of their Studies; and to these they made Additions of their own as they thought fit, making their own Opinions to pass for Traditions of the Antients. By this means they had overburthen'd the Law with a vast Number of trifling Observances, that were useless and disgustful, and which made it a heavy and insupportable Yoke. They had even alter'd it and corrupted it in important Articles, by their own perverse Interpretations of it, as our Saviour in his Gospel reproaches them with it. For Example, the Law commands us to honour Father and Mother: The Pharisees taught, that if we say to our Parents that are in Necessity, Father, or Mother, the thing that you ask of me is dedicated to God, it is no longer in my Power, but you shall have a Part in the Merit of my Offering; they were then freed from the Obligation of succouring their Parents.

The Observation of the Sabbath is another Point they had refined upon, and our Saviour Saviour had often Debates with them upon this Head. They maintained, that upon this Day it was not so much as allowed to heal a [Luke vi. 7. John ix. 16.] sick Person, though Christ did it only with a Word speaking. They found fault, that upon this Day the People brought their Sick to be healed. They were scandalized, that a Man carried away his Bed upon the Sabbath -day, after he had been cured of a Palsy. [Mark ix. 11. John v. 8, 9.] From all which they concluded, that Jesus Christ could not be a Man sent from God, because he so little observed that profound Rest, that they thought was to be kept on [John ix. 16. Epiphan. hæref. 16.] this Day. St. Epiphanius relates surprizing Effects of these their great Austerities, for preserving the Purity of the Body. There were some of them who almost deprived themselves intirely of Sleep. Others were used to sleep upon a Plank of a Foot broad, that if they should sleep too soundly, they might fall down upon the Ground, and so being awaken'd, they might go to Prayers. Others lay upon sharp and uneven Stones; others upon Thorns: So that even in Sleep they might practise Mortification.

Our Saviour upbraids them with making long Prayers, standing up in the Synagogues, or at the Corners of the Streets; and under pretence of Prayer, to consume Widows [Matt. xxiii. 14. Matt. xxiii. 15.] Houses. He also reproaches them with compassing Sea and Land to make a Proselyte, or to convert a Gentile; and after that, to make him still a greater Sinner than he was before, by teaching him a pernicious Doctrine, instead of shewing him the true Paths of Vertue. He says, they affect to build up the Tombs of the old Prophets, and openly to [Luk. xi. 47, 48. Matt. xxiii. 29.] declare, that they disapprove of the Actions of their Fore-fathers who persecuted them; while they themselves are actuated by the same Spirit, and oppose all those that would reclaim them from their Enormities. The Followers of this Sect condemned only the actual Commission of Sin, and thought themselves allowed to entertain any evil Desires, Thoughts and Designs, that were not attended with outward Acts of Sin. Thus Josephus laughs at Polybius, for thinking [Antiq. l. 12. c. 13.] the Gods had punished Antiochus, for having only form'd a Design to pillage the Temple of the Goddess Diana, though he had not put it in execution.

The Pharisees believed the Soul to be Immortal, and acknowledged the Existence of [Acts xxiii. 8.] Angels and Spirits, and admitted a kind of Transmigration of the Souls of good Men,[4] which might pass from one Body to another; whereas those of wicked Men were condemned to dwell for ever in Prisons of Darkness. 'Twas in consequence of these Principles, that some of the Pharisees said, that Jesus Christ was John the Baptist, or Elias, or some one of the old Prophets; [Matt. xvi. 14.] that is, that the Soul of one of these great Men had passed into the Body of our Saviour. They believed also the Resurrection [Matt. xxii. 23.] of the Dead, and admitted of all the Consequences of it, against the Sad-ducees who rejected it. Lastly, Josephus, who was a [De bello, l. 7. c. 25.] Pharisee, believed that the Demons that possessed Men, were nothing else but the Souls of wicked Men, which enter the Bodies of other Men, and are sometimes driven from thence by Exorcisms. We see some Foot-steps of this Opinion in the Gospel. See the Commentary upon St. Matthew, viii. 29, 30, 31.

The Sect of the Pharisees was not extinguished by the Destruction of the Temple at Jerusalem, and by the Dispersion of the Israelites. The greatest Part of the Jews that still subsist are of this Sect,[5] being as much devoted to their Traditions, which they call the Oral Law, as their Ancestors were. He that rejects the Oral Law is an Apostate, and deserves Death, say the modern Pharisees or the Rabbinists; for this is the Name that they now commonly go by. Benjamin of Tudela, who lived about the latter End of the Twelfth Age, says, That in his Journey he found Pharisees, that were continually bewailing the Desolation of Sion and of Jerusalem, who abstain'd from Flesh, and were always clothed in Black, fasting every Day except the Sabbath, and perpetually praying for the Deliverance of Israel.

The Opinions of the modern Pharisees are the same as of the antient. They leave every thing to the Disposal of Destiny, except what depends upon human Liberty. They say that all Things are in the Hand of Heaven, except the Fear of God; that is to say, that in the Exercise of Acts of Piety they have free Will, and may voluntarily determine themselves to Good or Evil. M. [Hist. of Jews, l. 3. c. 2. art. 8.] Basnage says, They do not differ from those that in Holland are called Remonstrants. Those of this Age are less strict than the Antients as to Food, and other Austerities of the Body; but they come nothing short of them in Vanity and Tenaciousness for the pretended Traditions of their Fathers. They also hold a kind of Metempsychosis, or Revolution of Souls. The Fathers who have writ concerning Heresies, have made a Heresy of the Pharisees, as if those that made Profession of this Sect had been separated from the Body of the Jews, as among us, Hereticks are excommunicated and rejected by the Orthodox: But it was not so with the Jewish Sects. Whatever Abuses and Corruptions might prevail among them, whether in Manners or Opinions, they were united in Communion with the other Israelites. The Pharisees and the Sadducees even discharg'd the chief Offices of Religion and the State. The Reader may peruse our Dissertation upon the Sects of the Jews, printed before our Commentary upon St. Mark; and Serrarius and Basnage upon the same Subject.

Pharpar

PHARPAR, or Pharphar, is one of the Rivers of Damascus, or rather, 'tis an Arm of the Barrady or Chrysorrhoas, which waters the City of Damascus and the [2 Kings v. 12.] Country about it. Are not Abana and Pharphar, Rivers of Damascus, better than all the Waters of Israel? The River of Damascus has its Fountain in the Mountains of Libanus. At its Approach to the City it is divided into three Arms, one of which passes through Damascus. The other two water the Gardens round about, and then re-uniting, they lose themselves at four or five Leagues from the City, towards the North. Pharurim

PHARURIM. Nathanmelech, Eunuch to King Josiah, had his Dwelling at Pharurim, near the Entrance of the Temple. The Chaldee, and most of the Interpreters, think Pharurim signifies the Suburbs. [1 Chron. xxvi. 18.] We find in the Chronicles a Place to the West of the Temple, call'd Parbar. In short, I imagine Pharurim, or Phrurim, is the same as Phrourion in Greek, which signifies a Watch or Guard. Nathanmelech had his Abode near the Body of the Guard of the Temple.

Phazael (I)

I. PHAZAEL, Brother of Herod the Great, and eldest Son of Antipater the Idumean.[1] Hyrcanus the High-priest and Prince of the Jews, having committed to Antipater the chief Authority in the Government of the Country, he made his eldest Son Phazael General of the Jewish Army, and Governour of Jerusalem and the Country round about. On several Occasions Phazael approved his Valour and [Joseph. de bello, l. 1. c. 10. p. 729.] Conduct. He beat Felix, who intended to revenge upon him the Death of Malichus, whom his Brother Herod had caused to be slain at Tyre. Some time after the Jews accused the two Brothers, Phazael and Herod to Mark Anthony, as having usurp'd the whole Authority, and left Hyrcanus only the Name of Prince. But Herod so well insinuated himself into Anthony's Favour, that his Enemies were forced to drop their Cause. Lastly, during the War of Antigonus against Herod, Pacorus Son to the King of the Parthians entering into Judea, resolved to place Antigonus upon the Throne. He caused Barzaphernes with his Troops to enter into Galilee, and sent before him towards Jerusalem one Pacorus Cup-bearer to the King of Persia, with a Body of Horse. Pacorus advanc'd with Antigonus to Jerusalem, where first they made themselves Masters of the City, and then of the Temple. Herod and Phazael, who had took Side with Hyrcanus, having shut themselves up in the Royal Palace, Pacorus stay'd in the Suburbs with his People. But Antigonus having desired him to come into the City, Phazael went to meet him, and received him into his House. Pacorus pretending to desire to appease these Commotions, advised Phazael to come along with him into Galilee, to meet Barzaphernes, and there to treat of Peace with him. Phazael fell into this Snare, and follow'd Pacorus into Galilee; where Barzaphernes at first received him very kindly, making him Presents; but afterwards caused him to be apprehended, and put in Prison. This Piece of Treachery was so resented by Phazael, that he dash'd out his own Brains against the Walls of his Prison.

Phebe

PHEBE, a Deaconess of the Port of Corinth, call'd Cenchrea. St. Paul had a particular Esteem for this holy Woman; [Theod. ad Rom. xvi. p. 115.] and Theodoret thinks the Apostle lodged at her House for some Time, while he continued in or near Corinth. 'Tis thought she brought to Rome the Epistle he writ to the Romans, wherein she is commended and recommended in so advantageous a Manner. [Rom. xvi. 1, 2.] He says, I commend unto you Phebe our Sister, which is a Servant of the Church which is at Cenchrea: That ye receive her in the Lord, as becometh Saints, and that ye assist her in whatsoever Business she hath need of you: For she hath been a Succourer of many, and of my self also. Some Moderns have advanced a Notion, that Phebe was Wife to St. Paul, but none of [Vide Toletum in Rom. xvi.] the Antients have said any thing like it. 'Tis thought in Quality of Deaconess she was employ'd by the Church in some Ministrations suitable to her Sex and Condition; as to visit and instruct the Christian Women, to attend them in their Sickness, distribute Alms to them. Phenicia

PHENICIA, a Province of Syria, the Limits whereof have not always been the same. Sometimes its Extent has been defined from North to South, from Orthosia as far as Pelusium.[1] At other times its southern Limit has been Mount Carmel and [Hieron. ad Isai. xxix. & ad Amos viii.] Ptolemais. It is certain, that formerly, I mean from the Conquest of Palestine by the Hebrews, its Limits were narrow, and it had nothing of the Country of the Philistines, which took up all the Coast from Mount Carmel along the Mediterranean, as far as the Borders of Egypt. It had also very little Extent on the Land-side, because the Israelites, who had all Galilee, shut it up to the Mediterranean Sea.

Thus when we speak of Phenicia, we must have a right Notion of the Time. Before Joshua made the Conquest of Palestine, all the Country was possessed by the Canaanites, the Sons of Ham, who were divided into eleven Families, of which the most powerful was that of Canaan the Founder of Sidon, and Head of the Canaanites properly so call'd, to whom the Greeks gave the Name of Phœnicians. 'Twas only these that preserved their Independance, not only under Joshua, but also under David, Solomon, and under the succeeding Kings. But they were subdued by the Kings of Assyria, and those of Chaldea. Then they successively obey'd the Persians, Greeks, and Romans; and at this Day Phenicia is in Subjection to the Ottomans, not having had any Kings of their own Nation, nor any independent Form of Government, for more than two thousand Years. For the Kings that the Assyrians, Chaldeans, Persians, and Grecians have sometimes left them, were tributary to the Conquerors, and had but a precarious Authority.

The chief Cities of Phenicia were Sidon, Tyre, Ptolemais, Ecdippe, Sarepta, Berythe, Biblos, Tripoli, Orthosia, Simira, Aradus. The Phenicians also antiently had Possession of some Cities in Libanus. Sometimes [Vide Reland. Palæst. l. 1. c. 9. p.50.] the Greek Authors comprehend all Judea under the Name of Phenicia. In the antient Notitia Ecclesiastica, they distinguish Phenicia above the Sea, and Phenicia of Libanus. The first contains the Cities of Tyre, Berythus, Arca, Gegarta, Paneas, Trierii, Sidon, Biblos, Orthosia, Aradus, Gonaiticus Saltus, Ptolemais, Tripoli, Botrys, Antaradus, Politiana; and Phenicia of Libanus contains Edessa, Abila, Justinianopolis, Gonaiticus Saltus, Laodicea, Damascus, Palmyra, Salaminia, Eliopolis, the Canton of Jambrudes, the Canton of Magludes, the Eastern Canton. By this may be seen how great the Extent [Lib. 4. c. 104. Vide Bochart. Chanaan. l. 1. c. 1. Matth. xv. 22.] of Phenicia was then.

Phenicians

PHENICIANS. Herodotus says, that the Phenicians inhabited at first upon the Red-Sea, whence they came and settled upon the Mediterranean, between Syria and Egypt. This may be easily reconciled with Moses, who says they came from Ham, who peopled Egypt and the neighbouring Countries. The Name Phenicia is not found in the Books of Scripture written in Hebrew, but only in those whose Original is Greek, as the Maccabees, and the Books of the New Testament. The Hebrew always reads Canaan, which Article may be perused by the Reader. However, St. Matthew, who wrote either in Hebrew or Syriac, calls her a Canaanitish Woman, whom St. Mark, writing in Greek, calls a Syrophenician, or a Phenician of Syria; because Phenicia then made a Part of Syria, and to distinguish them from the Phenicians of Africa, or the Carthaginians. The Name Phenician is derived, either from the Palm-tree call'd in Greek Phoinix, which are very common in Phenicia; or from a Tyrian call'd Phœnix, spoke of in Fable; or from the Red-Sea, from the Shores of which it is pretended they came. Phœnix sometimes signifies red, whence comes Puniceus and Phœniceus Color. Others derive it from the Hebrew Pinchas or Phineas; others from Bene-anak, Sons of Anak, or the Posterity of the Anakim. 'Tis well known that the Giants, the Sons of Anak, were very famous in Palestine.

Many fine Inventions have been ascrib'd [Lucan. l. 3. v. 22.] to the Phenicians; as particularly the Art of Writing.

Phœnices primi, famæ si creditur, ausi [Dionys. v. 904.] Mansuram rudibus vocem signare figuris.

'Tis said also, that they first found out the Art of Navigation, Commerce, Astronomy, Voyages in the open Sea. Bochart has shewn, by incredible Labour and Industry, that they had sent out Colonies,[1] and had left Footsteps of their Language in almost all the Isles, and upon all the Coasts of the Mediterranean Sea. But the most famous of their Colonies was that of Carthage. 'Tis thought that at Joshua's Invasion many of them retired into Africa [Procop. Vadalicis, l. 2. c. 10.] and other Places. Procopius says, that at Tingis in Africa are found two Columns of white Marble, set up near the great Fountain, whereon was read in Phenician Characters; We are the People who took our Flight from before the Robber Jesus the Son of Nave. Our Dissertation may be consulted, concerning the Country to which the Canaanites retired, printed before our Commentary upon Joshua.

Phenix

PHENIX, or Phœnix, a most rare Bird, and the only one of its Species, of which many wonderful Things are related. 'Tis said it lives several Ages, and then is renew'd again from its own Ashes. The Rabbins[1] teach, that all the Birds having comply'd with the first Woman, and eaten of the forbidden Fruit along with her, the Phenix only would not eat of it, from whence it obtain'd a kind of Immortality. For at the End of a thousand Years a Fire proceeds out of the Phenix's Nest, and consumes it; but in such manner, that there remains, as it were, an Egg, from whence the Bird is again renewed and reproduced. Others say, that it being arrived to the Age of a thousand Years, it plucks off its own Feathers, and dies of mere Decay of Nature : But it soon is produced again from its own Body, and returns to Life.

Other Rabbins add,[2] that this Bird being in Noah's Ark, and out of Respect to the Patriarch not daring to ask Meat of him as the other Birds, Noah said to it, I pray God thou may'st not die. To which it answer'd, I shall die in my Nest, and I [Job xxix. 18.] shall live as long as the Phenix. We shall examine this Passage hereafter ; it suffices here to observe, that the Rabbins explain it of the Phenix.

The Naturalists who have spoke of this Bird, say Things of it that are altogether [Vide Plin. l. x. c. 2. & l. xiii. c. 4.] incredible. 'Tis a Bird, as they say, of the Bigness of an Eagle, whose Head is crested with a most beautiful Tuft, and the Feathers of its Neck are gilt, and those of its Tail purple, with Carnation Down. Its Eyes are sparkling like two Stars. We are assured, that there is but one at a time in the whole World. According to some, it lives five hundred Years, according to others a thousand. Cheremon in Tzetzes makes its Life seven hundred Years long ; Pliny but six hundred and sixty, or but five hundred and sixty, or five hundred and twenty-one ; for Copies vary. Solinus, five hundred and forty. Hesiod says the Phenix lives as long as nine Ravens, and the Raven as long as nine Men, or nine Generations of Men.

[Tacit. Annal. l. 6. & l. 3. c. 9.] Tacitus says, there are some that make it live for fourteen hundred and sixty Years, but it is generally thought its Age does not extend beyond five hundred ; so that this is a Point of much Uncertainty. 'Twas related in his Time, that the first that had been seen in Egypt appear'd in the Time of Sesostris, the second under Amasis, and the third under Ptolemy Euergetes. Pliny says, that a Phenix was brought to Rome under the Reign of the Emperor Claudius, in the Year 800 from the Foundation of Rome ; that it was shewn in the Assembly of the Senate, and that this Event was recorded in the publick Acts ; but, says Pliny, no body doubted but this was false.

As to the Manner in which it ends its Life, Authors are no more agreed upon this Fact, than upon its Age. 'Tis said, that when the Time of its Renovation approaches, it builds itself a funeral Pile of Branches of sweet-scented Trees, upon which it sits down and dies. From its Bones and Marrow there is first produced a Worm, which as it grows takes the Form of a Bird. When it is grown up, it takes up the Ashes of its Parent, and carries them into Armenia or into Arabia, and places them upon the Altar of the Sun. [Herodot. l. 2. c. 73.] Herodotus says, it carries the Body of its Parent embalm'd in a Mass of Myrrh, which it deposits in the Temple of the Sun at Heliopolis in Egypt. The Fathers[3] have often alluded to the Phenix, by way of Comparison, in their Proofs of a Resurrection. Some speak with doubt concerning what we have now said of the Phenix, [Origen. l. 4. contra Celf. ad Finem.] and others again with full Assurance. There are Letters from the King of Ethiopia, acquainting the Pope, that the Phenix was produced in his Kingdom ; and 'tis related, that Pope Clement VIII. sent Queen Elizabeth, as a great Rarity, a Feather said to belong to the Phenix. But the most discerning are persuaded, that whatever is related about the Phenix is entirely fabulous. See Bochart De Animalibus sacris, p. 2. l. 6. c. 5. and our Dissertation upon that Passage of Job, xxix. 18. Sicut palma multiplicabo dies, printed before our Commentary upon the Book of Job.

In two Places the Seventy Interpreters have used the Word Phenix, as the Name of of a Bird we now speak of, if some Commentators may be believ'd. Others maintain on the contrary, that in both these Passages they meant the Palm-tree, which in Greek is call'd Phoinix. These are the two Passages; Psal. xcii. 12. a The Righteous shall flourish like the Palm-tree; and Job xxix. 18.[4] I shall die in my Nest, and I shall multiply my Days as the Phenix. [as the Sand, in our [Tertul. l. de Resurrect. c. 13. Epiphan. in Physiolog. Beda explicat.allegor. in Job. c. xxix. 18. p. 556.] Translation]. Tertullian and Epiphanius explain the first Passage by the Phenix. Bede and several Rabbins understand this Passage of Job of the same Bird. But as to the first, we need but cast our Eyes upon the Hebrew, to be convinc'd that it means the Palm-tree. The Word Thamar is not equivocal, but is known to signify the Palm-tree in Hebrew, as well as Phoinix in the Greek. The Hebrew Word Chul or Chol, which the Seventy have render'd by Phenix, is a Word of greater Uncertainty. Several Rabbins think it stands for a Bird; but we know that Chol in Hebrew, and in the Oriental Tongues that have any relation thereto, signifies Sand. The Similitude taken from a Multitude of Days compared to the Sand, is very expressive and common in Scripture. The most skilful Interpreters, the Chaldee, Syriac, Arabic, Montanus, Pagninus, Munster, Castalio, Junius, Mercerus, Vatablus, Codurcus, and a great many others understand it in this Sense. Even the Septuagint themselves insinuate it, by translating it, My Age shall grow old as the Succour of a Palm-tree. For what Sense would it be to say, the Succour of the Phenix?

Pheroras

PHERORAS, the fourth Son of Antipater, and Brother of Herod the Great. He is not much known in the History of the Jews, but only by his wicked Artifices, and the Confusion he occasioned in the Royal Family of his Brother. He was the chief Cause of the Death of Mariamne, the Wife of Herod, and also of his two Sons Alexander and Aristobulus. He refused to marry his Niece Salampso, his Brother's Daughter, because he was in [Antiq. l. 16. c. 11.] love with a Servant Maid that he kept. However, afterwards he married Cypros, another of his Brother's Daughters, and join'd in the Conspiracy of Antipater against Herod. He withdrew from Jerusalem beyond Jordan, and resolved never more to see his Brother.[1] He kept his Word, and would never come to Jerusalem, though sent for by Herod, when he fell ill of a dangerous Fit of Sickness. But Herod did not do the same by him; for in Pheroras's last Sickness he went to see him, and shew'd him all the Tokens of brotherly Affection. Pheroras being about to die, caus'd a Box of Poison to be burnt, which Antipater had provided, and which was intended for Herod.[2] Herod made a magnificent Funeral for him, and knew not 'till after his Death the secret Measures concerted between him and Antipater, to take him out of the World by Poison. This Discovery was the Beginning of Antipater's Misfortunes.

Phiala

[70. ϛακσίυΘ כפתורים. Exod. xxv. 29. xxxvii. 16.] PHIALA. This Word is generally translated by a Phial, or Vial, which signifies a little Glass Bottle. But it is certain, that the Greek Word Phiale, and the Latin Word Phiala, rather signifes a Cup,[1] a large open Vessel, something like a Plate or Bason. St. Jerome often uses the Word Phiala in his Translation, and it answers to the Hebrew Word Kaphoth, which signifies the Palm of the Hand, or Spoons. It is plain that this Word signifies a Vessel wherein to put Incense. In Numbers vii. 14. the Heads of the Families that offer the Caphoth, present them always full of Incense; and in the Books of Kings, Censers and Caphoth are always join'd together. It was therefore a kind of Cup, in which the Incense was placed upon the Shew-bread. See Levit. xxiv. 7. Pones super eos (panes) thus lucidissimum. The Septuagint have very well render'd this Word by Thuiske, derived from thus, a Box of Incense. It may be translated in Latin by Acerra. Many of 'em are found represented in the antient Marbles, but they are generally in the Form of oblong and square Boxes.

In the Book of Judges, ch. v. 25. St. Jerome has translated the Hebrew Word Sepul, which signifies Simpulum,[2] by Phiala. In Phiala principum obtulit butyrum. The Simpulum was an Instrument with an Handle, the Extremity of which very nearly resembled our Spoon. They made use of it to fill out Wine, and to make Libations with it at Sacrifices. It appears pretty often upon antient Medals, among the Instruments of Sacrifices.

[Ezr. i. 9. 70אגרטלים . Ψυκτῆρες. Nehem. vii. 70. 70מזרקות . Φιάλας. Amos vi. 6.] In the Book of Ezra, i. 9. they translate the Hebrew, or rather Chaldean Word Agartalim by Phiala. In Nehemiah vii. 70. St. Jerome has put Phialas for the Hebrew Word Misrakoth, which signifies rather pateras, or other Utensils to make Libations, or to pour out Liquors. Amos makes use of the same Term, to express the Cups that rich Men were served in at their Tables. Bibenti vinum in phialis. The Hebrew [Zech. ix. 15. xiv. 20.] says, in Misrakim. And Zechariah acquaints us, that these Implements[3] were us'd to make Libations of Wine upon the Altar. Replebuntur ut phialæ, & quasi cornua altaris. It seems therefore by all these Passages, that Phiala does not signify a Vial. The same thing still appears from [Rev. 5. 8.] the Revelations, where St. John represents to us the twenty-four Elders, having Cups in their Hands, or a kind of Censers, full of Spices and Perfumes. Phialas plenas odoramentorum. And elsewhere, the seven Angels holding seven golden Cups full of the Wrath of God triumphing, which they pour out upon the Earth.

Phiale

PHIALE, a very famous Fountain or Lake, at the Foot of Mount Hermon, from whence Jordan derives its Stream. The Greek Name Phiale was given it, from its [Joseph. de Bello, l. 3. c. 18. p. 86.] Resemblance to a great Bason. Josephus relates, that at an hundred and twenty Furlongs from Cesarea Philippi, upon the Road leading to Trachonitis, the Lake Phiale may be seen perfectly round like a Wheel, in which the Water is always up to the Brim, without either increasing or diminishing. 'Twas unknown that this was the Source of Jordan, 'till Philip Tetrarch of Galilee discover'd it in a manner that left it no longer to be doubted. For he threw Chaff and Straw into the Lake, which found a Passage through subterraneous Channels to Panium, from whence 'till then it was thought that Jordan had its Source. See what has been said before upon the Articles MAGEDAN or DALMANUTHA. The Name Phiale has been given to several other Lakes, or [Reland. Palæst. l. 1. c. 41.] Reservatories of Water.

Philadelphia

PHILADELPHIA, a City of Mysia, in Asia Minor. At the Time that St. John the Evangelist wrote his Revelations, the Angel or Bishop of the Church of Mysia was a very holy Man, to whom the Son of God directed these Words, Rev. iii. 7, 8, 9, &c. And to the Angel of the Church of Philadelphia write, These Things saith he that is holy, he that is true, he that hath the Key of David, he that openeth, and no Man shutteth, and shutteth and no Man openeth: I know thy Works, behold, I have set before thee an open Door, and no Man can shut it; for thou hast a little Strength, and hast kept my Word, and hast not denied my Name. Behold, I will make them of the Synagogue of Satan, (which say they are Jews and are not, but do lye). Behold, I will make them to come and worship before thy Feet, and to know that I have loved thee. Because thou hast kept the Word of my Patience, I also will keep thee from the Hour of Temptation, which shall come upon all the World, to try them that dwell upon the Earth. Behold, I come quickly; hold that fast which thou hast, that no Man take thy Crown. Him that overcometh will I make a Pillar in the Temple of my God, and he shall go no more out; and I will write upon him the Name of my God, and the Name of the City of my God, which is New Jerusalem, which cometh down out of Heaven from my God; and I will write upon him my [Vide Hal. lox. vit. Quad.] new Name.

'Tis unknown who this Bishop of Philadelphia was: Aureolus and De Lyra think it was St. Quadratus, a Disciple of the Apostles, and an Apologist for the Christian Religion, who presented an Apology to the Emperor Adrian. The Greeks in [Euseb. Hist. Eccl. l. 3. c. 37.] their Office give him the Name of an Apostle; and Eusebius calls him an Evangelist, in giving his Character, because he had devoted himself to go from Province to Province preaching the Gospel. But none of the Antients say, that Quadratus was Bishop of Philadelphia. There was a Quadratus also Bishop of Athens, and Martyr, about the Year of Christ 175; but he was different from the Apologist, and it could not be he to whom St. John addresses himself in the Revelations.

Philadelphia, otherwise Rabbath, or Rabbath Ammon, Rabbath of the Children of Ammon, or Rabat-amana, the Capital of the Ammonites, was situated in the Mountains of Gilead, towards the Source of the River Arnon. It is sometimes mention'd as belonging to Arabia, sometimes to Celesyria. Eusebius places it ten Miles from Jazer to the East. 'Tis very probable that this [Deut. iii. 11.] City was the Residence of King Og, since in the Time of Moses they still shew'd his Iron Bed, nine Cubits long, and four Cubits [Plin. l. 5. c. 18.] broad. Philadelphia was of the Number of the ten Cities of Decapolis beyond Jordan. Josephus extends Perea, or the Region beyond [Joseph. de Bello, l. 3. c. 2. p. 533. c.] Jordan, from this River as far as Philadelphia. See RABBATH AMMON hereafter. 'Tis said this City received its Name of Philadelphia from Ptolemy Philadelphus King of Egypt. St. Ignatius the Martyr, very probably, preached the Gospel here; and 'tis to the Church of this Place that he wrote his Epistle, directed to the Philadelphians.

Philemon

PHILEMON, a rich Citizen of the City of Colossæ in Phrygia. He was converted to the Christian Faith, with Appia his Wife, by Epaphras, the Disciple of St. Paul; for St. Paul himself did not preach at Colossæ.[1] Perhaps we should have known nothing of St. Philemon, had it not been on the Account of his Slave Onesimus, who having robb'd him, and run away from him, came to Rome, where he found St. Paul, and was very serviceable to him. St. Paul converted him, baptiz'd him, and then sent him back to his Master Philemon,[2] to whom he wrote a Letter still extant, and which passes for a Masterpiece of that kind of Eloquence, which is natural, lively, strong, and pathetick, which was peculiar to St. Paul. Philemon had made a Church of his House, and all [Philem. v. 2.] his Domesticks as well as himself were of the Houshold of Faith. His Charity, Liberality, and Compassion, were a sure Refuge to all that were in Distress. The Apostolical Constitutions say, that St. Paul made him Bishop [Constitut. l. 7. c. 46.] of Colossæ, but the Menæa insinuate, that he went to Gaza in Palestine, of which he was [Menæ, 22. Nov.] the Apostle and first Bishop. From thence he return'd to Colossæ, where he suffer'd Martyrdom with Appia his Wife, in the Time of Nero. They relate several Particulars of his Martyrdom, and say, that his Body remain'd at Colossæ, where it perform'd several Miracles. His Name is set down in the Martyrologies on the 22 of November.

Philetus

[2 Tim. ii. 16,17,18.] PHILETUS. St. Paul writing to Timothy, in the 65th Year of Christ, and a little while before his own Martyrdom, speaks thus: But shun profane and vain Babblings, for they will increase unto more Ungodliness. And their Word will eat as doth a Canker; of whom is Hymenæus and Philetus; who concerning the Truth have erred, saying, that the Resurrection is past already, and overthrow the Faith of some. We have nothing very certain concerning Philetus; for we make small Account of what is read in the false Abdias, in the Life of St. James major, even supposing this Author had not put the Name of Philetus instead of Phygellus. This is the Substance of what is found in Abdias. St. James the Son of Zebedee passing thro' the Synagogues of Judea and Samaria, preached every where the Faith of Jesus Christ. Hermogenes and Philetus strenuously opposed him, affirming, that Jesus Christ was not the Messiah. Hermogenes was a notable Magician, and Philetus was his Disciple; who being converted, was desirous to bring his Master to St. James, but Hermogenes bound him up so by his Magick Art, that he could not come at the Apostle. Philetus found means to make St. James acquainted with what had happen'd to him, upon which St. James unbound him, and Philetus came to him. Hermogenes perceiving how ineffectual his Art was against the Saint, became himself a Convert, as well as Philetus.

Philip (4)

PHILIP, Son of Herod the Great, and of one of his Wives call'd Cleopatra. He marry'd Salome the Daughter of Herod sirnamed Philip, and of Herodias: This Herodias is she who is so well known in the Gospel, by the Death of [Matth. xiv. 3. Mark vi. 17, 19, 22.] John the Baptist; and Salome her Daughter, the Wife of Philip, is she who danced before Herod, and asked for the Head of that holy Forerunner of Christ. In the Will of Herod, Philip was named after Archelaus, and he bore the Title of [Antiq. l. 17. c. 10. p. 599.] Tetrarch of Trachonitis, Gaulonitis, Batanea, and Paneas. While Archelaus went to Rome, to solicit the Confirmation of his Father's Will from Augustus, he left his Brother Philip in Judea, to govern it, and take Care of his Affairs. Some time after, Varus Governor of [De Bello, l. 2. p. 776. d, e, f.] Syria sent Philip to Rome also, to assist his Brother Archelaus, or to take Care of his own [De Bello, l. 2. c. 8. p. 782. a.] Interests.

As soon as Augustus had confirmed Herod's Will, Philip return'd into his Tetrarchy, and lived there many Years as a peaceable and moderate Prince, that was contented with his Condition, and placed his whole Delight in Well-governing [Antiq. l. 18. c. 6.] his People. When he went abroad, if any one apply'd to him for Justice, he presently stopt, in what Place soever he was, caus'd a Tribunal to be set up, which he always carry'd with him for that Purpose, gave the Parties a Hearing, and determined the Cause upon the Spot. 'Twas he that built the Walls round the City of Paneas, and gave it the Name of Cesarea Philippi: He also enlarged the Town of Bethsaida [Antiq. l. 18. c. 3.] , St. Peter's native Country, lying upon the Lake Gennesareth, and gave it the Name of Julias, in Honour of Julia the Daughter of Augustus. He died in the 33[1] Year of the Vulgar Era, 37th of Jesus Christ, after 37 Years Reign. This was the 20th Year of the Emperor [Antiq. l. 18. c. 6.] Tiberius.

[Euseb. Hist. Eccl. l. 3. c. 31. John i. 43, 44, &c. Stromat. l. 3. p. 436. Matth. viii. 21, 22.] 6. PHILIP the Apostle: He was a Native of Bethsaida in Galilee. Eusebius says he was a married Man, and had several Daughters. Jesus Christ having seen him, invited him to follow him, saying to him, Follow me. Philip follow'd him; and soon after, finding Nathanael, Philip said to him, We have found the Messiah, of whom Moses and the Prophets have spoke, Jesus son of Joseph of Nazareth. Nathanael asked him, Can any good thing come out of Nazareth? To which Philp replied, Come yourself and see. Then he brought Nathanael to Jesus, and they went with him to the Marriage of Cana in Galilee. Clemens Alexandrinus mentions it as a Thing universally acknowledged, that it was St. Philip that gave our Saviour the Answer, when he was bid to follow him, Let me first go to bury my Father. To which our Saviour answer'd, Let the Dead bury their Dead. Tertullian assures us expressly, that it was one of the Apostles, but the Evangelists do not say it was this Apostle: And it would be very strange, that [Tertul. de Baptismo, c. 12.] St. John, who tells us so particularly what Christ said to Philip, at his Call to the Apostleship, should not mention so remarkable a Circumstance.

[Luk. vi. 13. Mat. x. 2. John vi. 5, 6, 7.] St. Philip was call'd at the very beginning of our Saviour's Mission, in the 30th Year of the Vulgar Era, and about a Year after he was appointed an Apostle. When our Saviour intended to feed the five thousand Men, that follow'd him, he asked St. Philip, only to prove him, whence Bread might be bought for such a Multitude of People. Philip answered, That two hundred Peny-worth would not be sufficient for every one to taste a little. Some Gentiles, having a Curiosity to see Jesus Christ, a little before his Passion, they addressed themselves to St. Philip, who mention'd it to St. Andrew, and these two [John xii. 20, 22.] together to Christ. At the Last Supper, Philip asked our Saviour, that he would please to shew them the Father, and that was all they desired. But Jesus answered them, That seeing the Son, [John xiv. 8, 10.] they saw the Father also. And this is all we find of him in the Gospel.

Clemens Alexandrinus says[1] that St. Philip marry'd some of his Daughters. Theodoret says,[2] he preached in the two Phrygia's; and Eusebius[3] says he was buried at Hierapolis in Phrygia Pacatiana. Polycrates Bishop of Ephesus[4] assures us, that St. Philip, with St. John, celebrated the Passover on the Fourteenth Day of the Moon. The same Author seems to say, that Papias had been inform'd by the Daughters of St. Philip, that a dead Man had been restored to Life in the Time of this Apostle. The false Histories that we have of St Philip, pretend that he died at the Age of Fourscore and seven Years, under Domitian or Trajan. There hath been a Book of Acts falsely imputed to this Apostle, which was condemned by Pope Gelasius; as also a Gospel used by the [Epiphan. Hæres. 26. c. 13.] Gnosticks. The Bollandists may be consulted concerning the History of this Saint, on the First Day of May.

As to his Daughters, Polycrates Bishop of Ephesus says, that two of 'em lived in Virginity, and were buried with their Father at Hierapolis. 'Twas from them, that Papias was informed of the raising of a dead Person: And Sozomen thinks that it was they themselves that had restored him to Life. Polycrates speaks also of another Daughter of St. Philip, who lived in great Sanctity, and died at Ephesus. This is, probably, she that was marry'd; and, perhaps, it was this last that the Greeks honour'd by the Name of Hermione, who, they say, was buried at Ephesus, and was Daughter of St. Philip the [Vid. Valef. Not. in Euseb. p.55.] Apostle.

Philip (7)

PHILIP, the second of the seven Deacons chosen by the Apostles after our Saviour's Resurrection. This Deacon, they say, was of Cesarea in Palestine. It is certain, that [Isidor. Pelusiot. l. 1. p. 449. Acts xxi. 8, 9.] his Daughters lived in this City. After the Death of St. Stephen, all the Christians, excepting the Apostles, having left Jerusalem, and being dispers'd in several Places, St. Philip went to preach at Sebaste or Samaria, where he performed several Miracles, and [Acts viii. 1, 2, 3, &c.] converted many Persons: He baptized them; but being only a Deacon, he could not give them the Sacrament of Confirmation , and the Holy Ghost: Wherefore, he made known to the Apostles at Jerusalem, that Samaria had received the Word of God; that they should come and lay Hands on them, and communicate the Holy Ghost to them. St. Peter and St. John came thither; and the Samaritans that were converted received the Holy Ghost by their Means. Simon Magus had been admitted to Baptism, among others, by St. Philip: But St. Peter would not lay his Hands on him, and rejected, with Contempt and Execration, the Proposal he made to him, of purchasing with Money the Power of communicating the Holy Ghost. [Euseb.Hist. Eccl. l. 3. c. 39.] go on the Southerly Part of the Country, in the Road that leads from Jerusalem to Old Gaza: For there were two Cities of Gaza, the Old and the New; the Old was then forsaken, and was upon the Road to Egypt. Philip obey'd; and there met with an Ethiopian Eunuch, belonging to Candace Queen of Ethiopia, who had the Care of her Revenues, and had been at Jerusalem, to worship God there; he was then returning into his own Country, and was reading the Prophet Isaiah; as he travelled in his Chariot. Then the Spirit of God said to Philip, Go on, and approach to this Chariot. Philip coming to the Chariot, heard the Man reading the Prophet Isaiah, and said to him, Do you understand what you read? To which the Eunuch answered, How should I understand, except Some-body explain it to me? He desired therefore Philip to come and sit down by him in the Chariot. The Passage he was reading was this; He was led as a Sheep to the Slaughter; and like a Lamb dumb before his Shearer, so opened he not his mouth. The Eunuch says then to Philip, Pray, who does the Prophet here speak of? Is it of himself, or some other? Then Philip began to instruct him concerning Jesus Christ. And having gone on together for some time, they came to a Fountain, when the Eunuch said to Philip, Here is Water; what hinders me from being baptized? Philip told him, He might be so, if he believed with all his Heart. He replied, I believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God. He then caused the Chariot to stop, and they both went down into the Water, where Philip baptized the Eunuch. a Being come out of the Water, the Spirit of the Lord took away Philip, and the Eunuch saw him no more. But Philip was found again at Azotus, and preached the Gospel in all the Cities he passed through, 'till he returned to Cesarea of Palestine, which is about thirty Leagues from Azotus.

'Tis thought that this Eunuch was the first Apostle of the Ethiopians;[1] and the Abyssines boast of having receiv'd the Christian Faith from him. Some believe[2] he preached Jesus Christ in Arabia Fœlix, and in Taprobana; but these are such as think his Mistress, Queen Candace, reigned in Arabia Fœlix. The most prevailing Opinion is, that this Eunuch belong'd to a Queen of the Peninsula Meroe, to the South of Egypt. Women commonly reign'd in this [Vid. Strab. l.17. Plin. l. 6. c. 29. Acts viii. 26,27,&c.] Part of Ethiopia, and several of 'em have St. Philip was, probably, at Samaria, when the Angel came to command him to gone by the Name of Candace. The[3] Greeks hold the Feast of this Eunuch on the [Canis. t. 2. p. 850.] 27th of August.

But to return to St. Philip: The Scripture does not inform us what he did after this time, that is, after the 33d Year of the [Menæa xi. Octob.] Vulgar Era. The modern Greeks say, that this holy Deacon left Palestine, to go to Tralles in Asia, where he founded a Church, of which he was the Apostle and Bishop, and where he rested in Peace, after performing many Miracles. The Latins, after Usuard and Ado, say, on the 6th of June, that he died in Peace at Cesarea, and that three of his Daughters were there buried with him. Ado adds, that the fourth [Adon. & Martyrol. Rom. vi. Jun.] died at Ephesus; but he has mistaken this fourth Daughter of St. Philip the Deacon, for St. Hermione Daughter of St. Philip the Apostle, of whom we have just now spoke. Caius, also, an ancient Priest of the Romish Church, apparently confounds the Daughters of Philip the Deacon, with those of the Apostle of the same Name, when he says, that the four Daughters of the Deacon dwelt at Hierapolis in Phrygia. When St. Paula came to Cesarea, in the Year of Christ 386, she had a mind to see the House of St. Philip, and the Chambers of his Daughters. The Greeks celebrate the Feast of St. Philip the Deacon on the 11th of [Hieronym. Ep. 27.] October, and the Latins on the 6th of June.

These stirr'd up the whole City against St. Paul; and the Magistrates caused him to be seized, whipt, and put in Prison. Philippians PHILIPPIANS: The Philippians were always full of Acknowledgment, for the Grace of Faith they had receiv'd from God, by the Ministry of St. Paul: They assisted him on several Occasions: They sent him Money while he was in Achaia; and being inform'd that he was a Prisoner at Rome, [Phil. i. 12, 13. In the Year of Christ 61.] they sent a Deputation to him by Epaphroditus their Bishop, to be serviceable to him on all Occasions. Epaphroditus fell sick; and St. Paul, in order to deliver the Philippians from the Concern they were in, at the hearing of his Sickness, sent Epaphroditus to them again, when he was recover'd, and writ the Epistle by him, which we have still remaining. This Epistle is address'd to the Philippians, in which he commends their Liberality, and shews great Acknowledgment, for the Readiness he found in them, of being helpful to him in his Necessity. See the Article of St. P*aul*.

Philistines

PHILISTINES, a People that came from the Isle of Caphtor in Palestine, being Descendants from the Caphtorims, who came from the Casluhims, Children of Mizraim, as Moses informs us; and, by Consequence, are originally from Mizraim the Father of the Egyptians. Moses says, elsewhere, that the Caphtorims, being come out of Caphtor, drove out the Avims which dwelt from Hazerim to Azzah (or Gaza), and dwelt in their stead: Therefore, 'tis only since the time of the Avims (or Avites), or Canaanites, that the Philistines came into Palestine, and that they have so long possess'd the Country of which they made themselves Masters. We do not precisely know the Time of their coming out of the Isle of Caphtor; but they had been a long Time in the Land of Canaan, when Abraham came thither, in the Year of the World 2083, before Christ 1917, before the Vulgar Era 1921. We have attempted to shew, in the Article C*aphtor*, or C*aphtorim*, that this Word intimates the Isle of Crete.

The Name Philistine is not Hebrew. The Septuagint generally translate it by Allophyloi, Strangers. The Pelethites and Cherethites were also Philistines; and the Seventy sometimes translate Cherethim, by Cretai, Cretes. See what we have said upon [Vid. Ezec. xxv. 16.] the Articles P*elethites* and C*herethites*. The Casluhims, or Casluchims, the Fathers of the Caphtorims, dwelt originally in Pentapolis Cyrenaica, according to the Paraphrast Jonathan; or in the Canton Pentaschenites of Lower Egypt, according to the Jerusalem Paraphrast. We find in Marmarica, the City of Axilis, or Azylis; and in Libya bordering upon Egypt, Sagylis, or Satylis; and this out of Ptolemy. These Names have a sensible Resemblance to Casluhim. This Country is situate near Egypt, where all the Children of Mizraim had their Settlement: It is placed over-against the Isle of Crete. Strabo allows but a thousand Furlongs Distance between the Port of Cyrene, and that of Crete, called Criou Metapon, or, the Ram's Forehead. There was, heretofore, a great Intercourse between Cyreniaca and the Isle of Crete, as appears from Strabo and Pliny: It is therefore probable, that the Casluhims sent Colonies to this Island from Cyreniaca, which afterwards pass'd from thence to the Coasts of Palestine. This Hypothesis appears to me to be the most probable of any that has hitherto been advanced.

Besides the Conformity which is observable between the Words Cherethim and Crete, we also find a great Resem blance between the Manners, the Arms, the Deities, the Customs of the Philistines and the Cretans; as may be seen in our Dissertation concerning the Original and the Deities of the Philistines, prefix'd to the First Book of Kings.

The Philistines were a powerful People in Palestine even in Abraham's time, since they had then Kings, and were in Possession of several considerable Cities. They are not comprehended in the Number of the Nations devoted to Extermination, and whose Territory the Lord had abandon'd to the Hebrews. Lastly, they were not of the cursed Seed of Canaan. However Joshua did not forbear to give their Land to the [Josh. xv. 45, 46, 47.] Hebrews, and to set upon them by Command from the Lord, because they possessed a Country which was promised to the People [Josh. xiii. 2, 3.] of God. But these Conquests of Joshua must have been ill maintain'd, since under the Judges, under Saul, and at the Beginning of the Reign of King David, the Philistines had their Kings, and their Lords, which they called Sazenim; since their State was divided into five little Kingdoms or Satrapies, and since they oppress'd the Israelites during the Government of the High Priest Eli, and of Samuel, and during the Reign of Saul. a True it is, that Tamgar, Sampson, Samuel and Saul made head against them, and killed some of their People, but they did not reduce their Power. They continued independant down to the Reign of David, who subdued them to his [2 Sam. v. 17. viii. 1, 2, &c.] Government.

They continued in Subjection to the Kings of Judah down to the Reign of Jehoram Son of Jehoshaphat, that is, for about Two hundred and forty six Years.[1] Jehoram made War against them, and probably reduced them to his Obedience again, because it is observed in Scripture, that they revolted again from Uzziah, and that this Prince kept them to their Duty for his whole Reign.[2] During the unfortunate Reign of Ahaz, the Philistines made great Havock in the Territory of Judah; but his [2 Chron. xxviii. 18. 2 Kings xviii. 8.] Son and Successor Hezekiah, subdued them again. Lastly, they regain'd their full Liberty under the latter Kings of Judah; and we may see by the Menaces made to them by the Prophets Isaiah, Amos, Zephaniah, Jeremiah and Ezekiel, that they brought a thousand Hardships and Calamities upon the Children of Israel, for which Cruelties God threatned to punish them with great Misfortunes.

Esar-haddon, Successor to Sennacharib, besieged Azoth and took it, by the Arms of his General Thasthan, or Tartan. [Isai. xx. 1. Herodot. l. 2. c. 157. Joseph. Antiq. l. x. c. 11. p. 345. 1 Macc. xi. 59.] Psammiticus King of Egypt took the same City, after a Siege of Twenty-nine Years, according to Herodotus; and this is the longest Siege of any City known. During the Siege of Tyre, which held out for Thirteen Years, Nebuchadnezzar made use of a Part of his Army to subdue the Ammonites, the Moabites, the Egyptians, and other Nations bordering upon the Jews: There is great Probability that the Philistines could not withstand him, and that they were reduced to his Obedience, as well as the other People of Syria, Phenicia and Palestine. Afterwards they fell under the Dominion of the Persians, then under that of Alexander the Great, who destroy'd the City of Gaza,[3] the only City of the Phenicians that durst oppose him. After the Persecution of Antiochus Epiphanes, the Asmoneans pared off by degrees several Cities from the Country of the Philistines, which they subjected to their Jurisdiction. Tryphon, Regent of the Kingdom of Syria, gave to Jonathan the Asmonean, the Government of the whole Coast of the Mediterranean, from Tyre as far as Egypt; and consequently all the Country of the Philistines. The Name Palestine comes from Philistine, altho' these People possess'd but a small Part of this Country.

Philo

PHILO, a famous Jewish Author, of the City of Alexandria, and of the Race of the Priests. He was Brother to Alexander Lysimachus, Alabarch or Chief of the [Joseph. Antiq. l. 18. c. 10. p. 639. d. Hieron. Ep. 84.] Jews, who in great Numbers inhabited this City. Josephus calls him an illustrious Man in every thing. He made himself so famous by his Eloquence, and by the Knowledge he had acquired of the Philosophy of Plato, that it was commonly said of him at Alexandria, either Philo imitates Plato, or Plato imitates Philo.[1] And the Learned call'd him the Jewish Plato, or the second Plato. He was pretty far in Years when he was deputed with others to go to Rome, about the Year 40 of the common Era, by the Jews of Alexandria, there to defend the Right of the Citizens of Alexandria, which the Jews laid Claim to, before the Emperor Caius. They stay'd at Rome till Caius return'd out of Gaul, and when he arrived, they presented their Memorial to him. Caius received them with more Tokens of [Philo Leg. ad Caium, p. 1018. & seq.] Friendship than they expected.

Some time after, he gave them a Hearing near the City, in the Houses of Pleasure that bore the Name of Mecenas and Lamia. The Emperor reproached them with being the only People in the World who would[2] not acknowledge him as a God, and utter'd blasphemous Expressions that were very horrible. He told them, that they had indeed offer'd Sacrifices for his Health, but that they had also offer'd their Sacrifices to others. Then with a more serious Air, he asked them why they refused to eat Swines-Flesh; and lastly, upon what Grounds they could justify their Pretences to the Right of Denizons. He put these Questions to them by fits and starts, without staying for a Reply, or hearing what the Jews had to say to them. He dismissed them without deciding any thing in the Cause, only made this Observation upon them; These People do not appear to me so much to be wicked, as to be miserable and sense-less, in not acknowledging me for a God.

Philo composed several Works, a good Part of which are still extant, and which are very much esteemed by intelligent Persons. Photius [Phot. Cod. 105. p. 277] believes, that it was from him that the Custom was first introduced into the Church, of explaining the Scriptures Allegorically; and true it is, that the Fathers, especially Clement of Alexandria and Origen, have often follow'd the Method of Philo; but it cannot be deny'd, but that the Custom of turning the Scripture into Allegory, was in use long before Philo, as may be seen in the Book of Wisdom,[3] and in Ecclesiasticus. Josephus testifies, that he had a Design to compose a Work, in which he would [Joseph. Proëm. in Antiq. Jud. ad finem.] explain what Moses had concealed under his Allegories. Lastly, St. Paul has often used this manner of explaining Scripture, so that it may be easily seen it was familiar to the Jews, and that Philo was neither the first nor the principal Author of it. See the Article ALLEGORY.

Several of the Antients have thought, that Philo intended to describe the way of Life of the first Christians of Alexandria, in his Book intitled, Of a contemplative Life, wherein he represents the Manner of living of the Therapeutæ. The Reader may peruse what has been written pro and con upon this Argument, for some Years past. Father Montfaucon has maintained the affirmative Side of the Question, and M. Basnage, M. du Pin, and M. N. President of Dijon, the negative Side. 'Tis worth while to read what has been said on both Sides upon this famous Question. 'Tis said that Philo[4] was acquainted with St. Peter at Rome, under the Emperor Claudius; that he spoke with him, and contracted a Friendship with him. Photius says, that he even embraced Christianity, but quitted it again out of Discontent: But [Phot. Cod. 105. p. 277] this Circumstance does not appear from any antient Writer. The Time of his Death is unknown.

PHILOLOGUS. St. Paul in his Epistle to the Romans, chap. xvi. 15. salutes Philologus, of whom nothing particular is known. The Greeks make him Bishop of Sinope in Pontus, and set his Feast upon the fourth of November. Origen believes, that Philologus was Husband to Julia, mentioned in the same Place; but others doubt whether Julias is not rather the Name of a Man than a Woman.

Philosophy

PHILOSOPHY. St. Paul bids the Colossians beware, lest any Man spoil them [Coloss. ii. 8. Acts xvii. 18.] through Philosophy. Ne quis vos decipiat per Philosophiam. And in the Acts, St. Luke relates, That when St. Paul came to Athens, he there found Epicurean and Stoick Philosophers, who made a Jest of his Discourses. The same Apostle in many Places of his Epistles, opposes the false Wisdom and wise Men of the Age, which is nothing else but the Pagan Philosophy, always contrary to the Wisdom of Jesus Christ, and the true Religion; which in the Notion of the Philosophers and Sophists of this World, seem'd to be mere Folly, being built neither upon Reasoning nor Evidence, nor the Eloquence and Subtilty of those that preach'd it, but upon the Power of God, and his single Authority, upon the Operation of the Holy Ghost, which actuated the Hearts and Minds of those whom he called to the Faith.

The Word Philosophy is derived from the Greek Word Philos, a Lover, and Sophia, Wisdom. Pythagoras was the first who took up the Appellation of a Philosopher, or a Lover of Wisdom, instead of Sophos, or a wise Man, which was given to all before him, who were excellent in the Sciences. In the Holy Scripture we find real wise Men, and real Works of Philosophy, in the Book of Proverbs, the Ecclesiastes of Solomon, the Book of Wisdom, and Ecclesiasticus. These are moral Works, wherein we find a vast Number of excellent Maxims of Religion, of Piety, of Conduct for all States of Life. There is but little Reasoning or Argumentation. The antient Orientals did not so much amuse themselves with Reasoning, as the Greek Philosophers. They went directly to the Matter, and deliver'd their Precepts by way of Sentiment and Maxim. The Book of Ecclesiastes is a kind of Dispute, wherein are exhibited the Reasonings of the Wicked, and of those that deny the Immortality of the Soul, and Providence, and that place their chiefest Good in Pleasure, Riches, and Honour. Their Reasons are alledg'd with Strength, but Solomon shews the Vanity and Inconclusiveness of them, and determines in favour of Religion, and of the Fear of God.

The Book of Job is also a kind of Treatise of Philosophy, in which three or four Persons dispute by turns concerning Providence, the Proceedings of God towards Men, and upon this important Question, Whether all the Evils that happen to us in this World, are Punishments for our Sins, or if they are not sometimes sent by the Wisdom of God, as Proofs and Trials of his Elect?

The Book call'd the Wisdom of Solomon, is a Work of moral Philosophy, chiefly compos'd for the Instruction of great Men, and Princes of the Earth. Ecclesiasticus takes in a vast Scope; it comprehends all Conditions of Life, and gives moral Precepts to all sorts of Persons. It derives the Name of Sophia, Wisdom [Ecclus. vi. 23.] , from the Hebrew Word Zaphniah, a secret thing, and describes to us the Imployment of a Hebrew Philosopher, as a Man applying [Ecc. xxxix 1, 2, 3.] himself to the Discovery of the Sense of antient Parables, to the Study of the Wisdom of the Antients, of the Writings of the Prophets, of the Histories of famous Men; to travelling in distant Countries, to learn the Manners and Sentiments of different Nations, and to know the Good and Evil that is among Men. But his chief Employment is in praying to the Lord, and in intreating Knowledge from him. If he grants it, the wise Man will pour out the Treasures of his Wisdom as a plentiful Rain, and his Reputation will spread itself to the Ends of the World.

About the same time that the several Sects of Philosophers were formed among the Greeks, as the Academicks, the Peripateticks, the Stoicks, one might observe also among the Jews, by a sort of Emulation, several Sects of Philosophers to arise, as the Essenians, the Pharisees, and the Sadducees. The Pharisees had some Resemblance to the Stoicks, the Sadducees to the Epicureans, and the Essenians came near to the Academicks. The Pharisees were proud, vain, and boasting, like the Stoicks. The Sadducees, who deny'd the Immortality of the Soul, and the Existence of Spirits, freed themselves at once, like the Epicureans, from all Solicitude about Futurity. The Essenians were more moderate, more simple and religious, and therefore approached nearer to the Academicks.

Just as the Philosophy of the Greeks, after it had been for a long time honour'd and respected, for the Merit of those that profess'd it, afterwards fell into Disrepute and Contempt, by the Sordidness of the Vices of those that took upon themselves the Name of Philosophers; so among the Hebrews, the Pharisees, for example, who at the Beginning had recommended themselves for their steady adhering to the Law of God, made themselves afterwards very odious to those in Power, and contemptible to all good Men, by their excessive Ambition, and the erroneous Interpretations that they gave to the Law of the Lord.

The Philosophers against whom St. Paul inveighs, in his Epistle to the Romans, boasted the Extent of their Knowledge, the Purity of their Morality, the Eloquence of their Writings, the Strength of their Reasonings, and the Subtilty of their Arguments. Their Weaknesses were Pride, Curiosity, Presumption, Hypocrisy, Ambition. They ascribed every thing to human Reason, and would be superior in every thing. And although their Lives were full of Disorders, that were shameful and even injurious to human Nature, yet they would pass upon the World for good Men, and boasting of their Knowledge of God, they dishonour'd him by their Actions. To them St. Paul opposed the Humility of the Cross of Jesus Christ, the Force of his Miracles, the Purity of his Morals, the Depth of his Mysteries, and the evident Proofs of his Mission.

[Phil. l. de vita Mos. p. 657, 658.] 'Tis disputed whether or no the Heathen Philosophers have not borrowed the finest Sentiments of their Morality from the Sacred Scriptures. The Fathers have been much divided upon this Question: Some of them have maintained the Affirmative Side, and some the Negative. Philo the Jew teaches, that before the Translation of the Books of Moses, made at the Instigation of Ptolemy Philadelphus, the Gentiles had no Acquaintance with the Sacred Books. Aristæus makes Demetrius Phalereus to [Arist. de 70 Interp.] say, that the Greek Historians, Poets, and Writers, have made no mention of the Books of the Hebrews; and that some Writers being desirous of inserting something from them into their Works, were prevented by divine Punishments that happened to them, and of which he gives Instances. Origen maintains, that the Name [Origen. in Cantic. Canticor. Joseph. l. 1. cont. App. p. 1051. Lactant. de origen. Err. l. 2. c. 11. Idem de vera sapientia l. 4. c. 2.] of Moses was unknown to the Greeks, and that his Name is not to be found in any of their Writings. Josephus the Historian, acknowledges the Silence of the Greeks, and gives this Reason for it; That they had not read the Books of the Jews. Lactantius says expresly, that the Prophane had never read the Sacred Writings. Nullas literas veritatis attigerant. In another Place, that it was surprizing that Pythagoras and Plato should go into Egypt, into Chaldea and Persia, to be inform'd of the Religion and Customs of those People, and not go into Judea, whither they might easily have passed, and where they might have found what they vainly sought elsewhere.

But

But other of the Fathers, and those the greater Number, have been for the Affirmative: They assure us, that the most celebrated of the Philosophers were acquainted with the Sacred Books, and the Prophets. St. Austin thinks, a that Pythagoras knew Jeremiah in Egypt. Others believe that he also conversed with Ezekiel in Judea:[1] That he was acquainted with the Jews, and borrow'd several of their Laws, which he admitted into his Philosophy.[2] Clemens Alexandrinus, speaking to the Greeks, asserts,[3] That whatever there is of Truth in the Laws of Plato, was derived from the Hebrews; that from thence their Poets have borrow'd all their finest Thoughts, and all their noblest Expressions. Justin Martyr[4] undertakes a particular Discussion of this Matter, and shews, by many Examples, that Orpheus, Homer, Solon, Pythagoras, Plato, and many Others, have travelled into Egypt, and have consulted the Books of Moses. Celsus the Philosopher, an Enemy to the Christians, acknowledged the Conformity that was to be found between the Sentiments of Plato and those of Moses and the Jewish Prophets. And from thence he ridiculously concludes, that it was the Hebrews who had imitated the Greeks; as if Moses and the other sacred Writers had been more modern than Plato and the Greek Poets.

[Tertul. Apologet.] Tertullian maintains, that the antient Law-givers of the Heathen had nothing valuable but what they had borrow'd from the Hebrews. Sciatis ipsas quoque leges vestras, quæ videntur ad innocentiam pergere, de divina lege, ut antiquiore, formam mutuatas. That their Poets and Philosophers had drawn from the Fountain of the Prophets; that by the subtil Artifice of the Devil, some Stroaks of Truth have slipt into the Writings of the Profane, in order to undermine the same Truth at such Time as God should manifest it to the World. For the greatest Part of Mankind have either not Penetration enough, or not Sincerity enough, to distinguish the Truth from such Errors as they find it blended with. Justin Martyr had the same Way of Thinking. Eusebius has employ'd two entire Books of [Eufeb. Præp. Evan. l. 11, 12.] his great Work of the Gospel-Preparation, to shew that Plato had taken the principal Things of his Philosophy, and of his Theology, from the sacred Books of the Jews. Theodoret advances, that the antient [Theodor. Serm. 1. ad Græcos, p. 466, 471, 472.] Philosophers Pherecides, Pythagoras, Thales, Solon, and Plato, had travell'd into Egypt, and had received Instructions, not only from the Egyptians, but also from the Hebrews, even so far, as that Pythagoras received Circumcision, which the Egyptians had borrow'd from the Jews. St. Ambrose seems to think,[5] that one of Plato's chief Designs in coming into Egypt, was to consult the Laws of Moses, and the Oracles of the Prophets. Eruditionis gratia in Ægyptum profectus, ut Mosis gesta, legis oracula, Prophetarum dicta cognosceret.

But as this Question is concerning a Fact, it ought to be examined from Facts, rather than by Authorities. The Proofs from Fact are of two Kinds. First, The Agreement of Notions and Expressions, between the sacred Authors and the prophane, in such Matters wherein naturally they could not agree. Secondly, The Acknowledgment of Those who copied from Others, or the Testimony of cotemporary Authors. But in the Writings of the Poets and the prophane Philosophers, we find no Acknowledgment that they had borrow'd any thing from the sacred Writers; none of their cotemporary Writers take any Notice, that they did any thing like this. Those Strokes of Resemblance that may be observed between the sacred and prophane Authors, are merely fortuitous, and in such Passages wherein Men of Sense might easily be suppos'd to coincide, without copying from one another: Therefore nothing can be concluded from hence, in favour of the Opinion of Those, who pretend that the Greeks had read and imitated the Hebrew Writers.

Nay, they could not so much as have read them; for they must either have read them in the Originals, or else in Translations. The Grecians did not study foreign Languages; and the Jews were infinitely jealous of the Sacredness of their Books, nor would communicate them to prophane Heathens: Neither could they read them in any Versions; for there were none before that of the Septuagint, made by the Order of Ptolemy Philadelphus, a long Time after Pythagoras, Plato, Aristotle, Socrates, Chrysippus, Zeno, and the ancient Greek Philosophers and Legislators. There is even a great Propability, that the said Version of the Septuagint is still more modern than the Age of Philadelphus, as may be seen under the Article SEPTUAGINT.

Another famous Question, that has been debated on Account of the old Philosophers, is that, concerning their eternal Salvation. 'Tis enquired whether they, by only following the Light of Reason, and living good moral Lives, in the Eye of the World, independantly of the Law and the Gospel, whether they, I say, could escape Damna-[6] [Rom. ii. 10. Rom. ii. 9, 10, 11, 12. Origen. contra Cel-sus, 1, 2. p. 438.] Damnation and eternal Misery? St. Paul, in his Epistle to the Romans, seems not to exclude even the Gentiles, who have lived good and virtuous Lives, from the Felicity of Heaven. Thus he expresses himself: The Philosophers of the Gentiles are without Excuse; because, having known God, they have not glorified him as God. If therefore they had glorified him, they might have been excused. He goes on: Tribulation and Anguish upon every Soul of Man that doeth Evil, of the Jew first, and also of the Gentile: But Glory, Honour, and Peace to every Man that worketh Good, to the Jew first, and also to the Gentile: For there is no Respect of Persons with God. For as many as have sinned without Law, shall also perish without Law; and as many as have sinned in the Law, shall be judged by the Law. For when the Gentiles, which have not the Law, do by Nature the things contained in the Law; these having not the Law, are a Law unto themselves: Which shew the Work of the Law written in their Hearts; their Conscience also bearing Witness, and their Thoughts the mean while accusing, or else excusing one another. And ver. 26. Therefore if the Uncircumcision (or, the Gentile) keep the Righteousness of the Law, shall not his Uncircumcision be counted for Circumcision? And shall not Uncircumcision which is by Nature, if it fulfil the Law, judge thee, who by the Letter and Circumcision doest transgress the Law?

From all these Passages, it may be concluded, That the Philosopher of the Gentiles, who keeps the Law of Nature, and who worships God, is not less justified before the Sovereign Judge, who makes no Acceptation of Persons, than the Jew, who observes the Ceremonial Law: And He will even condemn the prevaricating Jew. Justin [Justin. Apolog. 2. p. 83.] Martyr maintains, That the old Philosophers who lived conformably to Reason, were already Christians, tho' they did not know Jesus Christ; because they already follow'd his Rules and Doctrine: Such, among the Greeks, were Socrates, Heraclitus, and some others; and among the Barbarians, Abraham, Ananias, Azarias, Mizael, Elias, and several others. Clemens Alexandrinus says, [Clem. Alex. l. 6. Strom. p. 637, 638, 639. & l. 1. Stro. p. 319.] That those who lived before Christ, had two Methods of obtaining Justification; the Law, and Philosophy. Philosophy might make them Just, or, at least, dispose them to Justice, or to one Degree of attaining it: It produced a kind of Justice, but not entire and perfect. He adds, That the Gentiles who died before our Saviour's Death, in Hell waited for His Coming, or that of the Apostles; and there having heard their Preaching, they believed, and were saved.

[Chryfost. Homil. 37. in Matth. p. 431.] St. Chrysostom advances, That the Gentiles who lived before Jesus Christ, might be saved, without confessing him: That all that was requir'd of them, was, that they should renounce the worshipping of Idols, and should acknowledge and adore one only God, the Creator of all Things: That if, moreover, they have lived a regular and commendable Life, they shall have their Portion in the Happiness of Heaven; according to that Decision of St. Paul; Glory, Honour, and Peace to every Man that worketh Good. Origen says, That when the Soul of Jesus Christ departed from his Body, it had several Conversations with the Souls of the Dead, to convert those that were most tractable, or best disposed to receive his Doctrine. Gregory of Nazianzen, [Greg. Na -zianz. O -rat. 42.] speaking of Jesus Christ's Descent into Hell, leaves it in Doubt, whether he saved all that were there, without Exception, or only those that had believed. Hilarius the Deacon, quoted under the Name of Ambrosiaster, [Ambrosi-ast. in Eph. iv. 8.] assures us, That Jesus Christ deprived Hell of its Captives that were detained there, either on the Account of Adam's Sin, or, for their own Transgressions; and carry'd such to Heaven in Triumph, who were converted at his Preaching.

We may find these Sentiments scatter'd up and down in several ancient Authors, whom we have quoted in our Dissertation concerning the Salvation of the Gentiles, [Rab. Mo -ses, & Rab. Meyr. Gu-bar.] before the Epistles of St. Paul. The Jews allow a Place in Paradise to more than one Kind of Gentiles: They think, for Example, that those who have faithfully observed the Commandments, which, they say, were given to Noah, shall be in the Number of those who shall obtain Salvation; as also those who have known God, who have entertain'd rational Notions of the Deity, who have lived in a regular and laudable Manner: They give Instances in Socrates and Plato. The Thalmudists exclude from Salvation four Sorts of People; that is, such Gentiles as resemble Baalam and Doeg, and Jews which are like Achitophel and Gehazi. Whence it is to be inferr'd, that Pagans, who are like neither Baalam nor Doeg, according to them, may be admitted to Happiness.

[Tostat. in Gen. xvii. Ambros. Catharin. in Epist. ad Rom. c. xi. Eras. Colloq.] There are cited also Tostatus, Catharinus, Erasmus, and perhaps some other modern Authors, who seem to think, that some of the antient Philosophers, as Socrates, Plato, and Seneca, were in a State capable of Salvation; all which is upon a Supposition, that they knew God, and that they lived in a moral and laudable Manner. But when this Opinion is examin'd according to strict Theological Rules, and when we inquire more narrowly into the Sentiments and Lives of those Philosophers who have been most celebrated, we are soon undeceived as to the good Opinion that had been entertain'd of their boasted Merit.

Certain it is, that without Faith it is impossible [Heb. xi. 6.] to please God. Sine fide impossibile est placere Deo. That Faith without good [Jam. ii. 26.] Works is dead. Fides sine operibus mortua est. That without at least an implicit Faith in our Deliverer, our Messiah, we cannot attain [Acts iv. 12.] Salvation. Nec enim aliud nomen est in cœlo datum hominibus, in quo oporteat nos salvos fieri. But the Philosophers, whose Merit is most cry'd up, had neither Faith enliven'd by Charity, nor good Works, nor Belief in the Messiah. It cannot therefore be asserted, that they had any Title to eternal Salvation.

Socrates, the most unexceptionable of them all, is accused of being addicted to that abominable Vice of the Love of Boys. He worshipped the Clouds, he us'd to swear by a Dog, by an Oak, by a Duck. [Juven. Sat. 2. Aristoph. nubib. Tertull. Apologet.] Lactantius makes him a Buffoon and Merry-Andrew, if he intended thereby to rally the Religion of the Athenians, among whom he lived, and the Solemnity of an Oath; or makes him a Fool, if he held these Things as Gods. The Disciples of Socrates vindicated their Master from the Imputation of Atheism, of which he was accused, and prove that he worshipped the Gods of the Grecians. At his Death he gave Orders, that a Cock should be sacrificed to Æsculapius. Can any Marks of a Saint, or of one predestinated to Salvation, be found in this Character?

Seneca, the Object of the Admiration of [Aug. l. 10. c. 6. de Civit. Dei.] several of the Antients, compos'd a Book of Pagan Superstitions, and after having shewn the Ridiculousness of them, he concluded, that the wise Man ought to observe these Things in compliance to Custom and the Laws, and to practise them in outward Appearance, without any inward Belief of them. Dio upbraids this Philosopher with [Dio l. 61. & in excerptis Valef. p. 685, 686.] the Commission of heinous Crimes, and with instructing his Pupil Nero to practise the same; with heaping up immense Riches in a very little Time, and with increasing them by daily Usury. Such were the most compleat of the Pagan Philosophers, Men that had a barren Knowledge of the Deity, which they dishonour'd by their Manners, and by their absurd Notions of Religion. We shall not farther enlarge upon this Subject, having treated of it elsewhere in a particular Dissertation, placed before the Epistle to the Romans.

The Orientals observe, that the Philosophy of Thales Milesius, who took Water to be the Principle of all Things, has a near Relation to that of Moses and the Egyptians, who were pretty much in the same Principles, as also the Phenicians, who contended for the Production of all Things out of temper'd Mud and watry Sediments; whereas the Persians and Zoroaster made a nearer Approach to the Principles of Anaxagoras, who suppos'd Fire to be the first natural Cause of all material Things.

Phinehas (1)

PHINEHAS, or as the Jews pronounce it, Pinchas, Son of Eleazar, and Grandson of Aaron. He was the third High -priest of the Jews, and discharged this Office from the Year of the World 2571, 'till towards the Year 2590, before Christ 1410, before the vulgar Era 1414. He is particularly commended in Scripture for the Zeal he shew'd in vindicating the Glory of God, when the Midianites had sent their Daughters into the Camp of Israel, to tempt the Hebrews to Fornication and Idolatry. For Zimri having publickly enter'd into the Tent of a Midianitish Woman named Cozbi, Phinehas rose up from among the People,[6] took a Poniard in his Hand, enter'd after Zimri into that infamous Place, and stabb'd both Man and Woman at one Blow, in those Parts that were chiefly concern'd in this criminal Commerce. Upon which the Plague or Distemper ceas'd,[7] with which the Lord had already begun to punish the Israelites.

Then the Lord said to Moses; Phinehas the Son of Eleazar the High-priest has turn'd away my Wrath from the Children of Israel, because he has been zealous in my Cause, and has hinder'd me from destroying them. Wherefore acquaint him, that I give him my Covenant of Peace, and the Priesthood shall be given to his Posterity by a perpetual Covenant, because he has been zealous for his God, and has made Atonement for the Crime of the Children of Israel. This Promise that the Lord made to Phinehas, to give him the Priesthood by a perpetual Covenant, evidently included this tacit Condition, that his Children should continue faithful and obedient;[1] since we know that the Priesthood passed out of the Family of Eleazar and Phinehas to that of Ithamar, and that it return'd not to the Posterity of Eleazar 'till after about an hundred and fifty Years.

This is what we find concerning the Translation of the High-priesthood from one Family to the other. This Dignity continued in the Race of Phinehas, from Aaron down to the High-priest Eli, for about about three hundred and thirty-five Years. a The Manner and Causes of this Change are unknown. It re-enter'd again into the Family of Eleazar under the Reign of Saul, when this Prince having put to death Abimelech, and the other Priests of Nob, he gave the High-priesthood to Zadok, who was of the Race of Phinehas. At the same Time David had Abiathar with him, of the Race of Eli, who perform'd the Functions of High-priest. So that after the Death of Saul, David continued the Priesthood to Zadok and Abiathar conjunctly. But towards the End of David's Reign, Abiathar having espoused the Interests of Adonijah to the Prejudice of Solomon, he was in Disgrace, and Zadok only acknowledged as High-priest. The Priesthood continued in his Family 'till after the Captivity of Babylon, and even to the Destruction of the Temple. But from the Beginning of Zadok's Priesthood alone, and the Exclusion of Abiathar, to the Ruin of the Temple, is a thousand fourscore and four Years.[2]

We read also another memorable Action of Phinehas in which he still shew'd his Zeal for the Lord. 'Twas when the Israelites that were beyond Jordan[3] had raised upon the Banks of this River a vast Heap of Earth; those on the other Side fearing they were going to forsake the Lord, and to set up another Religion, deputed Phinehas and other chief Men amongst them, to go and inform themselves of the Reason of their erecting this Monument. Who when they had found, that it was only in Commemoration of their Union and common Original; Phinehas took Occasion from hence to praise the Lord, saying; We now know that the Lord is with us, since you are not guilty of that Prevarication we suspected you were.

This is the Commendation that Jesus the [Ecclus. xlv. 23.] Son of Sirach gives of Phinehas. The third in Glory is Phinees the Son of Eleazar, because he had Zeal in the Fear of the Lord, and stood up with good Courage of Heart, when the People were turned back, and made Reconciliation for Israel. Therefore was there a Covenant of Peace made with him, that he should be the chief of the Sanctuary and of his People, and that he and his Posterity should have the Dignity of the Priesthood for ever. According to the Covenant made with David Son of Jesse, of the Tribe of Judah, that the Inheritance of the King should be to his Posterity alone; so the Inheritance of Aaron should also be unto his Seed. God give you Wisdom in your Heart, to judge his People in Righteousness, that their good Things be not abolished, and that their Glory may endure [Judg. xvii. 6. xviii. 1. xxi. 24. Judg. xx. 28.] for ever.

We do not exactly know the Time of the Death of Phinehas. But as he lived after the Death of Joshua, and before the first Servitude under Chushan-rishathaim, during the Time that there were neither Kings nor Judges in the Land, and every one did what was right in his own Eyes; his Death is put about the Year of the World 2590, before Christ 1410, before the vulgar Era 1414. 'Twas under his Pontificate that the Story of Micah happen'd, as also that of the Tribe of Dan, when they made a Conquest of Laish, and the Enormity that was committed upon the Wife of the Levite of the Mountain of Ephraim. Phinehas's Successor in the High-priesthood was Abiezar [Chronic. Euseb. ad an. 1760. Vide Orig. t. 7. in Johan. Auth. Tradit. Heb. in 1 Reg. ii.] or Abishuah.

The Rabbins allow a very long Life to Phinehas. There are those that believe he lived to the Time of the High-priest Eli, or even to the Time of Sampson. Others will have it, that he was the same as Eli, or rather as the Prophet Elias, which would still prolong his Life for some Ages. The Author of the Hebrew Traditions upon the Book of Kings, says that the Jews are of Opinion, that the Man of God who came to the High-priest Eli from the Lord, to reproach him with his Indolence concerning the Government of his Sons, was no other than Phinehas. Some make him live as far as the Time of David, others to the Time of Samuel;[4] but there is great Probability that they mean nothing else, but that in the Person of the Prophet Elijah was to be seen all the Zeal of the High-priest Phinehas; in like manner as the Angel said, that John the Baptist should come in the Spirit, and with the Zeal of Elijah.[5] The Jews believed a kind of Transmigration of the Souls of good Men. See the Commentators upon Matth. xvi. 14. and Lightfoot, Harmon. par. 2. to John i. 20, 21. p. 386.

2. PHLEGON, a Freed-man of Adrian. He compos'd a History digested by the Olympiads, as far as the Year of Christ 140. In this History he takes Notice, that in the fourth Year of the two hundred and second Olympiad, which determines about the Middle of the 33d Year of the common Era, there happen'd the greatest Eclipse of the Sun that had ever been seen, a the Stars being seen in the Heavens at Noon-day; that afterwards there was a great Earthquake in Bithynia. Several Criticks believe, that this was that Darkness that happen'd at the Death of Jesus Christ. 'Tis upon this Account that we put the Name of Phlegon here.

Phraortes

PHRAORTES. We have said, after some learned Man, that Phraortes King of the Medes, mention'd by Herodotus, is the same as Arphaxad, who was conquer'd by Nebuchadnezzar, and of whom Mention is made in the Book of Judith. This has prevail'd with us to take Notice of his History in this Work.

After Dejoces, the first King of the Medes, and Founder of Ecbatane, succeeded Phraortes, of whom we are speaking. " Not contenting himself with the Empire of the Medes, he declared War against the Persians, and was the first that brought them into Subjection to the Medes. Finding himself Master of those two potent and warlike Nations, he subdued the greatest part of the People of Asia, whom he attempted one after another. At last he made War with the Assyrians, whose Capital was Ni-nive, a People that formerly possess'd the Empire of Asia, but then forsaken by their Allies, though still powerful enough to make Head against him. Phraortes carrying the War into their Country in the twenty-second Year of his Reign, was defeated, and perished with the greatest part of his Army. His Successor was his Son Cyaxares."

This is what Herodotus informs us of Phraortes: And see what the Scripture tells us of Arphaxad: In the twelfth Year of the Reign of Nebuchadnezzar, who reigned in Ninive the great City, in the Days of Arphaxad, which reigned over the Medes in Ecbatane. And built in Ecbatane Walls round about, &c. Herodotus

Alex. p. 520. ascribes the Building of Ecbatane to Dejoces Father of Phraortes; but that is not inconsistent with Phraortes's continuing to beautify and fortify the City. The Scripture adds; " After that he boasted of his Power, as being invincible; by the Strength of his Army, and by the Multitude of his Chariots: But Nebuchadnezzar King of the Assyrians, who reigned at Nineve the Great, made War in the twelfth Year of his Reign with Arphaxad, and overcame him in the great Plain of Ragau, near the Euphrates, the Tigris, and the Jadason, in the Country of Arioch King of the Elymeans." The twelfth Year of Nebuchadnezzar falls, according to our Chronology, in the Year of the World 3347, before Christ 653, before the vulgar Era 657.

The Characters which the Scripture gives to Arphaxad, are the same that Herodotus imputes to Phraortes; he is King of the Medes, subdues several Nations to his Government, is at last subdued himself by Nebuchadnezzar King of Ninive and the Assyrians. The Difference of Names ought not to be any Objection in the Oriental Historians. We know that they almost always differ from the Greeks, in the Names which they give to their Princes. See F. Montfaucon, in his Book concerning the Truth of the Book of Judith, our Preface to the same Book, and for the contrary Opinion, M. Basnage's Jewish Antiquities, t. 2. p. 252, &c.

Phygellus

PHYGELLUS, or Phigellus, was a Christian of Asia, who happening to be at [2 Tim. i. 15.] Rome while St. Paul was there in Prison, in the 65th Year of Christ, forsook him in his Necessity, with Hermogenes. Aversi sunt a me omnes qui in Asia sunt, ex quibus est Phygellus & Hermogenes. Phygellus is unknown upon any other Account but this, which by no means is to his Honour. Metaphrastes in his Discourse upon St. Peter and St. Paul, says, that the Apostle having[1] having made Phygellus Bishop of Ephesus, this Man seduced the converted Jews, and prevailed with them to renounce the Faith. We read several Things concerning Phile-tus and Hermogenes in the Life of St. James major, written by Abdias. There is something of Probability that this Author has put Philetus for Phygellus, as we read it in the Latin Edition of Sixtus Quintus. But these Circumstances are altogether as uncertain as those related by Metaphrastes. Ambrosiaster says, that [In 2 Tim. i. 15.] Phygellus and Hermogenes were Deceivers and Hypocrites, who attended the Apostle only to learn what they could from him, and afterwards to calumniate him, and raise Persecutions against him. But when they saw themselves discover'd, they departed from him.

Phylactery

PHYLACTERY. This Word is taken from the Greek, and properly signifies a Preservative, such as the Pagans us'd to carry about them, to preserve them from certain Evils, Diseases, or Dangers. They wore, for Example, Stones or Pieces of Metal engraved under certain Aspects of the Planets. All the Eastern part of the World is still to this Day fill'd with this kind of Superstition, and the Men do not only wear Phylacteries for themselves, but for their Animals also. But this Sort of Preservative does not belong to our Subject. What concerns us, are those Phylacteries mention'd by Jesus Christ in the Gospel.[1] He says the Scribes and Pharisees make broad their Phylacteries, and enlarge the Borders of their Garments. These Phylacteries were certain little Boxes, or certain Rolls of Parchment, wherein were written certain Words of the Law. These they wore upon their Foreheads, and upon the Wrists of their Left-Arm. See upon what they founded this Custom. God said to 'em [Exod. xiii. 9.] in Exodus; And it shall be for a Sign unto thee upon thy Hand, and for a Memorial between thine Eyes. And a little farther; And [Exod. xiii. 16.] it shall be for a Token upon thine Hand, and for Frontlets between thine Eyes.

The Jews writ upon their Phylacteries these four Passages of the Law: 1st, Sanctify unto me all the First-born: whatsoever openeth the Womb among the Children of Israel, both of Man and Beast, it is mine. And what follows, as far as the 10th Verse of the 13th Chapter of Exodus. 2. From the 11th Verse of the same Chapter, And it shall be when the Lord shall bring thee into the Land of the Canaanites, &c. as far as Verse 16. 3. From the 4th Verse of the 6th Chapter of Deuteronomy, Hear, O Israel, the Lord our God is one Lord, and what follows to Verse the 9th of the same Chapter. 4. Lastly, from the 13th Verse of the 11th Chapter of the same Book, And it shall come to pass, if you shall hearken diligently to my Commandments, &c. to the End of Verse 21 of the same Chapter.

[Ceremonies of the Jews, p. 1. ch. 11. n. 4.] Here is what Leo of Modena informs us particularly about these Rolls. Those that were to be fasten'd to the Arms were two Rolls of Parchment writ in square Letters, with an Ink made on purpose, and with much Care. They were roll'd up to a Point, and were inclosed in a Sort of Case of black Calves-skin. Then they were put upon a square Bit of the same Leather, but something stiffer, from whence hung a Thong of the same, of about a Finger's Breadth and a Cubit and a half long. These Rolls were placed at the Bending of the Left-Arm, and after the Thong had made a little Knot in Form of the Letter Jod, it was wound about the Arm in a spiral Line, which ended at the Top of the middle Finger. It was call'd Teffila sheljad, or the Teffila of the Hand.

That of the Forehead was compos'd of four Pieces of Parchment, upon each of which was written one of the Sentences before-mention'd. These four Pieces were join'd together in a Square, and they writ upon them the Letter Schin, or .שThen they put over them a little Square of stiff Calves Leather, from whence proceeded two Thongs like the former. This Square was put on the Middle of the Forehead, and the Thongs going round the Head made a Knot behind like the Letter Daleth, and then came round again to the Breast. They call'd this Teffila Shelrosh, the Teffila of the Head. The modern Jews content themselves with putting on these Phylacteries only at Morning-prayers. Some of the most Devout put them on at the Time of Noonprayers also, but they are under no Obligation to do this.

Some Antients think,[2] that the Use of the Tephelims (for thus the Jews call what the Gospel names Phylacteries) is as antient as Moses; and several Interpreters[3] will have it, that at the Time of our Saviour this Custom was general, and that even he himself wore them; and that he reproves in the Pharisees only the Affectation of having larger Phylacteries than other Men. But I cannot prevail with my self to think, that this Custom ever generally obtain'd. St. Jerome says,[4] that in his Time, the Indian, Persian, and Babylonish Jews very commonly wore these Rolls upon their Foreheads, and that those that wore them were esteem'd as the most religious and devout. This therefore was not universal, even among the Jews beyond the Euphrates, and much less among those on this Side that River. The same St. Jerome Jerome thinks, that the Pharisees wrote the Decalogue upon these Phylacteries. St. Chrysostome a writing upon the same Passage, condemns the Abuse of them among Christians, who carried Phylacteries about their Necks, in which were written certain Names of Angels in Hebrew, or some parts of the Gospel. St. Jerome takes Notice of the same Abuse, and Pope Gelasius has condemned this Sort of superstitious Phylacteries. Buxtorf may be consulted concerning these Tephilims, Synag. Jud. c. 4.

Pigeon

PIGEON. See what is said before under [Hos. vii. 11.] the Article DOVE.

The Prophet Hosea says, that Ephraim is like a seduced Pigeon or Dove, that is without Understanding. Factus est Ephraim quasi Columba seducta, non habens cor. The Dove or Pigeon is a simple Animal, without Craft, without Defence, without Understanding. For this is the Sense of the Words, non habens cor. The Hebrews suppos'd the Understanding to be lodg'd in the Heart. See Hos. iv. 11. Prov. vii. 7. ix. 4, 16. x. 21. xii. 11. Ecclus. xvi. 23. As to the Words, Columba seducta, Commentators observe, that this Bird is the only one that does not protect and defend its young ones, and expresses no Concern when they are taken away: But returns always to the same Hole, to build her Nest therein, notwithstanding the frequent Experience she has had, that Worms, Vermin, Birds, or Men have taken away or destroy'd her Young that were deposited there.

But I should rather choose to explain this Passage of such Pigeons as suffer themselves to be seduced, to go to strange Pigeon-houses. 'Tis said that in Cairo, and other Cities of Egypt, there are your Pigeon-stealers, who make it a kind of a Trade, to entice other Peoples Pigeons to their own Pigeonhouses. The Talmudists exclude this Sort of People from any of the Employments of the [Psal.] Sanhedrim. lxviii.

[13.] The Psalmist, describing Pigeons, says, that they are white as Silver, and their Back is yellow as Gold. Pennæ columbæ deargentatæ, & posteriora dorsi ejus in pallore auri. In Palestine the greatest part of their Pigeons were white. Their Plumage is compar'd to Silver, because of its Likeness, and to Gold for its pale or green Colour. For the Hebrew, instead of pallor auri, reads viriditas auri. Prophane Authors give the Epithets of pale and green to this Metal. Inaurata pallidior statuâ [Mart. l. 12. Ep. 15. Isai. lix. 11. xxxviii. 14. Nahum ii. 7. Cant. ii. 14.] , says Catullus. And Miratus Scythicas virentis auri flammas Jupiter, says Martial.

The Prophets frequently compare the People to Flights of Pigeons. Isaiah compares the Jews to Pigeons, or to Doves murmuring under their Disgraces. Quasi columbæ meditantes. He makes use of the same Word meditating, to express the murmuring Noise of the Dove, in the Canticle of Hezekiah. Nahum says, that the Women of Nineveh are carried away captive, and murmur like Stock -Doves. Minantur gementes ut Columbæ, murmurantes in cordibus suis. See Jerem. xlviii. 28. Ezek. vii. 16. Hos. ix. 11, &c. We see in the same Prophets, that the Pigeons often made their Nests in the Clefts of Rocks. Columba mea in foraminibus petræ. And, Jerem. xlviii. 28. Estote quasi columba nidificans in summo ore foraminis.

[Psal. lv. 2. Hos. xi. 11.] In Egypt, in Arabia, in Syria, and in Mogul, they make use of Pigeons for conveying of Letters, when they have Occasion for extraordinary Expedition. They fasten the Letter under the Wing of the Bird, and letting her go, she flies with great Rapidity to the Place where she is to go. 'Tis said, that in Holland they have made Use of this Contrivance at some Sieges. This has some Relation to what was done by Noah, when he let the Dove go out of the Ark. The Prophet asks from God the Wings of a Dove. Hosea says, that the People of the Lord shall fly out of Egypt like a Bird, and out of Assyria like a Dove. This may very well express that Eagerness of Pigeons brought up to carry Letters, to return to the Place of their ordinary Habitation, and to their own Nest.

Pi-Hahiroth

PI-HAHIROTH. The Hebrews departing from Succoth, came to Etham.[1] Then the Lord said to Moses, Speak unto the Children of Israel, that they turn and encamp before Pi-hahiroth, between Migdol and the Sea, over against Baal-zephon, before it shall ye encamp by the Sea. The Word Pi-hahiroth may be explain'd by The Pass of Hiroth, or The Mouth of Hiroth. Moses in the Book of Numbers, calls it simply Hiroth,[2] and Eusebius, as also St. Jerome, in his Book of Hebrew Places, calls it in the same manner. Others translate it, Over-against the Ditches. [Ita Syr.] The Seventy in Exodus xiv. 2. translate, Over against the Village; others, over-against the Pass of Liberty, or the Pass of Drought. [Rab. Salom. Fag.] We think Hiroth to be the same as the City Heroum, or Heroopolis, situated at the Extremity or the Point of the Red Sea, or else [Strab. Plin. alii.] the City of Phagroriopolis, placed by[3] [Strab. l. 17.] Strabo about the same Place, and the Capital of the Canton of Phagroriopolitis. There is great Probability that Pi-habiroth stands for the Pass which was near Heroum. 'Twas beyond this Pass that the Hebrews went to encamp upon the Red Sea.

Pila

PILA, a City of Palestine. Ululate habitatores [Zeph. i. 11. מכתשMachtes.] Pilæ. In the Hebrew 'tis habitatores Machtes, or Inhabitants of Maktesh, of the Jaw-tooth, or of the Mortar. Maktesh is put for a Jaw-bone in the History of Samson, [Judg. xv. 14.] where it is said, that this Hero drank Water that God caus'd to come forth from a Jaw-bone, or from a Rock that had some Resemblance to it. The Place where this happened preserved the Name of Lechi or of Maktesh; and it is very probable, that it is to this Place that Zephaniah addresses these Words, Howl, ye Inhabitants of Maktesh. Ye Philistines or Inhabitants of Maktesh, your Destruction is at Hand. See what we have already said upon the Article of LECHI.

[Sanct. Tir. Riber. &c.] Other Interpreters think, that Maktesh in this Place of Zephaniah, stands for the City of Jerusalem, which in a figurative Sense is call'd The Mortar, in which those were to be bray'd and beaten to Powder, that should be found in it, when it was taken by Nebuchadnezzar.

[Hieron. in Sophron.] St. Jerome seems to think, that Maktesh was a certain Quarter of the City Jerusalem, near the Fountain Siloam. This Place might be called the Mortar, because of its Depth. The Rabbi Solomon explains it of Tiberias, because it was situated in the deepest Valley of the Country. The Chaldee understands it of the Valley of Kidron.

Pilate

PILATE, or Pontius Pilate. It is not known what Family or Country he was of, but it is believed he was of Rome, or at least of a Italy. He was sent to govern Judea in the Room of Gratus, in the Year 26 or 27 of the vulgar Era. He govern'd this Province [Joseph. Antiq. l. 1. c. 5. p. 624.] for ten Years, from the twelfth or thirteenth Year of Tiberius, to the twenty-second or twenty-third Year of the same Emperor. Pilate was a Man of an impetuous and obstinate Temper, who disturb'd the Repose of Judea, and gave occasion to the Troubles and Revolt that follow'd after. Having sent his Troops from Cesarea to Jerusalem, in order to pass the Winter in this City, he caus'd at the same time his Ensigns to be carry'd, on which were the Images of the Emperor; [Ant. l. 18. c. 4. & de bello, l. 2. c. 14.] whereas the other Governors did not use to let their Ensigns enter into the City, because they would not exasperate the Jews, who thought that all Images and Representations were contrary to their Religion. Wherefore Pilate caus'd them to be brought in cover'd, and only by Night. But the Day following the Matter being discover'd, the Jews from the Country ran into the City, and afterwards went in great Numbers to Cesarea, to entreat Pilate to take away those Images. Pilate refused it, and the People continued five Days and five Nights making Supplication to him, without any Intermission.

At last on the sixth Day, Pilate having caus'd a Tribunal to be set up in an open Place of Cesarea, sent for the Jews as if he intended to give them an Answer. But he posted Soldiers round the Place, who inclosed them in when they were assembled, and threatned to massacre them every one, if they did not retire. Then the Jews threw themselves on their Faces, and presented their Necks to the Soldiers, as being ready to receive the Blow. Pilate was astonished at their Intrepidity, and presently caus'd his Images to be brought back to Cesarea.

Philo[1] relates another History that happen'd under Pilate, which has some Relation to the foregoing. He bethought himself of consecrating golden Bucklers to Tiberius, in the Palace of Herod. These Bucklers were without Figures or Images, and had only an Inscription, importing, that they were consecrated to the Emperor. But this, however, alarm'd the Jews, who were jealous for their Religion. The Magistrates of Jerusalem, with the four Sons of Herod at their Head, and follow'd by all the People, came to Pilate, desiring him not to suffer a thing so contrary to their Law. But Pilate with his usual Obstinacy was inflexible to their Intreaties. They persisted, and conjured him not to put them under a Necessity of sending a Deputation to the Emperor, to cause this Order to be revoked. Pilate was greatly afraid of this Deputation, apprehending the Jews would then make known his Insolence, Cruelty, Rapines, and Outrages to the Emperor. They contented themselves with writing to the Emperor, and Tiberius writ back the same Day to Pilate, telling him that he was very much dissatisfied with his Undertaking, and ordered him immediately to remove those Bucklers from Jerusalem.

St. Luke[2] acquaints us, that Pilate had mingled the Blood of some Galileans with their Sacrifices, and that the Matter having been related to Jesus Christ, he said, Think you that these Galileans were greater Sinners than other Galileans, because they suffer'd this Calamity? No, I assure you. And if you do not repent, you shall all perish in like manner. 'Tis unknown upon what Occasion Pilate caus'd these Galileans to be[3] be slain in the Temple, while they were Sacrificing; for this is the Meaning of that Expression, of mingling their Blood with their Sacrifices. Some think they were Disciples of Judas the Gaulonite, who [See Theophylact. Euthym. Grot. Brug. &c. Maldon. Bez. Joseph. Antiq. l. 18. c. 5. Matt. xxvii. 18.] taught, that the Jews ought not to pay Tribute to foreign Princes; and that Pilate had put some of them to death, even in the Temple; but there is no Proof of this Fact. Others think, that these Galileans were Samaritans, whom Pilate cut to Pieces in the Village of Tirataba, as they were preparing to go up to Mount Gerizim, where a certain Impostor had promised to discover Treasures to them. But this Event did not happen before the Year 35 of the common Era, and consequently two Years after the Death of Jesus Christ.

At the Time of our Saviour's Passion, Pilate made some Endeavours to deliver him out of the Hands of the Jews. He knew they had deliver'd him up, and pursued his Life with so much Violence, only out of Malice and Envy. His Wife also, who[4] had been disturbed the Night before with frightful Dreams, sent to tell him she desired him not to meddle in the Affair of that just Person. He attempted to appease the Wrath of the Jews, and to give them some Satisfaction, by whipping Jesus [John xix. 1. Matth. xxvii. 26. John xxiii. 7, 8.] Christ. He try'd to take him out of their Hands, by proposing to deliver him or Barabbas, on the Day of the Festival of the Passover.[5] Lastly, he had a Mind to discharge himself from pronouncing Judgment against him, by sending him to Herod King of Galilee. When he saw all this would not satisfy the Jews, and that they even threaten'd him in some manner, saying he could be no Friend to the Emperor, if he let him go; he caus'd Water to be brought before all the People, washed his Hands, and publickly declared himself innocent of the Blood of that just Person. Yet at the same time he delivered him up to his Soldiers, that they might crucify him. This was enough to justify Jesus Christ, and to shew that he held him as innocent; but it was not enough to vindicate the Conscience and Integrity of a Judge, whose Duty it was, as well to assert the Cause of oppressed Innocence, as to punish the Guilty and Criminal.

He order'd to be put over our Saviour's Cross, as it were, an Abstract of his Sentence, and the Motive of his Condemnation, Jesus of Nazareth, King of the Jews; which was written in Latin, Greek, and Hebrew. Some of the Jews murmur'd at it, and remonstrated to Pilate, that he ought to have written, Jesus of Nazareth, who pretended to be King of the Jews. But Pilate could not be prevailed with to alter it, and gave 'em this peremptory Answer, That what he had written, he had written. Towards Evening he was apply'd to for Leave to take down the Bodies from the Cross, that they might not continue there the following Day, which was the Passover and the Sabbath-day. This he allowed, and also granted the Body of Jesus to Joseph of Arimathea, that he might pay his last Duties [John xix. 12, 15. John xix. 19. John xix. 31. Mat. xxvii. 19. Mat. xxvii. 23, 24. John xix. 33. Mat. xxvii. 65. Just. Apol. 2. Tert. Apol. c. 5. 21. Euseb. hist. Eccl. l. 2. c. 2. Vid. Euseb. l. 9. c. 5. p. 350. Epiphan. hæres. 50. c. 1. p. 420.] to it. Lastly, when the Priests, who had solicited the Death of our Saviour, came to desire him to set a Watch about the Sepulchre, for fear his Disciples should steal him away by Night; he answer'd them, that they had a Guard, and might place them there themselves. And this is the Substance of what the Gospel tells us concerning Pilate.

Justin Martyr, Tertullian, Eusebius, and after them several others both antient and modern, assure us, that it was formerly the Custom for Roman Magistrates, to prepare Copies of all verbal Processes and judicial Acts, which they pass'd in their several Provinces, and to send them to the Emperor. And Pilate in compliance to this Custom, having sent Word to Tiberius of what had passed relating to Jesus Christ, the Emperor writ an Account of it to the Senate, in a Manner that gave Reason to judge, that he thought favourably of the Religion of Jesus Christ, and shew'd that he should be willing they would decree divine Honours to him. But the Senate was not of the same Opinion, and so the Matter was dropp'd. It appears by what Justin says of these Acts, that the Miracles of Jesus Christ were mentioned there, and even that the Soldiers had divided his Garments among them. Eusebius insinuates, that they spoke of his Resurrection and Ascension. Tertullian and Justin refer to these Acts with so much Confidence, as would make one believe they had had them in their Hands.

However, neither Eusebius nor St. Jerome, who were both inquisitive and understanding Persons, nor any other Author that writ afterwards, seem to have seen them, at least not the true and original Acts. For as to what we have now in great Number, they are not authentick, being neither antient nor uniform. The Pagans forged false Acts of the Passion of Jesus Christ, about the Beginning of the fourth Age. They were little favourable to us without doubt, and were very different from those that Justin and Tertullian had cited in the second Age. The Quartodecimans had also the Acts of Pilate, by which they justified themselves in their Error. They were, however, different from those now mentioned, it not being to be supposed that Christians would have Recourse to a Work contrived by the Pagans; and they varied varied from each other, the one asserting that Jesus Christ suffer'd the Eighteenth, and the other the Twenty-fifth of March. Lastly, these Acts are not allowed as authentick by those that have spoke of them, as St. Epiphanius.

[Greg. Tur. l. 1. hist. Fran. c. 21.] Gregory of Tours thought he had got the real Acts of Pilate; but the Fragment he cites from it plainly proves, that it was probably the false Gospel of Nicodemus, which has been suppress'd more than once, and wherein is to be found the Substance of [Vid. Evan. Nicod. c. 13 & 15.] what is related by Gregory of Tours, which is, that the Priests having laid hold on Nicodemus, shut him up in a Chamber, and there kept him themselves; but that he was miraculously delivered, the Walls of the Prison being taken up into the Air by help of Angels, and being afterwards restor'd to their former Condition. And when the Chief Priests required of the Soldiers to produce the Body of Jesus Christ, which had been committed to their Charge; they answer'd, Do you yourselves produce Nicodemus, whom you had shut up; for to speak the Truth, neither can you render Nicodemus, who was a Benefactor of God, nor can we render Jesus, who was the Son of God. At these Words the Priests in great Confusion sent away the Soldiers. This Sketch of the Gospel of Nicodemus, and the whole Work itself, are what we cannot by any means obtrude as authentick Pieces. a

We have, besides, a Letter of Pilate to Tiberius, in the Recapitulation of the false [Bibliot. pp. t. 7. p. 573.] Hegesippus, and in a Writing ascrib'd to Marcellus the Disciple of St. Peter.[6] It may be seen printed in the Chronicon of [Sixt. Sen. l. 2. Bibl.] Martinus Polonus, in Sixtus Senensis, and in several others, though with some Variations. 'Tis thus translated from the Latin: "Pontius Pilate to[7] Claudius wisheth "Health. By the Envy of the Jews a "thing has lately happen'd here, of which "I my self was a Witness, which will "involve them and their Children in a "dreadful Punishment. For their Fathers "having had Assurances from God, that "he would send them his Saint from "Heaven, to be their real King, and who "was to be born of a Virgin; God did "really accomplish this Promise to them, "while I was Governor of Judea. And "the Jews having seen, that he restored "Sight to the Blind, and Health to the "Paralytick; that he cleansed the Lepers, "drove out Devils from those that were "possess'd, raised the Dead, had Com"mand over the Winds, walked dry upon "the Sea, and did many other Miracles; "while the whole Multitude look'd upon "him as the Son of God, the chief of the "Jews conceived an extream Envy and "and Jealousy against him. They seized “him, deliver'd him up to me, and form'd “many false Accusations against him, say“ing he was a Magician, and a Transgres“sor of their Law. As to my self, think“ing what they said of him to be true, I “caus'd him to be whipp'd, and then “deliver'd him up to their Will. They “crucify'd him, and set a Watch at his Se“pulchre. But the third Day he rose again, “while my Soldiers guarded his Tomb. The “Malice of the Jews was such, that they “gave Money to the Soldiers, and bid “them say that his Disciples took away “his Body. But when the Soldiers had “received the Money, they could not “forbear from owning the Truth. They “declared that Jesus Christ was risen, and “that the Jews had given them Money “not to speak of it. Of this I thought “proper to give you Notice, that Credit “may not be given to the Lyes of the “Jews.

There is yet another pretended Letter of Pilate to Tiberius, in Florentinius, p. 113, and another in the History of Jesus Christ, written in Persian by Jerome Xavier. The Bollandists on the fourth of February, p. 450, have given a spurious History of our Saviour, sent to Tiberius by [Fabric. in Appendice apocryph. N. T. p. 971, 972.] Pilate. Lastly, M. Fabricius has given one in Greek, which is taken from a Manuscript of M. Colbert's, mark'd 2493. And M. Cottelier quotes another, which is also in Greek in the King's Library, N°. 2431, which are not better than those we have already mention'd. I say nothing of the pretended Letter of Lentulus, who, they say, govern'd Judea immediately before Pilate, and which gives an Account to the Senate of the Person and Miracles of Jesus Christ. He gives Testimony to his Miracles, and describes him as a Man of a comely Stature, a majestick Air, temper'd with Severity and Sweetness, which at the same time makes him both beloved and respected; having long flaxen Hair, lank from the Root to the Ears, and then curled from the Ears to the Shoulders; a large Beard, parted like his Hair. His Visage fair, enliven'd with a little Red; his Eyes Blue, &c. This Letter has been several times printed, but it is generally agreed to have no better Authority than the Acts of Pilate before mentioned.

Let us return to the History of this Governor. About a Year after the Death of Jesus Christ,[8] he undertook to bring Water to Jerusalem by an Aquæduct. This Water was about Two hundred Furlongs from the City, or between seven or eight Leagues.[9] To perform this Design, Pilate took the Money out of the Sacred Treasury. The People made an Uproar, and gathered together to the Number of several Thousands, making Outcries against the Governor. There were some so violent, as even to speak injurious Words against him. Pilate coming into the City, caused many of his Soldiers to disguise themselves, and mix themselves with the Multitude; and having call'd them together, as soon as they began to cry and speak insolently, he made a Sign to the Soldiers, who falling on, struck indifferently all about them, without distinguishing the Innocent from the Guilty. By this violent Means he appeas'd the Sedition.

After this Story, Josephus relates what [Antiq. l. 18. c. 5. p. 623, 624.] we have mentioned before, concerning the Samaritans, who being seduced by an Impostor that promised to discover many precious Vessels, which he said had been hid by Moses in Mount Gerizim, assembled together in great Numbers. They had armed themselves, and made a Stop at the Village of Tirataba, that they might ascend Mount Gerizim all together. But Pilate having before taken Possession of the Height of the Mountain with his Horse and Foot, set upon them at Tirataba, defeated them, and slew a great Number of them, put the rest to Flight, and put to Death the Chief of those that fell into his Hands. Then the Samaritans went with their Complaints to Vitellius Governor of Syria, maintaining that the Conflux of People at Tirataba was with no Intention to revolt, but only to secure themselves from the Severity of Pilate. Upon which Vitellius sent Marcellus, one of his Friends, into Judea, to take the Care of this Province, and at the same time order'd Pilate to repair to Rome, and give an Account of his Conduct to the Emperor Tiberius. Thus Pilate quitted the Government of Judea in the 36th Year of Jesus Christ, or of the vulgar Era, and in the 23d Year of Tiberius. This Emperor was dead before Pilate arrived at Rome.

We know not the Particulars of what happen'd to this Governor, but it is received [Ado Chro. Ærat. 7.] as an antient Tradition, that he was banished to Vienne in Dauphine, where he was reduced to such Extremity, that in Despair he kill'd himself with his own [Euseb. l. 2. c. 7. Vid. Orosi. l. 7. c. 5.] Sword. Eusebius quotes this Fact as extracted from Authors, who had digested (as he says) the Roman History by Olympiads. He seems to intimate Phlegon, the Freed-man of Adrian. They shew a Lake above Lucern in Switzerland, called the Lake of Pilate, wherein they affirm this Governor threw himself, being pursued in his Flight from the Place of his Exile. The People add, That upon a certain Day of the Year, they see an Apparition in the Habit of a Judge, which presently disappears, by plunging itself into the Lake. The People of Lucern are persuaded, that if the Water of this Lake is disturb'd, or if any thing be cast into it, a Storm would be immediately raised in the Country. Wherefore they take great Care to warn the Travellers that go to see it, not to throw any thing in that may trouble the Water. But those that have given us a Description of it, and have examined it with some Care, make themselves Mirth with these popular Opinions. See Gesner in the Description he has made of it, and Hofman's Dictionary in the Article PONTIUS PILATE.

M. Simon, in his Dictionary of the Bible, has gather'd together seven or eight pretended Sentences of Pilate against Jesus Christ, or rather the Sentence of this unrighteous Judge, model'd after eight different manners by modern Authors. As Anselmus in his Book of the Passion, Vincent Ferriere, Lansperg, William of Paris, the Gospel of Nicodemus, John of Carthagena, Sempronianus, Adrichomius. But we shall be easily forgiven, if we omit these, as things of no Authority. The Gospel does not say so much as that Pilate pronounced any Sentence, but only that he gave him [Mat. xxviii. 26. Mark xv. 15. Luk. xxiii. 24. John xix. 16.] up to the Will of the Jews, who demanded with loud Cries, that he should be crucified. And it was in effect to pronounce a Sentence against him, to consent to what they demanded, and to suffer them to execute that Sentence they had already pronounced against him themselves.

This Governor is described, by Philo the [Philo de Legatione ad Caium.] Jew, as a Judge that us'd to sell Justice, and, for Money, pronounced any Sentence that was desired : He mentions his Rapins, his Injuries, his Murders, the Torments he inflicted upon the Innocent, and the Persons he put to Death without any Form of Process. Lastly, He describes him as a Man that exercised an excessive Cruelty during all the Time of his Government.

As to the Letter of Pilate to Tiberius, it was formerly read in the Churches of France; and I have found it in the ancient Manuscript of Luxueil, from whence F. Mabillon has taken what he has printed of the Cursus Gallicanus.

The popular Tradition of Vienne in Dauphine, is, That Pilate was banished to this City, which was the Place of his Nativity : Even to this Day, they call an ancient Edifice, which has the Form of a Temple, and which is call'd Notre Dame de la Vie, by the Name of Pilate's Pretorium. Upon this Tradition, the Magistrates had caused to be inscribed upon the Front of this Edifice, This is the Head of Pilate's Sceptre. Mr. Chorier, in his Antiquities of Vienne, has confuted these Suggestions ; he thinks that the Memory of a certain Italian call'd Humbert Pilati, has given Occasion to the People to call a Tower which is at Vienne, near the Rhone, the Tower of Pilate; and a Country-house near St. Vallier, the House of Pilate, &c.

[Exod. xiii. 21. Ibid. Judith xx. 40.] PILLAR: A Pillar of Clouds, a Pillar of Fire, a Pillar of Smoke, signify a Cloud, a Fire, a Smoke, which are raised up towards Heaven in the Form of an irregular Pillar. The Pillars of Heaven, Job xxvi. 11. and the Pillars of the Earth, Job ix. 6. Psal. lxxiv. 4. are metaphorical Expressions, that suppose the Heavens and the Earth to be as an Edifice, raised by the Hand of God, and founded upon its Basis or Foundation. This appears from those [Job, ch. xxxviii. 4, 5, 6.] Words of Job; Where wast thou when I laid the Foundations of the Earth? Declare, if thou hast Understanding. Who hath laid the Measures thereof, if thou knowest? or who hath stretched the Line upon it? Whereupon are the Foundations thereof fastened, or who laid the Corner-stone thereof? The Antients imagined the Earth to lie upon a Flat, and that the Heavens rested upon its Extremities.

Pine

PINE, Pinus, a Tree sufficiently known, and of the Nature of the Fir-tree. Isaiah says,[1] That Man has planted a Pine, of which he has made an Idol. The Hebrew Word Oren, by the Septuagint and St. Jerom is translated by a Pine. Others interpret it by an Elm[2]. In another Place of the same Prophet,[3] we find also Pine in the Vulgate: But the Hebrew has Tashur, which the Septuagint renders the Cedar; other Interpreters, the Elm[4]. Lastly, In the Chronicles,[5] mention is made of the Wood of the Pine: But the Hebrew reads Algumim[6]; which, probably signifies in general, Trees that are fat and resinous, or those Trees that produce Gum. In the First Book of Kings, chap. x. 11. in the Hebrew is read Almugim, instead of Algumim. The Rabbins explain it by Coral; others, by Ebony; and others, by Brasil. True it is, we know but little of the Nature of the greatest Part of the Trees and Vegetables mention'd in the Hebrew Text. See J. H. Ursin. Arboretum Biblicum.

Pinnacle of the Temple

[Matth. iv. 5, 6.] PINNACLE of the Temple. When the Devil had tempted Jesus in the Desart, Then the Devil taketh him up into the holy City, and setteth him on a Pinnacle of the Temple; and saith unto him, If thou be the Son of God, cast thy self down; for it is written, He shall give his Angels Charge concerning thee, &c. This Pinnacle whereon Jesus Christ was set, was, probably, no other than that Gallery, or Parapet, or Wall on the Top of the Buttresses, which surrounded the Roof of the Temple, properly so call'd. For it is well known, that in Palestine the Roofs were cover'd with Terrasses, or Plat-forms; round about which they made a low Wall, to hinder any one from falling down. The Law itself had appointed this, Deut. xxii. 8. Josephus tells us, That the Roof of the [Joseph. Antiq. l. 6. c. 6. in Lat.] Temple was defended with pretty tall Golden Spikes, to hinder Birds from lighting thereon, that they might not defile it with their Dung. It was not therefore upon the Roof of the Temple, that Jesus Christ was placed, but upon the Wall that surrounded the Roof.

Pison

PISON, or Phison, one of the four great Rivers that watered the Terrestrial Paradise. We take it to be the Phasis, a famous River of Cholchis. Moses says, that it [Gen. ii. 11, 12.] runs through all the Land of Havilah, and that excellent Gold is found there. This River has its Source in the Mountains of Armenia, and discharges itself into the Euxine Sea. At its Mouth it is above half a League wide, and in depth above sixty Fathoms. There is hardly any River in the World that makes more Turnings and Windings, because of the Mountains it finds in its Way; from whence it came to [Plin. l. 6. c. 4.] pass that in the Time of Pliny, there were an hundred and twenty Bridges over this River: And this is, perhaps, what Moses hinted at, when he says, that Pison compasseth the whole Land of Havilah, which Land we take to be Cholchis. The Gold of this Country is much celebrated. All Antiquity extols the Riches of Cholchis. Strabo observes, That the Rivers and [Strab. l. xi.] Brooks of this Country, (or of the neighbouring Countries, for we cannot tell how far its ancient Limits might extend) carried Lumps of Gold along with their Waters, which the Inhabitants gathered upon Sheep-skins with their Wool on, or in Wooden Trays with Holes bored in them. We think the Gold of Phaz, Uphaz, or Ophaz, sometimes mentioned in Scripture, [Cant. v. 11. Jer. x. 9. Dan. x. 5.] is the same with that of Pison, or of Phasis. See our Commentary on Genesis, chap. ii. 11, 12. Many think the Pison to be the Ganges: But this River is too far from the Euphrates and the Tigris, which, Moses tells us, ran through the Earthly Paradise, as well as the Pison and the Gihon.

Pithom

PITHOM, or Phithom, one of the [Exod. i. 11.] Cities that the Children of Israel built for Pharaoh in Egypt, during the Time of their Servitude. This is, probably, the same [Herodot. l. 2.] City as Pathumos mention'd by Herodotus, which he places upon the Canal made by the Kings Necho and Darius, to join the Red-Sea with the Nile, and by that Means with the Mediterranean. We find also, in [Strab. Ptolem. Plin. &c. Descript. Ter. Sanct.] the ancient Geographers, that there was an Arm of the Nile, call'd Pathmeticus, Phatmicus, Phatnicus, or Phatniticus. Bochart says, That Pithom and Ramesses are about five Leagues above the Division of the Nile, and beyond this River: But this Assertion has no Proof from Antiquity. This Author contents himself with relating what was said of Egypt in his own Time. Marsham will have Pithom to be the same as Pelusium, or Damietta.

Plaga

PLAGA: This Word is taken sometimes for a Coast, or a certain Point of the Compass. Plaga orientalis, the Eastern Coast: Ad australem plagam Cerethi, to the South of the Cerethites, or Philistines: Plaga maris, the Coast of the Mediterranean Sea, that is to the West: Amos iii. 12. In Samaria, in plaga lectuli, & in Damasci grabato; Those that dwell in Samaria, in the Corner of the Bed, and in the Couch of Damascus. The Israelites flatter themselves with a long Peace, and Rest in Quiet upon their own Beds, and upon the Bed of Damascus, under the happy Reign of Jeroboam II. and in Alliance with the Kings of Damascus. But the Lord shall soon rouse them, and break their Rest.

[Gen. xii. 17.] Plaga, in the Sense of a Blow, or Stroke, signifies Wounding, Chastisement, Plagues sent by God, or Misfortunes proceeding from Men. For Example; God smote Pharaoh with great Evils, great Troubles. Flagellavit Dominus Pharaonem plagis maximis. The Leprosy, [Levit. xiii. 2, 3, 9, &c.] is call'd Plaga lepræ, the Correction of the Leprosy; because it was consider'd as a Blow from the Hand of God. The Leprosy of Buildings, is call'd Plaga lepræ, as well as that of Men. The Lord sent the Plague, or Mortality, amongst the Israelites, after the Eating of Meat: Et percussit eos plagâ magnâ nimis. The Punishment [Judg. xi. 33. & xv. 8. 1 Mac. v. 3. 2 Sam. vii. 14.] with which God smote the Philistines, by sending against them a Multitude of Rats, is call'd a Plague.

God tells David, That if his Son, who is to succeed him in the Kingdom, shall fall into the Commission of any Faults, he should be punished with the Plague, with which he punishes the Children of Men: Arguam eum in virga virorum, & in plagis filiorum hominum; I will not destroy him, but I will treat him as a Father treats his Children, and as I am used to punish the Children of Men. The Wound [1 Kings viii. 38.] or Sore of the Heart, plaga cordis, means Sin, secret Iniquity, the Wounds of the Soul. Siquis cognoverit plagam cordis sui, [Tob. ii. 13. Jer. xxx. 12.] &c. Plaga cœcitatis, Blindness; Plagâ inimici percussi te; I smote you, as an Enemy; I have given you a mortal Wound. [2 Mac. ix. 5.] God struck Antiochus, insanabili & invisibili plagâ, with a Distemper that was incurable, invisible, internal, and secret. [Marc. v. 29.] The Hemorrhoidal Woman, in the Gospel, was cured of her Plague, plagâ suâ, sua, of her Disease, by touching the Hem of the Garment of Jesus Christ.

Plagiary

[1 Tim. i. 10. Ἀνδραποδισταῖς. In the English, Menstealers.] PLAGIARY. St. Paul, writing to Timothy, places Plagiaries among the greatest Miscreants. The Word Plagiary, in this Passage, signifies one that steals away a Freeborn Person, to sell him for a Slave. Also the Name of Plagiary was given to those who bought or detain'd a Free-man as a Slave. Thus was Joseph sold by his Brethren, who therefore became Plagiaries. 'Tis the greatest Injury and Insult that can be committed against a Man, thus to rob him of his Liberty. The Word Plagiary has also been extended to such, as appropriate to themselves the Works or Writings of another, who copy them, and give them out as their own.

Plain

PLAIN. In Palestine we find two large Vales, known to Historians and Geographers by the Name of Plains. One is extended along the Jordan from Tiberias to Segor or Seor, about the Length of Twelve hundred [Joseph. Antiq. l. 9. c. 11. & de Bello, l. 5. c. 4.] Furlongs, and the Breadth One hundred and twenty Furlongs. The other is call'd the Plain or the Field of Esdraelon or Legio, because [2 Chron. iv. 17.] of these Cities standing in it; or the Valley of Jezreel, because of the City of Jezreel. It reaches from East to West, from Scythopolis standing upon the Jordan, to Legion at the Foot of Carmel, the Length of about five and twenty Leagues. Eusebius and [Euseb. & Hieron. Onomast. in Αὐλῶν.] St. Jerom give still a larger Extent to the great Plain that lies upon the Jordan; because, they say, it begins from Libanus, and reaches to the Wilderness of Paran. The Valley or Plain of Jericho was in this great Plain, and made a Part of it, as may be seen [Eusebius in Ἐγγαδδί.] from Eusebius. These great Plains are sometimes call'd, the Plains of Aulon, or Aulos, or Araba.

Play

PLAY, to Play. The Hebrews use the Word to Play, to express all Kinds of Diversions, as Dancing, Sports of Exercise, Toying, and Amusements proper for Recreating the Mind, and to give Pleasure to it. The Hebrew Word Zachak, which signifies to Play, is also commonly us'd for Laughing, Mocking, Jeering, Insulting. When Sarah saw Ishmael play with her Son Isaac, she was offended at it: It was a Play of Mockery or Insult, or, perhaps, of Squabbling, as in the Second Book of Samuel. Surgant pueri & ludant coram nobis; Let the young People, or Soldiers, get up, and play before us; Let them Fight, as it were, by way of Play. But the Event shews, that they fought in good [1 Samuel xviii. 6, 7.] Earnest, since they were all kill'd.

We see another Kind of Play in Exodus: When the Israelites had set up the Golden Calf, they began to dance about it, and to divert themselves: The People sate down to eat and drink, and rose up to play. When Samson was deliver'd up by Dalilah into the Hands of the Philistines, they bored out his Eyes, put him into Prison, and some time after made him come into their Presence, to divert them by the Tricks they [Judg. xvi. 25.] play'd him, and by the Motions he was forced to make, to avoid them, and to skreen himself from their Insults: Præceperunt ut vocarent Samson, & ante eos luderet; qui adductus de carcere, ludebat coram [Tob. iii. 17. Jer. xv. 17.] iis.

The Women that came out to meet David and Saul, when they returned victorious from the Slaughter of Goliah, danced and play'd upon Instruments, and shew'd their Mirth after a thousand manners: Egressæ sunt mulieres cantantes choroque ducentes —— in tympanis lætitiæ & systris, & præcinebant ludentes, &c. In the Procession that was made, when the Ark was removed from the House of Obed-edom to the Palace of King David, he danced with [2 Sam. vi. 5, 22.] great Alacrity, play'd upon Instruments, and testify'd his Joy before the Lord; David autem & omnis Israel ludebant coram Domino. And when Michal upbraided him, for not observing that Gravity and Decency that was suitable to his Rank, he answer'd; Et ludam, & vilior fiam; I will play, and be still more vile in my own Eyes.

Sarah the Daughter of Raguel, opening her whole Heart before the Lord, said to him; I have never associated my self with those that play: Nunquam cum ludentibus miscui me. And Jeremiah; Non sedi in concilio concilio ludentium; I have never haunted the Assemblies of those that are given to Play and Diversion. And the same Prophet, speaking to the Daughter of Siou, tells her, That the Time shall come, in which she shall be rebuilt, and that she shall divert [Jer. xxxi. 4.] herself again in Dancing with her Equals: Adhuc ornaberis tympanis tuis, & egredieris in choro ludentium. Solomon represents Wisdom, as playing before the Lord, [Prov. viii. 30, 31.] and takes her Pleasure in living among Men; Ludens coram eo omni tempore, ludens in orbe terrarum. Baruk seems to point at the Diversion of Fowling, by the Name [Baruk iii. 17.] of Play; Where are the Princes of the Nations, who domineer over the Beasts of the Earth, and play with the Fowls of the Air? Qui in avibus cœli ludunt.

I cannot perceive, in Scripture, any particular Sorts of Plays; neither Games of Hazard, nor Plays or Theatrical Representations, nor Races either of Horses or Chariots, nor Combats of Men or Beasts. Solomon speaks of nothing like this; tho' he frankly owns, that he had indulged himself in all Kinds of Pleasure: He mentions only fine Buildings, Gardens, Vineyards, Orchards, Fish-ponds, good Eating and Drinking, heaping up Gold and Silver, Singing-men and Singing-women, &c. In their Descriptions of Prosperity and profound Peace, they speak neither of Games, or Shows, but only of well-cultivated and fruitful Fields, wherein every one may enjoy his Repose under his own Vine, and his own Fig-tree, partaking of the Fruits of his Labours in Security; where the old Men, sitting in publick Places, may deliberate about their Affairs in common, and where the young People may cloath themselves in glorious Apparel, and in Ornaments proper for going to War. The Israelites were a laborious and warlike People, who confin'd almost all their Plays and Diversions to the Pleasures of the Country, and to those which they found in the Festivals of the Lord, in their Religious Journeys, and in the Meals they eat in the Temple.

I speak of the Times in which the Observation of the Law was kept up, and of the old Times of the Hebrew Republick. For when they grew irregular, they gave in to the utmost Excesses of idolatrous Nations, and deliver'd themselves up to their wicked and shameful Sports and Diversions. From the Time of the Reign of the Grecians, I mean, after the Death of Alexander the Great, and the Government of the Kings of Syria in Judea, they began to take an Inclination to the Sports and Exercises of the Grecians. There were Gymnasia, or Schools of Exercise, to be seen in Jerusalem, and Places where they put in Practice all the Exercises [1 Mac. v. 16. 2 Mac. iv. 13, 14, 15.] of the Greeks, Wrestling, Racing, Quoits, &c. And when the Romans succeeded the Greeks in their Government there, Herod built Theatres and Amphitheatres in the Cities of Palestine, and caused all Sorts of Games to be represented there. Josephus may be consulted on this Head; and the Dissertation composed by Mr. Vagenseil, concerning the Sports of the Hebrews.

Pleiades

PLEIADES. The Pleiades are Seven Stars beyond the Bull, which appear at the Beginning of the Spring[1]. Job speaks of the Pleiades,[2] and of the Hyades, which are Seven other Stars in the Bull's-head, and which mark out the East Point and the Spring. The Hebrew reads Chima: Canst thou bind the sweet Influences of the Pleiades? Can you hinder the Pleiades from rising in their Season? He gives them the Name, the sweet Influences of Chima; because of the Agreeableness of the Spring-season. St Jerome has translated Chima, by Hyades, Job ix. 9. and by Pleiades, Job xxxviii. 31. and by Arcturus, the Bear'stail, in Amos v. 8. Aquila sometimes translates it in like manner. The Bear is one of the most Northern Constellations; and Chima rather signifies the Pleiades.

Poderis

[Wisdom xviii. 24. vulgat.] PODERIS. This Word is taken from the Greek[1], and properly signifies a Robe hanging down to the Feet; but it is chiefly used to express a Linen Garment, a Surplice, a Shirt. St. Jerome, in his Epistle to Tabiola, says, It was light, and close to the Body; Strictam & corpori adhærentem, eamque similem militum camisiis. The Jewish Priests were cover'd with this Kind of long Surplices, during the Time of their Attendance in the Temple; and this was the proper Habit of their Order. The Author of the Book of Wisdom gives also the Name of Poderis to the Long Robe of the High-Priest, at the Bottom of which were little Bells and Pomegranates; In veste poderis quam habebat, totus erat orbis terrarum. The Septuagint translate the Hebrew Word Ephod, by Poderis, Exod. xxviii. 31. And in Ezekiel ix. 2, 3. they translate the Hebrew Word Bad, by the same Term. Bad, properly signifies a linen Robe. In Exod. xxv. 7. and xxxv. 8. they render the Hebrew Word Coschen in like manner, which signifies the High-Priest's Breast-plate, Pectoral, or Rational of Judgment; which, surely, was no long Robe: but it was consider'd as making a Part of the long Robe call'd Mehil, which also they translate by Poderis, Exod. xxviii. 4. St. John, in his [Rev. i. 13. vulgat.] Revelations, says, that Jesus Christ appear'd to him in a Poderis, which was a sacerdotal Habit, commonly call'd, an Albe or Surplice, as Liran says upon this Place.

Poetry of the Hebrews

POETRY of the Hebrews. No Point of Criticism has been more canvass'd among the Learned, than this concerning the Poetry of the Hebrews. The most skilful Commentators, and the most able Criticks, have abundantly labour'd this Argument, and yet we cannot say the Matter is exhausted, or the Difficulty clear'd up. Doubts and Difficulties still remain, and are likely always to remain, since we cannot pretend to know, nor ever shall know, the true Pronunciation of the Hebrew Language; and consequently we cannot perceive either the Harmony of the Words, or the Quantity of the Syllables, which yet constitute the whole Beauty of Verses. Nor have we in Hebrew, as we have in Greek and Latin, Rules for ascertaining the Quantity of Syllables, the Number of Feet, Rules for the Cadence and Construction of Verses; and yet it is plain the Hebrews observed all these Things, at least in some measure, since in their Poems we observe Letters added to, or cut off from, the Ends of the Words, which shew some Submission to the Rhyme, or to the Number, or to the Measure of the Syllables. Nor have we now any Notion of the Tune and Dance which generally accompany'd the Hebrew Poetry; for we know that they were sung, and were made on purpose for it. And the Scripture frequently speaks of Choirs and Dances in the Ceremonies of Religion. Thus we know but very imperfectly, and are not like to know much better, the Verses and Poetry of the Hebrews.

From the manner in which Josephus, Origen, Eusebius, and St. Jerome have spoke of the Hebrew Poetry, it should seem that in their Time the Beauty and Rules of it were very well known. Josephus[1] affirms in several Places, that the Songs composed by Moses are in Heroick Verse, and that David compos'd several Sorts of Verses and Songs, Odes and Hymns, in Honour of God, some of which were in Trimeters, or Verses of three Feet, and others in [Vid. Eusfeb. Præp. l. xi. c. 3.] Pentameters, or Verses of five Feet. Origen and Eusebius have espoused the same Sentiments, whether it were out of mere Deference to the Opinion of Josephus, or whether their own Judgments were convinc'd of it, is uncertain. Origen understood the Hebrew, and Eusebius was one of the most learned Men of his Time.

St. Jerome has carry'd this Notion still [Præfat. in Chronic. Euseb.] farther, affirming, that the Psalter was composed in Alcaick, Iambick, and Sapphick Verses, in the manner of those of [In Ep. 135. ad Paul. Urb.] Pindar and Horace. And that the Songs in Deuteronomy and Isaiah, the Book of Job, and those of Solomon, are in Hexameter and Pentameter Verses. He says elsewhere, that the Canticle of Deuteronomy is in Iambick Verses of four Feet, as also Psalm cxviii. Beati immaculati in viâ, and cxliv. Exaltabo te, Deus meus Rex; whereas Psalm cx. Confitebor tibi, Domine, and cxi. Beatus vir qui timet Dominum, are in Iambick Verses only of three Feet.

He observes in the Lamentations of Jeremiah a kind of Sapphick Verses, and Verses of three Measures. In several Places he speaks of the Book of Psalms,[2] as of a Work composed of Lyrick Verses, like those of Pindar, Alcæus, Horace, Catullus, and Serenus. In his Preface to the Book of Job, he says, that from these Words, Pereat dies in quâ natus sum, are Hexameter Verses, composed of Dactyls and Spondees, wherein are sometimes intermix'd other Feet of the same Measure, though they have not the same Number of Syllables, because of the Variation of the Language. Sometimes (says he) without any Regard to the Quantity of Syllables, the Poet makes you perceive a kind of Cadence or Harmony, which sensibly affects those that are skilful in the Rules of Poetry.

[Mercer. in Job. c. iii. Meibom. Journ. des Sçavans, p. 1699.] Philo says,[3] that the Essenians have antient Poems, the Verses of which are of several Forms and Measures. Some of 'em have three Members, others are Hymns which were sung at the Sacrifices, others were rehearsed at Meals, and others were accompany'd with Dances. We are inform'd, that Franciscus Vetablus had discover'd the true Method of the Verses of Job and the Psalter, but as yet nobody has been let into Vetablus's Secret. Theodore Herbert thought he had found Verses in the Bible, like to those in Greek and Latin, and he has really taken Notice of some. Meibomius boasted, that for above two hundred Years nobody but himself had arrived at the Knowledge of the Hebrew Poetry; but he kept this Knowledge to himself, and did not think proper to communicate it to the World. We only know, that by means of his Poetry, and of the Alterations he makes in the Text, he takes the whole Scripture to Pieces. Francis Gomar, in his Treatise call'd Davidis Lyra, has pretended to give the Rules of the Hebrew Poetry, just like those of the Greek and Latin; but he brought upon himself a Confutation from Lud. Capellus, which has not been answer'd yet.

M. Le Clerc has compos'd a very ingenious Dissertation, to shew, that the Hebrew Poetry was in Rhymes, pretty much like the French or English; and his Opinion nion has been espoused by a good Number of Partisans. Others maintain, that in the old Hebrew Verses there is neither Measure nor Feet to be found. Scaliger even affirms, that their Language, as well as [Scalig. Animad. in Chronic. Eufeb. p. 7. col. 1.] those of the Syrians, Arabians, and Abyssins, is not capable of the Restraint of Feet or Measures. Austin of Eugubium says, that the Hebrews have neither Heroick Verses, nor Iambicks, nor of any other Measure; but only something that resembles it, like the Songs of barbarous Nations. This Opinion is supported by Louis Capel, Martin Martinius, Samuel Bohlius, Wasmurh, Aust. Pfeiffer, and some others. Grotius[4] also declares for this, and is indeed the Sentiment which we think the most probable. See our Dissertation upon the Hebrew Poetry, prefix'd to our Commentary upon Exodus, and the Authors we have already cited.

As to the Poetry of the modern Hebrews, the Reader may consult the Grammarians, and particularly Buxtorf's Thesaurus, which gives the Rules of it, and the several Kinds into which it is divided. See also Morini Exercit. Biblic. l. 2. Exer. 18. c. 7. p. 537, &c.

Poets

POETS. There is no Doubt to be made, but that the antient Hebrews had their Poets; and we have still remaining in the Bible a good Number of Canticles, and other Pieces of Poetry. What seems to me very remarkable is this, that all their Poetry is dedicated, by the Application they have made of it, to the Celebrating of the Greatness of God, and the Magnificence of his Works. The Hebrew Poets, so many of 'em at least as have any Works handed down to us, were all Men inspired of God. We find among them, Kings, Law-givers, Prophets. Moses, Baruch, David, Solomon, Hezekiah, Job, Isaiah, Jeremiah, and most of the Prophets, have composed Poems or Pieces in Verse. And what kind of Poetry? why, the most pompous, the most majestick; and the most sublime that can be conceived. The Expression, the Sentiments, the Figures, the Variety, the Action, every thing is surprizing. But as to the Laws of this Poetry, they are entirely unknown to us, as has been observed before.

[Aristot. Rhet. l. 3. c. 17. Diogen. Laert. l. 1. Plutarch. in Solone. Tit. i. 12.] St. Paul gives to the Pagan Poets the Name of Prophets. One of themselves, even a Prophet of their own said, &c. Because among the Heathen, Poets were what Prophets were among the Hebrews. They were look'd upon as inspir'd, and animated with the Spirit of Apollo. They spoke by Enthusiasm, Oracles were commonly deliver'd in Verse, the Poets were the Interpreters of the Wills of the Gods.

The Poet quoted here by St. Paul, is Epimenides. The Antients relate many Particulars of him, which prove, that they esteem'd him as an inspir'd Person, and favour'd by the Gods. Aristotle says, that he did not indeed foretell future Events, but that he discover'd Things that were past and unknown. Diogenes Laertius and Plutarch give an Account, that seeing the Fort of Munichium, which is the Port of Athens, he cry'd out, O the Blindness of Men! If the Athenians could but foresee the Misfortunes that this Fort will create to them, they would demolish it with their Teeth. The Truth of these Words was evinced some Years after, when King Antigonus placed a Garison there, to curb the City of Athens. Another Time he encouraged the Athenians, who were in Apprehension of an Invasion from the Persians. He told them, that it would be ten Years before they came, and that then they would be obliged to return again, after having suffer'd great Losses. He also foretold to the Lacedemonians and Cretans, the Captivity to which the Arcadians should one Day reduce them. 'Twas probably from such Predictions [Diogen. Laert. l. 1. Acts xvii. 28. Τὸ γὰρ καὶ γένος ἐσμὲν.] as these, whether true or false, that made the Greeks consider Epimenides as a Prophet, and which were a Reason to St. Paul for his giving him the same Appellation, whether by way of Irony, or otherwise.

The same Apostle quotes the Poet Aratus, who was a Native of Cilicia as well as himself. He cites these Words from him, We are the Children and the Race of God. Ipsius enim & genus sumus. This is but a part of a longer Passage, the Sense of which is this: We must begin from Jupiter, whom we must by no means forget. Every thing is replete with Jupiter. He fills the Streets, the publick Places, and Assemblies of Men. The whole Sea and its Harbours are full of this God, and all of us in all Places have need of Jupiter. 'Twas certainly not to prove the Being, or to enhance the Merit of Jupiter, or to procure Authority to the Poet Aratus, that the Apostle quotes this Passage. But he has deliver'd out of Bondage, as we may say, a Truth which this Poet had utter'd, without penetrating into the true Meaning of it. He has made use of it to prove the Existence of the true God, to People that were not convinced of the divine Authority of the Scriptures, and would have rejected such Proofs as the Apostle might have derived from thence.

Points

POINTS, or Vowels. Though the Hebrews in their Alphabet have both Vowels[1] and Consonants, like other Nations, yet it is true, however, that in writing they do not always place their Vowels with the Consonants. Sometimes the Vowels that are inserted are not pronounced; or lastly, these Vowels having sometimes one Sound and sometimes another, being sometimes long and sometimes short; it is very difficult to those that have not been long acquainted with the Hebrew Tongue, to read rightly the Books written in Hebrew. 'Twas Five long.

If we have Recourse to the Rabbins, and to some Hebrew Grammarians among the Christians, concerning the Antiquity of these Points, we must believe them as antient as the Hebrew Scriptures themselves, and must derive their Original from Moses, or from Esdras, or from the Antients of the great Synagogue, who lived in the Time of Esdras and of Nehemiah. a But the most Judicious believe this Invention to be much more modern. Some[2] refer their Original to the Massorites, or to the Doctors of the School of Tiberias, who lived about the 500th Year of Jesus Christ. F. Morinus thinks, that it was from the Arabians that the Hebrews received both the Art of Grammar, and also the Use of these Points. But the Arabians themselves did not begin to write but very late; for when the Empire of the Mahometans was settled, about the Year 622, they had not had the Use of Letters very long. The Names of these pointed Vowels, which are entirely Arabick, are a Proof that they were originally dirived from these People. Besides, the first Grammarians that the Jews had, being Arabians, and having writ in their own Language, it is very probable, that the pointed Vowels are of their Invention, and proceed from the same Source from whence their Art of Grammar is derived.

F. Morin, who has examin'd this whole Matter to the Bottom, as to what concerns the Antiquity of the pointed Vowels, shews that they were not yet invented in the Time of Origen, nor in the Time of St. Jerome, nor even in the Time of the Doctors that composed the Talmud, which was not finish'd but in the Seventh Century. this Difficulty that gave Occasion to the Invention and Use of the pointed Vowels, which are certain Points placed below or above the Consonants, which supply the Place of Vowels, when they are wanting, or which determine their Sound, Quantity, and Value, when they are present.

The Grammarians reckon fourteen pointed Vowels, viz.

Five short.

Four very short.

The same Author running over the several Works that were composed by the Jews in the eighth and ninth Ages; the first Footsteps that he meets with of the pointed Vowels are in the Writings of the Rabbins Ben-aser, Head of the School of the Western Jews, and in those of Ben-nephtali, Head of the School of the Eastern Jews, who lived about the Year 940, or about the Middle of the tenth Century. It follows then, that we cannot well place the Introduction of the Points before the Middle of the tenth Century. See Morin. Exercit. Biblic. l. 2. Exer. 28. c. 1, 2, 3, &c. Walton's Proleg. 3. n. 38, &c. and the other Writers who have composed Prolegomena to the Scriptures; as M. Du Pin, F. Frassen, and F. Thomassin, in his Method of studying the Scripture.

The modern Jews admit indeed of the pointed Vowels, and of Bibles printed with these Points, for ordinary Use; but the Books they publickly make use of in their Synagogues, the authentick Rolls from which they solemnly read the sacred Text, are still without Points. As at the Beginning the Samaritans also did not put any Points in their Pentateuch, which was written in the antient Hebrew Characters. The Scrupulosity of each of these in this respect, is a Proof of the Novelty of the pointed Vowels.

It had been thought, that Esdras had inserted the pointed Vowels in the Hebrew, 'till the Time of Elias Levita, a German Jew, who about the Middle of the sixteenth Century wrote against this Opinion, and maintain'd, that the pointed Vowels were not receiv'd 'till after the Compleating of the Thalmud, about the Year of[3] Christ 500; that 'till that Time the Manner of reading the sacred Text, and of supplying the Vowels therein, was only preserved by Tradition. All the Jews in general, as well those who referr'd the Points to Esdras, as those who ascrib'd them to the Massorites, maintain, that the manner of reading, according to this Punctuation, is of divine Authority, and that it may not be allow'd to make the least Alteration therein. But the greatest part of our Criticks, even of those that hold Esdras for the first Author of the Points, maintain it to be a mere human Invention, and that no Scruple should be made of mending it, when the Tenour of the Discourse, the Analogy of Things, or the Rules of good Criticism can offer a better Sense.

These are the chief Reasons urged by the two Buxtorfs, Father and Son,[4] to prove the Antiquity of the pointed Vowels. First, two antient Books call'd Bahir and Zohar, the first of which was written a little before the Birth of Jesus Christ, and the second a little after, which expressly mention the pointed Vowels in more Places than one. Secondly, the Massorites of Tiberias, to whom the Invention of the Points is ascribed, do not appear to have had sufficient Capacity for this Work, nor does any antient Author impute it to them. Abenezra, a Rabbin of the twelfth Age, is the first who does them this Honour. Thirdly, that since the Hebrew has ceas'd to be the vulgar Tongue of the Jews, that is, since the Captivity of Babylon, it was not possible to teach this Language without the Assistance of the pointed Vowels; therefore at least they must have been in being since Esdras, and have always been in use from that Time. Fourthly, by subverting the Authority of the pointed Vowels, and putting them upon the Footing of an Invention merely human, the Text will be given up to uncertain Reading and arbitrary Explications, which will overturn the Certainty and Authority of the Holy Scriptures.

But to these Reasons we may thus reply: First, that the Books Bahir and Zohar have nothing near that Antiquity that has been imputed to them. There are even found Things in these Books, that must have been written above a thousand Years since that Time, at which they are pretended to be written. No antient Author has either own'd them or quoted them. Secondly, the Massorites of Tiberias were certainly in being a long Time in Judea; and abstracting from the Notion that has been received of their Capacity, and from the Testimony of Aben-ezra and of Elias Levita, it is known with great Certainty, that the pointed Vowels were not found out before their Time.

Thirdly, that since the Hebrew Tongue has ceas'd to be a living Language, and spoke by the Jews, the Necessity of the pointed Vowels is not so great as is pretended. The Samaritans, who understand Hebrew no better than the Jews, have no Points to this Day; yet they read the Hebrew Text in Samaritan Characters. The Arabians had Points but late. One might very well be without them in their Language, as also in the Hebrew, the Syriack, and the Chaldee, even on Supposition that these were not living Languages, provided we preserve the antient Character, provided we speak a Language that has some Affinity to those whose Character we preserve, and lastly, that this Language, dead as it is, may however subsist in the Ecclesiastical Offices, in the Prayers, and even in an infinite Number of Terms written in the Language of Commerce and Conversation. Upon this Supposition, which is really the Case in which the Jews are at present, in respect of the Hebrew, the Difficulty of reading the Hebrew without Points is vastly less than one would imagine. We certainly know that many Jews, who are far from knowing this Language to Perfection, yet, however, can read Hebrew without Points, and even write it too. This is enough to prove, whatever may be said to the contrary, that they might have done well enough without Points, for several Ages, and that we might still do well enough without them. Add to this, that the Hebrew Tongue is not absolutely destitute of Vowels; it has three or four, viz. Aleph, Jod, Vau, and Hain; He and Cheth are Aspirations. These Letters and these Aspirations are every where to be found in the Text. One Vowel alone is sufficient for the reading a whole Word. To judge of the Force of these Reasons, it is necessary to understand the Language.

The fourth Proof relating to the Authority of these pointed Vowels has but an indirect Glance to their Antiquity; and it is easy to retort the Argument against those that use it, by applying it to the Greek and Latin Tongues, which have always had Vowels. Without meddling with the Vowels, cannot one often take the same Passage in ten different Senses, and that without changing any thing in the Words, or Accents, or Punctuation, only by altering the Order and Structure of the Words? Can this be said to give up the sacred Text to an uncertain Reading, and to arbitrary Explications? Is there any Language in the World, in which one does not often happen upon equivocal Expressions, Am [Gen. iv. 19.] phibologies, and Uncertainties, and that notwithstanding Points, Accents, and Vowels? I own that the Hebrew without Points is more subject to this than any other Language; but Tradition, good Sense, the Coherence of the Discourse, Custom, supply Rules to correct these pretended Inconveniencies. And what would be the Event, if we were always obliged servilely to follow the Punctuation of the Massorites? How many Passages have been happily restored, or explain'd, by having Recourse to antient Versions, and by quitting the Manner of Reading assign'd by the Massorites?

Polygamy

POLYGAMY. Polygamy was tolerated among the Hebrews, and authorized by the Example of the Patriarchs. We do not see it established by any Law, and the Scripture, which transmits to us the Name of the first bigamous Person, and of his two Wives, seems to insinuate, that his Action was not approved of by good People, and that he was afraid of the Consequences. For he says thus to his two Wives, Adah and Zillah: Hear my Voice, ye Wives of Lamech, hearken unto my Speech. For I have slain a Man to my wounding, and a young Man to my hurt. If Cain shall be avenged seven-fold, truly Lamech seventy and seven-fold. As if he would thus comfort his Wives, who were terrify'd with the Irregularity of his Polygamy: This is not a Crime that deserves Death; I have not kill'd a Man. Whoever shall dare to lay his Hand on me, will be severely punish'd for it. Compare my Action to that of Cain, and then conclude, that if the Murderer of Cain shall deserve Punishment, how much more shall he deserve it that shall murder Lamech?

The Rabbins maintain, that Polygamy was in use from the very Beginning of the World, and that before the Deluge every Man had two Wives. Tertullian on the contrary thinks,[1] that Lamech was the first who transgressed the establish'd Order of God, by marrying two Wives, and that Polygamy commenced from a Man that was accursed. Numerus matrimonii à maledicto viro cæpit. He says, that the bad Example of this Man had Consequences, which continued down to the total Subversion of the Jewish Nation, and that before the Deluge nobody imitated Lamech. St. Jerome says,[2] that Lamech, who was an Homicide and a bloody-minded Person, was the first who divided one Flesh to two Wives, and that the Flood expiated his Parricide and his Polygamy together. (He supposes Lamech to have kill'd Cain.) Pope Nicholas I.[3] accuses Lamech of Adultery, because of his Polygamy; and Pope Innocent III. maintains,[4] that it was never allow'd to have a Plurality of Wives at once, without a Permission and particular Revelation from God.

'Tis upon this Supposition that they justify the Polygamy of the Patriarchs. 'Tis believed that God permitted it to them, or at least that he tolerated it for superior Views. The Laws of Moses plainly suppose this Custom, and yet condemn it not. The Rabbins allow the King to have as far as 18 Wives, after the Example of Rehoboam King of Judah, who had to that Number. They allow the Israelites to marry as many as they can maintain. But for all this, Examples of Polygamy among private Persons were not common. The wiser Men among them easily saw the Inconveniencies that attended this Irregularity. But instead of Wives they took Concubines, which Practice was not liable to the same Disorders. There is this Difference between a Wife and a Concubine, according to the Rabbins; that a Wife was marry'd by Contract, and had her Dowry, whereas the Concubines were taken without Contract, and lived in a State of Submission and Dependance, under the Matron of the Family, as Hagar in respect of Sarah; and that the Children of the Concubines had no Share in the Inheritance.

The Saviour of the World reduced Marriage to its primitive and lawful Condition, by revoking that Permission that tolerated Polygamy and Divorce. He allows Christians to have but one Wife, according to those Words of the Creator: In the Beginning God created them Male and Female, wherefore a Man shall cleave unto his Wife, and they two shall be but one Flesh.

Polygamy is no longer allow'd the Jews at present, neither in the East nor in the West. The Emperors Theodosius, Arcadius, and Honorius forbid it them by their Decrees. [Anno 393.] The Mahometans, who allow themselves this Liberty, will not, however, allow it to the Jews in their Dominions. The Samaritans, who are extremely devoted to the Laws of Moses, marry but one Wife, and make it a Crime in the Jews, that they secretly practise Polygamy in the East. There was a Book printed at London, call'd Polygamia triumphatrix, the Author of which was one Lyserus, a Native of Saxony, who conceal'd himself under the Name of Theophilus Aletheus. This Work has been confuted by several learned Men.

Polygamy is divided into simultaneous and successive. The first is, when a Man has more than one Wife at a Time. It is condemned condemned by both Canon and Civil Law. Successive Polygamy is, when a Man has several Wives one after another, each of which he marries after the Decease of the preceding Wife. It is allow'd in the Church, though with a good deal of Regret, the Fathers and Councils having often testify'd, that they did not approve of second Marriages. And the Canons do not admit into Holy Orders such as are under this Incapacity, unless they obtain an express Dispensation for it. a

Polyglott

POLYGLOTT. This Word literally signifies a variety of Languages, and this Name is given to the Bibles publish'd in several Languages, or at least in three, of which the Texts are ranged in different Columns. Some of these Polyglotts contain all the Books of the Bible, others contain but a Part. These following are the principal Polyglotts that have yet appeared.

The Bible of Francis Ximenes of Cisneros, Cardinal of the Order of St. Francis; it was printed in 1517, in four Languages, in Hebrew, Chaldee, Greek, and Latin.

The Bible of Justiniani Bishop of Nebio, and of the Order of St. Dominick; it appear'd in 1518, in five Languages; in Hebrew, Chaldee, Greek, Latin, and Arabick. Only the Psalter was printed, the rest remaining in Manuscript.

John Potken, Provost of the Collegiate Church of St. George at Cologn, caus'd the Psalter to be printed in 1546, in four Languages, Hebrew, Greek, Chaldee, or rather Ethiopic, and Latin.

The Jews of Constantinople caus'd to be printed in 1546, in the same City, the Pentateuch in Hebrew, Chaldee, Persian, and Arabick, with the Commentaries of Solomon Jarchi.

The same Jews caus'd also to be printed in 1547, at Constantinople, the Pentateuch, in four Languages, in Hebrew, Chaldee, the vulgar Greek, and in Spanish.

John Draconitis of Carlostad in Franconia, in 1565, made an Edition of the Psalter, the Proverbs of Solomon, and the Prophets Micah and Joel in five Languages, in Hebrew, Chaldee, Greek, Latin, and German. The Death of the Author prevented the Compleating of the Impression of this Work.

Benedictus Arias Montanus had the chief Care of the Edition of the Polyglott Bible perform'd by Christopher Plantin, by the Order of Philip II. King of Spain. This Bible is in eight Volumes, and was finish'd in 1572. 'Tis in Hebrew, Chaldee, Greek, and Latin, with the Syriac Version of the New Testament. 'Tis properly but a Copy of that of Cardinal Ximenes.

There appear'd at Heidelberg in 1586, an Edition of the Books of the Old Testament in Hebrew and Greek, with two Latin Versions; one of St. Jerome, and the other of Santes Pagninus, ranged in four Columns, at the Bottom of which were Notes ascribed to Vatablus. This was the Reason that it obtain'd the Name of the Polyglott Bible of Vatablus.

David Wolder, a Lutheran Minister, in 1596, at Hambourg, caus'd to be printed by James Lucias, a Bible in three Languages, Greek, Latin, and German.

Elias Hutter, a German, printed several Polyglotts. The first is a Bible in six Languages, printed at Nuremberg in 1599. There was only printed the Pentateuch, the Books of Joshua, Judges, and Ruth. There was the Hebrew, the Chaldee, the Greek, the Latin, and the German of Luther; and as to the sixth Language, the Copies varied according to the Nations they were designed for. Some had the Sclavonian Version of the Edition of Wittemberg; others the French of Geneva; others the Italian also of Geneva; and others the Saxon Version from the German of Luther.

This Author also gave the Psalter and the New Testament in Hebrew, Greek, Latin, and German. But his chief Work is the New Testament in twelve Languages, Syriack, Greek, Hebrew, Italian, Spanish, French, Latin, German, Bohemian, English, Danish, and Polish. This Polyglott was printed at Nuremberg in 1599, in two Volumes in Folio, and in four Volumes in Quarto.

The Bible of M. le Jay in seven Languages, was printed at Paris by Anthony Vitre in 1645. It contains the Hebrew, Samaritan, Chaldee, Greek, Syriack, Latin and Arabick. He has follow'd the Greek Version printed at Antwerp, as also the Chaldee and Latin. Nothing can be more magnificent than this Impression, as to the Paper and Character; but Complaint has been made of the many Faults that are to be found in it.

No sooner did the Polyglott of M. le Jay appear in England, but the Learned Men of this Nation undertook to give a new Edition of it more correct, more extensive, and more perfect. They accomplished this Design in 1657, and produced a new Polyglott in five Volumes, with Prolegomena, and several other Treatises in the first Tome, several new Oriental Versions in the Fourth and Fifth, and a very large Collection of various Readings in the Sixth. Brian Walton was the Undertaker of this Edition, which he finish'd in 1657. Hence it is that this Bible has the Name of Walton's Polyglott. Those that are curious to know the History of these Polyglotts more at large, may consult F. le Long of the Oratory, in his Work call'd, An Historical Discourse of the principal Editions of the Polyglott Bibles, printed at Paris by Pralard in 1713.

Polymita

POLYMITA. These were Works of several Threads and several Colours. 'Tis said in Genesis,[1] that Jacob made his Son Joseph a Coat of divers Colours, tunicam polymitam. The Hebrew has it a Coat of Passim. And the same Text makes use of a [2 Sam. xiii. 18.] like Expression, to denote the particular kind of the Robe of Thamar the Daughter of David. 'Tis thought that Passim signifies different Colours, variegated Stripes, tunicam fasciatam, such as the eastern People still wear. St. Jerome puts sometimes into the Latin Text of the Scripture,[2] opere polymito instead of opere polymitario. The Hebrew Letter is opere cogitantis, a [Ezekiel xxviii. 24. Polymitaria.] Work of Tapestry. Ezekiel makes use of the Term Polymito; or rather St. Jerome in his Translation of Ezekiel, has used this Word to express the Hebrew Meshi, which the Rabbins and several Interpreters explain by Silk. In another Place of the same [Ezek. xvi. 10, 13. Meshi] Prophet, St. Jerome has translated Rakamah, which signifies Works of Embroidery, by Polimitarius.

Polymitarius

POLYMITARIUS, or Polimitarius. This Term is found in several Places of the Vulgat, as Exodus xxxv. 35. xxxvi. 35. xxxviii. 23. xxxix. 3. It answers to the Hebrew Word Chosheb,[1] which properly signifies a Workman that contrives and labours with his Mind and Imagination. It appears by examining the Passages where it is found, that it signifies a Workman in Tapestry, one that makes Veils of several Colours, and Webs of different Threads. This is the true Signification of Polymitarius, which is derived from the Greek, and which literally signifies one that works in several Colours, as Weavers of Tapestry, and Turkey Carpets. These Works are also call'd Phrygia, Phrygionica, Babylonica, Alexandrina, and even Plumaria, because of the Resemblance of the Arts of Embroidery and Tapestry.

It appears from Moses, that the Makers of Tapestry Polymitarii, who worked for the Tabernacle in the Wilderness, made use not only of Wool of the Colour of Purple, Hyacinth, Azure, and Crimson, but also of gold Thread. Incidit bracteas aureas, & [Ex. xxxix. 3, 9.] extendit in fila, ut possent torqueri cum priorum colorum subtegmine. We cannot know exactly how they drew their Gold into Threads; but there is no Room to doubt, but that Gold Thread was made use of, in the Embroidery of the High-Priest's Pectoral.

Pomgranate

POMGRANATE. The Pomgranate is a kind of Apple, cover'd without with a reddish Rind, and Red within, which opens Length-ways, and shews red Grains within, full of Juice like Wine, with little Kernels. God gave Orders to Moses, to put [Ex. xxviii. 33.] embroider'd Pomgranates, with golden Bells between, at the Bottom of the High Priest's blue Robe or Ephod. Pomgranates being very common in Palestine, and being a very beautiful Fruit, the Scriptures often make use of Similitudes taken from the Pomgranate.

The Pomgranate Tree, malus punica, or malo-granatum, is the Tree or Shrub that bears the Pomgranates. There are of two Sorts, wild and domestick. The cultivated Pomgranate Tree has several small angular Boughs, armed with Prickles, and cover'd with a reddish Bark. Its Leaves are small, like to those of Myrrh, but not so sharp, of a green Colour, drawing towards Red. Its Blossom is large, beautiful, of a red Colour inclining to Purple, compos'd of several Stalks in the Form of a Rose, in the Hollow of the Cup. This Cup is oblong, hard, Purple, having a Figure something like that of a Bell. This Garden Pomgranate Tree sometimes bears double Flowers, and then it has no Fruit.

The Wild Pomgranate Tree is a Shrub like the former, but it is more rude and thorny. Its Blossoms are called Balausts by the Apothecaries. They are Astringent, and very good in a Dysentery, Diarrhœa, and Lientery.

We are assured, that in Perou there have been seen Granates as large as a Barrel; that the Spaniards, by way of Curiosity, carry them in the Procession of the Sacrament. The Mussulmen speaking of the Holy Land, say, That five Men could hardly carry a Grape of this Country, and that five Persons might hide themselves in one Shell of their Pomgranates. This is carrying the Hyperbole as far as it will go.

Pompey

POMPEY. Cneius Pompeius, surnamed the Great, one of the most celebrated Captains that the Roman Commonwealth ever had. His Name indeed is not to be found in the Scriptures, but Josephus speaks of him often, nor can we be dispensed with from saying, in a Word, how he behaved towards the Nation of the Jews. Having finished the War against Tigranes, in the Year of the World 3938, and that against several other People in 3939, he sent Scaurus[1] into Judea, who arriving at Damascus, and being informed of the Troubles of Judea occasion'd by the two Brothers Hircanus and Aristobulus; he came thither in great Haste, thinking to make great Advantage of their Division. No sooner had he enter'd into this Province, but he received Ambassadors from both, each of them desiring his Friendship and Protection. But Aristobulus having presented him with Three hundred Talents, he declared for him, and sent Word to Hyrcanus and Aretas, who kept Aristobulus besieged in Jerusalem, that if they did not desist from this Undertaking, he should use them as Enemies to the Romans. So that Aristobulus was thus deliver'd from the Danger that threatned him.

Some time after Pompey himself came to Damascus; Hyrcanus and Antipater came to wait on him, and complain'd of the Proceedings of Scaurus, who had suffer'd himself to be corrupted by Aristobulus's Money; and they intreated him to fix Hyrcanus upon the Throne of Judea, which belonged to him by Birth. The Beginning of the next Year,[2] Pompey having again heard the mutual Complaints of Hyrcanus and Aristobulus, and also of the Jews, who complained against them both, he sent them back in Peace, saying, he would soon come into Judea, and then he would decide their Controversy. But Aristobulus withdrawing himself, instead of staying for Pompey's Determination, he fortify'd himself, and put himself into a Posture of opposing him, if he should pretend to dethrone him.

After Pompey had finished his War against Mithridates, he marched into Judea,[3] where Hyrcanus and Aristobulus came before him, and pleaded their Cause, each maintaining their several Pretensions in his Presence. Afterwards Pompey having order'd Aristobulus to surrender his Fortresses into his Hands; he obey'd, though not without Difficulty, and at the same time withdrew to Jerusalem, to prepare for the Event. Pompey would not give him time to fortify himself, but follow'd him close; and when he came near the City, Aristobulus fearing to engage himself in a War against the Romans, came out to meet him, promised him to put the City into his Hands, with a great Sum of Money, and beseeched him not to come to an open Breach with him. Pompey forgave him what was pass'd, and sent Gabinius to receive the Money, and to take Possession of the City. But Aristobulus's Soldiers shut the Gates against him, so that he was forc'd to return without performing his Commission.

This Procedure provoked Pompey, who thereupon secured Aristobulus, and kept him in Bonds; and then marched against Jerusalem. He first made Proposals of Peace to the Besieged, but finding they rejected them, he began to form the Siege of the City. He encamped on the North Side of the Temple, which was the weakest Part of the City. The Roman Soldiery being used to Labour and Fatigues, soon raised Terrasses whereon to place their Machines, and to batter the Walls. But the Jews defended themselves with so much Courage, and made so many Sallies against the Besiegers, that if the Sabbath-day had not interrupted their Opposition, the Romans could never have compleated their Approaches. The Romans therefore perceiving that on this Day they made no Attacks, but contented themselves to be upon the Defensive, they made no Attack against them, but only carry'd on their Works.

When they were finish'd, they began to batter the Towers and Walls of the Temple with Machines they had brought with them from Tyre. One thing gave great Cause of Admiration to Pompey, that during the whole Siege, as if they had been in a profound Peace, the Jews did not forbear to offer Morning and Evening their accustom'd Sacrifices to God, not suffering any Prospect of Danger to interrupt them. The third Month of the Siege the Breach being found practicable, the Romans in great Numbers pour'd into the Temple, where they made a dreadful Slaughter of the Priests, and of all such as had taken Refuge there. Cornelius Faustus, the Son of Sylla, was the first that enter'd the Breach. This was the first Year of the Hundred and seventy-ninth Olympiad, a Day of Fasting among the Jews, in Memory of the Volume of Jeremiah, which was burnt by King Jehoiakim, the Twenty-eighth Day of this third Month of the Civil Year, which is called Casleu, and which answers partly to our Month of November, and partly to December, in the Year of the World 3941, before Christ 59, and before the vulgar Era 63.

Pompey being enter'd into the Temple, there saw such Things as were not allow'd to be seen, but only by the Priests alone. In the inward Part of the Temple he found the Golden Table, the Candlestick, with the Vessels and Censers, and a great Quantity of Incense. And besides this there was about Two thousand Talents of Silver in the Treasuries of the Temple. But he meddled with nothing of all this, and when he had given Orders to have the Temple clear'd of the dead Bodies that were there in great Number, the Day following he caus'd Sacrifices to be offer'd to God. After this he restor'd Hyrcanus to the High Priesthood, and to the Govern ment of his Nation; but he forbad him to wear the Diadem. or to assume the Title of King. As to Aristobulus, he kept him in Bonds, and carry'd him to Rome with two of his Daughters, and all the Sons he had. Concerning the War, the Reader may consult Josephus Antiq. l. 14. c. 8. and Usher on the Year of the World 3941, where he relates not only what he finds in Josephus concerning this War, but also what prophane Authors have said about it. The rest of the Life of Pompey has no Relation to our Design. When this great Man was conquer'd by Julius Cæsar at Pharsalia, he came into Egypt, where he was basely put to death by the Officers of the young Ptolemy, the last King of Egypt, in the Year of the World 3956, before Christ 44, before the vulgar Era 48.

PONTUS. The Province of Pontus in Asia minor, having the Euxine Sea to the North, Cappadocia to the South, Paphlagonia and Galatia to the East, and the Lesser Armenia to the West. 'Tis thought St. Peter preached in Pontus, because he addresses his first Epistle to the Faithful of this Province, and to those of the neighbouring Provinces. St. Jerome in Genesis, puts Arioch King of Pontus with Chedorlaomer and his Confederates, who came to make War with the Inhabitants of Pentapolis. a But the Hebrew has King of Ellazar; Jonathan, King of Thalassar; the Syriack, King of [מלך אלסר Melech Ellasar. Isa. xxxvii. 12.] Dalassar. Isaiah insinuates to us, that this Country of Thalassar was either in the Country of Eden, or very near it, since he speaks of the Children of Eden, that were at Thalassar, and testifies that this Province was conquer'd by the Kings of Assyria, with the other Provinces about the Tigris. The Septuagint and Onkelos have kept to the original Word Ellasar; St. Jerome has follow'd Symmachus in translating it King of Pontus. Grotius thinks he was King of the Elizarians, a People of Arabia mentioned by Ptolemy. But it is much more credible he was a King beyond the Euphrates, as well as the other Kings confederated with Chedorlaomer.

Poor

POOR. This Word is often taken for a Man that is humble, afflicted, and mean in his own Eyes, and in the Eyes of God. Humilem & pauperem justificate, & factus est Dominus refugium pauperi, & oculi ejus in pauperem respiciunt, &c. In these Passages and others of the like Importance, the Word Poor is not taken for a Man that is destitute of the good Things of the Earth, but for a Man that is sensible of his Misery and Indigence, and applies for Succour to the Mercy of God. In this Sense the greatest and richest Men of the World are the poorest in the Eyes of God.

In Exodus, chap. xxiii. 3. Moses forbids the Judges To countenance a poor Man in [Levit. xix. 15.] his Cause: Or, as he says elsewhere, Thou shalt not respect the Person of the Poor, nor honour the Person of the Mighty; but in Righteousness shalt thou judge thy Neighbour. In a Word, judge without respect of Persons, have only Truth and Justice before your Eyes, consider that you stand in the Place of God upon the Earth.

[Psal. lxxii. 2, 4. Isai. xi. 4. Matt. xi. 5.] One of the Characters of the Messiah was to judge the Poor, and to preach the Gospel to them. Jesus Christ chose to himself Disciples that were poor, and the greatest Part of the first Believers were really poor Men, as we may see by St. Paul, and others in Ecclesiastical History.

[Prov. xxii. 2. Prov. xxix. 13.] Solomon says, The Rich and Poor meet together; that they are like each other in one thing, that is, that God created them both, and that both Riches and Poverty are of his bestowing. He says elsewhere, The Poor and Deceitful Man meet together, or the Debtor and Creditor. That is to say, that they belong to God, and that each are in the Hands of his Providence. That the Rich should not be exalted, nor the Poor be discouraged; they are both equal in the Eyes of God.

[Jerem. ii. 34.] Jeremiah says, speaking to Jerusalem, In thy Skirts is found the Blood of the Souls of the poor Innocents. In alis tuis inventus est sanguis animarum pauperum & innocentum. The Word Ala in this Passage is taken for the Skirts of a Garment. Sanguis animarum, is as much as to say, the Blood of a Person put to death.

[Amos iii. 6. viii. 6.] Amos reproaches the Israelites with having sold the Poor for a contemptible Price, and for Shoes and Sandals. Probably he aims at the Rich, who thus sold their poor Debtors for Things of no Value.

[James ii. 1.] St. James seems to carry the Obligation, of not respecting Persons, so far as to give no Mark of Distinction to Persons in Power, or raised to Dignity, in the publick Assemblies of Religion. These are his Words; My Brethren, have not the Faith of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Lord of Glory, with respect of Persons. For if there come unto your Assembly, a Man with a Gold Ring, in goodly Apparel, and there come in also a poor Man in vile Rayment; and ye have Respect to him that weareth the gay Cloathing, and say unto him, Sit thou here in a good Place, and say to the Poor, Stand thou there, or sit here under my Footstool: Are ye not then partial in your selves, and are become Judges of evil Thoughts? But all this ought to be understood rather of an inward Preference, and of the Sentiments of the Heart, than of external[1] Marks of Respect. It is never allow'd a Christian to prefer a rich Man before a poor one, only because he is rich, and to think better of him, to judge him more worthy of Esteem and Consideration, rather than he that has not the same Advantages of the Goods of Fortune.

[Job xxxvi. 8.] In Scripture, the Poor in general are often put for the meaner People, and for such Inhabitants of the Country as are in the lowest Condition of Life, without considering whether they have Accommodations suitable to their State.

Poverty, in the Old Testament, was consider'd by the carnal Jews as a great Evil, and a Punishment from God. Job speaks of it as of a Prison, and a State of Bondage. Si fuerint in catenis & in vinculis paupertatis. And Isaiah speaks of it as of a Furnace or [Isai. xlviii. 10.] Crucible, wherein Metals are purified. Ecce excoxi te, sed non quasi argentum; elegi te in camino paupertatis. God try'd Job and Tobit by Poverty; they belong'd to the New Covenant; they knew the Value of Suffering, of Humiliation, of Indigence. They knew how to make a right use of them, and to apply them to their own Advantage. They were already poor in Spirit, in the Disposition of their Hearts, before God made them to feel the Effects of an actual Poverty. See POVERTY.

Porphyrio

PORPHYRIO.[1] A sort of Water-fowl, which has the Name Porphyrio given to it, because of its red Beak. It has the Ground of its Plumage of a blue Colour; the Half of its Tail, towards its Extremity, is of a whitish Ash-colour, its Eyes are black, its Beak and Legs are of a purple Colour, and very splendid. It has four Claws, disposed like those of a Pye. This is a rare Bird; there are seen of them about Narbon a City of Spain, where they call it by the Name of Calamon. Pliny says, that it comes from the Islands Balearides, that it is very beautiful, and that it is as big as a Cock. 'Tis observ'd to drink Water as if it bit it, and that it dips its Food in Water, and conveys it to its Beak with its Foot. Elian affirms, That the Greeks and Romans never used to eat this Bird at their Feasts.

This Bird haunts the Rivers. Pliny says, That at Comagene they are found in great Plenty. From its Fore-head, or the upper Part of the Beak, to the Top of the Head, it has a yellow Spot resembling that of a Coot, but of a different Colour. The part of the Head below this Spot, and the Forepart of the Neck, are of a greenish Colour. It has hardly any Tail. Elian says, That in the House where it is kept, if it perceives the Woman to commit Adultery, it discovers it to the Husband Πορφυρεῖον. by certain Motions that it makes. But these are Fables. Moses prohibits the Use of it to the Jews, perhaps because of its Voracity. The Continence and the Modesty of this Bird is pass'd into a Proverb, Porphyrione castior. 'Tis thought to be a sort of Hern. The Jews believe it to be the Wood-pecker. [Targum. Vultur.] The Samaritan Translator is for the Pelican. Bochart will have it the Vulture. The Hebrew Word Rachamah signifies Mercy; and the Care and Tenderness of the Vulture for its Young is well known. The Egyptians took the Vulture for the Symbol of Pity.

Possession of the Devil

POSSESSION of the Devil. Possession and Obsession differ in this, that in Obsession the Devil acts outwardly, whereas in Possession he acts within the Patient. See OBSESSION before. Examples of Possession are common, especially in the New Testament. Jesus Christ and his Apostles have cured great Numbers of such as were possess'd; and Ecclesiastical Historians still furnish us with many other Instances. But as it has been found by many Examples, that often the Credulity of the Simple has been imposed on, by fictitious Obsessions and Possessions; some pretended Free-thinkers have maintained, that all these Obsessions were nothing else but Diseases of the Mind, and the Effects of a distemper'd Imagination: That Persons sometimes thought themselves to be possess'd in good earnest; that others feign'd themselves to be so, in order to carry on some Designs; in a Word, that there never were any real Possessions or Obsessions. The most plausible Arguments that they bring for this Opinion are such as follow:

The Devil cannot naturally act upon our Bodies. He is of a spiritual Nature, and by his Will only cannot move our Limbs, nor act upon our Fluids, nor Organs, without an express Allowance from God. If he had naturally this Power, the World would be full of People that were possess'd or obsess'd; he would be always exerting his Hatred against Man, and would exercise his Power and Authority to the utmost that his Pride and Malice could suggest. How many Men should we see every Day possess'd, agitated, tormented, choak'd, strangled, thrown from Precipices, drowned, burnt, if the Devil had this Power we impute to him? If it be said that God moderates this Power, that he restrains the Devil, and does not allow him to exercise his Malice against Sinners and wicked Men; do not we see on the contrary, that he often possesses or obsesses very harmless Persons? We know what Sufferings he inflicted upon Job; we see Children possess'd, and other Persons, whose Lives seem to have been exempt from any great Crimes or Disorders.

Why do we not see Men and Women possess'd, but only at certain Times, and in certain Countries? That there are whole Nations, where the Thing is not so much as known? How is it that they are only seen in such Countries where the People are generally Superstitious, and in such Persons as are of a weak Understanding, and of a melancholly Temper? That if we examine those Men and Women, who either are or have been possess'd, we shall find none but what have some of the Qualities and Weaknesses now mentioned.

If we suppose the Devil to suspend the Operations of the Soul of the Party possess'd, and to usurp the Office of the Soul to himself; or even that several Devils agitate and possess the same Demoniack, the Difficulty will be still much greater. What Conception can we have of that Soul, that no longer acts in the Body which it animates, and which surrenders up itself to the Devil, as we may call it? How can all these Evil Spirits combine and concur to govern the same Man? If all this can be done without a Miracle, what Proof can there be of Miracles to incredulous People? May it not be said, that all such Things that we call Miracles, are no other than Operations of the Devil? And if a Miracle be requir'd, that a Man should be possess'd of the Devil, it would make God the Author, or at least a Co-operator with the Devil, in his Obsessions and Possessions of Men.

We have so many Examples of natural Things, which however appear to be Supernatural, that there is Room to imagine, that what are call'd Possessions of the Devil, may be of this Kind. So many People have fancy'd themselves to be turned into Wolves, or Oxen; to be made of Glass or Butter; to become Kings or Princes: No one in this Case has Recourse to the Devil, or to a Miracle, to explain the Phænomenon. They tell us roundly, that it is a Disorder in the Brain, a Disease of the Mind or Imagination caus'd by a Heat of the Bowels, or by the Predominance of black Bile. Nobody has Recourse for a Cure to Exorcisms, or to the Priests. They apply themselves to Physicians, take Medicines, use the Baths; they look out for Methods of curing the Imagination of the Patient, or of giving it another Turn. Would it not be the same with such as are possess'd? Would they not obtain a Cure by natural Remedies, by purging them, cooling them, deceiving them dextrously, and making them imagine that the Devil has forsaken them and fled away? There have been remarkable Experiments of this kind; but if we should relate them, the Favourers of Possessions would still say, that these People were not indeed possess'd, and will not deny but there has been much Delusion in this Matter. But they will still maintain, that among the great Number of Demoniacks, it cannot be deny'd, but there must have been some that were really possess'd. The others maintain, that there never were any such, and that whatever has happen'd to those that were reputed to be possess'd, might conveniently be explain'd by natural Means, without having any Recourse to the Devil. This is the whole Knot of this Dispute.

The Defenders of Possessions of the Devil observe, that if this were only an Illusion, Jesus Christ and his Apostles, and the whole Church, would be in an Error, and must wilfully involve us in one too, by speaking, acting, and praying, as if there were real Possessions. Our Saviour speaks to, and commands the Devils, who actuated the Possess'd; which Devils answer'd and obey'd, and gave Proofs of their Presence by tormenting those miserable Creatures, which they were obliged to quit. They put them into violent Convulsions, throw them upon the Ground, leave them for dead, take Possession of Hogs, and hurry those Animals into the Sea. Can this be called Delusion? The Prayers and Exorcisms of the Church [of Rome,] what are they but Pageantry and Grimace, if Possessions be nothing else but whimsical and imaginary Distempers? Jesus Christ alledges it as a Proof of his Mission, that the [Luke vii. 20, 21. Mark xvi. 17.] Devils are cast out; he promises his Apostles the same Power that he exercised himself against those wicked Spirits. Can all this be nothing but Chimera?

'Tis allow'd, that there are several Tokens of Possession which are equivocal and fallible, but there are others also which are indubitable. A Person may counterfeit a Demoniack, and imitate the Actions, Words, Motions, Contortions, Cries, Howlings, and Convulsions of one that is possess'd. Some Efforts, that seem to be supernatural, may be the Effect of an heated Imagination, melancholy Blood, or Trick and Contrivance. But if a Person all on a sudden should speak and understand Languages that he has never learn'd, talk of sublime Matters he has never study'd, discover Things that are secret and unknown. Should he lift up himself into the Air without visible Assistance, act and speak in a Manner very distant from his natural Temper and Condition: If all this should happen without any Inducement from Interest, Passion, or any other natural Motive: If all these Circumstances, I say, or the greatest part of them, should concur in the same Possession, can there be any Room to suspect that it is not a real one?

But there have been many Possessions, in which all these Circumstances have concurr'd together. There have therefore been real ones, but especially those which the Gospel declares as such. God was pleased to permit, that in our Saviour's Time there should be many such in Israel, to furnish him with Occasions of signalizing his Power, and to supply us with more Proofs of his Mission and Divinity.

[Joseph. Antiq. l. 7. c. 25.] Though we must own, that true Possessions of the Devil are very rare, and very difficult to be distinguish'd, yet it cannot be allow'd that they are miraculous. They do not happen without the Permission of God, but they are neither contrary nor superior to the Laws of Nature. Nobody thinks he has recourse to a Miracle, when he says, that a good Angel inspires him with good Thoughts, or prompts him to avoid any Danger. It is suppos'd in like manner, that the Devil may tempt us to Evil, excite irregular Impressions in our Bodies, or raise Tempests. The Scripture imputes to evil Angels the Death of the First-born of Egypt, and the Destruction of Sennecharib's Army. It imputes to good Angels the raining of Fire, by which Sodom and Gomorrah were consumed. These Events are miraculous in some of their Circumstances, but not in all. God only suffers the Demons to act; they then only exercise a Power that is natural to them, which was before suspended and restrain'd by the Power of God. Men generally conclude too hastily concerning the Power of a Spirit, which they know so little of.

[Tob. vi. 19. viii. 2, 3.] Josephus was of Opinion, that Possessions of the Devil, were caused by the Souls of wicked Men, who dreading to repair to the Place of their Punishment, seize upon the Body of some Man, toss it and torment it, and do what they can to destroy it. This Sentiment appears to be peculiar to Josephus; for the generality of Jews did not doubt but that it was the Devils who had Possession of the Demoniacks. The Scripture shews us in Tobit, that the Demon Asmodeus was put to flight by the Fumes of [Joseph. Antiq. l. 8. c. 2.] the Liver of a Fish. Josephus relates, that Solomon compos'd Exorcisms to drive out the evil Spirits out of the Bodies of those that were possess'd, and that a Jew named Eleazar cured some that were possess'd, in the Presence of Vespasian, by putting a Ring under their Nose, in which was inclosed the Root of an Herb recommended by Solomon. At the same time that the Name of this Prince was pronounced, and the Exorcism that he had taught, the Patient fell upon the Ground, and the Devil ceased to torment him. They believed therefore, that the Devils could act upon Bodies, and that Bodies also made an Impression upon them. Upon this Subject of Possessions and Obsessions of the Devil, the Reader may consult our Dissertation which we have compos'd for that Purpose, and is printed in the new Collection of our Dissertations by themselves, in three Volumes in Quarto, at Paris, 1720.

[Isai. v. 26. xi. 10. 12. Isai. viii. 3. Isai. xiii. 2. Isa. xxx. 17. Diod. ficul. l. 19. p. 680, seu 666.] POSTS. This Name is given to Messengers or regulated Couriers, appointed to carry with Expedition the Dispatches of Princes, or the Letters of private Persons in general. Lewis Horninck has written a very accurate Treatise, concerning the Original of Posts. He makes four Kinds of 'em, those that go on Horse-back, by Water, in a Chariot or Chaise, or those that travel on Foot. We may also refer to the Article of Posts, the Manner of conveying Intelligence by Beacons, or Signals, which are set up at several Distances on the Tops of Mountains. This latter Method we may observe to have been made use of in Scripture. Isaiah says, That the Lord shall set up a Signal among the Nations, to gather together the scatter'd Children of Israel, and to bring them back into their own Country, from the four Corners of the Earth. Elsewhere he says, That Signals shall be set up to assemble the Troops that were to compose the Army of Darius the Mede. And again, All ye Inhabitants of the World, and Dwellers on the Earth, see ye, when he lifteth up an Ensign on the Mountains, and when he bloweth a Trumpet, hear ye. These Signals were set up on the Tops of very high Trees or Masts. Till ye be left as a Beacon [or Mast] upon the Top of a Mountain, and as an Ensign on an Hill. See Isaiah xxxiii. 23. xlix. 22. lxii. 10. Jerem. iv. 6. i. 2. li. 12, 27. 'Tis thought that the Use of Posts is derived from the Persians. Diodorus Siculus observes, That the Kings of Persia, that they might have Intelligence of what pass'd through all the Provinces of their vast Dominions, placed Centinels at Eminences, at convenient Distances, where Towers were built. These Centinels gave notice of publick Occurrences from one to another, with a very loud and shrill Voice, by which News was transmitted from one Extremity of the Kingdom to another with great Expedition.

But as this could not be practised except in the Case of general News, which it was expedient that the whole Nation should be [Xenoph. Cyropæd. l. 8. c. 232.] acquainted with; Cyrus, as Xenophon relates, set up Couriers and Places for Posthorses, building on purpose on all the high Roads, Places for the Reception of the Couriers, where they were to deliver their Pacquets to the next, and so on. This they did Night and Day, so that no Rain or bad Weather was to stop them; and, in the Judgment of many, they went faster than Cranes could fly. This is what Xenophon [Herodot. l. 8. c. 98.] says.Herodotus owns, That nothing swifter was known, for a Journey by Land. Xerxes, in his famous Expedition against Greece, planted Posts from the Egean Sea to Shushan, or Susa, to send Notice thither of what might happen to his Army: He placed these Messengers from Station to Station, to convey his Pacquets, at such Distances from each other as an Horse might easily travel.

We see Couriers or Posts plainly described [Esth. iii. 13.] in the Book of Esther: It is there said, That Abasuerus, otherwise Darius, Son of Hystaspes King of Persia, sent Expresses to all the Nobles of his Kingdom, to give them Orders to put to Death all the Jews in their respective Provinces: Missæ sunt per Cursores Regis ad universas Provincias. And when these first Orders were to be revoked, Dispatches were sent [Esth. viii. 10.] by the Couriers; Missæ per Veredarios qui per omnes Provincias discurrerent.

The Orientals impute to Darius King of [D'Herbel. Bibliot. Orient. p. 287. col. 1.] Persia, Cotemporary with Philip King of Macedon, the Invention of Posts through all the Provinces of his Kingdom, that he might easily know every thing that passed [Plutarch. lib. de Fortun. Alex.] therein. Darius Codomannus, who was conquered by Alexander the Great, was a Courier of the King, before he obtain'd the Regal Power.

The Greeks borrow'd the Use of Posts from the Persians, and, in Imitation of [Matth. v. 41.] them, called them Angari. Jesus Christ, in his Gospel, alludes to these Angares, or Posts, when he says, If any one compels you to go a Mile with him, do not refuse to go two Miles; Si quis te angariaverit milliarium, vade & duo: Because the Cities were compell'd to provide Horses, or Couriers, for the publick Posts.

Among the Romans, it was Augustus that first set up publick and regular Posts. They were at first young Men, active and nimble, who run from Post to Post, and delivered Pacquets from Hand to Hand. Afterwards they were changed into Post-Chariots and Horses, for the greater Expedition: [Sueton. in August.] Juvenes primò modicis intervallis, deinde vehicula dispositit. Adrian regulated the Posts with more Regularity than before, and discharg'd the People of the Obligation they were under before, of furnishing Horses and Carriages.

Procopius assures us, that the Emperors appointed Posts upon the great Roads, to be ready at Hand, and that they might be speedily inform'd of whatever pass'd in the Empire: There were not fewer than five Posts a-Day, and sometimes eight: They kept forty Horses at each Post, and as many Post-men and Riders as were necessary. Justinian dismiss'd the Posts at several Places, and particularly those that went from Calcedon to Diacibiza, which is the ancient Lybissa, famous for Hannibal's Tomb, lying in the Gulph of Nicomedia. The same Author tells us, that Justinian set up Ass-Posts in several Places of the Levant.

The Use of Posts having declined with the Empire, Charlemaign made many Attempts, about the Year 807, to restore them again: But his Undertaking was not prosecuted by his Successors. Lewis XI.[1] is thought to have set up the Common Posts at every two Leagues Distance, throughout the Kingdom of France. Count Taxis first set them up in Germany at his own Expence: And, as a Recompence, the Emperor Matthias, in 1616, gave him, in Fee, the Office of Post-Master General, to himself and his Successors, for ever.[2]

As high as the Ninth Century there were Publick Couriers set up in several Places of the Ottoman Empire:[3] Some went on Foot, and others on Horse-back, and carry'd Dispatches from the Emperor with wonderful Diligence. There are some also among the Chinese; but they are appointed only to carry Orders from the King, and the Governors of Provinces, and, in a Word, for Publick Affairs, and those of the greatest Consequence.

Potiphar

POTIPHAR, or Putiphar, an Officer of the Court of Pharaoh King of Egypt, and General of his Troops, according to the Version of the Vulgate, or Chief of his Butchers or Cooks, according to the Hebrew[1]. The same Text calls him Eunuch[2]: But it is very probable that this Word, in this Place, means only an Officer of the King's Court. Certain it is, that Potiphar was married, and had Children also, if Asineth Daughter of Potipherah, who was given to Joseph for Wife, were his Daughter, as most of the Interpreters agree, and as it will be mention'd afterwards.

[Gen. xxxix. 2, 3, 4, &c.] Potiphar then having bought Joseph,[3] who was sold to him as a Slave by the Midianites, who had bought him of his Brethren; he seeing all Things to prosper in his Hands, took an Affection to him, and gave him the Superintendance of his whole whole House. But, some Years after, a the Wife of Potiphar, having taken an unlawful Liking to Joseph, and having even solicited him to the Crime of Adultery, Joseph refused her. Then, the Love of this Woman being changed into Rage, she accused him to her Husband, of making Attempts upon her Chastity. Potiphar being too easy to believe this Accusation, put Joseph into Bonds; and having, by Employment, the Charge of the Prisoners, he laid this Care upon Joseph; whether he had found out his Innocence, or whether he thought him fitter for this Office than any other of his Domesticks, as being himself confined in the Prison with the other Prisoners.

But God had replenish'd Joseph with his own Spirit, and had given him an extraordinary Talent of Interpreting Dreams, [Gen. chap. xl, xli.] which made him known to Pharaoh, upon the Occasion related under the Article of JOSEPH. This Prince made him Ruler of his own House, and of all the Land of Egypt,[4] and gave him in Marriage Asineth Daughter of Potipher, or [Gen. xli. 45.] Potipherah, Priest of Heliopolis, or Priest of the City of On, according to the Hebrew.

Opinions are divided upon the Question, whether this Potiphar be the same as Joseph's Master. The Hebrews[5], Origen[6], St. Jerom, Abbot Rupert, Tostat, and some others, think it is the same Person. And the Jews, cited in Origen, think it was Asineth that informed Potiphar of the Injustice of the Accusation that her Mother had form'd against Joseph. The Quality of Chief of the Army of Pharaoh, and that of Head of the Cooks or Butchers, or, of those that slew the Victims, (for the Hebrew Text[7] may signify all these), are not incompatible with the Dignity of Priest of Heliopolis. The different Ways by which the Names of Potiphar are written, in Genesis, chap. xxxviii. where the Master of Joseph is mention'd, and in chap. xli. wherein his Father-in-Law is mention'd, is so inconsiderable, that it hardly deserves to be taken Notice of. Lastly, Tho' the City of Heliopolis, wherein Potiphar was Priest, was pretty far from that of Tanis, where the King of Egypt kept his Court, and where Potiphar had an Employment; it was not so far off, but that these two Employments were very consistent. Potiphar might divide his Time between the King's Service, and his Attendance at the Temple of Heliopolis, in Quality of Priest of this [Strabo l. 16.] City; for it appears from Strabo, that anciently there were a great Number of Priests in this City, where their chief Employment was to study Philosophy and Astronomy, and where are still to be seen great Apartments where they had their Habitations. Nothing in Egypt was more grand than these Priests, and several among them have been exalted to the Crown itself. Their Quality of Priests, did not exclude them either from Offices at Court, or in the Camp.

We think, therefore, that no Inconvenience can follow, from supposing that Potiphar, Joseph's Master, might afterwards become his Father-in-Law; and we have answer'd beforehand such Reasons as have been brought to support the contrary Opinion. These Reasons may be seen under the Article ASINETH, and in our Commentary upon Genesis, chap. xli.

Potter

POTTER. Frequent mention is made [Jer. xviii. 3. על האבניםsuper duos lapides. Ecclus. xxxviii. 29, 30.] of the Potter, in Scripture. Jeremiah represents him to us at work, sitting upon two Stones. And the Author of Ecclesiasticus says, So doth the Potter sitting at his Work, and turning the Wheel about with his Feet; who is alway carefully set at his Work, and maketh all his Work by Number: He fashioneth the Clay with his Arm, and boweth down his Strength before his Feet. Homer, [Homer. Strab. l. 7. Geograph.] quoted by Strabo, saith, That the Potter turns his Wheel with his Hands. And at this Day there is a great Difference in the several Manners and Postures used by the Potters, when they work at their Art.

[Psal. ii. 9.] When God would shew his absolute Dominion over Men, and his irresistible Power over their Hearts, he has often recourse to the Similitude of a Potter, who makes what he pleases of his Clay; sometimes a Vessel of Honour, and sometimes of Dishonour; now forming it, and then breaking it; now preserving it, and then rejecting it. Thou shalt break them with a Rod of Iron; thou shalt dash them in Pieces like a Potter's Vessel. As the Clay is in the Potter's Hand, to fashion it at his Pleasure; so Man is in the Hand of him that made him, to render to them as liketh him best. Shall the Thing formed say to him that [Ecclus. xxxiii. 13.] formed it, Why hast thou made me thus? Hath not the Potter Power over the Clay, of the same Lump, to make one Vessel to [Rom. ix. 21.] Honour, and another unto Dishonour? See also Jer. xviii. 2, 3, &c.

Potters Field

POTTERS FIELD; the Field that was bought with the Money, for which Judas [Mat. xxvii. 7, 10.] sold our Saviour Christ, and which he brought back again to the Temple. See the Article ACELDAMA. This Field is seen to this Day to the South of Mount Sion, and about a Stone's Cast from the Pool of Siloam: It is surrounded by Walls of the Length of seventy Cubits, and of the Breadth of fifty; and cover'd with a Vault, with seven Openings above, to let[1] down the Bodies which are to be buried there, and which are consumed in the Space of twenty-four Hours. This Earth must necessarily abound with the Spirit of a very corrosive Salt, that can dissolve Flesh in so little Time. They say it was the Empress Helena that caus'd the Vault to be built over this Field, which is still there to be seen; and 'tis said likewise, that she loaded several Ships with the Earth of Aceldama, and order'd it to be carry'd to Rome, where it was laid near the Mount Vatican, and still preserves to this Day its Quality of consuming dead Bodies in the Space of four and twenty Hours. This Place is call'd the Holy Field, and serves for a Burying-place to Strangers. Cornelius à Lapide assures us, [Adrichom. Cornel. à Lapide in Matth.] that he has seen it at Rome, and that he was inform'd of this Matter by the Curate of the Place.

We cannot tell what Use the Potter could make of this Field, except it was to dry his Pots before he baked them; and the Price of thirty Pieces of Silver, for which it was bought, shews it was of no considerable [I have not found this Passage in this Author.] Value. Raban Maur is quoted, to shew, that Judas himself was the first that was buried in this Place. The Jews of Pisa, they say, have a Burial-place very like this at Rome, where the Bodies are consumed in a very short Time; and they think themselves happy that they can be buried there, because they think the Earth was brought from Jerusalem. The Jews of the neighbouring Cities esteem it as an Honour, that they can be buried there; which is some Comfort to 'em, for their Misfortune, that they cannot be buried at Jerusalem.

[Misna tract. de Synedr. c. 6. n. 14, 15.] We read in the Mishna, that they did not allow Malefactors, or such as were executed for their Crimes, a Burial in the Tombs of their Fathers, except that their Flesh had first been consumed in other Places appointed for the Punishment of such Offenders. And 'tis, perhaps, for this Reason, that Joseph of Arimathea begg'd the Body of Jesus from Pilate, that he might immediately lay him in a private Sepulchre, before he was laid in this publick Burying-place, where he might have been undistinguish'd from the common Criminals.

Poverty

POVERTY. Voluntary Poverty is commended, in the Gospel, as the first of the [Matth. v. 3.] Beatitudes: Jesus Christ has sanctify'd it in his own Person, and in that of his Parents; in that of his Apostles, and of the most perfect of his Disciples. But Involuntary Poverty, especially when it is extreme, can only be consider'd as a Consequence of Sin, and as a Punishment from God. Solomon besought [Prov. xxx. 8.] the Lord, to give him neither Poverty nor Riches; that is, he look'd upon both Extremes, as two dandangerous Rocks to Vertue: He asked only for what was convenient for him; Mendicitatem & divitias ne dederis mihi, tribue tantùm victui meo necessaria: Nothing is more earnestly recommended in the Ancient Law, and also in the New, than Alms and Compassion to the Poor.

[Deut. xvii. 11, 12.] Moses would have them to be admitted to the religious Feasts that were celebrated in the Temple; and order'd, that in the Fields, in the Vineyards, and upon the Trees, something should be left on purpose [Lev. xix. 10. & xxiii. 22. Exod. xxiii. 11.] for them; that in the Sabbathical Years and the Years of Jubilee, all should be left in common for the Poor, the Widow, and the Orphan. He commanded them to lend to the Poor, and acquainted them that the Poor should never be wanting in the Country, but that they should always have Opportunity to bestow their Alms. That if [Deut. xv. 8, 9. Deut. xxiv. 12, 14. Matth. xix. 21. Luke xviii. 22.] any Pledge be taken from the Poor, they shall not enter their Houses to take it by Force, but shall receive what is offer'd; and that if the Poor is forced to give his Goods or his Cloaths, they shall be restor'd him at Night, that he may have wherewith to cover himself. Jesus Christ has above all carry'd this Point of the Law of Moses, concerning Alms-giving, to its highest Pitch of Perfection; he has practised it himself, he has recommended it to his Disciples, and has inspired his Servants with the tenderest Charity towards the Poor. He advised those that would in earnest become his Disciples, to sell all that they had, and give it to the Poor. He gives us excellent Rules for the practising of Charity, and avoiding Vain-glory and Ostentation, which otherwise may be the Occasion of losing all the Fruits of our Charity. See Matth. vi. 1, 2, 3, 4.

The Jews take great Care of the Poor [Leo of Modena, of the Ceremonies of the Jews, p. 1. c. 14.] of their Nation. In most considerable Cities they have several establish'd Societies, on purpose for the Poor. One of 'em, for Example, receives Alms for such Poor as are too modest to ask for themselves; another makes a Gathering for the Redemption of Captives; a third for providing Portions for poor Maidens. Besides which, there are two Persons appointed for the ordinary Collection, which is made every Sabbath-day. They go from House to House, without ever parting, that they may not be liable to the Suspicion of violating their Trust; and when they distribute what they have gather'd, they call a third Person to their Assistance. Every Saturday the Parnassim, or Judges of the Synagogue, give to each poor Person wherewith to maintain themselves and Family for the whole following Week.

When any one is found to be under any urgent Necessity, and which exceeds their ordinary Charities, the Chanter passes thro' the Synagogue, and says, to all those that promise promise their Relief, Blessed be such an one, who gives for such an Occasion. Every one promises according as he is disposed, and afterwards they gather from House to House what has been promis'd; for the Jews meddle not with Money on the Saturday. These Promises are always strictly perform'd. If the Synagogue of the Place is not thought to be sufficient for the present Occasion, they give out a Certificate, which they send to other Synagogues, who receive it into their Houses, and give their Contributions to it both publick and private.

[Vide apud Selden. de Jure Nat. & Gent. l. 6. c. 6.] 'Tis a Maxim of the Talmudists, that a poor Man ought never to be sent away empty-handed, even tho' we could afford him but a Grain of Wheat. According to them, the least charitable should give a tenth part of their Estate, and others as far as a fifth part. Nor is it sufficient to relieve the Poor in his present Necessity, but he must be cloathed suitably to his Birth and Education; and he must have a Horse and a Slave bought for him, if he had such before he fell into Poverty. Those that refuse the Rates they are assessed at, are punish'd by the Judges, as they formerly were by the Sanhedrim, who condemned them to the Penalty of the Whip, 'till they had satisfy'd what had been demanded of them. Maimonides says, that sometimes Entry was made into their Houses, and Pledges were forcibly taken for such Alms as were due from them.

Prayer

PRAYER. The Prayers that we direct to God, are the ordinary Conveyance of the Graces that we receive from him. The Prayers of a just Man are of great Power with God. The Saints both of the Old and New Testament have pray'd; Jesus Christ himself, the great Example of the Righteous, and of the Elect, taught us to pray, to inform us, that 'tis by that we honour God, and draw down upon our selves his Favours and his Graces. Multum valet deprecatio justi assidua, says St. James. The Apostle [Jac. v. 16, 17.] St. Paul throughout almost all his Epistles, entreats the Faithful to pray for him, or offers to God his own Prayers for them.

Publick Prayer. Quite down from the first Promulgation of the Law, the Hebrew Nation did not intermit to have publick Prayer in the Tabernacle, or in the Temple, as Time served. This publick Prayer consisted in the Offering of the Evening and Morning Sacrifices, every Day of the Year, and in the Prayers that the Priests and Levites offer'd up in this Place. We do not pretend to affirm, that there was then a regular Form or Office established in the Temple, something like what we see in our religious Communities: But there was something equivalent to it; every Day they offer'd there Sacrifices, Incense, Offerings, First-fruits; they perform'd there every Day the Ceremonies for the Redemption of the First-born, for the Purification of such Men or Women as had contracted any Pollutions; in a Word, they came thither from all Parts of Palestine, to discharge their Vows, and to satisfy their particular Devotions, not only on the great and solemn Days, but also on ordinary Days; but nothing of this was perform'd without Prayer.

The Author of Psal. cxix. says, that he pray'd to God, or praised him seven times a -day. Septies in die laudem dixi tibi. And the Author of Psal. lv. says; Evening and Morning, and at Noon will I pray, and cry [Dan. vi. 10.] aloud, and he shall hear my Voice. Daniel bent his Knees three times a-day, and worshipped the Lord, opening his Windows, and turning himself towards Jerusalem. Tribus temporibus in die flectebat genua sua, & adorabat. The Levites that were appointed to take Care of the Temple, lifted up their Hands in the Night-time, and encouraged one another to adore the Lord. In noctibus extollite manus vestras [Psalm cxxxiii. 2. Psal. cxviii. 62.] in sancta, & benedicite Domino. The Psalmist says, that he arose in the Middle of the Night, to praise the Lord. Media nocte surgebam ad confitendum tibi. In Nehemiah [Nehem. ix. 3.] we see four Hours of Prayer on a Fast Day. Surrexerunt ad standum & legendum quater in die, & quater confitebantur & adorabant Dominum.

[Misnah in Barachot. c. 4. §. 3.] Some Rabbins inform us, that Abraham instituted Morning-prayer, Isaac that at Mid-day, and Jacob that at Evening. Others think, that nothing was fix'd relating to the Hour or Form of Prayer, 'till the Time of the Captivity of Babylon. a Before that Time every one pray'd as his Devotion prompted him, and according as his Heart was disposed. But during the Captivity, Esdras observing that several Jews mingled foreign Terms with their Prayers, which were not suitable to the Sanctity of that Exercise; he compos'd eighteen Benedictions, which every Israelite is obliged to learn, and to repeat every Day. The Rabbi Gamaliel added a nineteenth to them, a little while before the Destruction of the Temple. It is against Apostates and Hereticks, and it is not doubted but under these Names he meant the Christians. Sure it is that these eighteen Prayers are of great Antiquity; for the Misnah speaks of them as of a Formula that had been for a long Time established.

The same Esdras also fix'd the Time for Prayer.[1] And as they offer'd to God the perpetual Sacrifice in the Evening and Morning,[2] Morning, he appointed two solemn Prayers for these two Seasons. On Festival Days and the Sabbath there was a Sacrifice about the Middle of the Day; he order'd a third Prayer for this Time also. And because the Evening Sacrifice was consuming in the Night-time, he appointed a Nocturnal Prayer.

However, there are but three Hours that are obligatory each Day for Prayer, in the Morning, at Noon, and in the Evening. Morning Prayer might be perform'd any time from Sun-rising to the third Hour of the Day; that is, 'till nine o'Clock in the Morning in the Equinox. That in the Middle of the Day, from the third Hour to the sixth; that is, from nine in the Morning 'till Noon. That in the Evening from three o'- Clock in the Afternoon 'till six in the Evening, during the Equinox. The Prayer that was added on Festivals was said about nine o'Clock, and might be compleated at Noon. That upon Fast Days was not settled.

The publick Prayers that were celebrated in the Synagogues, were perform'd thrice every Day. The Minister began the Service with a Prayer which was call'd Kaddish, because therein they ask'd of God to sanctify his Name, after this Manner; O God, let thy Name be magnify'd and sanctify'd in the World, which thou hast created according to thy good Pleasure. Let thy Kingdom have Dominion therein, let Redemption flourish, and let the Messiah come speedily, that thy Name may be glorify'd, &c. This Prayer passes for the most antient that the Jews have preserved; and as it is rehearsed in the Chaldee Language, it gives Room to think, that it was composed during the Babylonian Captivity, or a little Time after the Return from that Captivity. The People answer, Amen. It seems to be from hence that our Saviour borrow'd those Words in the Lord's Prayer; Hallowed be thy Name, thy Kingdom come.

After this Anthem, or Benediction, they heretofore repeated the Decalogue, which is the Foundation of the Jewish Religion. But at present they content themselves with reading a Passage out of the fifth Chapter of Deuteronomy, which begins with these Words; Hear, O Israel. When this Lesson is ended, as also the Benediction that follow'd, the whole Assembly arose, and pray'd standing with a low Voice, the Minister as well as the rest. After this private Prayer, every one goes three Steps backwards out of Respect, and the Minister repeats the eighteen Prayers, of which the three first contain the Praises of God, the twelve following regard the Necessities of the Church and of private Persons, and the three last contain a Confession of their own Unworthiness and Insufficiency. It is allow'd after the third Blessing to resume their Places again, that is, to advance three Steps forwards.

When they are come to the Prayer which is call'd Modim, they must stoop a little. They sit down while they repeat other Prayers, sometimes they hang down their Heads, at other Times they lift up their Voice, according to the Tenour of the Prayer that is pronounced. After several Benedictions and several Psalms, they repeat the Anthem, by which the Office was begun. Then the Minister pronounces the Benediction to the People, who withdraw, saying; Lord, do thou guide me in thy Justice, and prepare the Way before me, because of my Enemies. And such are the Morning Prayers.

Those at Noon and at Evening are also perform'd regularly every Day. The Minister of the Synagogue presides therein, and the Prayers, the Benedictions, and the Lessons are different, but yet almost in the same Order. The Language they use is the Hebrew, with some Forms of Prayer in the Chaldee Tongue. The Generality of the Jews do not perfectly understand either of these Languages; but the long Use they have had, of praying in these Tongues, and the great Number of Words they are still acquainted with in both, are the Reasons that they do not answer Amen without some Understanding of what they say. Just as among us [Roman Catholicks] many Persons that never study'd the Latin Tongue, yet, however, understand it pretty well in the Reading of the Gospel, and in the Pronunciation of the Prayers of the Church, so as to join their Attention to that of the Priests.

Every Jew is oblig'd to repeat an Hundred Benedictions in a Day. To these Benedictions they must add certain Extracts out of the Psalms, which are the most effectual for raising a Spirit of Piety. They chiefly make Choice of the latter Verses of the hundred and forty-sixth Psalm, and every one sings them according to the Custom of his Country. The Germans sing them higher, and with greater Vehemence than others. The Spaniards and those of the Levant approach nearer to the Turkish Way of Singing; and the Italians sing them composedly, and with Ease.

When they have sung these Psalms, they read the Shema, that is to say, three different Sections taken out of Deuteronomy vi. 4, 9. xi. 19, 21. and Numbers xv. 37, 41. They are call'd Shema, because the first of these Sections begins by the Word Shema, which signifies, Hear. These Sections of [שמע Shemah, Audi.] Scripture are interrupted by Prayers and Blessings, which often mention the Unity of God. These Prayers are ended by blessing God who redeems Israel; and when they pronounce these last Words, they rise up, and begin to repeat the eighteen Prayers and Benedictions, which Esdras left to the great Synagogue, to be a Rule and Standard for all their Prayers. When they have rehearsed these Benedictions, they sit down, they stoop with their Faces to the Ground, they raise their Heads a little, and begin their private Prayers. They repeat the hundred and forty-sixth Psalm, and then go about their Business.

Some repeat their hundred Benedictions one after another, that they may be discharged of them, as of a Task and Labour imposed upon them. But the Doctors condemn this Custom, because each Benediction should be placed in its proper Place, and connected to its proper Subject. In the Evening they begin their Prayers again, pretty nearly in the same Form; at least Maimonides tells us so, and he is the most exact of the Jewish Authors, and one whom Christian Writers chiefly rely upon.

[Leo of Modena, Ceremonies of the Jews, part. 1. c. 9.] Leo of Modena says, that the Custom of the greatest Part of the Jews is, to repeat along with their Morning Prayers in the Synagogue, the hundred Benedictions we now spoke of. For which Reason they call these Prayers in the Morning, Meah Beracoth, that is, the hundred Benedictions. He says, moreover, that the Rabbins have obliged the Jews to repeat Blessings and Praises peculiar to God, not only in their Prayers, and every Time they receive any Favour from him; but also on all unforeseen Occasions, and at every Action they do, whether they eat or drink, or smell any sweet Savour; lastly, for every Precept of the Law, or of the Rabbins. And this they extend to whatever new or extraordinary Thing presents itself to them. For they have different Benedictions for every thing. The Particulars of this may be seen in a large Treatise, which the Rabbins have composed about this Matter.

In the Morning, as soon as they are up, they say; Blessed be Thou, O Lord our God, King of the World, who restorest Life to the Dead, who enlightenest the Blind, and who spreadest the Earth over the Waters: And several other Things of a like kind. If they wash their Hands, according to the Precept, they say; Blessed be Thou, O Lord our God, King of the World, who hast sanctify'd us by thy Precepts, and hast commanded us to wash our Hands. When they apply themselves to study the Law; Blessed be Thou, &c. who hast given us the Law. When they take Food; Blessed be Thou, &c. who bringest Bread out of the Earth. When they drink; Blessed be Thou, &c. Creator of the Fruit of the Vine. At eating such Fruits as grow upon Trees; Blessed be Thou, &c. Creator of the Fruit of the Tree. For Fruits of the Earth; Blessed be Thou, &c. Creator of the Fruits of the Earth. For good Scents; Blessed be Thou, &c. who hast created such a Smell or Scent. When they see a high Mountain, or a wide Extent of Sea; Blessed be Thou, &c. Creator of all Things at the Beginning. At the Commencing of solemn Festivals, or when they eat, or put on any thing new; Blessed be Thou, &c. who hast given us Life, and hast preserved us to this Day. If any one dies that belongs to them; Blessed art Thou, Judge of Truth.

Lastly, On all Occasions, before and after every Action, they repeat some Blessing to God, thinking it to be a Sin of Ingratitude, to enjoy or make use of any thing in this World, without first acknowledging by some Thanksgiving, that they hold it from God, and that he is Lord and Master of every thing.

In the Jewish Prayers we may observe in [Basnage, History of the Jews, t. 5. l. 7. c. 17. Matth. vi. 7. Heb. v. 7.] general, their excessive Length, and their Battology, or their tedious Repetitions, which Jesus Christ reproaches them with in his Gospel. When ye pray, use not vain Repetitions as the Heathen do; for they think that they shall be heard for their much Speaking. They are not at all reform'd by this, in the Length of their Prayers. Secondly, as to their Posture. They generally pray sitting, or stooping with their Faces towards the Ground. They stretch out their Feet and their Hands, and make a loud Cry. Jesus Christ pray'd thus in the Garden of Olives. He prostrated himself, and sent forth a great Cry. Who in the Days of his Flesh, when he had offer'd up Prayers and Supplications, with strong Crying and Tears. Thirdly, they think that Prayers are to supply the Place of Sacrifices, which are ceased by the Destruction of the Temple and its Altars; they give them the same Name, and impute to them the same Efficacy.

[Ephes. vi. 18.] It is very likely that the Prayers of the first Believers were formed upon the Model of those of the Jews. We have seen some Traces of the first and chief Benediction of the Jews, in the first Articles of the Lord's Prayer. Our Saviour principally intended to oppose its Brevity to the Battology of the Jews. St. Paul gives Directions, that the Faithful should pray in all Places, and [1 Thes. v. 17. 1 Tim. ii. 8. 1 Cor. x. 31.] at all Times, lifting up pure Hands towards Heaven, and blessing God for all Things, whether in eating or drinking, or doing any other Action; and that every thing may be done to the Glory of God. In a Word, our Saviour has recommended to us, to pray [Luk. xviii. 1. xxi. 36.] without ceasing. Vigilate omni tempore orantes.

The Reader will not be displeased to see here the eighteen Prayers appointed by Esdras, and the nineteenth appointed by Gamaliel. This is commonly placed in the twelfth Place, and we shall not remove it from thence.

I. “ Blessed I. “ Blessed be thou, O Lord our God, God of our Fathers, God of Abraham, God of Isaac, God of Jacob; the great God, the powerful, the terrible, the high -exalted, the liberal Dispenser of good Things, the Creator and Possessor of the Universe; who remembrest the good Actions of our Fathers, and who in thy Love dost send a Redeemer to their Posterity, for the Love of thy Name. O King our Succour, our Saviour and our Buckler: Blessed be thou, O Lord, the Shield of Abraham. II. “ O Lord, thou art potent for ever. Thou raisest up the Dead, thou art powerful to save, thou sendest the Dew, thou suppressest the Winds, thou makest the Rain to descend upon the Earth, and by thy Goodness thou supportest all living Creatures. Thy rich Mercy raises up the Dead, thou liftest up those that fall, thou curest the Sick, thou unbindest those that are in Fetters, thou shewest the Truth of thy Promises to those that sleep in the Dust. Who is comparable to Thee, O Lord Almighty? who is like to thee, O King? who killest and makest alive, and who makest Salvation to spring up like the Grass of the Field. Thou art faithful, even to raising us from the Dead. Blessed be Thou, O Lord, who raisest up the Dead. III. “ Thou art holy, and thy Name is holy, thy Saints praise thee every Day, for Thou art a great and an holy King. O God, blessed be Thou, O Lord, O God most holy. IV. “ 'Tis Thou whose Goodness givest Men all their Knowledge, and teaches them Wisdom. Grant us thy Mercy, give us Knowledge, Wisdom, and Prudence. Blessed be Thou, O Lord, whose Goodness gives Understanding and Knowledge to Men.

V. “ Bring us back, O Father, to the Observation of thy Law, and grant that we may continue firm to thy Precepts, devoted to thy Worship, O King, and converted to Thee, by a perfect Repentance in thy Presence. Blessed be Thou, O Lord, who art willing to receive us to Repentance. VI. “ Have Mercy on us, O Father, for we have sinned. Pardon us, O King, for we have transgressed thy Laws. For thou art a merciful God, and ready to forgive. Blessed be Thou, most merciful Lord, who so abundantly displayest thy Mercies, in the Pardon of our Sins. VII. “ Look with Pity on our Afflictions, we beseech Thee. Take our Side in all our Quarrels. Plead our Cause in all our Differences. Make haste to redeem us by a perfect Redemption, for the Love of thy Name. For Thou art our God, our King, and a powerful Redeemer. Blessed be Thou, O Lord, the Redeemer of Israel. VIII. " Cure us, O Lord our God, and we shall be cured, save us, and we shall be saved, for thou art our Praise. Send us Health, give us a compleat Remedy for all our Weaknesses, our Pains, and our Wounds. For thou art a God that curest, and thou art merciful. Blessed be Thou, O Lord our God, who curest thy People Israel. IX. " Bless us, O Lord our God, in all the Works of our Hands. Bless all the Seasons of the Year for our use. Give us Rain and Dew, with thy Blessing upon all our Country. Replenish the whole Earth with thy Benedictions, and send necessary Moisture upon all the Places of the habitable Earth. Blessed be Thou, O Lord, who extendest thy Benediction upon the Year.

X. " Assemble us all together, at the Sound of the great Trumpet, to cause us to enjoy Liberty. Display the Standard, to bring back into their own Country all those of the Captivity, from the four Corners of the Earth. Blessed be Thou, O Lord, who assemblest the dispersed of thy People Israel. XI. " Restore us our Judges as heretofore, and our Counsellors as at the Beginning. Put away from us Affliction and Trouble. Do Thou only reign over us, in thy Goodness and Mercy, in Justice and Equity. Blessed be Thou, O Lord our God, who lovest Justice and [That is, The Roman Empire.] Equity. XII. (This twelfth Prayer is thought to be against the Christians.) " Let there be no Hope for them who renounce the true Religion. Let all Hereticks, how many soever they may be, perish as in a Moment, and let the Kingdom of Pride be quickly destroy'd in our Days. Blessed be Thou, O Lord our God, who destroyest the Wicked, and humblest the Proud.

XIII. " Let thy Compassion be moved for the Good and the Just, for the Proselytes of Justice, and for the rest of thy People of the House of Israel, O Lord our God; and reward all those who put their Trust in thy Name, and grant to us thy Law, and let us never be confounded, for we have put our Trust in Thee. Blessed be thou, O Lord, the Support and the Confidence of the Just. XIV. " Vouchsafe to dwell in the Midst of thy City Jerusalem, according to thy Promise. Build it up so that it may continue for ever, and do it quickly in our Days. Blessed be thou, O Lord, who buildest up Jerusalem. XV. " Let the Race of David thy Servant sprout up, grow and flourish, and let the Horn of thy Salvation be exalted; for we daily expect thy Salvation. Blessed be " be Thou, O Lord, who causest the Horn of our Salvation to flourish.

XVI. " Hear our Voice, O Lord our God, most beneficent Father; pardon us, and have Mercy on us. Receive our Prayers in thy Mercy and Favour, and send us not away out of thy Presence, O King, with empty Hands. For Thou hearest with Pity the Prayers of thy People Israel. Blessed be Thou, O Lord, who heareth our Prayers.

XVII. " Accept thy People Israel, O Lord our God, and have Regard to their Prayers. Restore thy Worship in the inward Parts of thy Temple. Make haste to receive with Favour and Love the Burnt-offerings of Israel, and their Prayers; and let the Worship of Israel thy People be always acceptable to Thee. Blessed be Thou, O Lord, who restorest thy divine Presence to Sion.

XVIII. " We render Thee our Praises and Thanksgivings, for Thou art the Lord our God, the God of our Fathers for ever. Thou art our Rock, and the Rock of our Life, the Buckler of our Salvation. We render Thee our Thanks from Generation to Generation, and we will declare thy Praises, for our Life is always in thy Hands, and our Soul is ever depending on Thee, because thy Signs are always with us; and thy Miracles and marvellous Goodness are continually before our Eyes, Morning, Evening, and Night. Thou art good, and thy Compassions cannot be exhausted. Thou art merciful, and thy Kindnesses never fail. We hope in Thee for ever, and may thy Name, O King, be for ever blessed for so great Favours. May it be magnify'd and glorify'd for all Eternity, and may every thing that breathes pay Thee its Tribute of Thanks. Selah. And may they celebrate thy Name in Truth and Sincerity, O God of our Salvation and our Succour. Selah. Blessed be Thou, O Lord, whose Name is good, and to whom it is fit always to render Praises and Thanksgivings.

XIX. " Grant to us, and to Israel thy People, Peace, Favour, Blessing, Grace, Kindness, and Piety. Bless us, O our Father, bless us all together, by the Light of thy Face. For by the Light of thy Face Thou hast given us, O Lord our God, the Law of Life, Love, Kindness, Equity, Benediction, Piety, Life, and Peace. May it please Thee at all Times and Seasons to bless thy People Israel, and to grant them Peace. Blessed be Thou, O Lord, who blessest thy People Israel, and givest them Peace. " Amen.

Prayers for the Dead. I shall confine myself here to what is found in Scripture, concerning Prayer for the Dead. In the second Book of Maccabees it is said, that Judas, sirnamed Maccabeus, made a Gathering [2 Maccab. xii. 43.] throughout the Company, to the Sum of two thousand Drachms of Silver; he sent it to Jerusalem to offer a Sin-offering, doing therein very well and honestly, in that he was mindful of the Resurrection. For if he had not hoped that they that were slain should have risen again, it had been superfluous and vain to pray for the Dead. And also in that he perceived that there was great Favour laid up for those that died godly. (It was an holy and good Thought.) Whereupon he made a Reconciliation for the Dead, that they might be delivered from Sin. The Law does not enjoin Prayers for the Dead; but the Practice of the Jews, founded upon their Opinion of the Immortality of the Soul, and the Rewards and Punishments of another Life. The modern Jews follow the Tradition of their Ancestors, in the Prayers and Alms which they make for the Dead.

Difficulties are started concerning this Passage of the Maccabees now quoted. How could it be said, that these Soldiers died in Piety, qui cum pietate dormitionem acceperant, who had transgressed the Law by a kind of Sacrilege, taking Things that had been consecrated to Idols? and how could Alms and Sacrifices be of Use to them? For we know that mortal Sin is not expiated by this kind of Things. It may be answer'd, that Judas might presume that the Soldiers were touch'd with Repentance for their Crime before they died: That God had inflicted Death upon them, to expiate in this Life a Fault that was not mortal, or that these Men had an Intention of delivering up these Spoils to the General after the Battle, without reflecting upon their having been consecrated to Idols. Lastly, the Charity of Judas inspired him with Sentiments of Indulgence, which we are not allow'd to condemn; and without entering upon this Inquiry, it is enough for us to shew, that his Opinion was, that Alms, and Sacrifices, and Prayers were of use for the Consolation of the Dead. We require no more to be granted here.

Another Passage, proving the Belief and Practice of Prayers for the Dead, is taken out of the Second Epistle of St. Paul to Timothy, chap. i. 18. The Lord grant unto him (Onesiphorus) that he may find Mercy of the Lord in that Day. And in how many Things he ministred unto me at Ephesus, thou knowest very well. There is great Probability that Onesiphorus was dead at that Time. St. Paul speaks of him as of a Man no longer in this World. In the same Epistle, ch. iv. 19. he salutes the Family of Onesiphorus, but does not mention him himself. Grotius does not doubt but that Onesiphorus was dead; if it were so, here is an express Instance of Prayers for the Dead, by St. Paul himself.

Pre-Adamites

PRE-ADAMITES, or Men that are supposed to have lived before Adam. Those that think the World to have been eternal, and that it has been several times renew'd, pretend, that there were formerly Men before Adam, and this Opinion is to be found among several of the Antients. Clemens Alexandrinus, for Example, in his Book call'd Hypotyposes, held the Eternity of Matter, the Metempsychosis, and that there were several [Clem. Alex. apud Phot. Cod. 83.] Worlds before Adam. Julian the Apostate was of Opinion, that there were many Men created at the Beginning ; and this is also the Sentiment of many of the Mahometans. [Simon, Lettres choisies, t. 3. p. 36.] The Author of the Book Cozai speaks of some ancient Records, wherein mention is made of Janbuzar, Zagrit, and Roane, who lived before Adam. 'Tis said there, that Janbuzar was Adam's Master. The Rabbi Abrar assures us, that Jafar Jonan of the Turks, who lived about the Year 770, was a Pre-Adamite; since he maintain'd, that there had been three Adams before him who is mention'd by Moses; and there should be still seven others, since the World was to undergo so many Renovations.

The Jews, at least some of them, are suspected to maintain the Opinion of the Pre- Adamites. Some pretend, a That Moses himself, has taught, that there had been two Worlds ; because he began the Book of Genesis by the Letter Beth,[1] which is the second Letter of the Alphabet, and stands for two. An ancient and famous Rabbin holds,[2] That God created seven Things before the Universe ; the Law, Hell, Paradise, the Throne of his Glory, the Sanctuary, the Name of Messiah, and Repentance ; all which is founded upon some Passages of Scripture, which ascribe Eternity to those Things. Maimonides suspected this Rabbin to fall in with the Opinion of Plato, who held the Eternity of the World. La Peirere pretended, That his System of the Pre-Adamites [Systém. Theolog. part. 1. l. 3. c. 3.] was taught by the Rabbins, and he quotes several of them in his Favour. But it must be acknowledged, that the Generality of the Jews are against him, and maintain the Creation as an Article of Faith.

The Opinion, That there were Men before Adam, is common among the Orientals. [Bibl. Orient. p. 56. col. 2.] Giafar Sadick, one of the twelve Imans, being asked if there was any other Adam before ours ; made answer, That there had been three before him, and that there will be still seventeen after him. And when he was asked, If God would create other Men, after the End of the World ; he replied, Wou'd you have the Kingdom of God remain empty, and his Power idle ? That God has been Creating through his whole Eternity, is a pretty general [Idem p. 311. col. 1.] Opinion among the Musulmen ; That the Pyramids of Egypt were rais'd before Adam, by Gian-ben-Gian, Universal Monarch of the World, in those Ages that were before this first Man. They assure us, [Idem. p. 820, col. 1, 2.] That there have been forty Solymans, or Universal Monarchs of the Earth, who reigned successively for the Course of a great many Ages before the Creation of Adam. All these pretended Monarchs govern'd each over Creatures of their own Species, who were different from those of Adam's Posterity, tho' they were rational, as Men are ; some of 'em had several Heads, others many Arms, and some were composed of many Bodies : Their Heads were still more extraordinary, some resembling those of an Elephant, others those of a Buffalo, or a Boar, or other Animals more monstrous. Such are the Dreams of the Oriental Mythologists.

In the last Age, La Peirere revived this Opinion of the Pre-Adamites : He says,[3] That God created Men in great Numbers, in all Parts of the World, long before the Creation of Adam. According to him, the first Men are those from whence proceeded the Gentiles ; and Adam was Father of the chosen Race, or of the Jewish Nation ; That Moses had no Design to trace the Original of Mankind in general, but only of the Hebrews, from whence he derived his Birth ; and speaks of other Nations, but only as they have some Relation to the Jewish Affairs. He likewise asserts, That Noah's Deluge was not Universal, and that it only extended to such Countries as were inhabited by the Race of Adam : That Adam having transgressed the Commandments of God, introduced Sin into the World, and infected all his Posterity with it ; but that the Gentiles, being descended from the Pre-Adamites, and not having received the Law, or any Commandment from God, did not fall into Prevarication, tho' their Lives were not exempt from Crimes ; but these Crimes were not imputed to them : These might be called the Faults of Matter, with which God was not offended, because of the Ignorance of those who committed them.

We would not here be at much Pains to refute so wild and monstrous an Hypothesis : The Reader may see what we have said upon Genesis ii. 7. and such Writers as have expresly written against this Author. He renounced his Error, and lived in Retirement with the Fathers of the Oratory at Notre-dame des Virtus,[4] near Paris, where he died. His Treatise of the Pre-Adamites was first printed in Holland in 1652; and since that, has been reprinted several times.

Precious

PRECIOUS. The Life of Saul was precious in the Eyes of David, when having [1 Sam. xxvi. 21.] found him alone, and at a Distance from his Company, he did not think fit to lay his Hands upon him; that is to say, he look'd upon it with Reverence, and as a Thing of great Value, which it was not allow'd him to [Psal. cxvi. 15. Psal. lxxii. 14. 1 Sam. iii. 1] take away. Precious in the Sight of the Lord is the Death of his Saints, says the Psalmist: God has too great an Esteem for it, to give it up to the Wicked. And elsewhere; Precious shall their Blood be in his Sight. The Septuagint and Vulgate read, Honorabile nomen eorum coram illo. And [Isai. xiii. 12.] Isaiah; Pretiosior erit vir auro; The Enemy shall be more desirous of killing the Men, than of obtaining the Booty.

Precious is also us'd for rare, or scarce: Thus in the Days of Eli the High-Priest; The Word of the Lord was precious in those Days; and God did not frequently communicate himself, or there were but few Prophets. And Job, speaking of Men, says, [Job xxviii. 10.] Omne pretiosum vidit oculus ejus; There is nothing so rare or precious, but he desires to see, and to enjoy it. And Solomon; He that [Prov. xviii. 17.] moderates his Words, is wise and prudent; and he that opens not his Mouth, often has Understanding. Pretiosi spiritus, vir eruditus. The Hebrew has; Pretiosus spiritus, or qui rarò spiritum emittit est vir intelligentiæ.

Si separaveris pretiosum à vili, quasi os [Jer. xv. 19.] meum eris; If you know how to distinguish that which is precious or valuable, from that which is vile, you shall be as the Mouth of God. 'Tis God that thus speaks to Jeremiah; If you know how to value the Gift of Prophecy as you ought, and that Function to which I appoint you, you shall be my Mouth, my Ambassador, the Interpreter of my Will and Pleasure.

Predestination

PREDESTINATION, to Predestinate. This Word is taken from the Latin, Predestinare, which sometimes barely signifies a Designation or Appointment of any particular Thing to a particular Use, or of any Person to some particular Office or Employment. But, in the Language of the Church, and of Divines, Predestination is taken for the Design that God has formed from all Eternity, of bringing by his Grace, to Faith and eternal Salvation, some certain Persons; whilst he leaves others to continue in their Infidelity, or in their Corruptions. Those that are so left are the Reprobate, and the others are the Predestinated.

[Rom. viii. 30.] Predestination is distinguished into two Kinds; one to Grace, and the other to Glory. All that are predestinated to Grace, are not therefore predestinated to Glory; because that several of those may forfeit that Grace, and may not persevere in doing good: Whereas, the others receive from God the Gift of Calling to the Faith, of Justification, and of Perseverance; and, finally, of Glory. 'Tis of these last that St. Paul speaks; Moreover, whom he did predestinate, them he also called; and whom he called, them he also justified; and whom he justified, them he also glorified.

[Aug. de Dono Perseverantiæ, c. 14. n. 35. Idem de Dono Perseverantiæ, c. 23. Idem de Dono Perseverantiæ, c. 19. n. 48.] All Divines agree, and 'tis an Article of our Faith, That Predestination to Grace is of meer Favour; otherwise, Grace would not be Grace; which is an Absurdity. But Opinions are divided concerning Predestination: Some will have it to be meerly gratuitous; and others believe that God has formed his Decree of Predestination upon a View of the future Merits of the Elect. St. Austin, the Fathers that have succeeded him, Thomas Aquinas, and the most celebrated Schools of the Latin Church, hold Predestination to be of meer Favour. Some Greek Fathers, and some Latin Divines, adhere to that Predestination that is made upon a Foreknowledge of the future Behaviour of the Elect. St. Austin thus defines Predestination; he says, It is a Foreknowledge and Preparation of efficacious Means; in Virtue of which, the Elect are most certainly saved: Hæc est prædestinatio sanctorum nihil aliud, præscientiæ, & præscientia scilicet, & præparatio beneficiorum, quibus certissimè liberantur quicumque liberantur. And this great Doctor was so fully persuaded of the Gratuitousness of Predestination, consider'd in its full Extent, that is to say, taken as an absolute Decree of God, who determines the Glory of his Elect, by certain effectual Means that he has prepared to bring them to it; that he makes no Scruple to give this Opinion, as the Belief of the Church; and to maintain, that no one can oppose it, without being guilty of an Error: Hoc scio, neminem contra istam prædestinationem, quam secundùm scripturas sanctas defendimus, nisi errando, disputare potuisse.

The ancient Hebrews were persuaded, as well as we, that God had a Foreknowledge of what each of us should be, do, and become, both as to Good and Evil. This is included in the very Notion of God, of his Providence, and infinite Knowledge. God [Jer. i. 5.] says to Jeremiah, Before I formed thee in the Belly, I knew thee; and before thou camest forth out of the Womb, I sanctified thee, and I ordained thee a Prophet unto the Nations. But when we endeavour to form a just Idea of their System of Predestination and Reprobation, and how they reconreconciled Grace and Free-Will, the Matter is not very easy. These Things were not then so much enquired into as they have been since; and Men had not taken so much Pains to form Systems of Theology, for the Explaining of these Mysteries, which are still so profound and so obscure, after all our Discoveries.

Philo[1], Josephus[2], and the Rabbins[3] are of Opinion, That in the Beginning God created all the Souls that exist, and all the Matter that composes the Universe: So that when a new Body is formed, it is not animated by a Soul newly created, but by one that was created at the Beginning of the World. Philo thinks that Angels, Demons, and the Souls of Men, are of the same Nature, and differ only in the Name: That as there are good and bad Genii, so there are good and bad Souls: That Souls, as well as Angels, have their Abode in the highest Region of the Air; from whence they descend to animate Bodies, and bring with them their good or bad Qualities: That they enjoy a perfect Liberty; and, according to the good or bad Use they make of it, they are punished or rewarded, to all Eternity.

[Joseph. l. 18. Antiq. c. 2. & de Bello, l. 2. c. 12, &c.] Josephus acknowledges, that the Pharisees stand up for Fate, yet without excluding the Free-will of Man, and the Sovereign Power of God over his Creatures. That Souls that have lived well, at their Departure out of the Body, return to the Place from whence they came, with a Power of returning afterwards to animate some other Body; whereas the Souls of the Wicked are condemned to everlasting Punishment. The Essenians think, That Souls are attracted, by I know not what Inclination, to inclose themselves in Bodies; that such as live an innocent Life therein, depart, after the Death of the Body, to certain delightful Places beyond the Ocean; and those of the Wicked, to dark Places, where they live in Torment.

[Wisd. vii. 19, 20.] The Author of the Book of Wisdom, whom several have thought to be Philo, makes Solomon thus speak; I was a witty Child, and had a good Spirit: yea, rather, being good, I came into a Body undefiled. Where we see the same Principles as we [John ix. 2.] have observ'd in Philo. The Apostles, in the Gospel, propos'd a Question to Jesus Christ, when they saw a Man that was born blind, Whether it was for the Punishment of his own Sins, or for those of his Parents, that this Man was born blind? They therefore had a Notion, that his Soul had an Existence before, and had offended God, before he animated the present Body.

Origen,[4] who believed the Pre-existence of Souls, as well as the Hebrews, had also, probably, received from them his System of the Predestination and Reprobation of Men; according to which, he affirm'd, that God forms his Decree of Saving or Damning, of Rewarding or Punishing Men, upon the Knowledge he has of the good or bad Qualities with which their Souls are endued, before their Infusion into the Body; and of the good or bad Use they have made of their Liberty, before their Birth, and of the Use they will make of it when they shall live upon the Earth. He was persuaded, that before the Soul animates the Body, it is in full Liberty of doing Good or Evil; and that all the Good or Evil, the Prosperity or Adversity, that happens to it in this Life, are either Rewards or Punishments for what it has perform'd well or ill in a former State: That it was for this, that Jacob was preferr'd before Esau; that one is beloved, and the other hated; one appointed to Dominion, and the other to Subjection.

Thus, according to Origen,[5] we are not predestinated by the Prescience of God, but from a Consideration of our previous Merits. Jacob deserved to be predestinated, for the Care he took of purifying his Soul; whereas Esau, having not used the same Diligence to make himself worthy of God's Favours, deserved to become a Vessel of Dishonour: That St. Paul also furnished from himself the Cause of his Election, to Him who knows all Things before they happen, God foreseeing that he would labour more abundantly in the Vineyard of the Church. 'Twas from this System of Origen, that Pelagius form'd his Sentiments concerning Predestination and Reprobation. Which gave Occasion to St. Jerom to say, That the Pelagian Heresy is only a Branch of the Errors of Origen, and that Origen was the Predecessor of Pelagius: Doctrina tua Originis ramuscula est.

[Chrysost. in Epist. ad Rom. ix. p. 325.] St. Chrysostom, who may be consider'd as the Oracle and the Mouth of the Greek Church, kept at a Distance from the Opinions of Origen, by maintaining, That God does not reject nor predestinate Men on Account of their past good or bad Actions, but only upon the Knowledge of their future Merits or Demerits: Whence is it, (says he) that Jacob is beloved, and Esau hated? 'Tis because one is good, and the other is bad. And whence is it, that, before their Birth, God determined, that the Elder should be in Subjection to the Younger? 'Tis because God has no need to stay for the Event of Things, as we must do, to to judge whether a Man shall be good or bad; he sees that even before he is born. 'Twas by the Effect of his Prescience, that he chose Jacob and rejected Esau. He knew before their Birth what they would one Day prove. When he chose St. Matthew, there were several Persons who appear'd better than he; but by his infinite Penetration, he knew how to discover the Value of that Jewel, that then lay upon a Dunghill.

He adds, speaking of Pharaoh, that this hardened Prince became a Vessel of Wrath, only by his own Iniquity: That the Hebrews were Vessels of Mercy, for nothing but their Integrity and Simplicity. In another [Chrysost. Homil. lxxx. in Matt. xxv. p. 837. 2.] Place he says, that the Kingdom of Heaven was prepared for the Elect from the Beginning of the World, and before they were born, because God foreknew what Ps.cxxxix. they would afterwards be. And writing upon those Words of the Psalmist; Thou understandest my Thought afar off, he thus reasons: Some People are absurd enough to say, such an one is a good Man, because God has chosen him and loved him; and such another is wicked, because God hated him. But the Prophet here tells us, on the contrary, that God proves us by our Works. He knows whether we will be vertuous or no, even before our Birth. And by that he gives us Proofs of his Prescience, he confirms it by our Works, for fear it should be imagin'd, that his Prescience was the Cause of our Vertue.

The Greek Fathers that came after St. Chrysostome have express'd themselves much in the same manner, and the modern Greeks have follow'd the Sentiments of the Fathers before them. In the several Projects that have been form'd, for the Reunion of the Greek Church with the Latin, there were no Difficulties started about the Doctrine of Predestination and Reprobation. There was an Agreement, as to the Substance of this Article, though there was a Difference among the Greeks and Latins, as to their Way of expressing themselves. Both of them condemned Pelagius and Celestius, and maintain'd that Man was unable to do any good, without the Supernatural Assistance of God's Grace: Whereas Pelagius pretended, that Man might make use of his Liberty without the Assistance of Grace, and that Grace itself was conferr'd upon him only in proportion to his Merits. The Reader may see our Dissertation upon Predestination and Reprobation, which we have prefix'd to the Epistle of St. Paul to the Romans.

Priest

PRIEST. This Word comes from the Greek Word Presbyteros, which properly signifies an Elder, or an old Man. The Hebrew Word made use of in Scripture for a Priest, is Cohen;[1] the Greek, Hiereus, and the Latin, Sacerdos or Presbyter. But this last Word, in the Latin Text of Scripture, does not always stand for a Priest. For Example, Judith sent to call to her House Ozias, and Chabris and Charmis, the Elders of [Judith viii. 9. Ecclus. iv. 7.] the City; Presbyteros civitatis. Jesus the Son of Sirach advises the Poor to humble themselves before the Antients, and to appear with a respectful Air before the Great. Presbytero humilia animam tuam. And elsewhere, [Ecclus. vi. 35.] be present in the Assembly of the Elders; In multitudine Presbyterorum prudentium sta. The Name of Presbyteri, or Elders, is given also to the two Judges of Israel that [Dan. xiii. 28.] were Susanna's Accusers. But in the Latin of the New Testament, the Word Presbyter is always appropriated to the Priests.

In the Old Testament, the Priesthood was not annex'd to a certain Family, till after the Promulgation of the Law of Moses. Before that Time the First-born of every Family, the Fathers, the Princes, the Kings were Priests, born in their City and in their House. Cain and Abel, Noah, Abraham, and Job, Abimelech and Laban, Isaac and Jacob, offer'd themselves their own Sacrifices. In the Solemnity of the Covenant that the Lord made with his People, at the Foot of Mount Sinai, Moses perform'd the Office [Exod. xxiv. 5, 6.] of Mediator, and young Men were chosen from among the Children of Israel, to perform the Office of Priests.

But after that the Lord had chosen the Tribe of Levi to serve him in his Tabernacle, and that the Priesthood was annex'd to the Family of Aaron, then the Right of offering Sacrifices to God was reserved to the Priests alone of this Family. The Lord says, That no Stranger, which is not of the Seed of Aaron, come near to offer Incense before the Lord; that he be not as Korah, and as his Company. The Punishment of Uzziah King of Judah is well known, who having presumed to offer Incense to the Lord, was suddenly smote with a Leprosy, put out of his Palace, and excluded from the Administration of Affairs to the Day of his Death. However it seems, that on certain Occasions the Judges and Kings of the Hebrews have offer'd Sacrifices to the Lord, especially before a constant Place of Worship was fix'd at Jerusalem. See 1 Sam. vii. 9. where Samuel, who was no Priest, offer'd a Lamb for a Burnt-sacrifice to the Lord. See also 1 Sam. ix. 13. where it is said, that this Prophet was to bless the Offering of the People, which should seem to be a Function appropriated to the Priests. Lastly, 1 Sam. xvi. 5. he goes to Bethlehem, where he offers a Sacrifice at the Inauguration or Anointing of David. Ad immolandum Domino veni: Sanctificamini & venite mecum ut immolem.

Saul himself offers a Burnt-offering to the Lord, perhaps as being King of Israel. [1 Kings xiii. 9, 10. 2 Kings xviii. 33.] Afferte mihi holocaustum & pacifica; & obtulit holocaustum. Elijah also offer'd a Burnt-offering upon Mount Carmel. David himself sacrificed, at least the Text expresses it so, at the Ceremony of the bringing the Ark to Jerusalem, and at the Floor of Araunah. Solomon went up to the brazen Altar that was at Gibeon, and there offer'd [2 Sam. xxvi. 24.] Sacrifices. I know that these Passages are commonly explain'd, by supposing that these Princes offer'd these Sacrifices by the Hands of the Priests; but the Sacred Text will by no means favour such Explications; and it is very natural to imagine, that in the Quality of Kings and Heads of the People, they had the Privilege of performing some Sacerdotal Functions upon some extraordinary Occasions. So we see David consulted the Lord, being cloathed with the Priestly Ephod, and upon another Occasion he gave a solemn Benediction to the People. His Son Solomon also did the same.

[2 Sam. vi. 18. 1 Kings viii. 55, 56. Numb. iii. 41.] The Lord having reserved to himself the First-born of all Israel, because he had preserved them from the Hand of the destroying Angel in Egypt, by way of exchange and as a kind of Compensation, accepted of the Tribe of Levi for the Service of his Tabernacle. Thus the whole Tribe of Levi was appointed to the sacred Ministry, but not all in the same manner: For of the three Sons of Levi, which were Gershon, Kohath, and Merari, and which are the Heads of the three great Families, the Lord chose the Family of Kohath, and out of this the House of Aaron, to exercise the Functions of the Priesthood. All the rest of the Family of Kohath, even the Children of Moses and their Descendants, remain'd of the Order of mere Levites. But having already mention'd, under the Article LEVITES, all that concerns them, I shall not repeat it here, but confine myself to what belongs to the Priests only.

The High-priest was at the Head of all religious Affairs, and was the ordinary Judge of all Difficulties that belong'd thereto, and even of all Matters that concern'd the Justice and Judgments of the Jewish Nation. If there arise a Matter too hard for thee in Judgment, between Blood and Blood, between Plea and Plea, and between Stroke and Stroke, being Matters of Controversy between thy Gates; then shalt thou arise, and get thee up into the Place which the Lord thy God shall choose. And thou shalt come unto the Priests the Levites, and unto the Judge that shall be in those Days, a and enquire; and they shall shew thee the Sentence of Judgment. And thou shalt do according to the Sentence, which they of that Place (which the Lord shall choose,) shall shew thee, and thou shalt observe to do according to all that they inform thee. According to the Sentence of the Law which they shall teach thee, and according to the Judgment which they shall tell thee thou shalt do; thou shalt not decline from the Sentence which they shall shew thee, to the right Hand nor to the left. And the Man that will do presumptuously, and will not hearken unto the Priest (that standeth to minister there before the Lord thy God,) or unto the Judge, even that Man shall dye, and thou shalt put away the Evil from Israel. See also Deut. xix. 17. xxi. 5. xxiii. 9, 10. Ezek. xliv. 24. Joseph. Antiq. l. x. c. ult. & contra Appion. l. 2. c. 6. where this Discipline is well explain'd. Lastly, the Reader may consult our Dissertation upon the Polity of the Hebrews, prefix'd to our Commentary upon the Book of Numbers; and the great Work of Selden, De Synedriis veterum Hebræorum.

The High-priest only had the Privilege of entering into the Sanctuary once a Year, which was the Day of solemn Expiation, to make Atonement for the Sins of the whole People. See the Article EXPIATION. He ought to be born of one of his own Tribe, whom his Father had married a Virgin, and was to be exempt from all those corporal Defects mentioned in Leviticus. Non accedet ad ministerium si cœcus fuerit, si claudus, si parvo vel grandi vel torto naso; si fracto pede, si manu; si gibbus, si lippus, si albuginem habens in oculo, si jugem scabiem, si impetiginem in corpore, vel herniosus. In general, no Priest that had any corporal Defects could either offer Sacrifices, or enter into the Holy Place, to present the Shew-bread there. All that was allow'd him was this, to be maintain'd by the Sacrifices that were offer'd at the Tabernacle. Levit. xxi. 21, 22, 23.

God had appropriated to the Person of the High-priest the Oracle of his Truth; so that when he was habited with the proper Ornaments of his Dignity, and with the Urim and Thummim, he gave Answers to the Questions made to him, and God discover'd to him secret and future Things. It was forbidden him to mourn for any of his Relations, even for his Father or Mother, or to enter into any Place where a dead Body lay, that he might not contract any Uncleanness. He could not marry a Widow, nor a Woman that had been divorced, nor a Harlot, but a Virgin only of his own Race. He was to observe a strict[2] [Vid. Exod. xxxix. 1,2, 3, &c. Vid. Josep. l. 17. c 8. de Matthia Pontifice.] Continence during the whole Time of his Service.

THE HIGH PRIEST IN HIS PONTIFICAL ROBESVol. II. 2d Gath. A.

2d. Gath. VOL. II. B THE HABIT OF A COMMON PRIEST

The Habit of the High-priest was much more magnificent than that of the other Priests. He had about his Waist a Pair of Drawers of fine Linen, and next his Skin a Linen Tunique of a particular Make. Over this Tunique he wore a long Robe of an Azure Colour, or of Hyacinth, at the Bottom of which was a Border adorn'd with little golden Bells and Pomegranates, made of Wool of different Colours, and ranged alternately at equal Distances. This Robe was girded about him with a broad embroider'd Sash, which in Scripture is call'd the Ephod. It consisted of two costly Ribbons, which going round the Neck and coming over the Shoulders, cross'd each other at the Breast; then turning behind, it served as a Sash to gird up the Robe afore-mentioned. Upon the Shoulders the Ephod had two large precious Stones, upon each of which were engraven Six of the Names of the Tribes of Israel; and before upon the Breast, at the Place where the Ribbons cross'd each other, was fix'd the Pectoral or Rational of Judgment, which was a square Piece of a very precious and solid Work, six Inches wide, in which were set twelve precious Stones, upon each of which was engraved the Name of one of the Tribes of Israel. Some think the Rational was double, like a Pocket or Bag, in which was included the Urim and Thummim. Others believe the Urim and Thummim were two Hieroglyphical Figures, which hung at the Bottom of the Pectoral.

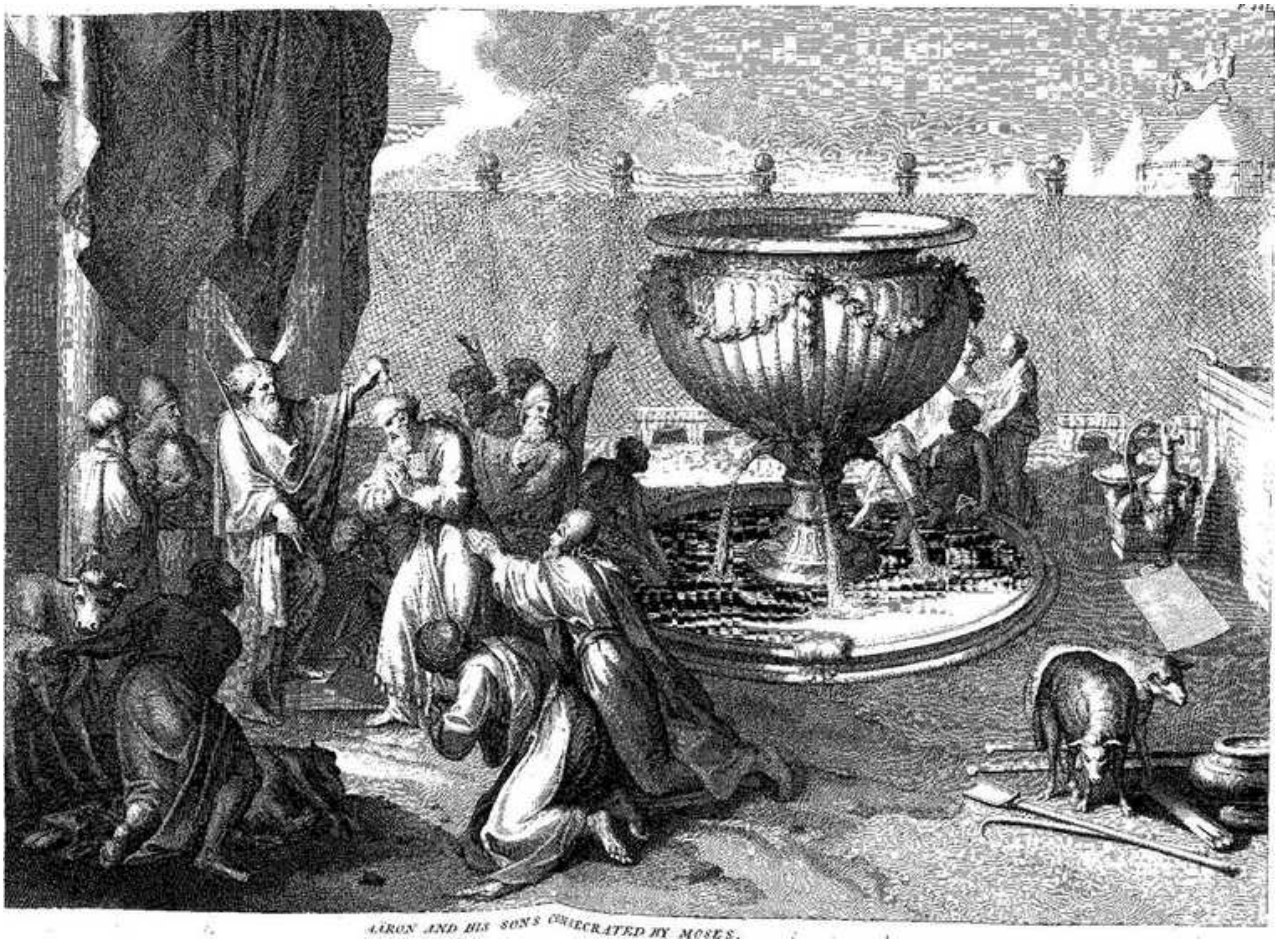
[2 Chron. xxix. 34. xxxv. 11.] The High-priests Tiara or Bonnet was more adorn'd and more costly than that of any other Priest, but it is not distinctly known what Form it was of. See what we have said before under the Article CIDARIS. That which chiefly distinguish'd the Tiara of the High-priest, was a Plate of Gold that hung down from the Bonnet upon his Forehead, upon which was written or engraven, Holiness to the Lord. This Plate was ty'd behind his Head with two Ribbons fasten'd at its two Ends. The ordinary Priests served immediately at the Altar, offer'd the Sacrifices, kill'd and flea'd them, and pour'd their Blood at the Foot of the Altar. They kept up a perpetual Fire upon the Altar of Burnt-sacrifices, and in the Lamps of the golden Candlestick that was in the Sanctuary; they kneaded the Loaves of Shew-bread, baked them, offer'd them upon the golden Altar in the Sanctuary, and changed them every Sabbath-day. Every Day, Night, and Morning, a Priest appointed by casting of Lots at the Beginning of the Week, brought into the Sanctuary a smoaking Censer, and set it upon the golden Table, otherwise call'd the Altar of Perfumes.

Cidaris. [See Luke i. 9.] The common Habit of the Priests was a Surplice or Tunique of Linen without Seam, with a Sash of several Colours, hollow like the Skin of a Serpent, of loose Work, about three Fingers Breadth. 'Tis thus describ'd by Josephus. He adds, that the Priests wore it upon their Breasts, under their Arms; that a kind of Flower-work was there represented, with Threads of Scarlet, Purple, and Hyacinth; that it went twice round the Body, was tied before, and the Ends hung down to the Feet, to render the Priests more venerable. When they were in the Act of Sacrificing, they threw this Girdle over the Left Shoulder, that they might perform their Office with the greater Freedom. The Rabbins make this Sash to be two and thirty Cubits or Elns long.

'Tis thought the High-priest's Sash was of a more precious Work, for Moses says it was made by the Art of the Embroiderer; [Ex. xxviii. 4. Antiq. l. 3. c. 8. Ex. xxviii. 39. xxxix. 3, 5.] and it is believed, that besides the Threads of Purple, Crimson, and Hyacinth, there were also Threads of Gold. Others maintain, that it differ'd in nothing from those of the other Priests. The Reader may see Braunius, who has carefully examin'd all these Particulars, in his Treatise concerning the Habits of the Hebrew Priests. The High-priest had two Sashes or Girdles, one to gird up his Linen Tunique, which he wore under, and the other to gird up his Robe of Azure, and which is call'd Chescheb ephudath, Levit. viii. 7. which we have now describ'd by the Name of Ephod.

[Antiq. l. 3. c. 8.] The Cap or Bonnet of the Priests a is call'd in Hebrew, Migbaoth, and that of the High-priest is call'd Miznepheth. But the Rabbins assure us, that these two Words signify but one and the same thing, and that the Bonnet of the Priests, as well as that of the High-priest, was a Cap made of a Border of Linen sixteen Elns long, which went round the Head several times, and made a Cap not unlike a Head-piece, as the Hebrew Word Migbaoth insinuates, which has the same Signification. Josephus thus describes it: " It is composed " of several Folds of a linen Border, " folded back and sewed, so that it appears like a thick Crown worked up of " Linen. Over this Cap there is a Cloth " that covers it quite, and comes down to " the Forehead, to hide all the Plaits and " Seams."

[Hieronym ad Fabiol.] Lastly, St. Jerome gives us a Description of it, that agrees neither with that of the Rabbins nor of Josephus. This Bonnet, says he, is round, and like to that which is represented upon the Head of Ulysses, as if a Sphere was cut into two equal Parts, and one of the Parts was taken for a Bonnet. There is no Point at the[3] Top, and it does not cover all the Hair, but leaves a third Part to be seen before; and that it may not fall off, it is ty'd behind with a Ribbon. Its Matter is of fine Linen, and it is cover'd with a Cloth, to hide the Foldings and the Seams. Moses insinuates to us,[4] that they were indeed tied on with a Ribbon, when he says, that at the Consecration of the Priests their Bonnets were tied on.



As to the High-priest's Tiara, the Rabbins hardly make any Difference between it and the Bonnet of the other Priests, except that the High-priest's is flatter, and more approaching to the Form of a Turbant; whereas that of the other Priests more resembles a Night-cap, rising a little to a Point at the Top. Josephus gives us a magnificent Description of it, probably taken from what he had seen in his own Time, at [Antiq. l. 3. c. 5.] the Temple of Jerusalem. He says it was a Cap of the Colour of Hyacinth, or of an Azure Blue, which was put over the other Cap of the Shape of a Turbant, of which a Description is given before. It covers the hinder Part of the Head, and the two Temples, and is incompass'd by a treble Crown of Gold, where there are little Buds of the Flowers of the Plant Henbane. The Circuit of these Flowers is interrupted on the forepart of the Tiara, to make Room for the Plate of Gold, on which the Name of God was engraven.

The Priests did not wear their Hair long [Ezek. xliv. 20. See Levit. x. 6. xxi. 5.] in the Temple, yet they did not shave their Heads, but only clipt their Hair with Scissars. Caput suum non radent, neque comam nutrient; sed tondentes attondent capita sua. They did not appear with their Heads bare during their Ceremonies. To appear bare-headed and uncover'd before any one, was look'd upon as a want of Respect, as it is still among some Nations. They wore linen Drawers as well as the High-priest, when they went up to the Altar, that they might not shew any thing indecent [Exodus xxviii. 42. xxxix. 27.] there. The Levites had no peculiar Habit in the Ceremonies of Religion; but about the sixty-second Year of Christ they obtain'd from King Agrippa, that they might wear a linen Tunique as well as the [Joseph. Antiq. l. 20. c. 8. p. 699.] Priests: Which Josephus says, was look'd upon as an evil Presage, Experience having always shewn, that Innovations in the antient Practices of religious Worship are always attended with some Disaster.

The Priests were not suffer'd to offer Incense [Levit. x. 1, 2.] to the Lord with strange Fire, that is, with any other Fire but what should be taken from the Altar of Burnt-sacrifices. 'Tis known with what Severity God chastised Nadab and Abihu for having fail'd herein. The Priests and Levites waited by the Week and by the Quarter in the Temple. They began their Week on the Sabbath-day, and ended it on the next. [2 Kings xi. 1, 7. Numb. viii. 24. iv. 3.] Moses had fix'd the Age at which they were to enter on the sacred Ministry, at twenty-five or thirty Years, and they were to end it at fifty: But in David's Time this Order was changed, and they were obliged to attend the Service of the Temple as soon as they were twenty Years of Age.[5] Those that would dedicate themselves to perpetual Service in the Temple, were well received, and were maintain'd [Deut. xviii. 6. Deut. xviii. 3. Deut. xviii. 4.] by the constant and daily Offerings.

The Lord had given no Lands of Inheritance to the Tribe of Levi, in the Distribution of the Land of Promise. He intended that they should be supported by the Tythes, the First-fruits, the Offerings that were made in the Temple, by their Share of the Sin-offerings and Thanksgivingofferings that were sacrificed in the Temple, of which certain Parts were appropriated to the Priests. In the Peace-offerings the Priests had the Shoulder and the [Levit. vii. 33, 34. Levit. vii. 6, 7.] Breast. In the Sin-offerings they burnt upon the Altar the Fat that covers the Bowels, the Skin of the Liver, and the Kidnies. The rest belong'd to the Priest. The Skin or Fleece of every Sacrifice also belong'd to him; and this Article alone was no mean Allowance. When an Israelite [Philo de præmiis Sacerdotum.] kill'd any Animal for his own Use, he was to give the Priest the Shoulder, the Stomach, and the Jaws. He had also a Share in the Wool when the Sheep were shorne. All the First-born, both of Man and Beast, belong'd to the Lord, that is to say, to his Priests. The Men were redeem'd [Numb. xviii. 15, 16.] for the Sum of five Shekels. The First-born of impure Animals were redeem'd or exchang'd, but the clean Animals were not redeem'd. They were sacrificed to the Lord; their Blood was sprinkled about the Altar, and all the rest belong'd to the [Numb. xviii. 17. Lev. xix. 23, 24.] Priest. See the Article FIRST-BORN. The First-fruits of Trees, that is, those that came on the fourth Year, belong'd also to the Priest.

They offer'd at the Temple the first of all the Fruits of the Earth, and the Quantity was fix'd by Custom, which was between the fortieth and the sixtieth Part. Besides this, they offer'd whatever any one had vow'd to the Lord. See the Article FIRST-FRUITS before. They gave also to the Priests and Levites an Allowance out of the Dough that they kneaded. They had the Tythe of all the Fruits of the Land, and of all the Animals which [Lev. xxvii. 31, 32.] were fed under the Shepherd's Crook. And when the Levites had collected all the Tythes and all the First-fruits, they set [Numb. xviii. 26.] apart the Tythe of that for the Priests. Thus [Josh. xxi. 19, 20. Hos. iv. 6.] Thus though the Priests had no Lands or Inheritance in the Country, they lived however in great Plenty, and were abundantly supplied with what was necessary for their Subsistance. God had also provided them with Houses and Accommodations, by appointing them eight and forty Cities for [Numb. xxxv. 1, 2, 3.] their Habitation. In the Precincts of these Cities they possess'd only as far as a thousand Cubits beyond the Walls. Of these forty-eight Cities, six were appointed to be Cities of Refuge, for the Sake of those that should commit any casual and involuntary Manslaughter. The Priests had thirteen of these for their Share, and all the others belong'd to the Levites.

AARON AND HIS SONS2d Gath. Vol. II. C. CONSECRATED BY MOSES.

[Deut. xx. 3, 4.] One of the chief Imployments of the Priests, next to attending upon the Sacrifices and the Service of the Temple, was the Instruction of the People, and the deciding Controversies; the distinguishing the several [Mal. ii. 7, &c. Levit. xiii. 14. Numb. v. 14, 15.] Sorts of Leprosie, the Causes of Divorce, the Waters of Jealousy, Vows, all Causes relating to the Law, the Uncleannesses that were contracted several Ways; all these Things were brought before the Priests. For the Priests Lips should keep Knowledge, and they should seek the Law at his Mouth; for he is the Messenger of the Lord of Hosts. [Malac. ii. 7.] They publickly bless'd the People in the Name of the Lord. In the Times of War [Numb. vi. 23, 24, 25.] their Business was to carry the Ark of the Covenant, to consult the Lord, to sound the holy Trumpets, and to pronounce these [Numb. x. 8, 9.] Words at the Head of the Army; " Hear, O " Israel, you are now going to fight with " your Enemies, but fear not, for the " Lord is in the midst of you; he will " fight for you, and defend you from all " Danger."

The Consecration of Aaron and of his Sons was perform'd by Moses in the Desart with great Solemnity, and this is what pass'd [Exod. xl. 12. Lev. viii. 1, 2, &c.] upon that Occasion. Aaron and his Sons wash'd themselves all over in Water, and presenting themselves to Moses at the Tabernacle of the Covenant, with the Sacrifices that were to be offer'd for them, Moses first dress'd them with all the Ornaments mention'd before, then with the Oyl of the sacred Unction he anointed Aaron by pouring it upon his Head. Afterwards he offer'd up a Calf for a Sin-offering, and Aaron and his Sons having laid their Hands on this Sacrifice, Moses kill'd it, put some of its Blood with his Finger upon the Horns of the Altar, burnt the Fat upon the Fire of the Altar, and sent the Flesh, the Skin, and the Dung to be burnt without the Camp. After which he offer'd a Ram for a Burnt-offering. Aaron and his Sons laid their Hands upon the Head of the Victim, and Moses kill'd it, sprinkling the Blood about the Altar, and burning the Flesh and the Bowels upon the Altar of Burnt-sacrifices.

Lastly, they presented the Ram which was to serve for the Consecration of the Priests. Aaron and his Sons laid their Hands upon its Head, Moses kill'd it, and taking of the Blood of this Ram, he touch'd with it the Tip of the right Ear of each, the Thumbs of their right Hands, and the great Toes of their right Foot, and sprinkled the rest of the Blood upon the Altar. Then taking the Fat of the Kidneys and Bowels, the Rump, the Kidneys, and the right Shoulder of the Victim, with a Leaf of unleaven'd Bread, a Cake and a Wafer, he put them successively into the Hands of Aaron and of his Sons, who lifted them up before the Lord, with a waving Motion, Moses at the same time supporting and guiding the Hands of each. After which Moses received these Things again, and burnt them upon the Altar of Burnt-sacrifices, because it was the Sacrifice of the Consecration of Aaron and of his Sons. Then taking the Oyl of Unction, and the Blood that was upon the Altar, with these he sprinkled Aaron and his Sons, habited as they were in all their sacred Ornaments. This Ceremony was continued for seven Days successively, beginning it every Day in the same Manner, at least as to the offering of Sacrifices, the Unctions, and Aspersions; for it does not appear that Aaron and his Sons were dress'd every Day in their sacerdotal Habits. For these whole seven Days the Priests continued in the Court of the Tabernacle, without going out of it.

In this whole Ceremony Moses perform'd the Office of consecrating a Priest. It is much to be doubted, whether at every new Consecration of a High-priest all these Ceremonies were repeated. It is very probable they contented themselves with cloathing the new High-priest in the Habit of his Predecessor, as was put in Practice at the Death of Aaron. Others think they gave them the Unction also, [Numb. xx. 25, 26, &c.] which perhaps might be in use to the Babylonish Captivity, though there is no Proof of this Fact. We know on the contrary, that Jonathan the Asmonean contented [1 Macc. x. 21. Joseph. Antiq. l. 13. c. 5. Antiq. l. 19. c. 6. p. 676. d.] himself with putting on the High-priest's Habit at the Feast of Tabernacles, in order to take Possession of this Dignity; and Agrippa King of the Jews having offer'd to Jonathan Son of Ananus the High-priesthood, a second Time, Jonathan thank'd him for it, saying, It was enough for him to have once received the Ornaments of this supream Dignity, which he would willingly resign to some other that should be more worthy of it.

5 U

As to the ordinary Priests, we do not see that any particular Ceremony was us'd for their Consecration; they were admitted to the Exercise of their Functions by filling their Hands, as the Scripture speaks, or by making them perform the Functions of their Order. But when the Priests had fallen away from the Lord, or had been a long Time without performing their Office, as it sometimes happen'd under the Reigns of some of the later Kings of Judah; for Example, under Ahaz, Ammon, and Manasseh, they thought it necessary to sanctify anew such Priests, who had been absent from the Holy Place, who for a long Time had interrupted the Exercise of their Ministry, or who had never yet exercis'd [2 Chron. xxix. 34. 2 Chron. xxxv. 12.] it; as it happen'd under Hezekiah and Josiah, when the Number of the Priests that were sanctify'd not being found sufficient for the great Number of Sacrifices that were to be offer'd, they were forced to employ the Levites in fleaing the Sacrifices; for the Levites were much sooner sanctify'd than the Priests. a Levitæ quippe faciliori ritu sanctificabantur quam Sacerdotes.

However, we must acknowledge, that we do not know what was done upon these Occasions, for the Consecration, or rather for the Sanctification of the Priests. Nor is it certain, whether any thing else was requir'd than the ordinary Sanctification, which was, the Exemption from legal Defilements and Uncleanneffes, which was necessary for the approaching to holy Things. The Hebrew Text of the Passage now quoted reads only, " For the Levites " were upright of Heart, to sanctify themselves, rather than the Priests." The Levites shew'd more Zeal and Readiness than the Priests, to assist in this Ceremony.

As to the Priests of the new Covenant, their Dignity is vastly more exalted than that of the Hebrew Priests, because their Functions are more noble, and their Object more sacred and divine. They consecrate the Body and Blood of Jesus Christ upon the Altar; they have the Power to bind and to loose, to remit or to retain Sins, they bear a sacred and inviolable Character. The Christian Priesthood is the Substance and the Truth, of which that of the Jews was but the Shadow and the Figure. Jesus Christ the everlasting Priest, according to the Order of Melchisedeck, abides for ever, as St. Paul observes; whereas the Priests, [Hebr. vii. 23, 24, &c.] according to the Order of Aaron, were mortal, and therefore could not continue long. The Priesthood of Jesus Christ is one, divided among many Priests, who partake of his Power, and who exercise in his Name the Functions of his Ministry. The Consecration given by Moses to Aaron and his Sons, was not again to be repeated to their Successors, because the Priesthood was always to continue in the same Family; whereas the Christian Priesthood not being continued to any particular Family, was to be conferr'd on every one of the Priests with distinct Ceremonies.

Lastly, the corporal Defects, which excluded from the legal Priesthood, and from the Privileges that attended it, ought in Proportion to be understood in an exalted and spiritual Sense, in respect of the Christian Priesthood. We have elsewhere spoke of the Superiority of the Bishops above Priests, and of the Primacy of the Pope, the Bishop of Rome, which we believe to be of Divine Right. The Qualities that St. Paul requires in a Bishop, may be seen 1 Tim. iii. Tit. i. 7, &c.[6]

Priesthood

PRIESTHOOD, Sacerdotium. We may distinguish four Kinds of Priesthood. 1. That which belongs to Kings, to Princes, to the Heads of a Family, to the First-born. This may be called a natural Priesthood, because Nature and Reason teach us, that the Honour of offering Sacrifices to God should belong to the Greatest in Dignity. 2. The Priesthood according to the Order of Melchisedech, which does not differ from that now mentioned, but in its Dignity; because Melchisedech was raised up of God, to represent the Priesthood of Jesus Christ. 3. The Priesthood of Aaron and his Family, which subsisted as long as the Religion of the Jews was a true Religion. 4. Lastly, the Priesthood of Jesus Christ, and of the new Law. We have spoken of Melchisedech in a particular Article. As to the Priesthood of Aaron, See AARON before, and PRIEST.

The Priesthood passed from the Family of Ithamar into that of Eleazar, according to [1 Sam. ii. 30, 31, 32, &c.] what the Lord had declared to the High-priest Eli. But this was not done presently. The Family of Eli still possess'd the Priesthood for a good while. This High-priest had for Successor his third Son Ahitub, or according to others, Abijah, to whom succeeded Ahimelech, who was put to death by Saul, with the other Priests at Nob. a This Prince then gave the High-priesthood to Zadoc. But Abiathar Son of Ahimelech having adhered to the Interests of David, was continued in the Possession of the High-priesthood in the Kingdom of Judah. So that for a good Part of David's Reign, we find the High-priesthood to be exercised by the two High-priests Zadoc and Abiathar, the first of the Family of Eleazar, and the second of that of Ithamar. Lastly, towards the End of David's Reign, Abiathar having adhered to the Party of Adonijah against Solomon, he was disgraced,[1] and Zadoc alone acknowledg'd as High-priest. He then began to exercise his High-priesthood at Jerusalem, whereas before he had only perform'd the Functions of [1 Kings ii. 26, 27. 1 Chron. xvi. 39.] it upon the Altar of Gibeon.

Some have pretended, that the High-priesthood was exercised, even after the Law took place, by others besides the Family of Aaron. For this are produced the Examples of Moses, Joshua, Samuel, and Saul, who sacrificed on some Occasions. But granting these Facts to be indisputable, yet nobody denies, first, that a Prophet may not extraordinarily, and by a particular Revelation, offer up Sacrifices. Secondly, that this Liberty was not of much greater Extent before the building of the Temple, than after the publick Worship of God was fix'd at Jerusalem. Thirdly, that it is not certain but that Joshua, Samuel, and Saul might offer their Sacrifices by the Hands of Priests; for often the Scripture affirms that to be done by a Man's self, which is only done by his Orders. See PRIESTS before.

[Ex. ii. 16.] The Hebrew Word Cohen, which signifies Priest, is sometimes put for a Prince. For Example, it is said that Jethro the Father-in-Law of Moses, was Priest of Midian, that is, according to some Interpreters, that he was Prince or Governor of his City. In the second Book of Samuel it is said,[2] That the Sons of David were Priests, that is to say, Princes, and consider'd in the Country as Priests. Filii autem David sacerdotes erant. The Septuagint say, they were principal Courtiers, the Chief of the Court. The Author of the first Book of Chronicles[3] explains this, saying, they were the nearest at the King's Hand. They had the chief Employments at Court.

As to the Priesthood of Jesus Christ, which is infinitely superior to all the other, as to its Duration, its Dignity, its Prerogatives, its Object, and the Power which is annexed to it; the Priests of the New Law partake of the Royal Priesthood of Jesus Christ; they exercise his Priesthood and his Power. 'Tis properly Jesus Christ that baptizes, that gives the Holy Ghost in Confirmation, that binds and looses in the Sacrament of Penance, that offers his own Body and his own Blood upon the Altar; in a Word, that performs all the[4] Functions of the sacred Ministry by the Hands of the Priests his Ministers. The Priesthood of Aaron was to have an End, but that of Jesus Christ is everlasting. That of Aaron was limited to his own Family, was exercised only in the Temple, and among only one People; its Object was nothing but bloody Sacrifices and Purifications, which were only external, and could not remit Sins; but the Priesthood of Jesus Christ is extended to the whole Christian Church, spread over the Face of the whole Earth, and among all the Nations of the World. It exercises the Power of Jesus Christ even over Souls, in forgiving or restraining Sins; it opens the Channels of supernatural Graces, it offers the Host as an Expiation for all the Sins of the World. The Epistle of St. Paul to the Hebrews should be consider'd by those, that would comprehend the Excellence of the Priesthood of the New Law, above that of the Law of Moses. Hebrews iv. 14, 15, &c. also v. vi. vii. viii. ix. See also 1 Peter ii. 5, 6, 7, 8, 9.

Among all Nations the Priesthood was so honourable and elevated a Station, and at the same time so commodious, that it was look'd upon by the People with some sort of Jealousy; so that the Lord, to express to the Hebrews what great Favours he would confer upon them, says, that he would make them Kings and Priests. Eritis mihi [Ex. xix. 6.] in regnum sacerdotale. And St. Peter makes the same Promise to the Christians, or rather he tells them, that they are in earnest what Moses promised to the Israelites. Vos autem genus electum, regale sacerdotium, gens sancta. And St. John in the Revelations says, that the Son of God has made us Priests and Kings to God his Father. Fecit nos regnum & sacerdotes Deo Patri suo. The Priesthood of Christians does not allow indifferently to all, the Liberty of offering the Sacrifice of the New Law; but it consists in the Participation of the Priesthood of Jesus Christ, which is exercised in the Church by Priests legally ordain'd and consecrated. Any one of the Faithful may offer up to the Lord, in an Union with the Sacrifice of Jesus Christ, his own Body, his Inclinations, his Pleasures, his temporal Goods. He may offer up the divine Sacrifice of the Altar in an Union of Heart and Intention with the Priest; lastly, he may every Moment offer up to the Father the Merits of that Sacrifice which Jesus Christ has once offered upon the Cross. And this is that in which the Exercise of the Priesthood of mere Laicks consists. Besides, as the Priesthood of the New Law is not successive, nor confin'd to one Family; all Christians may aspire at the Glory of the Priesthood, and endeavour by their Virtue and good Lives, by their Innocence and acquired Abilities, to become worthy of this Honour.

We have already enlarged upon the Rights, Prerogatives, Functions, Ornaments, and Revenues of the Priests of the Old Law, under the foregoing Article. We cannot do the same thing here in respect of the Priests of the New Law, because neither Christ in the Gospel, nor his Apostles in any of their Writings which they have left us, have express'd all the Ceremonies that are to be used in the Administration of the Sacraments, nor all the Circumstances that are to accompany them. The Apostles have left some of these things to be regulated by the Wisdom and Discretion of the Heads of the Church, though they taught the greatest Part of them to the Faithful of their own Times, vivâ voce, from whom we have received them by the Canal of Tradition.

Prepare

PREPARE. The Word Præparare, or Parare, is often us'd for founding, fixing, establishing. It answers to the Hebrew Word Kun, which bears the same Signification. Præparans montes in virtute sua. He founds, he fixes the Mountains by his Power. Parata sedes tua ex tunc. Thy Seat, thy Throne is established from all Eternity. Super flumina præparavit orbem terræ. He has fix'd the Earth upon the Rivers, or upon the Waters.

Presentation

[1 Sam. i. 11, &c.] PRESENTATION. By this Word is generally understood the Presentation made by the Parents, of their First-born Children to the Lord in the Temple; or that which they made of their Children, or of any other thing, that they had vowed to present to the Lord. Thus Samuel the Son of Elkanah, and of Hannah, was presented to the Lord on these two Accounts, both as the First-born of Hannah, and as vow'd by her to the Lord. As the First-born, he might have been redeem'd and restor'd to [Lev. xxvii. 6.] his Parents for the Sum of five Shekels: But having been vow'd to the Lord, to be employ'd in his Service all the Days of his Life, he continued at the Tabernacle from the Age of three Years, where he perform'd all the Services he was capable of.

The Holy Virgin presented our Saviour at the Temple, on the Day of her Purification, [Luke ii. 22, &c.] because he was her First-born; and she redeem'd him, according to the Law, for the Sum of five Shekels. The same obtain'd as to all the First-born in Israel.

Lastly,

Lastly, there is an antient Tradition in the Church, delivered in very antient Monuments, [Protevang. Jacobi n. 7, 8, 9, 10.] though but little credited because of some Circumstances found therein which are false and uncertain, that the Virgin Mary was devoted to the Temple by her Parents; that she was presented there at the Age of two Years; that she abode there, and was fed by the Hand of an Angel, till she was twelve Years old. Then the Priests said to the High-Priest Zachariah, 'Tis time to place out Mary, for fear the Temple of the Lord should be defiled. Betake yourself therefore to Prayer, and we will perform whatever the Lord shall reveal to you. Zachariah having put on the sacred Habit, enter'd into the Sanctuary; and as he was at Prayer, the Angel of the Lord said to him; Assemble the Elders of the People, and let each of them bring a Wand, and he shall be appointed for Mary's Husband, by whose Wand God shall perform a Miracle. All the Elders of Israel met therefore at the Temple, and each of them gave in his Wand, which they received again the next Day, without any thing extraordinary appearing. But when the High-priest gave Joseph his Wand again, a Dove arose from it, and lighted upon Joseph's Head. Then the High-priest gave him to Wife Mary, the Daughter of Joachim and Ann.

[Evangel. de Nativ. Mariæ. n. 6, 7, 8.] The Gospel of the Birth of the Virgin, says much the same thing; That Mary was offer'd at the Temple by her Parents, to be bred up there with the Girls that were there kept. That having arrived to the Age of fourteen Years, the High-priest said to all the Girls of that Age, that they might return to their Parents to be disposed of in Matrimony. But Mary answer'd, that she had been offer'd for ever to the Service of the Lord, and that she had taken a Vow of Virginity. Then the High-priest not knowing what Resolution to take in a Case so extraordinary, betook himself to Prayer with all the People that were then assembled in the Temple, being then a great Festival. The High-priest then heard a Voice from the midst of the Sanctuary, that he should assemble all those that were unmarried of the Family of David, and that Mary should be given to him whose Wand should flourish, and upon whom the Holy Ghost should alight in the Shape of a Dove.

Joseph was therefore convened among the rest, who was now very old. And as at first he did not present his Wand, God did not cause any extraordinary Sign to appear; but the second time having brought his Wand with the others, it flourished and the Holy Ghost alighted upon it in Form of a Dove. So Mary was given to him, that he might be the Guardian of her Virginity. I know that these Legends are of no Authority in the Church; but the principal Fact, to which these Circumstances have been added, is however certain. That is, that the Holy Virgin was presented at the Temple, that she had made a Vow of Virginity, and that she marry'd Joseph, who was to be only the Guardian and the Witness of her Virginity. In the antient Greek Fathers we find some Allusions to these Histories; but these Circumstances in general are not more to be trusted in the Fathers themselves, than in those Originals from whence they have taken them.

[Luke ii. 36 Lev. xxvii. 6. Ex. xxxviii. 8. 1 Kings ii. 22.] There is no Law in the Old Testament, by which the Parents were obliged to offer their First-born Daughters to the Lord; and we have no Evidence that it was the Custom to breed up young Girls in the Temple. Moses ordains, That if a Girl had been vow'd to the Lord, from the Age of a Month to five Years old, she was redeem'd by giving to the Temple, or to the Priests, the Sum of three Shekels. It is true, there is Mention made in two Places of the Scripture, of devout Women that waited at the Door of the Tabernacle; and St. Luke speaks of the Daughter of Phanuel, who did not stir from the Temple. But there is no Probability that these Persons were dedicated to the Lord from their Infancy, or that they continued always in the Temple, without the Power of quitting it and marrying themselves. On the contrary, it is very probable, that these Persons were under no other Obligation of continuing there, than what their own Devotion or Resolutions had laid upon them.

Presepe

PRESEPE, or Præsepium, a Manger, for Beasts to eat out of. The Holy Virgin was compell'd to put the new-born Infant Jesus in a Manger, belonging to the Stable in which she lay, because she had no Cradle, or other Place wherein to put him. The antient Fathers tell us, a That the Stable wherein Joseph and Mary were obliged to take up their Quarters, was a Cave made in a Rock. The Manger might also be hollow'd in the Rock; but within the Manger of Stone, there might be also a wooden Trough, wherein the Child Jesus lay. The Manger preserv'd at Rome is a wooden Manger. A Latin Author quoted by Baronius,[1] under the Name of St. Chrysostom, says, That the Manger wherein Jesus Christ lay was made of Earth, but that it was taken away to have a Silver one put in its Room.

The Painters have been used to represent near the Manger of our Saviour, an Ox and an Ass. To justify which they quote this Passage[2] [Isai. i. 3.] Passage of Isaiah, The Ox knoweth his Owner, and the Ass his Master's Crib; and [Habak. iii. 2.] that other of Habakkuk, Thou shalt be known between two Animals. And several of the Fathers say,[3] That Christ was known in his Manger by the Ox and the Ass. The Author of the Poem under the Name of Lactantius is directly for his Opinion, as also the Author of the Book of Promises, cited under the Name of St. Prosper. But notwithstanding these Authorities, several of the Criticks doubt whether the Ox and the Ass were then in the Stable of Bethlehem, neither the Gospel, nor the more antient Fathers having taken any Notice of it. And the Passages of Isaiah and Habakkuk brought to prove this, do not shew it fully and expresly.

Press

[גת,Gath. Torcular. Græc. Ληνός.] PRESS, Torcular; in Hebrew, Gath. Mention is often made in Scripture of a Press. But this Word is used, not only for the Machine by which the Grapes are squeezed, but also for the Vessel, or Vat, wherein the Wine runs from the Press, in which it is received and preserved, and which, in Hebrew, is call'd Jekeb; and in [יקב, Jekeb. Græc. Λάκκος, or Λῆνος. Isai. v. 2. Mat. xxi. 33. Joel iii. 18. Prov. iii. 10. Hag. ii. 16. Judges vii. 25.] Greek, Laccos. Whence proceed these Expressions: He digged a Wine-press in his Vineyard; Your Presses shall run over with Wine; Thy Presses shall burst out with new Wine; To draw out of the Press; Zeeb they slew at the Wine-press of Zeeb. It was a kind of subterraneous Cistern, in which the Wine was received and kept, 'till it was put into Jars or Vessels of Earth or Wood. See Plin. l. 14. c. 21. Columel. l. 12. c. 18. Cato de re Rust. c. 113. where they speak of these Cisterns under-ground, wherein the Wine was put. We have spoken at large of the Presses, and of all that belongs to the Manner of Keeping the Wine, in the Commentary upon Jeremiah, chap. xlviii. 11.

In the Psalter, we read several Titles of the Psalms, which intimate, Pro Torcularibus, For the Presses, which is differently explain'd. Some think,[1] that the Psalms are Songs of Rejoycing for the Vintage, which were chiefly sung at the Feast of Tabernacles, after the Harvest and the Vintage. Others think,[2] that Gittith, which is the Hebrew Word translated by Presses, signifies an Instrument of Musick. The Fathers[3] explain them in a spiritual Sense, of the Church of Jesus Christ, who is the mystical Vine in which the Press is built, according to the Description of our Saviour in the Gospel. We think that we may translate the Hebrew by, A Psalm addressed to the Master of Musick, who presided over the Band of Gittites. In the Temple were several Bands of Singers, of which some might be of the City of Gath.

Pretorium

PRETORIUM. The Name of Prætorium, is given, in the Gospel, to the House wherein dwelt the Roman Governor of Jerusalem:e 'Twas there that the Governor sate in his Judicial Capacity, and where Jesus Christ was brought before him. Notwithstanding all the Revolutions that happen'd to Jerusalem, especially during the Siege of Titus; and notwithstanding the Ruine and Desolation of the whole City, after it was taken by the Romans, they pretended to shew Travellers the Prætorium, or the Palace of Pilate, where, afterwards (as they say) a Church was built.

St. Paul speaks also of the Prætorium (or Palace), wherein, being at Rome, he gave Testimony to Jesus Christ: Ita ut vincula mea manifesta fierent in Christo, in omni Prætorio, & in cæteris omnibus. Some think,f that by this Name, he means the Palace of the Emperor Nero. Others will have it to be the Place where the Roman Prætor sate to do Justice, and where he had his Tribunal. It is certain that the Emperor's Palace did not bear the Name of Tribunal; but St. Paul being accustom'd to call by this Name the Governor's Palace at Jerusalem, might also give this Name to the Emperor's Palace at Rome. Others have maintain'd, that under the Name of the Prætorium at Rome, St. Paul would express the Camp of the Pretorian Soldiers, whither this Apostle might have been carry'd by the Soldier that always accompany'd him, and who was fasten'd to him by a Chain, as the Manner was among the Romans.

Priapus

PRIAPUS, a false God of the ancient Pagans, whom the Gentiles pretended to be the Son of Bacchus and Venus. Venus brought him into the World at Lampsacus upon the Hellespont, where he was in great Honour. They sacrificed to him an Ass; and he was honoured as the God of Gardens and Orchards. He was represented with his obscene Parts of a monstrous Bigness. In some Places of Scripture there is mention made of the God Priapus; and 'tis said that the Ladies of Jerusalem offer'd Sacrifices to him, and that Maachah the Mother of Asa King of Judah was his High -Priestess. But this Prince caus'd his Temple to be demolish'd, or the Cave wherein Abominations were committed in Honour of Priapus; he burnt the Statue of this infamous Deity, and oblig'd the Queen his Mother to renounce his Worship.

[1 Kings xv. 13. 1 Chron. xvi. 16. מפלצת .לאשרה] The Hebrew says, that Maachah had made a Miphlezeth for Asherah; that he destroy'd her Miphlezeth, and burnt it by the Brook Kidron; that he took away from his Mother the Sovereign Authority, because she had done this. It is not agreed on, that Miphlezeth signifies the God Priapus. Several Moderns translate this Word by a Scare -crow; and, perhaps, 'tis this that St. Jerom understands by the Word Priapus, which served as a Scare-crow to defend the Gardens.

[Hor. l. i. Sat. 8.] ——— Inde ego furum aviumque

Maxima formido.

[Vide Seld. de Diis Syris. Syntag. 2. c. 5.] But there is still more Likelihood, that she made some of those obscene Figures that the Pagans call'd Phallus, and Ithyphallus, in Honour of Adonis the Spouse of Venus, or of Astarta. Phallus is plainly deriv'd from the Hebrew Word Phalaz, which is the Root of Miphlezeth; and Asherah, in Honour of whom Maachah made the Miphlezeths, was the same as Astarta, or Venus.

Pride

PRIDE. This is a Sin very odious to God and Man, and which the Scripture condemns in a Multitude of Places. For what is to be seen in the whole Sacred History, but the Pride, the Presumption, the Vanity of Men overthrown? What else can can be seen, but the Humility, the Meekness, the Acknowledgment of Human Weakness, to be exalted, [1 Pet. v. 5. Jam. iv. 6. Prov. xxix. 23. Prov. xvi. 18, 19.] supported, recompensed? God resisteth the Proud, and giveth Grace to the Humble. A Man's Pride shall bring him low; but Honour shall uphold the humble in Spirit. Pride goeth before Destruction; and a haughty Spirit before a Fall. Better is it to be of an humble Spirit with the Lowly, than to divide the Spoil with the Proud.

Pride is also put for the Hardness and Insolence [Numb. xv. 30.] of a Sinner, in Opposition to Sins of Infirmity or Ignorance: But the Soul that doth ought presumptuously, the same reproacheth the Lord; and that Soul shall be cut [Deut. xvii. 12.] off from among his People. And elsewhere, And the Man that will do presumptuously, and will not hearken unto the Priest, or unto the Judge, even that Man shall die. The Lord treated the Egyptians with the strictest Rigour, because they acted with [Exodus xviii. 11.] Pride and Insolence towards the Hebrews: Eò quid superbè egerint contra illos. Job and the Psalmist have mark'd out Pharaoh by the Name of the Proud: Prudentia ejus percussit superbum, says Job; Humiliasti sicut vulneratum superbum, says the Psalmist. Isaiah makes use of the same Expression, to mark out the Destruction of Pharaoh; Numquid non tu percussisti superbum [Ezekiel xxxii. 12.] And Ezekiel; Vastabunt superbiam Ægypti. The Chaldeans shall destroy the Pride, the Insolence, the Cruelty of Egypt. See also Nehem. ix. 16, 29.

The Scripture also often reproaches the Moabites with their Pride: It points them out, under the Name of Children of Haughtiness, or Pride; for so we translate what is said in the Book of Numbers; And destroy all the Children of Sheth. The Hebrew may signify, He shall destroy all the Children of Pride, or Haughtiness; which is confirm'd by this Passage of Jeremiah, which alludes to this in Numbers: Jeremiah says, We have heard the Pride of Moab, (he is exceeding proud), his Loftiness and his Arrogancy, and his Pride and the Haughtiness of his Heart. Compare Numb. xxi. 28. with Jeremiah xlviii. 45. in the Hebrew. See also Isai. xvi. 6.

The Pride of Jordan, is known in the Prophets, to express the Inundations of that River. See Jer. xii. 5. & xiii. 9. & xlix. 19. Zech. xi. 3. and what we have observed upon this in the Article JORDAN.

The Pride and the Proud, Superbia & Superbus, often represent Babylon and the Babylonians. In Isaiah, Inclyta superbia Chaldæorum, expresses Babylon: And Babylon the Glory of Kingdoms, the Beauty of the Chaldees Excellency, shall be as when God overthrew Sodom and Gomorrha. Jeremiah, speaking of the King of Babylon, says, Behold, I am against thee, O thou most Proud, saith the Lord of Hosts; for the Day is come, the Time that I will visit thee. And the most Proud shall stumble and fall, and none shall raise him up: And I will kindle a Fire in his Cities, and it shall devour all round about him. See also Psal. cxviii. 21, 51, 69, 78, 85, 122.

Prince

PRINCE, Princeps. This Name is sometimes taken for the Chief, the Principal. Thus we say, The Princes of the Families, of the Tribes, of the Houses of Israel; the Princes of the Levites, of the People, of the Priests; the Princes of the Synagogue, or Assembly; the Princes of the Children of Reuben, of Judah, &c. Also, it is often taken for the King, the Sovereign of the Country, and for his principal Officers. Thus we say, the Princes of the Army of Pharaoh, Phichol Prince of the Army of Abimelech. Potiphar was Prince or Chief of the Butchers, or of the Guards of the Kings of Egypt; and Joseph was in Prison with the Prince of the Bakers. And so of others.

Prince

Prince of the Priests, sometimes expresses the High-Priest actually in Office[1], or he that had formerly possess'd this Dignity. And sometimes, he that was at the Head of the Priests, waiting in the Temple[2], or an Intendant of the Temple, or the Head of the Sacerdotal Families. Whence it comes, that often in the Gospel[3] mention is made of the Princes of the Priests, in the Plural Number.

Prince of the City, Princeps Civitatis;[4] he had in the City the same Authority as the Intendant of the Temple had in the Temple: He took Care of the Preservation of the Peace, and to keep good Order.

Prince of the Synagogue. In the Old Testament,[5] this Term signifies, those that presided over the Assemblies of the People, the Chief of the Tribes and Families of Israel. But in the New Testament, the Prince of the Synagogue, is he that presides over the Religious Assemblies [Luke viii. 41. Acts xiii. 15. & xviii. 17.] held in the Synagogues. This is he that the Jews call Nasi of the Synagogue. He had several Associates, which were also call'd Princes or Chiefs of the Synagogue. Acts xiii. 8.

Prince of this World. St. John often gives this Name to the Devil, who boasts of having all the Kingdoms of the Earth [John xii. 31. & xiv. 30. & xvi. 11.] at his Disposal. Matth. iv. 9.

Prince of the Captivity. This is the Name that the Oriental Jews give to him, whom they acknowledge as their Chief, and whom they obey in the Provinces beyond the Euphrates, under the Dominion of the Persians. See Basnage, in his History of the Jews, t. 2. l. 4. c. 3.

Here is the Succession of the Princes of the Captivity, from the Destruction of the first Temple, taken out of the lesser Chronicon of the Jews, call'd Seder-clam- Zutha.

Jechoniah, carry'd away by King Nebuchadnezzar.
Salathiel his Son, under King Belteshazzar.
Zerubbabel Son of Salathiel, who brought the People back into Judea, under the Reign of Cyrus.
Meshullam Son of Zerubbabel. Prophecy ceased in his Time. He dy'd, as the Jews say, under Alexander the Great.
Hananiah, under the Reign of Salmon, Alascan, and Mapparis, Kings of the Grecians, Successors of Alexander the Great. (Salmon is Ptolemy Son of Lagus, Alascan is Seleucus, and Mapparis is Cassander.) Hananiah died in the Year 140 of the Greeks, or of the Seleucidæ.
Barachiah Son of Hananiah, under Ptolemy, who caus'd the Law to be translated into Greek; and under Antiochus, [Acts iv. 6.] who built Antioch. He died in the Year of the Greeks 170.
Hasadiah his Son, in the Year 175. The Jews being ill treated by Nicanor, made an Insurrection, and slew him, with his whole Army.
Esaiah his Son. 9. Abdiah his Son, who died under Herod the Great.
Shemaiah his Son, who makes the Tenth Generation of the House of David from the Captivity.
Shecaniah his Son, who died in the Year 166 from the Destruction of the Temple, or the 236th Year of the Christian Era.
Hezekiah his Son, who was buried at Arbeel.
Nathan, Posthumous. 14. Hana his Son. These four Heads or 15. Akob his Son. Princes had but one Chief or Master of the 16. Nahum his Son. Academy, whose 17. Jochanan his Son. Name was Nahaneel. 18. Shaphet his Son. 19. Anam, or Hona his Son. Samuel the Lunatick was his Counsel. Nahardea was taken in his Time. He procured himself to be buried in Judea, near Chaia.

Nathan his Son, with Ezekiel his Counsel. The Persians resolved to persecute the Jews, in the Year 245 from the Destruction of the Temple.
Nathan his Son, with the Doctor Sazbi.
Akabiah his Son, with the Rabbi Ada. He was buried in Judea. The King of Persia subdued Syria.
Marhona his Brother, with the Doctors Abal, and Joseph Son of Hama. Sapor took Nisibe.
Ocba his Brother, with the Doctor A. Henanel.
Aba his Nephew, with Rabba and Rabbena. The World was without a King in the Year 416 from the Destruction of Jerusalem.
Chana his Brother.
poteus.

Cahana his Son, with Rabbena.
Hona his Nephew. 30. Hona Unkle of the former. He marry'd the Daughter of Hanina Head of the Academy.
His Son was the Destruction of the House of David: For having abused Hanina, the Plague destroy'd the whole Family, except,
Zutra, Posthumous. Isaac Head of the Academy was kill'd under his Government. Mir the Great appear'd; he saw a Column of Fire; he rebell'd against the Persians, acted as a King for seven Years; was kill'd. Zutra also was hang'd.
Zutra
33. Zutra his Son was forced to withdraw into Judea, and there to ask for the Presidence of some School. He was made President of the Senate 452 Years after the Destruction of Jerusalem, in the 522d Year of the Christian Era.

Guria his Son.
Zutra his Son.
Jacob his Son.
Migus his Son. 38. Nehemiah his Son. 39. Abdim his Son, who compleated 87 Generations.
Jacob Phinehas his Son, Master of Hatsab.
Azariah his Son, who made the 89th Generation.

This is a pompous Succession of the Princes of the Captivity; but those that have enquir'd nearly into it, find many [Basnage's Hist. of the Jews, t. 2. l. iv. c. 11.] Errors and Anachronisms in it. They pretend, That the Princes of the Captivity were not establish'd in Babylonia 'till the Beginning of the Third Century from Jesus Christ, in 220; That the Succession exhibited by the Author of the lesser Chronicle, which we have here given, is not supported by the Authority of any ancient Author; That neither Josephus, nor Justin Martyr, in his Dialogue against Tryphon, have known any thing of these pretended Princes of the Captivity beyond the Euphrates; That the Tradition of the Sages, upon which it is founded, is of very slender Authority in Matter of History. If Nathan, whom the Chronicon affirms to retire into Palestine, while Simeon, Father of Judas the Holy, was Patriarch there, had been Prince of his Nation beyond the Euphrates, he would hardly have quitted that Dignity, to accept of that of Father of the House of Judgment, in a small City of Palestine, such as Tiberias was. He return'd beyond the Euphrates, after he had continued a good while in Judea; and as he had there seen a Patriarch the Head of his Nation, he entertain'd an Ambition of doing the same at Babylon. He set up, therefore, his Son Huna, who may be reckon'd the first who had borne this Title beyond the Euphrates.

As to the Title of Prince, the Reader is not to be led into any Mistake by it. In Scripture and in Jewish Authors, it often means no more than a meer Head of a Family, or he that is appointed to preside over his Equals. The Heads of the Synagogues of Germany, and of some Provinces of Italy, take the Title of Duke, or of Princes of the Jews. This makes 'em never the greater Men, nor gives them the greater Liberty. [Gen. xxi. 33.] Principes exercitus, in Genesis, signifies Generals of an Army, which might not be very numerous; or even the Captains of a Prince's Guards. Abraham is call'd, [Gen. xxiii. 6. & xl. 20.] by those of Hebron, Princeps Dei, a great Prince. The Prince of the Bakers, was Pharaoh's Chief Baker. The Princes of the Families of the Levites, were the Heads and the Chief of those Families. The Prince of the Priests, is the High-Priest. Nicodemus is [John iii. 1. Vulg.] call'd a Prince of the Jews; that is to say, he was of great Consideration among the Jews. A Prince of the Pharisees, is one that is much distinguish'd in that Sect; &c.

Principium

PRINCIPIUM, Beginning. This is the most general Acceptation of this Word: In [Gen. i. 1.] principio creavit Deus coelum & terram; At the Beginning of Time, God created the Heaven and the Earth. In principio, sometimes also signifies, from Eternity. In principio [John i. 1.] erat Verbum; The Word was from the Beginning. And Wisdom says of herself, Ab initio & ante saecula creata sum: And elsewhere, [Eccles. 24. 14. Prov. viii. 22, 23.] The Lord possess'd me in the Beginning of his Way, before his Works of Old: I was set up from Everlasting, from the Beginning, or ever the Earth was.

Principium also denotes the Eastern Coast; as in this Passage; God created the [Gen. ii. 8.] Garden of Eden at the Beginning, in Principio. The Hebrew says, Eastward.

[Psal. cix. 3.] Principium filiorum; The Eldest of the Children. Principium gentium Amalec; Amalek is the first, the most ancient, the most formidable of the Nations. Principium filiorum Ammon; The Chief, the Choice, the Principal of the Children of Ammon. Principium viarum Domini. The Behemoth, or Elephant, is the noblest of Animals that God hath made; 'tis by that, as we may say, he began to display his infinite Power; it is the Master-piece of his Ways. He only speaks of Terrestrial Animals. Tecum principium in die virtutis tuae. In this Passage, Principium may be taken two ways; either for Eternity, from which the Word was begot by the Father; or for the Power, the Command, the Authority of the Son, which must especially shine forth, in the Day of his Power, or at the Day of Judgment: The Greek Fathers readily understand it in this Sense. The Hebrew Text is differently translated. The Jews read; Thy People is devoted to Thee in the Day of thy Might; They freely expose themselves to the greatest Dangers, to follow Thee in the Day of Battle. The Septuagint have read otherwise; Liberality, Principality is with Thee. The Hebrew Word Nadab, which signifies, to be liberal, to offer voluntarily and freely, is also put sometimes for a Prince: For Liberality is a Quality that [Ps. cxviii. 160.] chiefly belongs to Princes. Principium Verborum tuorum veritas; The Word of God is essentially founded upon Truth. Truth, Fidelity, and Certainty, are the Characteristicks of his Words and Promises. Promises. The Hebrew has literally; The Head of thy Word is Truth.

[Isai. 41. 26.] A Principio, expresses a Time at a great Distance. God challenges Idols and Idol-worshippers to discover those Things which have passed à principio, in ancient Time, from the Beginning of the World. [Isai. lii. 4.] He says, That his People went down into Egypt, à principio, a very long Time ago. The Jews complain to the Lord, That they are forsaken of him, and delivered up [Isai. lxiii. 19.] to the Nations, as at the Beginning, before he had declared himself their God, and they were admitted as his People. Elsewhere, [Jer. vii. 12.] God says, That his Name has remain'd to his Son in the Beginning; that is, for a long Time. And Jeremiah; Renew [Lam. v. 21.] your Days, as in the Beginning, as Heretofore; Shew thy Mercy towards us, as in ancient Times.

Principium peccati est filiæ Sion, quia in te inventa sunt scelera Israel; The Beginning [Mich. i. 13.] of the Crimes and the Misfortunes of Sion, and of Judah, was, when they follow'd the Transgressions of the Kingdom of Israel. This is the Source of of all their Calamities.

[Johan. viii. 25.] Principium qui & loquor vobis; I am the Beginning, I that speak to you. 'Twas thus that Jesus Christ answer'd the Jews, when they asked him, Who art thou? I am the Beginning; This is the Name that agrees to me best of all; 'Tis by Me that all Things were first created, and still subsist. This is the Name that St. Paul gives [Col. i. 18.] him; Qui est principium primogenitus ex mortuis. And St. John, in his Revelations; Ego sum Alpha & Omega, principium & finis. The Words before mention'd, Principium qui & loquor vobis, by others are otherwise explain'd. Before I tell you who I am, hear first what I have to say to you. The Greek Text favours this Explication; it does not read it in the Nominative, but in the Accusative: Principium quod & dico vobis; Before all things, hear what I have to say to you. Otherwise; I am what I have told you from the Beginning, and frequently ever since.

Prinus

PRINUS, a Sort of green Oak, otherwise call'd Holm-Oak. 'Tis call'd green Oak, because it preserves its Leaves in the Winter. These Leaves are like to those of Lawrel, but whitish, rough without, and with Teeth that seem to be as Thorns. One of the Elders that accused Susanna, said he had seen her with a young Man under a [Susan. 59. Πείσαι σε μέσον.] Holm-Oak, sub prino; and Daniel making an Allusion to the Word Prinus, answer'd him; The Angel of God waiteth with the Sword to cut thee in two, that he may destroy you. The Greek reads Prisai, which is, to saw. The Commentators may be seen concerning this Allusion in the Greek, which seem to prove, that this Part of Daniel was never in Hebrew.

Priscilla

PRISCILLA, or Prisca, a a Christian Woman, very well known in the Acts, and in St. Paul's Epistles. She is sometimes taken Notice of there before her Husband Aquila. They were at Corinth[1] when St. Paul come thither, and had the Happiness of entertaining him at their House, where he lodg'd a good while, because St. Paul and Aquila work'd at the same Business, which was that of making Tents of Leather, for the Use of the Army. Aquila and Priscilla left Corinth with St. Paul, and came along with him to Ephesus.[2] Here they dwelt for some Time, and preach'd the Gospel. Their House was so well regulated, that St. Paul calls it a [Rom. xvi. 5. 2 Tim. iv. 19. In the Year of Christ 65.] Church. From thence they went to Rome, where they were when St. Paul writ his Epistle to the Romans, in the Year of Christ 58, and he salutes them first of all, and with great Commendations. They return'd into Asia some time afterwards, and St. Paul writing to Timothy, desires him to salute them on his Account. 'Tis thought they died here, and the Latin Martyrologies observe their Memory on the eighth of July. The Greeks celebrate the Feast of Aquila on the fourteenth of the same Month.

The Greeks think he was the first Bishop of Nicomedia. Ado says he suffer'd Martyrdom at Antioch the 9th of August, after having made himself very famous by his Miracles. Procula [Evangel. Nicodem. c. 2. Nicephor. l. i. c. 30.] PROCULA, or Proscula, or Claudia Procula: This is said to be the Name of Pilate's Wife. Vincent of Beauvais[1] quotes the false-Gospel of Nicodemus, which assigns her this Name of Procula: But the Copy of this Gospel, printed by Fabricius, has not this Name; it has only Matrona ipsius Pilati procul posita: Yet Malehas in his Chronicon, Nicephorus, the false Lucius Dexter, call her Procula. Some of the Fathers[2] seem to think, that she fear'd God, and that she was saved. Others[3] will have it, that she embraced the Faith of Jesus Christ, and that she was of the Number of the Saints. As to the Dream she had on Acount of our Saviour, some think[4] that it was suggested to her by[5] the Devil, who was in Suspense about something, and was in Fear of the Subversion of his Empire. Others a impute it to a good Spirit.

Profane

PROFANE. This is said of the Contempt and Abuse of holy Things. A Man who is defiled, and touches any sacred Thing, pollutes or profanes it. He is called profane, who is not distinguish'd by any sacred Character. Profane Persons are not to meddle with, to speak or write upon sacred Matters. A profane Man, or Laick, is not to touch the holy Vessels, or to be employ'd in divine Mysteries. He that makes a Jest of sacred Things, who profanes them by the Abuse he makes of them, who defiles himself by impure or shameful Actions, is a profane Person. The Scripture calls Esau profane, [Heb. xii. 16. Gen. xliii. 32.] because he sold his Birth-right, which was consider'd as an holy Thing. The Egyptians would not admit the Hebrews to their Tables, because they held them as profane. Profanum putant hujusmodi convivium. The Priests of the Race of Aaron were enjoyn'd to distinguish between sacred and profane, between pure and defiled; and for this Reason [Lev. x. 10.] the Use of Wine was forbid them in the Temple, during their Time of Waiting. It was forbid them to keep the Flesh of the Peace-offerings above two Days. If they eat of it on the third Day, they were punish'd as Profaners of holy Things. Profanus erit, & [Lev. xix. 7.] impietatis reus.

Animals that were declared unclean by the Law, made those that touched them, or eat of them, unclean, profane, and polluted. [Isa. lxv. 4.] Isaiah calls those profane, who eat of the Flesh of Swine, or who have profane Broth in their Pot. Jus profanum in vasis eorum. When the City of Jerusalem is compared to the Temple, the Soil of this City is called [Ezek. xlvii. 15. 2 Mac. xii. 23.] profane; that is to say, appointed to common Uses, and for an Habitation of Laicks. Profana erunt urbis in habitaculum. In the second Book of Maccabees, the Heathen that composed the Army of Timotheus, are called profane. St. Paul marks as profane, such novel Words and Expressions as are needlesly [1 Tim. vi. 20.] introduced into Religion. Profanas vocum novitates.

To profane the Temple, to profane the Sabbath, to profane the Altar, are common Expressions, to denote the Violation of the Repose of the Sabbath, the entering of Foreigners into the Temple, the Irreverences that are committed there, the impious Sacrifices that are offer'd on the Altar of the Lord.

[Ps. lxxxix. 31.] To profane the Statutes, or the Commandments of God, is to transgress and violate them.

To profane the Covenant, or Prom-Ps. lxxxix. ises which are sworn to by an Oath, is 34. to frustrate them, or not perform [Ecclus. xlvii. 22. Deut. xx. 5.] them.

To profane his Race, to blemish the Glory of it. The Author of Ecclesiasticus says, that Solomon profaned his Race, because by his Sins he was the Occasion, that God did not give his Spirit of Wisdom to his Son Rehoboam, who by his Imprudence alienated the Minds of the Israelites, and caused the Revolt of the ten Tribes from [Levit. xix. 23. Jer. xxxi. 5.] him.

To profane a Vine, or a Tree, is to make them common, and proper to be employ'd in ordinary Uses. What Man is he that hath planted a Vineyard, and hath not yet eaten of it? The Hebrew says literally, who hath not yet profaned it. In Leviticus, where Moses passes a Law concerning the Fruit of Trees newly planted, he expresses the Impurity of the First-fruits by the Name of Circumcision Ye shall count the Fruit thereof as uncircumcised. For the three first Years, these Fruits were cut off as impure. The fourth Year they offer'd what was produced in the Temple. Lastly, in the fifth Year the Owner had the Liberty of making use of the Fruit as his own, which then became profane or common. Jeremiah promises the Israelites, that they should return again into their own Country, that they should plant Vineyards on the Mountains of Samaria, and should profane them; that is, should eat of the Fruit thereof. The Vulgate says, Plantabunt plantantes, & donec tempus veniat, non vindemiabunt. They should not touch thereof 'till the fifth Year. The Hebrew says, Plantabunt plantantes, [Job xi. 8. Job xvii. 16. Isa. vii. 11.] & profanabunt.

Profound

PROFOUND, Deep. The Latin Word profundus, or profundum, is often put for the Grave, or for the Place wherein Souls are detain'd after Death. The antient Hebrews placed it below the Waters, in the most profound Abyss. It is as high as Heaven, what canst thou do? deeper than Hell, what canst thou know? And again, In profundissimum infernum descendent omnia mea. I shall go down to the Bottom of the Grave. And Isaiah; Ask a Sign of the Lord from the deepest Hell, or from the [Exod. xiv. 25. xv. 5. Ps. cvi. 24.] highest Heaven.

Profundum, the Deep, is often put for the Sea. The Army of Pharaoh that was drowned in the Red-Sea. Ferebantur in profundum, & descenderunt in profundum quasi lapis. And David; Those that go to Sea have seen the Lord's Wonders in the Deep. Mirabilia ejus in profundo. The Words of a wicked Woman are as deep Water, or as a deep Pit. Prov. xxii. 14. xxiii. 27.

Profound[1]

A MAP OF THE LAND of PROMISECompiled by the Author out of the BOOK of JOSHUA. Scale.

[Prov. xviii. 4. Ps. xcii. 5. Isa. xxix. 15.] Profound Thoughts is generally us'd in a good Sense for deep Wisdom, prudent Counsels. The Words of a wise Man are like deep Water. Aqua profunda verba ex ore viri. And again; Sicut aqua profunda sic consilium in corde viri. The Intentions of a Man are unsearchable. And the Psalmist; Thy Thoughts are very deep; no one is able to penetrate into them. Isaiah takes it in a bad Sense. Woe to those that are of a deep Heart. Væ qui profundi estis corde. That conceal their Sentiments, and think they can hide them from the Sight of God.

[Ezek. iii. 5, 6. 1 Cor. ii. 10.] Ezekiel; I send you not to a People of a profound Language, or of an unknown Tongue. Non enim ad populum profundi sermonis & ignotæ linguæ tu mitteris. In this Passage profound is put for difficult, [Dan. ii. 22.] conceal'd, unknown; as also in St. Paul; The Mind searches into all Things, even into the most profound Secrets of God. Omnia scrutatus, etiam profunda Dei. And Daniel; 'Tis God that reveals profound and hidden Things: Revelat profunda & abscondita.

[Rom. viii. 39. Ephes. iii. 18.] St. Paul says; that nothing shall be able to separate us from the Love of God, neither the most exalted Height, nor the profoundest Depth: Neque altitudo, neque profundum: Nor Heaven, nor the Abyss, nor Angels, nor Devils. This is a kind of Proverb and Hyperbole. And elsewhere; That you may comprehend with all the Saints, what is the Breadth, and Length, the Height and Depth of the Mysteries of God, of his Power, of his Love, of his Counsels, &c.

[Isa. xxxi. 6. Hos. ix. 9. Isa. vii. 2.] To sin profoundly is read in Isaiah, and in Hosea, to denote a long Habit of Crimes, an obstinate Course of Idolatry; or else a profound and very great Iniquity, a Crime that has taken deep Root in the Soul by long and inveterate Custom. Profundè peccaverunt, ut in diebus Gabaa. They have carry'd on their Wickedness to such a Pitch, as to imitate the antient Crimes of Gibeah, says Hosea; Return to the Lord, as you have so profoundly withdrawn yourselves from him, says Isaiah. Convertimini sicut in profundum recesseratis. And elsewhere; Ask from the Lord a Token from the Depth of Hell. The Hebrew says literally; Make your Demands deep, ask something difficult, something as it were conceal'd in the Bottom of Hell.

Promises

[Gal. iii. 16.] PROMISES. The Word Promise in the New Testament is usually taken for those Promises that God heretofore made to Abraham and the other Patriarchs, to send them the Messiah. 'Tis in this Sense that St. Paul commonly uses the Word Promise. Abrahæ dictæ sunt promissiones. The Time [Rom. iv. 13, 14, 15, & passim. Acts vii. 17.] of the Promises is the Time of the Coming of the Messiah. The Children of the Promise are, first, the Israelites descended from Isaac, in Opposition to the Ishmaelites descended [Rom. ix. 8. Gal. iv. 28.] from Ishmael and Hagar; and secondly, the Jews converted to Christianity, in Opposition to the incredulous Jews, who will not believe in Jesus Christ: The Christians have enjoy'd the Promises made to the Patriarchs, from which the incredulous Jews have fallen away. The holy [Eph. i. 13.] Spirit of Promise, which the Christians have received, signati estis spiritu promissionis sancto, signifies the Holy Ghost which God has promis'd to those that shall believe in him, which is the Pledge of their everlasting Happiness. The first Commandment to which God has annex'd a Promise, primum [Eph. vi. 2.] mandatum in promissione, is that, Honour thy Father and thy Mother; to which God has subjoin'd this Promise, that their Days shall be multiply'd upon the Earth.

Promises in general also denote eternal Life, which is the Object of a Christian's [Heb. x. 6.] Hope. Ut reportetis promissiones. The antient Patriarchs were Heirs of the Promises [Heb. vi. 12.] by their Faith and their Patience. Fide & patientiâ hæreditabant promissiones. All [2 Cor. i. 20.] the Promises of God are accomplish'd and fulfill'd in Jesus Christ.

[Numb. xxx. 13. Eccles. v. 5.] Lastly, the Word Promise is often put for a Vow. If a Woman makes a Vow, and her Husband shall not give his Consent to it, she is not to be held to her Promise: Non tenebitur promissionis rea. And Ecclesiastes; It is much better not to vow at all, than to vow, and not keep one's Promise.

Proof

[Exod. xx. 20.] PROOF, Tryal, Temptation. God intended to prove you, to see if you would walk in his Ways. After he had proved you and afflicted you, he had Pity on you. God [Deut. viii. 16.] commands Gideon to bring his Troops to a Brook, that he might prove them there. As [Judg. vii. 4.] Gold and Silver are try'd in the Furnace, so God proves the Heart. The Verb probo is also put for to know, to examine, Omnia probate, [Prov. xvii. 3. 1 Thes. v. 21. Luk. xii. 56. Phil. i. 10.] quod bonum est tenete. You know how to examine the Appearance of the Heaven. Faciem cœli, nostis probare. And elsewhere; Ut probetis potiora. And again; Be renew'd in Spirit, that you may know what is the Will of God. Ut probetis quæ sit voluntas [Rom. xii. 2.] Dei bona, &c. Probare tirones; 2 Kings xxv. 10. He that exercises them, or that proves the young Soldiers. The Hebrew says, He that is the Master of the Butchers, [2 Kings xxv. 10. רב טבחים] or of the Cooks, or of the King's Guard.

Prophet

PROPHET. This Word comes from the Greek, Prophetes, which signifies one that foretells future Events. The Hebrews [1 Sam. ix. 9. נביאNabi, Propheta. ראהvidens.] at the Beginning call'd them Seers. Afterwards they call'd them Nabi, which comes from the Root Nibba, to foretell, to divine. Also the Scripture often gives them the Name of Men of God, and of Angels, or Messengers of the Lord. The Verb Nibba to prophesy, in the Hebrew is of very great Extent. Sometimes it signifies to foretell what is to come; at other times, to be inspired, to speak from God. God says to [Exod. vii. 1.] Moses, Aaron thy Brother shall be thy Prophet; that is to say, he shall explain thy Sentiments to the People. St. Paul in his Epistle to Titus, i. 12. quoting a profane Poet, calls him a Prophet; One of themselves, even a Prophet of their own: Because the Pagans thought their Poets inspired by the Gods. The Scripture often gives the Name of Prophet to Impostors, who falsely boasted of Inspiration.

As the true Prophets, at the times that they were transported by the Motions of God's Spirit, were sometimes agitated in a violent Manner; those Motions were call'd Prophesying which they exhibited, whether they were fill'd with a good or evil Spirit. [1 Sam. xviii. 10.] For Example, Saul being moved by an evil Spirit prophesy'd in his House; that is to say, he was agitated with Violence, as the Prophets were. To prophesy is also put for to sing, to dance, to play on Instruments. Thou shalt meet a Company of Prophets, says [1 Sam. x. 5, 6.] Samuel to Saul, coming down from the high Place, with a Psaltery, and a Tabret, and a Pipe, and a Harp before them, and they shall prophesy. And the Spirit of the Lord shall come upon thee, and thou shalt prophesy with them, and shalt be turned into another Man. We read in the Chronicles, that the Sons of [1 Chron. xxv. 1.] Asaph were appointed to prophesy upon Harps.

This Term is also used in St. Paul, for [1 Cor. xi. 4, 5. xiv. 1, 3, 4, &c.] explaining Scripture, speaking to the Church in publick; probably because they that exercised these Functions were look'd upon as replete with the Holy Ghost, and gave themselves Motions like those of Enthusiasts. The Scripture uses this Term in an extraordinary Sense, instead of saying, to work a Miracle, to raise the Dead. Thus it is said of the Bones of Elishah, that after his [Ecclus. xlviii. 13.] Death his Body prophesy'd, because they had restored a dead Person to Life, as if they had still been actuated by the Soul of this Prophet. Lastly, 'tis said, that the Bones of the Patriarch Joseph prophesy'd also after [Ecclus. xlix. 15.] his Death, because they were as a Pledge of the Promise he had made to his Brethren, that they should one Day be deliver'd from their Servitude in Egypt, and that they should be in Possession of the Land of Canaan.

The most usual Way by which God communicated himself to the Prophets was Inspiration, which consisted in illuminating the Mind of the Prophet, and exciting his Will to proclaim what the Lord dictated to him from within. 'Tis in this Sense that we acknowledge as Prophets, all the Authors of the Canonical Books of Scripture, both of the Old and New Testament. God also communicated himself to the Prophets by Dreams and nocturnal Visions. Joel promises to the People of the Lord, that their young Men should see Visions, and their old Men should have prophetick Dreams. St. Peter in the Acts fell into an Ecstacy at Noon-day, and had a Revelation concerning the Call of the Gentiles to the Faith. The Lord appear'd to Abraham, to Job, to Moses in a Cloud, and discover'd his Will to them. He has often made his Voice to be heard in an articulate Manner. Thus he spoke to Moses in the burning Bush, and upon Mount Sinai, and to Samuel in the Night. St. Austin acknowledges three Sorts of Prophets; those of the Jews, those of the Gentiles, and [Joel ii. 28. Acts x. 11, 12. Gen. xvi. 10. Job. xl. 1. Exod. xiii. 21, &c. Exod. iii. 2. 1 Sam. iii. 4. Aug. Præfat. in lib. 19. contra Faust.] those of the Christians. Those of the Jews are known: Those of the Gentiles are their Poets and their Divines; and those of the Christians are the Apostles, and Apostolical Men, of whom Jesus Christ has said;[1] Wherefore behold, I send unto you Prophets, and wise Men, and Scribes.

We have in the Old Testament the Writings of the sixteen Prophets; that is, of four greater Prophets, and twelve lesser Prophets. The four great Prophets are Isaiah, Jeremiah, Ezekiel, and Daniel. Baruk is commonly reckon'd with Jeremiah. The Jews do not properly place Daniel among the Prophets, because (they say) he lived in the Splendour of temporal Dignities, and in a kind of Life different from that of the other Prophets. The twelve lesser Prophets are, Hosea, Joel, Amos, Obadiah, Micah, Jonah, Nahum, Habakkuk, Zephaniah, Haggai, Zachariah, and Malachi.

This is pretty nearly the Chronological Order in which they may be ranged.

Hosea prophesy'd under Uzziah King of Judah, who began to reign in the Year of the World 3194; and under Jotham, Ahaz, and Hezekiah, Kings of Judah, and under Jeroboam II. King of Israel, and his Successors, to the Destruction of Samaria, which happen'd in the Year of the World 3283.

Amos began to prophesy in the twenty-third Year of Uzziah, and of the World 3219, and about six Years before the Death of Jeroboam II. King of Israel, which happen'd in the Year of the World 3220.

Isaiah began to prophesy at the Death of Uzziah, and at the Beginning of the Reign of Jotham King of Judah, in the Year of the World 3246. He continued to prophesy to the Reign of Manassah, which began in the Year of the World 3306. He caus'd Isaiah to be put to Death by sawing him with a Saw.

Jonah lived in the Kingdom of Israel under the Kings Joash and Jeroboam II. about the same time as Hosea, Isaiah, and Amos. Jeroboam II. died in the Year of the World 3220.

Micah lived under Jotham, Ahaz, and Hezekiah, Kings of Judah. Jotham began to reign in 3245, and Hezekiah died in 3306. Micah was contemporary with Isaiah, but began later to prophesy.

Nahum appeared in Judah under the Reign of Hezekiah, and after the Expedition of Sennacherib, that is, after the Year 3291.

Jeremiah began in the thirteenth Year of the Reign of Josiah King of Judah, in the Year of the World 3375, and Zephaniah prophesy'd about the same time. Jeremiah continued to prophesy under the Reigns of Shallum, Jehoiakim, Jeconiah, and Zedekiah, to the taking of Jerusalem by the Chaldeans, in the Year of the World 3416. 'Tis thought he died two Years after in Egypt, in 3418. Baruch was the Disciple and Amanuensis of Jeremiah.

Zephaniah appear'd at the Beginning of the Reign of Josiah, and before the twenty-eighth Year of this Prince, which is the Year of the World 3381; and even before the taking of Nineveh, which happened in 3378.

Joel under Josiah, about the same time as Jeremiah and Zephaniah.

Daniel was taken into Chaldea in the Year of the World 3398, which was the fourth Year of Jehoiakim King of Judah. He prophesy'd at Babylon to the End of the Captivity, which happen'd in 3468, and perhaps longer than that.

Ezekiel was carry'd Captive to Babylon along with Jeconiah King of Judah, in the Year of the World 3405. He began to prophesy in the Year 3409. He continued till towards the End of the Reign of Nebuchadnezzar, who died in the Year of the World 3442.

Habakkuk lived in Judea at the Beginning of the Reign of Jehoiakim, about the Year 3394, and before the coming of Nebuchadnezzar into the Country in 3398. He dwelt in Judea during the Captivity, and carry'd Food to Daniel in the Lyon's Den.

Obadiah lived in Judea after the taking of Jerusalem, which happen'd in 3414, and before the Desolation of Idumea, which happen'd (as we believe) in 3410.

Haggai was brought to Jerusalem in 3414; he return'd from the Captivity in 3468, and prophesy'd the second Year of Darius Son of Hystaspes, which was the Year of the World 3484.

Zachariah prophesy'd in Judea at the same time as Haggai, and he seems to have continued to prophesy after him. 14.

Malachi has not put any Date to his Prophecies. If he was the same as Esdras, as is very probable, he may have prophesy'd under Nehemiah, who return'd into Judea in 3550.

Under the several Articles of these Prophets, may be seen the Proofs of what is here advanced, and the Particulars of their Lives and Actions, of their Prophecies, their Characters, and Deaths.

Besides the Prophets we have now mentioned, there are found the Names of a great many more in the Scripture. Clemens Alexandrinus [Clem.Alex. Strom. l. 1. p. 145. seu 400. nov. edit Oxon. Potteri.] reckons up Thirty-five after Moses, and Five before him, which are Adam, Noah, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. He reckons five Prophetesses, which are Sarah, Rebeccah, Miriam the Sister of Moses, Deborah, and Huldah. Epiphanius[2] reckons up Seventy-three Prophets, and ten Prophetesses, in both the Old and New Testament. The Prophets are, 1. Adam. 2. Enoch. 3. Noah. 4. Abraham. 5. Isaac. 6. Jacob. 7. Moses. 8. Aaron. 9. Joshua. 10. Eldad. 11. Medad. 12. Job. 13. Samuel. 14. Nathan. 15. David. 16. Gad. 17. Jeduthun. 18. Asaph. 19. Heman. 20. Etham. 21. Solomon. 22. Abiah. 23. Shameah. 24. Oded. 25. Eli, the High-priest at Shiloh. 26. Joad. 27. Iddo. 28. Azariah. 29. Ananiah, otherwise Azariah. 30. Jehu. 31. Micaiah the Son of Imlah. 32. Elijah. 33. Uzziel.[3] [1 Kings xxii. 8.] b 34. Eliad. 35. Jesus Son of Hananiah. 36. Elisha. 37. Jonadab. 38. Zachariah otherwise Hananiah. 39. Another Zachariah. 40. Hosea. 41. Joel. 42. Amos. 43. Obadiah. 44. Jonah. 45. Isaiah. 46. Micah the Morasthite. 47. Nahum. 48. Habakkuk. 49. Obed. 50. Abdadon. 51. Jeremiah. 52. Baruch. 53. Zephaniah. 54. Uriah. 55. Ezekiel. 56. Daniel. 57. Esdras. 58. Haggai. 59. Zachariah. 60. Malachi. 61. Zachariah Father of John the Baptist. 62. Simeon. 63. John the Baptist. 64. Enoch. 65. Methusalah. 66. Lameel. 67. Balaam. 68. Saul. 69. Abimilech. 70. Amasa. 71. Zadok. 72. The anonymous Prophet that came to Bethel. 73. Agabus, mentioned in Acts xxi. 10. He might have added the Apostles, and particularly St. Barnabas, Simon Niger, Lucius of Cyrene, and Manahem, mentioned in the Acts xiii. 1, 2. And he might have omitted others, for Example, Ethan, who is the same as Jeduthun; Joad, Obed, Abdadon, all unknown, and Balaam, who was a wicked and false Prophet; and some others who hardly deserve to be put into the List of true Prophets.

The Prophetesses are 1. Sarah. 2. Rebecca. 3. Miriam the Sister of Moses. 4. Deborah. 5. Huldah. 6. Hannah the Mother of Samuel. 7. Judith. 8. Elizabeth. 9. Anna[4] the Daughter of Phanuel. 10. The Virgin Mary. To these may also be added the [Acts xxi. 9.] Daughters of Philip the Deacon.

The Hebrews in the Book Megillah, c. 1. acknowledge but Forty-eight Prophets, and seven Prophetesses. The Prophets are, 1. Abraham. 2. Isaac. 3. Jacob. 4. Moses. 5. Aaron. 6. Joshua. 7. Phinehas. 8. Elchanah. 9. Eli. 10. Samuel. 11. Gad. 12. Nathan. 13. David. 14. Solomon. 15. Iddo. 16. Micajah the Son of Imlah. 17. Obadiah. 18. Abijah. 19. Jehu Son of Anani. 20. Azariah Son of Oded. 21. Haziel Son of Matthaniah. 22. Eliazar Son of Dodo.

23. Hosea. 24. Amos. 25. Michah the Morasthite. 26. Amos (probably the Father of Isaiah.) 27. Elijah. 28. Elisha. 29. Jonah. 30. Isaiah. 31. Joel. 32. Nahum. 33. Habakkuk. 34. Zephaniah. 35. Jeremiah. 36. Uriah. 37. Ezekiel. 38. Daniel. 39. Baruch. 40. Neriah. 41. Seraiah. 42. Mahaziah. 43. Haggai. 44. Zechariah. 45. Malachi. 46. Mordecai. 47. Hanameel Father of Jeremiah. 48. Shellum the Husband of Huldah.

The Prophetesses are, 1. Miriam Sister of Moses. 2. Deborah. 3. Hannah the Mother of Samuel. 4. Abigail. 5. Huldah. 6. Esther. 7. The Midwives of Egypt, who preserved the First-born of the Hebrews.

After Malachi no Prophets were found in Israel as before; so that in the Time of the Maccabees, a when the Altar of Burnt-sacrifices was demolished, which had been prophaned by the Gentiles, the Stones thereof were set aside, till a Prophet should arise to declare what should be done with them. But in this Interval God did not desist from raising up inspired Writers, as the Authors of the Books of Esther, of Judith, of the Maccabees, of Wisdom, and of Ecclesiasticus, which the Christian Church has received into her Canon. 'Twas about the same time that the three Sects were form'd, the Essenians, the Pharisees, and the Sadducees, which afterwards became so famous among the Jews.

[Aug. l. 18. de Civit. c. 41.] The Prophets, according to St. Austin, were the Divines, the Philosophers, the Instructors, and the Guides of the Hebrew People in the Ways of Piety and Virtue, They generally lived retired from the People, in some Country Retreat, and in a sort of Community, where they and their Disciples were wholly employ'd in Prayer, in labouring with their Hands, and in Study. Their Habitations were plain and simple, which they built themselves, and cut down the Wood for this Purpose. Yet they exercised no Trade for Gain, nor did they undertake any Work that was too laborious, or inconsistent with the Repose that their Employment required. Thus Elisha [1 Kings xix. 20.] quitted his Plough, as soon as Elijah had called him to the prophetick Office. [Zech. xiii. 5.] Zechariah says, he is no Prophet, but an Husbandman. Amos says, he is no Prophet, but an Herdsman, and a Gatherer of [Amos vii. 14.] Sycamore-fruit.

Elijah was cloathed with Skins, and [2 Kings i. 8.] girded with a Girdle of Leather. Isaiah wore Sack-cloth, that is, a coarse rough [Zech. xiii. 4.] Habit, of a dark brown Colour, which was the ordinary Cloathing of the Prophets. Zechariah says, speaking of the false Prophets who imitated the true Prophets of the Lord, as to their Outside, that They should not wear a rough Garment to deceive. [Rev. xi. 3.] In the Revelations, the two Witnesses, thought to be Enoch and Elijah, are represented as cloathed in Sackcloth. Their Poverty is conspicuous in all their Actions. The Presents they received were only Bread, Fruits, and Honey, as being made to poor Men. The first Fruits of the Earth were given them, as being Persons that possess'd nothing themselves. [1 Sam. ix. 7, 8. 1 Kings xiv. 3. 2 Kings iv. 42.] The Woman of Shunem, that entertain'd Elisha, put into the Prophet's Chamber no Furniture but what was plain and necessary. The same Prophet refuses the rich Presents of Naaman, and drives away from his Presence Gehazi who had received them. [2 Kings iv. 10. 2 Kings v. 26. 2 Kings iv. 27.] Their Frugality appears through their whole History. 'Tis well known what is related of the wild Gourds, (Coloquintida) that one of the Prophet's caus'd to be boiled for the Refreshment of his Brethren. The Angel gave to Elijah only Bread and Water for a long Journey. [2 Kings iv. 38, 40. 1 Kings xix. 6. Bell & Dragon, 33. 1 Kings xviii. 7. Isai. viii. 3. Hosea i. 2, &c.] Habakkuk brought to Daniel nothing but Broth or Pottage. Lastly, Obadiah, the Governor of Ahab's Houshold, gave nothing but Bread and Water to the Prophets that he fed in the Caves.

All the Prophets were not Observers of a strict Continency; for Samuel had Children, and Isaiah had a Wife, who is call'd the Prophetess. Hosea received Orders to marry a Prostitute. But there were no Women or Wives in the Societies of the Prophets. Neither Elijah nor Elisha had any that we hear of, and we see with what Reserve the Woman that entertained Elisha accosted him and spoke to him; she speaks to him only by the Interposition of Gehazi; she dares not so much as enter in to him, or present herself before him. If in the Transport of her Affliction she would throw herself at the Feet of Elisha, Gehazi hinders her, and takes her away. The Prophets were often exposed to the Railleries, the Insults, the Persecutions, the ill Treatment both of Kings and People, whose Vices and Irregularities they undertook to reprove. St. Paul[5] St. Paul acquaints us, that many of them died by a violent Death. Others were tortured, not accepting Deliverance, that they might obtain a better Resurrection. And others had Trial of cruel Mockings, and Scourgings; yea, moreover of Bonds and Imprisonment. They were stoned, they were sawn asunder, were tempted, were slain with the Sword: They wander'd about in Sheep-skins and Goat-skins, being destitute, afflicted, tormented. (Of whom the World was not worthy.) They wander'd in Deserts, and in Mountains, and in Dens, and Caves of the Earth. Such were the Lives and the Deaths of the Prophets.

We shall not here enter into the Particulars of their Lives, because this is already done in their several Articles. The Reader may also see our Prefaces before each of them, and our general Preface upon the Prophets. Father Boulduc, a Capuchine, in his Book called Ecclesia ante legem, pretends, that the Prophetical Order began even before the Deluge; that then it was divided into several Branches, and that these different Orders composed the whole Ecclesiastical Hierarchy. Upon this Occasion he delivers many things that are very particular and extraordinary, and which certainly may be said to be very visionary. They that love such kind of Entertainment, may consult the Author himself.

Proselyte

PROSELYTE. This Term comes from [Πεοσήλυ -τος. גר Ger. נכר Necher.] the Greek Word Proselytos, which signifies a Stranger, one that comes from Abroad, or from another Place. The Hebrew Word Ger or Necher, has the same Signification. In the Language of the Jews they go by this Name, who come to dwell in their Country, or who embrace their Religion, though they are not Jews by Birth. In the New Testament they are call'd sometimes Proselytes, and sometimes Gentiles, fearing God, or Godly. Viri religiosi & timentes Deum.

[Acts ii. 5. x. 2, 22. xiii. 16, 50.] The Hebrews distinguish two Kinds of Proselytes. The first are called Proselytes of the Gate, and the others, Proselytes of Justice. The first are those that dwelt in the Land of Israel, or even out of this Country, and who, without obliging themselves to Circumcision, or to any other Ceremony of the Law, fear'd and worshipp'd the true God, observing the Rules that were imposed upon the Children of Noah, which we have already enumerated under the Article NOACHIDES. Of this Number was Naaman the Syrian, Nebuzardan General of Nebuchadnezzar's Army, Cornelius the Centurion, the Eunuch of Queen Candace, and some others, of whom mention is made in the Acts of the Apostles.

The Rabbins teach, that in order to make a Proselyte of Habitation, or of the Gate, he that would enter into this Engagement, [xi. 35, &c.] must promise with an Oath, in the Presence of three Witnesses, to keep the seven Precepts of the Noachidæ; that is, according to them, that Law of Nature to which all the Nations of the World are obliged, and the Observation of which might bring them to eternal Salvation. The Jews say, That the Proselytes of the Gate have ceased in Israel, ever since the Observation of the Jubilee has been left off, and that the Tribes of Gad, of Reuben, and of Manasseh, abiding on the other Side of Jordan, were led away Captive by Tiglath -pileser. But these Observations are not just, since we see many Proselytes in the Time of Jesus Christ, and that our Saviour reproaches [Matt. xxiii. 15.] the Pharisees with compassing Sea and Land to make a Proselyte, and after this, with making him a greater Sinner than he was before. And St. Luke in the Acts speaks of a great Number of Proselytes, and those that fear'd God, that were [Acts ii. 11.] then at Jerusalem, when the Holy Ghost descended upon the Apostles. I am apt to believe, that the greatest Part of these were Proselytes of Justice; but it cannot be deny'd but that some of them might be Proselytes of the Gate.

The Privileges of Proselytes of the Gate were, first, that by the Observation of the Rules of natural Justice, and by Exemption from Idolatry, Blasphemy, Incest, Adultery, and Murder, they might have Pretensions to eternal Life. Secondly, they might dwell in the Land of Israel, and have a Share in the outward Prosperities of the People of God. 'Tis said they did not dwell in the Cities, but only in the Suburbs and the Villages. But it is certain, that the Jews have often admitted voluntarily into their Cities, not only Proselytes of Habitation, but also Gentiles and Idolaters, as appears by the Reproaches they suffer'd on this account, through the whole Scriptures. In the time of Solomon there were in Israel One hundred Fifty-three thousand and Six [2 Chron. ii. 17, 18.] hundred of these Proselytes, whom this Prince compell'd to hew Wood, to draw and to cut Stones, and to carry Burthens for the Building of the Temple. These Proselytes were Canaanites, who had continued in the Country ever since Joshua's Time. [Deut. xiv. 21.] Moses forbad the Israelites to eat any Animals that died of themselves, or were strangled, so that the Blood remain'd in them, but order'd them to sell or give such Animals to the Strangers and Proselytes.

The Proselytes of Justice, are those that were converted to Judaism, who had engaged themselves to receive Circumcision, and to observe the whole Law of Moses. Thus were they admitted to all the Prerogatives of the People of the Lord, as well in this Life as the other. The Rabbins inform us, that before Circumcision was administred [Vide Seld. de Syned. l. 2. c. 2. art. 5.] ministred to them, and before they were admitted into the Religion of the Hebrews, they were examin'd about the Motives of their Conversion; to know whether their Change was voluntary, or whether it proceeded from any Reasons of Interest, Fear, Ambition, or such like. Maimonides assures us, that under the happy Reigns of David and Solomon, they received no Proselyte of Justice, because there was Reason to fear, that it was rather the Prosperity of these Princes, than any Love to their Religion, that made them Converts to Judaism. The Talmudists say, that Proselytes are as it were the Canker and Rust of Israel, and that too much Caution cannot be taken not to admit them too easily.

When the Proselyte was well proved and instructed, they gave him Circumcision; and when the Wound of his Circumcision was healed, they gave him Baptism, by plunging his whole Body into a Cistern of Water, by one only Immersion. This Ceremony being a judicial Act, was to be [Vide Seld. de Jure Nat. & Gent. l. 2. c. 2, 3.] perform'd in the Presence of three Judges, and could not be done upon a Festival Day. The Proselyte also caus'd Circumcision and Baptism to be administer'd to his Slaves, who had not yet compleated thirteen Years of Age. But those that were so old or older, could not be compell'd, but he must sell them to others, if they were obstinate in not embracing Judaism. As to Female Slaves, they were only to be baptized, if they would become Converts, if not, they were to be sold to others. The Baptism that a Proselyte had once received, was never repeated, neither in the Person of the Proselyte, though he should afterwards apostatize, nor in that of his Children, that should be born to him after Baptism, unless they were born from a Pagan Woman; in which Case they were to be baptized as Pagans, because they follow'd the Condition of their Mother. Partus sequitur ventrem.

Boys that had not yet compleated the twelfth Year of their Age, and Girls that had not arrived to their thirteenth Year, could not become Proselytes, till they had first obtained the Consent of their Parents, or in Case of Refusal, the Concurrence of the Officers of Justice. Baptism in respect of Girls, had the same Effect as Circumcision in respect of Boys. Each of them by means of this, received (as it were) a new Birth, so that those that were their Parents before, were no longer look'd upon as such after this Ceremony, and those that before were Slaves, now became Freemen. Children born before the Conversion of their Father had no Right to inherit. If a Proselyte died without having had Children after his Conversion, his Estate belong'd to the first Occupier, and not to the publick Treasury. When Proselytes became Jews, they received from Heaven a new Soul, and a new substantial Form. This is what the Rabbins teach concerning their Proselytes of Justice. They require three Things in a compleat Proselyte, which are Baptism, Circumcision, and Sacrifice;[1] but for Women only Baptism and Sacrifice. 'Tis thought that our Saviour made Allusion to the baptizing of Proselytes, when he [John iii. 5, 10.] told Nicodemus, that for those that would obey the Law, it was necessary they should be born again. Except a Man be born of Water, and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the Kingdom of God. And when Nicodemus appear'd surprized at this Doctrine, our Saviour says to him, Art thou a Master of Israel, and knowest not these Things? As though he would insinuate, that what he had now told him had nothing extraordinary in it, since the Baptism of Proselytes was a thing practised every Day in Israel.

[Deut. xxiii. 1, 2, 3, &c.] Moses in Deuteronomy, excludes certain Persons from the Privileges of the People of Israel, or, as he there speaks, from the Congregation of the Lord. Some for ever, and others only for a certain time. All Eunuchs, in whatsoever manner they became so, are excluded for ever. Bastards, or illegitimate Children were not to be admitted till after the tenth Generation. The Moabites and Ammonites were in the same Circumstances. He received the Egyptians and Idumeans after the second Generation. It was allow'd to these Persons to be converted to the Lord, and to become Proselytes, when they pleased. The Door of Conversion was always open to them. Johannes Hircanus Prince of the Jews,[2] compelled the Idumeans to be circumcised, and to embrace the Law of Moses; and from this time, says Josephus, they were look'd upon as Jews. Achior Prince of the Ammonites,[3] became also a Jew, without any other Preparation than that of being instructed in what he was to believe and observe in this Religion: Therefore the Power of being converted was not taken away from these Nations, but they were not admitted to Offices or Employments, to Dignities and the other external Prerogatives of the People of God, till after a certain time, and till they had given sufficient Proofs of their Perseverance in the true Religion.

The Hebrews believe, that the Populace of Egypt, that follow'd the Israelites, when they [Exod. xii. 38.] left that Country, vulgus promiscuum innumerabile ascendit cum eis, were all Converts and Proselytes of Justice: They [Exodus xviii. 10, 11, 12. Gen.xxxiv 14, 15.] will have it, that Jethro the Father-in- Law of Moses had also embraced their Religion. Jacob admitted the Shechemites for Proselytes, by only requiring that they should receive Circumcision. Some Rabbins inform us, that in the Time of Solomon they receiv'd the Gentiles to Judaism by Baptism only, because of the great Number that then became Converts. But others acquaint us, as before observed, that then they would admit of no Proselytes in Israel. If he that presented himself to be admitted as a Convert had already been circumcised, they contented themselves with just opening the Scar left after Circumcision, so as to draw a few Drops of Blood. As to the Sacrifices that the Proselyte was to offer, I observe, that Jethro the Father-in-Law [Exodus xviii. 12.] of Moses offered Burnt-Offerings and Peace-Offerings to the Lord. 'Tis said, that anciently the Proselytes offered for a Burnt-Offering a Sacrifice of large Cattle, or two Turtles, or two young Pigeons: But as now, for a long Time, the Jews have neither Temple nor Altar, they do not oblige their Proselytes to offer Sacrifices. Proseuche [Προσευχή, Oratio. Juvenal. Sat. 3. v. 296. In quâ te quæro Proseuchâ.] PROSEUCHE. The Word Proseuche is Greek, and signifies Prayer. It is taken for the Places of Prayer of the Jews, and was pretty near the same as their Synagogues. But the Synagogues were generally in the Cities, and were Cover'd Places; whereas, for the most part, the Proseuches were out of the Cities, and upon the Banks of Rivers, having no Covering, except, perhaps, the Shade of some Trees, or some cover'd Galleries. [Acts xvi. 12.] In the Acts, mention is made of the Proseuche of Philippi in Macedonia, which was out of the City. Maimonides says, That the Proseuches ought to be built in such Manner, that those that come into them, may turn their Faces towards the Temple of Jerusalem; Respect being had to the Situation of the Place and of the City where they were. The Author of the 3d Book of [3 Macc. cap. ult.] Maccabees often says, That the Jews of Egypt, being deliver'd from the Danger to which they had been exposed under Ptolemy Philopator, built a Proseuche near the City of Alexandria. St. Epiphanius [Epiphan, Hæres. 80.] says, That at two Miles from Shechem there was a Proseuche of the Samaritans, situate in a Plain, built in Form of a Theatre, and without a Roof; in which, (says Epiphanius) as well as [,משלי Mishle. Παραβολαί, Parabolæ.] in every thing else, they copy from the Jews. However, we must allow, that often Josephus and Philo confound the Proseuches with the Synagogues, and that they place them in the [1 Kings x. 1. Menander & Dius apud Joseph. Antiq. l. 8. c. 2.] Cities. See SYNAGOGUE.

Proverbs

PROVERBS. The Hebrews give the Name of Proverbs, Parables, or Similitudes, to moral Sentences, Maxims, Comparisons, or Enigma's, express'd in a Stile that is Poetical, figurative, close and sententious. The Hebrews call this Kind of Proverbs Mishle. Solomon says, That in his Time, Maxims of this Sort, were the chief Study of the Learned: A wise Man will endeavour (says he) to understand a Proverb, and the Interpretation; [Prov. i. 6. Ecclus. xxxix. 1, 2, 3.] the Words of the Wise, and their dark Sayings. And Jesus the Son of Sirach says, He will keep the Sayings of the renowned Men; and where subtil Parables are, he will be there also: He will seek out the Secrets of grave Sentences, and be conversant in dark Parables. The Queen of Sheba came from the utmost Parts of the Earth to see Solomon, to prove him, and to propose dark Riddles to him; Tentare eum in ænigmatibus. Hiram King of Tyre (they say) kept a Correspondence, by Letters, with Solomon, and proposed enigmatical Questions to him, and explain'd those that were proposed to him by Solomon. The ancient Sages of Greece had also this kind of Exercise in much Esteem. Cleobulus composed no less than three thousand Songs and [Diogen. Laert. in Cleobul. Eccles. xii. 9.] mysterious Sayings; and Cleobulina his Daughter writ enigmatical Verses.

The Proverbs of Solomon, are, without doubt, the most valuable Part of his Works: He tells us himself, they were the Fruits of his most profound Meditations, and of his most excellent Wisdom: Because the Preacher was wise, he still taught the People Knowledge; yea, he gave good Heed, and sought out and set in Order many Proverbs. In this Book we find Rules for the Conduct of all Conditions of Life; for Kings, Courtiers, Men engaged in the Affairs of the World; for Masters, Servants, Fathers, Mothers, Children. Some have doubted [Rab. & Grot. in Prov. 2 Kings xviii. 18.] whether Solomon alone was the Author of this Book: Grotius thinks this Prince took Care to have a Compilation made, for his own Use, of whatever was then excellent in Points of Morality, from all the ancient Writers of his own Nation; That under Hezekiah this Collection was enlarged, by adding whatever of this Nature had been written since Solomon; 'Twas Eliakim, Shebna, and Joah (says he) that compleated this Collection. But these Conjectures not being supported by any Proof, ought not to be of such Weight with us, as to make us depart from the Opinions of the Fathers and Interpreters, who ascribe this whole Book to Solomon.

True

[גם אלה לחכמים] True it is, we may there observe some Difference of Style and Method: For Example; the nine first Chapters, which have for their Title The Proverbs of Solomon, are written as a continued Discourse, and may be consider'd as a Preface to the whole Book; and to Chap. x. where we see the same Title again, the Style changes to short Sentences, which have little Connexion with one another, and which, generally, contain a kind of Antitheses. This goes on to Ver. 17. of Chap. xxii. Here we find a new Style to prevail, that approaches nearer to that of the nine first Chapters, and supports it self to Chap. xxiv. Ver. 23. where there is a new Title in these Words, Hæc quoque Sapientibus. This is still address'd To the Wise; or, Here are some farther Sayings of the Wise. Their Style is short and sententious. At the beginning of Chap. xxv. we read, These are also Proverbs of Solomon, which the Men of Hezekiah King of Judah copied out. And, doubtless, it was upon this Authority that Grotius has advanced, that this Collection was made by Eliakim, Shebna, and Joah, famous Men under the Reign of Hezekiah. This Collection goes on as far as Chap. xxx. 1. where we read thus; The Words of Agur the Son of Jakeh. Lastly, The Title of the xxxi. and last Chapter, is this; The Words of King Lemuel.

From all which, it seems certain, that the Book of Proverbs, in the State we find it at this Day, is a Collection of Part of the Proverbs of Solomon, compiled by several Hands. Wherefore we cannot conclude from hence, that this is not the Work of Solomon. This Prince being inspired of the Holy Ghost, [1 Kings iv. 32.] had composed no less than three-thousand Proverbs. Several Persons might have made Collections of them; Hezekiah, among others, as mention'd in Chap. xxv. Agur, Isaiah, Esdras might have done the same. From these several Collections the Work was composed, that we have now in our Hands. Nothing is more reasonable to be admitted than this Supposition. It is no-where here said, that Solomon himself had made a Collection of Proverbs and Sentences. The Title, Solomon's Proverbs, rather shews the Author, than the Compiler. The Rabbins generally [Vid. Zemach David, & Seder Olam. Rabba, c. 15.] maintain, That King Hezekiah, observing the Abuse that the People made of several of the Works of Solomon, chiefly of those which contained the Virtues of Plants, and Secrets of Natural Philosophy, he suppressed several of these Works, and only preserved those that are handed down to us.

No Doubt is made of the Canonicalness of The Book of Proverbs. We only know [Concil. C. P. iv. Collat. 4. Art. 63.] Theodorus Mopsuestensis among the Antients, and among the Moderns the Author of a Letter inserted among the Sentiments of some Divines of Holland, who have raised any Scruple about this Matter, and who have pretended that Solomon composed this Work by meer human Industry. The Greek Version of this Book is often very different from the Hebrew, and adds a great many Verses that are not found in the Original. The Roman Edition of the Greek transposes whole Chapters. For Example: After Chap. xxiv. ver. 22. it inserts the fourteen first Verses of Ch. xxx. Then it returns to Ver. 23. and the rest of Chap. xxiv. After which, it puts Ver. 15. and the rest of Ch. xxx. Then Ch. xxxi. and, lastly, Ch. xxv. and those that follow, as far as Chap. xxix. After which, is Chap. xxxi. Ver. 10. and the rest, which conclude the Book. I don't mention the lesser Transpositions which may be seen in the Body of the Book; nor is it known from whence these Irregularities have proceeded. In the ancient Latin Editions we see several Verses added, which have been left out from the Time of St. Jerom: Yet there still remain some, which have been mark'd and suppress'd in the first Tome of the new Edition of St. Jerom.

Providence

[Eccles. iii. 1, 19, 20. Joseph. Antiq. l. 3. c. 9. de Bello, l. 2. c. 12. p. 788.] PROVIDENCE. 'Tis a Tenet of the Christian and Jewish Religion, That God disposes and governs every Thing by his Providence; That this Providence is Eternal and Infinite; That it extends over all Things, even to the Hairs of our Heads, to the most minute Animals or Herbs of the Field. The Atheists, whose Sentiments are produced by Solomon, in his Book of Ecclesiastes, and the Sadducees who arose afterwards, deny'd this Providence: They maintain'd, That nothing happen'd to us, either by the Power of Fate, or by the Will of God; That God is incapable of doing or committing Evil; That we are the only Causes of our own Happiness or Misfortune, according to the good or ill Choice we make, in the Use of our Liberty.

[See Basnage's Hist. of the Jews, t. 4. l. 6. c. 13. Paris Edit.] But these Notions are rejected by the generality of the Jews; tho' they are not agreed among themselves, in the manner of explaining the Effects of Providence. Maimonides seems to think, That Providence does not act in the Moving of a Leaf, or in the Production of a Worm; but that whatever relates to the Production of Animals, or other Things of less Importance, is perform'd by Chance. Moreover, the generality of the Jews hold, That Mankind enjoys a perfect Liberty as to Good or Evil; and that whatever happens to him, is as a Recompence for his good Actions, and as a Punishment for his bad ones.

[Eccles. v. 7.] " Say not before the Angel, There is " no Providence; lest God should be provoked against you, and destroy all the " Works of your Hands." Thus speaks Solomon, in the Book of Ecclesiastes. Take care how you deny in secret the Being of Providence; your Angel will be a Witness of your most secret Thoughts, and God will punish you in his Anger. The Hebrew expresses this; Say not, before the Angel, It is a Fault of Ignorance: Why should you expose your self to the Anger of the Lord by your Words, and lose all the Labour of your Hands?

Provideo

PROVIDEO. This Word, which commonly signifies to provide, Deus providebit sibi victimam, is also used for, to foresee, to [Gen. xxii. 8. Gen. xli. 33. Psal. xv. 8. Rom. xii. 12. 2 Cor. viii. 21. Gal. iii. 8. Acts ii. 31.] seek, to prepare; Provideat Rex virum sapientem. Elsewhere it is taken for, to be attentive, to consider; Providebam Dominum in conspectu meo semper; I had God always before my Eyes. Elsewhere it is put for, to take care, to labour. We endeavour to do good, not only before God, but also before Men.; Providemus bona, non solùm coram Deo, sed etiam coram hominibus. Lastly, Provideo, is sometimes put for, to foresee, and to foretell; Providens autem spiritus sanctus. And elsewhere; David providens locutus est de resurrectione Christi.

Psalms

PSALMS. The Book of the Psalms, is call'd, in the Hebrew, a Sepher Tehillim, The Book of Hymns. In the Gospel it is named, sometimes, The Book of Psalms; and sometimes only, The Prophet, or David, from the Name of its principal Author. This Book is justly esteem'd as a kind of Abridgment of the whole Scripture: It contains, in short, whatever is found in the other sacred Books. Psalmorum liber quæcumque utilia sunt ex omnibus continet, says St. Austin. 'Tis a general Library, wherein we may meet with whatever is requisite for our Salvation, says [Cassiodor. Præf. in Psalm.] Cassiodorus; In hoc libro spiritualis Bibliotheca instructa est. The sacred History instructs [Ambros. Præf. in Psalm.] us, says St. Ambrose, the Prophecies declare what is to come, the Reproofs restrain the Wicked, the Morality persuades them; but the Psalms produce all these Effects. Agreeableness and Usefulness are there so happily mix'd, that it is not easy to decide which is most prevalent. Certat in Psalmo doctrina cum gratia simul. Hence proceeds that great Veneration that has always been given to the Psalms. 'Twas almost become a general Rule, That the Bishops, the Priests, and all religious Persons, were to have the Psalter by heart: The Church has made it a principal Part of her Service, and has obliged her Ministers to rehearse some Portions of it every Day.

The Hebrews commonly divide the Psalter into five Books; and several of the Fathers[1] admit of this Division, and think it very ancient. Eusebius says, It may be observ'd in the Hebrew Original, and in the best Editions of the Septuagint. St. Ambrose expressly refutes those who rejected this Division, and who thought it contrary to the New Testament, which quotes the Psalter only as a single Book. This last Reason was satisfactory to St. Hilarius[2], St. Jerom[3], and St. Austin[4], so as to cause them to give up this Division of the Psalter into five Books, as being contrary to Scripture. Modern Commentators are not more unanimous than the Antients upon this Point: Some think the Psalter was distributed into five Books by the same Authors that collected the Psalms; but Others will have this to be much more modern, and even since the Times of the Apostles. In Reality, this Dispute is of no great Consequence.

But what persuades us that this Distribution is very antient, and even from the Time of the first Authors that collected the Psalms into a Body, is, that at the End of each Book we read the same Conclusion, which seems to have been put there by Esdras, or by those that had the Care of collecting the sacred [Vid. Muis ad Psal. xl. The English Version follows the Distribution of the Hebrew.] Books after the Captivity of Babylon. This is certain, that neither the Jews nor Christians have ever reckon'd the Collection of Psalms but as one Book, in the Enumeration of the Books of Holy Scripture. The first Book of the Psalter, according to the Hebrews, ends at our fortieth Psalm. The second at the seventy-first. The third at the eighty-eighth. The fourth at the hundred and fifth. The fifth at the hundred and fifti-eth. The four first Books conclude with these Words, Amen, Amen, in the Hebrew, and with fiat, fiat, in the Latin. The fifth with Hallelujah both in the Hebrew and the Latin. The Number of Canonical Psalms has always been fix'd among the Jews, as also among the Christians, at one hundred and fifty; for the hundred and fifty-first, to be found in the Greek, has never been received as Canonical. But tho' the Number of the Whole has been agreed on, yet there is a Variety in their Distribution. The Jews make two of the ninth, and begin their tenth at these Words of Psalm ix. 22. Why standest thou afar off, O Lord? so that from this Place to Psalm cxiii. their Citations and Numbers are different from ours, and from those of the Greeks. They are always a Psalm before us, and that which is our nineteenth is their twentieth, and so of the rest. The Protestant Churches, following this Division of the Hebrews, quote the Psalms in like manner; which is necessary to be observed in reading their Books.

At Psalm cxiii. When Israel went out of Egypt, they recede still farther from us, for they divide this Psalm into two, and begin the cxiv. at these Words, Not unto us, O Lord. So that Psalm cxiv. according to the Greeks and Latins, is their cxvi. But afterwards they come nearer us again, by uniting Psalms cxiv. and cxv. together, so that they differ from us but by one as far as the cxlvi. And then uniteing again Psalms cxlvi. and cxlvii. they coincide with us, and continue to reckon with the Vulgate to the End of the Psalter.

There is also some Difference among the antient Greek and Latin Copies, about the Division of the first and second Psalm; some making but one of both, and others dividing them into two, as we do at this Day. 'Tis true in general, that the Division of the Psalter is not of that Antiquity that might be imagin'd, and that sometimes one is obliged, in order to pursue the Sense of some of the Psalms, to connect one to another, or to separate them, as the Matter requires. St. Hilarius affirms,[5] that in his Time the Distribution of the Psalms was not yet settled among the Hebrews, and that some divided them in one manner, and some in another. Origen makes the same Observation.[6] He says, that in the Hebrew the Psalms are mark'd by 1, 2, 3, &c. and in the Time of Kimchi, that is, in the twelfth Age, the Matter was yet undetermined.[7] In our Preface upon the Psalms, Art. II. and in the Commentary, it may be seen, that often several Psalms have been made of what ought to have been but one, by the Intention of the Author that composed them.

It is a Tradition among the Hebrews and Christians, that Esdras is, if not the only, yet the principal Author of the Collection of the Book of Psalms. Eusebius, St. Hilary, Theodoret, the Author of the Synopsis printed under the Name of St. Athanasius, venerable Bede, and several others impute this Honour to him. Philaster says, that [Philastr. hæres. 77.] wise Men of the Jewish Nation having collected them together, ranged them in the same Order that they had received from their Ancestors, who had preserved them from the Hands of their Enemies. Even before the Captivity there was a Collection of the Psalms of David, since Hezekiah, when [2 Chron. xxix. 25, 26, &c.] he restor'd the Worship of the Lord in the Temple, caus'd the Psalms of David to be sung there. In the Library that Nehemiah erected at Jerusalem, he caused the Psalms [2 Mac. ii. 13.] of David to be deposited.

Speculative Men have exercis'd themselves very much, upon the Order and Disposition that the Psalms ought to observe among themselves. They have discovered Mystery and Design, some in one manner and some in another. Some[8] have thought they could observe a Succession of the Events of the Life of David. Others have pretended, that Regard was had to the Order of the Solemnities that were celebrated in the Temple. St. Chrysostom observes, that generally speaking the first Psalms are upon Subjects of Sorrow, and the latter upon more joyful and comfortable Subjects. St. Austin acknowledges, that he could not yet discover the Mystery of the Disposition of the Psalms, but that it seems to him, that every fiftieth hath a Relation to the Vocation, the Justification, and the Glorification of the Saints; since the fiftieth relates to Repentance, the hundredth to Mercy, and the hundred and fiftieth to the Praise of God in his Saints. But St. Jerome observes, that it is impertinent to expect in the Psalter a chronological Series of Canticles, which have relation to certain Events of History, since it is not the Custom of the Authors of Lyricks to observe any such Order in their Compositions; and indeed, a very little Examination of the Text and Spirit of the Psalms may convince us, that those that undertook this Collection had no other Design, than to give us all these holy Canticles as they found them, with a religious and exact Scrupulosity, without putting themselves to the Trouble either of retrenching what had been already repeated, or of supplying what might seem deficient, or of connecting what had been separated, or of separating what had been improperly join'd together. They have left the Care of making these Observations to those that were to study the Letter of the Psalms. See our Preface to the Psalms, Art. III.

The Authority and Canonicalness of the Book of Psalms have always been acknowledg'd by both Jews and Christians. Philastius says, that the Nicolaites, the Gnosticks, and the Manichees deny'd that David was a Prophet, or that his Works were the Effect of the Inspiration of the Holy Ghost. Also some Anabaptists have deny'd the Inspiration of the Book of Psalms. But the general Sentiment of the Christian Church has always been, that all the hundred and fifty Psalms contain'd in the Psalter were the Work of the Holy Ghost. One thing only creates a Difficulty with some Persons of Piety, that in the Psalms we sometimes find a kind of Imprecation against the Wicked, and the Enemies of the Prophet. But the Fathers and Interpreters commonly explain these Passages, as if they were Predictions of those Calamities mities that were to befall them, or Wishes for their Conversion. As if it were said, that they should certainly perish, if they continued in their disorderly Courses; or, let them perish if they were not converted. St. [Chrysost. in Psal. cxxxvi.11.] Chrysostom says, that in these Passages the Psalmist does not so much deliver his own Sentiments, as those of others. St. Athanasius [Athan. Argumento in Ps. lxxii.] maintains, that he makes these Curses and Imprecations, not against Men his visible Enemies, but against the Devils which are his invisible Enemies. The Reader may see M. Bossuet, Bishop of Meaux, in his Preface to the Psalms, and our Commentary upon Psalm xxxiv. p. 373, 374.

Nothing can be a greater Argument of the Obscurity of the Book of Psalms, than the great Number of Commentaries that have been made upon them, and which are still made every Day, in order to explain [Bocchius in Psalm. p. 806. Draud. Bibliot. Class. p. 522, &c.] them. Bocchius and Draudius have reckon'd up above five hundred. Father Le Long of the Oratory, in the second Tome of his Bibliotheca Sacra, has enumerated as far as six hundred and thirty, without reckoning those which have wrote upon the Scripture in general, or those that have commented upon a Part of the Psalms only; so that if we would comprehend all these, it may be affirm'd, that above a thousand Writers have undertook to illustrate the Psalms. The Difficulty of succeeding in the Explication of these divine Canticles proceeds from several Sources. The first is, the Obscurity of the Hebrew Text. The second is, the Nature of the Style, which is very sublime, and at the same time very different from our manner. The third is, the Abstruseness of the Matter. The Hebrew Text of the Psalms is more obscure than that of the other Books of Scripture, as in general the Style of Poetry is more difficult than that of Prose. Besides, the Copyers having understood it less, and having oftner transcrib'd this Book, have occasion'd many Faults therein. We need but compare the several Manners in which the Seventy, the Syriack, and St. Jerome have translated this Text, with what we read at this Day, to perceive this Difference.

Men are agreed about the Authority of the Book of Psalms, and acknowledge the Authors to have been divinely inspired; but they are not agreed whether they are owing to one Author or to many, or who he was, or they were, who composed them. Some assert they all belong to David, which others again deny. St. Chrysostom, a St. Ambrose,[9] St. Austin,[10] Theodoret,[11] Cassiodorus,[12] Euthymius,[13] Philastrius,[14] and many of the Moderns, maintain, that David alone was the Author of them all. St. Hilary,[15] the Author of the Synopsis ascribed to Athanasius, and several others, pretend the contrary. The Reasons of each Opinion are to be discuss'd. Those that think David to have written the whole Psalter, rely upon these: 1. That in Scripture this holy King is marked out by his [2 Sam. xxiii. 1, 2.] Character of Psalmist of Israel. The sweet Psalmist of Israel said, The Spirit of the Lord spake by me, &c. 2. In all the Ceremonies wherein mention is made of Singers, or of Psalms, generally the Psalms of David are intended. Thus at the Dedication of the Temple of Solomon, the Levites rehearsed the Canticles that David had [1 Chron. xxiii. 5.] composed. When Hezekiah was about to restore the Worship of the Lord in the [2 Chron. xxix. 30.] Temple, he commanded the Levites to praise the Lord with the Words of David and of Asaph the Seer. Asaph was principal [Ezra iii. 10. Nehem. xii. 35, 39. 2 Macc. ii. 13.] Musician in David's time, to whom this Prince sent his Canticles, in order to be set to Musick by him, and to be sung by the Choir over which he presided. At the Dedication of the second Temple, after the Return from the Captivity, they sung the Praises of the Lord in the Canticles that David had composed. Nehemiah sets up the Psalms of David in the Library he had founded at Jerusalem. Jesus the Son of Sirach commends the Zeal of David, for having composed Hymns to be sung before the Lord. In the New Testament our Saviour [Ecclus. xlvii. 10.] and his Apostles always quote the Psalms by the Name of David's;[16] and make use of 'em as such, in the Presence of the Jews, who never contradicted them in this, though in every thing else they were ready enough to oppose them, and very glad to find Room for an Objection. Nor do they only quote under his Name such as bear the Title of David, but they cite others also under his Name, which have no particular Title; as the second Psalm quoted by St. Peter, Acts iv. 25.

But, 3. The antient, uniform, and constant Use of the Church, which gives to the Psalter the Name of the Psalms of David, is another Proof of the Persuasion propagated from the very Beginning, that this holy King and Prophet was the Author of these divine Canticles. Usus Ecclesiæ catholicæ spiritus sancti inspiratione, generaliter & immobiliter tenet, ut quicumque eorum Psalmorum cantandus fuerit, Lector aliud prædicare non audeat, nisi Psalmos David, says Cassiodorus. Philastrius has carry'd this Matter so far, that [Cassiod. Præf. in Psalmos. Philastr. hæres. 79.] he places those among Hereticks, who deny'd that David was the Author of all the Psalms. Perez[17] in his Commentary upon the Psalms asserts, that Josephus the Historian, Jonathan the Paraphrast, and all the antient Jews were persuaded, that David composed the whole Psalter; but that the Rabbins relinquish'd this Opinion, when they found themselves press'd hard by Origen, who assaulted them by Passages quoted from this very Book. But what could the Rabbins gain by denying David to have been the Author of the Psalms, since they acknowledg'd them all to have been inspired, and to have been the Work of some of the Prophets? In what remains to us of Origen, we cannot distinctly see what was his Opinion upon this Question; but Genebrard assures us, that the Talmudists and Rabbins commonly teach, that all the Psalms are not to be ascribed to David as their Author.

This is what has been advanced to prove, that David was the Author of the whole Psalter. But the contrary Opinion has been supported with good Arguments, and the Number of those that contend, that David has had Partners with him in this Honour, is not inferior to those of the Opinion now proposed. St. Hilary[18] says expressly, that the Psalms have for their Authors the Persons whose Names they bear in their Titles. Absurdum est Psalmos David dicere vel nominare, cum ibi Auctores eorum ipsis inscriptionum titulis commendantur. St. Jerome in his Letter to Sophronius, which is a Preface to the Psalter, says the same thing as St. Hilary; and in another Place he looks upon it as an Error to affirm, that all the Psalms are of David. Sciamus errare eos, qui omnes [Hieron. Ep. ad Cyprian. 139.] Psalmos David arbitrantur, & non eorum quorum nominibus inscripti sunt. We read in a Note upon the Title of the first Psalm, in the Commentary of St. Austin upon the Psalter, that all the Psalms are not David's. Non enim omnes Psalmi à David editi sunt. But the Learned think, that this Annotation does not belong to him, and that his true Sentiments are to be found in l. 17. c. 14. of The City of God, where he evidently declares himself on the Side of David, saying; Mihi credibilius videntur existimare, qui omnes illos centum & quinquaginta Psalmos ejus operi tribuunt.

The Greek Fathers are not less inclined to that Opinion, that several Authors were concerned in composing the Psalms, than the Latin Fathers were. St. Athanasius[19] disapproves the contrary Opinion. He reckons up but seventy-two Psalms that belong to David, and thinks that those without Titles are to be ascribed to the same Author as the Psalm aforegoing. In his Synopsis, if it be his Work, he says there are Psalms of Jeduthum, of Asaph, of the Sons of Korah, of Haggai, of Zechariah, and of Heman: That there are some which belong to all these Authors together, as those that have in the Title Hallelujah. He adds, that the Name of the Psalms of David was given to the Psalter, because he was the first Author of this kind of Works, he regulated the Order, the Seasons, and the Functions of some other Writers, whose Names are at the Head of some of the Psalms. Eusebius of Cæsarea ascribes to David only seventy-two of the Psalms.[20] He thinks the others belong to those whose Names they bear. The Sons of Korah composed eleven, Asaph twelve, Solomon two, Moses one, Ethan the Ezrahite one. He represents David to us in the Midst of a Band of inspired Musicians, singing alternately as the Holy Ghost inspired them, while all the rest, and even David himself, continued in Silence, contenting themselves to answer in the Chorus Hallelujah.

To these Authorities of the Fathers may be added the Suffrage of an infinite Number of modern Authors, as the Rabbins, and many Christian Commentators of all Communions, the greatest part of which acknowledge, that in the Psalter there are many Canticles that were written since David's time, and which carry in themselves the Marks of their Novelty; for Example, when they speak of the Captivity of Babylon, which happen'd long after the time of David. True it is, that the Titles of the Psalms are very antient; but there are many of them that have other Names besides that of David. We may conclude from thence, that at least at that time they were thought not to belong to David. And this Argument will have still more Weight with them, who contend, that the very Titles of the Psalms are owing to Inspiration, as we shall now see.

The Titles of the Psalms, are a Matter about which Interpreters have much exercis'd their Sagacity, and in which we have very little Light or Certainty. Some of 'em have a profound Respect for these Titles, and look upon them as making a Part of these divine Canticles. Others think they were added afterwards, and that they are of small Consideration. Some imagine these Titles to be, as it were, a Key to the Psalm, and that whoever could understand them well, might easily enter into the Sense of the Author. Others believe them of little Importance for the understanding of the Text, as having been added in After-times, and that very often at random. It is said again by others, that even allowing these Inscriptions might have been useful for the right understanding of the Psalms, yet we can have have but little Use from them, the greatest Part of 'em being now so obscure, that the most learned Interpreters dare not flatter themselves that they understand them, and own they contribute nothing to illustrate the Psalm. Parum est damni in hujus vocis (haggittith) ignoratione, cum illa, ut & aliæ similes, quæ passim occurrunt in titulis Psalmorum, ad argumentum & materiam carminis, [In Psalm viii. 1.] nihil prorsus pertineant, says De Muis, one of the most learned Commentators that we have upon the Psalms.

The Fathers are generally agreed as to the Obscurity of these Titles, but they have a far different Opinion of their Usefulness. Origen [Origen. edit. Huet. t. 1. p. 39.] delivers a Notion that he had learn'd from a Jew, about the Obscurity of the Scriptures in general, which will be very apposite to the Book of Psalms. The Scripture, said he, is like a vast and magnificent Building, wherein are many Apartments and Chambers, every one of which has its proper Key: But the Key that is found at every Door is not that which belongs to it. Often it is misplaced, and the Business is to find it out, and to distinguish it from many others. St. Austin says, that the Title declares the Subject of [Aug. in Psal. 139. p. 1552.] the Psalm. Tanquam præco Psalmi est titulus Psalmi. The Title of the Psalm and the Psalm itself, are two things that ought not to be separated, says St. Hilary, they mutually [Hilar. in Psal. cxix. Prolog. p. 367. n. 1.] support and assist each other. Cum sibi invicem auctoritatem præstent Psalmus & titulus, debilis erit sermo, si de aliquo eorum sine altero disseratur. The Title is the Key of the Psalm, says the Author of the Commentary upon the Psalms, printed under the Name of St. Jerome. As one cannot enter into the [Hieronym. Prol. in Psal.] House without the Key, so the Canticle cannot be understood except the Title be explain'd. Quid est titulus nisi clavis? In domum non ingreditur, nisi per clavem; ita & unius cujusque Psalmi intellectus per clavem, id est, per titulum intelligitur.

St. Austin gos still farther, for he looks [Aug. in Psal.lxiv. Angl. li.] upon these Titles as inspired, as well as the rest of the Psalm. Upon Psalm lxiv. whose Title is A Song of Jeremiah and of Ezekiel, &c. he says, We are here to acknowledge the Voice of holy Inspiration, by the Title of this Psalm. And elsewhere, speaking of the Title of the Fiftieth Psalm, which is, A Psalm of David, when Nathan the Prophet came unto him, after he had gone in unto Bath-sheba, he says, This is not to be found in the Body of the Psalm, but is read at length in the Books of the Kings: But both of these are divine Scripture. Utraque autem Scriptura canonica est. Theodoret[21] is still more express, for he says that these Titles were added by Esdras, who was inspir'd by the Holy Ghost; and [Bosuet in Psalmos. Dissert. de Psalm's. c. 6. p. 68.] that they were read and preserved by the Seventy Interpreters, who themselves had received Inspiration from Heaven, and who would not be forward to mingle the Notions of Men with the Words of the Holy Ghost. The Jews in their Synagogues chant the Titles of the Psalms, as well as the rest of Scripture, and the Rabbins expound them in their Commentaries. The Septuagint and St. Jerome have preserved them in their Translations, and in the sacred Texts. The greatest Part of both the Antients and Moderns have consider'd them as a Key to the Psalms. Without them how should we distinguish the Authors of each Psalm? M. Bosuet Bishop of Meaux, says positively, that they were put at the Head of the Psalms by the Inspiration of the Holy Ghost, to point out to us the Author and Subject of every one of these divine Canticles; and that we ought not to separate the Inscriptions of the Psalms from the Body of the Scriptures, since they are read in a continued Order, and without Distinction, not only in the Hebrew Text, but in all the Versions. For the same Opinion, the Reader may consult M. Du Pin, in his Preface to the Psalms, Article the Third.

But I think this is carrying the Matter too far, to maintain that all the Titles of the Psalms in general are Canonical and from Inspiration. Many Catholick Divines[22] have positively asserted, that the greatest Part of them are of no Use for the Explanation of the Psalm. The Fathers, and among others, St. Austin, Hilary, Theodoret, Cassiodorus, have acknowleged, that often these Titles have no relation to the Body of the Psalm, and that in the Place they were put they contributed nothing to the Sense. The Catholick Church has never made any Injunction that they should be sung in her Office, nor has ever determin'd them to be Canonical. For it is agreed, that the Council of Trent, by declaring the Text of the Latin Vulgate to be Canonical and Authentick, has never pretended to receive into the Canon all the Titles of the Holy Books. The Septuagint, and the other later Greek Translators, have added Titles to some of the Psalms which have none in the Hebrew. If the Titles of the Psalms had been look'd upon as Canonical, would any body have been permitted to meddle with them, to alter them, to suppress them, to add to them? Which of the Commentators is there, whether Jew, Catholick, or Protestant, who thinks it incumbent upon him to follow the Title of the Psalm in his Commentary? And yet both Jews and Christians receive the Psalms as holy Writ.

And

And therefore in this Question we should observe a due Medium. 1. To treat the Titles of the Psalms with great Respect, because there are,doubtless, a great Number of them that are authentick. 2. To acknowledge such as are derived from the first Authors, from the antient Prophets, or, lastly, from Esdras, to be canonical and inspired. 3. That those which have been added, either before or after Esdras, by Jews not inspired, or by the Greeks; also those that are apparently against History, or contrary to the Spirit of the Psalm, deserve no particular Consideration on their own Account. 4. Lastly, that the Fathers themselves, who seem to have thought them to be canonical and inspired, are to be understood to speak of those that were in the original Text, and written by the Hand of Esdras, or of the antient Prophets; for as to the rest, they make no Difficulty to give them up, as may be seen in Theodoret upon several Occasions. The Reader may see our Dissertation upon the Titles of the Psalms, Pag. xxix. xxx. wherein we examine this Question at length. See also Father Alexander, Hist. v. Test. Dissert. 24. Quæst. 1. Art. 1.

According to the Titles of the Psalms, as they are found in our Bibles, there are seventy-two that bear the Name of David; fifty that are without the Name of their Author; but the Rabbins hold, that they are to be referr'd to that Author, whose Name is immediately before: And this Tradition of the Jews is related and received by Origen, by St. Jerom, by Eusebius, by Hilary, and Athanasius. a Psalms ascribed to the Sons of Korah, are xli, xliii, xliv, xlv, xlvi, xlvii, xlviii; as also lxxxiii, lxxxiv, lxxxvi, lxxxvii.

Ascrib'd to Solomon, the lxxi. Deus judicium tuum Regi da. And cxxvi. Nisi Dominus ædicaverit domum.

Imputed to Ethan, the lxxxviii. Misericordias Domini in æternum cantabo.

To Jeduthun, the lxxvi. Voce meâ ad Dominum clamavi.

To Moses, the lxxxix. Domine, refugium factus es nobis.

To Asaph, the xlix. Deus Deorum Dominus locutus est.

The lxxii. Quàm bonus Israel Deus. The lxxiii. Ut quid, Deus, repulisti in finem.

The lxiv. Confitebimur tibi Deus. Also the lxxv, lxxvi, lxxvii, lxxviii, lxxix, lxxx, lxxxi, lxxxii, lxxxiii.

Ascribed to Adam, the xci. Bonum est confiteri Domino.

To Melchisedech, the cix. Dixit Dominus Domino meo, Sede à dextris meis.

To Jeremiah and Ezekiel, the lxiv. Te decet hymnus.

To Jeremiah, the cxxxvi. Super flumina Babylonis. Which is also ascribed to David.

To Haggai and Zechariah, the cxi. Beatus vir qui timet Dominum. And the cxlv. Lauda, anima mea, Dominum.

Besides the hundred and fifty Psalms now mention'd, and which are receiv'd as Canonical, there is one more which is not in the Canon, and which is to be found neither in the Hebrew, nor in the Chaldee, nor in the Vulgate; but it is read in the Syriac, in most of the Greek Copies, in the Arabick, in the Anglo-Saxon Version, in the Books of the Prayers of the Greeks. St. Athanasius[23], Euthymius[24], Vigilius of Thapsus[25], the Author that interpolated the Epistles of St. Ignatius[26], make mention of it, and quote it. St. Chrysostom alludes to it, in his seventeenth Homily to the People of Antioch. Its Title is, A Psalm of Thanksgiving of David, when he had overcome Goliah. It begins thus; I was the least of my Brethren, and the youngest of the House of my Father, and I fed my Father's Sheep, &c. We have given it in Latin and French, with an Explication, at the End of our Commentary upon the Psalms.

[Joseph. Christian. in Hypomnest. M.S. l. 2. c. 120. Mich. Glycas Annal. par. 2. p. 182.] The Author of the Synopsis attributed to St. Athanasius, says, That David had composed three thousand Psalms, out of which Number King Hezekiah selected one hundred and fifty, and suppress'd all the rest. He quotes this, as taken out of the Chronicles, where we read nothing like it. A Greek Author call'd Josephus Christianus, says the same thing, and quotes it as in the Chronicles. Michael Glycas cites Psellus, who says the same thing, and he seems to believe it himself: He adds, That after the Captivity, Esdras selected the hundred and fifty Psalms which we find in our Bibles, out of three hundred, or more, which he had before him. The Author of the Syriac Version says, That some add twelve Psalms to the End of the Psalter; but he rejects them as useless, and without Authority.

Psalms of Solomon; or, The Psalter of Solomon. See the Title SOLOMON.

Psalms of Degrees. This Name is given to fifteen Psalms of the Psalter, which are the cxix. and all that follow to the cxxxiv. inclusive. The Hebrew Text calls them,[27] A Song of Ascents: The Chaldee, A Song that was sung upon the Steps of the Abyss. This Explication is taken from the Tradition of the Hebrews, which relates, That when they were laying the Foundations of[28] the Temple, at the Return from Babylonish Captivity, there came out of the Earth such a prodigious Quantity of Water, that it rose to the Height of fifteen Cubits; and that it would have drowned the whole World, if Achitophel, the famous Achitophel who hang'd himself in the Time of David, about five-hundred Years before, had not stopt its Progress, by writing the ineffable Name of Jehovah upon the fifteen Steps of the Temple. To the same Event they refer Psalm cxxix. De profundis clamavi, &c. which is one of the Psalms of Degrees. This is what the Jews say about them. Junius and Tremellius translate the Hebrew by, A Song of Excellencies; or, An excellent Song: Which Translation is not disapprov'd by De Muis, and by other skilful Interpreters. But the common Translation, or Psalms of Degrees, has more generally obtain'd.

But whence have they this Denomination? The Interpreters think, 'twas because they were sung upon the fifteen Steps of the Temple. They are not agreed about the Place where these Steps were. Some think them to be without this holy Place; Others, at its Entry. Others think them to be the fifteen Steps mention'd by Josephus, to ascend from the Inclosure of the Women in the great Court. Lastly; Others will have them to be the Steps by which they ascended from the Court of the Priests, to the Porch which was before the holy Place. But it cannot be proved, neither from Josephus, nor from Scripture, that the Steps of the Porch, or of the Gates of the Temple, or those without the Temple, were just fifteen [Ezek. xl. 22,26,31, 37,49.] in Number. We see, by Ezekiel, that one had eight, and the other had seven Steps. Besides, we do not find, by any Passage of Scripture, that the Levites sung upon the Steps of the Temple; their Place was round about the Altar of Burnt-Offerings, in the Court of the Priests.

Some have thought, that these were call'd Psalms of Degrees, because they were sung in a Gallery, which was in the Court of Israel [Ezra ix. 4.] , where, sometimes, the Levites read the Law. But we do not find, by any Passage of Scripture, that Singers were placed in this Gallery, or that they sang these Psalms in particular. The Author of the Commentary upon the Psalms, printed under the Name [Pseudo-Hieron Exposit. 2. in Psal. cxix.] of St. Jerom, says, that in the Temple there were several Degrees of Dignity among the Priests and the Levites. This is true: But it is not any-where said, that these Degrees were fifteen. There were assuredly four and twenty sacerdotal Families, and as many of [Saadias, Hammond, Gataker, Vatab. Du Pin, Ainsworth] the Levites. But what does all this make for the fifteen Psalms of Degrees? Some Rabbins, and a good Number of Commentators, translate the Hebrew by Psalms of Elevation; because (they say) they were sung with an exalted Voice, or because at every Psalm the Voice was raised.

But, no longer to multiply Conjectures in this Matter, I shall now produce my own Hypothesis. I translate the Hebrew by A Song of Ascent, or, of the Coming up of Israel from the Captivity of Babylon. The Scripture commonly applies the Phrase, to ascend, to express this Return. Cyrus, in his Proclamation in Favour of the Jews, says, [Ezra i. 3, 5. & ii. 2. & vii. 5, 6.] Who is there among you, of all his People? His God be with him, and let him go up to Jerusalem. And a good Number of Persons presented themselves to go up, says Ezra. [Ezra i. 11. & ii. 1.] And Shesh-bazzar brought up with them of the Captivity, that were brought up from Babylon to Jerusalem. Now these are the Children of the Province, that went up out [Ezra vii. 6, 7, 9.] of the Captivity. This Ezra went up from Babylon. And there went up some of the Children of Israel. For upon the first Day of the first Month was the beginning of the going up from Babylon. In Psalm cxxi. which is one of the Psalms of Degrees, it is said, whither the Tribes go up (to Jerusalem.) Lastly; Jeremiah, foretelling the Return [Jer. xxvii. 22.] from the Captivity, says, Then will I bring them up, and restore them to this Place. [Ezekiel xxxix. 2.] Ezekiel expresses himself in the same manner. [Joseph. de Bello, l. 1. c. 14. in

Græco, p. 917.]

All these Expressions sufficiently shew, that the Hebrews commonly made use of the Term to go up, when they spoke of their journeying from Babylon to Jerusalem; because Babylon was situated in a Plain, and Jerusalem in a mountainous Country. Therefore, it is very natural to call those Psalms of Ascent, which were composed on the Occasion of the Deliverance from the Captivity of Babylon, whether it were to implore this Deliverance from God, or to return Thanks for it after it had happen'd; and this is what is really observed in those Psalms. They have all some Relation to this great Event. They make mention of it in several Places; and the greatest Part of 'em cannot be otherwise explain'd. This alone wou'd suffice to determine us to explain in this Sense the Term Psalm of Degrees, or, of Ascent. We need not exhibit here a great Number of Passages taken out of these Psalms, to prove the Truth of what we advance; to open the Psalter only, is enough to convince any one. See our Dissertation, which serves as a Preface to the Psalms of Degrees.

Acrostick Psalms. These are Psalms, that, in the Hebrew, begin every Verse, or half Verse, with a Letter of the Alphabet, ranged according to the Order of the Alphabet. These Psalms are,

Psalm xxv. Ad te, Domine, levavi animam meam.

The xxxiv. Benedicam Dominum in omni tempore.

6 D

The xxxvii. Noli æmulari in malignantibus.

The cxi. Confitebor tibi, Domine, in toto corde meo.

The cxii. Beatus vir qui timet Dominum.

The cxix. Beati immaculati in via. The cxlv. Exaltabo te, Deus meus Rex.

Psaltery

PSALTERY, Psalterion, or Psalterium. The first of these two Words is Greek, and the other Latin, each of 'em signifying either the Psalter, or Book of Psalms; or else, an Instrument of Musick, call'd the Psaltery. As to the Psaltery, or Instrument of the ancient Musick, of which mention is sometimes made in Scripture, we think it answers to the Hebrew Word Nebel,[1] which the Septuagint generally translate by Psalterion, or Nablon. 'Twas an Instrument of Wood, having Strings, and which was made use of, with other Instruments, in the Solemnities and Ceremonies of Religion[2]. It should seem, by some Passages of the Psalms, that the Nebel [Psal. xxiii. 2. & cxliv. 9.] was the same as the Decachord, or Instrument of Ten Strings, call'd in Hebrew Gnashur; but in other Places it is sufficiently distinguish'd from it: Upon an Instrument of [Psal. cxii. 3.] ten Strings, and upon the Psaltery; or upon the Nebel and the Gnashur.

Certain it is, that these two Instruments had a great Conformity to each other. The ancient Nablium was very near of the Figure of a Delta Δ, according to Saint Jerom, Cassiodorus, and Isidorus, having a hollow [Hieron. in Psal. xxxi, cxlix, cl. Cassiod. Præf. in Psalm. Basil. in Psal. 1. Aug. in Psal. xxxii. Hilar. Prolog. in Psalm.] Belly above, and strings stretch'd from Top to Bottom over-against this Cavity, which makes them give a Sound, when touch'd by the Finger or the Bow. The Difference observ'd by St. Basil, St. Austin, St. Hilary, and those above cited, between the Psalterion and the Cithara, is, that the Psaltery was play'd upon below, and gave its Sound above; whereas the Cythara was play'd upon above, and founded below.

These Instruments approach'd very near to our Harp. Ovid says, that the Nablium was play'd upon with both Hands. [Ovid. l. 3. de Arte. Antiq. l. 8. c.2. p.262.] Disce etiam duplici genialia nablia palmâ Plectere, conveniunt dulcibus illa modis.

Josephus says, that the Nablia of the Temple of Jerusalem were made of a precious Metal call'd Electrum; but the Books of 1 Kings x. Kings and the Chronicles expresly shew, [12. 2 Chron. ix. 11. Joseph. Antiq. l. 7. c. 10.] that Solomon made them of Almugim or Algumim-wood, which is a Sort of Wood unknown to us. The same Josephus says, in another Place, That the Nablium had [Aristor. apud Scalig. Poetic. l. 1. c.48. Juba apud Athen. l. 4. c. 25.] twelve Strings, and that it was touch'd with the Fingers. Aristotle speaks of a Triangular Psaltery, the Strings of which were all equally distended. Juba, in Athenæus says, That Alexander of Cythera added several Strings to the Psaltery, and laid it up in the Temple at Ephesus, as the Master -piece of his Industry.

The modern Psaltery is a flat Instrument, of a Triangular Form: It is strung with three Rows of Strings, of Iron or Brass Wire, tuned to an Unison or to an Octave, raised upon two Bridges which are on the two Sides; these Strings are extended from Side to Side, and are play'd upon by a kind of Bow. Thus is this Instrument very different from the ancient Psaltery.

Ptolemais (I)

[Stephen. in Ethnic. Ptolemais. Vide & Etymolog. mag. Vide, si lubet, Reland. Palæst. l. 3. p. 538. Judg. i. 31.] I. PTOLEMAIS, a City of Phœnicia, upon the Mediterranean Sea, having Mount Carmel to the South, being a considerable Sea Port. Its antient Hebrew Name is Accho. See Judges i. 31. The Greeks have given it the Name of Ake, and we have already spoke of it under the Name Accho. The Greeks not knowing that Accho was a Hebrew Word, have derived Ake from the Verb Akeomai, which signifies to cure or heal; imagining that it took this Name, because Hercules had been cured here of the biting of a Serpent. The River Belus or Beleus, falls into the Mediterranean near Ptolemais. See BELUS. I have not found who the Ptolemy was, that gave his Name to this City. It afterwards became a Roman Colony under the Reign of Claudius, and there are several antient Medals that prove it a Roman Colony. The Christians that undertook the Expedition of the Holy War, gave it the Name of Akre, or of St. John of Acre. The Arabians at this Day call it Acca. This City was assign'd by Joshua to the Tribe of Ashur, who did not drive out the Inhabitants. Ummah, an unknown City mentioned in Joshua xix. 30. might well be Accho, which the Transcribers have changed to Ummah.

The Crusado's gave the Name of St. John of Akre to this City, because of a magnificent Temple, which was there dedicated to St. John. This City is built in a triangular Form, wash'd by the Sea to the West and South, surrounded by two strong Walls Walls towards the Land, at about fifty Paces from each other, and fortify'd by a great Number of Towers at equal Distances. On the first Wall towards the East was a Tower larger and stronger than the rest, call'd the King's Tower; and at the middle Angle was such another Tower, which was always call'd the cursed Tower. And it proved its Right to this Name; for it was by this that the Saracens enter'd the City, and took it, as was observed at that time. Juste proinde maledicta vocata est Turris illa, qua maledicta gens Saracena subintravit, anno 1291, & qui illi nomen imposuit, eventum tam diri infortunii nesciens quid diceret, prophetavit. This was the last City that the Christians had possession of in Syria. The Sultan of Egypt, Elpy, sirnamed Melle-messor, having besieged it in 1291, with Sixty thousand Horse, and an Hundred thousand Foot, the Knights of St. John of Jerusalem defended it bravely; but at last they were forced to give Ground; it was taken and almost destroy'd.

Ptolemy (I)

I. PTOLEMY, Son of Lagus, sirnamed Soter, or Saviour, after the Death of Alexander the Great, brought the Body of this Prince into Egypt,[1] in order to be interr'd at Alexandria. In the Distribution of Alexander's Conquests among his Generals, the Government of Egypt fell to Ptolemy. He at first contented himself with the Title of Governor, nor took upon himself the Title of King, till after the Death of all of Alexander's Race. Yet he manag'd the Minds of the People of Egypt, and of the neighbouring Princes, with a View of laying a solid Foundation for his future Power. Some Years after he was settled in Egypt,[2] he bethought himself of reducing Phenicia and Cele-syria. At first he endeavoured to corrupt Laomedon with Money, who govern'd those Provinces under Antipater and Perdiccas. But not succeeding this Way, he sent one of his Generals named Nicanor into this Province, who took Laomedon, and in a little time made himself Master of Cele-syria and Phenicia.

Ptolemy himself marching into Judea, enter'd into Jerusalem, while the Jews were in no other Concern but to observe the Sabbath.[3] Appion says, That having brought the City into Subjection, he demolish'd its Walls; and Josephus from Aristeus adds, That this Prince carried away about One hundred thousand Jews from Palestine into Egypt, out of which Number he chose about Thirty thousand, and incorporated them into his Armies, putting them into his Garrisons, [Appian. Syriac. p. 119, 121. Joseph. Antiq. l. 12. c. 2. ex Aristæa hist. 70. Interp. Vid. Just. l. 16. Pausan. in Atticis. Lucian. in longævis.] as knowing that the Jews were very religious Observers of their Fidelity. He gave up the rest to his Soldiers, that they might make Slaves of them for their necessary Occasions. From hence proceeds that great Number of Jews, that were afterwards to be found in Egypt, Libya, and the Cyreniaca.

Two Years before his Death,[4] and at the Beginning of the thirty-ninth Year of his Reign, Ptolemy, the Son of Lagus, associated with him in the Kingdom his Son Ptolemy Philadelphus, whom he had by Berenice, after which he reign'd two Years along with him. Justin affirms, That Soter not only associated his Son with him in the Throne, but reduced himself to the Quacity of one of Philadelphus's Guards, judging it to be more glorious to be the King's Father, than to be King himself. Pater ei regnum non tantum publice tradidit, sed etiam privatim officium Regi inter satellites fecit; omni regno pulchrius Regis esse Patrem dicens. We are assured, that Demetrius Phalereus had advised him to leave his Kingdom, not to Ptolemy Philadelphus Son of Berenice, but to the Son of Euridice: And this was the Reason that afterwards Philadelphus sent Demetrius into Banishment. See hereafter the Article of the SEVENTY INTERPRETERS. Ptolemy Son of Lagus, died two Years after he had associated his Son with him in the Kingdom, in the Year of the World 3721, before Christ 279, before the vulgar Era 283, in the fortieth Year of his Reign.

Ptolemy Philadelphus (II)

[Just. l. 16. c. 2.] II. PTOLEMY PHILADELPHUS, Son of Ptolemy Soter, whom we have now discoursed of, was associated in the Kingdom from the Year of the World 3719. Justin even affirms, that his Father Ptolemy intirely quitted to his Son, and esteem'd it as a sufficient Honour to become one of his Life-Guards. But other Historians think, he continued to reign with Philadelphus to the Year 3721, which was the Year of his Death, and the first of the Reign of Philadelphus. This Prince was sirnamed Philadelphus,[1] Philadelphus, that is, a Lover of his Brethren, probably by way of Irony; for upon several Pretences, he caus'd two of his Brothers to be put to death. The younger was called Argeus, and was Son of Berenice as well as himself, and the other was Son of Eurydice. [Pausan. in Atticis, p. 6.] He was one of the most powerful Princes that ever reign'd in Egypt. But nothing gave a [Vid. Hier. in Dan. xi.] greater Lustre to his Reign than his Love for Learning, the Library he founded at Alexandria, and the Version of the Septuagint, which 'tis said he procured to be made. Epiphanius affirms, he began this Undertaking [Epiphan. lib. de pond. & mentur.] of the Version of the Septuagint in the seventh Year of his Reign, in the Year of the World 3727, before Christ 273, before the vulgar Era 277. We have spoken at length of this Translation under the Article of the SEVENTY INTERPRETERS, where we have shewn that what is related concerning it, is at least very doubtful, not to say worse of it. But though we retrench such of the Circumstances of this History, as are plainly fabulous, yet we adhere to the main Part of the Story, which is, that under the Reign of this Prince the Jewish Scriptures were translated out of Hebrew into Greek, either in whole or in part; or, that the Jews of Egypt then translated the Pentateuch at least, for the Use of such among them as could no longer understand the Hebrew or the Chaldee. The Authors may be consulted, who have expresly treated of these Matters.

The Antients[2] are all unanimous in their Testimonies, concerning the Affection that Ptolemy bore for the Sciences, and the Care he took to collect Books and to erect a copious Library; but no other than the false Aristæus, and such as have followed him, have affirmed that Demetrius Phalareus was his Librarian. We have already seen in the History of Ptolemy the Son of Lagus, that this Philosopher was not in favour with Philadelphus, but had been banished by him; and 'tis known he was accessory to his own Death, by causing himself to be bit by an Asp, not being able to support the Tiresomness of his Banishment. Vitruvius mentions Aristophanes, and Suidas [Diogen. Laert. in Demet. l. 5. seg. 78, 79. Cicero pro Rab. &c.] speaks of Zenodotus, who were Library-keepers to Philadelphus, at the Alexandrian Library. Aristæus is the only original Author who assigns this Employment to Demetrius. Josephus allows Philadelphus thirty-nine [Joseph. Antiq. l. 12. c. 2.] Years of Reign, Clemens Alexandrinus thirtyseven, and Ptolemy, Porphyrius, and Eusebius, but thirty-eight. Usher thinks he reigned in all eight and thirty Years, and about eight Months. He fixes his Death in the Year of the World 3758, before Christ 242, before the vulgar Era 246. He had for Successor his Son Ptolemy sirnamed Euergetes, or the Benefactor, Son of Arsinoe, who was the Daughter of Lysimachus. Philadelphus had also a Daughter called Berenice, whom he married to Antiochus Theus, King of Syria, as will be seen in the following Article.

Ptolemy Euergetes (III)

[See St. Jerome upon Daniel Ch. xi.] III. PTOLEMY EUERGETES, or the Benefactor, Son of Ptolemy Philadelphus, ascended the Throne of Egypt in the Year of the World 3758, before Christ 242, before the vulgar Era 246. His Father Ptolemy Philadelphus, for a long time having had War with Antiochus Theus, at last made Peace with him, and gave him his Daughter Berenice in Marriage,[1] and in the mean while his Wife Laodice was alive, by whom he had had two Children. This Marriage was celebrated with extraordinary Magnificence, and Philadelphus gave his Daughter so much Gold and Silver to her Portion, that she was thence call'd Phernophoros, or the Dowry-bringer. But this Alliance did not prove happy. Antiochus was poisoned by his Wife Laodice, who likewise gave Orders, that Berenice and the young Son she had by Antiochus, should be killed also. In [Appian. Syriac. p. 130. Hieronym. in Dan. xi. Joseph. contra Ap. l. 2. p. 1064.] the mean time Philadelphus died, and Euergetes being informed of the Danger his Sister was in, who had betaken herself to the Asylum of Daphne, made haste into Syria with an Army to her Assistance: But he came too late, for Berenice and her Son were assassinated. But such a Number of the Cities of the Kingdom of Syria submitted themselves to the Government of Euergetes, that he thereupon found himself the most powerful King of the East. Josephus says, That when this Prince came to Jerusalem, he there offered Sacrifices to the Lord, as a Thanksgiving for the many Successes he had received from him. Concerning this, See Dan. x. 5, 6. and St. Jerome upon this Passage of Daniel.

[Galen. Comment. 2. in Hipp. l. 3. Epid.] Euergetes did not less distinguish himself for his Love of Books and Learned Men, than his Father had done. Galen assures us, that this Prince caused exact Copies to be taken of all the Books that came to his Knowledge, and which deserved any Consideration. No sooner did any Ship arrive at Alexandria, but he caused all the Books therein to be brought to him, of which he took Copies and returned them to the Owners, setting up the Originals in his Library. Having once borrowed of the Athenians the Works of Euripides, Sophocles, and Eschylus, with a Promise of returning them again as soon as Copies should be taken of them, and for Security of this, having given them a Pledge of fifteen Talents, which makes at least Two thousand Five hundred Pounds Sterling; he kept the Originals himself, and sent them back the Copies very neatly and faithfully transcribed, with permission also of keeping the fifteen Talents, which he had sent as a Pledge. Under the Reign of Euergetes, Onias II. was High-priest of the Jews, a a Man of no Integrity, and who thought of nothing but heaping Riches together. He refusing to pay the King of Egypt the Sum of twenty Talents, which was due to him by way of Tribute, this Prince had taken a Resolution of sending Troops into Judea, to ravage the whole Country. But Joseph Son of Tobias, Nephew to the High-priest Onias, coming to Alexandria, he gave such Satisfaction to the King, and so far insinuated himself into his Favour, that he obtained the Farm of all the Tributes of Cele-syria, Phenicia, Samaria, and Judea, procured Two thousand Soldiers to be granted him, in order to levy the Tributes, amassed great Sums for his own Use, and paid besides Sixteen thousand Talents to the King instead of eight that he had before, and continued in this Employment for Twenty Years.

Ptolemy Euergetes died after he had reign'd five and twenty Years.[2] Tacitus says, that under his Reign was seen in Egypt, [Tacit. Annal. l. 6.] the Bird call'd Phœnix, which appear'd in the Country, accompany'd by many other Birds, which flocked to it, because of the Novelty of the Sight. Polybius says, that [Polyb. l. 2. p. 155. Justin. l. 29. c. 1.] Euergetes died of a Distemper; but Justin affirms he was put to death by his Son and Successor Ptolemy Philopator.

Ptolemy Philopator (IV)

IV. PTOLEMY PHILOPATOR, Son of Ptolemy Euergetes, began to reign in the Year of the World 3783, before Christ 217, before the vulgar Era 221. He had the Name of Philopator, or Lover of his Father, given him by way of Irony or Antiphrasis, because he had put his Father to death. Huic ex facinoris crimine cognomentum Philopator fuit, [Justin. l. 29. c. 1.] says Justin. He had also the Name of Tryphon, or the Glutton; also of Gallus, because he carried the Ensigns and the Crown of Ivy, like the Galli or Priests of the great Goddess; and because he affected to appear crown'd with Ivy in the Ceremonies of Bacchus. [Vid. Usser. ad an. M. 3783.] This Prince spent his whole time in Luxury, Drunkenness, and Debauchery, as if he had been a King for no other End but to follow his Pleasures.

Antiochus the Great, King of Syria, made War against him, and took several Places from him in Cele-syria and Palestine,[1] before he would make any Attempt to oppose him, leaving this Matter to the Care of [Polyb. l. 5. p. 413. Year of the World 3787.] his Generals. But the Year following, Antiochus having advanced as far as Raphia, Ptolemy came forth to meet him with a powerful Army, and gave him Battle. At first the whole Advantage was on the Side of Antiochus, who, besides being a great Commander, had also an Army of excellent Soldiers. But Arsinoe, the Sister and Wife of King Philopator, having her Hair dishevelled, and her Eyes full of Tears, passed through the Ranks of the Soldiers, and so raised their Courage and Resolution, that they at last obtain'd an intire Victory over the Army of Antiochus. Antiochus therefore [3 Macc. c. 1. Polyb. l. 5.] retiring with the Remains of his Army, all the Cities of Syria and Palestine, that had been obliged to submit to him, return'd of themselves to the Obedience of Philopator, omitting nothing that might shew their Zeal and Fidelity to his Government.

The chief of the Jews also having sent their Deputies to him, to congratulate with him and offer him Presents, they found him disposed to come in Person to Jerusalem. When he came thither, he enter'd into the Temple, admiring its Beauty, Magnificence, and OEconomy. He desired also to enter into the Sanctuary, in which no one was to enter but the High-priest alone, and he only once in a Year. This Attempt of the King, filled the whole Temple with Tears and Lamentations, the Noise of which spread into the City, and put it into the utmost Consternation. The High-priest Simon then betaking himself to Prayers, between the Temple and the Altar of Burnt-sacrifices, as soon as he had finished his Prayer, Philopator found himself struck with so great a Terror, that he began to tremble, and could hardly stand on his Legs; and his Attendants [3 Macc. i. 11.] were forc'd to carry him out of the Temple half dead.

When he return'd to Alexandria, he plunged himself, as before, into all manner of Excesses, and began to persecute the Jews of Egypt, compelling them to forsake their Religion: For this Purpose, he caus'd to be put up at Alexandria reproachful Edicts against them, full of Blasphemies against God, commanding the Jews to sacrifice to the Gods of the Country, on the Penalty of being deprived of their Privileges, of their Right of Freedom of the City, of being reduced to the Condition of the meanest Inhabitants of Egypt, and brought into Servitude; and whoever should refuse Obedience to this Ordinance, should be put to Death. But even those that comply'd with the Orders of the King, were not continued in their ancient Privileges; they were marked with a red-hot Iron, having the Representation of an[2] Ivy-Leaf, and were separated from the Citizens of Alexandria, as being reduced to the Condition of the meanest Subjects of the Country. To preserve their ancient Rights, they were required to initiate themselves into the Mysteries of Bacchus. He also put up this Inscription upon the Tower that was at the Entry of his Palace, That no one should enter but such as sacrificed to his Gods.

[3 Macc. iii. 3 Macc. iv.] Some of the Jews gave Way to this Persecution; others bribed his Officers with Money, to skreen themselves from Oppression. But the King finding it out, he swore the Destruction, not only of the Jews of Alexandria, but of all others in any Part of Egypt. He thereupon publish'd an Edict, by which he order'd all the Governors of his Cities and Provinces, to send to him in Chains all the Jews in their several Districts, with their Wives and Children, that they might all be put to Death at Alexandria, as Enemies to the State. By the same Edict he forbid any to conceal a Jew, upon Pain of Death, and promis'd to the Informer the Estate of any one that should make such Concealment. When these Orders were brought into the Provinces, they made all the Jews set out for Alexandria, without any Regard to Age or Sex; and as soon as they arrived there, the King order'd a List to be taken of them. For this Purpose they were shut up in the Hippodrome, without being suffer'd to enter into the City; and with them were put all the Jews of Alexandria, when it was perceived they came by Stealth to bring them Sustenance. Those that were appointed to take this List were forty whole Days about it, without being able to finish it; after which time they came to the King, and declared it was impossible for them to take an exact List, the Number of them was so prodigious.

They prepared two Lists of these Jews. One contain'd the Names of those who had consented to sacrifice, whose Lives were to be preserved, but without enjoying their antient Privileges of Freemen of Alexandria, which they possess'd before. The other was a List of those who refused to change their Religion, and who therefore were to be put to death. The King commanded that these last should be shut up in the Hippodrome, and be exposed to the Elephants, who were to tread them under Foot. Hermon the Keeper of the Elephants made them drunk, by giving them Wine mingled with Incense, to make them the more savage and unrelenting. But God brought it to pass, that the King (as his Custom was) having drank to excess overnight, slept so fast as not to awake 'till the tenth Hour of the Day following, that is, 'till four o'Clock in the Afternoon. This being his Time of Dinner, his Officers awaked him to sit down to Table, where he continued 'till the Night was far spent. Then he sent for Hermon, and asked him in great Wrath, Why he had let the Day pass away without executing his Commands against the Jews? Hermon, and the King's Friends there present, excused themselves, alledging, that every thing had been ready for Execution from betimes in the Morning, but they durst not awake him, nor in his Absence perform his [3 Macc. v.] Commands against the Jews.

Then Philopator gave fresh Orders, that the Elephants should be ready against the Day following; at which time early in the Morning Hermon presented himself before him, and acquainted him, that all Things were ready for putting the Jews to death. But this Prince having forgot the Orders he had given, treated Hermon very roughly, and commended the Fidelity the Jews had always shewn to himself and his Predecessors. However, setting himself to drink again with his drunken Companions, he sent for Hermon again, and asked him why he had not obey'd his Commands. Hermon and those that were with him having acquainted him with what had pass'd, he made an Oath to send all the Jews to their Graves the Day following, and gave Orders to Hermon that the Elephants should be ready against the next Morning. To this he likewise added, that when he had destroyed all the Jews in Egypt, he would go into Judea, and there put all to Fire and Sword; that he would raze their Cities, burn the Temple of Jerusalem, and destroy those Priests that had refused him Entrance into it.

[3 Macc. vi.] The Jews being inform'd of what had passed, made their Addresses to God by fervent Prayer, hoping for no Assistance but from him alone. And the Day following Philopator came out of the City with his Guards, and with the Troop of Elephants that were to squeeze the Hebrews to Pieces; and almost the whole City of Alexandria came thither also, to be Spectators of this bloody Massacre. When the King was come near the Hippodrome, and the Jews had renew'd their Cries and Lamentations, all on a sudden two Angels were seen to appear, who presented themselves before the King and the whole Multitude, with a terrible Aspect but a majestick Brightness. The Jews only could not see these Angels. This Apparition struck the King with so much Terror, that he continued, as it were, without Motion. He was seized with a great Trembling through his whole Body, he forgot his usual Fierceness, and perceived his Fury to be changed into Compassion. The Elephants turn'd about against their Masters and the Soldiers that manag'd them, whom they trod under Foot. The King turn'd his Wrath against his own Officers, and complain'd of their thus treating the Jews, as if they had done it by their own Authority; and gave Orders that the Jews should be unbound, and set at perfect Liberty. He furnish'd them with Provisions, that they might make Feasts of [3 Macc. vi.] Rejoycing and Thanksgiving for seven Days, and suffer'd them to take Revenge on such of their Brethren as had renounced their Religion, of whom they flew about three hundred.

After this they obtain'd an Instrument from the King, by which they were declared innocent, and sent back with Liberty into their several Countries. The King commended and extoll'd their Fidelity, and that of their Ancestors, both towards himself and his Predecessors the Kings of Egypt; ordering the Governors of the Provinces to protect them, and to treat all such as Enemies to the King and State, as should any way molest or disturb them.

[3 Macc. vii.] Before they dispersed to return every Man to his own Home, the Jews erected a Column, and built a Proseuche, or Oratory, in the same Place where they had been miraculously deliver'd. After which every one went to his own House, and had their Goods restored them, which had been confiscated to the King's Use. All this happen'd in the Year of the World 3788, before Christ 212, before the vulgar Era 216, between the Egyptian Months Pachon and Epiphi, which answer to our May and July.

Philopator died after he had reign'd seventeen Years, a and had for his Successor Ptolemy Epiphanes.

Ptolemy Epiphanes (V)

V. PTOLEMY EPIPHANES, succeeded his Father Ptolemy Philopator, being but four Years old, according to St. [Hieron. in Dan. xi. Justin. l. 30. c. 1.] Jerome, or five according to Justin. As soon as Antiochus the great King of Syria, and Philip King of Macedon, saw the Kingdom of Egypt in the Hands of a Child, they enter'd into secret Measures to take him out of the Way, and to divide his [Diod. Sicul. l. 15. Tit. Liv. l. 31. Polyb. l. 3.] Territories between them. Antiochus set upon Cele-syria and Judea, and soon became Master of them.[1] But after some time[2] Ptolemy Epiphanes sent his General Scopus thither with a good Army, who retook the Cities and Provinces that Antiochus had conquer'd. But scarce a Year pass'd away, but that Antiochus subdued them again. 'Twas then the Jews surrender'd themselves to Antiochus, and always [Joseph. Antiq. l. 12. c. 3. Polyb. l. 16.] adhered firm to his Interests afterwards. And for this Reason upon several Occasions Antiochus gave them particular Marks of his Confidence and Friendship, by those Letters of which the Copies are preserved in Josephus.

In the Year of the World 3812, Antiochus gave his Daughter Cleopatra in Marriage to Ptolemy Epiphanes King of Egypt, with the Prospect of being Master himself, by that Means, of the Dominions of this young Prince. But the Governors of young Epiphanes penetrating into this Design, and Cleopatra espousing her Husband's Interests rather than her Father's, they defeated his Intentions: At last Epiphanes undertaking a War against Seleucus King of Syria,[3] and one of his Generals having asked him what Assistance he depended upon, in order to make his Designs succeed; Epiphanes answer'd, that he depended upon no other Assistance than the Purses of his Friends. When this Answer was spread among the People, the Generals of Epiphanes began to be in Pain for their Wealth, thinking they were to be plunder'd for the carrying on of this War. Wherefore they prevented him by Poison, after he had reign'd four and twenty [Hieron. in Dan. xi.] Years, according to Eusebius, Clemens Alexandrinus, Porphyry, and St. Jerome. He left two Sons, Ptolemy Philometor who succeeded him, and Ptolemy Physcon his younger Son.

Ptolemy Philometor (VI)

VI. PTOLEMY PHILOMETOR, Son of Ptolemy Epiphanes and Cleopatra, reign'd thirty-five Years; from the Year of the World 3824 to 3859, before Christ 141, before the vulgar Era 145. Judea being then not in Subjection to the Kings of Egypt, the general Affairs of the Jews had but little Relation to those of this Prince. But the Affairs of Antiochus Epiphanes King of Syria, of whom we have already given an Account, were much involv'd with those of the Hebrews. 'Twas under the Government of Philometor that the Temple call'd Onion was built in Egypt,[1] the History of which may be seen under the Titles ONION and ONIAS IV.

[Lib. 2. cont. App. p. 1064.] Josephus informs us, that Ptolemy Philometor and his Queen Cleopatra had so much Confidence in the Jews of Egypt, that they trusted them with the Care of the Kingdom; and that Dositheus and Onias, both Jews, were the Generals of their Armies; and that when the City of Alexandria rose up in Arms, in Favour of Ptolemy Physcon against Cleopatra, the Jews stood by her, and kept the City to its Duty. But this did not happen 'till after the Death of Philometor,[2] as we shall see in the following Article. Under the Reign of[3] of Philometor arose in Egypt the Peripatetick Philosopher Aristobulus, a Jew by Nation, [Clem. Alex.Strom. l. 1.] who is mention'd by Clemens Alexandrinus and Eusebius,[4] who have preserv'd some Fragments of him.

About the same time[5] there arose at Alexandria a great Dispute between the Jews and Samaritans. The Jews maintain'd, that the Temple of Jerusalem was the only Place where God had appointed to be worshipped, according to the Law of Moses; and the Samaritans on the contrary pretended it was the Temple on Mount Gerizim. This Controversy was pleaded with great Earnestness before King Philometor and his Counsellors; and each Party engaged themselves by an Oath, in the Name of God and of the King, to produce no other Proofs but out of their own Law, and besought the King to put to death such of the Advocates of each Party, that should act contrary to this Oath. The King and his Council having heard the Reasons on both Sides, decided the Cause in Favour of the Jews, and condemned to death Sabas and Theodosius, the Advocates of the Samaritans.

[Jos. Antiq. l. 13. c. 6.] Jonathan Maccabeus, who flourish'd at this Time, espoused the Party of Alexander Balas King of Syria, Son-in-law to Philometor, against Demetrius; and had valiantly [1 Macc. x. 67, 69.] maintain'd the War against Apollonius, whom Demetrius Nicanor, Son of Demetrius Soter, had sent into Palestine with a great Body of Troops. Jonathan, assisted by Simon his Brother, fought with him and beat him, kill'd a great Number of his Men, took and burnt Azoth and the Temple of Dagon, to which Apollonius and his People had retir'd, and then return'd in Triumph to Jerusalem. Two[6] Years after[7] Philometor went into Syria, on Pretence to assist his Son-in-law Alexander Balas against Demetrius, but really to make himself Master of his Dominions, and passed thro' Palestine. The People of Azoth shew'd him their City and Temple destroy'd, with Heaps of Bones of the Dead which they had piled up by the Way-side, enlarging upon the Calamities that Jonathan had made them suffer. But the King did not seem to take any Notice of it, and Jonathan coming to join him at Joppa, with a magnificent Attendance, the King gave him a very favourable Reception. Jonathan accompany'd him as far as the River Eleutherus, after which he return'd to Jerusalem.

Philometor being received as a Friend into all the Cities of the Dominions of Balas, he made his Entry into Antioch, where [1 Macc. xi. 13. Just. l. 35. c. 2.] being acknowledged as King, he placed two Diadems upon his Head. He died the Year following[8] in the Hands of his Physicians, who thought to have effected upon him the Operation of the Trepan,[9] in order to cure him of a mortal Wound he had received in his Head, in a Battle he won from Alexander Balas King of Syria.

Ptolemy Phiscon (VII)

VII. PTOLEMY PHISCON, or Fatguts, otherwise call'd Euergetes or the Benefactor, Son of Ptolemy Epiphanes, and Brother to Ptolemy Philomator, reign'd in the whole fifty-three Years, partly with his Brother and partly alone, from the Year 3859. He had great Contests with his Brother, which did not end 'till the Death of Philometor. Cleopatra the Wife of this Prince, was desirous to preserve the Crown for her Son, against the Enterprizes of Physcon, who attempted to become Master of it; and Onias the Jew, the Founder of the Temple Onion, undertook the Defence of the Queen and the young Prince, and brought a small Army to Alexandria. Physcon prepared to march against him, and at the same [Joseph. cont. App. l. 2. p. 1064.] time resolved to expose all the Jews of Alexandria to be squeezed to Pieces under the Feet of the Elephants. But God brought it about in Favour of the Jews, that the Elephants having been made drunk on purpose, turn'd their Fury against their Managers, of whom they flew several. Physcon himself saw a Man with a terrible and threatning Countenance, that forbid him to do any Harm to the Hebrews; and one of his most beloved Concubines, whose Name by some is call'd Ithaca, by others Irene, interceding with him to spare the Jews, he pardon'd them upon her Request, and repair'd all the Mischief he had done to them. Josephus adds, that even to his Time the Jews of Alexandria yearly celebrated the Day of this Deliverance; but it is very probable that this Historian has not distinguish'd Physcon from Philopator, and that he has put under the former what happen'd under the latter. For we have already seen under Philopator a History very like this, of the Jews that were to be exposed to the Elephants.

Physcon being desirous to terminate the Differences he had with his Sister Cleopatra, the Sister and Wife of his Brother Philometor, made a Proposal of Marriage to her; which being concluded upon,[1] Physcon was received into Alexandria, and acknowledged as King. But being willing to secure the Kingdom, he put the young Prince, his Nephew, to death, as he was in the Arms Arms of his Mother, the very Day of their Marriage. a This Action made him extremely odious to the Egyptians, whom he still farther provok'd by all Sorts of Cruelties. He divorced Cleopatra, took the Daughter of this Princess to Wife after he had deflower'd her, kill'd his own eldest Son, lest the People of Alexandria should make him King in his Place, put to death another of his Sons that he had by Cleopatra, and to compleat his Cruelties, he cut off his Head, Feet, and Hands, and sent them in a close Basket to the Queen, the Mother of the young Prince, as a Present he made her on her Birth-day.[2] After all these Inhumanities Physcon died in Peace, after he had reign'd nine and twenty Years from the Death of his Brother, and left three Sons living. He bequeathed the Government of the Kingdom to Cleopatra his Sister and Wife, with Power to choose for King which of his three Sons she should judge fittest to reign. She first chose Alexander, the youngest of them, hoping to find him the most obedient to her Desires: But the People of Alexandria obliged her to take the eldest, Ptolemy Lathurus,[3] who reign'd along with her for ten Years.

Ptolemy Lathurus (VIII)

VIII. PTOLEMY LATHURUS, Son of Ptolemy Physcon and Cleopatra, began to reign in the Year of the World 3888. He sent about six thousand Men of his Army to Antiocus Cyzicenus, who came to the Assistance of the Samaritans, when they were besieged by John Hyrcanus Prince and High-Priest of the Jews. But Antiochus was obliged to retire, and the Egyptian Troops were defeated or dispersed in several different Encounters; so that this Assistance served the Samaritans in no stead, and Hyrcanus became Master of the City, after a Year's Siege.[1]

Lathurus did not long enjoy the Kingdom of Egypt. Cleopatra his Mother was weary of having a Partner in the Government, and animated the People of Alexandria against him,[2] compelling him to withdraw to Cyprus. While he was in this Country, the Inhabitants of Ptolemais sent to ask his Assistance against Alexander Janneus King of the Jews, who kept them, as it were, besieged. Lathurus put to Sea with his Army: But the People of Ptolemais altering their Resolution, sent to thank him, and to prevent his coming. Yet Lathurus continued his Course, and disembarquing his Men at Sycaminum, near Ptolemais, Alexander Janneus drew off his Troops from before Ptolemais, and sent secretly to Cleopatra, to desire Assistance against Lathurus. In the mean time, he pretended to accommodate Matters with him, offer'd him very advantageous Proposals, with a Promise of four-hundred Talents of Silver, if he would deliver him up those Places that Zoilus had Possession of in that Country.

But Lathurus perceiving that Alexander Janneus held secret Correspondence with his Mother Cleopatra against him, he broke with him, and did him all the Mischief he could. Coming into Judea with Part of his Troops, while the rest of his Army lay before Ptolemais, Alexander Janneus march'd against him with a powerful Army, and gave him Battle near Azoph upon Jordan. The Victory, for some time, was in Suspence; but at last Lathurus broke through the Jewish Army, put it to flight, and pursued it as long as his Troops had Strength to follow and kill those that fled. 'Tis said, That, on this Occasion, were kill'd about thirty thousand Jews; and others say, fifty thousand[3]. We are assured, that when Lathurus had retired, towards Evening, into some of the Villages of the Jews, and finding only Women and Children, he order'd his Soldiers to cut them in Pieces, and to boil them in Kettles; that when their Husbands or Fathers should return, they might see the Slaughter, and think that their Enemies fed upon human Flesh, and might therefore be in greater Terror of them.

Cleopatra, Lathurus's Mother, being alarm'd with the Progress of her Son's Arms in Palestine,[4] where, without Resistance, he made Havock of all before him, and where he had taken the City of Gaza, which is in a manner the Gate of Egypt; she sent out an Army by Land, and provided a Fleet at Sea, to stop him in his Career. She gave the Command of her Land Army to two Jews, Chelcias and Ananias, both of 'em Sons of Onias, who founded the Temple Onion in Egypt. The Queen sent her Son Alexander [Joseph. Ant. l. 13. c. 18, 21.] with her Fleet into Phenicia, where having landed his Army, several Cities surrender'd to him: But Ptolemais shut her Gates against him. Chelcias, one of her Generals by Land, died in Cele-syria. Lathurus hasted into Egypt, thinking to find it unprovided of Troops, but he was deceived in his Expectation. He there found more Resistance than he thought for, and the Queen his Mother sending some Forces against him, he was obliged to withdraw out of Egypt.[5] Thus[6] he return'd to Gaza, where he pass'd the Winter. Ptolemy Macron (IX)

IX. PTOLEMY MACRON, Son of Dorymenes, was made Governor of the Isle of Cyprus by Ptolemy Philometor King of Egypt. During all the Minority of this Prince, he kept the whole Revenues of this Island, nor would send any of it to the Regents of the Kingdom. But as soon as the King came to Age, he gave in his Accounts, and sent the whole Sum that he had been collecting all the time of the King's Minority. [Polyb. l. 27. in Excerpt. Valesi.] Some time after this, having received some Discontent at some Proceedings of the King of Egypt, he withdrew his Fidelity, and deliver'd up the Isle of Cyprus to Antiochus Epiphanes King of Syria. This Prince received him into the Number of his Friends, and gave him the Command of the Troops he had in Phenicia and Cele-syria. We are told in the second Book of the Maccabees, chap. iv. 45, &c. that Menelaus, the Usurper of the High-priesthood, being accused before Antiochus Epiphanes, in the Year of the World 3834, and being upon the Point of being cast by this Accusation; he gave a Bribe to Ptolemy Macron to stand his Friend. This he did while the King was at Tyre, and was the chief Instrument that Menelaus, guilty as he was, was declared innocent, and his Accusers condemned to death.

After Judas Maccabeus had routed Apollonius Governor of Samaria, and Seron Governor of Cele-syria; Philip, who was then at Jerusalem in behalf of King Antiochus Epiphanes, a sent to demand Assistance from Ptolemy Macron.[1] Macron sent away Nicanor and Gorgias, two experienc'd Commanders. But Judas defeated them also, as is mention'd in the first Book of the Maccabees, iii. 38, &c. After the Death of Antiochus Epiphanes, Ptolemy was no longer in Favour as before. His Enemies gave the young Eupator an ill Opinion of him, and represented to him, that a Man who had once fail'd in his Fidelity to his Prince, was never afterwards [2 Macc. x. 12, 13, 14.] to be trusted. He had also made himself suspected by the Courtiers, because upon several Occasions he had shewn his Dislike at their Proceedings against the Jews. So that at last, being no longer able to bear these Reproaches, he took Poison and kill'd himself.[2] The Author of the Latin Version of the second Book of Maccabees, x. 12. calls him Ptolemeus Macer; but his true Name is Ptolemeus Macron. Macer in Latin signifies lean; but Macron in Greek signifies tall.

Ptolemy (X)

X. PTOLEMY, Son of Abubi or Abobi, Son-in-law of Simon Maccabeus, and Governor of the Castle of Doch or Dagon, and of the Plain of Jericho. This Man being puff'd up with Pride, pretended to the Government of all Judea, and with this View form'd a Design against the Life of Simon Maccabeus his Father-in-law.[1] Simon was then employ'd in visiting all the Cities of Judea; and arriving at Jericho with his two Sons, Matthias and Judas,[2] he went to lodge with his Son-in-law, at the Castle of Doch or Dagon Ptolemy made a great Entertainment for them, and in the Midst of Supper, some Men provided for that Purpose entering the Room, kill'd Simon and his two Sons, and some of their People. He gave Information of this to Antiochus Sidetes King of Syria, desiring him to send him speedy Assistance, in order to deliver the Country from the Yoke of the Maccabees, and that he might take Possession of it in the King's Name. At the same time he sent Messengers to Gazara, to kill John Hyrcanus the eldest Son of Simon; and gave Orders to others of his People to go to Jerusalem, to seize the City and the holy Mountain.

But God did not permit him to succeed in these Projects. John Hyrcanus was quickly advertis'd of this Villainy, and put upon his guard. He caus'd those to be slain that Ptolemy had sent to put him to death, and hasting away with all Speed, he came soon enough to Jerusalem, to frustrate the Designs that Ptolemy had upon it. For John was received into the City, and the Gates were shut against Ptolemy, who had attempted to enter on the other Side. This is what is related by Josephus. The first Book of the Maccabees does not inform us what was the Event of this Murder, committed on the Body of Simon and his Sons. But the Book we quote under the Name of the fourth of the Maccabees says, that Ptolemy having massacred Simon and his two Sons, Hyrcanus being acquainted with it retired to Gaza, (probably Gazera or Gadera) whither Ptolemy pursued him with all his Forces. But the People of Gaza taking Side with Hyrcanus, shut the Gates against Ptolemy, who was therefore oblig'd to retire. Thence Hyrcanus went to Jerusalem,[3] salem, was acknowledg'd as High-priest and Prince of his Nation, assembled a great Army, and march'd against Ptolemy, who had shut himself up in the Castle of Dagon.

He lay down before it, and began to batter the Place with his Rams. But as he was upon the Point of becoming Master of it, Ptolemy caus'd the Mother and two Brothers of Hyrcanus to be brought upon the Wall, and had them whipp'd in a pitiless Manner, threatning, that if he persever'd to press him, he would there whip them to death. Hyrcanus was overcome by his Compassion, and discontinued the Attack. But his Mother encourag'd him to go on, representing to him, that their Death was unavoidable; and as for himself, that no Consideration should prevail with him to forbear revenging the Death of his Father Simon. Hyrcanus being animated afresh by these Discourses, began the Assault again with new Vigour; and Ptolemy also began again to whip the Mother and Brethren of Hyrcanus. But he not being able to bear this Spectacle, retired into his Camp, contenting himself to keep the Castle block'd up. In the mean time the Feast of Tabernacles being come, he was obliged to go to Jerusalem, there to discharge his Office as High-priest; and Ptolemy taking the Advantage of his Absence, withdrew himself into another Place, whither Hyrcanus could not follow him.

This is what is said by the Author of the fourth Book of the Maccabees. Josephus relates the same Story in his Antiquities, l. 13. c. 14, 15. and in the first Book of the War of the Jews, c. 2. p. 710. But he adds, that Hyrcanus was obliged to quit the Siege because of the sabbatical Year which then began; and that Ptolemy withdrew to Zeno sirnamed Cotyla, who was King of Philadelphia, the capital City of the Ammonites. But these are Circumstances that are sufficiently refuted by Salian upon the Year of the World 3919, and by Usher upon the Year 3869. The first Book of the Maccabees, which the Church [of Rome] receives as Canonical, says nothing of the Mother of Hyrcanus, and affirms expressly, that Ptolemy not only murther'd Simon at the Banquet, but his two Sons also; which gives us Occasion to believe, that the whole Story is no more than a mere Fiction.

Pua (III)

III. PUA and Shiphrah, Midwives of Egypt, to whom Pharaoh gave his Commands, that when the Israelitish Women were brought to Bed, the female Children only should be saved alive, and the male Children be destroy'd.[1] Josephus[2] thinks that these Midwives were Egyptians, in which Opinion he has several Followers. But [Aug. cont. Mend. c. 15.] the Hebrews, St. Austin, and some others, contend for their being Israelites. The Rabbins even pretend, that Puah was the same as Jocabed, the Mother of Moses and Aaron; and that Shiphrah was Miriam the Daughter of Jocabed, and Sister to Moses and Aaron. But this is beyond all Probability, tho' it is very likely they were of the Race of the Hebrews, since they shew'd so much Fear of God on this Occasion. Besides, what likelihood is there that the Hebrews, who had so much Aversion to the Egyptians, should employ them to attend their Women when they lay in?

There were, doubtless, more than two Midwives among so numerous a People as the Israelites; but Puah and Shiphrah were [Exod. i. 17, 18, 19.] the most noted. The Scripture says, that they did not obey the King's Commands; but that being with-held by the Fear of God, they preserved the Male Children alive. And when Pharaoh expostulated with them about this Matter, they made him Answer, That the Hebrew Women were not as the Egyptian; for they could bring forth of themselves, without the Assistance of a Midwife. The Hebrew Text says, literally, that the Hebrew Women are as wild Beasts; or, are Brought-to-Bed with the same Ease as the Beasts of the Field. Others translate it, They are so strong, as not to need a Midwife to bring them to Bed. 'Tis thought that they told a Lye,[3] in affirming this to the King: For the Egyptian Women, and all the Eastern Women in general, are Brought-to-Bed with great facility, and often have no Occasion for Midwives,[4] yet this cannot be said in general of all the Hebrew Women. And when Moses says, that God rewarded them, and built their Houses, in Consideration of the Fear of God, that they had shewn in this Matter; yet he does not commend or approve of Lying, but only their Piety, Compassion, and Fear of God, that they testify'd on this Occasion. Remunerata est benevolentia, non fallacia; benignitas mentis, non iniquitas [Aug. lib. cont. Mend. c. 15.] mentientis, says St. Austin.

Instead of these Words, God built their Houses; the Hebrew has only, He built them Houses. Which Place some understand, [Hebr. Fag. Murs.] as if Pharaoh had built Houses on purpose to lodge these Midwives, that the Hebrew Women might come thither to be Brought-to-Bed, in Presence of Officers appointed appointed by the King, who were to examine whether the Children were Male or Female. Others refer this to God himself, who rewarded [Ita pleriq; Interp.] them, by giving them a numerous Posterity ; for that is the Sense of the Words, [Exod. i. 21. יעש להם בתים] He built their Houses. But the Hebrew Text shews, that this has no respect to the Midwives, but to the Hebrews, whose Houses God built up, by giving them a Multitude of Children.

Puberty

PUBERTY. This is the Age wherein the Hairs begin to grow, in young People, in those Parts which Decency forbids to name. Among the Romans, the Age of Puberty was between fourteen and sixteen ; so that, at their Entrance upon the seventeenth Year, they took the Toga virilis, as beginning then to be Men. Among the Athenians, the Youths did not commence Ephebi, or pass the Age of Puberty, 'till they were eighteen. Lastly ; Among the Hebrews, the Age of Puberty, for Boys, was between thirteen and thirteen and a half ; so that at thirteen they were still reckon'd Children. From thirteen to six Months after, they were Puberes ; and after thirteen and a half, they were reckon'd Men, were subject to all the Precepts of the Law, and, in particular, were obliged to marry.

As to the Girls, the Age of Puberty began at twelve Years, and commonly ended at twelve Years and a half ; unless, at this Age, Nature had not yet produced the Marks of Puberty, which made an Exeption to the common Rule. As soon as a Girl had attained the Age of twelve Years and a half, or that the Tokens of Puberty had appear'd on her, she was then at Liberty, and her Father had no longer any Power to hinder her from marrying, but she was entirely Mistress of her own Conduct. But the Rabbins advise Fathers very earnestly, to make haste to marry their Daughters, as soon as they have attain'd the Age of Puberty, that is, when they are full twelve Years old[1]. St. Paul seems to allude to this Custom, when he says,[2] But if any Man think that he behaveth himself uncomely towards his Virgin, if she pass the Flower of her Age, and Need so require, let him do what he will, he sinneth not ; let them marry.

From what we have now said, it is plain, that the Hebrews marry'd their Daughters very young. And when the Scripture would express the Irregularities of an infamous Woman, it says, she forsakes the Guide of her Youth, or of her Puberty ; Reliquit ducem pubertatis [Prov. ii. 17.] suæ ; The Man to whom she gave her first Inclinations. And also, when it would represent to us a strict Mourning, it com-

[Joel i. 8.] pares it to that of a young Widow, who has lost the Spouse of her Youth ; Plange quasi virgo accincta sacco super virum pubertatis suæ.

Publican

PUBLICAN, Publicanus ; in Greek, Telones ; a Farmer or Receiver of Publick Money, an Officer of the Revenue, a Man employ'd in Collecting such Impositions as are hateful to the People. Among the Romans there were two Sorts of Farmers : Some were General Farmers, who in every Province had their Deputies and Under-farmers, who collected the Revenues and other Profits of the Empire, of which they gave Account to the Emperor. These Principal Farmers were Men of great Consideration in the Government ; and Cicero says, that among these, were to be found the [Cicero Orat. pro Planc. Theocrit. apud Munsonium.] Flower of the Roman Knights, the Ornament of the City, and the Strength of the Commonwealth : Flos equitum Romanorum, ornamentum civitatis, firmamentum Reipublicæ, Publicanorum, ordine continentur. But the Deputies, the Under-farmers, the Commissioners, the Publicans of the lower Order, were look'd upon as so many Thieves and Pickpockets. Theocritus being once asked, Which was the most cruel of all Beasts ; made answer, That among the Beasts of the Wilderness, they were the Bear and the Lion ; among the Beasts of the City, they were the Publican and the Parasite.

Among the Jews, the Name and Profession of a Publican was the most odious thing in the World : This Nation, in a particular manner, valued themselves upon [John viii. 33.] their Freedom ; We be Abraham's Seed, and were never in Bondage to any Man. They could not, without the utmost Reluctancy, see Publicans in their Country, rigorously exacting those Tributes and Impositions that were laid on them by the Romans : Especially the Galileans or Herodians, the Disciples of Judas the Gaulonite, submitted to this Badge of Servitude, not without the greatest Impatience, and thought it even unlawful to pay Tribute to a foreign Power ; as they shew'd by that Question they put to Jesus Christ, Luke xx. 22. Is it lawful for us to give Tribute unto Cesar, or no ? Those of their own Nation that undertook this Employ, they look'd upon as no better than [Matthew xviii. 17.] Heathen ; Let him be unto thee as an Heathen Man, and a Publican. 'Tis even said, that they would not allow them to come into their Temple, or their Synagogues, nor admit them to partake of their publick Prayers, or of their Offices of Judicature, or allow them to give Testimony in a Court of Justice[1]. Lastly ; We are assured, they would not accept of their Presents at the Temple, no more than they would of the Price of Prostitution, or of Blood, or of any thing else of the like Nature.

It appears by the Gospel, that there were many Publicans in Judea, in the Time of our Saviour. Zaccheus, probably, was one of the principal Farmers, since he is call'd [Luke xix. 2.] the Chief among the Publicans; but Saint Matthew was only an inferior Publican. [Luke vii. 34.] The Jews reproached our Saviour with being a Friend of Publicans and Sinners, and of eating with them. And our Saviour told [Matth.xxi. 31.] the Jews, that Harlots and Publicans should be preferred before them in the Kingdom of Heaven. In the Parable of the Publican and Pharisee, who made their Prayers together in the Temple, we see with what Sentiments of Humility the [Lukexviii. 10.] View of his Condition inspired the Publican: He keeps afar off, and, probably, dares not so much as enter the Court of the People ; he is afraid to lift up his Eyes to Heaven ; he smites his Breast, and submissively asks Pardon of God. Zaccheus assures our Saviour, who had done him the Honour to accept of a Lodging in his House, that he was ready to give half of his [Luke xix. 8.] Goods to the Poor, and to return fourfold of whatever he had unjustly acquir'd : And this, because at that time the Roman Laws requir'd,[2] that whenever any Farmer was convicted of Extortion, he should be obliged to render four times the Value of what he had extorted.

Some have thought,[3] that by the Jewish Laws, it was forbid to pay any Tribute, or to exercise the Profession of a Publican ; from this Passage of Deuteronomy,[4] Non erit vectigal pendens de filii Israel. But, 1*st*, It is certain, that there were Publicans of the Race of Israel ; such were Zaccheus and St. Matthew ; tho' their Employment was very odious among their Brethren. 2dly, The Herodians, that refused to pay Tribute to Strangers, did not found their Persuasion upon this Law ; since, it is not found in the Original Text of Moses ; and the Hebrews otherwise explain this Passage of Deuteronomy. 3dly, The Disciples of Judas Gaulonites founded their Refusal to pay [Joseph. Antiq. l. xviii. c. 2.] Tribute, upon their being the People of the Lord, and because it was not permitted to a true Israelite to acknowledge any other Sovereign but God.

Publius

PUBLIUS : He was Chief or Governor [Act.xxviii. 7, 8, 9.] of Malta, when St. Paul was shipwreck'd by a Tempest upon this Island, in the Year of Christ 60, or of the Vulgar Era. This Publius receiv'd St. Paul and his Company into his House very kindly, and treated them for three Days with great Humanity. St. Paul, in Acknowledgment, restor'd the Governor's Father to his Health, who was ill of a Fever and Bloody-flux. 'Tis said, that not only Publius the Father, but the whole Island also, was converted to the Christian Faith[1]. Ado, with several Latin Writers, affirm, That Publius joyning himself to St. Paul, was by this Apostle made a Bishop, and sent to preach the Gospel ; That coming to Athens, he was made Bishop of this Church, and there ended his Life by Martyrdom[2]. But this Opinion cannot be supported ; since Publius Bishop of Athens did not suffer Martyrdom 'till the Time of Marcus Aurelius.

Publius Lentulus

PUBLIUS LENTULUS. We have a Letter of one Publius Lentulus, pretended to have been Governor of Judea before Pilate, in which he gives an Acount of our Saviour Jesus Christ to the Senate of Rome, in a very advantageous manner. This Piece is to be found in many Manuscripts, and several Printed Books : It begins thus ; Apparuit temporibus istis, & adhuc vivit, vir praeditus potentiâ magnâ, nomine Christus Jesus, &c. But this a Piece of errant Forgery, unknown to the Antients, and deserving the utmost Contempt. Publius Lentulus was never Governor of Judea ; and Pilate was in this Office all the Time of our Saviour's Preaching : But before Christ went to the Baptism of John, he was not famous in Judea[1].

Pudens

[2 Tim. iv. 21. Baron. an. 44. §. 61.] PUDENS, mention'd by St. Paul, in the Year 65, when he wrote his Second Epistle to Timothy from Rome. Baronius, with some others, have believed, that Pudens was a Roman Senator converted by St. Peter, with whom St. Paul abode for some time. But there is Reason to think, that he confounds him with another Pudens who was a Senator, and who is said to be the Father of Praxedus and Prudentiana, in the Time of Pope Pius, above an hundred Years after the Epistle to Timothy was written. The Greeks keep the Festival of St. Pudens, the Disciple of the Apostles, on the 14th of April : They put him in the List of the Seventy Disciples, and say, that after the Death of St. Paul, he was beheaded by Nero. There are some that think[1] that Claudia, mention'd by St. Paul after Pudens, was Wife to this holy Man. The common Tradition is,[2] That St. Peter not only lodg'd with Pudens, but also celebrated the divine Mysteries there, and there consecrated the first Church at Rome, which has since been made that of St. Peter in Bonds.

PUER.

Puer

[Puer. Græc. παῖς Heb. ,נערNahar. Jer. i. 6.] PUER. This Word literally signifies a Child. Commonly it expresses the lowest Age. A, a, a, Domine Deus, nescio loqui, quia puer ego sum. The Name of Puer, is given to young Men pretty well in Age: For Example; to [Genesis xxxvii. 30.] Joseph, when he was sold by his Brethren, being then about eighteen Years old; to Isaac, of [Gen. xxi. 16.] twenty-one Years old; to Benjamin, twenty-four [Gen. xliv. 20.] Years old. Sometimes it signifies meerly the Son of a Person, without any Regard to his Age; at other times it denotes a Servant. Thus Joshua is call'd Puer Mosi, the Servant of [Exodus xxxiii. 2.] Moses. Abraham is call'd the Servant of God; [Gen. xxiv. 52.] Quod cum audisset puer Abraham.

Puer, is sometimes used to shew Simplicity [1 Cor. xiv. 20.] and Ignorance; Nolite pueri effici sensibus. Be ye not Children in Understanding, but become [Eccles. x. 16.] such in Malice. Woe to that Country whose [Isai. iii. 41.] King is a Child, (says the Wise Man). In Isaiah, the Lord threatens the Jews to give them Children for their Kings; Dabo pueros principes eorum. And the same Prophet, when [Isai. lxv. 20.] he describes the Time of the Messiah, says, There shall be no Child that shall live but a few Days, nor Old Man that shall not compleat the Time of his Life. He that shall die at an hundred Years of Age, shall die a Child, and the Sinner of an hundred Years old shall be accursed: Puer centum annorum morietur, & peccator centum annorum maledictus erit. Tho' a Man should die at the Age of an hundred, yet he shall be said to die young; and it shall be at an hundred Years of Age, that God shall smite in his Anger those that fall into Wickedness.

[2 Samuel ii. 14.] Pueri, is often said of Soldiers; Surgant [2 Samuel iii. 22.] pueri & ludant. And elsewhere: Pueri David & Joab; The Soldiers of David and of Joab. [1 Kings xx. 15,17. 1 Mac. i. 7, 9. Isai. ii. 6.] Pueri principum provinciarum; The Soldiers of the Governors of the Provinces. Pueri Alexandri, are the Generals of Alexander the Great, the Princes that attended him, and were the Companions of his Victories. Isaiah reproaches the Jews with being addicted to strange Children: Pueris alienis adhæserunt. Some understand it, of the detestable Crime of the Sodomites; as likewise in Joel; Posuerunt puerum in prostibulo. Others think that Isaiah [Joel iii. 3. Cyrillus Theodor.] upbraids them with having married strange Wives, by whom they had Children. Others understand it more simply; They have abandon'd themselves to imitate strange Nations; they have followed their Idolatry, and have contracted Affinity with them.

Puella is also us'd in the same manner as Puer, for a young Girl, a Servant, a Waitingmaid, a Maid of Honour, a marriageable young Woman, a Virgin; and sometimes, a Woman: For Example; Filii puellarum compunxerunt [Judith xvi. 14.] eos. And in Amos; Filius & pater ejus ierunt ad puellam. Amos

Pul

[2 Kings xv. 19. Athen. lib. vii. & xii. Dipnos. Strab. Suid. Arrian. Hos. v. 13.] PUL, or Phul, King of Assyria: He came into the Land of Israel in the Time of Menahem King of the Ten Tribes: He came, at the Request of Menahem, to assist him, and confirm him in the Kingdom. The King of Israel gave him a thousand Talents of Silver, and Pul continu'd in the Country 'till this Sum was entirely paid. We conjecture that Pul was the Father of Sardanapalus, who added the Name of Pal or Pul to that of Sardan; as Merodach added the Name of Baladan to his own, and so call'd himself Merodach-baladan. If this Conjecture is true, it must be then allow'd, that Pul is the same as Anacindaraxes, or Anabaxares, the Name which profane Authors give to the Father of Sardanapalus. Stephanus Bizantinus calls him Cyndaraxes; Julius Africanus, Acracarnes; and Eusebius, Acrazapes. Pul is properly the first King of Assyria, of whom we find any mention in Scripture.

Punishments of the Hebrews

PUNISHMENTS of the Hebrews. There were several Sorts of Punishments in use among the Jews, which are mention'd in the Scripture. They may be reduced to these following. 1. The Punishment of the Cross. 2. Suspension, or the Punishment of the Rope. 3. Stoning. 4. Fire. 5. The Tympanum, or Whipping. 6. Imprisonment. 7. The Sword, or Beheading. 8. The Precipice, or throwing down a Rock. 9. To be torn apieces by Thorns, or under the Feet of Animals. 10. The Saw, to be cut through the Middle. 11. To be thrown down into a Place full of Ashes, and to be there stifled. 12. Cutting off the Hair of the guilty Person. 13. To put out his Eyes. 14. To stretch them out upon the Wooden Horse. There are still a good many others, either mention'd in the Books of the Maccabees, or in that of the Government of Reason; as that of the Burning Pan; to tear off the Skin by the Hairs of the Head; to burn the Sides and Bowels with lighted Torches; to tear with Combs of Iron; to stretch upon the Wheel; to cut off the Extremities of the Hands and Feet.

We have already spoke of most of these Punishments, under their particular Articles: For Example; of the Cross, Lapidation, the Tympanum, the Saw, the Whip, Precipitation into a Tower fill'd with Ashes. We shall only speak briefly of those, of which nothing has been said elsewhere.

The Rabbins tell us of many Formalities which accompany'd and follow'd the Decision of the Judges in Criminal Cases. When the Matter concerned Life and Death, they proceeded with great Deliberation. After the Witnesses had been heard, the Affair was put off to the next Day; the Judges went Home, eat but little, and drank no Wine. The Day following they assembled again, two by two, to examine the Circumstances of the Proceeding over again, at more Leisure. After this Examination, the Judgment might be rectify'd; insomuch, that he that before was for the Condemnation of the Criminal, may now be for Absolving him; or he that had Acquitted him, may now be for his Condemnation.

THE PUNISHMENT OF THE RACK OR TYMPANUM. THE PUNISHMENT OF SCOURGING.2d Gath. Vol. II. F

THE PUNISHMENT OF HANGING. THE PUNISHMENT OF STONING.

The Sentence being then confirm'd and pronounced, the Criminal was led away to Execution. A Man placed at the Door of the Court, held an Handkerchief in his Hand; a little farther was an Horseman, or a Cryer on Horseback. If any one offer'd himself to say any thing in Favour of the condemned Person, the first Centinel made a signal with his Handkerchief, and the Horseman gallop'd away, to have the Prisoner brought back again. Two of the Judges went on each Side of him, to hear if he had any thing farther to offer in his own Justification. The Criminal might be brought back as often as five times, to hear those that could say any thing in his Defence. If there was nothing further to retard the Execution of the Sentence, it was publish'd with a loud Voice; Such an one is abandon'd, for such a Crime; Such and such have depos'd against him: If any one have any Proofs of his Innocence, they may now produce them.

The Jews were of Opinion, That the Death of Offenders, might be of great Merit to procure their Salvation, if they suffer'd to satisfy the Justice of God, and to make Atonement for their Sins. They were exhorted to confess their Faults, and to say, Let my Death be for an Expiation of all my Sins. Their Maxim was, That he that confesses his Faults, has a Share in the Life to come.

They gave to Criminals, at their Execution, Wine mingled with Incense, Myrrh, and other strong Drugs, that were proper to stupify the Senses, and to make them lose [Prov. xxxi. 6.] the Sensation of Pain. Solomon advises to give Wine to such as are overwhelm'd with Pain. And we see an Instance of this Piece of Humanity, in what was offer'd to Jesus Christ at his Passion; they would have given him Wine mix'd with Myrrh before his Crucifixion, and Vinegar when he was upon the Cross. These Observations are general, [Mat. xxvii. 34, 48.] and belong to all that are executed.

Suspension, or the Punishment of the Rope. I do not observe any Crime in the Law, for which the guilty Person was condemned to be Hang'd. They often hung up Men after their Death; but I cannot see that any were hung alive. The Jews maintain, That none but Idolaters and Blasphemers underwent this Punishment. Achitophel hung himself; and also [Mat. xxvii. 5. Acts i. 18. Deut. xxi. 23. Esth. xvi. 18. Gen. xli. 13. Numbers xxv. 4. Josh. viii. 29.] Judas. Moses pronounces him to be accursed, that is hung upon a Tree, and he would have him cut down before the Setting of the Sun. Haman and all his Sons were hung upon an high Gallows. Pharaoh's chief Baker was first beheaded, and afterwards hung upon a Gibbet. Moses order'd those Princes of Israel to be hang'd upon Gibbets, who had any Share in their Crimes who worshipped Baal-peor. Joshua hang'd up the King of Ai, and he continued upon the Gallows 'till the Evening. Another [Josh. x. 26. 2 Sam. xvii. 23. 2 Sam. xxi. 12. Lam. v. 12.] time he hung up five Kings of the Canaanites. The Philistines hung up the Bodies of Saul and Jonathan on the Walls of Beth-shan. Jeremiah says, that the Princes of Israel were hung up by the Hand, after their Death, by the Chaldeans. The Soldiers of Antiochus Epiphanes hung [1 Macc. i. 62.] up dead Children on the Necks of their Mothers, who had circumcised them.

From all these Examples, may be inferr'd, that sometimes they hung up Men alive, and sometimes hung up their Carcases after they were dead.

The Punishment of the Fire, was very common among the Hebrews. When Judah [Genesis xxxviii. 24.] was inform'd that his Daughter-in- Law Tamar was with Child, he would have had her burnt as an Adulteress. The Law of Moses inflicts the Punishment of the Fire upon the Daughters of the Priests, who [Lev. xxi. 9.] were guilty of Fornication: Sacerdotis filia, si deprehensa fuerit in stupro, & violaverit nomen patris sui, flamis exuretur. The People beyond the Euphrates inflicted the same Punishment upon those who fell into Crimes, that were contrary to that Respect, which, according to them, was due to the Gods. Abraham was cast into the Fire, because [Gen. xi. 31. Nehem. ix. 7. Dan. iii. 6. Lev. xx. 4. Jer. xxix. 22.] he would not worship the Gods of the Chaldeans. Nebuchadnezzar caus'd Daniel and his Companions to be thrown into the burning Fiery Furnace, upon the same Occasion. Moses order'd him to be burnt alive, who should marry the Mother and her Daughter.

Jeremiah informs us, that Nebuchadnezzar order'd Zedekiah and Ahab to be roasted in a Pan, for committing Iniquity in Israel, and abusing their Neighbours Wives. Antiochus Epiphanes exercised the same Punishment against the Brethren Maccabees: He put some to Death in Pots and burning Pans; others were roasted upon [2 Macc. vii. 35. Joseph. de Imperio Rationis, c. 9. Ecclus vii. 22.] Spits, which were apply'd to their Backs, and forc'd into their Bowels. The Author of Ecclesiasticus says, That the Flesh of the Wicked shall be punished by Worms, and by the Fire; probably, because they were expos'd in the Fields, and burnt in the Valley of Hinnom: We are assured, that they burnt there the Carcases of Men, and other Creatures, to prevent the Stench from infecting the City; and to this Jesus Christ seems to make Allusion, when he [Mark ix. 43,45,47.] says, That the Worm of the Damned dies not, and their Fire is not quenched.

Some Jewish Authors pretend, that he that was condemned to the Fire, was not burnt in the Flames: He was set up to the Knees in a Dunghil, his Throat ty'd about with a large Piece of Cloth, which was strain'd by the two Ends, 'till the Patient was forced to open his Mouth. If he would not open it, it was forced open by an Instrument. Then they poured melted Lead down his Throat, 'till his Bowels were consumed. They found this sort of Punishment, upon what is said,[1] That the Fire did not consume the Bodies of the Children of Aaron. So that they thought it not lawful for them to consume the Bodies of their Brethren. Besides, they thought this a more merciful kind of Death. The Rabbi Eleazar objecting against this Determination, and affirming that he had seen the Body of a Priest's Daughter burnt, who had committed a Crime; it was answer'd to him, That then the Sanhedrim must have been compos'd of ignorant People, or of Cushites and profane Persons, who did not understand the Law.

Imprisonment was not consider'd as a Punishment, but was to keep and secure a Person accused or suspected. Joseph detain'd his Brother Simeon in Prison, to be assured of the Truth of what his Brethren [Gen. xliii. 19.] had told him, concerning his Father and his Brother Benjamin. The Blasphemer that [Lev. xxiv. 12.] was brought to Moses, and the Man that was found gathering Sticks on the Sabbath-day [Numb.xv. 34.] , were put in Ward 'till the Lord declared the Kind of Punishment they were to [Jer. xxxii. 2, 8. Matthew xiv. 3.] undergo. Jeremiah and John the Baptist were shut up in Prison, that they might not have the Power of Speaking with so much Freedom to the People.

But, often, Imprisonment was made a Punishment, when it was attended with Shame and Severities. When Joseph was unjustly accused by Potiphar's Wife, he [Genesis xxxix. 20.] was put into Prison, and loaded with Fetters. Samson was taken by the Philistines, [Judg. xvi. 21.] cast into a Dungeon, had his Eyes put out, and forced to grind at the Mill. Hoshea King of Israel, Jehoahaz, and Manasseh King of Judah, were shut up in Prison by their Conquerors the Kings of Assyria and Chaldea. Zedekiah underwent the same Hardships, to which was added the Punishment of having his Eyes put out. Ahab King of Israel gave Orders, that the [1 Kings xxii. 27.] Prophet Micaiah should be shut up in Prison; that he should be fed with the Bread of Affliction, and drink of the Water of Distress, 'till his Return from his Expedition against Ramothgilead.

[Jer. xxvii. 2.] Bonds, Fetters, Shackles, Manacles, and Chains, which usually attended Imprisonment, must be look'd upon as Punishments, which were a great Aggravation to that of being kept in Prison. Bonds, Hand-cuffs, and Chains are still known, and in use; but the ancient Hebrews had a kind of Yoke, framed of two Pieces of Wood, long, and pretty broad, in which they made a Notch for the Criminal to put his Neck in. Jeremiah received an Order from the Lord, to make Bonds and Yokes, and to put them upon his Neck, and to send some to the Kings of Edom, Moab, Ammon, and Tyre, to declare their approaching Captivity by the King of Chaldea. They also made use of Stocks, wherein were Holes at several Distances, through which they made the Prisoners put their Legs, at a greater or lesser Distance, according as they had a mind to torment them more or less. See Job xiii. 27. & xxxiii. 11. Prov. viii. 22. Prudentius has described this Punishment, in these two short Verses;

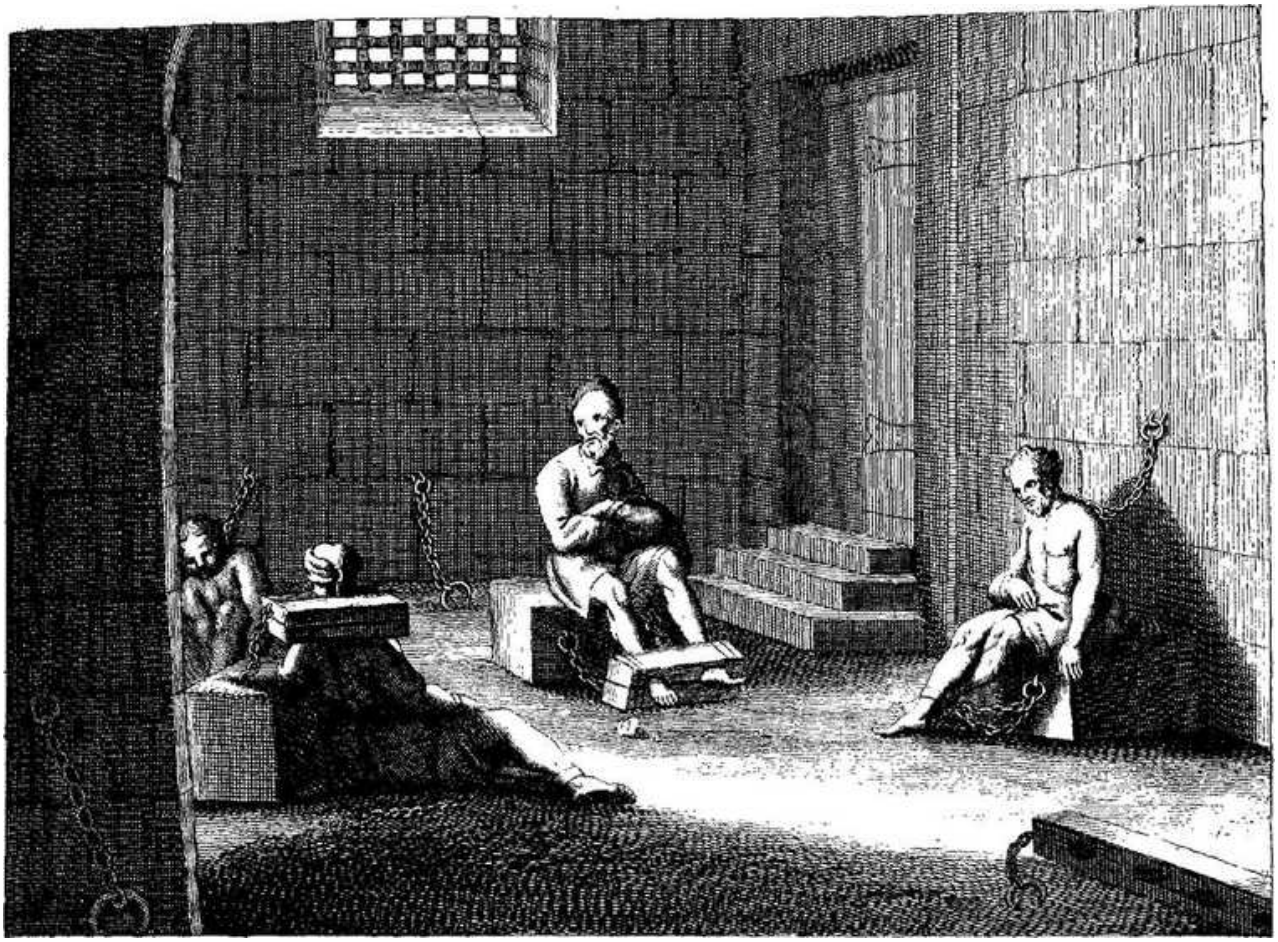
[Prudent. hymn. 4.] Lignoque plantas inserit,



Divaricatis cruribus.

To throw headlong into the Sea from a Precipice, with a Stone ty'd about the Neck, was not a common Punishment: If it has been sometimes us'd among the Hebrews, it was in singular Cases. Amaziah [2 Chron. xxv. 12.] King of Judah forced ten thousand Idumeans, whom he had taken Prisoners of War, to leap from the Top of a high Rock. There are some of Opinion also, that they precipitated from the Rock of Horeb, or Oreb, the King of the Midianites of the same Name, when they were defeated by [Judg. vii. 25. Luke iv. 29.] Gideon; Interfecit Oreb in petrâ Oreb. The Jews intended to precipitate Jesus Christ from the Top of their Mountain. St. James the Just was thrown down from the highest Part of the Temple, into the Valley below. Zachariah Son of Baruch was put [Joseph. de Bello, l. 5. c. 1.] to Death in the midst of the Temple, and his Body thrown into a deep Place that was beneath the Walls of that holy Place. Jesus Christ mentions the Punishment of casting [Mat. xviii. 6. Grot. & le Clerc, in Mat. xviii. Gen. xl. 19.] a Man into the Sea, with a Stone about his Neck: Expedit ei ut suspendatur mola asinaria in collo ejus, & demergatur in profundum maris. We are told, this was a common Punishment among the Syrians.

The Punishment of the Sword. In Scripture we meet with several Instances of Decapitations. Pharaoh's chief Baker had his Head cut off; after which, his Body was hung upon a Gibbet. Abimelech Son of of Gideon cut off the Heads of seventy Sons of Gideon, his Brethren, upon one Stone. The [Judg. ix. 11.] People of Samaria cut off the Heads of seventy of the Sons of Ahab, and sent them in [2 Kings x. 7. Mat. xiv. 8, 11.] Baskets to King Jehu. John the Baptist was beheaded in Prison, by the Order of Herod. 'Tis needless to enlarge any farther upon this Subject, as it will not supply us with any particular Observation, either upon the Matter or Instrument of this Sort of Execution.

To tear to death under Thorns, under Harrows, under the Feet of Elephants, are things not to be heard of among the Western People; but we find some Examples of them in Scripture. When Gideon returned from pursuing the Midianites, he tore with Thorns and Brambles of the Desart, the chief Men of the City of Succoth, who had insulted him. 'Tis thought that David did something [Judg. viii. 16. 2 Sam. viii. 2.] like this to the Moabites. And he smote Moab, and measured them with a Line, casting them down to the Ground; even with two Lines measured he, to put to death, and with one full Line to keep alive. What is said in the Text of casting them down to the Ground, is favourable to this Explication.

He made the Ammonites undergo a Punishment [2 Sam. xii. 31.] that was still more cruel. Populum (Regis Ammon) adducens serravit, & circumegit super eos ferrata carpenta, divisitque cultris, & traduxit in typo laterum. That is, he put them under Saws, and under Harrows of Iron, and under Axes of Iron, and made them pass thro' the Brick-kiln.

We shall particularly speak of the Punishment of the Saw, under the Article SAW. The Harrows or Sledges of Iron here mentioned, were Machines proper for thrashing of Corn, in order to get the Grain out of the Straw; of which there were several Kinds. But they were all loaded with Iron or Stones for bruising the Straw. See HARROWS. Lastly, he made them pass under Axes of Iron, and through the Places for making of Bricks. Whether by these last Words we are to understand the Furnace in which the Bricks are burnt, or the Place where the Earth is beat and macerated, in which these miserable Wretches were executed; these Punishments were very horrible, but were tolerated among those People, who allowed themselves the Liberty of putting all to death that they took in War.

Ptolemy Philopator, King of Egypt,[2] thinking to enter by Force into the Sanctuary of the Temple of Jerusalem, and being prevented by the Priests, resolved to exterminate all the Jews in his Dominions, who would not embrace the Pagan Religion. He had a List taken of them, and gave Orders to the Keeper of his Elephants, to give those Creatures a Quantity of Wine mingled with Incense, to increase their Fury by this intoxicating Liquor. After this the Jews were to be exposed to them, to be trod under Foot and killed by them. But God prevented the Execution of this barbarous Design: For the Elephants turn'd themselves against the Soldiers that were to manage them, and trod them to Pieces. The Prophet Micah alludes to this kind of Punishment, when he says, He [Mic. iv. 12, 13.] shall gather them as the Sheaves into the Floor. Arise and thresh, O Daughter of Zion, for I will make thine Horn Iron, and I will make thy Hoofs Brass, and thou shalt beat in Pieces many People. Amilcar the Carthaginian General, caused some Carthaginians and [Prophyr. de abstin. l. 2. p. 227.] some Strangers, who had betray'd the Interests of the Republick, to be trod under Foot by his Elephants.

To cut off the Hair of guilty Persons, seems to be a Punishment rather shameful than painful; and yet it is thought, that Pain likewise was added to the Disgrace; and that they were not contented to shave or cut the Hair, but tore it off with Violence, as if they were plucking a Bird alive. This is the genuine Signification of the Hebrew Word,[3] and of the Greek as it is read in Nehemiah. I contended with them, and smote certain of them, and plucked off their Hair. Sometimes they put hot Ashes on the Skin, after they had torn off the Hair, to make the Pain the more exquisite. 'Twas thus they served Adulterers at Athens; as is observed by the Scholiast on [Aristoph. nubibus.] Aristophanes.

This kind of Punishment was common in [Plutarch. apothegm.] Persia. King Artaxerxes made some Alterations in it. Instead of plucking off the Hair of such of his Generals, who had been guilty of a Fault, they were obliged to lay aside the Tiara. The Emperor Domitian caused the Hair and Beard of the Philosopher Apollonius [Philostrat. l. 3. c. 24.] to be shaved. In France they cut off the Hair of Sorcerers and Magicians. This Torture has often been inflicted upon the Martyrs of the Christian Religion. In the impious Book that the Jews composed of the Life of Jesus Christ, under the Name of Toledos Jesu, they say their Ancestors caused his Hair to be cut off, and afterwards his Head to be rubb'd with a Liquor, which prevented the Hair from growing again, and made him bald all his Life after. It is observed in the Book, call'd The Government of Reason, and which is quoted under the Name of the fourth Book of the Mac cabees, that Antiochus Epiphanes caus'd the Hair and Skin and all, to be tore from the [4 Macc. c. 7. 2. Macc. vii. 4.] Heads of some of the Seven Brethren the Maccabees.

To pluck out the Eyes, and to make blind, are Punishments not common; and though Moses had appointed, that an Eye should be given for an Eye, and a Tooth for a Tooth, a yet it is the Opinion of Commentators, [Ita Rabb. & Interp. passim.] that this was very seldom put in Practice according to the Letter; and that the Offender was generally punished by a pecuniary Penalty, which was converted to the Use of the injur'd Party. When the Philistines laid hold on Samson, and intended to prevent his doing them any more Harm, they put him in Prison, and bored out his Eyes. Eruerunt oculos ejus. When Nahash King of the Ammonites made War with the City of Jabesh-gilead, he threatned them to admit of no other Composition with them, but that of their submitting to have every one his right Eye put out. Nebuchadnezzar took King Zedekiah, and had his Children put to death in his Presence, then caused his [2 Kings xxv. 7.] Eyes to be put out, and afterwards had him carried to Jerusalem in Chains.

To cut off the Extremities of the Feet and Hands, was a Piece of Cruelty formerly exercised by Adonibezek, King of Bezek, [Judg. i. 6, 7.] upon seventy Kings who had the Misfortune to be conquer'd by him, and who eat like Dogs under his Table. But God thought fit to have him tortured after the same manner that he had tortured others. The Israelites conquer'd him, took him, and cut off the Extremities of his Hands and Feet. David treated the Murderers of Ishbosheth in the same manner, and had their Bodies hung up over the Pool of Hebron. Antiochus Epiphanes also cut off the Extremities of the Hands and Feet from the seven Brothers Maccabees. When Alexander the Great came [1 Macc. 1. 4. & 2 Macc. vii. 4.] near to Persepolis, a Company of Eight hundred Greeks came to present themselves before him, and to entreat his Protection and their own Liberty. They had been taken [Diodor. Sicul. Just. Quint. Curt.] Captives by the Kings of Persia, and been maimed by them, some having their Feet or Hands cut off, and others their Noses. They had also the Marks of Slavery imprinted upon them, which were a sort of rough Characters in their Skins, that could not be got out.

The Punishment of the Wheel is not known in the Canonical Books either of the Old or New Testament. But it is found in the fourth Book of the Maccabees, otherwise called The Government of Reason, which is commonly ascribed to the Historian Josephus. He says, that the fifth and sixth of the [4 Macc. seu de imperio] Brethren Maccabees were

[9. In Græc.] rationi c. 20. put upon the Wheel. The first of them was dragged upon a Machine, which the Author calls Catapulta, upon which they ty'd his Knees with strong Chains, and violently bent his Back upon a Wheel, so that he was rolled like a Scorpion about the Wheel. The second was also brought and fastened with Violence upon the Wheel, so that all his Bones were dislocated; then they burned his Sides and Bowels with red hot Spits, which the Soldiers had heated for that Purpose.

I doubt not but what is here called a Wheel, is nearly the same thing as the wooden Horse or Tressel, concerning which so much has been said. The Reader may compare what is here said of the Punishment of the Wheel, with what has been said of the wooden Horse, and he will find almost the same Characters observable in both. They violently stretch'd out the Criminals upon the Machine, drawing their Limbs with Ropes or Pullies; then they whipt them, dislocated their Joints, burnt their Sides, tore off their Skin with Iron Pincers, kept them lying sometimes upon their Backs, sometimes upon their Bellies, sometimes with their Heads uppermost, sometimes bending double, and sometimes with their Heads hanging downwards. The Form of the Wheel gave them Opportunity of putting the miserable Patients into all manner of painful Postures. The Wheel to which Ixion was fastened according to the Fable, was always turning round. Suidas says, that they used to fasten Slaves to the Wheel, and there whip them. The Acts of the Martyrs often tell us, that they stretch'd the Bodies of these Saints upon the Engine, and there made them suffer several Kinds of Torture.

To be exposed to wild Beasts, and to fight with the Beasts, was a Punishment very frequent among the Romans. It has some relation to that which we have mentioned before, of being squeezed to death under the Feet of Elephants. St. Paul says, that he fought with Beasts when he was at Ephesus. Ad bestias pugnavi Ephes. See what has been said in the Article of St.

PAUL. Sometimes they were only expos'd to the Beasts, to be devour'd by them, as St. Ignatius the Martyr was to the Lions; either to serve as Sport to them, as Saint Perpetua, who was exposed to a wild Cow, being enclosed within Nets, that she could not make her Escape; or, lastly, to fight with the Beasts, as was the Case of St. Paul at Ephesus.

Sometimes they demolished the Houses of Offenders, and reduced them to a common Place for Filth and Dung. Thus was treated the Temple of Baal by King Jehu. Destruxerunt ædem Baal, & fecerunt pro ea[1] [Dan. ii. 27. Dan. iii. 29. Ezr. vi. 11.] latrinas. Nebuchadnezzar threatened the Diviners of Chaldea, to make them undergo this Punishment and Disgrace, if they did not declare his Dream to him. Domus vestræ publicabuntur. He afterwards decreed the same Penalty to all such, as should not worship the God of Shadrach, Meshech, and Abednego. And King Darius in the same manner threatned those, who should any how withstand the Jews. Domus ejus publicetur. However, there are good Interpreters, who explain these Passages only as Confiscations to the King's Use.

Punon

PUNON, or Phunon, a Station of the [Numb. xxxiii. 42, 43.] Hebrews in the Wilderness. 'Tis also call'd Phæno, Phaino, and Metallo-phœnon, because of the Mines of Metals there found. Eusebius says, that this Place was situate between Petra and Segor; and elsewhere he places it four Miles from Dedan. St. [Athanas. Epist. ad Solitarios.] Athanasius says, that these Mines of Phanos were so dangerous, that Murtherers condemn'd to work there, could not live but a few Days. We find Bishops of Phenos in the Subscriptions of the Councils.

[Lucan l. 9. Isai. xiv. 29. xxx. 6.] 'Tis thought to be at Punon that Moses erected the Brazen Serpent, for the Cure of the murmuring Israelites, who had been bit by the fiery Serpents. Others believe this happened at the Encampment of Zalmonah. The Matter is thus related in the Book of Numbers. a The People began to be tired of their Journey, and to murmur against the Lord. Wherefore the Lord sent Serpents among them, the biting of which burned like Fire. The Hebrew reads Seraphim, Serpents, or burning Serpents, which is generally understood by the Præster, a sort of Serpent, which by its biting causes a great Inflammation in the Face, and a Swelling through the whole Body. Isaiah says expresly, that the Saraph was a flying Serpent, and Historians inform us, that such are found in Arabia and Egypt. See Herodot. l. 2. c. 76. and the Authors quoted in Bochart, de Animalibus sacris, part. 2. l. 3. c. 13. and the Article SERPENT hereafter.

But Moses goes on thus: Several Israelites having been kill'd and wounded by the [John iii. 14, 15.] biting of these Serpents, the People came to Moses, and said to him; We have sinn'd in speaking against the Lord, and against thee. Pray to him, that he would deliver us from these Serpents. Moses therefore having pray'd for the People, the Lord said to him; Make a Brazen Serpent, and set it up for a Sign: Whosoever is bit, and shall look upon it, shall be forthwith healed. Moses therefore made a Serpent of Brass, and fix'd it upon a Standard, to serve as a Sign; and whoever look'd upon it when wounded, were immediately healed. Our Saviour in the Gospel says to Nicodemus; As Moses lifted up the Serpent in the Wilderness, even so must the Son of Man be lifted up; that whosoever believeth in him, should not perish, but have eternal Life. Shewing by this, that he was to die upon the Cross, for the Salvation of Mankind.

We have shewn under the Article NOHESTAN, that this Brazen Serpent was preserved among the Jews to the time of King Hezekiah; and that this wise Prince seeing the Abuse that was then made of it by the People, who paid an idolatrous and superstitious Worship to it, he caused it to be destroy'd, and named it Nohestan, in Derision.[1]

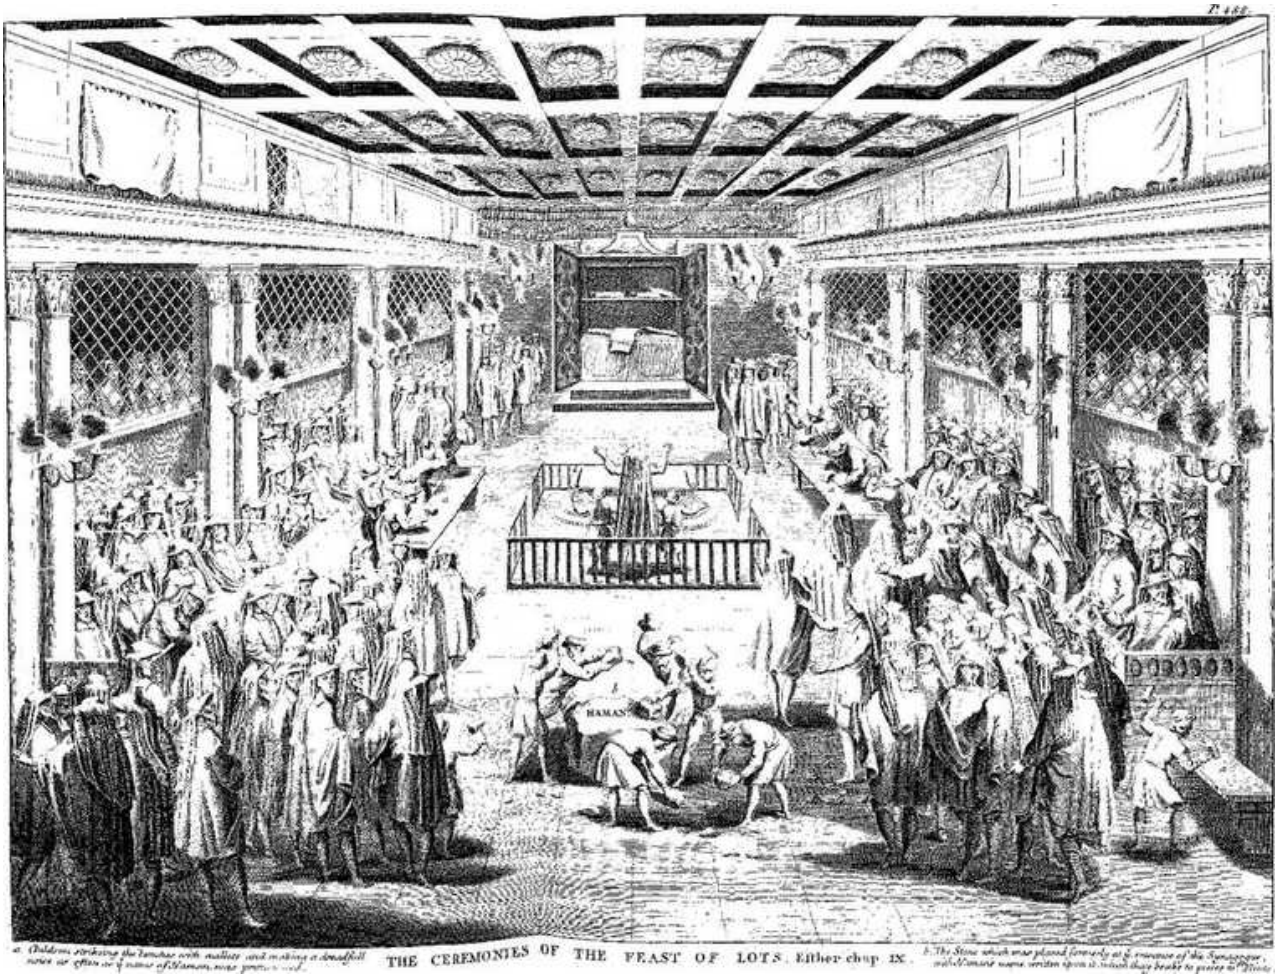
Pur

[Esther iii. 7.] PUR, or Phur, or Purim; that is to say, Lots. This was a very solemn Feast of the Jews, instituted in Memory of the Lots that were cast by Haman, the Enemy of the Jews. These Lots were cast in the first Month of the Year, and mark'd out the twelfth Month of the same Year, for the Execution of Haman's Design, which was to destroy all the Jews of the Kingdom of Persia. Thus the Superstition of Haman, in casting and pursuing the Event of these Lots, was the Cause of his own Ruin, and of the Preservation of the Jews; who had now Time to avert this Blow, by means of Esther the Spouse of Ahasuerus, and to remove those ill Impressions he had conceived of the Jews. In memory of this so signal and miraculous Deliverance, the Jews instituted a Feast, to which they gave the Name of Pur or Purim. See the Articles HAMAN, ESTHER, and MORDECAI.

The Word Phur or Pur is rather Persian than Hebrew. It properly signifies Lot; and in that Passage of the Vulgate, Missa est sors in urnam, quæ Hebraicè dicitur Phur; the last Word has not relation to urnam but to sors. The Feast of Lots was celebrated among the Jews of Shushan on the 14th Day of Adar, and among the other People of the Persian Empire on the 15th of the same Month, which answers to our February. See Esther ix. 18, 19, 21. and 2 Macc. xv. 39. The Jews have exactly kept this Feast down to our Times,[1] and these are the Ceremonies they observe in the Celebration of it. a On the Eve of the Feast, if it is a Day on which they may fast, they keep a strict Fast, in memory of that kept by Esther and Mordecai. If the Day will not allow them to fast, because it may happen to be the Sabboth, or the Eve of the Sabboth, on which they never fast, they anticipate the Fast; that is, instead of fasting on the 13th of Adar, they fast on the 11th of the same Month. According to Rule they should remain without eating for four and twenty Hours, or from one Evening to the next; and from thirteen Years old they are obliged to keep this Fast.



On the Eve of the Feast, they give their Alms liberally to the Poor, that these also may make much of themselves on the Feast of Lots: And on the Day of the Feast they send a Share of what they have at Table, to those that have need. On the Evening of the Thirteenth of Adar, when the Feast begin, they assemble in the Synagogue, and light up their Lamps; and as soon as the Stars begin to appear, they begin to read the Book of Esther. They continue the reading of it from one end to the other. There are five Places in the Text, wherein the Reader raises his Voice with all his Might, and makes such a dreadful Howling, as to frighten the Women and Children. When he comes to the Place that mentions the Names of the ten Sons of Haman, he repeats them very quick without taking Breath, to shew that these ten Persons were destroyed in a Moment. Every time the Name of Haman is pronounced, the Children with great Fury strike against the Benches of the Synagogues with Mallets, or Stones, and make lamentable Cries. 'Tis said that heretofore they used to bring into their Synagogues a great Stone, with the Name of Haman written upon it, and all the while the Book of Esther was reading, they struck against it with other Stones, till they had beat it to Pieces.

After the Reading was finish'd, they return'd into their Houses, where they made a Meal rather of Milk-meats than of Flesh. The Day following, early in the Morning, they return'd to the Synagogue, where, after they had read that Passage of Exodus, wherein is mention'd the War of Amalek, they begin again to read the Book of Esther with the same Ceremonies as before. After which they return home, and make as good cheer as they can, and pass the rest of the Day in Sports and dissolute Mirth, the Men dressing themselves in Womens Cloaths, and Women in Mens, contrary to an express [Deut. xxiii. 5. Cod. de Judæis & Cælicol. L. Jud.] Prohibition of the Law. And their Doctors have decided upon this Point,[2] that upon this Day they may drink Wine 'till they cannot distinguish between, Cursed be Haman, and Cursed be Mordecai. Heretofore they used to erect a Gibbet, and upon it to burn a Man made of Straw, which they call'd Haman. But it was thought they had an Intention of insulting the Christians upon the Death of Christ, and therefore the Emperors forbad them to use this Ceremony, on Penalty of forfeiting all their Privileges.

The Feast of Purim, or Lots, in the manner that the Jews observe it, has a good deal of Resemblance to the antient Bacchanalia of the Pagans. Pleasures, Diversions, Joy, good Cheer, make as it were the very Essence of it. The Spirit of Revenge which animated the Jews of Shushan against their Enemies, has pass'd even to their Posterity. They deliver themselves up to it without Measure and without Bounds. They allow themselves the drinking of Wine even to Excess, because, say they, it was by making King Ahasuerus drink, that Esther procured the Deliverance of the Jews. They compel every one to be present at the Synagogue, Man, Woman, Child, and Servant; because all had a Share in the Deliverance, as all were expos'd to the Danger. On this Day Scholars make Presents to [Leo of Modena, Ceremonies of the Jews, p. 3. c. 10. Esth. ix. 22.] their Masters, Heads of Families to their Domesticks, great ones to those of mean Condition. In a Word, the whole Day is spent in Joyfulness and Feasting. As it is said in the Book of Esther; That they should make them Days of Feasting and Joy, and of sending Portions one to another, and Gifts to the Poor.

This Festival continues for two Days, but only the first of them is kept with Solemnity. During these two Days they may work or do Business; yet they refrain the first Day, though they are not obliged to it. The second Day they read no new Lesson in the Synagogue, and the Feast is not so great; but they however shew some Marks of Festivity. When the Year consists of thirteen Months, and that there are two Adars, that is to say, when at the End of two or three Years there is a supernumerary Month in the Lunar Year, they reckon'd the Month Adar twice over, which they insert between February and March, and then the second Adar is call'd Ve-Adar. See the Articles MONTH and INTERCALATION. When therefore there are two Adars, they celebrate the Feast of Lots twice over; the grand Purim is on the fourteenth of the first Adar, and the lesser Purim is on the fourteenth of the[3] second Adar. But this second Feast of Lots [Basnage, Hist. of the Jews, t. 5. l. 7. c. 16.] is not accompany'd with the Diversions of the first, it has properly nothing but the Name of it.

THE CEREMONIES OF THE FEAST OF LOTS.Esther chap. IX.

On the Eve of the Festival they gather the Half-shekel which was formerly paid to the Temple, and which at present they distribute among such as undertake a Journey to Jerusalem, whither several of them repair out of Devotion, and where they covet to be buried; believing that all the Jews are to rendezvous there at the last Judgment, and that they shall even pass thither thro' the Bowels of the Earth.

They read the Text of Esther, not out of a printed Book, nor out of a Book in Form of ours, but out of a Roll of Vellum, in the antient Manner, which is wrote with a particular kind of Ink. After they have spread open the Volume, they make three Prayers, to thank God for calling them to this Ceremony, for having deliver'd them, and for having continued their Lives to the Celebration of this Festival. On this Day the Reader may sit down while he reads, whereas at other Times he must stand up while he reads the Law. The reading of the Book of Esther is concluded with Curses against Haman and his Wife Seres, with Blessings of Mordecai and Esther, and with Praises to God for having preserved his People. Rest is observed very religiously, especially the first Day; and the Jews tell us, that a Man having sown Flax on this Day, not one Grain of it came up.

It was the Emperor Theodosius II. who [Idem. t. 8. l. 8. c. 6. p. 194.] forbad the Jews to erect Gibbets, to fix an Image upon them, which they call'd Human, and afterwards to burn them both; because it was not fit that in their Festivals they should insult the Mysteries of the Christian Religion. This Decree was publish'd through the whole East in the Year 408, and directed to Anthemius, who was Prefect there. Yet three Years after, some Jews in the Extravagance of their Passion and Height of their Frolicks, notwithstanding this express Prohibition of the Emperor, fasten'd a young Christian to a Gibbet instead of a Human, whom they whipp'd so cruelly, that he died on the Spot. This Fact was committed in the City of Inmestar, situated in Chalcis and Syria. The Christians in the Country took up Arms; the Fight was bloody, because the Jews were numerous in those Parts. The Governor of the Province having acquainted Theodosius with it, he gave Orders for the Punishment of those that were the Occasion of the Riot, which then was soon appeas'd.

Purgatory

PURGATORY. This Word is not to be found in Scripture, neither in the Old or New Testament. But the sacred Authors of both the Covenants believed the thing intended by this Word, and have express'd it in equivalent Terms, upon more Occasions than one. We mean therefore by the Word Purgatory, that State of those Souls, which having departed out of this Life without expiating certain Impurities that deserve not eternal Damnation, or which not having undergone the Punishments due to their Sins, expiate them by such Punishments as God inflicts on them, before they enjoy his Presence.

[2 Mac. xii. 43, &c.] 'Tis said in the Maccabees, that when Judas had stripp'd his Soldiers who had been slain in Battle, he found hid under their Cloaths Things that had been consecrated to Idols, which the Law forbad to [Deut. vii. 25, 26.] take away. Non inferes quicquam ex Idolo in domum tuam. 'Tis added, Then every Man saw that this was the Cause wherefore they were slain. All Men therefore praising the Lord the righteous Judge, who had opened the Things that were hid, betook themselves unto Prayer, and besought him, that the Sin committed might wholly be put out of Remembrance. And when he had made a Gathering throughout the Company, to the Sum of two thousand Drachms of Silver, he sent it to Jerusalem to offer a Sin-offering, doing therein very well and honestly, in that he was mindful of the Resurrection. For if he had not hoped that they that were slain should have risen again, it had been superfluous and vain to pray for the Dead. And also in that he perceived that there was great Favour laid up for those that died godly. It was an holy and good Thought. Whereupon he made a Reconciliation for the Dead, that they might be delivered from Sin. This Passage fully declares the Sentiments of the Jews before the Time of our Saviour.

[Matth. xii. 32.] As to the New Testament, Christ in the Gospel says, that there are certain Sins that shall not be forgiven, neither in this World, nor in the World to come. Consequently he allows, that there are some Sins that may be forgiven in the other World. St. [2 Tim. i. 18.] Paul prays for Onesiphorus then departed, The Lord grant unto him that he may find Mercy of the Lord in that Day. But if Prayers may be made for the Dead, then there is a Purgatory, and a State wherein they may be benefited by our Prayers.

The Jews acknowledge a kind of Purgatory, which continues for one whole Year after the Person is departed. During these first twelve Months, the Soul is at Liberty to come upon Earth, to visit its Body, and to frequent those Places and Persons, to which it had a particular Relation during its Life here. They pray for the Repose of the Dead for all this Time, and are persuaded, that they administer much Consolation to them by their Prayers, that they procure Rest for them, and Pardon of their Sins.

The Place wherein the Prevaricators of Israel are punished after their Death, or such Jews as are one Day to be deliver'd out of their Pains; this Place is the same as Hell, where the Impious are kept, or such whose Calamity is without Resource and without Hope. But there is a great deal of Difference between these two Sorts of Sufferers; first, as to the Pain, which is much more tolerable as to the former than the latter; and secondly, as to the Duration of it, since that of the Prevaricators of Israel will one Day have an End, and may be much shorten'd and abated by the Prayers and Offerings of the Living; whereas the Torments of the Wicked are to endure for ever.

We read some Stories in the Books of the Rabbins, which prove, that Purgatory is a popular Opinion among them. The [Vide Cod Chagigeah Bartolocci t. 2.p.152] Rabbi Elisha Son of Abia fell into the Error of the two Principles, from which he was converted towards the End of his Life. However, his Salvation was doubted of. One of his Friends, call'd Meir, undertook to cause Smoke to proceed out of his Tomb, as a Token that he was in Purgatory. Another Rabbi named Jehonan took upon himself to cause this Smoke to cease, as a Token that he was deliver'd out of Purgatory. They both accomplish'd what they had propos'd, and then it was no longer doubted but that Elisha was saved.

[Rab. Tanchan. Parasch. Toledoth Noah.] The Rabbi Akiba saw once in a Churchyard, a Man that had been departed a good while, walking in great Haste with a Burthen of Wood upon his Shoulders. Akiba ask'd him if he had Occasion for any Assistance. The dead Man told him, that in his Life-time he had been a Receiver of Customs, and to expiate the Extortions he had committed in this Employment, he was condemned to perform the Office of carrying Wood in this manner. He desir'd him to inform his Widow and Son of the State he was in. Akiba found out the Wife and Son, and taught him to say, Blessed be the Lord, and let him be blessed. And no sooner had he pronounced these Words, but his Father was deliver'd out of Purgatory, and appear'd to Akiba to thank him. We have as much Contempt for this kind of Stories as they deserve; but they may serve as a Proof, that the Jews believe a Purgatory.

They call Purgatory, Abraham's Bosom, the Treasury of the Living, the Garden of Eden, and Upper Gehenna. Hell they call the Lower Gehenna. They believe that all the Israelites have a Portion in the World to come, or the State of Happiness, either immediately after Death, or after they have attoned for their Sins in Purgatory. There are but a very small Number of their Nation, who are great Profligates, that are for ever excluded out of Heaven. a As for the rest, they hold that they continue not above a Year in Purgatory. The Sabbath-day is a Day of Remission for the Souls in Purgatory; they do not burn upon that Day. The Jews offer up a great many Prayers, and Works of Satisfaction, on the Day of solemn Expiation, for the Comfort of such Souls as are in the Upper Gehenna.

The Mussulmen, whose false Religion is a Composition of Judaism, Christianity, and Deism, have, doubtless, borrow'd from the Jews and Christians the Notions they have of Purgatory. They acknowledge at least two of 'em. The first is what [D'Herbelot Bibl. Orient. p. 57.] they call Adhabalcabor, the Penalty of the Sepulchre. No sooner is a Man buried, but two Angels call'd Moukir and Nekir examine the dead Man, and condemn him to expiate the Crimes he has committed in that same Place: But at the Day of Judgment they are deliver'd from them by their Submission to the Justice of God, and by the Intercession of their false Prophet. In this first Judgment of the Sepulchre, it is allow'd every one to speak in his own Justification; but at the last Judgment Men must not dare to say any thing, nor presume to bring any Extenuation or Excuse. The Turks call'd Motazals do not admit of this first Purgatory of the Sepulchre; but it is the general Belief of the other Mahometans.

[Idem, p. 121, 122.] The second Purgatory, according to many of the Mussulmen, is the Place call'd Araf, lying between Paradise and Hell. What divides them is only a Vale, according to some, or a thick Wall, according to others. They are not agreed who they are that inhabit this Araf. Some place the Patriarchs and Prophets there, others the Martyrs, and the most eminent for Sanctity among the Faithful. But several Doctors dispose of such Mussulmen there, whose good and bad Actions approach so near to an Equality, that they had not Merit enough to deserve Paradise, nor Demerit enough to be condemned to the Pains of Hell. From thence they see the Happiness of the Blessed; but they do not partake of it; and this Privation gives them their greatest Torment. But at the great Day of Judgment, those that are kept in[1] this Place will prostrate themselves before the Throne of the great Judge, will acknowledge and adore his Power, and by those Acts of Adoration their good Actions will so far exceed their bad ones, that they will be admitted into Happiness.

Besides these two Purgatories now mention'd, they have still a third call'd Barzak. [D'Herbelot. Bibl. Orient. p. 191.] By this Name the Mahometans call that Space of Time which is to pass between Death and the Resurrection. They think there is neither Paradise nor Hell for Men during this Interval. This seems to have been taken from the Opinion of some of the Fathers, not well understood, who have thought that the State of Souls was not fix'd and determin'd, 'till after the Day of Judgment.

Purifications

PURIFICATIONS. There were several kinds of Purifications among the Hebrews, which had relation to the several Impurities that might be contracted. See before the Article of LEGAL IMPURITIES. We have also spoke of several of these Impurities, as Occasion was offer'd in the different Articles. See for Example, LEPROSY, GONORRHEA, DEAD BODIES, NAZARITES. When a Woman was brought to Bed of a Boy, she was esteem'd impure for forty Days; [Lev. xii. 1,2,3,&c.] that is, seven Days during which she could not touch any thing, but that it became defiled. After this she was still impure for thirty Days, but her Impurity was such, as did not hinder her from taking Care of her houshold Affairs. She was only excluded from the Use and Participation of holy Things. If she had brought forth a Girl, she was judged unclean for sixty Days; that is, two Weeks in which she could not touch any thing without defiling it, but the rest of her Time she was only excluded from the Use of holy Things, and might not go to the Temple, nor celebrate the Passover, nor eat of the Peace-offering, &c.

When the Days of her Purification were ended, she carry'd a Lamb to the Entrance of the Tabernacle, or the Temple, to be offer'd for a Burnt-offering, and a young Pigeon or Turtle for a Sin-offering. If she was not of Substance enough to offer a Lamb, she gave two Turtles, or two young Doves, of which one was for a Burnt-offering, and the other for a Sin-offering.

Though the Holy Virgin was not subject to the Law that says,[1] Mulier si suscepto semine pepererit masculum, &c. yet she did not scruple to comply with it, to give us an Example of the profoundest Humility and Submission. [Luk. ii. 2, 23, &c.] And to preserve the Memory of this, the Church has instituted the Feast of the Purification of the Virgin Mary, commonly call'd Candlemas-Day, which is kept on the second Day of February, and on which those of the Church of Rome carry Wax Candles in their Hands, as it were, to shew more sensibly the coming of Jesus Christ, whom Simeon in his Canticle, pronounced on this Occasion, calls the Light of the Gentiles, and the Glory of the People of Israel. But those that have most examin'd into this Matter think, that the true historical Reason of the solemn Procession made upon this Day, was instituted to wear out the Memory of those profane Sacrifices, that the Pagans us'd to make in the Month of February,[2] to lustrate or purify the Men, Fields, and Cities; and that the Candles us'd in this Solemnity were instead of the Torches carry'd by the Pagans in the Feasts of Lupercalia,[3] wherein naked Men ran through the Streets with lighted Torches, and committed a thousand Insolencies.

This Feast was solemnly instituted by the Emperor Justinian, about the Middle of the sixth Century; and perhaps in some Places it was celebrated before. But this Prince fixed it to the second Day of February, and ordain'd, that it should be celebrated in an uniform Manner through the whole Empire. And this was readily follow'd by such Places as were not under his Dominion. They gave to this Feast the Name of Hypapante, which in Greek signifies meeting, because when Jesus Christ came into the Temple, Simeon and Anna may be said to have come before him, and there to have met with Joseph and Mary, in order to give their Testimony of him.

In the same Feast is celebrated the Memory of the Presentation of Jesus Christ in the Temple, in Quality of the First-born of Mary, in Obedience to the Law which enjoyns, [Exod. xiii. 13.] that all the First-born Children should be presented to the Lord, and redeem'd by their Parents with the Sum of five Shekels. We have already spoken of this Law under the Article of FIRSTBORN, and we have there examin'd whether Jesus Christ was subject to it, having not been conceived and born as other Men. Upon the Feast of the Purification of the Virgin Mary, the Reader may consult the Bollandists on the second of February; Father Thomassin in his Treatise upon the Feasts, M. Baillet, and those that have wrote Notes upon the Martyrologies; M. de Tillemont, t. 1. n. 7. upon Jesus Christ.

The Jews that lived at too great a Distance from the Temple, and could not resort thither to purify themselves from some certain Defilements, which were unavoidable able in the ordinary Way of Life; for Example, such Pollutions as they contracted at the Burial of the Dead, to whom they were obliged to pay their last Duties; made use of the Ashes of the Red Heifer which was sacrificed for this Purpose at Jerusalem, and the Ashes of which were distributed to all Israelites at a Distance. See the Article [Numb. xix. 5.] RED HEIFER.

If a Man and Woman made use of the Marriage-bed, they were unclean 'till the [Levit. xv. 16,17,18.] Evening; they wash'd their Cloaths, and purify'd themselves by Bathing. If a Woman [Levit. xv. 19,20,21, &c.] had her monthly Infirmities, she was unclean for seven Days; whatever she touched during those seven Days was defiled; and those that touched her Bed, Cloaths, or Seat, were unclean 'till the Evening, were to wash their Cloaths, and to purify themselves by Bathing. If during the time of this Infirmity, any Man should come near her, he would be defiled for seven Days, and the Bed they lay upon would also be polluted. If it were with his Knowledge that he then came near her, and the Affair was brought before the Judge, both of them were to be put to death. The antient Christians on many Occasions look'd upon these Infirmities of Women as Defilements, [Levit. xx. 18.] and did not think it lawful then to come near them, perhaps as much out of Decency as Religion. The Turkish Women even to this Day forbear to come to Church while this lasts. The Indians do not so much as suffer their Women to come into their Houses, [Tournefort's Travels to the Levant, t. 1. p. 44.] while they have this Malady upon them.

Even involuntary Pollutions that might [Deut. xxiii. 10.] happen in Sleep, were purify'd by Bathing. He to whom this happen'd was to go out of the Camp, and not to return 'till after Sun-set, and after he had wash'd himself in Water.

The Hebrews had an infinite Number of [Mark vii. 3, 4, 7, 8.] other Purifications. For Example; they did not so much as eat, nor sit down to Table, 'till after they had wash'd their Hands, by pouring Water from their Fingers Ends up to their Elbows. When they return'd into their Houses, they were to wash their Hands. They also purify'd their Pots and Cups, their Beds, and whatever else they made use of, following the Traditions of their Elders. They more than once reproved Jesus Christ and his Apostles, for not washing [Matth. xv. 2. Mark. vii. 2. John. ii. 6.] their Hands before they sate down to eat. At the Feast of the Marriage of Cana, there were six great Pitchers of Water set forth, for the Purification of the Guests.

Purity

PURITY; the Words Pure and Purity, are taken in Scripture in two different Senses: 1. For External Purity; and, 2. For Internal. External Purity is either in respect of such Persons as are capable of partaking of holy Things, and of performing among Men the Duties of civil Life; or in respect of Animals which are declared pure by the Law, and of which they were allow'd to eat; or lastly, in respect of such Things, which having none of the Impurities express'd in the Law, are fit for all the Uses for which they are intended: As for Example; Cloaths, Houses, Utensils, were capable of Impurities, which hinder'd their being made use of. No sooner were they purged from these Impurities, but they became clean, and might be used without any Scruple.

To recover this State of Purity when lost, and to wipe out any contracted Impurity, there were several Sorts of Purifications appointed by the Law. We have already spoken of these under the Article IMPURITIES. Things that were impure of their own Nature, as Carcases and Animals that died of themselves; and such as were so by the Appointment of God, as Animals declared impure by the Law, could never become clean. But Men or Women overtaken by any transient Inconveniencies, which render'd them unclean for a Time, might recover their usual Purity, when these Inconveniencies or Accidents were pass'd or expiated. 'Twas the same in respect of Cloaths, Houses, and Goods; they were purified by Water, Fire, or by some Lustrations. As to such Persons as had contracted any Impurities, sometimes it was necessary that they should offer certain Sacrifices of Expiation. But the most general Method of Purification was the Bath, or the washing of the whole Body. When a Man had been defiled by touching a dead Body, or by assisting at a Funeral, he was wash'd with the Water of Lustration, in which was mixed some of the Ashes of the Red Heifer, which had been sacrificed on the Day of the solemn Expiation. See the Article of IMPURITIES.

Internal Purity consisted in Innocence of Life, in the Purity of the Mind and Heart, in Justice, and in the exact Observation of the Law of the Lord; and the only Way of recovering this Purity when impaired, was the Conversion of the Heart, the Detestation of Sin, and inward Sorrow and Compunction for it. These Dispositions, accompany'd by the Sacrifices required by the Law, in such Cases wherein Men had fallen into any Faults of Negligence, Inadvertency, or Ignorance, or even of Perverseness and Malice, might obtain Pardon for 'em, not by virtue of the external Sacrifice, but by means of the Faith, Contrition, and Charity of him that offer'd it.

Moses is not very explicit upon the Means of recovering this internal Purity, nor is he so minute and accurate upon this, as upon external Purity; and that because as a Law-giver, his first and principal View was to restrain the Hands of Men, and to regulate the external State of his Commonwealth. Not but that Moses, and the other sacred Authors of the Old Testament, say enough to those that have a mind to understand, to prove how little they rely'd upon these outward Purifications and Sacrifices, in respect of the inward Affections of the Heart, of Contrition, Faith in God, and Charity. St. Paul in his Epistles, and particularly in that to the Hebrews, has admirably display'd this Truth to us, telling us, that the Sacrifices and Ordinances of the old Law were of no Virtue in themselves, to heal the inward Distempers of the Soul, and to repair the Outrages done to God by our Sins.

In the new Law, Christians are freed from the Yoke of Ceremonies and legal Impurities, and esteem as real Defilements, none but those of the Soul. Their chief Care is (or ought to be) employ'd, in preserving an inward Purity and Innocence of Mind, and to recover these by Repentance, whenever they shall have the Frailty to part with them. See the Article REPENTANCE.

Purple

[Plin. l. 9. c. 36. Idem, l. 9. c. 38. ארגמן Argaman. Πορφύρος, ἀμόργη. Suidas. Plin. l. 9. c. 41.] PURPLE, the Colour of Purple; in Hebrew, Argaman, in Greek, Porphyros, in Latin, Purpura. The Greeks also made use of the Word Amorge, which is derived from the Hebrew Argaman. 'Tis thought that the fine purple Colour was first invented by Hercules Tyrius, whose Dog by chance having eaten a Shell-fish call'd Murex, or Purpura, and returning to his Master with his Lips tinged with a purple Colour, gave occasion to the Discovery of this fine and precious Dye. But sure it is, that Purple is much more antient than Hercules, since we find it mentioned by Moses in several Places; except under the Name of Hercules, the Tyrians mean some very antient Hero, whom the Greeks afterwards confounded with others. However this be, the Colour of Purple was of a very deep Red, and at the same time soft and shining. Pliny compares it to the Colour of a Rose, which makes some approach to a black Colour. Nigricantis rosæ colore sublucens: Or, of coagulated Blood drawing towards Black, the Red of which has a soft kind of shining. Concreti sanguinis nigricans aspectu, idemque suspectu refulgens. Purple was of more Sorts than one. One was deeper, drawing towards Violet, mingled with a little Red, which was the Ground of it. The other was of a deep Red, but shining, as coagulated Blood. Another more faint, pretty near as our Scarlet. They pretended that the true Purple should strike the Sight mildly and agreeably, in a manner not so forcibly as the Carbuncle. Aspectu leniter blandum, neque in oculos ut carbunculi vibrat.

[Jerem. x. 9. Baruc. vi. 12, 71. Judg. viii. 26. Prov. xxxi. 22. Luk. xvi. 19.] Moses made use of much Wool of a purple Colour in the Works of the Tabernacle, and in the Ornaments of the High-priest. Purple was the Colour made use of by Princes and great Men, by way of Distinction. In the Book of Judges it is observed, that they made Gideon a Present of the purple Habit, which the Kings of Midian used to wear. The Spouse of the Virtuous Woman was cloathed with Silk and Purple. The wicked rich Man of the Gospel, was cloathed in Purple and fine Linen. We see by Jeremiah and Baruch, that the Babylonians put upon their Idols Habits of a purple and azure Colour. When Daniel had explain'd the Writing that God caused to appear to Belshazzar, while he was making his impious Feast at Babylon; he (Daniel) was cloathed in Purple, and [Dan. v. 7.] adorn'd with a Chain of Gold. Alexander Balas King of Syria, sent to Jonathan Maccabeus, a Crown of Gold, and a Habit of Purple, allowing him to take the Title of the King's Friend. Lastly, to make the Royalty [1 Macc. x. 20.] of our Saviour ridiculous and contemptible, they cloathed him with a purple Robe at the [Mark xv. 17. Matth. xxvii. 28.] time of his Passion.

PYGARGUS. This Word literally signifies White Buttocks. This Name is given to a [Deut. xiv. 5. Heb. רישון Dishon. Græc. Πύγαργος.] kind of Eagle with a white Tail. In Moses, it signifies a four-footed Animal, called in Hebrew, Dishon, as much as to say Ash-coloured. The Tragelaphus has a Part of its Back Ash-colour'd [Bellon, Ob. l. 2. c. 51.] ; and Bellon, under the same Name Tragelaphus, describes an Animal with ash-colour'd Spots or Streaks on its Sides. Pliny [Plin. l. 8. c. 53.] speaks of a kind of Roe-buck call'd Pygargus. Herodotus, Ælian, and Juvenal, mention it also. See Bochart. Animal. sacr. p. 2. l. 3. c. 20. And probably this is what the Septuagint and Vulgate mean here by Pygargus.

Pygmies

PYGMIES. Mention is made of the Pygmies in the Latin Translation of Ezekiel. Every one knows what the Meaning of Pygmies is. They were extreamly little Men, from whence the Word Pygmy comes, which [Eze. xxvii. גמדים Gamadim. 70. Φύλακες. Custod. Theodot. Sym. Καὶ Μῆδοι. Et Medi.] signifies a Man of the Stature of a Cubit.

Quorum tota cohors cubito non altior uno. And these were at continual War with the Cranes, from whom they had much ado to defend themselves. But it is believed, that these People never existed any where else, but in the Imagination and Writings of the Poets. The Hebrew Word Gamadim, [Plin. l. 2. c. 91.] dim, has some Relation to Pymæi, since literally it may signify Men of the Stature of a Cubit. But what should Pygmies do upon the Walls of Tyre, in order to defend them? for there they are placed by Ezekiel, as being good Warriors. The Seventy have rendered Gamadim by Guards, as if they had read Somerim. Symmachus has rendered it by the Medes; as if he had read Gam Madai, and the Medes. The Chaldee makes it the Cappadocians. By a slight Alteration, one might read Gomarim instead of Gamadim. But the Gomerim are well known in Gen. x. 4. among the Children of Japheth; and in Ezek. xxxviii. 6. where he mentions them as a very war-like People. Pliny speaks of a City of Phenicia called Gamade; unless there is some Fault in the Text, and instead of Gamade should be read Gamale.

PYRAMIDS. The Pyramids of Egypt are well known, by the Descriptions that have frequently been given of them, both by Antients and Moderns. They mention particularly Gian-ben-gian, the universal Monarch of the World, in the Ages that went before Adam's Creation. Ezekiel speaks of the Sepulchres of the Kings of Egypt, or rather he describes in a poetical Manner, the Retinue of Pharaoh going down to Hell, or into the deepest Parts of the Earth, with his Army put to death by the Sword of the *Chaldeans. Pythagoras [Quid. apud Clem. Alex. l. 1. Strom.] PYTHAGORAS, a famous Philosopher, whom some think to have been a Disciple of the Prophet Ezekiel: For they will have Nazaratus the Assyrian, the Master of Pythagoras, to be the same as Ezekiel. Certain it is, that Pythagoras travelled into Chaldea and Egypt; and it is pretended, that it was in these Voyages that he learned what he knew about the Law of Moses, and especially his Tetrachys, or Quartenary, which is thought to be nothing else but the sacred Name Jehovah, consisting of four [a Hermipp. apud Josep. l. 1. contra Appion. p. 1046. Aristobul. Judæus apud Clem. Alex. Strom. l. 1.] Letters.

But it may be demonstrated, that Pythagoras could not have seen Ezekiel in Chaldea. This Prophet was carry'd thither along with King Jeconiah in 3405, and began to prophesy in 3409; he prophesy'd yet in 3430, fourteen Years after the Taking of Jerusalem. He might then be about fifty Years old, supposing him not to have been above Five and twenty, when he was carry'd away Captive beyond the Euphrates. After the Year 3430, we have no certain Date, either of the Life or Death of this Prophet.

[Dion. Hal. l. 2. hist. p. 120, 121. About 3418. Plin. l. 36. c. 9. Jambl. vit. Pyth. c. 3. 4. Cicero l. 4. Quæst. Thusc. Jambl. vit. Pyth. c. 3.] Dionysius Halicarnassensis shews, that Pythagoras came into the World about the Forty-seventh Olympiad, four Generations after Numa. Usher places his coming into Egypt in the Year of the World 3457, under the Reign of Amasis. He continued there Two and twenty Years, according to Jamblicus. He was taken and carried to Babylon by the Soldiers of Cambyses, in the Year of the World 3479. He returned into Italy at the Time that Brutus deliver'd his Country from the Yoke of the Tarquins, about the Year 3506. Therefore it is not credible that Pythagoras could have been the Disciple of Ezekiel. Jamblicus, in the Life of this Philosopher, says, That he went gladly and dwelt long in the Temple of Mount Carmel in Phenicia, or in Palestine. This Passage is made use of to prove, that he had had Correspondence with the Jews.

The generality of those who have mentioned [Apulei Floridor. l. 2. Jamb. vita Pyth. c. 4. Porph. vita Pyth. Clem. Alex. Stromat. l. 1.] this Philosopher, will have him to have been a Disciple of Zoroaster at Babylon, and that he derived all that fine Knowledge from him, by which he afterwards became so famous in the West. For we make no doubt but that it was Zoroaster, whom Porphyry describes under the Name Zabratus, or Zaratus, and Clemens Alexandrinus under the Name of Nazaratus. Thus he relates the Matter.a When Cambyses conquer'd Egypt, he there met with Pythagoras, who had repair'd thither in the View of instructing himself in the Learning of the Country. He took him Prisoner, and sent him with his other Captives to Babylon, where Zoroaster lived at that time. He committed himself to the Discipline of that great Man; " Zoroaster purified him " from the Defilements of his Life past, " instructed him in such things, in which " a vertuous Man ought to be free; he " taught him what were the Principles of " the Universe, and the Secrets of Nature.

This History agrees very well with our Chronology, and it is allow'd that Pythagoras was at Babylon, and that he improved much by the Acquaintance he had with the Magians. Besides, what we have taken notice of before, he there learned Arithmetick, Musick, the Knowledge of divine Things, and particularly the Doctrine of the Immortality of the Soul. All the antient Greek Authors acknowledge, that he was the first that taught these important Truths. But he did not teach them in their native Purity; but disfigured them with his Notion of a Metempsychosis, which he had borrowed from the Indians, where also it is said, that he had travelled. He made the Soul's Immortality to consist in a certain Revolution or Transmigration of the Soul out of one Body into another.

Many Touches have been observed in the Doctrine of Pythagoras, in his Maxims, and in the Lives of his Disciples, which have made it be suspected, that he derived several things from the Therapeutæ and the Essenians, and that he was one of the Number of those antient Disciples of the Prophets, from whom the Carmelites boast that they take their Original.[1]

The Pythagoreans abstained from Meat, brought all their Goods into a common Stock, eat nothing that had had Life, rejected all anointing with Oil, contemn'd Pleasures, wore white Cloths, not Linen, but Woollen, abstained from Swearing, had a great Veneration for old Men, never durst make Water before the Sun, kept Silence for a long time in their Schools, paid an immense Deference to the Sentiments of their Masters.

Pythagoras acknowledg'd an Unity of [Diogen. Laert. l. 8 vita Pyth.] Principle, from whence proceeded the Duality in an indefinite manner. But this Duality always adhered like Matter to its Principle, or its Author. They believed that all things proceded from this Unity. Some have imagin'd that they perceived in these Expressions, the Unity of the Godhead in three Persons. He condemned all Images of the Deity, and would have his Worship to be burthened with as few Ceremonies as might be. God was the principal Object of his Worship and of his Studies. He said that Salt at Meals was the Symbol of Union; and among the Hebrews in their Sacrifices, it was esteemed as a Token of the Covenant with God, who had forbid that any Victim should be offer'd to him without [Levit. ii. 13. Levit. xx. 27. 2 Kings xxi. 6. 2 Kings xxiii. 24. Matth. vii. 6. Acts xvi. 16. Ovid. Met. l. 1. v. 441, &c. Deut. xviii. 11. Levit. xx. 6. 1 Samuel xxviii. 7, 8, &c.] Salt. The figurative and symbolical Manner in which he gave his Instructions, was borrowed from the Hebrews, and other Orientals, who generally concealed the Mysteries of their Knowledge under Allegories and Parables. Jesus Christ himself forbids his Disciples to give their Holy Things to Dogs, or to cast their Pearls before Swine.

All these things together confirm their Conjecture, who suppose Pythagoras to have had some Communication with the Hebrews, either in Egypt, or in Chaldea, or in Palestine.

Python

PYTHON. The Grecians gave to Apollo the Surname of Pythius, because he killed the Serpent Python; and as Apollo was regarded as the God of Divination and of Oracles, 'twas said that those that had the Gift of foretelling future Events, were filled with the Spirit of Python. The Septuagint and Vulgate have often used this Expression, to signify Fortune-tellers, Magicians, Ventriloquists, or such as spoke out of their Bellies. Among all these sort of People were much Knavery, Imagination, and often diabolical Operations. Under Penalty of Death God had forbid his People to consult this kind of Wizards. Saul had drove them out and destroyed them, throughout all the Land of Israel, and yet after this had the Weakness to have recourse to a Sorceress. Moses ordered them to be stoned, that were possessed by the Spirit of Python, or had a familiar Spirit. The Kings of Judah that forsook the Lord, such as Manasseh, increased the Number of Wizards; and the pious Kings, such as Josiah, rooted them out of their Country. When St. Paul in the City of Philippi in Macedonia, found a Pagan Servant-Maid that was possess'd by a Spirit of Python, and who brought great Gain to her Masters by Fortune-telling, he drove out this evil Spirit, and delivered the Maid from it; but this so provoked her Masters, that they raised a Tumult against him on this account.

The Hebrew Word Ob or Oboth, which the Vulgate translates by Python, signifies also a Bottle or Vessel of Leather, wherein Liquors were put. Perhaps this Name was given to Wizards, because at the times that they were in their Fits of Enthusiasm, whether real or feigned, they[1] swell'd and became big as a Bottle, and they were heard to bring out their Words as it were from the Bottom of their Stomach; from whence the Latins called them Ventriloqui, and the Greeks, Engastrimythoi; that is, People that speak out of their Bellies. Isaiah [Isai. xxix. 4.] says, that Jerusalem being afflicted and brought low, shall speak as it were out of the hollow of the Earth, as a Pythoness. She shall groan, and bring out her Words, as from the Bottom of a Cave.

In the Article of Samuel, it shall be inquired, whether the Witch of Endor caus'd this holy Man really to appear to Saul, or whether it was only an Illusion on his Part, and a mere Forgery on hers.

[Diodor. Sicul. l. 16.] Diodorus Siculus relates, that at Delphos there was a certain Pit, from whence a Vapour proceeded that disturbed the Understanding. A Shepherd having observed, that whatever came near it and looked into it, presently fell a dancing, and cry'd out in a manner different from what was usual to them; he had a mind to go near it himself, and having look'd into it, he was seized with a kind of Enthusiasm, which made him foretel future Things. At the Report of this Miracle, great Numbers had a mind to look into this Pit, and were all seized with this Spirit of Prophecy. But as several of them were violently agitated by this Vapour, and fell down the Precipice, they thought convenient to pitch upon one Woman only to be a Prophetess, and to exercise alone the Function of giving out Oracles. And for fear that she might fall into the Hole, as well as

The Letter Q

Quadragena

QUADRAGENA. St. Paul uses this Word to denote the thirty-nine Lashes which were given in the Synagogues, to those that were convicted of certain Violations of [2 Cor. xi. 24.] the Law. Quinquies quadragenas, una minus, accepi. Five times have I received forty Stripes, save one. 'Twas in obedience to Moses's Command, who ordered, that the Judges should condemn those to be whipped, who should deserve this Punishment. And it [Deut. xxv.] shall be, if the wicked Man be worthy to be 23.nor beyond the Number of thirty-nine Stripes. beaten, that the Judge shall cause him to lie down, and to be beaten before his Face, according to his Fault, by a certain Number. Forty Stripes he may give him, and not exceed; lest if he should exceed, and beat him above these with many Stripes, then thy Brother should seem vile unto thee. They often went below this Number of Forty, because of the Weakness of the Offender, or the Smallness of his Crime. But they never went above it, others, they built her a kind of Stool with three Feet, upon which she might support herself, when she received the Vapour, had her Fits of Enthusiasm, and foretold future Events. This Machine was afterwards called a Tripos, and became a sacred Instrument at Sacrifices; and the Prophetess was called Pythian. Such was the Original of the Oracle at Delphos.

[Apollodor. Bibli. l. 1. Ovid. Met. l. 1.] 'Tis reported that the most antient Temple of Delphos was only composed of Branches of Laurel Trees. Afterwards it was made of Wax and Bees Wings; then it was made of Brass. The Mythologists pretend, that a Dragon call'd Python kept the Entrance, from whence Themis pronounced the Oracles. That Apollo came thither, and slew this Dragon with his Bow and Arrows, which gave him the Name of Pythian [Macrob. Saturn. l. 1. c. 17.] Apollo. Others say, that the Serpent Python was produced by the Earth, after the Flood of Deucalion. That Juno made use of this Dragon, to hinder the Delivery of Latona, the eldest Daughter of Jupiter, which obliged her to fly to the Island of Asteria, afterwards called Delos, where she was brought to Bed of Apollo and Diana. That the Python setting upon these two Infants in their Cradle, Apollo killed him with his Arrows, from whence he had the Name of Pythian; and in Memory of this Atchievement, the Pythian Games were instituted. From hence it was also, that they gave the Name of Pythoness to those Women, who undertook to foretel future Events.

Quadratus (I)

[See Joseph. Antiq. l. 20. c. 5. De bello, l. 2. c. 21. p. 795.] I. QUADRATUS. Numidius, or Caius Umidius Durmius Quadratus, was made Governor of Judea in the Year 51 of the vulgar Era. In 52 he composed the Troubles of Judea, by putting to death such of the Samaritans and Jews as had taken up Arms against the Romans. He sent Cumanus to Rome, with a Tribune called Celer, to give account of their Conduct to the Emperor Claudius. Also he sent thither Jonathan Son of Annas, Ananias the Highpriest, and Ananus Son of Annas. These last were carried thither loaded with Chains, as being the principal Authors of the Sedition. Quadratus's Successor in this Government was Corbulo, whom Nero sent thither in the Year of Christ 60, after the death of Quadratus.

Quadratus (II)

II. QUADRATUS. There was also another Quadratus, an Apologist for the Christian Religion, under the Emperor Adrian. He had been instructed by the [Euseb. Chronic. an. 127.] Apostles, and was a Prophet, and full of the Holy Ghost. Many of the modern Interpreters will have him to be the Angel of Philadelphia, to whom Jesus Christ addresses himself in the Revelations. But it is not easy to reconcile this Opinion with the Chronology and History of this holy Man. Eusebius says, he was already become famous in the Church in the time of Trajan. He was of the Number of those Apostolical Men, who following the Zeal of their Masters, built up the Edifice of the Church, and sow'd every where the Seed of the Word of the Gospel. They began by distributing their Substance to the Poor, and then went from Province to Province, preaching Jesus Christ to them that had not yet heard of him. Their Preaching was generally attended with Miracles, and with the Power of the Holy Ghost; and they sometimes converted a whole Nation at once.

Quadratus is the first that composed an Apology for the Christian Religion. He presented it himself to Adrian, in the Year 126, according to the Chronicon of Eusebius. [Hieron. de Vir. illust. c. 19.] St. Jerom calls this Apology a very useful Work, full of strong Reasoning, replenished with the Light of Faith, and worthy of a Disciple of the Apostles.

This Piece had Power enough to extinguish the Persecution, which was then raised against [Hieron. Ep. 84.] the Church. We have only a few Fragments remaining of it. St. Jerom and the Latin Martyrologies make Quadratus Bishop of Athens, under Marcus Aurelius, and will have him to have suffered Martyrdom in the Persecution of those Times. a But others think that Quadratus Bishop of Athens, was very different from the Apologist. See M. de Tillemont t. 2. Persecution under Adrian, art. 7. p. 237. and not. 7. upon this Persecution.

Quails

QUAILS. 'Tis known, that God gave Quails to his People in the Wilderness, upon two Occasions. First, in the Wilderness of Sin, or Zin, a few Days after they had passed over the Red-Sea. The second time was, at the Encampment, call'd in Hebrew Kibroth-hataavah, or, The Graves of [Numb. xi. 32. Psal. civ. 40.] Lust. Both of these happen'd in the Spring, when the Quails pass'd from Asia into Europe. Then they are to be found in great Quantities upon the Coasts of the Red-Sea and the Mediterranean. God caus'd a Wind to arise, that drove them within and about the Camp of the Israelites; and 'tis in this that the Miracle consists, that they were brought so seasonably to this Place, and in so great Numbers, as to suffice for above a Million of Persons above a Month. The Hebrew Word Shalav[1] signifies a Quail, by the Agreement of the ancient Interpreters. And the Chaldee, Syriac, and Arabic Languages call them nearly by the same Name. Yet Mr. Ludolf, in his Ethiopic History, l. 1. c. 13. . 96. takes great Pains to shew, that Moses did not here mean Quails, but Locusts.

These are the Reasons alledg'd by Mr. Ludolf, to prove that Moses intended not Quails, but Locusts, in Exod. xvi. 3, 13. and Numb. xi. 32. He observes, that the original Word Selavv may be derived from a Root that signifies Abundance; which agrees better with Locusts than Quails. He owns, that the Oriental Versions explain it by Quails: but he maintains, that they did not understand the true Sense of the Text. Porphyry observes, that an Army in Africa being ready to perish by Famine, was seasonably reliev'd by a Cloud of Locusts, which they fed upon. Ludolf conjectures, that it was a like Event that satisfy'd the Desires of the Israelites in the Desarts of Arabia. 'Tis an easy thing to prove, by the Testimony of many Authors, both ancient and modern,[2] that there is an almost incredible Number of Locusts in the East; that the People of Arabia live upon the Locusts which are brought to 'em by the Winds; that they lay them up upon Heaps, preserve them in Salt, eat of 'em gladly, and serve them up even at Kings Tables; that they are of an excellent Taste, and very wholsome and nourishing.

Sometimes the Locusts fly in the Air in such vast Quantities as to darken the Sun, and to cover the Harvesters as with a Cloud of ill Omen. And when they come down upon a Country, they leave nothing untouch'd; they gnaw, devour, and blast every thing, even the hardest Wood. Whole Nations have been compell'd to forsake their Habitations, to avoid these troublesome Insects.

Ludolf afterwards shews, that the Account of Moses is favourable to his Opinion. First; Locusts are good to eat, and expresly allow'd by the Law of Moses. Secondly; It was the Wind that brought the Animals, mention'd by that Law-giver, into the Camp: And this agrees much better to Locusts than to Quails. Thirdly; It is said, that they were scatter'd over the Field, and that they cover'd the Ground all over for a Day's Journey; that they were of the Depth of a Cubit; that they gather'd them up on Heaps; that they fill'd ten Omers with them. These Expressions are very difficult to reconcile, in the common Supposition of Quails, but[3] may be very naturally understood of Locusts. Fourthly; These Animals were spread all round the Camp; or, according to the Vulgate, they dry'd them all round the Camp: Which cannot be understood of Quails; for they would soon have been full of Worms, if they had been thus exposed to the Sun.

[*Moses says Selav, and Mahomet says Salva. † Houssain Vaez, vide Bibl. Orient. p. 749. col. 1.] But what overthrows all these Conjectures, is, First, the Consent of the Languages, and of the Oriental Versions, which have understood Quails by the Name of Selavv. The Septuagint, Josephus, and all the Commentators both ancient and modern, understand it in the same manner. Besides, the Hebrews ask'd Moses for Flesh, being disgusted with Manna; and would they have been contented with Locusts?

Mahomet, in his Alcoran, speaks of the Miracle that God perform'd in favour of the Israelites, by sending them Flesh. He makes use of the same Word with Moses. One of his Interpreters says, that the Word Salva does not only signify Quails, but also Honey. Another Interpreter says, that the Word Salva is usually explain'd by Sumani, which is a Word more in use among the Arabians, to signify a Quail; which the Persians also call Semavah. However, adds he, this is a Bird peculiar to Arabia Felix, larger than a Sparrow, and smaller than a Pigeon, which has neither Sinews, Bones, nor Veins, and of which the Flesh is very agreeable. He says besides, that the Wind which God sent was so violent, that it broke the Wings of those Birds, and made them fall like a very thick Cloud into the Camp of the Israelites, who took them with their Hands, and eat them along with the Manna. What they tell us of this Bird, that it has neither Bones, Veins, or Sinews, must be understood as an Hyperbole, to express its being very fat and tender, something like our Fig-peckers, Ortolans, and Red-breasts.

Quarrel

[Prov. xxvi. 17.] QUARREL. Solomon compares him, that, going along the Streets, meddles with the Quarrels of People unknown, to one that will take a Dog by the Ears, and so will rashly expose himself to be bit. This is what we may see every Day, in publick Quarrels. Those that endeavour to mediate a Peace among Persons engaged in a Controversy; instead of reconciling them, do but provoke 'em, and still irritate them more, and often meet with Anger on both Sides for intermeddling. But it must not be concluded from hence, that we ought never to endeavour to reconcile our Neighbours; yet it must be attempted with a great deal of Prudence, Caution and Charity, for fear of increasing that Evil which we undertake to appease.

Queen of Heaven

QUEEN of Heaven: This is the Name that the Hebrew Idolaters used to give to the Moon. Jeremiah, chap. vii. ver. 8. says, The Children gather Wood, and the Fathers kindle the Fire, and the Women knead their Dough to make Cakes to the Queen of Heaven. And elsewhere, ch. xliv. ver. 16, 17, 18. the disobedient Israelites tell the same Prophet; As for the Word that thou hast spoken unto us in the Name of the Lord, we will not hearken unto thee. But we will certainly do whatsoever thing goeth out of our own Mouth, to burn Incense unto the Queen of Heaven. — But since we left off to burn Incense to the Queen of Heaven, and to pour out Drink-offerings unto her, we have wanted all things, and have been consumed by the Sword, and by the Famine. We think it to be the same that is call'd Meni in the Hebrew of Isaiah, chap. lxv. 2. But ye are they that forsake the Lord, that forget my holy Mountain, that prepare a Table for that Troop, and that furnish the Drink-offering unto that Number. The Hebrew says, That prepare a Table for Gad, and furnish the Drink-offering to Meni. See the Article MENI. We take all these to be nothing else than the Moon, Astarte, Trivia, Hecate, Diana, the Heavenly Venus, Isis, according to the different Superstitions of the People. They set up Altars to her upon the Plat-forms or Roofs of their Houses, at the Corners of the Streets, near their Doors, and in Groves. They offer'd Cakes to her, kneaded up with Oyl or Honey, and made Libations to her with Wine and other Liquors. The Rabbins think they printed upon these Cakes the Resemblance of a Star, or Half-Moon.

Question

[Ex. xxiv. 14.] QUESTION. Quæstio. This Word is often put for Dispute, Difficulty, Suit at Law. Si quid natum fuerit quæstionis, if any Difficulty should arise. St. Paul would have [2 Tim. ii. 23. Tit. iii. 9.] his Disciples Timothy and Titus, to avoid vain Questions, or vain Disputes, which are only concerning Genealogies, and the Sense of the Law, because this kind of Questions are more apt to give Offence than to Edify. The wise Man says, that he knew [Eccles. vii. 30.] God created Man upright; but that he has perplexed himself with a Thousand Questions, and incumbered himself with a Thousand tiresome and intricate Disputes.

Question or Punishment. 'Twas a Custom among the Romans, to put Criminals to the Question, by whipping them, not with Rods, but with Whips or Scourges. Some [Cornel. Menoch. Pis.] think, that the Offender was stripp'd to his Waist, and that his Hands were ty'd to a Pillar, that his Back might be stretch'd out to receive the Blows. Others will have it, [Lud. de Dieu.] that his Hands were fastened to a Stake drove into the Ground, of a Foot and half, or two Foot high; so that the Criminal stooping with his Face towards the Ground, might present his naked Back to the Soldiers. Lastly, others are of Opinion, a that the Soldiers tied him Neck and Heels, and held him stretch'd out upon the Ground, while other Soldiers beat him all over his Body. This way of whipping is still common among the Orientals.

When St. Paul made an Oration to the [Acts xxii. 21.] People at Jerusalem, and related to them the Manner of his Conversion, they listned to him very attentively till he came to that Part of his Discourse, where he told them that God had sent him to preach to the Gentiles; then they raised their Voices, and cried out, that he was not fit to live, and were going to put him to death. Lysias the Tribune gave Command, that he should be put to the Question; but when they were binding him, Paul asked a Centurion there present, Is it lawful for you to scourge a Roman Citizen, and uncondemn'd? The Centurion acquainted the Tribune with it, who presently came to Paul, and asked him whether or no he was a Roman Citizen? he continued to affirm it; then those that were to put him to the Question retired, and Lysias caus'd him to be unbound.

Quia

QUIA, or Quoniam: Because. This Particle answers to the Hebrew Ki, and to the Greek Hoti, the Signification of which is generally causal, and is translated by because. But sometimes also these Particles are redundant in the Discourse; and at other times they should only be translated by that, and other times by wherefore. 'Tis needless to give Examples of quia, when it signifies that and because, for they will recur often. This same Particle seems to be redundant in these Passages. Nisi quia Dominus erat in nobis. If the Lord had not been with us. [Psal. xciii. 17.] Nisi quia Dominus adjuvit me. Unless the Lord had help'd me.

It is used for wherefore in this Passage of [Luke viii. 47.] St. Luke. Remittuntur ei peccata multa, quoniam dilexit multum. Cui enim minus dimittitur, minus diligit. The Tenour of the Discourse requires, that we should understand it, as hinted before. A Master had two Debtors, one of them owed him an hundred Pence, the other Fifty. They not having wherewithal to pay, he forgives them their Debts; which of the two ought to love him most? Doubtless he to whom the greatest Sum was remitted. He adds, Many Sins are forgiven this Woman, Quoniam dilexit multum. It is plain it should be translated, wherefore she loves much; but he to whom less is forgiven will love less. Here are other Examples, where quia is put for quapropter. [John viii. 29.] Qui me misit, mecum est; quia ego quæ placita sunt ei facio semper. And elsewhere; [John xiv. 17.] Vos autem cognoscetis eum, quia apud vos manebit. And in the Psalms; Ego clamavi [Psal. cxxiii. 1. Psal. xvi. 6. Psal. cxv. 1. Jer. xxix. 16.] quoniam exaudisti me. And again; Credidi propter quod locutus sum. The Hebrew says, Credidi quia locutus sum. Jeremiah; Qui dixistis, suscitavit nobis Dominus Prophetas in Babylone, quia hæ dicit Dominus. Instead of, Quapropter hæc dicit Dominus, &c.

Quintilius Varus

QUINTILIUS VARUS. It is not positively known whether or no Quintilius Varus was Governor of Syria the Year of our [See Not. 4 of M. de Tillemont, upon J. C. tom. 1. p. 447.] Saviour's Birth, but however this is the general Opinion. He governed this Province with great Wisdom and Moderation to the time of the Banishment of Archelaus, in the sixth Year of Christ. He succeeded Saturninus in the Government of Syria, and had for Successor Quirinius or Cyrenius. Varus presided in the Assembly in which Antipater Son of Herod was judged.[1] He supported the Interests of Archelaus, another of Herod's Sons, before Augustus,[2] that he might obtain the Kingdom of Judea. He afterwards appeased the Troubles that had been raised in the Country, by the Avarice of Sabinus.[3] Lastly, being recalled from his Government of Syria, he and his whole Army perished in Germany, in the ninth Year of Jesus Christ.[4] Augustus tore his Cloaths at this News, and let his Beard and Hair grow for several Months; so much he laid this Loss to Heart.

RAAMSES, or Rameses, a City built by [Ex. i. 11.] the Hebrews, during the time of their Servitude in Egypt, and which probably took its Name from the King of the Country, who [Horodot. l. 2. c. 59. 71, & 165. Its Situation is not known. Herodotus speaks of Papremisus in the Lower Egypt, and Pliny joins together the Ramisians and Patamians; which are probably the People that inhabited the two Cities of Pithom and Raamses. Rab

RAB, Rabbin, Rabban, Rabbam; a Name of Dignity among the Hebrews. The Name of Rab was given to Masters and Doctors, to the Chief of a Class, and to the principal Officers of the Court of a Prince: For Example, Nebuzaradan, General of the Army of King Nebuchadnezzar, is always called Rab Tabachim,[1] Magister Laniorum, the [Esth. i. 6.] Master of the Butchers, Cooks, or Guards. Esther says, that Ahasuerus appointed a Rab of his Court over every Table of his Guests, to take Care that nothing should be [Dan. i. 3. רב סריסים] wanting. Daniel speaks of Ashpenaz the Rab of the Eunuchs of the House of Nebuchadnezzar, and of the Rab of the Saganim, [Dan. ii. 48.] or Chief of the Governors or Peers. This Prophet himself was preferred to be Chief of the Interpreters of Dreams, or the Rab of [Dan. v. 11.] the Chartumim. It appears that this Name came originally from the Chaldees; for before the Captivity, when any mention was made of Judea, we do not find it used, but only when any mention was to be made of the Officers of the King of Babylon. thy Providence for our Support for the time to come. Theophylact and Suidas, Give us our sufficient Bread, the Nourishment we have need of. Epiousios in this Place, is oppos'd to Periousios, superfluous. Those that contend for the Reading which has Supersubstantialem,[2] maintain, that in this Prayer Christians do not ask of God the Nourishment of the Body, but that of the Soul, the Knowledge of the Will of God, his Word, his Grace, the holy Eucharist.

Rab or Rabban, properly signifies Master, or one that excells in any thing; Rabbi or Rabbani, is my Master. Rabbin is the Plural. Thus Rab is of greater Dignity than Rabbi, and Rabbin or Rabbim, is a Word of greater Dignity than either Rab or Rabbi.

There were several Gradations before they could arrive at the Dignity of Rabbin, as among us to arrive at the Degree of Doctor. He that was Master or Head of the School, was called Cacham, or Wise; and he had the Name of Bachur, or Elou, who aspired to the Doctorship, and for this Purpose frequented the School of the Chacham. When he was further advanced, he had the Title of Cabar of the Rab, or the Master's Companion. Lastly, when he was further skill'd in the Knowledge of the Law and the Traditions, he was call'd only Rab, or Rabin, and Morena, our Master.

Leo of Modena says, that among the [Cerem. Jud. p. 2. c. 3.] Jews it was a kind of Shame, to be known to seek for the Doctorship, and this passed for a presumptuous Piece of Vanity. Thus there was no Examination for it, but when a Man was found to have studied the Oral Law more than any other Science, he was saluted by the publick Voice with the Title of Cacham, that is, Wise. At least this is the Custom among the Eastern Jews; whereas in Germany and Italy, he receives this Title from the most antient of the Rabbins, who either by Word of Mouth, or Writing, declares him Cabar of the Rab, Companion of the Master, or Rab, or Morena, Master.

The Cacham Rab, or Master Rabbin, decides all Sorts of Differences, determines what Things are allowed or forbidden, and judges in all Matters of Religion, and even in Civil Controversies. He celebrates Marriages, and declares Divorces. He preaches, if he has a Talent for it, and is Head of the Academies. He has the head Seat in the Assemblies, and in the Synagogues. He reprimands the Disobedient, and can even excommunicate them; which procures him great Respect and Authority.

In their Schools they sate upon raised Chairs, and their Scholars were at their [Acts xxii. 3.] Feet. Hence it is, that in the Acts of the Apostles, St. Paul is said to have studied at [Philo lib. quod omnis probus liber.] the Feet of Rabbi Gamaliel. Philo affirms, that among the Essenians, the Children sate in the Schools at the Feet of their Masters, who explain'd the Law to them after an Allegorical Manner. Ambrosiaster, upon the first Epistle to the Corinthians, informs us, that in their Schools the Rabbins sate in their Chairs, the most advanced of their Scholars sate by them upon Benches, and the least sate upon the Ground on Mats. The Jews are us'd to say to their Children, [Pirke Avoth. c. 1. §. 4.] by way of Proverb, Roll yourselves in the Dust of your Masters Feet; instead of saying, Frequent their Schools diligently, and sit down at their Feet. a Our Saviour upbraids the Rabbins and Masters of Israel [Matth. xxiii. 6.] with their Vanity, and Eagerness to have the first Places at the Feasts, and the head Seats in the Synagogues; also with their being saluted in the Streets, and desiring to be call'd Rabbi, My Master.

The Studies of the Rabbins are employ'd, either upon the bare Text of the Law, or the Traditions, or the Cabala, which is the mysterious Doctrine contain'd in the Scripture. These three Objects of their Study form so many different Schools, and different Sorts of Rabbins. Those that chiefly apply themselves to the Letter and Text of Scripture, are call'd Caraites, which is as much as to say Literalists. Those that place their chief Study in the Traditions and Oral Laws of the Talmud, are call'd Rabbinists; as applying themselves to the Doctrine and Opinions of their old Masters, from whom they have received their Traditions by the Mediation of their Cachams. Lastly, those that give up themselves to their secret and mysterious Divinity, which consists in explaining the Scripture, according to certain Combinations of the Letters and Numbers, are call'd Cabalists; as much as to say Traditionaries, because that these Explications and Combinations are perform'd according to certain Rules, which they have receiv'd from their Masters.

[Leo of Modena, p. 5. c. 1.] Leo of Modena says, that the Caraites keep to the Pentateuque only, rejecting all the Explications, Paraphrases, or Constitutions of the Rabbins. This Author adds, that they are originally Sadducees, but reform'd and meliorated; and that they might not become odious to all Sorts of Religions, they have thought fit to forsake such Opinions of the Sadducees as gave most Offence, and to espouse some of the most antient of the Traditions. But for all this the Rabbinists mortally hate the Caraites, and treat them only as Mamzerims, or Bastards. They refuse all Alliance with them, nor will they so much as converse with 'em; and though a Caraite should desire to become a Rabbinist, the other Jews would not receive him.

[See our Answer to M. Fourment, Let. 2.] M. Simon, in his Supplement to that Passage of Leo of Modena we have now cited, believes with F. Morin, that the Caraites did not appear among the Jews 'till after the Publication of the Talmud, or about the eighth Century; and that the most understanding of the Jews at that Time, being desirous to withstand that Multitude of Whimsies then impos'd under the specious Name of Moses, were call'd Caraites, by the Defenders of those Traditions; as if they would insinuate, that they adher'd only to the Letter of Scripture. We have but few of the Works of the Caraites. M. Simon quotes some of the Manuscripts. It were to be wish'd that some of 'em were printed, which would be of much more use to us than those of the Rabbinists, which every-where abound, and wherein we find a vast Number of Trifles, of vain, frivolous, and childish Explications, founded upon pretended Traditions of the Antients. The Rabbins are generally very ignorant in History, Chronology, Philology, Antiquity, and Geography. They understand the Holy Language but very imperfectly. They know not the true Signification of a Multitude of Words that are found in the sacred Text of Scripture. They are prodigiously conceited about their Traditions, so that there is very little Profit to be had by reading them; and 'tis known by Experience, that most of those who have apply'd themselves to peruse their Books, have been but little benefited by them, and have entertain'd a perfect Contempt of their Understanding and Works.

Beside the Names of Rab, and Rabbi, or Rabboni, which the Jewish Doctors assum'd to themselves, they took also those of Maran, Lord, More, Doctor, Cacam, Sage, Marbitz Thora, Cousin to the Law, because the Law rested upon them, Dom, or Sir. 'Twas chiefly in Spain that they took formerly this latter Title, which is still given to Persons of the first Distinction.

The chief Function of the Rabbins is to preach in the Synagogue, to make publick Prayers there, and to interpret the Law. They have the Power of binding[3] and loosing, that is to say, of declaring what is forbidden, and what is allow'd. When the Synagogue is poor and small, there is but one Rabbin, who at the same time discharges the Offices of a Judge and a Doctor. But when the Jews are numerous and powerful in a Place, they appoint three Pastors there, and a House of Judgment, where all their Civil Affairs are determin'd. And then the Rabbin applies himself to Instruction only, unless it is thought proper to call him into the Council, to give his Advice there; in which Case he takes the chief Place.

They have the Authority of creating new Rabbins. They pretend, that formerly every Doctor had a Right of giving this Title to his Disciple: But that since the Time of Hillel they relinquish'd this Power, in Consideration of him, and restrain'd themselves to the asking the Leave of the Head of the Captivity, at least in the East. At present they content themselves with installing the new Rabbin in an Assembly of some Doctors. Sometimes it is sufficient for one Rabbin alone to lay on his Hands, when it is difficult for several to come together. In Germany they are created by Word only, and often at their Creation their Power is restrain'd to certain Functions, and not extended to others. For Example, to teach the Law, but not to judge; neither were they to exercise those Functions to which they were appointed, unless when their Master was absent.

The Rabbins omitted nothing to procure to themselves Credit, Authority, and Respect among the People, who yet were generally inclined to dispise them. They maintain, that their Laws and Commands were not to be transgress'd, but on the Penalty of hazarding the Lives of the Offenders. They quote the Example of Rabbi Jochanan, who made of one of his Disciples an Heap of Bones, because he would not believe what he taught him. They boast also, that a Rabbin cannot be damn'd. They bring a Proof of it in the Person of Rabbin Acher, who fell into capital Errors and Crimes, which were enough to have plunged him into Damnation. 'Tis pretended that he derogated from the Power of the Supream Being, that he admitted of two Principles; that he had blasphemed against the Angel Metatron, that he had rode on Horseback on the Sabbath-day; that he had tore to Pieces a young Scholar, and had sent the divided Parts of his Body to thirteen Levites. But however, Rabbi Meir, the Disciple of Acher, maintain'd, that he was not damned, but only detain'd in Purgatory, which he proved by causing Smoke to come out of his Tomb on a [Excerpta Gemarae apud Hott. p. 101, &c.] Sabbath-day. Another Rabbin caus'd this Smoke to cease, and it was concluded from thence, that he was saved.

The Jews have several Books which were composed by their Rabbins. These Books are written in Hebrew, tho' much different from that of the Bible. It is not so pure, and has a great Mixture of Words and Phrases taken from strange Languages. As their Writings are upon Subjects foreign to such as are treated of in the Bible, they have been obliged to borrow other Terms, proper to express what they would treat of; for Example, in Astronomy, Physick, Theology; but their Style is still in Imitation of what they find in the Scripture. Their manner of pronouncing Hebrew is different from each other. The Italians pronounce it otherwise than the Germans, and the Germans different from the Spaniards and the Levantines. The Characters they commonly use in their Writings are not so square nor so beautiful as those of the Bible: They are rounder, and more of a Runninghand. And he that reads and understands very well the Hebrew of the Bible, will neither read nor understand the Hebrew of the Rabbins. The Writing and Style of these Doctors is a particular Study.

Nine Classes of Doctors are distinguish'd among the Hebrews. a The first is that of Moses, Joshua, Eleazar, and the seventy Elders chosen by Moses, to ease himself in [Exod. xviii. 21.] the Goverment. The second is that of the Antients, who succeeded Joshua and Eleazar, and according to them comprehends the Judges, Senators, and the Sanhedrim. The third is that of the Prophets. The fourth is the great Synagogue composed of six score Persons, after the Return from the Captivity. The fifth is of the Tanaim, mention'd in the Mishna. The sixth of the Amoraim, or Commentators upon the Mishna. The seventh of the Giours, or eminent Doctors. The eighth of the Soboreans, or Doubters. The ninth and last of the Gaons.

We must not suffer ourselves to be prejudic'd by the pompous Titles that the Hebrews give their Doctors, nor by that pretended Antiquity that they ascribe to them. They would be very much puzzled to prove that long Succession of Rabbins they boast of, from Moses down to the present Times. Abraham Son of one call'd David, who lived at Pescaire at the Beginning of the twelfth Century,[4] has made a Succession of Rabbins quite from Adam to [Abrah. Zacuth. Inchasim.] his own Time. Abraham Zaccuth a Jew, drove out of Spain with the other Jews, compos'd a Catalogue of them from the Beginning of the World as far as the[5] Year 1500. Gedaliah also has made a Traditional Chain of 'em down to the Year 1586, in which he lived. But there is so great a Difference in the Calculations of these Historians, they fall into such Anachronisms, they disagree so much in the Names of these Doctors, that it is easy to see they go upon no certain Principles, nor have any distinct Knowledge of what they advance.

In vain do the Rabbins boast of the Antiquity of their Schools and of their Doctors; when we search into the Bottom of these Things, we find nothing but Confusion and Uncertainty. They speak with great Emphasis of their Schools at Japhne and Tiberias, set up in Palestine after the Destruction of the Temple; and of those of Nahardea, Pundebita, and Sora, in the East. They produce Lists of Doctors who have taught therein; but all these Things are so ill put together, that nothing can be concluded from them. They have certain Books, whose Antiquity they very much brag of; the Midraschins, for Example, or Commentaries upon Scripture, which they say were compos'd by the Rabbins who liv'd in the Time of Judas the Holy; that is, in the Year of Christ 215. Yet the Gemara is quoted therein, which was compos'd a long time after the Midraschins Rabboth, or the grand Commentaries imputed to Nachmanides, who lived, they say, at the End of the third Century; and yet Mention is made there of the Endeavour of the Emperor Julian, to rebuild the Temple of Jerusalem. The Sentences of the Fathers, or Pirke Aboth, published under the Name of Eleazar, who lived under Gamaliel the second, is much more modern than that Time, as may be seen from the Work itself.

We have spoken elsewhere of the Paraphrasts Onkelos, Jonathan, Joseph the Blind, and of the Gemara, of the Thalmud, and the Misna. These Articles may be consulted, and Bartolocci in his Bibliotheca Rabbinica, and Mr. Basnage's History of the Jews, t. 7. l. 10. c. 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8.

The most famous Rabbins that they quote to us, are Nathan, Abenezra, Abraham Hallevi, Maimonides, or Moses the Son of Maimon, Joseph and David Kimchi, and Solomon Jarchi. But all these Doctors are modern. Nathan, Head of the Academy of Rome, who has explain'd all the Terms of the Thalmud, lived at the Beginning of the twelfth Century. Abenezra died in 1174; his Explications of Scripture are literal and grammatical, and they are in great Esteem among Commentators. Abraham Hallevi was Cotemporary with Aben-ezra. Maimonides was born at Corduba in 1131. His Father Maimon pretended to be of the Race of David. 'Tis commonly affirm'd, that Maimonides is the first of the Doctors among the Jews who left off trifling. He is sometimes call'd Moses the Egyptian, because he left Spain and went to settle in Egypt. He died at the Beginning of the thirteenth Century.

Joseph Kimchi, who lived in 1160, has compos'd some Commentaries upon Scripture, which are in Manuscript in the Library of the Vatican, and a Book against the Christian Religion. We know that he dwelt at Narbonne, but it is disputed whether he were a Spaniard or a Frenchman. He had two Sons, David and Moses Kimchi, who were both famous for their Learning.

David Kimchi, Son of Joseph Kimchi, apply'd himself much to Grammar, and his Works are very well esteem'd. The Jews alluding to his Name, which signifies a Miller, or white with Meal, say by way of Proverb, That there is no Meal without Kimchi; that is, there is no real Knowledge without Kimchi. Moses Kimchi, his Brother, has also compos'd a Work whose Title is, The Garden of Pleasure, which is in Manuscript in the Vatican Library.

Solomon Jarki was a Native of Troy in Champagne, but he had the Surname of Jarchi, or Jarki, that is, Lunatick, because he taught in the Academy of Lunel in Languedoc, where the Jews had an Academy in the twelfth Age. He chiefly apply'd himself to the Study of the Thalmud; and his Commentary upon the Gemara seem'd so full of Erudition, that he was call'd the Prince of Commentators. Concerning these Rabbins, and all the rest of 'em, the Reader may consult the Authors before quoted, especially the Bibliotheca Rabbinica of Bartholocci.

Rabbath

[Deut. iii. 2.] RABBATH, or Rabbat-Ammon, Rabbat-Ammana, or only Ammana; or Rabbath of the Children of Ammon, afterwards call'd Philadelphia, the capital City of the Ammonites, situated beyond Jordan. It was famous and considerable even in the Time of Moses, who tells us, that there was still to be seen there the iron Bedstead of King Og. When David declared War against the Ammonites, his General Joab laid Siege to Rabbath-Ammon, [2 Sam. xi. 1, 15, 16, &c. 2 Sam. xii. 28, 29.] where the brave Uriah lost his Life, by the secret Order given by this Prince, that Uriah should be forsaken in a Place of Danger. And when the City was reduced to the last Extremity, David himself went thither, that he might have the Honour of taking it. From this time it became subject to the Kings of Judah. Afterwards the Kings of Israel became Masters of it, with all the rest of the Tribes beyond Jordan.

But towards the Conclusion of the Kingdom of Israel, Tiglath-pileser having taken away a great Part of the Israelites of that Country, the Ammonites put in Execution many Cruelties against those that remain'd; from whence it follow'd, that the Prophets Jeremiah [Jer. xlix. 1, 2, 3. Vide & Sophon. ii. 8. Ezek. xxi. 20. xxv. 5.] and Ezekiel pronounced very severe Prophecies against Rabbath, the capital City of the Ammonites, and against the rest of the Country, which probably had their Completion five Years after the Destruction of Jerusalem. Antiochus the Great took the City [Jos. Antiq. l.13. c.17. Polyb. l. 5.] of Rabbath-Ammon about the Year of the World 3786. Some time before this Ptolemy [Jer. xlviii. 31, 36, &c. Vulgat.] Philadelphus had given it the Name of Philadelphia. 'Tis thought it was to this City of Philadelphia, that St. Ignatius the Martyr wrote his Epistle, a little time before his Martyrdom. Philadelphia is not far from the Fountain of Arnon.

Rabbath-Moab

RABBATH-MOAB, or Rabbath of the Children of Moab, the capital City of the Moabites, call'd otherwise Rabbat-Moba, Ar, Areopolis, Ariel of Moab, Kir-heres, or the City with Brick Walls. Clamabo ad viros muri fictilis, says Jeremiah. This City lay upon the River Arnon, by which it was divided into two ; whence it is, that in the Books of Kings it is call'd the two Ariels of Moab, or the two Lions of Moab, in allusion to its Name Ar or Arie, signifying a Lion. This City has gone thro' a great Variety of Revolutions, and the Prophets have often threaten'd it with great Misfortunes. The Kings of Judah, Israel, and Edom once laying Siege to it, when the King [2 Kings iii. 5, 6, 7, &c.] of Moab saw he must fall into the Enemies Hands, he took his eldest Son, and was going to sacrifice him to his Gods. But this excited such an Abhorrence or Compassion in the Kings without the City, that they drew off, and broke up the Siege. We have already spoken of this City under the Article AR. The Romans generally kept a Garrison at Areopolis, because of the Importance of this Pass over the Arnon. See the antient Notitia, and Eusebius and St. Jerome upon the Word ARNON.

RAB-SHAKEH, or Rab-saces, that is, the chief Butler, or Cup-bearer. This is a Term of Dignity, and not a proper Name. Rab-shakeh was sent by Sennacherib King of Assyria to summon Hezekiah to surrender to him.[1] He made a Halt in the Fuller's Field, and sent to speak with Hezekiah. This Prince sent out to him Eliakim, Shebna, and Joah, three of the chief Officers of his Court. Rab-shakeh spoke to 'em in a very haughty and insolent manner, and told them in Hebrew, that they ought not to put any Confidence, either in the King of Egypt, who was not able to assist them, or in the Lord, whose Altars upon the high Places Hezekiah had destroy'd, and who had order'd Sennacherib to march against Judea. Then Hezekiah's Commissioners desir'd him to speak in the Chaldee Language, and not in the Hebrew, that the People upon the Walls might not hear their Conversation. But Rab-shakeh raised his Voice so much the more, and address'd his Discourse to the People, persuading them to surrender themselves to Sennacherib; adding such blasphemous Expressions as these, That as the Gods of the Nations were not able to secure their Worshippers from the Power of Sennacherib, so neither could the God of Israel protect them from the Force of his Arms.

[Isa. xxxvii. 36, 37, &c. 2 Kings xix. 35, 36, 37.] After this Rab-shakeh return'd towards his Master, who had quitted the Siege of Lachish to meet the King of Egypt, who was then come forth to the Assistance of Hezekiah. But in this March the destroying Angel slew an hundred and eighty-five thousand Men of the Army of Sennacherib, so that he was obliged to hasten back to Niniveh, where he was put to death by his own Sons. Raca RACA, or Racha; a Syriack Word, which properly signifies empty, vain, beggarly, foolish, and which includes in it a strong Idea of Contempt. Jesus Christ in the [Matth. v. 22.] Gospel says, that whoever shall say to his Neighbour, Raca, shall be condemn'd by the Council or Sanhedrim. We read in the Hebrew Bible, that when Jephthah was driven away by his Brethren, he put himself at the Head of a Company of worthless People, of Rakim,[1] Men of desperate Fortunes. So Jeroboam the Son of Nebat assembled a [2 Chron. xiii. 7.] Company of Rakim, Beggars, Sons of Belial. Lightfoot assures[2] us, that in the Books of the Jews, the Word Raca is a Term of the utmost Contempt, and is us'd to be pronounced with certain Gestures of Indignation, as spitting, turning away the Head, &c.

Rachel

RACHEL, Daughter of Laban, and Sister of Leah. The Word Rachel signifies a Sheep. When Jacob fled from his Brother Esau's Resentment, he arrived in Mesopotamia, near the City of Haran or Charres; and finding some Shepherds there, he inquired if they knew Laban the Son of Nahor. a They answer'd him, We know him well, and there's his Daughter Rachel coming with the Flock. No sooner was Rachel come, but Jacob open'd the Well for her, water'd her Flock, embrac'd her, and told her he was the Son of Rebecca, Laban's Sister. Immediately Rachel ran home to her Father, and acquainted him with his Nephew's coming. Jacob was brought into Laban's House, and entertain'd there with great Civility; and when he had been there about a Month, Laban told him it was not fit he should serve him for nothing, and desir'd him to propose some Recompence, which he should be willing to give him. Jacob told him he would serve him seven Years, provided he would give him his younger Daughter Rachel in Marriage. Laban agreed to this, and the Day appointed for the Wedding being come, instead of Rachel, Laban put her elder Sister Leah in Bed to Jacob.

Jacob did not perceive the Trick that had been put upon him 'till the next Morning. Then he made bitter Complaints, and Laban could find no better Excuse for it than to tell him, that it was not the Custom of the Country to marry the younger Daughter before the elder: But if he was willing to serve him another seven Years, he should have Rachel also. This Jacob agreed to, and when the Week of Leah's Wedding was over, he marry'd Rachel. The Affection he had for Rachel made him have a kind of Indifference for Leah; but the Lord gave Children to Leah, and none to Rachel. This excited in her a great Aversion [Gen. xxx. 1,] against her Sister; and she said to Jacob, Give me Children or else I die. Jacob 2, 3, &c.

with some Indignation made Answer; Do you take me for a God? Is it I that have made you barren? To which Rachel reply'd; Here is my Maid Bilhah, take her, that I may have Children by her. Jacob therefore taking Bilhah, she conceived and brought forth a Son, whom Rachel call'd Dan; saying, the Lord has judged me, and decided in my Favour. Bilhah had also another Son the Year following, to whom Rachel gave the Name of Naphthali.

One Day as Reuben, Leah's Son, returning home out of the Field, had brought to his Mother a certain Fruit call'd Dudaim, which is generally render'd by Mandrakes; Rachel said to Leah, Give me some of your See the Ar-Son's Mandrakes. Leah reply'd, Is it not ticle Man- drakes. enough that you take my Husband from me, but must you also take my Son's Mandrakes? Rachel tells her, that if she might have some of the Mandrakes, Jacob should be her's that Night. For it seems that Jacob divided his Favours equally among his Wives, as was the Custom of those Countries where Polygamy obtain'd.[1] At last the Lord remember'd Rachel; she conceived and brought forth a Son, whom she named Joseph,[2] saying, That the Lord shall still give me another Son. Some Years after[3] Jacob taking a Resolution to return into the Land of Canaan, Rachel unknown to Jacob, privately took away the Teraphim, or Domestick Gods, of her Father Laban.

[See the Article Teraphim.] Jacob went away without acquainting his Father-in-law Laban with his Intention, and Laban knew nothing of it 'till three Days after his Departure. He then began his Pursuit after him, and overtook him after seven Days, upon the Mountains of Gilead. He reproach'd him very warmly with his clandestine Flight, and even used Threats, telling him, that if God had not warned him in a Dream not to do him any Violence, he should have made him repent of so rash a Resolution. To which he added, Why have you robb'd me of my Gods? Jacob being altogether ignorant that Rachel had done this thing, made him Answer; That whosoever the Gods should be found upon should be put to death, in Presence of all his Brethren. Examine every thing strictly, and take whatever you find belonging to you. Laban then began to search the Tents of Jacob, Leah, Bilhah, and Zilpah, without finding any thing. Then coming into Rachel's Tent, she hid the Teraphim under her Camel's Funiture, and sate down upon it. When her Father had searched every where and found nothing, she said to him; Let not my Lord be angry that I cannot rise in his Presence, for the common Infirmity of Women is now upon me. And thus she evaded her Father's Inquiry.[4]

When Jacob had pass'd over the Brook Jabok, he divided his Wives and Children into three Companies. He put the two Maids [Gen. xxxiii. 1, 2, 3. Gen. xxxv. 1, 2, 3, 4, &c.] and their Children in the first Place; then Leah and her Children made the second Company; and lastly, Rachel and her Son Joseph. This he did, that if Esau should do any Violence to the first Company, the second and third might escape; or if he should not spare the second, that at least the third might avoid his Fury. After he had pass'd over Jordan, he went first to Salem, then to Shechem, and thence to Bethel, where he was to sacrifice to God, who had appear'd to him at his going into Mesopotamia. Lastly, as he advanced towards Hebron, and was not above a Furlong[5] from Bethlehem, otherwise call'd Ephrath, Rachel was seized with the Pains of Child-birth. She brought forth a Son, to whom she gave the Name of Ben-oni, or the Son of my Pain; but Jacob gave him the Name of Benjamin, or the Son of my right Hand. Rachel's Pangs were so violent, that they kill'd her, and Jacob buried her in the same Place, erecting a Monument[6] for her, which continued for many Ages.

There is still to be seen at this Day a kind of Pyramid or Dome, supported by four square Pillars, which form as many Arches. This Monument is surrounded by a low Wall of three Foot high, with a little Entrance of three Steps. Cotovic says, that the Sepulchre is six Foot above the Ground, seven Foot long, and three and a half broad. The upper Part is round. On the two Sides of Rachel's Tomb there are two other empty ones. M. le Brun, who made a Draught of it on the Place, says this Tomb is cut in the Cavity of a Rock, and cover'd with a Dome, supported by four Pillars or Fragments of a Wall, which open to the Sepulchre. The Work is rude enough, and without any Ornament. The whole is as entire as if it had been but just made, and it is hard to imagine it has subsisted ever since Jacob's time. But it may have been renew'd afterwards. Rachel died in the Year of the World 2265, or 2266; before Christ 1734, or 1755; before the vulgar Era 1738, or 1739.

[Jer. xxxi. 15. Matth. ii. 18.] The Prophet Jeremiah, and after him St. Matthew, have put Rachel for the Tribes of Ephraim and Manasseh, born from Joseph the Son of Rachel. In Rama (or upon the high Places) was there a Voice heard, Lamentation and Weeping, and great Mourning, Rachel weeping for her Children, and would not be comforted because they are not. This Prophecy was compleated when those two Tribes were carried into Captivity beyond the Euphrates. St. Matthew has made an Application of this Prophecy to what happen'd at Bethlehem, when Herod put to death there all the Children of two Years old and under. Then Rachel, who was buried thereabouts, in some manner may be said to make her Cries and Lamentations, for the Death of so many young Innocents, sacrificed to the Jealousy and the Cruelty of a distrustful Prince.

II. RAGUEL, Father of Sara, and Father-in-law to young Tobias. He dwelt in the City of Ecbatana, and had a great Estate. But having given his Daughter Sara to seven Husbands successively, the Evil [Tob. vi. 11----14.] Spirit had slain them all. However, Tobias coming to Ecbatana, the Angel Raphael urged him to demand Sara for Wife, and so much the rather, because he was the nearest Kinsman to Raguel, and therefore [Numb. xxxvi. 6.] obliged to marry her, according to the Law. Raguel gave his Consent to this Marriage, though not without Difficulty, as fearing it might happen to him as it had happen'd to his Daughter's seven former Husbands. But the Lord preserving Tobias, Raguel kept him fifteen Days at his House, made great Feasts for all his Friends, gave him the Half of his Estate, and secured the other Half to him after his own death.[1]

Rahab (I)

[Josh. ii. 3, 4, 5.] I. RAHAB, an Hostess of the City of Jericho, who received into her House and concealed the Spies sent by Joshua to view the City. The Hebrew Text calls her Zona,[1] which St. Jerom and many others understand of a Woman of an ill Life. But others[2] think she was only an Hostess or Innkeeper, and that this is the true Signification of the original Word. Had she been a Woman of ill Fame, would Salmon, a Prince of the Tribe of Juda, have taken her to Wife, or could he have done it by the Law? Besides, the Spies of Joshua would hardly have gone to lodge with a Prostitute, a common Harlot, they who were charged with so nice and dangerous a Commission. Those that maintain she was an Harlot pretend, that perhaps she was one of those Women that prostituted themselves in Honour of the Pagan Deities; as if this could any way extenuate her Crime, or the Scandal of her Profession, if it were true that she was a publick Woman.

But whatever was Rahab's Profession, the Spies of Joshua were no sooner entered her House,[3] a but Notice was given of it to the King of Jericho, who sent to tell Rahab, that she must produce those Men that were come to her House. But she hid them, and told the Messengers, that it was true, indeed, such Men had been at her House, but she did not know from whence they came; and when the Gates of the City were shutting, they went out, and she could not tell whither they were gone. Pursue them quickly, she said, and you may overtake them. They forthwith pursued them, but in vain, for they were conceal'd upon the Terrass of Rahab's House.

When the King's Messengers were gone away, Rahab went up to the Terrass or Roof of her House, and said to the Israelites, I know the Lord has delivered this Country into your Hands, the Terror of your Name has seized us, and all our People are in a Consternation. Promise me therefore, that you will save the Lives of me and my Family, when you shall take Possession of this City. The Spies promis'd her with an Oath, and bid her tie a scarlet String to her Window, that her House might be distinguished when the Israelites should enter into Jericho. If we should touch any one that belongs to you, added they, which shall be then in your House, his Blood be upon us; but if they are without, their Blood shall fall upon their own Heads, and we will be blameless.

Having obtained these Promises, she let them down by a Rope that she fastened to her Window; for her House joined to the Walls of the City. She advised them to return by the Way of the Mountains, for fear of meeting those that had been sent in quest of them; and to continue upon the Mountains for three Days, in which time the Messengers would return, after which they might proceed on their Way. The Spies followed Rahab's Counsel exactly, and at the End of three Days arrived at Joshua's Camp, to whom they related all they had discovered at Jericho, which had happened to themselves, and the Promises they had made to their Benefactress Rahab. Some time after this, when the People for six Days had made a Circuit round Jericho with much Silence, Joshua commanded all Israel to make a Tour the seventh Time, [Josh. vi. 16, 17.] and when the Priests sounded the Trumpets, to cast forth a very loud Cry. To which he added, that the whole City, and whatever was found therein, was to be utterly extirpated; only Rahab and those that were found in her House, should have their Lives saved.

Joshua's Orders were duly executed. The Walls fell down at the Cry of the Hebrews, and the City was taken and destroyed. Joshua sent the two Spies to the House of Rahab, to bring her out with all her Relations, that they might be secured from all Violence. As soon as they were come out, Joshua put fire to the City, and cursed him that should undertake to rebuild it. Rahab married Salmon, a Prince of Judah, by whom she had Boaz. Boaz was Father to Obed, and Obed to Jesse, the Father [Ruth iv. 20.] of King David. Thus Jesus Christ has condescended to reckon this Canaanitish [Matt. i. 5. 1 Chron. ii. 11. Heb. xi. 31.] Woman among his Ancestors. In the Chronicles it is said, that Nathon begat Salma, who is the same as Salmon. St. Paul magnifies the Faith of Rahab, who escaped the great Calamity of her Country, by having entertain'd and concealed the Spies.

Rahab (II)

[Psalm lxxxvii. 4. אוכיר רהב] II. RAHAB. The Psalmist speaks of another Rahab, different from this now mentioned. I will make mention of Rahab, and Babylon, to them that know me. And again, Psalm lxxxix. 10. Thou hast broken Rahab in pieces, or the Egyptian. Isaiah li. 9. and xxx. 7. makes use of the same Word Rahab to mark out the Destruction of Pharaoh and his Army in the Red Sea. See also Job xxvi. 12. By his Understanding he smiteth through the Proud; the Hebrew says, Rahab. The most skilful Commentators[1] explain this of Egypt, and particularly of that Part of Lower Egypt which is called Delta, because of its Likeness to the Letter Δ, making a Kind of Triangle, whose Base is the Mediterranean Sea. This Part of Egypt is still called Rib or Rif, the Pear, because of its Similitude to the Shape of this Fruit. M. d'Herbelot says, in his Bibliotheca Orientalis, that the Name Rif, is given to that Part of Egypt, which begins at Cairo, and stretches out towards the North: And that the Arabians call by the Name of Giouf, that Part of the same Country which the Greeks call Delta, and which contains all the Country enclosed by the Nile, till it empties itself into the Mediterranean Sea.

St. Jerom and the antient Greek Interpreters have often translated Rahab by Pride, or the Proud. But the Fathers, and such Interpreters[2] who have not consulted the Original, have understood by Rahab, no other than the Woman of Jericho, of whom we have spoke in the foregoing Article.

Rain

RAIN. It should seem by some Expressions of the Scripture, that the antient Hebrews imagin'd the Rain to be derived from certain great Refervatories, which they supposed to be above the Heavens, and which Moses calls the superior Waters, by way of Contradistinction from the inferior Waters, which are those of the Sea. For Example, Moses says, that at the Time of the Deluge, the Rain did not fall according to the ordinary Course of Nature, but that the Cataracts of Heaven were set open.[1] All the Fountains of the great Deep were broken up, and the Windows of Heaven were opened. [Hos. ii. 21.] And Hosea says, that in times of great Drought the Clouds cry to the Lord, beseeching him to permit the Waters which he keeps in his Treasuries and Repositories, to fall into them and replenish them. In other Places of Scripture,[2] the Clouds are described to us as great Bags or Bottles, filled with the Waters that are supply'd to them from the Firmament. Even the Dews themselves [Deut. xxxiii. 28.] are represented as proceeding from the superior Waters. His Heavens shall drop down Dew.

The Sacred Writers often speak of the Rain of the former Season, and of the Rain of the latter Season: Imber temporaneus, & [Deut. xi. 14.] Imber serotinus. I will give you the Rain of your Land in his due Season, the first Rain and the latter Rain. So Hosea, He [Hos. vi. 3.] shall come unto us as the Rain, as the latter and former Rain unto the Earth. The Rabbins, and the Generality of Interpreters are of Opinion, that the former Rain, pluvia temporanea, called in Hebrew, Jorah, signifies [יורה Jorah מלקוש Malchush. Job xxix. 23. Prov. xvi. 15. Hos. vi. 3. Joel ii. 23.] the Rain of the Autumn; and that the latter Rain, pluvia serotina, called in the Hebrew, Malchush, signifies the Rain of the Spring-season. 'Tis known that the Jews began their Year at Autumn, which gives some Probability to their Opinion, who suppose the pluvia temporanea to signify the Rain that falls in Autumn. But on the contrary, we think that Jorah signifies the Rain of the Spring, and Malchush that of the Autumn. In Judea it commonly rained but in two Seasons, in the Spring and in the Autumn. Jorah is always put first, and Malchush afterwards. The natural Order of the Season is, that the Spring should come before the Autumn. Malchush is derived from the Verb Lakash, which signifies to make a Vintage, to delay, to put off, to gather in the After-marth, or the Grass that grows in the Meadows in the latter Season. Besides, Malchush signifies a Rain that is (as it were) earnestly desired by the Earth, as coming after the dry Season of the Summer. Joel says, He will cause to come down for you the Rain, the former Rain, and the latter Rain in the first Month. But if Malchush signifies the Rain of the Autumn, it will be easily granted, that Jorah must signify that of the Spring. The Septuagint[3] have taken it in the Sense we now contend for: And Hesiod[4] has express'd the Rain of the Spring and Autumn in Words of the same import, as those made use of by the Septuagint.

Moses describing the Land of Canaan, the Advantages of which he compares to [Deut. xi. 10, 11.] those of Egypt, says, that the Land of Canaan is not like that of Egypt, where they are obliged to convey the Water by artificial Canals, and by great Labour and Industry, to water the Fields and the Gardens. For it never rains in this Country; whereas Palestine being a Country of Hills and Vales, is watered by the Rains from Heaven. Sed montuosa est & campestris, de cœlo expectans pluvias. We have already described, under the Article Foot, the Manner in which they water the Soil of Egypt, to which the Inundations of the Nile cannot arrive. As to the Land of Canaan, 'tis well known that it is water'd by copious Dews in the Summer, and by Showers of Rain in the Spring and Autumn. Whence it is that God promised the Israelites, if they will continue obedient to his Commands, that he would send them [Lev. xxvi. 3.] Rain in due Season. Dabo vobis pluvias temporibus suis. And on the other hand, Moses threatens them, if they depart from that Fidelity that they owe to God, to send them Showers of Sand and Dust. Det [Deuteron. xxviii. 24.] dominus imbrem terræ tuæ pulverem; Showers that will be more apt to dry up and burn, than to refresh the Earth.

The Hebrews often compare Speech and [Deuteron. xxxii. 2. Ecclus. xxxix. 9.] Discourse to Rain. Concrescat ut pluvia doctrina mea. And Ecclesiasticus, Tanquam imbres (sapiens) mittet eloquia sapientiæ suæ. Job says, that in the Time of his Prosperity, he was attended to with great Respect and Eagerness; that his Discourse [Job xxix. 21,22,23.] distilled like soft Rain. Super illos stillabat eloquium meum. That they expected it like Rain, and opened their Mouths as it were to receive the Rains of the latter Season. Expectabant me sicut pluviam, & os suum aperiebant quasi ad imbrem serotinum.

[Psalm cxxxv. 7. Jer. x. 13. & li. 16.] The Psalmist and Jeremiah observe, as an Effect of the Power of God, that he changes Lightning into Rain. Fulgura in pluviam facit. Lightning goes before Thunder and Rain; and when we perceive Lightning, and hear a fresh Clap of Thunder during a Storm, we conclude that the Shower will soon come. This is easy to be apply'd. Lightning and Thunder are produced only by the Shock of Clouds one against another; and the same Shock is the Cause of Rain also. The Prophet therefore may observe here, it is as it were the Forerunner, and the natural Token of Rain. Perhaps also the People might be of Opinion, that Lightning was changed into Rain, or produced it as a Cause. Some understand [Chrysost. Theodor. Heraclit. Theodor. in Psalm.] it thus: God by his Power unites Lightning with Rain, Fire with Water; things which are naturally incompatible.

Sometimes the same Place shall be called at once Rama, Ramatha, Ramoth, and Ramathaim, all these Words only signifying an Eminence or high Situation. Sometimes Rama or Ramoth is joined to another Name, to determine the Place of such City or Eminence. Lastly, Ramah is sometimes put only for a high Place, and signifies neither City nor Village. These following are the chief Places that are mentioned in Scripture by the Name Ramah.

Ramah (I)

I. RAMAH, a City of Benjamin, situate [Judg. iv. 5. & xix. 3. Euseb. in locis. Hieron. in Osee v. Idem in Sophon. 1. 1 Kings xv. 17. 2 Chron. xvi. 1. Joseph. Antiq. l. 8. c. 6.] between Gaba and Bethel, towards the Mountains of Ephraim, six Miles distant from Jerusalem towards the North. Saint Jerom places it near Gaba, seven Miles from Jerusalem: It was still in being in his Time, and was then only a small Village. This City stood upon the Road that went from Samaria to Jerusalem; whence it was that Baasha King of Israel caus'd it to be fortify'd, that there might be no Passage out of the Land of Judah into that of Israel. Josephus calls it Ramathan.

I make no doubt but that this is the [1 Sam. i. 1, 19. & ii. 11, &c.] same as Ramatha, or Ramathaim-zophim, the Country of the Prophet Samuel. This City was on the Frontiers of Ephraim and Benjamin; and these Sorts of Cities were often inhabited by Men of both the Tribes. Rama, Ramath, and Ramathaim, may express but one and the same Place. The other Ramah, or Ramula, thought to be the Country of Samuel, cannot be so; as will be seen afterwards.

'Tis also very probable that Jeremiah [Jer. xl. 1, 2, 3.] speaks of this Ramah, when he says, that Nebuzar-adan, who had the Command of the Chaldean Army, having found him among the Captives at Ramah, whither they had been all brought together, set him at Liberty, and permitted him to go where-ever he pleas'd. And 'tis of the same Place that we explain that other Prophecy of Jeremiah, wherein the Lord [Jer. xxxi. 15,16,17.] comforts Rachel, for the taking away of her Children of the Tribes of Ephraim and Manasseh, which had been carried into Captivity: A Voice was heard in Ramah, Lamentation and bitter weeping: Rachel weeping weeping for her Children, refused to be comforted for her Children, because they were not. Thus saith the Lord, Refrain thy Voice from Weeping, and thine Eyes from Tears: for thy Work shall be rewarded, saith the Lord, and they shall come again from the Land of the Enemy. And there is Hope in thine End, saith the Lord, that thy Children shall come again to their own Border. St. [Matth. ii. 18.] Matthew hath made an Application of this Passage of the Mourning of Rahel or Rachel, to the Massacre of the Infants of Bethlehem by Herod. But it is plain, that That was not the literal and historical Sense of this Passage of Jeremiah.

The Scripture often joins Ramah with Gaba, Geba, or Gibeah, as being two neighbouring Places: So Ezra ii. 26. Nehem. vii. 30. Isai. x. 29. Hosea v. 8. We also see, 1 Sam. xxii. 6. that when Saul abode in Gibeah, and sate under a Tree at Ramah, that he was inform'd of David's having been seen in the Forest of Haresh: But in this Place we take Ramah only to signify the Eminence that was at Gibeah.

Ramah (II)

II. RAMAH, or Ramatha, Ramola, Ramula, Ramba, Ruma, or Remphtis, a City lying to the West of Jerusalem, between [Hieron. in Epitaph. Paulæ. Le Brun, p. 251.] Lydda and Joppa, as St. Jerom places it; or between Joppa and Jerusalem, as the modern Travellers describe it. Phocas puts it about six and thirty Miles from Jerusalem. Heretofore, near this Place, and towards Lydda, was to be seen the neat Church of St. George, with a Monastery bearing his Name, wherein the Body of this Saint and Martyr [Bernard. Monach. Itin. an. 870. Reland. Palæst. l. 3. p. 950. Sanut. in secretis fidel. crucis, p. 152.] was deposited. Abulfeda, quoted by M. Reland, says, that this City was built by Solyman Son of Abdolmelic, after the Destruction of Lydda; and Sanutus also says, that the Arabians built it near Lydda, after the Crusadoes began to come into that Country. M. le Brun describes the fine Reservoirs of Water to be seen there, and many other Marks of Antiquity: He says it is but four Leagues from Jafa, or Joppa, and stands in a plain and even Country: He says also, that Lydda is on one Side, and about three Miles from Rama.

These Circumstances determine me to [Euseb. in Ἀρμαθαίμ. Hieron. in Epitaph. Paulæ. Matt. xvii. 57.] think that this is the same Place that Eusebius and St. Jerom took for Arimathea, the Country of Joseph of Arimathea, so well known in the Gospel. St. Jerom places it between Lydda and Joppa: And Eusebius says it is in the Canton of Thamnis, and near to Diospolis, otherwise call'd Lydda. This is the same that was taken from Samaria, and added to Judea. See 1 Mac. xi. 34. and Josephus's Antiquities, l. 13. c. 8. p. 438. But if this be so, we must acknowledge this City to have been very ancient, and to have been in being long before our Saviour's time: And, consequently, when it is said, that it was built only since the Time of the Crusadoes, it must be understood only to have been then rebuilt, repair'd, or fortify'd anew. Eusebius and some others seem to have thought, [Euseb. & Hieron. in Armathasophim.] that this City is the same as Ramath of Samuel, or Ramathaim-zophim of the Mountains of Ephraim. But this Opinion cannot be supported by any means.

Rama (III)

[Le Brun, Voiage de Syrie, p. 259.] III. RAMA, or Ramatha. Phocas says, in his Travels, that Ramah, or Armath, where the Great Samuel was born, was to be seen at about six Miles from Jerusalem, towards the West. Le Brun says, that going from Ramah in order to come to Jerusalem, he pass'd through Cobeb, Benop, Carithleneb, Soud, Souba, and Samuel; which is a Church upon a Hill, where, they say, heretofore was the City of Samuel. But this City of Samuel was to the North, and not to the West, from Jerusalem, in the Mountains of Ephraim, and not in those of Judah. See the Article of ARIMATHEA.

A VIEW OF THE CITY OF RAMAH SITUATED TO THE WEST OF JERUSALEM BETWEEN LYDDA AND JOPPA

[Maneth. apud Joseph. cont. App. l. 1. p. 1041.] Manetho speaks of Ramesses or Armesses, and of Ramesses Miamum Predecessor of Amenophis. We have already taken notice elsewhere, that the Chronology of the ancient Kings of Egypt was very perplex'd; and that very little was known of the Actions of those Princes. Usher places the Reign of Ramesses, the Successor of Armais, in the Year of the World 2426, before Christ 1574, before the Vulgar Era 1578. He reigned but a Year and four Months; and Ramesses Miamum succeeded him, in the Year of the World 2427, and reigned sixty-six Years and two Months. His Successor was Amenophis. Usher thinks that Ramesses was that new King who oppress'd the Israelites in [Exod. i. 8.] Egypt, and who knew not the Services that Joseph had done that Country. 'Twas he that caus'd to be built the Cities of [Exod. i. 11. Exod. xiv. 28.] Phitom and Ramesses, and that pursued the Israelites into the Red-Sea, where he was drowned, with all his Army.

Marsham places this Ramesses in the sixteenth Age of the Egyptian Era; which answers to the Reigns of Joash, Amasiah, Azariah, Jothan, and Ahaz, Kings of Judah. He thinks it was he that caus'd to [Plin. l. 36. c. 8. Hermap. apud Ammianum. Marcel. l. 17.] be made the famous Obelisk mention'd by Pliny, Hermapion, and Ammianus Marcellinus, and which is still to be seen at Rome, before the Church of Lateran. The magnificent Encomiums of this Prince, [Ammian. Marcel. l. 17. Plin. l. 36. c. 8.] which are read upon this Obelisk in hieroglyphical Characters, and the Empire of the World ascribed to him, cannot agree, according to Marsham, to any other than a Successor of Sesostris, whom he thinks to be much later than Moses's time.

Pliny says, that Ramesses who caus'd the great Obelisk to be made, which we have now mention'd, reign'd in Egypt at the time of the Taking of Troy. Ramises quo regnante Ilium captum est. That this Obelisk was ninety-nine Foot high, and four Foot wide; That twenty thousand Men were employ'd to cut it: And that when it was rais'd in the City of Heliopolis, in order to excite the Care and Diligence of the Workmen, the King fix'd his own Son upon the Top of the Spire, that they might raise it with the greater Caution and Circumspection, for fear of killing the young Prince.

When Cambyses King of Persia put Fire to the City of Heliopolis, he was moved with the Beauty of this Monument, and caus'd the Flames to be extinguish'd when they approach'd the Foot of this Obelisk. [Ammian. Marcel. l. 17. Vid. Gruter. Inscr. p. 186.] The Emperor Augustus, tho' he caus'd two others to be brought from Egypt to Rome, yet he durst not attempt to meddle [Vid. Marsham. Can. Chronol. Ægypt. sæculo 16.] with this. Constantine the Great resolved to remove it from the Place where it was, in order to bring it to Rome; but being surpriz'd by Death before he could accomplish his Design, the Obelisk was brought no farther than Alexandria. The Emperor Constantius, his Son, had it brought to Rome, and placed it in the great Circus. It is not known how long it continu'd there, nor when it was thrown down; but Sixtus V. having taken it out of the Ground, and having repair'd it as far as possible, erected it in the Year 1588, before the Portal of the Church of Lateran, where it is still at this Day.

RAMLA a City of Palestine, on the Road from Joppa to Jerusalem. See II. RAMAH. This City was formerly very magnificent, and surrounded by strong Walls. We are assured, that the House there which is the ordinary Residence of Pilgrims, belong'd to Nicodemus a private Disciple of Jesus Christ. There are still to be seen two fine Churches, which at present are reduced to Mosques; one dedicated to St. John, and the other to the Holy Virgin, under the Name of the forty Martyrs, whose Bodies were brought from Sebaste in Armenia. About three Miles from thence are to be seen the Ruines of the ancient Lydda, very well known afterwards by the Name of Diospolis. This [1 Mac. xi. 34. Ramoth RAMOTH, a famous City in the Mountains of Gilead. It is often call'd Ramoth-gilead; sometimes only Ramoth; and sometimes Ramath-mizpeh, or the Watch-tower[1]. Josephus calls it Ramathan, or Aramatha. This City belonged to the Tribe of Gad. It was assigned for an [Deut. iv. 43. & xx. 8. Josh. xx. 8. & xxi. 37.] Habitation to the Levites, and was one of the Cities of Refuge beyond Jordan. It became famous during the Reigns of the later Kings of Israel, and was the Occasion of several Wars between these Princes and the Kings of Damascus, who had made a Conquest of it, and from whom the Kings of Israel, who laid claim to it, endeavour'd [1 Kings xxii. 3, 4, &c. 2 Kings viii. 28, 29. 2 Chron. xxii. 5.] to regain it. Jehoram King of Judah was dangerously wounded at the Siege of this [2 Kings ix. 1,2,3, &c.] Place: And Jehu the Son of Nimshi was here anointed a King of Israel, by a Prophet sent by Elisha. Ahab King of Israel was kill'd [2 Chron. xviii. 3,4, 5, &c.] in the Battle that he fought with the Syrians before this Place. Eusebius says, that Ramoth was fifteen Miles from Philadelphia towards the East. St. Jerom places it in the Neighbourhood of Jabok, and consequently to the North of Philadelphia.

Raphael

RAPHAEL, one of the seven Arch-Angels which are continually before the Throne of God, and are always at Hand to [Tob. xii. 15.] perform his Commands. The Name of the Angel Raphael is not found in Scripture, but only in the History of Tobit. It is not mention'd in the New Testament; and, in general, the Names of the Angels do not appear to have been known before the Captivity of Babylon. Tobit the Father having lent, or, according to the Greek Text, having only deposited, the Sum of ten Talents with a Jew call'd Gabael, resolved, in his old Age, to send his young Son Tobias to fetch this Money[1]. As Tobias, therefore, was seeking a Guide to conduct him from Nineveh to Rages a City of Media, he happily found an Angel, who having assum'd an human Form, offer'd himself, for a Drachma a Day, and his Food,[2] to conduct him safe to Rages, and to bring him back again to Nineveh. This holy Guide took the Name of Azarias, he eat and drank with Tobias during the whole Journey, and did nothing that could give him any Suspicion of his being an Angel.

They departed from Nineveh; and when they came to their Lodging upon the Banks of the River Tigris, Tobias went to wash his Feet in the River; when a great Fish made up to him, as if it intended to devour him. But Raphael bid him to seize it by the Fins, draw it to Land, cut it up, and take out the Heart, Gall, and Liver, which he was to reserve [Tob. vi. 1, 2, 3.] for an Use he would acquaint him with hereafter. When they came near to Ecbatana, [Tob. vi. 10,11,12.] Raphael said to Tobias; In this City dwells one call'd Raguel, who has an only Daughter whom you ought to marry, according to the Law; for you are her nearest Kinsman, and she is the only Heiress of the Goods of her Father. Tobias inform'd him, that he had heard this young Woman had already had seven Husbands, who had all been put to Death by an Evil Spirit. Raphael bid him take Courage; and told him, The Devil could have no Power over those, that enter'd into the State of Matrimony in the Fear of the Lord; That, besides, he had a sure Remedy against all Evil Spirits, in the Heart of the Fish he had about him; for he need but broil it on the Fire, and they would presently be put to flight.

[Tob. vii. 7,2,3,&c.] They went therefore to Raguel's House; and Tobias marry'd Sara. And by observing the Direction of Raphael he was secured from all Misfortunes, the Devil that had (in a manner) besieged Sara, being banish'd into the higher Egypt. While the Days of the Marriage were celebrating, Tobias [Tob. ix. 1,2,3,&c. Tob. xi.] desired Raphael to go to Gabael, and to take up the Money out of his Hands, which was the chief Occasion of their Journey. Raphael accordingly went to Rages, and brought the Money to Ecbatana. After the Ceremony of the Marriage was over, Tobias and his Spouse took their leaves, in order to return to his Father at Nineveh. But when they came to Haran, in the midst of their Journey, Raphael persuaded Tobias to go before, to deliver his Father and Mother from their Impatience, who were much grieved because of his long Absence. They went therefore together, and being arrived at Nineveh with old Tobit, who was blind; after the first Salutations were over, Tobias, by the Advice of Raphael, put upon his Father's Eyes the Gall of the Fish he had taken, by which in half an Hour's time the old Man recover'd his Sight again.

After this was over, they both apply'd themselves to Raphael, whom they took [Tob. xii. 1,2,3,&c.] still for a Man, and desir'd him, that he would accept of half of their Substance, as a Recompence for the great Services he had done them. Then Raphael told them in private, that they must give Thanks to God the Author of all their good Fortune. When you gave Alms, said he, and when you buried the Dead, I presented your Prayers to the Lord; and because you were acceptable in his Eyes, he brought you into Temptation in order to prove you. Now therefore the Lord has sent me to cure you, and to deliver Sara your Son's Wife from the Power of the Devil; for I am the Angel Raphael, one of the seven that are always before the Lord. Bless him therefore, and sing his Praises. It seem'd to you that I eat and drank with you; but as for me, I am fed with an invisible Food. I must now return to him that sent me. Having said this, he vanish'd out of their Sight. The Story of Tobit and Tobias may be further seen under their Articles.

The Word Raphael signifies the Remedy of God, or the Physick of God; and nothing could agree better to the Part acted by the Angel on this Occasion, and to the Design of God in sending him to Tobias and Sara, than the Name of the Physician of God.

He calls himself Azarias Son of Ananias the Great; and Tobit, who knew this Family, said he was of an illustrious Birth. The Hebrew, Greek, and Syriack Texts of this Passage have it thus. My Brother, you are of a good and honest Family, for I know Ananias and Joathan, Sons of the illustrious Shemeias. We went together to worship the Lord at Jerusalem, to offer our First-fruits and Tenths of all our Fruits. They have not fallen into the Irregularities of their Brethren. You are of an illustrious Race, my Brother.

It has been Matter of Inquiry, whether in all this Raphael did not tell a Lye? It should [Vide Gataker, l. 1. contr. Edmund. Campian. p. 77.] seem, that it cannot be deny'd but that he must have told an Untruth, since certainly he was neither Azarias, nor the Son of Ananias, nor an Israelite, nor, in a Word, was he a Man as he appear'd to be. He speaks contrary to his own Thoughts, and against his own Knowledge; he made Tobias believe what was contrary to the Truth; he has in some sort deceived him, and all that took him for an human Guide. But the Commentators[3] generally acquit him of Lying. He was sent of God, to conduct young Tobias, under the Shape of a young Man call'd Azarias; he was therefore to act and speak like him, and in his Name. The Angels that appear'd to the Patriarchs, and to Moses, have spoke and acted as if it were God himself, because God sent them to represent his own Person. An Actor in a Tragedy that represents Cyrus, says, without lying, that he is Cyrus. Besides, supernatural Actions, such as are here in question, are not subject to the common and ordinary Rules, but are of an higher Order and Character; they are figurative and mysterious, they have none of the Qualities essential to a Lye, consider'd as an Action purely human, moral, and contrary to Truth and Justice.

'Tis inquired also how Raphael eat and drank? whether he did really eat and drink, or whether in Appearance only? The Opinions of Men are divided upon this Question. Some maintain that he did not drink, and Raphael seems express for this Opinion, when he says, It seemed to you that I eat and drank with you; but as for me, I am fed with invisible Food. Therefore he only seem'd to eat, and the Senses of Tobias and the rest were imposed upon, when they thought he took Nourishment, whereas really he took none. Others[4] pretend, that such Angels as have appear'd to Men [Dialog. cum Tryphon.] have really eaten. Justin Martyr makes no Difficulty of it, since in Heaven the blessed Spirits are fed, as he says, with the Bread of Angels, as the Scripture speaks. Tertullian [Tertul. cont. Marcion. l. 3. c. 9.] also acknowledges, that Angels having appear'd cloath'd with natural Flesh, may also have eaten really and naturally.

St. Austin[5] puts no other Difference between the eating of Men and Angels, excepting that we eat out of Necessity, to repair our Strength and to support ourselves; whereas Angels have no Occasion to eat. He thinks that when Raphael said to Tobias, It seemed to you that I eat and drank, he does not deny his eating and drinking; but he means, that it seem'd to them, as if he eat and drank out of Necessity, whereas he only did it because he had a Mind to do it. 'Twas thus that our Saviour eat and drank after his Resurrection. But it may be ask'd, What became of that Nourishment that the Angels took in their several Appearances, and that Jesus Christ took after his Resurrection? why, it was dispers'd by Transpiration, by Rarefaction, and by other Ways unknown to us; but was not [Grot. Menoch. Just. in Tob. xii.] converted into the Substance of those that took it.

RAPHAIM, or Rephaim. This Word is appropriated to those Giants, who lived in the Holy Land before the Arrival of the Hebrews in that Country. There are some Passages of Scripture, wherein this Term is [Ps. lxxxvii. 11.] translated by Physicians. For Example, Numquid mortuis facies mirabilia, aut medici suscitabunt & confitebuntur tibi. The Hebrew has, Wilt thou make thy Miracles to display themselves among the Dead, and shall the Rephaim arise to declare thy Praise? But St. Jerome commonly translates this Word by Gigantes, Giants, and the Scripture often mentions Hell where the Rephaim groan, and whither the Wicked, the Impious, and the Shameless descend. RAPHON, a City beyond Jordan, upon a Brook, not far from Carnaim.

This City is hardly known in Scripture, but by the Victory of Judas Maccabeus over Timotheus. After the Defeat of his Army before the Fortress of Dathman, he assembled a new Army, composed of Arabians, and what other People he could get, to the Number of six-score thousand Foot, and two thousand five hundred Horse. And [1 Macc. xii. 20.] having sent the Women and Children, and all the Baggage, into the City of Carnion, or Ashteroth-Carnaim, which was a Place beyond Jordan of very difficult Access, he encamped at Raphon, or perhaps Saphon, beyond and to the North of the Brook Jabbok.

Judas had then but six thousand effective Men: He sent to observe the Enemies [Ibid.] Army, and Word was brought him, that it was very numerous, and consisted of all the neighbouring Nations; and that Timotheus was preparing to come to attack him. Judas presently march'd to meet him, and pass'd over the Brook at the Head of his little Army. The Enemy was so surpriz'd at this bold Attempt, that they could not stand the Assault, but fled with great Precipitation.

[Observations on the Passage of the Brook Jabbok, and the Defeat of Timotheus near Raphon, by Judas Maccabeus. 1 Macc. v. 37,38, &c. 2 Macc. xii. 20, 21, &c.] We may observe a surprizing Boldness and Intrepidity in all the Exploits of Judas Maccabeus, and an admirable Conduct in the Execution of them; not only to avoid the Stratagems of his Enemy, but even to make them fatal to themselves. Judas had no sooner Notice that Timotheus had raised a new Army, and that he was posted near Raphon, beyond the Brook Jabbok, but he sent to get Intelligence of this Army; and he was acquainted, that all the Nations round about had repair'd to Timotheus, and made up an extraordinary Army. And so it was indeed, in comparison of that of Judas, since the sacred Author says, that Maccabeus ranged his Army about him, which consisted of six thousand Men, and having divided them into 514] Bands, he marched against Timotheus, who had six-score thousand Foot, and two thousand five hundred Horse. The Number of his Enemies does not dishearten him; he hears they are preparing to come to attack him, he does not think proper to stay so long for them, but resolves to prevent them, and to take the Field before them: And this Resolution makes him appear more formidable to his Enemies.

Timotheus, who was well acquainted with Judas's Valour, seems to have foreseen what would happen; and what he said to the principal Officers of his Army, leaves us no room to doubt of his Cowardice, and the little Bravery he shew'd at the Head of so numerous an Army. When Judas, says he, shall come with his People near the Brook, if he comes over to us first, we shall not be able to oppose his Efforts, because he will have all the Advantage over us. But if he is cautious of passing, and encamps on the other Side the River, let us go over to him and beat him. The learned Commentator says upon this, “That Timotheus intended to draw a Presage of his future Victory, or of his “Defeat, from the free Motion of his “Enemies, which of all Things in the “World is the most uncertain, and the “most superstitious.” I shall make Answer to this, that there is no Superstition in it, and that every Day's Experience may teach us, that a skilful and prudent General may easily foresee, without being a Prophet, and without being tainted with Superstition, that if the Enemy takes such or such a Step, if he makes such a Motion, he may be beaten; but if he does the contrary, he is assured of Victory. Sometimes dangerous Expedients are resolved on, with a Notion that an unskilful Adversary will not perceive it, and in this one may be mistaken: So that here is an Uncertainty. Often the wisest Measures, built upon the nicest Rules of War, are frustrated by contrary Management, and Methods that were not expected. Because it was not imagin'd, that the Enemy was capable of putting them in Practice, which he often does by Chance, and without Design. M. de Turenne has acknowledged, that upon some Occasions he found himself more perplex'd against an ignorant General, than against one that was very knowing and skilful. But when we are well acquainted with the Genius and Capacity of our Antagonist, we take our Measures against him accordingly, and may be too hard for him, when-ever he makes an Attempt. The second Reflection of the Commentator seems to me more just than the former. " It must, however, be acknowledged, says he, that Timotheus takes a " thing for a Presage of his Victory, which " must shew a kind of Timorousness in " the Troops of Judas." If he comes over the Brook we shall be beaten; but if he is afraid to pass it, then we shall beat him. If this General had had more Courage, he would not have contented himself to stay beyond the Brook, with such superiour Forces; nothing would have hinder'd him from going over and meeting Judas, whom doubtless he might have surrounded; but he stay'd for him on the other Side, and was beaten, and that perhaps by his own Miscarriage, that is, by hindering his General Officers of that Victory they might have obtain'd.

Now when Judas came near the Brook, says the sacred Author, he caused the Scribes of the People to remain by the Brook, unto whom he gave Commandment, saying; Suffer no Man to remain in the Camp, but let all come to the Battle. 'Tis very likely Judas might apprehend, that there were timorous People in his Army, who were discouraged at the great Number of the Enemy, for which Reason he gave out these Orders. Without doubt the Brook was fordable, and Judas having divided his six thousand Men into Companies, under different Captains, that is to say, into several Corps, of a considerable Depth according to Custom, so he went first over unto them, and all the People after him. Judas might be accused of Rashness, in venturing to pass over a River with so few Troops, in the View of an Army of an hundred and twenty-two thousand Men; if we were not assured that he put his whole Strength and his whole Trust in the Lord, for his Protection, and that having such an invincible Support, he durst undertake any thing, and perform'd Prodigies of Valour. This is what the Author of [2 Macc. xii. 22,23.] the second Book of Maccabees expresses very well in the manner following. But when Judas his first Band came in Sight, the Enemies (being smitten with Fear and Terrour, through the appearing of him that seeth all Things) fled amain, one running this Way, another that Way, so as that they were often hurt of their own Men, and wounded with the Points of their own Swords. Judas also was very earnest in pursuing them, killing those wicked Wretches, of whom he slew about thirty thousand Men.

In the Maccabees it is a very remarkable thing, that we seldom or never find any Horse in their Armies; we hear of nothing but Infantry, but so brave and so resolute, that they make no Scruple to attack the Enemies Cavalry. And indeed, the great Depth with which they fought, made them impenetrable. As to the Army of Timotheus, I suppose his Foot ranged in a Phalanx, and his Horse upon the Wings, according to the Method of the People of Asia, which was that of all the Western Nations, except the Romans. Judas fell on him vigorously, and with so much Bravery, that he open'd himself a Way into the Heart of the Enemy where-ever he made his Attack, and so put them to flight.

Raven

RAVEN, a Bird of Prey, having black Feathers, and declared unclean by the [Levit. xi. 15.] Law of Moses. When Noah sent the Raven out of the Ark, to see if the Waters were withdrawn from covering the Earth, [Gen. viii. 6, 7.] this Bird did not return again into the Ark. 'Tis said, that when the Raven sees its Young newly hatch'd, and cover'd with a white Down, or Pen-feathers, it conceives such an Aversion to them, that it forsakes them, and does not return to its Nest 'till after these first Pen-feathers are fallen off, and they begin to be cover'd with black Feathers. 'Tis to this, they say [Psal. cxlvii. 9. Job xxxviii. 41.] the Psalmist makes allusion, when he says, He giveth to the Beast his Food, and to the young Ravens which cry. And Job; Who provideth for the Raven his Food? when his young ones cry unto God, they wander for lack of Meat. But those who have more diligently examin'd the Nature of Birds and other Animals, are not agreed about this Fact, which indeed has too much the Air of a Fable to be believed without good Proofs.

Vossius says,[1] that it is the extream Voracity of the young Ravens, that makes the old ones sometimes forsake their Nests, when they find themselves not able to satisfy them. Others will have it, that this proceeds merely from the Forgetfulness of the old Ravens, that they think no longer of returning to their Nests, in order to feed their Young. Others imagine, that Job and the Psalmist allude to what is said by some Naturalists,[2] that the Ravens drive out their young ones early from their Nests, and oblige them to retire a great way off from the Habitation of their Parents; and that it is on this account, that Providence has the Care of their Support. Lastly, there are others, who without refining upon these Passages, think it is only meant, that Providence extends its Care over all Beasts and Birds, which in their manner call for its Assistance; and that Ravens are only put here instead of Birds in general. When the Prophet Elijah, by an Order from the Lord, dwelt in his Retirement near the Brook Cherith,[3] the Lord fed him for some time by means of the Ravens, who brought him Bread and Flesh every Morning and Evening. Some Interpreters, instead of Ravens, translate the Words of the Original by Arabians, or Merchants, or even Inhabitants of the City of Arabo, or Oreb, near to Bethshan. a To support these Translations it is observed, that the Raven being a Bird declared unclean by the Law, there is no Probability [Levit. xi. 15.] that God would make use of him in this Service. But notwithstanding these Reasons, the Generality of Interpreters and Commentators keep to the Version that renders it by Ravens. If those that supply'd Elijah with Flesh and Bread had been Men, why could they not also have supply'd him with Water, when the Brook Cherith was dry'd up; that he need not have been forc'd to look out for another Retreat, with the poor Widow of Zerephrath or Sarepta?

The Raven was consecrated to Apollo, as to the God of Divination. The Blackness of [Cant. v. 11. Plin. l. 7. c. 48.] the Raven is pass'd into a Proverb. His Locks are bushy, and black as a Raven. Yet however, there are white Ravens to be seen, and they are not rare in the Northern Countries,[4] where the Snow lies for a long time upon the Ground. It has been thought that the Raven conceived by its Beak, but this is a mere Fable. The Raven lives a long time. Pliny says, that it lived the Age of nine Men; but he allows this to be a Story. We are assured, that they live sometimes an hundred Years. They feed upon Carrion, and eat the Bodies of Men that are hung up or crucify'd :

[Hor. Epist. l. 1. v. 48.] ——— Non pasces in cruce corvos, says Horace.

[Prov. xxx. 17.] And the Wise Man says; The Eye that mocketh at his Father, and despiseth to obey his Mother, the Ravens of the Valley shall [Zeph. ii. 14. Isai. xxxiv. 11.] pick it out, and the young Eagles shall eat it. Zephaniah seems to insinuate, that they fed Ravens at the Doors of their Houses. Vox cantantis in fenestra, corvus in superliminari. But he rather insinuates, that after the Desolation of the Edomites, the Moabites, and the Ammonites, the Ravens[5] shall be seen upon their Windows, and upon the Doors of their ruinated Houses. This Bird may be pretty easily taught to talk, and to imitate the human Voice.

There are several Kinds of Ravens. Some have been seen that had their Bills and Legs as red as Coral. There is also a red Raven, Pyrrhus corax; it is smaller than a Crow, and about the Bigness of a small Owl or Howlet. Its Legs and Beak are yellow, inclining towards black, and every where else is quite black. This Bird is found in the Alps, in Swisserland, in Auvergne, in Candia, on Mount-jura. The Water-Raven has its Beak long and hooked at the End, the Top of the upper Part of its Bill is black, and the rest is of a Colour compos'd of red and yellow. The Feathers of his Wings and Back are of a Chesnut Colour, the Extremities of them are black, and all the rest is black. The Feathers of his Belly are white, those of his Back are ting'd with a blackish green at the Ends, and in the Middle with bright ash-colour and red. The upper Part of the Neck is cover'd with black and white Feathers, and the Fore-part with black and green. Its Wings are very long, and of the same Colour as its Back.

The Wood-Raven, call'd by the Lorrainers, the Sea-Crow, is of the Bigness of a Hen. To look on it at a Distance, it seems to be black all over its Body; but when we see it at hand, especially when the Beams of the Sun shine upon it, it appears of a green Colour. Its Bill is reddish and pretty long, its Feet are very like those of a Hen, it feeds upon Worms and Insects; its Legs are long and of a dark ruddy Colour. It builds its Nest at the Top of uninhabited Towers that are going to decay.

The Small-Raven, or Night-Raven, Nicticorax, haunts the Waters, and retires into the Reeds, where in the Night-time it makes a very disagreeable Noise, such as a Man when he is vomiting. It builds its Nest at the Tops of Trees, lays two or three Eggs, and generally feeds upon Fishes. We find in Moses the Name of a Bird which is translated Pelican, Psal. cii. 6. and Levit. xi. 18. which comes from a Root that signifies to vomit, and which may very well be the Raven of which we are now speaking. See the Article PELICAN before.

[2 Sam. xvii. 13.] Mention is made in Scripture, of certain Machines with which they demolish'd Cities, and tore up the Stones of Walls. These Machines were call'd Ravens, and the Antients made great Use of 'em at the Sieges of Cities and fortify'd Places. Diodor. l. 17. Vitruv. l. 10. c. 19. Homer Iliad. M.

Ravish

RAVISH, Rapere. This Word in its common Signification imports the taking away of any thing from any one by Violence. Alii rapiunt non sua. It is also used for the taking away by Force, or for the Rape of a Woman, [Prov. xi. 24. Gen. xxxiv. 2. Judg. xxi. 21. 1 Sam. xx. 30.] or Virgin. Sichem rapuit Dinam, & dormivit cum eâ. And in Judges; Rapite ex iis singuli uxorem sibi. Saul in his Anger calls Jonathan his Son, Fili mulieris virum ultro rapientis, the Son of a Woman that ravisheth a Man.[1]

[1 Kings xx. 30.] To ravish the Word out of a Man's Mouth. Rapuerunt verbum ex ore ejus. They seized on the Word that he happen'd to let slip; they took him at his Word, as we may say.

To be rapt up into Heaven, into Paradise, as St. Paul was rapt up into the third Heaven; this is said of a Man who is raised in Spirit into a supernatural State, even into Paradise, tho' his Body be still upon Earth. The Spirit of God rapt up Philip, and carry'd him far from the Place where he had baptized the Eunuch. It carry'd [Acts viii. 39.] him with so great Rapidity, that no human Force could have carry'd him so fast. Jesus Christ says in the Gospel, that since the Time of John the Baptist, the Kingdom of Heaven suffers Violence, and the Violent take it by Force. Vim patitur, & violenti rapiunt illud; which is explain'd after two different manners. To obtain the Kingdom of Heaven, and to arrive at eternal Life, we must use Violence towards ourselves, and towards our own Passions. We must mortify the Flesh, bear our Cross, exercise Penance. Otherwise, from the Time of John the Baptist, the Kingdom of Heaven, the Preaching of the Gospel, the Truth that Jesus Christ taught, suffers Violence, or is violently assaulted by the Wicked. The Kingdom of Heaven, as we may say, is exposed to the Plundering and the Violence of the Wicked. Or lastly, God refuses to none to enter into the Kingdom of Heaven, but lays it open to the Seizure of all. Every one enters therein that pleases.

The Son of God thought it no Robbery, no Rapine, to equal himself to God. Non rapinam arbitratus est esse se æqualem Deo. He is God, and equal to God of his own Nature; 'tis neither Usurpation, nor Robbery, nor Injustice, if he calls himself equal to God. When Lucifer says, I will be equal to the Most High, 'tis Blasphemy, 'tis Usurpation, 'tis Sacrilege, 'tis the most heinous of all Crimes.

Razis

RAZIS, or Razias; he was one of the most considerable of the Doctors that were then at Jerusalem, at the time of the Persecution of Antiochus Epiphanes. After the Death of this Prince, and of Antiochus Eupator his Son, and under the Reign of Demetrius Soter Son of Seleucus;[1] Alcimus the Usurper having obtain'd the High-priesthood of the Jews, by giving Money to King Demetrius, was sent into Judea with Nicanor, who had Orders to support him in the Possession of this Dignity. But Nicanor being reconcil'd to Judas Maccabeus, and living in good Understanding with him at Jerusalem; Alcimus took Umbrage at it, and went to accuse Nicanor of betraying the King's Interests, affirming, that he kept Correspondence with Judas Maccabeus. Demetrius upon this writ to Nicanor, and order'd him to seize Judas, and to send him to Antioch. Nicanor therefore broke with Judas, and began to seek for Means of apprehending him; but Judas discover'd his Design and made his Escape.

Nicanor having fail'd in his Design, was resolved to make the Priests pay for it, and began to threaten them very much. At the same time Razis was accused to him, whom we now speak of, probably as being much in the Interest of Judas Maccabeus, and very averse to that of Alcimus, as having no Right to the High-priesthood. The Scripture does not expressly say what he was accused of, but it gives him this Testimony, that he was very zealous for the Interests of the City of Jerusalem, and of the whole Nation, insomuch that he was call'd the Father of the Jews. His Life was pure and unblameable, and in the Times of Persecution he had already given substantial Proofs of his Firmness to Judaism,[2] by his Opposition to those that would have introduced Idolatry into Israel. Nicanor therefore sent five hundred Men to arrest him, thinking that if he could succeed in bringing him over, it would make a great Impression upon the rest of the Jews.

When therefore Razis saw that the Soldiers would break into his House, and put Fire to it, and that he could not avoid falling into their Hands; he fell upon his Sword, choosing rather to die bravely, than to see himself in the Power of wicked Men, and to suffer Indignities unbefitting his Birth and Quality. But in the Hurry he was in, not having given himself a mortal Wound, and seeing the Soldiers enter in Multitudes into his House, he ran with great Resolution to the Platform of his House, and throwing himself from the Top to the Bottom into the Street, he pitch'd with his Head foremost upon the Ground. But neither did this Fall entirely dispatch him, so that he made new Attempts; he rais'd himself up, ran through the People, and got upon a sharp Stone, where he drew his own Bowels out of his Body, and threw them with both his Hands among the People, invoking the Ruler of Life and of the Soul, to restore them again to him another Day. And in this manner he died.

The Jews put Razis among their most illustrious Martyrs, and pretend to prove from his Example, and from those of Saul and Samson, that in some certain Cases the Murder of one's self is not only allow'd, but is also laudable and meritorious. These Cases are, first, the reasonable Distrust of a Man's own Strength, and the Fear that he may yield in time of Persecution: Then, according to them, it is allow'd to prevent the Danger, by laying Hands upon our selves. The second Case is, that when one can foresee, that by falling into the Hands of the Enemy, they will thence take Occasion to insult the Lord, and to blaspheme his Name. The Circoncellions, a Sort of noted Hereticks of Africa, in the Time of St. Austin, made use of the Example of Razis, to justify themselves in those Cruelties that they exercis'd against themselves, by throwing themselves headlong, and putting themselves to Death in a thousand different Manners; to promote, as they pretended, the Glory of God. Some modern Divines a endeavour also to vindicate Razis, by the Example of certain Christian Virgins, who, to escape the defiling of their Bodies, threw themselves into the Water, and were drowned. They add, That, in this, Razis acted by the Inspiration of the Holy Ghost; That the Manner of his former Life, and the Sentiments in which he died, would hardly allow one to doubt of his Salvation, and of the Integrity of his Action.

Nevertheless, St. Austin[3], Thomas Aquinas[4], and several other Casuists[5], have maintain'd, that the Example of Razis being only related in Scripture, but not approved, nothing could be concluded from thence to justify the Morality of the Action. 'Tis agreed it was brave, and such as might befit the greatest of the Pagan Heroes: But the present Question is, Whether it was agreeable to the Law of God, and to that eternal Order that God commands us to observe, and forbids us to interrupt? What does the Scripture commend Razis for, but because he was very stedfast in Judaism, which was then the true Religion; very zealous for his Country, and for his Brethren; so that he was look'd upon as the Father of the Jews; and because, at his Death, he call'd upon the Name of the Lord. But is this sufficient to justify an Action so notoriously contrary to the Law of God? If Razis is neither just nor innocent, why should he be imitated? says St. Austin. If he is just and innocent, why does he put a just Man to death; that is, why does he kill himself? Is it thus that the Martyrs us'd to behave themselves? 'Tis already said, that he died bravely and heroically; but were it not better to have died humbly, patiently, and submissively? St. Austin's Words are; Dictum est quod elegerit nobiliter mori. Melius vellem humiliter; sic enim utiliter. Illis autem verbis historia gentium laudare consuevit, sed viros fortes hujus sæculi, non Martyres Christi.

Rebekah

REBEKAH, or Rebecca, Daughter of Bethuel, and Wife of Isaac. Eliezar the Steward of Abraham's House went to fetch her from Haran a City of Mesopotamia,[1] and brought her to Isaac, who then dwelt at Beer-sheba in the Land of Canaan. Rebekah lived with Isaac twenty Years, without having any Children: At last Isaac interceded for her by his Prayers, so that she conceived, and became with Child of two Children[2]. The two Sons with which she was big struggling together in her Womb, and giving her some Uneasiness, she went to consult the Lord upon this Occasion; who told her, That two Nations were in her Womb; That one of 'em should overcome the other, and that the elder should be subject to the younger. It is not agreed who was the Person that Rebekah here consulted with: Some will have it, that she went to Shem the Son of Noah; others, to Melchisedech; others, to Heber; others, to Abraham: And, lastly, some think she went to sacrifice upon Mount Moria, or upon the Altar that Abraham had erected [Petr. Comestor. hist. Scholiast. Diodor. & Procop. in Genes. Theodor. qu. 76. in Genes. Gen. xxv. 24,25 &c.] in the Forest of Beer-sheba, and that while she slept God revealed this Matter to her.

When Rebekah's Time of Delivery was now come, she found herself the Mother of two Twins. He that came first into the World was ruddy and hairy, as if he had had a Bear's Skin, and they gave him the Name of Esau. The other immediately follow'd, holding in his Hand the Heel of his Brother; wherefore they call'd him Jacob, or the Supplanter. When they grew up, Esau betook himself to Hunting and Tillage; but Jacob was a plain, unactive Man, and dwelt in the Tent of his[3] Father. Isaac had more Inclination for Esau, but Jacob was a Favourite to Rebekah: She found Means of making him obtain the Blessing of his Father Isaac, to the Prejudice of Esau; and this against Isaac's first Intention, who thinking himself near his Death, intended to give his last Blessing to his eldest Son Esau[4]. We have already related this famous History, under the Articles JACOB and ISAAC.

A great Famine having obliged Isaac to go to dwell at Gerar a City of the Philistines, of which Abimelech was King[5]; when the Inhabitants of the Place asked him who Rebekah was, he answered, she was his Sister, because he feared they might put him to Death, in order to possess his Wife. Abimelech had heretofore taken away Sarah, Abraham's Wife, upon whose Account [Gen. xx. 5,6,7,8.] the Lord had threatned him with great Calamities; he therefore distrusted the Truth of what Isaac had told him, that Rebekah was his Sister. He watched him so narrowly, that one Day he perceiv'd him to caress her in such a manner, as better agreed with an Husband than a Brother. Abimelech then order'd him to be call'd, and said to him; Why have you thus imposed upon us? It is plain she is your Wife; and if any one had abused her, you might have drawn upon us some great Punishment from God. Then he caus'd it to be publish'd in Gerar, That if any one should meddle with this Man's Wife, he should be put to Death.

Jacob, by the Management of his Mother Rebekah, having got his Father's Blessing by Surprize, to the great Prejudice of his Brother Esau; he could not but be in great Wrath with him on this Account, and secretly threatned to be his death for it, as soon as his Father's Head was laid. Rebekah had Notice of this Design,[6] and, to prevent it, advised Jacob to go into Mesopotamia to his Uncle Laban, and there to marry one of his Daughters; and when Esau's Passion should grow cool, she would send him Word, that he might return. She prevailed with Isaac to consent to this Journey, by insinuating to him, That her Life was become a Burden to her, on Account of the Daughters of Heth whom Esau had marry'd; and that if Jacob should also do the same, and take a Wife of this Country, her Life would no longer be supportable to her. After this Time the Scripture makes no farther mention of Rebekah; and the Year of her Death is uncertain: But it is plain, that she died before Isaac; because it is said, that Isaac [Gen. xlix. 31. & xxxv. 29.] was put in the Tomb with Rebekah his Wife, and that this Tomb was the same wherein Abraham and Sarah had been before buried, and where afterwards Jacob and Leah were deposited.

Rechab (II)

II. RECHAB, Father of Jonadab, the Founder of the Order of Rechabites. It is not known in what Age this Rechab liv'd, nor what was his Original. Some will have him to proceed from the Tribe of Judah[1]. Others think he was a Priest, or at least a Levite[2]; because it is said in Jeremiah, [Jer. xxxv. 19.] that there shall be always found of the Descendants of Jonadab sted-fast to the Service of the Lord. Some Rabbins pretend, that the Rechabites having marry'd the Daughters of the Priests or Levites, the Children produced by these Marriages were employ'd in the Service of the Temple. [Sanct. & Cornel. in Jer. xxxv.] Others think, that indeed they waited in the Temple, but only as Servants, like the Gibeonites and Nethinims, who were nothing but the Servants of the Priests and Levites[3]. We read in the Chronicles, that the Rechabites were originally Kenites, and [1 Chron. ii. 55.] that they were Singers in the House of God; Canentes atque resonantes, atque in tabernaculis commorantes; hi sunt Cinæi, qui venerunt de calore patris domus Rechab. The Hebrew has it; Porters and the Obedient, that dwell under Tents; these are those that are called Kenites, who are descended from Hemath, Chief of the House of Rechab.

The Kenites were not of the Race of Jacob, but descended from Midian Son of Cush. They were the Issue of Hobab, or Jethro the Father of Zipporah, and Father-in-Law of Moses. They enter'd into the Promis'd Land along with the Hebrews, and dwelt in the Portion of the Tribe of Judah, about the Dead-Sea. They were distinguish'd from the Israelites only by their retired Sort of Life, and by the Contempt they express'd of Cities and Houses. Some have thought,[4] that Hobab or Jethro was himself the first Founder of the Rechabites; that Rechab was one of his Names; that Jonadab, known in the Time of Jehu, was one of his Descendants; that Heber the Kenite follow'd the Institution of the Rechabites. Serrarius distinguishes between the ancient Rechabites, descended from and instituted by Jethro, and the new Rechabites instituted by Jonadab Son of Rechab, who liv'd in the Time of Jehu King of Israel.

[Jacob. Boulduc. de Ecclesiae ante leg. l. 3. c. 16.] Father Boulduc has contrived a very extraordinary Scheme to explain this Matter of the Rechabites: He seeks their Original even before the Deluge, and fetches it as far as Enoch and his Descendants. After the Deluge they were known successively by the Names of Kenites, Kenizeans, Hebrews, Nazarites, Sons of the Prophets; lastly, Rechabites and Pharisees. All these People were a Sort of Religious, living in a Society, having their Superiors general and particular, just as we see it now among the several Religious Orders of the Latin Church. But from whence came the Name Rechab? Its Etymology is very remarkable: Elisha, seeing his Master ascend into Heaven, cry'd out [2 Kings ii. 12.] to him; My Father, my Father, the Chariot of Israel, and the Horsemen thereof. The Hebrew Words are; My Father, my Father, the Rechab of Israel. And from hence the Name of Rechabites descended to the Disciples of Elijah and Elisha, Sons of the Rechabaim, or the two Chariots of Israel. But our Author does not think it sufficient to derive the Rechabites from the Chariot of Elijah: He makes the Pharisees also to proceed from its Horses; for, in Hebrew, the Word Pharasim signifies Horses.

But it is altogether impertinent to have recourse to these harsh, remote, doubtful, and even childish Etymologies. The Scripture [Jer. xxxv. 6, 7.] it self acquaints us, that Jonadab the Son of Rechab, who lived in the Time of Jehu King of Israel, laid an Injunction upon his Posterity, never to drink any Wine, not to build Houses, not to sow any Grain, to plant no Vineyards, to have no Lands, and to dwell in Tents all their Lives. Such was the Institution of the Rechabites, or of the Children of Rechab. It laid no Obligation upon the other Kenites, nor the other Descendants of Jethro. And this they continued to observe for above three hundred Years[5]. In the last Year of the Reign of Jehoiakim King of Judah, Nebuchadnezzar coming to besiege Jerusalem, the Rechabites were forced to leave the Country, and to take Refuge in the City, yet, however, without quitting their Custom of lodging in Tents. During this Siege, Jeremiah received Order from the Lord, to apply himself to the Disciples of Rechab, to cause them to enter into [Jer. xxxv. 1, 2, 3, &c.] the Temple, and to offer them Wine to drink. Jeremiah perform'd the Orders of the Lord: But the Rechabites answer'd him; We will drink no Wine; for Jonadab the Son of Rechab our Father commanded us, saying, Ye shall drink no Wine, neither ye nor your Sons, for ever. Neither shall ye build House, nor sow Seed, nor plant Vineyard, nor have any: but all your Days ye shall dwell in your Tents, that you may live many Days in the Land where ye be Strangers. But it came to pass, when Nebuchadnezzar King of Babylon came up into the Land, that we said, Come, and let us go to Jerusalem, for fear of the Army of the Chaldeans, and for fear of the Army of the Syrians; so we dwell at Jerusalem. Then came the Word of the Lord unto Jeremiah, saying, Thus says the Lord of Hosts, the God of Israel, Go, and tell the Men of Judah, and the Inhabitants of Jerusalem, Will ye not receive Instruction, to hearken unto my Words? saith the Lord. The Words of Jonadab the Son of Rechab, that he commanded his Sons not to drink Wine, are performed; for unto this Day they drink none, but obey their Father's Commandment: notwithstanding I have spoken unto you, rising early and speaking, but ye hearkned not unto me. Lastly, directing his Discourse to the Rechabites, he tells them; Because ye have obeyed the Commandment of Jonadab your Father, and kept all his Precepts, and done according to all that he hath commanded you: Therefore thus saith the Lord of Hosts, the God of Israel, Jonadab the Son of Rechab shall not want a Man to stand before me for ever.

The Rechabites were, probably, led away Captives, after the taking of Jerusalem by the Chaldeans[6]; since we read, in the Title of Psalm lxxi. 1. that it was sung by the Sons of Jonadab, and by the principal Captives[7], which were Ezekiel and Mordecai, carry'd away by the Chaldeans beyond the Euphrates, after the Taking of Jerusalem under King Jehoiakim. They return'd from their Captivity, and settled in the City of Jabez beyond Jordan; as it appears by the Chronicles; The [1 Chron. ii. 55.] Race of the Scribes that dwelt at Jabez, called Porters, obedient, and dwelling in Tents, are the Kenites, descended from Hemath Father of the House of Rechab[8]. There are some Difficulties in this Passage. There be those that think, that, in this Place, Jabez is not a City, but some Man, whom the Kenites acknowledge as their Master. However this be, no farther mention is made of the Kenites, in the Books written after the Captivity of Babylon.

Some have pretended, that the Assideans, [3] of whom mention is made in the Books of the Maccabees[9], were Successors and Followers of the Rechabites. Others[10] have confounded the Rechabites with the Essenians. But if the Assideans were the same as the Essenians, their Principles and Opinions must be the same. But certain it is, that the Manner of Life of the Essenians, which is very well known, was very different from that of the Rechabites; as it appears from what Josephus[11] says of 'em, who informs us, that the Essenians had Fields which they cultivated in common; that they dwelt in Houses; that they had neither Wives nor Children; and perform'd not their Religious Ceremonies with the other Jews in the Temple of Jerusalem. But all this was contrary to the Practice of the Rechabites. Hegesippus, as cited by Eusebius,[12] relates, that as St. James was led away to be put to Death, one of the Priests of the Race of the Rechabites cry'd out to the Jews, as they were going to stone him, What are you going to do? The just Man prays for you. It is certain, as we have before observed, that the Rechabites were not of the Race of the Priests: But, as they served in the Temple, this Author might have taken them for Priests; or he may have taken the Word Priest in a generical Sense, which will include all the Ministers of the Lord.

Benjaminus Judelensis says,[13] that, in his Travels, he saw a large Country inhabited by the Sons of Rechab. These are his Words: "From Pundabita upon the Euphrates I went into the Country of Seba, call'd at present Aliman, which borders upon the Country of Sennaar or Shinar. After a Journey of one and twenty Days through Desarts, I arrived at the Place inhabited by the Jews call'd the Sons of Rechab, otherwise, the People of Theima: For Theima is the Beginning of their Territory, which is govern'd at this Day by the Prince Hanan. The City of Theima is large and well-peopled. The Length of the Country is twenty Days Journey, between the Northern Mountains. It abounds with fine and strong Cities, that acknowledge no foreign Jurisdiction. The People of this Country make Excursions upon their Neighbours, and even upon distant Nations. They cultivate their Fields, and breed Cattle, having a large and fruitful Country. They appropriate the Tythe of their whole Income to the maintaining of the Disciples of the Sages, who continually attend upon Preaching; and to the Support of the Pharisees, who bewail the Misfortunes of Sion, and the Destruction of Jerusalem; never making use of either Wine or Flesh, going always in Black, and having no other Habitations but the Caves; fasting every Day except the Sabbath, and being constantly at Prayer, to obtain from God the Liberty and Return of Israel from their Captivity.

"All the Jews of Theima and Thelimas put up the same Prayers to the Lord, and they are in Number about one hundred thousand Men. Their Prince is Solomon the Brother of Hanan, both of the Race of David, as they prove by the Genealogical Histories they preserve. They generally wear torn Mourning Cloaths, and fast forty Days for all the Jews that are in Captivity. The Province contains about forty Cities, two hundred Towns, and an hundred Castles. The Metropolis of the Country is Thenai; and the Number of Jews inhabiting this Province is about three hundred thousand. The Metropolis now mention'd is incompass'd by good Walls, which inclose a large Spot of Ground within them, where they sow good Quantities of Wheat: For 'tis fifteen Miles long, and as many broad; (that is to say, five large Leagues square, and about fifteen Leagues round). There is to be seen the Palace of King Solomon, with very splendid Gardens."

And such is the Country of the Rechabites, according to this Traveller, who lived in the twelfth Century. But this whole Relation hath so much the Air of a Fable, that no Credit ought to be given to it.

Redeemer

REDEEMER. This Name is given, by way of Eminence, to Jesus Christ the Redeemer and Saviour of the whole World. But, in the Stile of the Law of [Lev. xxv. 25. Lev. xxv. 47, 48.] Moses, it is also given to him who has the Right of Redemption in any Inheritance, or even the Person of a near Kinsman, that may redeem it out of the Hands of a Stranger, or of any other Jew that had bought it. Moses, or rather God, whose Instrument he was, had ordain'd, that neither the Estates of Land, or the Persons of the Hebrews, should be sold for ever; but that every one might re-enter upon the Possession of his Estate or Liberty in the Sabbatical Year, and in the Year of Jubilee. But without staying for these Years, when any Relation was rich enough, and had Power to redeem the Goods or Liberty of his Brother, the Law enabled him to do it. And this is what it calls Right of Redemption; giving also the Name of Redeemer to the near Relation that had a Claim to this Right. There are several Particulars upon this Head, which may be found in chap. xxv & xxvii. of Leviticus. We see an Instance of the Practice of this [Ruth ii. 20. & iii. 9, &c.] Law, in the History of Ruth. Boaz being one of the nearest Relations of Elimelech, marry'd Ruth the Heiress of Elimelech, and by that means re-enter'd into the Possession of her Estate, which had pass'd through several strange Hands. Also Jeremiah redeem'd the Field of his Nephew Hanameel, [Jer. xxxii. 7, 8.] which was upon the Point of being sold to another. He was also call'd The Redeemer of Blood[1]; in Hebrew, Goel haddam; who had a Right of taking Revenge, for the Blood of his Kinsman who had lost his Life[2]. To curb the first Transports of the Resentment of these Avengers, or of these Redeemers, God appointed Cities of Refuge through all the Coasts of Israel, to prevent Murders, and the Effects of violent Passion.

Red-Heifer

[Num. xix. 2, 3, 4, &c.] RED-HEIFER. The Lord spake unto Moses, saying: "Command the Children of Israel to bring to you a Red-Heifer, perfect and without Blemish, which has never born the Yoke. You shall put it into the Hands of Eleazar the Highpriest, who, taking it without the Camp, shall kill it before all the People. He shall dip his Finger in the Blood of this Heifer, and shall make Aspersions seven Times towards the Entry of the Tabernacle, and shall burn it in the Presence of all the People, putting into the Flames not only the Flesh and the Hide, but also the Blood and the Excrements of the Victim. Also the Priest shall cast into the Fire that consumes the Heifer, a Bundle of Cedar-wood, some Hyssop, and double-dy'd Scarlet. Then he shall wash his Garments and his Body, and returning into the Camp, shall be unclean till the Evening.

"He also that burns the Heifer, shall wash his Body and his Cloaths, and shall remain unclean until Evening. A Man that is clean shall gather up the Ashes of the Heifer, and shall carry them out of the Camp into a clean Place, that the Israelites may take of them, and preserve them carefully, and make use of them to make a Water of Aspersion or Separation, because this Heifer was burnt for Sin. He that shall carry out the Ashes shall wash his Body and his Cloaths, and shall continue unclean till Evening. "This Ordinance shall be holy, and inviolably observed, not only by the Israelites, but also by the Strangers that live among you.

"He that shall have touched the Body of a dead Man, and for this Reason shall have contracted an Uncleanness that continues seven Days, shall be sprinkled with this Water the third and the seventh Day, and shall then be purified. If he receives no Aspersion on the third Day, but only on the Sixth, he cannot be purified on the Seventh, but on the Tenth or Eleventh. Whoever shall touch the dead Body of a Man, and shall not be sprinkled with Water, in which is mingled some of the Ashes of the Red-Heifer, shall pollute the Tabernacle of the Lord, if he presumes to present himself there in this Condition, and shall be cut off from the midst of his People. He shall be unclean, because he was not purified with the Water of Expiation, and his Uncleanness shall continue upon him."

This is what was ordain'd by Moses in this Matter, and these are the Reflexions that Commentators have made upon it. Spencer thinks, that this Ceremony has Relation to [Spencer. de Leg. Rit. l. 2. c. 15.] an Opposition to the Egyptian Superstitions. The Egyptians never sacrificed Cows or Heifers, and the Hebrews themselves seldom sacrificed any other but Male Animals. The first had Red Hairs in abhorrence, and all Animals of that Colour. The Hebrews made no Distinction in the Colour of their Victims, but only upon this Occasion. St Jerom, and several others think, that they sacrificed the [Hieron. Epist. 27.] Red-Heifer every Year, and distributed the Ashes into all the Cities and Towns of Israel. Some Rabbins maintain, that there was but one burnt from the Times of Moses to Esdras; and that from Esdras to the Destruction of the Temple by the Romans, there were but six burnt, or nine at most. The same St. Jerom teaches us, that this Ceremony was always performed upon the Mount of Olives, over-against the Temple, after the placing the Ark at Jerusalem; and the Jews inform us, that it was always the Highpriest that offered this Sacrifice, from the first Building of the Temple.

[Heb. ix. 13.] The Red-Heifer offered without the Camp, was a Type of Jesus Christ, whose Blood purifies our Consciences from all Sin. For if the Blood of Bulls, and of Goats, and the Ashes of an Heifer sprinkling the Unclean, sanctifieth to the purifying of the Flesh; how much more shall the Blood of Christ, who through the eternal Spirit, offered himself without Spot to God, purge your Conscience from dead Works to serve the Living God? See the Commentators upon Numbers, Chap. xix.

Refuge

REFUGE. Cities of Refuge: In order to provide for the Security of those, who by Chance, and without any Design, should happen to kill a Man, in whatever manner [Exod. xxi. 13. Numbers xxxv. 11,] it should be; the Lord commanded Moses to appoint Six Cities of Refuge, or Asyla, that whoever against his Will should spill the 12,13,&c. Blood of a Man, might retire thither, and have time to prepare for his Defence and Justification before the Judges, so that the Kinsman of the Deceased might not pursue him thither and kill him. Of these Cities there were three on each Side Jordan. Those on this Side Jordan were Kedesh of Naphtali, Hebron, and Shechem. Those beyond [Numbers xxxv. 15.] Jordan were Bezer, Golan, and Ramoth-Gilead. They served not only for the Hebrews, but for all Strangers also, that should dwell in their Country. The Rabbins confined the Name Strangers only to such as were Proselytes; but in this I think they depart from the Design of the Law. [Deut. xix. 8.] The Lord also commanded, That when the Hebrews should multiply, and should enlarge the Limits of their Country, they should add three other Cities of Refuge to those now mentioned. And as this Command was never fulfilled, the Rabbins say, that the Messiah will accomplish what God has commanded in this respect.

Maimonides from the Traditions of the Antients, assures us, that all the Forty-eight Cities, appointed for the Habitation of the Priests and Levites, were also Cities of Refuge; and that all the Difference between them was, that the six Cities appointed by the Law, were obliged to receive and lodge for nothing all that should fly to them; whereas the other two-and-forty Cities might refuse to admit such as fled to 'em, and were not obliged to lodge them gratis. Besides the Cities of Refuge, the Temple of [Philo Legat. ad] the Lord, and especially the Altar of Burnt-offerings, enjoy'd the Privilege of being an Caium. Asylum. The Rabbins say, that generally the Altar was only for the Priests. Those that took Sanctuary in the Temple, were presently judged by the Judges; and if they were found Guilty of wilful Murder, they were forc'd away even from the Altar, and put to death without the Temple. But if they were found innocent, they had a Guard appointed them to conduct them safe to some City of Refuge.

These Cities were to be of easy Access, and to have smooth and good Roads to 'em, and Bridges where-ever there shou'd be Occasion. The Width of these Roads was, at least, to be two and thirty Cubits, or eight and forty Feet. When there were any Cross -Roads, they took care to set up Posts, with an Inscription, directing the Way to the City of Refuge. Every Year, on the fifteenth of the Month Adar, which answers to our February Moon, the Magistrates of the Cities visited the Roads, to see if they were in good Condition. The City was to be well supply'd with Water, and all kind of Provisions. It was not allow'd there to make any Weapons, that the Relations of the Deceased might not be furnish'd there with Arms to gratify their Revenge. Lastly; it was necessary, that whoever took Refuge there, should understand a Trade or Calling, that he might not be chargeable to the Inhabitants. They us'd to send some prudent and moderate Persons, to meet those who were pursuing their Revenge for their Relations, that they might dispose them to Clemency and Forgiveness, and might persuade them to await the Decision of Justice.

Tho' the Manslayer had fled to the City of Refuge, yet he was not thereupon exempt from the Pursuits of Justice: An Information [Numbers xxxv. 12.] was preferr'd against him; he was summon'd before the Judges, and before the People, to clear himself, and to prove the Murder was merely casual and involuntary. If he was found innocent, he dwelt safely in the City to which he had retired; if otherwise, he was put to Death, according to the Severity of the Law. The Texts of Scripture [Compare Deut. xix. 11, 12. Josh. xx. 4,5,6. Numbers xxxv. 25.] are not very express, whether the Affair was under the Cognizance of the Judges of the Place where the Murder was committed, or of the Judges of the City of Refuge, to which the Murderer had fled; and the Commentators are at Variance in this Matter. But it appears to us, from a Passage of Joshua, that they were to undergo two Trials: First in the City of Refuge, where the Judges summarily examined the Affair, and heard his Allegations at his first Arrival: Secondly, when he was taken back to his own City, to be judg'd by the Magistrates of the Place, who took the Cause into a more strict and scrupulous Examination. If the[1] latter Judges declared him Innocent, they had him re-conducted under a good Guard to the City of Refuge to which he had fled.

He was not therefore immediately set at Liberty: But to inspire the greater Horror, even of involuntary Murder, it seems as if the Law would punish it by a kind of Banishment; for he was obliged to dwell in this [Numbers xxxv. 25, 26,27,28.] City, without going out of it, 'till the Death of the High-Priest: And if before this time he should anywhere go out of the City, the Revenger of Blood might safely kill him: But after the High-Priest's Death, he was free to go where he pleas'd, and no one had any Right to molest him on this Account. See the Commentators upon Numb. xxxv. and Josh. xx.

As to the Places of Refuge among the Greeks and Romans, we have already mention'd something of them under the Article AZYLUM: We have there spoke of the Azylum set up at Athens by the Heraclidæ, in the Temple of Misericordia. Theseus built one in the same City, in favour of the Slaves and poor People that should fly thither, from the Oppression of the Rich. There was also one in the Isle of Calauria. The Temples of Apollo at Delphos, of Juno at Samos, of Æsculapius at Delos, of Bacchus at Ephesus, and many others in Greece, had the Privilege of being Asyla[2]. Romulus gave this Right to a Wood adjoyning to the Temple of Vejovis[3]. Ovid speaks of a consecrated Wood near Ostium, that enjoy'd the same Prerogative[4]. St. Austin observes[5], that the whole City of Rome was an Asylum open to all Strangers. The Number of these Privileged Places was grown so great in Greece, under the Emperor Tiberius, that he was obliged to recall their Licences, and to suppress them all[6]: But his Decree was little observed after his Death.

The Right of being an Asylum, pass'd from the Temple of Jerusalem to the Christian [Cod. Justin. l. 9. tit. 29.] Churches. The Emperors Gratian, Valentinian, and Theodosius the Great, condemned to Banishment, to Whipping, to the Loss of Hair and Beard, all those that, of their own Authority, should take a Man out of a Church, who had fled thither for [Cod. Justin. l. 1. tit. 11.] Refuge. Honorius and Theodosius the Younger order'd, that all such Offenders should be punish'd as if guilty of Treason. But afterwards they were obliged to retrench these Privileges, and to exempt certain Crimes from the Benefit of an Asylum. The Emperor Justinian allow'd, that they might take from the Asylum all wilful Murderers, Adulterers, Ravishers, or those that carry away Virgins. Innocent III. also excepts publick Robbers, and those that spoil the Fields in the Night-time. The Right of Azylum subsists still in Italy, and in some other Places. See Masius and Serrarius upon Josh. xx.

Regem-Melech

REGEM-MELECH, or Rogom-Melech, and Sherezer, sent a Deputation to the Priests and to the Prophets at Jerusalem, to know if they were still to fast and to mortify themselves on the fifth Month of the holy Year, in Memory of the Destruction of the Temple of Jerusalem, which had been burnt by the Chaldeans on the tenth Day of the fifth Month[1]. The Answer of Zechariah the Prophet, was, That God little regarded their Fasts, which were not accompany'd by Justice and Charity: But he did not answer directly to the Question that had been proposed to him, concerning the Fast of the fifth Month. For which Reason they continu'd the Observation of it, and still continue it to this Day.

It may be asked, Who were Regem-melech and Sherezer? Some think[2] they were Babylonian Proselytes, fearing God, and Officers of King David, who conform'd to the religious Observances of the Jews of their Country. Theodoret conjectures they were Chief of the Cushites settled in Palestine, or of some other People that came into this Country. Grotius, Sanctius, Menochius will have them to be Jews dwelling at a Distance from Jerusalem, and who had at their Head Sherezer and Regem -Melech. And indeed there is great Probability that this Deputation came from the Jews beyond Euphrates, of whom Sherezer and Regem-Melech were the Chief. For, could the Jews of Palestine be ignorant of what was to be observed in the Country where they lived; they who every Year went up thrice to Jerusalem?

Regeneration

[Ephes. ii. 3.] REGENERATION. This Term is used in two Senses, by the sacred Authors of the New Testament: 1st, for that Spiritual Birth that we receive by Baptism; and, 2dly, for that New Life that we expect at the general Resurrection. By the Transgression of the first Man, we are all born Children of Wrath, according to St. Paul. To erase this Original Blemish, which makes us Children of the Devil, we must have a New Birth by Grace, which may make us Children of [John i. 12,13.] God. St. John mentions it in several Places: For Example; in the Beginning of his Gospel, he says, that all those who believe in Jesus Christ, and who receive him, become Children of God; not by the Will of the Flesh, nor by the Will of Man, but by a New Birth that proceeds from God. And our Saviour, speaking to Nicodemus, says, Verily, verily I say unto thee, Except a Man be born again, he cannot see the Kingdom of God. Nicodemus saith unto him, How can a Man be born when he is old? Can he enter the second time into his Mother's Womb, and be born? Jesus answered, Verily, verily I say unto thee, Except a Man be born of Water, and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the Kingdom of God.

The Apostle St. Peter says in like manner, that God has regenerated us; that is to say, has given us a New Birth, by the Resurrection of Jesus Christ, who gives us a lively Hope of obtaining an incorruptible and eternal Inheritance. And St. Paul, [Tit. iii. 5.] writing to Titus; Our Saviour has procured Salvation for us; not by the Works of Righteousness, which we have done, but according to his Mercy he saved us by the Washing of Regeneration, and Renewing of the Holy Ghost; that is to say, by Baptism. And St. John; Whoever is born of God, doth not commit Sin; for his Seed remaineth in him: and he cannot sin, because he is born of God. This is the New Birth, or the Regeneration, which comes from God, and is exactly described, together with its Effects, which are to preserve us from Sin.

The second Acceptation of the Term Regeneration, has respect to another New Birth for another Life, for Eternity, or for Immortality. The first Regeneration makes us Children of God, endues us with Innocence, and gives us a Claim to eternal Life, which is the Inheritance of the Regenerate. But the second Regeneration, the Resurrection, puts us in Possession of this Inheritance: [Matth. xix. 28.] And Jesus said unto them, Verily I say unto you, that ye which have followed me in the Regeneration, when the Son of Man shall sit in the Throne of his Glory, ye also shall sit upon twelve Thrones, judging the twelve Tribes of Israel.

Regulus

[Proverbs xxiii. 32. & Isai. xi. 8. צפעני or צפע] REGULUS, a sort of Serpent, call'd also BASILISCUS, (which see). St. Jerom has render'd the Hebrew Word Zipphoni, by Regulus; which the Greeks have sometimes translated by Cerastes, and sometimes by Aspis. See, for Example, Prov. xxiii. 32. Isai. xi. 8. Jerem. viii. 17. The Hebrew Word Saraph, is render'd in Isaiah by Regulus[1], which signifies a Flying Serpent; of which we have treated under BRAZEN SERPENT. As for Zipphoni, it rather signifies the Basilisk[2]. See Bochart.

Regulus is also taken for a Little King, a Tributary Prince, that depends upon another. As for Example, Josh. xiii. 3. Vulg. Quinque Regulos Philistinorum.

Regulus is also put for an Officer of the King: As in John iv. 46, 49. Vulg. Erat quidam Regulus. The Greek has Basilicos[3], which may be translated by Regius, or Palatinus[4].

Rehoboam

REHOBOAM, or Roboam, Son and Successor of Solomon: He was born of [1 Kings xiv. 20, 21.] Naamah an Ammonitish Woman, whom Solomon had marry'd. He was one and forty Years old when he began to reign; and consequently, he was born in the first Year of his Father's Reign, or the Year before[1]. He began to reign in the Year of the World 3029, before Christ 971, before the Vulgar Era 975. His Father Solomon was about eighteen or nineteen Years old when Rehoboam was born. This Prince reigned seventeen Years at Jerusalem, and died in the Year of the World 3046, before Christ 954, before the Vulgar Era 958.

[Josh. xix. 28. 1 Kings xii. 1, 2, 3, &c.] After the Death of Solomon, Rehoboam came to Shechem, because all Israel was there assembled, to make him King there. Jeroboam the Son of Nebat, who had headed a Sedition against Solomon, and had been forc'd, towards the End of his Reign, to take Refuge in Egypt, as soon as he heard this Prince was dead, return'd into Judea, and came to the Assembly of the People at Shechem. The Israelites would have made Terms with Rehoboam, and said to him, " Your Father loaded us with an hard " and heavy Yoke; but do you take off " from the Weight of this Yoke, and " we will serve you, as we have served " your Father." This Proposal makes it plain, that the Succession to the Kingdom was not then fully establish'd in the House of David. Rehoboam reply'd to them, " Go all of you Home, and in " three Days return to me again, and I " will give you an Answer ". In the interim he advised with the antient Counsellors of the State, who had been of his Father's Council, and they represented to him, that if he would give the People an obliging Answer, and condescend to their Request, he would fix them to his Interest for ever. But Rehoboam did not like this Advice; he chose rather to follow that of his young Counsellors, who had been brought up with him. They advised him to say to the People; " The least of my " Fingers is thicker than my Father's whole " Body. You say he laid a heavy Yoke " upon you, and I intend to make it still " heavier. My Father whip'd you with " Rods, but I will whip you with Scorpions."

The People returning again the third Day, as had been appointed, the King answer'd them roughly, according to the Advice of his young Counsellors; but he had soon reason to repent of it; for the whole Multitude began to cry out, What Part have we in David, or what Interest have we in the Son of David? To your Tents, O Israel; now David, look to your own House. When the People were departed, Rehoboam sent his Treasurer Adoram or Hadoram after them, to persuade them to return. But they took him and stoned him, so that he died upon the Spot. Rehoboam seeing this, thought it Time to betake himself to his Chariot, and to fly to Jerusalem. The Tribes of Judah and Benjamin continued in their Fidelity to King Rehoboam; but the other ten Tribes would acknowledge no other for their King, but Jeroboam, the Son of Nebat; who took the Opportunity of this seditious Temper of the People, to execute a Design he had long been forming, of shaking off the Yoke of the House of David.

Rehoboam was no sooner come to Jerusalem,[2] but he assembled together the Tribes of Judah and Benjamin, who had continued faithful to him, and put himself at the Head of One hundred and eighty thousand chosen Troops, in order to reduce the revolted ten Tribes to his Obedience. But when the Prophet Shemaiah came to him with a Message from the Lord, saying; Ye shall not go up, nor fight against your Brethren the Children of Israel; return every Man to his House, for this thing is from me; they obey'd the Word of the Lord, and every one returned to his own Home. Then Rehoboam, continuing at Jerusalem, began [1 Kings xiv. 22. 2 Chron. xi. 5, 6, 7, &c.] to apply himself to the strengthening of his Kingdom against his Enemy Jeroboam, and fortify'd several Cities of his Dominions; as Bethlehem, Etam, Tekoa, Beth-zur, Shoco, Adullam, Gath, Maresbah, Ziph, Adoraim, Lachish, Azekah, Zorah, Aijalon, Hebron. And after he had enclosed them with strong Walls, he put Garisons into them, laid up great Magazines of Wine and Oyl, and built Arsenals, well replenish'd with Bucklers, Lances, and other Arms.

The Number of his Subjects was considerably encreas'd by the Addition of the Priests and Levites, who being in the Cities and Territories of Jeroboam, and seeing this King had abolish'd the Worship of the Lord, and made Priests for his golden Calves of the first of his Subjects that offer'd themselves for this Service; they all withdrew themselves into the Land of Judah and Benjamin, that they might be ready to perform their Functions in the Temple of the Lord at Jerusalem. But Rehoboam and his People did not continue faithful to the Lord for above three Years. After this short Space of Time, Judah also did Evil before the Lord, and provoked him by their Wickedness, more than their Fathers had done before them. They set up prophane Altars and Statues, and consecrated Groves and High-places upon all the Hills and Eminencies. They had also Men and Women among them appointed for publick Prostitution. In short, they committed all the Wickedness and Abominations that had been committed by the Canaanites, whom the Lord had driven out before them.

Rehoboam marry'd eighteen Wives, and had to the Number of sixty Concubines, or Wives of an inferior Order. By these he had twenty-eight Sons, and sixty Daughters. But of all his Sons, he that he had most Affection for, and whom he intended for his Successor, was Abijah, the Son of Maachah, the Daughter of Absalom. No sooner did he see himself confirm'd in his Kingdom, but he forsook the Lord, and all his People with him; when God, to punish their Prevarications, in the fifth Year of Rehoboam, sent against Judah Shishak (or Sesac), King of Egypt,[3] who took away all the Treasure of the House of the Lord, the King's Treasures, the golden Bucklers made by King Solomon, and laid waste the whole Country. He brought with him an Army of twelve hundred Chariots, sixty thousand Horse, and of Foot an innumerable Multitude. He subdued the strongest Places of Judah, and reduced the whole Country, as far as Jerusalem. Then the Prophet Shemaiah went to attend Rehoboam, and the Princes of Judah that were with him in Jerusalem, and said to 'em from the Lord; You have forsaken me, and I, in my Turn, have forsaken you, and delivered you into the Hands of Shishak. The Princes being convinced of the Justice of these Reproaches, humbled themselves, and made Answer; That the Lord was just in all his Proceedings. Then God said to Shemaiah, that he would not utterly abandon them, but only make them sensible of the Difference there is, between serving the Lord, and being subject to a foreign Power.

After the Departure of Shishak, Rehoboam caus'd brazen Bucklers to be made, in the room of those of Gold, that the King of Egypt had taken away; and when he went to the Temple, his Guards us'd to carry these brazen Bucklers before him, and afterwards lay them up in the Arsenal. The Lord had therefore Compassion of this Prince, because he humbled himself before him, and because there were still found some Remains of Righteousness in Judah. The History of the Reign of Rehoboam had been written at length, and with great Care, by the Prophets Shemaiah and Iddo; but these Accounts are not come down to our Hands, any more than the Particulars of those Wars which were continually between Rehoboam and Jeroboam, during the Time of their whole Reigns. Rehoboam died after he had reigned seventeen Years, was buried in the City of David, and left his Son Abijah his Successor to the Throne.

The Scripture speaks of this Prince in a manner that does not at all redound to his Honour. See what Jesus the Son of Sirach says of Rehoboam, after he had spoke of [Ecclus. xlvii. 23.] Solomon. Thus rested Solomon with his Fathers, and of his Seed he left behind him Roboam, even the Foolishness of the People, and one that had no Understanding, who turned away the People through his Counsel. Abijah, the Son of Rehoboam, speaking of his Father, says, he was an ignorant Prince, unskill'd in the Art of Government, a weak Man and without Courage. Porro [2 Chron. xiii. 7. Vulg.] Roboam erat rudis, & corde pavido, nec potuit resistere eis. Lastly, Solomon seems to have had his Son and Successor before his Eyes, when he said; Yea, I hated all my [Eccles. xi. 18, 19.] Labour which I had taken under the Sun, because I should leave it unto the Man that should be after me: And who knoweth whether he shall be a Wise Man or a Fool? Yet shall he have rule over all my Labour wherein I have laboured, and wherein I have shewed myself wise under the Sun. This is also Vanity.

Reins

REINS, or Kidneys. The Hebrews ascribe to the Reins or Kidneys, Knowledge, Joy, Pain, Pleasure; hence it is that in Scripture it is so often said, that God [Rev. ii. 23. Jer. xvii. 10. xx. 12.] searches the Hearts and the Reins. Scrutans renes & corda Deus. That he tries the [Jerem. xi. 20.] Heart and the Reins. Probans renes & corda. Elsewhere the Scripture imputes to the Reins Love and the Fountain of Generation. Filius tuus qui egredietur de renibus [1 Kings viii. 19.] tuis. God upbraids the Jews with having him enough in their Mouths, but not in their Reins, and in their Hearts. Propè es [Jer. xii. 2.] tu ori eorum, & longè a renibus eorum. Thou art far from their Hearts and Affections. The Prophet entreats the Lord to kindle the Fire of his Love in his Heart. [Psal. xxv. 2.] Ure renes meos, & cor meum. Elsewhere he complains, that his Distemper had set fire to his Heart, and caused a great Inflammation [Psal. lxxii. 21.] in his Reins. Inflammatum est cor meum, & renes mei consumati sunt.

In Trouble and in Fear the Reins are [1 Macc. ii. 24. Nahum ii. 10.] disturbed and fall a trembling. Contremuerant renes ejus. They faint away. Defectio in cunctis renibus. They are relaxed, and let the Water pass from them. [Dan. v. 6. Ez. xxix. 7. Psal. xv. 7. Lam. iii. 13.] Compages renum ejus solvebantur. Dissolvisti omnes renes eorum. The Psalmist says, that his Reins have encouraged and excited him to praise the Lord. Increpuerunt me renes mei. Jeremiah says, that the Lord has sent the Daughters of his Quiver into his Reins. Misit in renibus meis filias pharetræ suæ. That is, he has pierced me with his Arrows, he hath exhausted his whole Quiver upon me: For the Daughters of the Quiver are a poetical Expression for Arrows. By a Metaphor it is said, the Fat of the Reins of Wheat, to signify the finest Flower; or, as the Vulgate has translated it, medulla tritici, the Marrow of Wheat.

Relicks

RELICKS. Reliquiæ. I do not pretend that the Word Reliquiæ, in any Passage of Scripture, is to be taken for Relicks, in the Sense it is understood by the Church [of Rome,] or for the Relicks of any Saints. Yet it cannot but be acknowledg'd, that the Hebrews had a Respect for such Relicks. They preserved for a long Time the Urn in which the Manna was kept, the Rod of Aaron, the brazen Serpent. They had a singular Veneration for the Tombs of the Patriarchs and Prophets; they repaired and adorned them. Elisha kept the Cloak of Elijah, as something very valuable; but this is not a proper Place to treat of this Matter.

Reliquiæ is commonly put for Posterity. Sunt Reliquiæ homini pacifico. The peaceable Man shall see a numerous Posterity; but the Posterity of the Wicked shall be rooted out. Reliquiæ impiorum interibunt. Often it is us'd for a small Number that escapes [Numb. xxiv. 19. Judg. v. 13.] out of a War, from Captivity, or the Pestilence. Perdat reliquias civitatis. Nobody shall remain alive in the City. Salvatæ sunt reliquiæ populi. The Remainder of the Israelites, who had escaped from the Cruelty of Jabin, or had avoided Slavery, were saved by Deborah and Barak. The Israelites that return'd from the Captivity of Babylon are call'd reliquiæ Israel, in this Passage of Scripture. For Example, De Jerusalem exibunt reliquiæ; Hebrews shall still be seen going out of Jerusalem, this [Jerem. xlii. 15.] City shall be restored. Audite verbum Domini reliquiæ Juda. O Remains of Judah, hear ye the Word of the Lord. The Remnant of Israel shall [Wisd. iii. 13.] not commit Iniquity; The Israelites, who shall return from Captivity, shall not fall into Idolatry as their Ancestors have done heretofore. A Remnant of Israel were [Rom. ix. 27. xi. 5.] saved by Faith in Jesus Christ. That is to say, though God rejected the Israelites, because of their Hardness and Infidelity, yet he has saved a Remainder; those to whom he has thought fit to give his Spirit, and the Grace of Faith; as a Conqueror spares a small Number of Rebels, when they implore his Clemency and Pardon.

Reliquiæ is also put for Provisions. Benedicta horrea tua, & benedictæ reliquiæ tuæ. The Frogs which God sent to Egypt fill'd their Houses, and spoiled [Ex. viii. 3.] the Provisions of the Egyptians. In reliquias ciborum tuorum. Lastly, Reliquiæ is put for the Remainder of any thing. They gather'd twelve Baskets full of the Remains, that were left by the five thousand Men, whom Jesus Christ had fed in [Matt. xiv. 20.] the Wilderness, with five Loaves and two Fishes. Tulerunt reliquias duodecim cophinos.

Religion

RELIGION. This Latin Word Religio, is taken in three Senses in Holy Scripture. [Ex. xii. 43.] First, for the external and ceremonial Worship of the Jewish Religion. Hæc est Religio Phasæ. This is the Ceremony of the Passover. Quæ est ista Religio? What is the Meaning of this Ceremony? [Lev. xvi. 3.] You shall afflict your Souls by a perpetual Religion. Religione perpetuâ. By a Worship that shall continue for ever. [Esth. viii. 17.] After the Death of Haman, many embraced the Religion of the Jews. Plures eorum religioni & cæremoniis jungerentur.

Secondly, Religio is put for the true Religion, the best manner of serving and honouring [Jacob. i. 27. Act. xxvi. 5.] God. Religio munda & immaculata apud Deum & Patrem, hæc est; visitare pupillos, &c. St. Paul says, that he had lived in the Sect of the Pharisees, which was look'd upon as the most perfect of the Religion of the Jews.

Thirdly, and lastly, The Word Religion in Scripture, as well as in profane Authors, is often put for Superstition. Do not imitate those who affect to humble themselves before the Angels, and to pay them a superstitious Worship. Nemo vos seducat, volens in [Col. ii. 18. Acts ii. 5. x. 2. xiii. 50. Vulg.] humilitate & Religione Angelorum, &c.

REMISSION, is sometimes taken for [Lev. xxv. 10. Num. xxxvi. 4. Deut. xv. 1,2,3, &c.] the Year of Jubilee, or the Sabbathical Year, in which the Slaves were set at Liberty, and in which every one return'd into his own Inheritance.

Remission is also used for the Pardon of [Mark i. 4. Luk. iii. 3.] Sins. Our Saviour says, that John did baptize in the Wilderness, and preach the Baptism of Repentance, for the Remission of Sins. And it is said in several Places of the [Ephes. i. 7. Col. i. 14. Math. xvi. 28, &c.] New Testament, that the Blood of Jesus Christ was shed for us, to procure the Remission of our Sins.

It also stands for a City in the [Josh. xix. 7.] Tribe of Simeon; probably the same as is ascribed to Judah, Josh. xv. 32. Nehem. xi. 29. and which is also call'd Remmus. Eusebius places it to the South of Judah, [Euseb. in Remmon.] sixteen Miles from Eleutheropolis, to the South. We know that several Cities of Judah were yielded up to Simeon. Probably this is the City mention'd by Zechariah xiv. 10. De colle Remmon ad austrum. The Hebrew says, From Geba to Rimmon, South of Jerusalem.

Remphan

REMPHAN, or Rephan. Amos a upbraids the Hebrews with having carry'd, during their Wanderings in the Wilderness, the Tent of their Moloch, the Image of their Idol, and the Star of their God[1]. And St. Stephen in the Acts[2], quoting this Passage of Amos, according to the Septuagint, says, Ye took up the Tabernacle of Moloch, and the Star of your God Remphan. This last Word has given occasion to a great Number of Conjectures. Grotius [Grot. in Amos v.] thinks it to have been the same Deity as Rimmon, of which we shall speak hereafter. The u Vowel has been changed into v Consonant, and instead of Remuan they have read Remvan. The Septuagint read Remman instead of Remmon, in the second Book of Kings, v. 18. This Remvan, according to him, is the Planet Saturn. Others derive Rephan from the Hebrew Word Rapha, to be negligent, soft, or slothful; because Saturn is the slowest or most slothful of all the Planets. Capellus and Hammond, in their Commentaries upon Acts vii. 43. think Remphan to be the Name of a King of Egypt, who was placed by his People in the Rank of the Gods. Diodorus [Diodor. l. 1. p. 39.] Siculus says, that King Remphis succeeded Proteus. But this Author does not say that he had ever been deify'd, and speaks of him as a Prince very unworthy of having divine Honours paid to him.

[Lud. de Dieu in Amos v. & in Act. vii. 43. Voss. de origin. Idololat. l. 2. c. 23.] Louis de Dieu thinks, that Rephan is an Egyptian Term, and that in this Language it signifies Saturn. In a Coptick Alphabet that was sent from Rome to Scaliger, the Planet Saturn is call'd Rephan. The Arabick Word Reph, signifies Voracity, a Quality very well agreeing to Saturn, who, according to the Fable, devoured his own Children. Vossius believes Rephan, or, as Amos has it, Chiun or Chevan, was the Moon. Those that reject Rephan, and keep to the Hebrew Text of Amos, maintain, that Chiun or Chevan signifies Saturn.[3] The Arabians, Syrians, and Persians, thus call that false Deity. Others have thought,[4] that Rephan, of the Seventy, is a meer Fault of the Transcribers, who have taken a K for a P, and so instead of ΚΕΦΑΝ have read ΡΕΦΑΝ. And these are the principal Conjectures that have been proposed concerning Rempham. The Reader may see our Dissertation concerning the Idolatry of the Israelites in the Wilderness, printed before the Commentary upon the twelve lesser Prophets.

Repast

REPAST, or Food that was set upon the Tombs of the Dead. Cœna mortui. Baruch [Baruch. vi. 31.] mentions it in these Words. Rugiunt autem clamantes contra Deos suos, sicut in cœna mortui. The Pagans howl in the Presence of their Gods, as in the Repast which is made for the Dead. He speaks of certain Solemnities, wherein the Idolaters us'd to make great Lamentations: For Example, in the Feasts of Adonis. As to the Repasts for the Dead, they are distinguish'd into two Kinds: One was made in the House of the Defunct, at the Return of the Mourners from the Grave. To this were invited the Kindred and Friends of the Deceased; where they did not fail to express their Grief by Cries and Lamentations. The other Kind was made upon the Tomb itself of the dead Person, where they provided a Repast for the wandering Souls, and believed that the Goddess Trivia, who presides over the Streets and Highways, repair'd thither in the Night-time. But in truth they were Beggars and poor People, who came thither in the Darkness of the Night, and carry'd away what was left upon the Tomb.

[Ovid. Fast.] Est honor & tumulis animas placare paternas,

Parvaque in extructas munera ferre pyras.

Sometimes, however, the Relations made a small Repast upon the Tomb of the Deceased. [Nonnius Marcell. ex Varrone.] Ad sepulchrum antiquo more silicernium confecimus, id est, περιδεῖπνον, quo pransi discedentes dicimus alius alii Vale.

The Custom of setting Food upon the Sepulchres of the Dead, was common among the Hebrews. Tobit thus advises his Son; [Tob. iv. 17.] Pour out thy Bread on the Burial of the Just, but give nothing to the Wicked. That is to say, not to partake in the Repast with the Relations, who perform'd the same Ceremony. And Jesus the Son of Sirach affirms, [Ecclus. xxx. 18.] that Delicates poured upon a Mouth shut up, are as Messes of Meat set upon a Grave. What is thus set upon a Tomb, is utterly lost as to the dead Person; he can have no Benefit from it. And elsewhere; A Gift hath Grace [Ecclus. vii. 33.] in the Sight of every Man living, and for the Dead detain it not.

This Custom was almost universal. We find it among the Greeks, the Romans, and almost all the People of the East. It still obtains in Syria, in Babylonia, and in China. St. [Aug. Ep. 22. 29. nov. edit.] Austin observes, that in his Time, in Africa, they laid Victuals upon the Tombs of the Martyrs, and in Church-yards. The thing at first was done very innocently, but afterwards it degenerated into an Abuse; and the greatest Saints, and most zealous Bishops, as St. Austin, and St. Ambrose [Aug. Confess. l. 6. c. 2.] , had much Difficulty to suppress it. St. Monica being at Milan, had a mind, according to Custom, to offer Bread and Wine to the Memory of the Martyrs; but the Porter would not open the Door to her, because St. Ambrose had forbid him; she therefore summitted with an humble Obedience.

[Hos. ix. 4.] The Repast that was made in the House of the Deceased among the Jews, was also of two Kinds. One was during the Time that the Mourning continu'd, and these Repasts were look'd upon as unclean, because those that partook of them were unclean, as having assisted at the Obsequies of the dead Person. Hosea says; Their Sacrifices shall be unto them as the Bread of Mourners; all that eat thereof shall be polluted. And in the Form that the Israelites made Use of, when they offer'd their First-fruits, they address'd themselves thus to the Lord; " O Lord, I have " not neglected thy Ordinances; I have not " used these things while I was in Mourning; I have made no Use of them at the " Funerals of the Dead." God would not permit Ezekiel to mourn for his Wife. Cover not thy Lips, [Eze. xxiv. 17. Jer. xvi. 7.] and eat not the Bread of Men. And Jeremiah; Neither shall Men give them the Cup of Consolation, to drink for their Father, or for their Mother.

The other Repasts made in the Time of Mourning, are those which were given after [Joseph. de bello, l. 2. c. 1.] the Funeral. Josephus relates, that Archelaus treated the whole People in a magnificent Manner, after he had compleated the seven Days Mourning for the King his Father. He there adds, That it was the Custom of his Nation to make great Feasts for the Relations, which could not be done without an Injury to many Families, which were not in a Condition to support such large Expences. St. Pauline commends [Paulin. illustrat. p. 29, 30.] Pammachius, for having made a great Feast for the Poor, in the Basilicon of St. Peter, on the Day of the Funeral of his Wife Paulina.

Repentance

REPENTANCE, Pœnitentia; in Greek, Metanoia. This Word is generally taken for that Contrition, Compunction, Regret, or Reluctance that arise in us, after having done something that we ought not to have done; join'd to a sincere Resolution of imposing a suitable Punishment upon ourselves for it. Rom. xi. 22. For the Gifts and Calling of God are without Repentance: And especially for the Sorrow of having offended God. It is also taken for the Works of Penitence or Penance, Fasting, Weeping, Alms, and Works of Satisfaction; and for the Sacrament of Penance, by means of which we obtain Forgiveness of the Sins we commit after Baptism. There is a false Repen- tance, as that of Antiochus Epiphanes, of Judas Iscariot, of Pharaoh, of Saul, of Ahab. Judas wanted Confidence in the Mercy of God, and therefore fell into Despair. Antiochus had no sincere Contrition. Pharaoh and Saul were terrified, but not moved by a true Repentance; they continued hardned, and changed neither their Minds nor their Manners. Ahab was indeed touched, but he wanted Perseverance in doing good.

In Leviticus it is said, That he that [Levit. v. 5. Vulg.] shall acknowledge his Sin, shall repent of it, and shall offer the Sacrifices appointed for this Occasion. Agat pœnitentiam pro peccato, & offerat, &c. But the original Text says only, That he that shall have sinned, that shall have acknowledged his Fault, and confess'd it, shall offer the Victims prescribed by the Law. It does not expresly mention Repentance; but enjoins to acknowledge and confess the Fault, and then to offer the Sacrifices of Expiation. This is certainly to repent of it; for if the Offender was not touch'd with Repentance, nothing of this could be done.

[Judg. xxi. 6, 15.] In the Book of Judges, the Children of Israel repent, and are touch'd with Remorse concerning the Loss of a Tribe of their Brethren: That is to say, they repent at having push'd the War too far against one of their own Tribes. Conversus Israel valde doluit, & egit pœnitentiam super interfectione unius tribus ex Israel. They afterwards consider of means to repair this Loss.

[1 Sam. xv. 29.] Samuel says to Saul; The Victorious of Israel will not pardon. The Hebrew is, The Strength of Israel will not lye, nor repent, for he is not a Man that he should repent. God has rejected you irrevocably; he will not change his Resolution, as Men that make Resolutions, and then repent of them, and perform them not. He has pass'd his Sentence of Reprobation against you, and will not depart from it.

[Wisd. v. 3.] St. Paul says in the same Sense,[1] Sine pœnitentia enim sunt dona & vocatio Dei. The Gifts and Calling of God are without Repentance. God does not revoke his Favours, he never forsakes us first. Non deserit, nisi deseratur.

The Author of the Book of Wisdom represents the Wicked to us in another Life, as repenting and bewailing. That is, they are seized with Compunction and Despair, at seeing good Men in Honour, while they themselves are abject and in Trouble. We know that in another Life, Repentance and Remorse are useless. The same Author says, that when God shew'd his Judgments against the Canaanites, and chastised them by degrees, he gave them Time for Repentance. Partibus judicans dabat locum pœnitentia. He says the same thing when he speaks of the Hebrews and the Children of God, to shew us that the Rigour which God exerts against the Elect, as well as against the Reprobate, has no other End but to reform them, and to oblige them to repent of their Faults.

The Word Pœnitentia is sometimes taken for Vengeance or Retribution: For Example, Ecclesiasticus says,[2] That Elijah gave Unction to Kings for Repentance. Qui unguis Reges ad pœnitentiam. The Greek reads, Who anointest Kings to exercise Vengeance. Elijah received Orders from the Lord, to give the Royal Unction to Jehu and Hazael, to inflict the Vengeance of the Lord upon the House of [1 Kings xix. 15,26.] Ahab. But we do not read that Elijah himself performed this Command, but gave Commission to his Disciple Elisha.

The sacred Writers often represent God as a Prince, who is moved with Regret, or Repentance, or Relenting, for having suffer'd or resolved upon certain Things: [Gen. vi. 6, 7.] For Example, Moses says, that God repented that he had made Man, seeing that the Wickedness of his Actions had proceeded [1 Sam. xv. 11.] to such Extremity. 'Tis elsewhere said, that he repented of having made Saul King over his People. This is not to be understood, as if God had conceived any Regret at any thing that he had done wrong, or that he repents of a false Step that he had made, as a Man does when he perceives he has committed an Error. God is not capable of Repentance in this Sense. But sometimes he changes his Conduct towards those that are unfaithful to him, and after having treated them with Mercy, he corrects them with Severity, as if he had repented of what he had before done in their Favour.

[Psal. cv. 43. Jerem. xviii. 8.] Also God is said to repent of the Evil he was about to inflict, when moved with Compassion towards the Miserable, or intreated by their Prayers, or disarm'd by their Repentance, he remits the Punishment of their Sins, or does not execute the Threatnings he had made against them. Thus it is said in the Psalms, That he repented according to the Multitude of his Mercies, and that he caused his People to find Favour in the Eyes of those, to whom he had given them up into Bondage. Et pœnituit eum secundum multitudinem misericordia suæ. And in Jeremiah, the Lord declares, that if his People repent of the Evil for which he reproves them, he will also repent of the Evil which he had intended to make them suffer. This is to say, he would shew Indulgence to his People, if his People would return to him, and repent of their Iniquities. But on the contrary, if his People would not hear his Voice, nor obey his Commands, he would repent of the Good he had intended to do them. Pœnitentiam agam super bono quod locutus fueram ut facerem ei.

[Mark i. 4. Luk. iii. 3. Matth. iii. 11. Matt. iii. 8. Luk. iii. 8.] The Baptism of Repentance, is that which John the Baptist preached to the Jews, when he baptized them in Jordan, and exhorted them to bring forth Fruits worthy of Repentance. His Baptism did not remit Sins, but it prevailed with Sinners to receive the Pardon of them from the Baptism of our Saviour.

Penitence of the modern Jews. See the Articles EXPIATION and CONFESSION.

The Sacrament of Penance a instituted by Jesus Christ, to abolish Sins that are committed after Baptism, consists in Contrition, or a sincere Grief for our Sins, in the Confession of our Sins, and in the Satisfaction, or in the Exercise of satisfactory Works, and chiefly in the Amendment of our Faults, or in a Change of our Life and Conversation. Our Saviour established this Sacrament, by giving to his Apostles, and by the same Means to the Bishops and Priests their Successors, the Keys of the Kingdom of Heaven, to open and [Matt. xvi. 19.] shut it, to bind and loose. He has appointed them Judges of his Church, in his Name to exercise their Jurisdiction over the Souls of the Faithful. He has also at the same time invested them with the Office of Physicians, to administer Remedies to the inward Diseases of Christians, such as their Charity and Wisdom may inspire them with, in order to effect a Cure. See the Conduct of St. Paul towards the incestuous Person of Corinth.

[Jonah iii. 5, 6, 7, &c. Matth. xii. 41. Luke xi. 32.] The Repentance of the Ninevites is celebrated even in the Gospel. Jesus Christ tells the Jews, that the Ninevites would rise up in Judgment against them, because they repented at the Preaching of Jonah, and the Jews would not be converted at the Preaching of Jesus Christ, who was so far above Jonah. This Prophet speaks of the Ninevites after this manner. The People of Nineveh believed God, and proclaimed a Fast, and put on Sack-cloth from the greatest of them even to the least of them. For Word came unto the King of Nineveh, and he arose from his Throne, and he laid his Robe from him, and covered him with Sackcloth, and sat in Ashes. And he caused it to be proclaimed, and published through Nineveh by the Decree of the King and his Nobles, saying, Let neither Man nor Beast, Herd or Flock, taste any thing; let them not feed nor drink Water: But let Man and Beast be covered with Sackcloth, and cry mightily unto God; yea, let them turn every one from his evil Way, and from the Violence that is in his Hands. Who can tell if God will turn and repent, and turn away from his fierce Anger, that we perish not. And God saw their Works, that they turned from their evil Way, and God repented of the Evil, that he had said that he would do unto them, and he did it not.

Rephaim

REPHAIM, or Raphaim, the antient Giants of the Land of Canaan. There were antiently several Families of them in this Country. 'Tis commonly thought, that they were descended from one called Rephah or Rapha; but others imagine that the Word Rephaim properly signify'd Giants, in the antient Language of this People. There were of the Rephaim beyond Jordan, at Ashteroth Karnaim, in the time of Abraham, when Chedorlaomer made War [Gen. xiv. 5.] against them. There were also some of them in this Country in the Time of Moses. Og King of Bashan was one of the Posterity [Josh. xii. 4. Josh. xvii. 15. 1 Chron. xx. 4, 5, 6.] of the Rephaim. Also in the time of Joshua there were some of their Descendants in the Land of Canaan. Lastly, we hear of them still in David's time, in the City of Gath. The Giants Goliath, Sippai, Lahmi, and others, were some Remains of the Rephaim. Their Magnitude and Strength are known from Scripture. Our Dissertation upon the Giants may be consulted.

[Josh. xv. 8. xviii. 16. 2 Sam. v. 18, 22. 1 Chron. xi. 15. xiv. 9. 2 Sam. xxiii. 13.] The Valley of the Rephaim or Giants, was a famous place in Joshua's time, and also in King David's. It is mentioned likewise by Isaiah, xvii. 5. The Philistines encamped there more than once. It is also called in the Greek, the Valley of the Titans, and in the Vulgate, the Valley of the Giants. Joshua places the Valley of Rephaim as one of the Limits of the Portion of Judah. It was very near Jerusalem, and may be doubted whether it belonged to Judah or to Benjamin, because of the Proximity of these two Tribes. Eusebius places it in Benjamin, but Joshua xviii. 16. and those Passages of the Books of Samuel where it is mentioned, insinuate that it belong'd to Judah, and was to the South or West of Jerusalem.

Rephidim

[Exod. xvii. 1.] REPHIDIM, or Raphidim, was a Station or Encampment of the Israelites in the Desart. Departing from the Wilderness of Sin, they came to Rephidim, where the People wanted Water; they began therefore to murmur against Moses, saying to him, Why have you brought us out of Egypt, to make us dye with Thirst in this Desart, we, and our Children, and our[1] Cattle? Moses then cry'd to the Lord, and said, What shall I do with this People? they are ready to stone me to death. God return'd him this Answer; Carry the People to the Rock of Horeb, and take some of the Elders along with you, I shall be there upon the Rock before you, and you shall strike it with your wonderful Rod, and Water shall gush out, that the People may drink. Moses in the Presence of the Elders, did what God had commanded him to do. He struck the Rock, and presently the Waters burst forth in abundance, with which the People quenched their Thirst. This Place is called Temptation, because of the Complaints of the Children of Israel, and because they there tempted the Lord, saying, Is the Lord among us, or is he not ?

Rephidim could not be far from Horeb, because God order'd Moses to go from thence to the Rock of Horeb, to give the People Water. And 'twas this same Water that served the Israelites, not only in the Encampment of Rephidim, and in that of Mount Sinai, but also in their other Encampments, perhaps as far as Cadesh-barnea. [1 Cor. x. 4.] St. Paul says, that this Rock followed them in their Journey, and that it was the Figure or Type of Jesus Christ. For they drank of that spiritual Rock that followed them, and that Rock was Christ. Whether it was that the Stream of Water follow'd them, or that they follow'd the Running of the Water, or whether they always carried of this Water along with them, as Ælian says the Water of [Ælian. var. hist. l. 12. c. 40.] Choaspes always followed the King of Persia, that is, that it was always carried after him, because he would drink no other : Or, lastly, whether the Rock of Horeb might not be drawn upon a Carriage, in the Manner of a great Tun always full, and always open to whoever had Inclination to drink.

This last Hypothesis is embraced by the Rabbins, and by some of the antient Fathers. [Tertull. de Patientia. Ambros. de Sacrament. l. 1. c. 1.] For example, Tertullian: Post mannæ scatilem pluviam, post petræ aquatilem sequelam. St. Ambrose, Nonne immobilis petra, quæ populum sequebatur? St. Chrysostom, Ambrosiaster, Phosius, as cited by Oecumenius, Thomas and Cantacuzenus, in their Commentaries upon the Tenth Chapter of the first Epistle to the Corinthians, speak much after the same manner. The Jews add, that these Waters being granted for the Sake of the Merits of Miriam, the Sister of Moses, they failed as soon as she was dead ; and hence it is, that at the Encampment of Cadesh-barnea, which was soon after the Death of Miriam, we see the People again fall into Murmurings for want of Water. In [Numb. xx. 1, 2, 3, &c.] our Commentary upon Exodus xvii. and upon the first Epistle to the Corinthians x. 4. these several Opinions are further examin'd and inquired into ; the judicious Reader will easily form his own Sentiments, by having them barely mentioned here.

This Miracle at Rephidim happen'd in the Year of the World 2513, in the second Month after the Departure from Egypt. Travellers say, that at the Foot of the Mount of Horeb, is still to be seen the Brook of Water that God caused to gush out from thence, at the Instigation of Moses. Others say, that indeed there is a Stream that runs at the Foot of this Mountain ; but as to the Rock itself, there is no Water that runs from it, but there may be seen, as it were, twelve Mouths, from whence Water may have [Morizon, Voiage, l. 1. c. 1. Exod. xviii. 8, 9, 10.] flowed heretofore. 'Twas at the same Encampment of Rephidim, that Joshua obtained that famous Victory against the Amalekites, of which we have already spoken more than once. See AMALEK and JOSHUA. While Joshua and the Israelites fought against Amalek, Moses lifted up his Hands towards Heaven, and when he began to be weary, Aaron and Hur, who were with him upon the Mountain, supported his Arms, for they perceived, that while they were elevated, Israel had the Advantage ; but as they began to sink, the Battle declined in favour of Amalek.

Repose

REPOSE, or Rest. This was enjoin'd the Israelites on the Sabbath Day, for the Glory of God, in that he rested after the six Days of Creation. See SABBATH.

[Deut. iii. 20.] Repose also signifies a calm, fix'd, and secure Habitation. You shall go before your Brethren, until the Lord shall give Rest to your Brethren, as well as to you, in the Land which they are going to make a Conquest [Deut. xii. 9.] of. And again ; For ye are not as yet come to the Rest, and to the Inheritance, which the Lord your God giveth

you. You are not as yet settled in that Land which you are to possess. And Naomi says to Ruth, My [Ruth iii. 1.] Daughter, shall I not seek Rest for thee, that it may be well with thee? I shall endeavour to procure you a Settlement. And David speaking of the Ark of the Covenant, which till his time had no fix'd Place of Settlement [Psal. cxxxii. 8.] ; Arise, O Lord, into thy Rest, Thou and the Ark of thy Strength. And Ecclesiasticus ; O [Ecclus. xxxvi. 15.] be merciful unto Jerusalem, thy holy City, the Place of thy Rest.

In a moral and spiritual Sense, Requies stands for the fix'd and permanent State of Repose of the Blessed in Heaven for all Eternity.

St. Paul makes an Application of what is said of the Settlement of the Israelites in the Land of Promise, to that Repose the Saints are to enjoy in Heaven. Quibus juravi in ira meâ si introibunt in requiem meam. I swore to [Psal. xciv. 11.] them in my Wrath, that they should not enter into my Rest, or into the Land of Canaan. Therefore, says St. Paul, as they could not enter therein by reason of their [Heb. iii. 17. 18, 19. iv. 1, 2, 3.] Unbelief, let us be afraid of following their Steps. For we cannot enter but by Faith, and by a strict Observance of his Ordinances.

Representation

REPRESENTATION. The Law of God forbids all Sorts of Representations of Men, Beasts, Stars, or other Things, made in order to pay them a superstitious Worship; whether it be in Relievo, embossed, by Painting or Sculpture, in Wood, Stone, Plaister, Copper, Gold or Silver; every thing that may lead to Idolatry. Thou shalt have no other Gods before me. Thou shalt not make to thy self any graven Image, nor the Likeness of any thing in Heaven above, in the Earth beneath, or in the Waters under the Earth. But the [Exod. xx. 3, 4.] best Interpreters take notice, that this general Prohibition must be limited agreeably to the express Words of Leviticus xxvi. 1. where the same Command is repeated with the Addition of Ut adoretis ea; you shall make none of these things to worship them. We know that Moses himself made Cherubims, and fixed them upon the Ark; that Solomon also made several Figures of Cherubims in the Sanctuary; that he had Brazen Bulls made to support the Brazen Sea. Therefore, where there was no fear of Idolatry, there God did not forbid the bare making of Images and Representations, when they were only made for Ornament.

[70 .αμωίομό νâΠ תמונה .כל פסלSculptile. 70. Εἴδωλον, alias Γλυπτόν, Sculptile.] The Hebrew Word Pesel, which the Vulgate has render'd by Sculptile, Exodus xx. 3, 4. that is to say, a graven Image, is by the Septuagint translated Idolum, a vain Representation: And in Onkelos, by Zelum, which signifies an Image, a Picture. Therefore by this Word we may understand all kind of Figures in Relief; and under the Word omnem similitudinem, which the Vulgate afterwards uses, all kinds of Representations, whether in Painting, Embroidery, Tapestry, Enamel, Engraving, &c.

Reproach

REPROACH. This Word is used in two Senses; for the Disgrace or Confusion that any one suffers himself, or for that which he is the Cause of to another. Among the Hebrews, to be uncircumcised was a Reproach; and when Joshua circumcised the People that were born in the Wilderness, he tells them, This Day [Josh. v. 9.] have I rolled away the Reproach of Egypt from off you. Barrenness was also a Reproach. When Rachel had brought two Sons into the World, she said, The Lord has taken away my [Gen. xxx. 23. Isai. iv. 1.] Reproach. Isaiah says, That the time shall come when Men shall be so scarce in Israel, that seven Women shall lay hold of one Man, and shall say to him, We ask you nothing for our Maintenance, only deliver us from the Reproach of Sterility and a single Life. Take us to Wives, &c. The Lord struck the Philistines with a shameful Malady in ano, and thereby loaded them with an eternal Reproach. [Psalm. lxxxviii. 65.]

Servitude, Slavery, involuntary Poverty, Subjection to their Enemies, to be struck with any extraordinary Disease, as the Leprosy, &c. all these were reckon'd a Reproach, because it was supposed to be the Effect of Cowardice, or Idleness, or the bad Management of those that suffer'd them; or that they were a Correction sent from God, to punish their Injustice and Impiety. Thus God in an hundred Places threatens his People, to make them a Reproach and a Proverb to Men, and which has also come to pass in an hundred Instances, by the Servitudes with which they have been overwhelmed, and by the Misfortunes which have happened to them. The Psalmist often complains, that God had made him a Reproach to those that were about him, who insulted over his Misfortunes and Disgraces.

[Psal. xv. 3. 1 Sam. xvii. 26. Ecclus. xlvii. 4. Jerem. xxxi. 19. Isai. liv. 4.] To take up a Reproach against his Neighbour; opprobrium non accepit adversus proximos suos, is not to listen to the Slanders and Calumnies that are brought against him.

David took away the Reproach from Israel, by slaying Goliah. Jeremiah says, I was ashamed, yea even confounded, because I did bear the Reproach of my Youth. Thou hast made the Shame of the Faults of my Youth fall upon me, thou hast shew'd me the Horror of them, and hast made me bear the Pain and Confusion that attends it. And Isaiah, Thou shalt forget the Shame of thy Youth, and shalt not remember the Reproach of thy Widowhood any more. He speaks to the Tribe of Judah, after the Return from the Captivity, Thou shalt no longer remember the Reproach thou hast suffered among strange Nations.

Reprobation

[Heb. vii. 18.] REPROBATION. The Latin Word Reprobatio is often put to express, that one rejects a thing that before one had admitted and embraced; or that we will no longer make use of a Person or Thing that we had before made use of. For example, St. Paul says, that God had reprobated, rejected, or disanull'd the Ceremonial Law, because of the Weakness and Unprofitableness thereof. Reprobatio sit praecedentis mandati, propter infirmitatem ejus & imbecillitatem. We read also, The Stone which the Builders (reprobated, or) refused, is become the head Stone of the Corner.

[Psal. cxviii. 22. Matth. xxi. 42. Mark xii. 10. Luke xx. 17. 1 Pet. ii. 4,7. Psal. xxxiii. 10. Ecclus. xx. 20. Jerem. vi. 30.] To reprobate, often signifies barely to reject. The Lord (reprobates or) bringeth the Counsel of the Heathen to nought, he rejects and condemns it. A wise Sentence shall be (reprobated, or) rejected, when it cometh out of a Fool's Mouth; that is, it will be laugh'd at and despised. Jeremiah calls the Princes of Judah reprobate Silver. Reprobate Silver shall Men call them, because the Lord hath rejected them. That is, bad Silver of a coarse Alloy, which will not be taken in Traffick.[1]

Lastly,

Lastly, to reprobate, expresses the Decree of God, to abandon the Wicked to the greatest of Evils, by not taking them out of that Mass of Corruptions, in which we are all involved by our Birth, and in not affording them the Graces necessary to their arriving at eternal Happiness. a There are Reprobates, who at their Baptism receive Remission of their Sins, and afterwards several other actual Graces; but who do not receive the Gift of final Perseverance.[2] Others are lost, either because of their Birth, which is corrupted by original Sin, or as a Punishment of their actual Sins, of which they have made themselves guilty, and of which they have not repented. But all those whom God reprobates, he does not reprobate them by making them wicked but by not granting them the Benefits of his gratuitous [Aug. Ep. 194. nov. edit. p. 719 n. 14. c. 3.] Mercy. Merito namque peccati universa massa damnata est; nec obdurat Deus impertiendo malitiam, sed non impertiendo miserecordiam. Quibus enim non impertitur, nec digni sunt, nec merentur; ac potius ut non impertiatur, hoc digni sunt, hoc merentur.

Reptiles

REPTILES; in Latin, Reptilia; in Greek, [Ramesh. ἑρπετόν. Reptile.] Herpeta; in Hebrew, Ramisim. These are Animals that have no Feet, or at least such short ones, that they seem to creep or crawl upon the Ground. Thus Serpents, Earth-worms, Locusts, Catterpillars, Flies, are taken for Reptiles. The Hebrews put Fishes also in the Rank of Reptiles, whatever Nature or Shape [Gen. i. 21. Levit. xi. 46. Psalm lxix. 35, &c.] they may be of. This Name is sometimes also extended to such Land Animals, as are not of the Nature of the great Beasts for Service, nor of the larger wild Beasts. In a Word, to creep upon the Earth, is sometimes used for moving, or going to and fro, as all four-footed Creatures do.

Repudiation

REPUDIATION, or Divorce. The Law of Moses allowed Polygamy and Divorce among the Hebrews.[1] We have already spoke of the Article of DIVORCE, and more at length in a Dissertation upon the same Subject, before our Commentary upon Deuteronomy. [Leo of Modena, Ceremonies of the Jews, p. 4. c. 4.] We shall only relate here what Leo of Modena says, concerning the modern Practice of the Jews in this Respect. A young Girl under ten Years of Age, whether she has a Father or not, if she is become a Widow, and afterwards marries an Husband by the Consent of her Mother and Brethren, and this Husband should happen to displease her, she may be unmarried again, till she has attained the Age of Twelve Years and a Day, which is the Age at which she commences Woman. It is enough for her to say, that she will not have such an one for her Spouse, of which she must take two Witnesses, who must put down her Refusal in Writing; and by Virtue of this Writing she is unmarried, and may marry again to whom she pleases. He that has defiled a Maid, or who has corrupted her in any manner, is obliged to take her to Wife by the Sentence of the Judges, without having it in his Power ever to put her away, and must give Fifty Shekels to the Father of the Woman. Deut. xxii. 28, 29.

[Deut. xxiv. 1.] Moses allows a Man to put away his Wife, when he finds her disagreeable to him. When a Man hath taken a Wife and married her, and it come to pass that she find no Favour in his Eyes, because he hath found some Uncleanness in her; then let him write her a Bill of Divorcement, and give it in her Hand, and send her out of his House. What may be meant by the Uncleanness here mentioned, has been great Matter of Inquiry; and the Commentators may be consulted hereupon. But this is the Practice of the modern Jews, according to Leo of Modena. Though a Woman should give [Leo of Modena, Ceremonies of the Jews, p. 4. c. 6] no Occasion of Complaint to her Husband by her Conduct, yet he may divorce her, if he found her not agreeable to him. However, except in the Case of Jealousy, or of some Misbehaviour with which he could accuse his Wife, he ought not to divorce her. But to prevent any Abuse that might attend this Indulgence of the Law, the Rabbins have contrived many Formalities to be gone through, to make the Affair tedious and troublesome; so that it often happens, that before the Divorce can be compleated, the Parties have chang'd their Minds, are reconciled again to each other, and live together in Friendship afterwards.

The Form of these Letters of Divorce, which they call Get, and which they give to a Woman, is drawn up by a Scribe, in the Presence [Get. See the Talmud tract. Gittin.] of one or more learned Rabbins. It ought to be written upon ruled Vellum, and to contain neither more nor less than twelve Lines, and this with square Letters, and a Thousand other little trifling Circumstances which must be observed, as well in the Characters and the Manner of writing, as in the Names and Surnames of the Man and Woman. Besides, neither the Scribe, nor the Rabbins present, nor the Witnesses, are to be akin either to the Man or Woman, or to each other. This is the Substance of the Bill of Divorce. Upon such a Day of such a Month, of such a Year, I such an one voluntarily divorce thee, dismiss thee, and set thee free, thee such an one, who hast been formerly my Wife; and I permit thee to marry again with whomsoever thou pleasest. Signed by such and such, as Witnesses.

The Bill being written, the Rabbin examins the Husband with what Subtilty he is able, to find out whether it is with his full and free Consent that he repudiates his Wife. If it can be done, they take care[2] that at least ten Persons may be present at this Action, besides the two Witnesses that sign, and two others to witness the Date. After this the Rabbin examines the Woman, and then the Husband gives her the Parchment into her Hands, extended and placed by each other, saying at the same time, " Here is thy Repudiation, I separate thee " from my self, and leave thee at Liberty " to marry whoever thou pleasest." The Woman takes it, and gives it to the Rabbin, who reads it once more ; after which she is at full Liberty. There are besides, several other little Observances, which for Brevity I omit ; they were only invented to create Delay and Difficulty, that the Parties may have the greater Opportunity of an Accommodation. The Rabbin advises the Woman not to marry again in less than three Months, for fear she may already be with Child. When they depart from thence, the Man and Woman separate from each other, and may no longer dwell together ; and each of them may marry again to whom they think convenient. This is what Leo of Modena says of this Matter.

Moses by the Terms of the Law, allows only Men to divorce their Wives ; at least, he says nothing that may give any Colour for Women to take this Liberty with their Husbands : And in the Old Testament we have no Example of any such Divorce, that is plain and explicit. Salome the Sister of Herod the Great, is the first that we know, who made a Divorce between herself and her Husband Costobarus ; in which she acted, says Josephus [Joseph. Antiq.l.15. c. 11. Matt. xiv. 3. Mark vi. 17.] , against the Laws of the Jews, which did not allow Wives to put away their Husbands, and which forbid such to marry others, without first obtaining a Bill of Divorce from their former Husbands. Herodias also, mention'd in the Gospel, had quitted her Husband, [Joseph. l. 18. c. 7. Joseph.lib. de vita sua.] as may be inferr'd from what Josephus says of her. This Author says, that his own Wife also, whom he married after he had obtain'd his Freedom, quitted him at Alexandria, a little after he had marry'd her. Jesus Christ takes Notice of the same Custom, when he says, If a Woman shall put away her Husband, and be married to another, she committeth Adultery. The three Sisters of the younger Agrippa, King of Trachonitis and Batanea, all usurped this Right of putting away their Husbands. Berenice the Elder, who had first marry'd Herod King of Chalcis her Uncle, afterwards marry'd Polemon King of Pontus, and repudiated him some time after. Ma-riamne the Sister of Berenice forsook [Joseph. Antiq.l.20. c. 5. p.693. e. f.] Archelaus her first Husband, and marry'd Demetrius the Alabarch, or Head of the [Joseph. ibidem.] Jews of Alexandria. Lastly, Drusilla, after having been married to Aziz King of Emesa, left him some time after, and married Felix the Governor of Judea.

As to the Practice of Repudiation among Christians, limited, as it is by our Saviour, to the Case of Adultery only, we have already spoke of it under the Article DIVORCE. Our Dissertation may be read upon this Subject, as also Selden's Uxor Hæbraica, and the Commentators upon Matth. v. 32.

Reputare

REPUTARE. This Word is, in some measure, consecrated to signify the reputed or imputed Righteousness of Abraham ; according [Rom. iv. 3.] to that of St. Paul ; Credidit Abraham Deo, & reputatum est ei in justitiam.

Reputare is also put for the Notion or [Gen. xxxi. 15.] Idea we have conceived of any one. Nonne extraneæ reputatæ sumus ab eo? Has he not treated us as if we were not his Daughters?

Reputare is also used for speaking or [1 Sam. xviii. 17.] thinking within one's self: Saul autem reputabat inter se ; Saul said within himself ; I will not put him to Death, but I will expose him to the Arms of the Philistines. Aman reputans quod nullum alium Rex, nisi se, vellet [Esth. vi. 6.] honorare ; Haman imagined, that the King thought of honouring none but him.

Jesus Christ, at his Passion, was numbred [Mark xv. 28. Mark x.12 2 Chron. ix. 20.] with the Transgressors : Cum iniquis reputatus est. Under Solomon's Government, Gold and Silver were reputed as nothing in Jerusalem. If a Fool did but know how to hold his Tongue, he would be reputed a wise [Prov. xvii. 28. Gen.x. 12.] Man.

Reseph

[Hieronym. in Abac. iii. 5.] RESEPH. This Word is found in the Hebrew[1] of Habakkuk iii. 5. where the Vulgate translates it, Egredietur Diabolus antes pedes ejus. And the Septuagint ; Egredietur in campos post pedes ejus. Aquila has translated Reseph by Volatile : Symmachus, Theodotion, and the fifth Edition, by Volucre a Bird, a flying Thing. It may very well be render'd ; Burning Coals shall walk before him[2] ; and be explain'd by the Fire of the Wrath of God, or by the Distempers with which he afflicts his Enemies ; or by the Carbo, which is a kind of Pestilence. St. Jerom, from the Tradition of the Hebrews, says, that Reseph is a Demon, who exerts his Power over such as are like himself ; in the same manner as Beelzebub Prince of the Devils, mention'd in the Gospel : That the Scripture gives him the Name of a Bird, because of his great Agility and Readiness: That it was he that tempted Eve in the Garden, and was cursed of God; whence came his Name Reseph, which may signify, to creep upon the Ground[3]: And, lastly, that this Serpent presented himself before our Saviour, after he came out of the Water of his Baptism, and tempted him in the Wilderness forty Days.

Respect of Persons

RESPECT of Persons. God appointed, [Lev. xix. 15. Deut. xvi. 1, 17, 19.] that the Judges should pronounce their Sentences without any Respect of Persons; That they should consider neither the Poor, nor the Rich, nor the Weak, nor the Powerful; That they should attend only to Truth and Justice. God has no Respect of Persons; Deus Personam non accipit, [2 Chron. xix. 7. Mat. xxii. 16.] nec munera. And the Jews told our Saviour, That he told the Truth, without any Respect of Persons, and without Fear; Non enim respicis personam hominum. [Jude, ver. 16.] Saint Jude, instead of the Phrase, to have Respect of Persons, makes use of this, *to Admire Persons; Mirantes personas quæst*ûs causâ. Isaiah says it down as one [Isai. xxiii. 2.] of the distinguishing Marks of the Messiah, that he should have no Respect of Persons.

Ressa

RESSA, a pretty famous City of Arabia Petrea; probably, the same as Rissah, an Encampment of the Children of Israel in the Desart; of which we shall speak in its [Joseph. de Bello, l. 1. c. 12.] Place. Josephus mentions the Castle of Ressa in Idumea: And St. Jerom, in the Life of St. Hilarion, says, that this Saint made Converts of the whole City of Ressa, situate between Cadesh and Gaza. Perhaps this is the City of Larissa, mention'd by William of Tyre[1]; and Arischi an Episcopal City in the Desart of the Children of Israel[2]. Laris was a Maritime City upon the Way to Egypt.

Restitution

RESTITUTION. Natural Justice requires, that we should repair whatever Injuries we do to our Neighbour, whether in his Body, or his Estate, or his Reputation. The Law of Moses prescribed,[1] That they should give Life for Life, Eye for Eye, Tooth for Tooth, Hand for Hand, Foot for Foot, Burning for Burning, Wound for Wound, Stripe for Stripe. It also ordain'd, That they should render [Exod. xxii. 1,2,3,&c.] five Oxen for one Ox, and four Sheep for one Sheep: That the Thief should be sold, to make Restitution for what he had stole: That if the Thief should be found possess'd of any Beast of Service, as of an Ox, or of an Ass, or even of a Sheep, he should restore it twofold: That whoever shall do any Damage in the Field of another, shall repair the Damage, according to the Estimation that should be made of it. He that, by Ignorance, should omit to give to the Temple what was appointed by the Law, for Example, in the Tythes or First-fruits, was obliged to restore it to the Priests, and a Fifth Part beside; over-andabove which, he was obliged to offer a Ram, for the Expiation of his Sin. Nehemiah prevail'd with all those Israelites to make Restitution, who had taken Interest of their Brethren: I pray you let us leave off this Usury. Restore, I pray you, to them, even this Day, their Lands, their Vineyards, their Olive-yards, and their Houses, also the hundredth part of the Money, and of the Corn, the Wine, and of the Oyl, that ye exact of them.

Zaccheus, in St. Luke, promises a fourfold Restitution, to all such as he had extorted upon, in his Office as a Publican: Et si aliquem defraudavi, reddo quadruplum: The Roman Laws condemned to a fourfold Restitution all such as were convicted of Extortion or Fraud. Zaccheus here condemns himself, and imposes that Penalty upon himself that the Laws subjected him to: To which he adds the half of all his Goods; which was what the Law did not require of him.

He that had kill'd a labouring Beast, or any other Beast, as an Ox, was to render another for it, or the Value of it.

The Jews expected Elias, who was to restore all Things: Elias venturus est, & restituet omnia. This is an Allusion to those Words of Malachi; Behold, I will send you Elijah the Prophet, before the coming of the great and dreadful Day of the Lord. And he shall turn the Heart of the Fathers to the Children, and the Heart of the Children to their Fathers, lest I come and smite the Earth with a Curse. Also St. Peter, in the Acts, calls the Last Day, The Day of Restitution of all Things; Usque in tempora restitutionis omnium. At the End of the World Jesus Christ will unite the Church with the Synagogue, the Jew with the Christian, the Christian with the Gentile: Then all Things will be restored to a perfect Union, and there will be but one Shepherd and one Flock.

Resurrection

RESURRECTION. The Belief of a Resurrection from the Dead, is an Article of Religion in common to the Jew and the Christian: It is found very expresly taught both in the Old and New Testament. I do not speak of that miraculous Resurrection, which consists in reviving for a time, to die again afterwards; as Elijah, Elisha, Jesus Christ, and his Apostles, have raised some from the Dead; but I mean a general Resurrection of the Dead, which will come to pass at the End of the World, and which will be follow'd by an Immortality either of Happiness or Misery. For Example: [Psal. xvi. 10.] The Psalmist says, For thou wilt not leave my Soul in Hell, or in the Grave, neither wilt thou suffer thine holy one to see Corruption. Job; For I know that my Redeemer [Job xix. 25,26,27.] liveth, and that he shall stand in the latter Day upon the Earth. And though after my Skin, Worms destroy this Body, yet in my Flesh I shall see God: whom I shall see for my self, and mine Eyes shall behold, and not another; though my Reins be consumed [Ezekiel xxxvii. 1, 2, 3, &c.] within me. Ezekiel also, in his Vision of a great Quantity of Bones in a large Field, and which, at the Breath of the Spirit of the Lord, began to unite, and to be covered with Flesh, Nerves, and Skin, and at last to revive; has left us a Proof and an Assurance of a general Resurrection. See also Isaiah xxvi. 19.

[Wisd. iii. 1, 2, 3, &c. & iv. 15.] The Author of the Book of Wisdom speaks of it in a very lively manner, when he says, that the Souls of good Men, and such as suffer Persecution in this World, shall receive a Recompence for it in the Day of Visitation: For thus he calls the Resurrection, in more Places than one. In the Second Book of the Maccabees we see the same Truth maintained in a more express manner still. One of the seven Brethren of the Maccabees, who suffer'd Death at Antioch under Antiochus Epiphanes, directing his Discourse to this [2 Mac. vii. 9, 14, 23, 29.] Tyrant, tells him, Thou, like a Fury, takest us out of this present Life; but the King of the World shall raise us up, who have died for his Laws, unto everlasting Life. The Mother of these holy Martyrs encouraged them to the Combat, by the same Hope of the Resurrection: And they were so entirely possess'd with it, that they despised Death, Tortures, and all the Menaces of the King.

At the Time that our Saviour appear'd in Judea, the Resurrection from the Dead was received as one of the principal Articles of the Jewish Religion, by the whole Body of the Nation[1], except only the Sadducees, who deny'd it. The Jews then tolerated them; and even there were several of them who held some of the first Employments of the Republick[2]; but at this Day they look upon 'em as Hereticks, Epicureans, and maintain that they have no Share in the Life to come[3]. Our Saviour, in his Gospel, has effectually confuted the Error of the Sadducees: He has promis'd his faithful Servants, that they shall enjoy a compleat State of Happiness after the general Resurrection. He arose himself from the Dead, to give us, in his own Person, a Proof, a Pledge, a Pattern of our future Resurrection. St. Paul,[4] in almost all his Epistles, speaks of a general Resurrection; refutes those who deny'd or oppos'd it; proves it to those that had started any Difficulties about it; explains the Mystery, the Manner, and several Circumstances of it: He says, that to deny the Resurrection of the Dead, is the same thing as to deny our Saviour's Resurrection: If [1 Cor.xv. 13,15,16, 17,19.] there be no Resurrection of the Dead, then is Christ not risen: And that, if we were not to rise again from the Dead, we are of all Men the most miserable.

Some Jews teach, that all Men shall not rise again, but only the Israelites; and, moreover, such as have been very wicked among them, shall have no Part in this happy State. But others are of Opinion, that all Men in general shall rise again. Some among them maintain, that when Men are once rais'd again, they shall be no more subject to Death. But others think they shall die again, and that their Souls alone shall enjoy everlasting Happiness. Upon this Subject see Menasse-ben-Israel, in his Third Book concerning the Resurrection of the Dead.

Leo of Modena, in Part IV. Chap. xi. of The Ceremonies of the Jews, expresses himself thus in this Matter: " There are " Jews who think, with Pythagoras, " that Souls pass from one Body to another; this they call Gilghul, or Circulation. They endeavour to support their " Opinion from several Passages of Scripture, taken chiefly out of Ecclesiastes " and Job. But this Notion is not " universal; and whether it be embraced or rejected, it makes no Schism " or Heresy among them. As to the " Resurrection of the Dead, 'tis one of " their thirteen Articles of Faith, That " at the End of the World, all the Dead " shall arise; and that God shall summon all Mankind to his general Judgment, whether in or out of the Body: " According to that of Daniel; And " many of them that sleep in the Dust [Dan.xii.2.] " of the Earth shall awake, some to everlasting Life, and some to Shame and everlasting Contempt.

[Bereshith Rabba, sect. 96.] 'Tis also a common Opinion among the Jews, that all Men, at least all the Israelites, shall arise in the Land of Israel; from whence proceeds that ardent Desire they have always had, to be buried in this Country. They believe, those that have this Advantage, will arise first, and, before all others, will enjoy the Happiness of seeing the Kingdom of the Messiah. But then, what shall become of the Just who shall die and be buried out of the Land of Israel? They answer, That God will open them Passages in the Earth, and subterraneous Conveyances, through which they shall roul into this Country; and when they are come thither, God will give them the Breath of Life, and they shall revive. They think it was for this, that Jacob and Joseph shew'd so much Desire to have their Bodies carry'd into the Land of Canaan. And we read in some of the Books of the Rabbins, that often they carry'd the Bodies of certain Jews, who had shew'd a more than ordinary Devotion, from very distant Countries, to be interred in the Land of Israel.

We have also seen, in the Christian Church, a Variety of Opinions concerning the Resurrection of the Dead. Several of the ancient Fathers[5] have acknowledged a two-fold Resurrection. The first, is that which is to precede the Reign of the Messias, who is to reign a thousand Years upon the Earth. The second, is that which is to follow the Reign of a thousand Years, and is to begin the Reign of the Saints in a State of everlasting Happiness. This is a Sentiment that these Fathers had borrow'd from the Jews; since it is found clear enough in the second Book of Esdras[6], in the Testament of the twelve Patriarchs[7], and in several of the Rabbins. We have treated of this Affair of the Resurrection, in a particular Dissertation, printed before the second Tome of our Commentary upon St. Paul's Epistles.

The ancient Philosophers that believed the Immortality of the Soul, admitted also of a Resurrection. Whether they had received these Opinions from the Eastern People, among whom they had travelled; or whether they inferr'd a Resurrection, from the Immortality of the Soul, as a necessary Consequence; persuading themselves, that a Soul could not long continue, without being united to a Body. But this Resurrection is by some explained after one manner, and by others after another. Pythagoras, who was the first that introduced the Sentiment of the Soul's Immortality among the Greeks, acknowledg'd a Metempsychosis, or a Transmigration of the Soul out of one Body into another successively. Thales[8] and Democritus[9] held also a kind of Resurrection: But the Manner in which they explain'd it, is not known. As for Plato[10], we are better acquainted with what he thought about the Resurrection: He was pretty much of Pythagoras's Opinion: He maintain'd, that the Souls that had already animated Bodies, passed from them into a State of Liberty, from whence they afterwards return'd to animate other Bodies.

This Doctrine of Plato was espoused by the Pharisees among the Jews[11], and [John ix. 2. Mat. xvi. 14. Wisd. iii. 6, 13. & iv. 15. 2 Mac. vii. 9, 14, 23, 29.] by Philo[12]. It appears also from the Gospel, that many of the Jews admitted of a kind of Metempsychosis among them, at the Time of our Saviour. But we find from other Authorities, taken from the Book of Wisdom, and the Books of the Maccabees, that the Generality of the Nation held the Resurrection much as we do now. And Jesus Christ, in his Gospel, supposes this Doctrine, and teaches it without any Contradiction, except from the Sadducees, who altogether deny'd it. The Apostles have urged it likewise: And notwithstanding the Attempts of some Hereticks who opposed it, the Catholick Church has always constantly embraced it, as a fundamental Article of Christianity.

But there are many Opinions that have been tolerated in the Church, concerning the Time, the Manner, and other Circumstances of this Resurrection. When the Apostles asked of Christ, when the End of the World should happen, and his Coming; He answer'd them, That the Angels themselves did not know it, and he did not think it proper to be revealed [Mark xiii. 32. Mat. xxiv. 43, 44. Thess. v. 2, 3, 4.] to them: He only informs us, That this Last Day will come as a Thief in the Night, and shall surprize Mankind, when they least expect it. St. Paul says, that at that Time many shall be alive, who shall pass from Life to Death, and from Death to the Resurrection, with such Rapidity, that in the Twinkling of an Eye they shall be changed, and their Bodies shall be invested with Incorruptibility and Immortality.

[Heb. ix. 27.] There are some Greek Fathers[13], and some Rabbins, who believe, that those who shall then be found alive, shall not die at all, but shall only undergo that happy Change, of passing in an Instant from Life to Immortality. But the other Opinion seems to be more generally received, that all Men shall suffer the Sentence pronounced against the Children of Adam: Statutum est omnibus hominibus semel mori; post hoc autem Judicium: It is appointed for all Men once to die; and after Death, Judgment.

[Hieron. in Matt. xxvi. 6.] St. Jerom assures us, that the Tradition of the Jews is, That the Dead shall rise in the Night-time, or at Break-of- Day, at the same Time as Jesus Christ came out of his Tomb. This Tradition hath passed from the Synagogue to the Church, as may [Chrysost. in Matth. xxv.] be seen by Lactantius[14], by St Chrysostom, and by such Greek Writers as generally follow him. This Tradition is founded upon those Words of St. Peter; The Day of the [2 Pet, iii. 10.] Lord will come as a Thief in the Night: And upon those of Jesus Christ, in the Parable of the Ten Virgins; At Midnight there [Matth. xxv. 6.] was a Cry made, Behold, the Bridegroom cometh, go ye out to meet him. Prudentius, whose Words are made use of by the Church [Prudent. hymn. cathemer.] [of Rome], in one of her Offices, thinks that the World will be at an End, and, consequently, the Resurrection commence, in the Morning. Thomas Aquinas, Tostatus, and Suarez,[15] on the contrary, are of Opinion, that it will be perform'd at Mid-day.[16] St. Paul informs us, 1 Cor. xv. 52, 53. that it will begin at the first Sound of the Trumpet.

Those, among the Jews, who admit of a Transmigration of Souls, are perplex'd about the Manner in which the Resurrection is to be perform'd. For how can the Soul re-animate all the Bodies through which it has pass'd? If it can animate but one of 'em, what must become of the rest? Must it have its own Choice, and return to that it likes best? These Difficulties very much gravel them. Some think it must re-animate its first Body; others, that it will be re-united with its last; and that the other Bodies will remain in the Dust, as barren Trees are forsaken and deserted. I should rather conclude, that almost all those who hold the Metempsychosis, do not admit of a general Resurrection; and that this Revolution, or successive Passage of the same Soul through several Bodies, was what they understood by a Resurrection. This I take to have been the Notion of those Pharisees mention'd by Josephus.

'Tis inquired what will be the Nature of Bodies when raised, what their Stature, their Age, their Sex? Jesus Christ tells us in the [Matth. xxii. 30.] Gospel, that after the Resurrection Men shall be as the Angels of God; that is, according to the Fathers, they shall be immortal, incorruptible, transparent, light, luminous, and, in some sort, spiritual, yet without quitting the Qualities of Bodies, as we find our Saviour's Body, after his Resurrection, was tangible, and had Flesh and [Luk. xxiv. 39.] Bones. But as Jesus Christ laid aside the Brightness of the Glory of his Body, and did not suffer it to shew itself to his Disciples; the glorious and bright Emanations from the Bodies of the Blessed, shall shine as the [Matth. xiii. 43.] Sun, as our Saviour expresses

Some antient Hebrew Doctors[17] maintain, that Men shall arise of the same Stature, with the same Qualities, and the same corporal Defects that they had in their Lifetime. That the Blind shall arise blind, the Lame, lame, and so of the rest. They confirm this Conjecture by the Excuse of Samuel, when he appear'd to the Witch of Endor, in the same Shape that he had upon Earth; and by that Passage of Ecclesiastes; One Generation passeth away, and another Generation cometh. Some Christians in St. Austin's Time maintain'd the same Opinion, which they founded upon Jesus Christ's Appearance after his Resurrection, with all the Marks of his Wounds. But the holy Father hath confuted this Sentiment;[18] and undertakes to shew, that if our our Saviour preserved the Marks of his Wounds, 'twas by an Effect of his Power, and to convince the Incredulity of his Disciples. See also what he says, Enchyrid. de Fide, Spe, & Charitate, c. 9.

The Resurrection of Infants is attended with great Difficulties. If they are to arise little, weak, and such as they went out of this World; of what Use can their Resurrection be to them? And if they are to arise full grown, comely, like those of an advanced Age, they will not be the same as they were, and this will not properly be a Resurrection. St. Austin has treated of this Question with his usual Accuracy and Modesty.[19] He will not venture to determine whether Children will arise small or great, but he rather inclines to that Opinion, which supposes them to arise as in a perfect Age. And elsewhere,[20] speaking of the Resurrection of Children Still-born, he says, that the Resurrection will give them all the Perfection they would have had, if they had had time to grow up; and that it would secure them from all such Imperfections, as they might have contracted had they liv'd longer. Many, both Antients and Moderns have thought,[21] that Men will arise at the Age at which Jesus Christ died, that is, about the Age of thirty-three or thirty-five Years. So that both Old and Young will all appear to be about that Age, to fulfil [Ephes. iv. 13.] those Words of St. Paul; Till we all come in the Unity of the Faith, and of the Knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect Man, unto the Measure of the Stature of the Fulness of Christ. But the more judicious explain St. Paul, as meaning the Progress which the Faithful make both in Faith and Vertue, till they arrive at the compleat Age of Perfection.

Many Antients have doubted, a whether Women are to rise in their proper Sex. They grounded their Scruples upon those Words of Jesus Christ; In the Resurrection [Matth. xxii. 30.] they neither marry, nor are given in Marriage; but are as the Angels of God in Heaven. And upon what is said by St. [Rom. viii. 29.] Paul; To be conformed to the Image of his Son. To this is added, that, according to Moses, Man alone was created out of the Earth, and that Woman was taken out of Man, as an Accident or Accessory. But to this it is answer'd, that if a Distinction of Sexes is unnecessary after the Resurrection, it will be as much so for Men as for Women: That the Woman is not less perfect in her Kind than the Man; that the Manner in which Eve was form'd, is in some Sort more advantageous to her, than the Creation of the Man. He was created immediately from the Earth, but she from him. Lastly, The Sex of the Woman is nothing of a Defect or Imperfection of Nature. Non est enim vitium Sexus fœmineus, sed Natura, saith St. Austin.

[Aug. de Civit. l. 22. c. 17.] Other Difficulties that have been moved upon this Subject, may be seen treated on at full Length, in the Dissertations composed by us concerning the End of the World, and the general Resurrection.

The Resurrection of the Saints, who arose out of their Sepulchres at the Time of our Saviour's Death, and who, after his Resurrection came into the holy City, and appear'd [Matth. xxvii. 51, 52, 53.] to many, is a Subject which deserves to be consider'd here in a few Words. The Names of those that arose upon this Occasion are unknown. Some will have them to have been all the most antient Fathers and Patriarchs. Others, that they were the most modern ones, and such as were most known to the Jews then living. Others, that this Favour was granted only to those that were buried at Jerusalem, or thereabouts.

They dispute also about the Hour of their Resurrection. Some maintain that they did not rise till after our Saviour, who is call'd in Scripture the first Fruits of those that slept. [1 Cor. xv. 20.] Primitiæ dormientium & promogenitus ex mortuis. Origen, St. Jerome,[22] Gregory the[23] Great, Raban-Maur. Paschasius Radbert, Bede, Drutmar, Liran, the common Gloss, and several others, are of this Opinion. But [Chrysost. in Matth. xxvii. Hilar. in Matth. xxvii.] St. Chrysostome, and the Greek Authors who generally follow him, Hilary, and many others, believe, that they arose at the Moment of our Saviour's Death; and that Jesus Christ raised them before he raised himself, to display his Triumph over Death in a more remarkable Manner. It must be allow'd, that the Text of the Evangelist St. Matthew, is not decisive for either of these Opinions; but if it be true, (which cannot well be doubted) that the Souls of the Holy Patriarchs did not come out of the Limbus, till after Jesus Christ descended thither; it must also be allow'd, that they did not arise till after this Descent. Therefore it will necessarily follow, that some Space of Time must pass between the Death of our Saviour, and the Resurrection of the Saints.

[Hos. xiii. 14. Ps. lxviii. 18.] But these Saints being thus raised, did they dye again, and re-enter into their Graves, after the Ascension of Jesus Christ, or did they ascend with him into Heaven? There is a Variety of Sentiments upon this Matter. Those that think Jesus Christ led them along with him into Heaven, as it were in Triumph, quote those Words of Hosea; I will ransom them from the Power of the Grave, I will redeem them from Death; O Death, I will be thy Plague; O Grave, I will be thy Destruction. And those of the Psalmist; Thou hast ascended on high, thou hast led Captivity captive. And St. [Eph. iv. 8.] Paul; When he ascended up on high, he led Captivity captive, and gave Gifts unto Men. Is it probable, that after having restored Life to these Saints and illustrious Dead, God should think fit to make them submit once more to Death and the Grave? Would not this be to plunge them again into Pain and Bitterness, after giving them a Taste of Eternal Happiness? Lastly, Would it not be agreeable to the Justice, the Goodness, and the Majesty of that divine Deliverer, to compleat his Work, and to lead them along with him into Heaven, after he had restored them to Life upon Earth?

We might produce a great Number of the Fathers, who have been of this Opinion. Ignatius the Martyr, to the Magnesians. Origin, upon Matth. xxvii. and upon the Canticles. The Author of the Orthodox Questions, Quest. 84. Clemens Alexandrinus, Strom. l. 6. Eusebius of Cesarea, in his Gospel-Demonstration, c. 12. Hilary upon Psalm. II. Venerable Bede, Raban-Maurus, Drutmar, Paschasius, Radbertus, and a Multitude of modern Interpreters, who maintain in a positive Manner, that the Holy Patriarchs raised with Jesus Christ, enjoy with him the Happiness of Heaven, and were the Partners of his Triumphant Ascension.

But the contrary Opinion is maintain'd not with less Authority, or fewer Proofs. [Heb. xi. 39. 40.] St. Paul says expressly, that the holy Patriarchs, having obtained a good Report through Faith, received not the Promise: God having provided some better thing for us, that they without us should not be made perfect. Therefore he did not think them yet raised, nor in Possession of the Glory of[24] Heaven. He says elsewhere, That Jesus Christ is the First-fruits of those that slept the Sleep of Death, and were to arise one Day, not to sleep any more. Besides, if any one had been to rise with our Saviour, doubtless it would have been the Holy King [Ps. xv. 10. Acts ii. 29.] David, John the Baptist, the Patriarchs and the Prophets buried at Jerusalem and in Palestine. But St. Peter, speaking to the Jews of Jerusalem, says expressly, That David's Tomb was still to be seen among them; that David had foretold the Resurrection of our Saviour, but says nothing at all of his own. What Strength must his Reasoning have had, if David had been raised, and had ascended into Heaven with Jesus Christ? We know that the Relicks and the Tomb of John the Baptist have been shewn, as well before as after this Time; it was not therefore believed that they were ascended into Heaven, and admitted into Glory.

The Fathers that have treated upon this Subject with the greatest Care, have declared for the Opinion now proposed. Tertullian [Tertul. l. de Anima c. 55.] purposely confutes those who thought, that the Patriarchs and Prophets ascended into Heaven after the Resurrection of our Saviour. St. Chrysostome says, that [Chrysost. Homil. 40. in 1 Cor. xv. Idem. Homil. 28. in Heb. xi.] they who arose while Jesus Christ was upon the Cross, died again. And writing upon the Epistle to the Hebrews, he owns with the Apostle, that the just Men of the Old Testament have not yet received their Reward. Theodoret also expresses himself after the same Manner. Theophylact and Euthymius, explaining the Twenty-seventh Chapter of St. Matthew, acknowledge, that the Holy Patriarchs arose to be as Proofs of the Resurrection of Christ; but that they afterwards died again, to rise a second Time at the End of the World. St. Austin, in his Epistle to Evodius, expressly treats of this Question, and explains himself clearly enough for the temporary Resurrection of those Saints. Thomas Aquinas, having produced the Reasons upon which each of these Opinions is [D. Thom. 3. part. art. 53. art. 3.] founded, declares himself for those that hold, that they died again; and this is the Opinion that to us seems to be best supported, both by the Scripture and by the Fathers. The Reader may consult upon this Matter, the Dissertation we have composed and inserted in the new Collection of Dissertations.

Translators' note. To reconcile this Variety of Opinions, about a Matter of more Curiosity than Consequence, why may we not say, that the General Resurrection will happen at all these Times at once? For in different Places of the Earth all these Times must coincide, and be celebrated at one and the same Time.

Reu

REU, or Ragau, or Retui, Son of Peleg,[1] was born in the Year of the World 1787. His Father was then thirty Years old. He begat Serug, being two and thirty Years old, in the Year of the World 1819, and died at the Age of two hundred and thirty-nine years, in the Year of the World 2026, before Christ 1974, before the vulgar Era 1976. It is not impossible, but that the City of Ragæ, and the Plain of Ragau, may have taken their Names from Reu, Rehu, or Ragau; for all these are the same in the Hebrew. All the Difference depends upon the Pronunciation of the Letter ע*Ain* or Gnain.

Reuben

REUBEN, or Ruben, the eldest Son of [Gen. xxix. 32.] Jacob and Leah; he was born in the Year of the World 2246, before Christ 1754, before the vulgar Era 1758. One Day Reuben went into the Field, being yet very young, and there found a Fruit call'd in Hebrew, Dudaim, which is generally interpreted by Mandrakes, which he [Gen. xxx. 14.] brought home to his Mother Leah. Rachel was curious to taste them, and asked them of Leah, who gave them her upon Condition that Jacob should be her Bedfellow the Night following. Rachel gave her Consent, and Leah became with Child of Issachar. A long Time after this, Jacob being now return'd into the Land of Canaan, Reuben defiled his Father's Concubine [Gen. xxxv. 22. Deuter. xxxiii. 6. Vulg.] Bilhah; for which Reason he lost his Birth-right, and all the Privileges of Primogeniture.

When Joseph's other Brethren had taken a Resolution to make away with him, Reuben endeavour'd by all means to deliver him out of their Hands.[1] He proposed to 'em, to let him down into an old Water-pit, in which there was no Water, that afterwards he might take him up again, and restore him to his Father Jacob. His Brethren therefore having stript him, let him down into the Pit. But while Reuben was gone at some Distance from them, they drew him out again, and sold him to some Ishmaelites that pass'd that Way. Reuben at his Return, going to the Pit, and not finding him there, tore his Cloaths, and said to his Brethren; " The Child is " not to be found, and whither shall I " go?" They deliver'd him out of his Perplexity, and acquainted him, that they had sold him to some People that were going into Egypt.

Jacob on his Death-bed[2] very warmly reproached Reuben with the Crime he had committed with Bilhah; saying to him, Reuben, thou art my First-born; my Might, and the Beginning of my Strength, the Excellency of Dignity, and the Excellency of Power, unstable as Water: thou shalt not excell, because thou wentest up to thy Father's Bed; then defiledst thou it. He went up to my Couch. Moses before his Death said also to the Tribe of Reuben; Vivat Ruben, & non moriatur, & sit parvus in numero. Let Reuben live, and not die, but let his [The English reads, let not his Men be few.] Number be but small. And indeed the Tribe of Reuben was never very numerous, nor very considerable in Israel. They had their Inheritance beyond Jordan, in the most southern Part of this Canton, between the Brooks Arnon to the South, and Jazer to the North, having the Mountains of Gilead to the East, and Jordan to the West. The Time of Reuben's Death is unknown.

We read in the Apocryphal Book, call'd, The Testament of the twelve Patriarchs, that when Reuben was at the Age of thirty Years, he happen'd to see Bilhah, Rachel's Maid, and his Father Jacob's Concubine, as she was bathing her self naked in an open Place, and conceived such a violent Passion for her, that he could have no Rest till it was gratify'd. He found an Opportunity for it one Day, when Jacob was gone to visit his Father Isaac, and when his Brethren were at Gader, near Ephrata, or Beth-lehem. Then Reuben finding Bilhah to be drunk, and sleeping in her Tent in an indecent Posture, he indulged his Passion, and committed Incest with her. God revealed this presently to Jacob, by the Ministry of an Angel, and punish'd Reuben for it, by afflicting him with a Distemper, which held him for seven Months; and was so violent, that he had surely died of it, if his Father Jacob had not interceded for him by his Prayers. But Reuben at last was so fully sensible of his Fault, and conceived so great a Sorrow for it, that he impos'd on himself, by way of Penance, to eat neither Bread nor Meat, nor to drink any Wine, for the space of seven Years. But it is well known that this Book is of no Authority, being the Work of an Impostor, who would assert, as genuine, the spurious Book of Enoch, and other Jewish Traditions.

Revelation

REVELATION, in Greek, Apocalypsis. This Name is given in particular to a Book written by St. John, for which see Apocalypse before.

'Tis also call'd a Revelation, when God makes manifest any thing to Man in an extraordinary and supernatural Manner; whether by Dream, Vision, Ecstacy, or otherwise. St. Paul speaking of his Visions and Revelations, speaks of 'em in the third Person out of Modesty, and declares, that he could not tell whether he was in the Body, or out of the Body. Elsewhere he says, that he had not received his Gospel by the Ministry of Men, but by a particular Revelation from God; furthermore, that he did not go to Jerusalem after his Conversion by the meer Motion of his own 2 Cor. xii. 1, 7. [12.] Gal. i. [Gal. ii. 2.] Mind, but in Consequence of a Revelation that he had for that purpose.

Lastly, The Word Revelation is us'd to express the Manifestation of Jesus Christ to the Jews and Gentiles, [Luk. ii. 32.] the Manifestation of the Glory with which God will glorify his Elect, and his faithful Servants at the [Rom. viii. 19.] last Judgment; and the Declaration of his just Judgments, in his Conduct both towards the Elect, and towards the Reprobate.

[Rom. ii. 5.] I need not speak of the common Acceptation of the Latin Words Revelatio and Revelare, which signify barely a discovering of what was before conceal'd; as to reveal a Secret, revelare aurem, to tell in the Ear, to tell in secret; revelare turpitudinem, or ignominiam, to discover in one's near Relation what ought to be hid, not to approach her, not to marry her.

Revenge

REVENGE, as it includes a Sense of Sorrow and Trouble for the Injuries that are done to us, cannot by any means belong to God. None of his Creatures can disturb his Peace, or cause to him any Trouble or Resentment. Ultio doloris confessio est, says Seneca. Man has recourse to Revenge only because he is gall'd and [Senec. de ira. l. 3. c. 5.] sensible of Injuries. When therefore it is said in Scripture, that God revenges himself, it speaks after a popular and improper Manner. He vindicates the Injuries done to his Justice and his Majesty, and to the Order he has establish'd in the World, yet without any Emotion of Pleasure or Displeasure. He revenges the Injuries done to his Servants, because he is just, and because Order and Justice must be preserved. Men revenge themselves out of Weakness, because they are offended, because they are too much influenced by Self-love. A great Soul overlooks and despises Injuries; a Soul enlightened by Grace and Faith, leaves the Judgment and Revenge of them to God.

In the Old Testament God tolerated Revenge in certain Cases, to avoid greater Evils. For Example, he would have an Eye for an Eye, a Tooth for a [Exod. xxi. 24.] Tooth, &c. He permitted, or rather, he bore with it, that the Relations of a Man who had been kill'd might take Revenge of the Murderer. Propinquus occisi, statim ut invenerit eum, jugulabit. And if a wilful [Numb. xxxv. 16, 17,18,&c.] Murderer should take Sanctuary in a City of Refuge, he was taken away from thence, and given up into the Hands of the Kindred of the dead Man, for them to take their Revenge on him. Mittent seniores civitatis illius, & arripient eum de loco effugii, tradentque in manu proximi cujus sanguis effusus est, & morietur. [Deut. xix. 12.] The Relations thought it their Duty to pursue to Vengeance such Murderers, and the Hebrews call'd those Goel or Revengers, to whom this sort of Vengeance appertain'd.

But this Toleration was granted only to the Hardness of the Hearts of the Jews: Ad duritiem cordis vestri, as our Saviour tells them on the Occasion of Divorce. God had sufficiently declared himself, to make it understood by good Men, that Vengeance belong'd only to him. Mea est ultio, & ego retribuam. [Deuter. xxxiii. 35.] He forbids Malice and Revenge in express Terms; he will not allow us to keep any Resentment in our Hearts against our [Levit. xix. 17, 18.] Brethren. Non oderis fratrem tuum in corde tuo——Non quæras ultionem, nec memor eris injuriæ civium tuorum. And when God seems to have establish'd the Lex Talionis, he does not thereby allow of Revenge, but sets Limits to it. Non fomes, sed limes furoris est, says St. Austin. He does not intend to provoke [Aug. cont. Faust. l. 19. c. 25.] to Anger, but to stop the Progress and Consequences of it. Non ut id quod sopitum erat, hinc accenderetur; sed ne id quod ardebat, ultra extenderetur.

The Day of Revenge, or of Vengeance, sometimes expresses the last Day of Judgment, in which God will take Vengeance of all his Enemies; and sometimes the Day of Vengeance stands for the Punishment that God exercises upon his Enemies, when their Iniquities are arrived to their full Measure. See Exod. xxxii. 34. Isai. xxxiv. 8. lxi. 2. lxiii. 4. Luke xxi. 22.

Vengeance is often express'd in the Hebrew under the Word Consolation; and tho' St. Jerom has generally put the Word Revenge, yet he has not omitted sometimes to use the Words Comfort and Consolation, in the Sense of Revenge: For Example, Heu! [Isa. i. 24.] consolabor super hostibus meis, & vindicabor de inimicis meis. And in the Maccabees, [2 Macc. vii. 6.] Deus consolabitur in nobis quemadmodum in protestatione cantici declaravit Moyses & in servis suis consolabitur. And again in Isaiah, [Is. lvii. 18.] Vias ejus vidi——& reddidi consolationes ipsi. But the Examples are much more frequent in the Hebrew.

In Scripture sometimes Revenge is taken for the meer Action of Assault, or for the Injury committed against another; but yet is not without the Colour and Pretence of just Revenge. Thus Nebuchadnezzar swears by his Throne, that he would be revenged of all those foreign States that would not obey his Summons, and submit themselves to his [Judith i. 12. ii. 1.] Government; as if he had a Right of demanding this Submission from them. In the same Manner the Idumeans wreak'd their Revenge against Judah, Pro eo quod fecit Idumæa ultionem, ut se vindicaret de filiis [Ezek. xxv. 12.] Judah. By these Expressions we must understand, to satisfy their Hatred, to shew their Ill-will. When it is said, that God grants his Revenge to any one; Deus qui dat vindictas mihi; this intimates, either that God gives up his Enemies to him into his Hands, to take Vengeance of them; or that he punishes them himself for having afflicted his Servants, by some terrible Effects of his Justice.

Revenger

REVENGER, or Revenger of Blood. This Name is given in Scripture to him that had the Right, according to the Jewish Polity, of taking Revenge upon him that had kill'd one of his near Relations: Ultor sanguinis. If a Man had been guilty of Manslaughter, involuntarily and without design, he fled to a City of Refuge, and he was secured from the Pursuit of the Revenger of [Numb. xxxv. 25, 27.] Blood. Liberabitur innocens de ultoris manu. And when the Revenger shall pursue him hither to kill him, he shall not be deliver'd up into his Hands. Cumque ultor sanguinis [Josh. xx. 5. Gen. xxii. 24.] eum fuerit persecutus, non tradent in manus ejus.

Rezin

REZIN, or Rasin, King of Syria. He made an Alliance with Pekah Son of Remaliah King of Israel, to invade Ahaz King of Judah[1], and to make an Irruption into his Kingdom. The first Year of his Reign they laid Siege to Jerusalem: But not being able to take it, they laid Waste the Country round about, and went back again. The Year following they return'd into the Country of Judah, and the Lord deliver'd up to 'em the Army and the Country of Ahaz. After this, the two Confederate Princes separated their Armies; and that of Resin betook themselves to plunder every-where, and to carry away the Captives: This they did without finding any Resistance, and carry'd to Damascus the Captives and the Booty they had taken[2]. Pekah also, on his Part, kill'd in one Day and in one Battle an hundred and twenty thousand Men of Ahaz's Army, and took two hundred thousand Prisoners besides. But when they were brought into Samaria, the Prophet Oded caus'd them to be sent back into the Land of Judah.

About the same time, Rezin King of Syria assaulted Elath, or Ailat, upon the Red-Sea, and took it: He drove out the Jews from hence, and settled the Idumeans in their Room, who, probably, had engaged him to undertake this War. The Hebrew Text and the Vulgate seem to intimate,[3] that Rezin King of Syria made a Conquest of Elath for the Syrians. But the Tenour of the Discourse sufficiently shews, that it ought to be read, for the Idumeans; and that in the Hebrew it should be read Edom, instead of Aram. The Difference between these two Words, in the Original, is hardly to be perceived. Ahaz finding himself not strong enough to withstand Rezin and Pekah, apply'd himself to Tiglath-pilneser King of Assyria, and offer'd him a very large Sum of Money to come to his Assistance. Tiglath-pilneser first marched against Damascus, took the City, and put Rezin to Death: He also carry'd away his People to Kir, probably upon the River Cyrus in Iberia[4].

Rezon

REZON, or Razon, Son of Eliadah: He revolted from his Master Hadadezer King of Zobah[1], while David made War against him, and putting himself at the Head of a Band of Robbers, he began to make Excursions into the Country about Damascus: He at last became Master of this City, and was acknowledged as King there. It should seem that he could not settle here, 'till toward the End of Solomon's Reign; for David made a Conquest of Damascus, as well as of the rest of Syria; and Solomon kept up his Command over all the Provinces that David had brought into Subjection. But if Rezon did not rule at Damascus 'till towards the End of Solomon's Reign, he must have lived a very long Time: For, from David's War with Hadadezer, which happen'd at the Beginning of David's Reign, about the Year of the World 2960, to the End of Solomon's Reign, who died in 3029, must be sixtynine Years. Rezon must at least be five-and twenty or thirty Years of Age at the Time of these first Wars; since he was then a General of Hadadezer's Army, and presently became Head to a Troop of Freebooters: So that he must have been about ninety Years of Age when he began to govern at Damascus. If this should seem hardly credible, it may be allow'd, that Rezon might have reign'd at Damascus even in the Time of David and Solomon, but tributary to these Princes; and that he did not begin to revolt 'till towards the End of Solomon's Reign.

Rhamnus

RHAMNUS, a Sort of Thorn, or prickly Bush, call'd Buckthorn. The Word Rhamnus is found in three Places of the Vulgate. Judg. ix. 14. Miserunt omnia ligna ad rham-

[LXX. Ῥάμνος. Vulgate Rhemmum.] num : And ver. 15. Egrediatur ignis de rhamno: And, lastly, Psalm lviii. Priusquam intelligerent spinæ vestræ rhamnum. In all these three Places the Hebrew has Atad, which properly signifies a Bramble, or a Thorn. The Scripture speaks of it as of a thing very easily set on Fire, and which gives a very quick Flame. For Example, in the Passage of the Psalms now quoted; Priusquam intelligerent spinæ vestræ rhamnum, sicut viventes, sic in ira absorbet eos: That is, " Before they can " know that their Thorns are arrived to " the Strength of a Shrub, he will swallow " them, as it were alive, in his Anger. " But the Hebrew says, " Before that your " Kettles can have receiv'd Heat from " your lighted Thorns, the Wrath of " God, like a Whirlwind, shall overthrow " them. "[1]

Rhinoceros

RHINOCEROS, an Animal thus call'd, because he has an Horn upon his Snout. There are several Animals that have Horns also upon their Snouts, or in the Middle of their Foreheads, which have often been confounded together, and which are not yet well distinguish'd in the Natural History of Animals. See what is said hereafter under the Article Unicorn. The Name Rhinoceros is found in the Vulgate in these Places, Numb. xxiii. 22. & xxiv. 8. Deut. xxxiii. 17. Job xxxix. 9, 10. The Hebrew Word Reem is render'd [Rheem. Monoceros, or Rhinoceros.] in the Septuagint promiscuously by Monoceros, Unicornis, or Rhinoceros.

The Arabians and Persians name that Animal Kerkhedan, which the Hebrews call Rehem, and we Rhinoceros. It is chiefly found in the Isle of Rami in the Indian Sea, [D'Herbelot. Bibl. Orient. p. 708, 959.] distant three Days sail from the Island of Serendib. The Kerkhedan is smaller than the Elephant, but larger than the Buffalo. It has a Bunch under its Belly like unto what the Camels have upon their Backs. It has a very thick Horn upon its Snout, which the Indian Kings make use of at Table; for it sweats, at the Approach of any Kind of Poison whatever. This Horn being cloven through the middle, exhibits the Figure of a Man drawn with white Lines, among which are also seen the Figures of Birds.

Father le Compte says, that the Rhinoceros is of the Length of an Elephant ; but its Legs are shorter, and its Hoofs are cloven. 'Tis one of the most singular Creatures in the World. It has something like a Boar, except that it is much larger ; its Feet are thicker, and its whole Body more unweildy : Its Skin is cover'd all over with blackish Scales, large and thick, which are extremely hard, and divided into little Squares or Knobs a little raised above the Skin, something like that of a Crocodile. Its Legs appear as if they had Boots on ; and its Head as if cover'd behind with a kind of flat Hood, which makes the Portuguese name it The Monk of the Indies.

Its Head is thick ; its Mouth not wide ; its Muzzle long, and arm'd with a thick and long Horn ; which makes it terrible even to the very Tygers, to the Buffaloes, and the Elephants. But what is still more wonderful in this Animal, is its Tongue, which Nature has cover'd with so hard a Membrane, that it differs but little from a File : Thus it fleas every thing that it licks, and eats with great Facility the rough Branches of Trees, tho' defended all round with sharp Thorns : It bends them easily upon its Tongue, and breaks them in its Mouth without any Trouble. Festus says, that it is hunted for the sake of its Skin, which is very hard and impenetrable, being cover'd all over with Scales, and about four Fingers thick : They make Suits of Armour of it, and Bucklers, as also Shares for the Plough.

Rhinocolura

RHINOCOLURA, or Rhinocorura ; but the first Reading is the most correct. This Word signifies the cutting of the Nostrils, a because the ancient Inhabitants [Diodor. Sicul. l. 1. c. 60.] of this City were thus mutilated. Diodorus Siculus relates the Matter thus : Actisarus King of Ethiopia, being desirous to clear his Kingdom of the Robbers that very much infested it, and yet not being willing to put them to Death, he apprehended as many of them as he could, slit their Noses, and banish'd them into a desart and barren Place, where they built them a City, which, because of their Slit-Noses, was call'd [Senec. de Ira, l. 3. c. 20.] Rhinocolura. Seneca says, it was a King of Persia, probably Cambyses, who made them undergo this ignominious Punishment.

Near the City of Rhinocolura there is a River which several have taken to be the [Josh. xv. 4. 47. Isai. xxvii. 12. 1 Samuel xxx. 9, 10, 21. Amos vi. 14.] River of Egypt. But we take the River of Egypt to be no other than the Nile ; and the Stream that runs near Rhinocolura, we think to be the Brook Besor, or the River of the Wilderness, which is spoke of elsewhere [Hieron. in Vita S. Hilar.] in the Scripture. This City of Rhinocolura is ascribed sometimes to Syria, and sometimes to Palestine, to which indeed it formerly belong'd, and sometimes to Egypt[1], upon which it afterwards depended. Its Bishop was a Suffragan of Pelusium. 'Tis said,[2] it was at Rhinocolura that the World was divided by Noah among his three Sons. 'Tis unknown what the ancient Name of Rhinocolura was, I mean the Hebrew Name that this Place was known by, before the Grecians gave it the Name of Rhinocolura, and before the Story of the Slit-Noses was invented. St. Hilarion, a famous Anchorite or Hermit of this Country, dwelt a long time at Flacidia a City in the Neighbourhood of Rhinocolura.

Rhoda

RHODA, a young Maid who dwelt in the House of Mary the Mother of John- Mark, who coming to open the Door to a Person that knocked at it, was so transported with Joy, at hearing Peter's Voice, whom she thought to be in Prison, and who had but just then been miraculously deliver'd from it by an Angel[1], that, without staying to open the Door, she ran back to acquaint the Believers with it, who were then assembled in the House. They look'd upon her as visionary or mad, but she still maintain'd she heard Peter's Voice. The Apostle continuing still to knock, she went back, and open'd the Door to him. We know no other Circumstance of the Life of Rhoda ; for, as to her Exile and Martyrdom, which, 'tis pretended, she suffer'd in the Isle of Sardinia[2], we place them in the Number of Apocryphal Stories.

Rhodes

RHODES, an Island and famous City of the Archipelago, being an hundred thousand Paces in Compass. Its ancient Name was Asteria, Ophiusa, and Etheria. The Name of Rodes, which in Greek signifies a Rose, came either from the Nymph Rhodia, who was beloved by Apollo, and changed into a Rose ; or rather, from the great Quantity and Beauty of the Roses that are to be seen there. This City is chiefly famous for its Brazen Colossus, which was one hundred and five Feet high, and was made by Chares of Lyndus : It continued perfect only fifty-six Years, being thrown down by an Earthquake, under the Reign of Ptolemy III. surnamed Euergetes, King of Egypt, who began to reign in the Year of the World 3758, before the Vulgar Era 244. The Saracens entirely broke it to Pieces, under the Reign of Constans II. and 'tis said, they loaded nine hundred Camels with the Brass that it afforded : It was twelve Years in making, and three hundred Talents were laid out upon it. 'Tis said, this Colossus was so large, that no[1] one could grasp its Thumb with his Arms. The Inside of this great Mass was filled up with large Stones, that being thus made heavy, the Winds and Tempests might not have Power to overset it. It was set up in the Harbour of Rhodes, having its two Legs extended, and fix'd upon two Pedestals, so that when Ships came into the Harbour, they might easily pass between. [Suidas, Glycas, Zomar. Eustath.] Some pretend, that the Rhodians were the Colossians, to whom St. Paul address'd one of his Epistles: But this Opinion is very ill founded. See COLOSSIANS. When St. Paul went to Jerusalem, in the Year of Christ 58, he went from Miletus to Coos, [Acts xxi. 1.] from Coos to the Isle of Rhodes, and from thence to Patara in Lycia.

The Septuagint, in Gen. x. 4. put the Rhodians among the Children of Javan. They, probably, read Rhodanim, instead of Dodanim, in the Hebrew[2]. The Samaritan Text reads also Rhodanim in the same Place; and the Hebrew reads it also in the First Book of the Chronicles. Eusebius, St. Jerom, and Isidore, follow the Septuagint, and think the Isle of Rhodes to have been peopled by the Rhodanim, or the Posterity of Javan. Bochart does not reject that Reading that exhibits Rhodanim; but he maintains, that this Word cannot signify the Rhodians in this Place, who are too modern to have been planted there by any immediate Son of Javan: He thinks that, in this Place, Moses rather intended to mark out the People of the Gauls, which are upon the Mediterranean, towards the Mouth of the Rhone, near Marseilles, where we find a Canton call'd Rhodanusia, and a City of the same Name.

Also the Septuagint, upon Ezekiel,[3] have translated the Children of the Rhodians, instead of the Children of Dedan, as it is read in the Hebrew. Probably, they read the Children of Redan, or Rodan; but in Gen. x. 7. they read Dedan, as the Hebrew. In the Hebrew Text nothing is easier than to confound the Daleth and the Resh. If the Text of Genesis did not determine us to Dedan, we might admit the Rhodians in this Passage of Ezekiel; for, in the Time of this Prophet, it is very probable that this Island was well-peopled.

RHODIUM, or Rhodiense Numisma. This Name is given, by the Learned, to two Silver Medals, which are preserved, one in the Treasury of the Church of the Holy Cross in Jerusalem in the City of Paris, and the other in that of St. John of Lateran at Rome, and are pretended to be such as were given to Judas, as the Price of our Saviour, when this Traytor sold him to the Jews. These Medals are certainly some of the ancient Money of Rhodes, as is seen by the Inscription Rhodion, and the Image of a Rose on one Side, and on the other Side the Head of the Colossus, or of the Sun. Goltzius and Antoninus Piso have had the same Medals in their Hands, and have caused them to be engraved. 'Tis not impossible but, by Chance, they may have given some Pieces of this Money to Judas, which might then be still current in the Empire, by the Consent of the Romans; but it is much more probable, that Judas was paid in the Current Money of the Country, which was the Roman Money of the Emperor then reigning, [Mat. xxii. 20, 21.] or of some of his Predecessors. Riblah RIBLAH, Rebla, Riblata, or Reblata, a City of Syria, in the Country of Emath. Its Situation is unknown. St. Jerom[1] has taken it for Antiochia of Syria, or for the Country of Emath or Emmas, which was still, in his Time, the first Stage of those that travelled from Syria into Mesopotamia. We know not what was the ancient Name of the City of Antioch; but we know the Name it bore after the Reign of the Seleucidæ, and what it still bears, is a new Name. St. Jerom had, probably, some particular Knowledge of this Matter, since he assures us so positively, and in so many Places, that the ancient Riblah was Antioch.

Yet however, this lies under great Difficulties. Antioch was at a good Distance from Emesa, or Emath; it was not upon the Road from Judea to Mesopotamia. When Moses describes the Eastern Limits of the Land of [Numbers xxxiv. 10, 11, 12.] Promise, he says, And ye shall point out your East Border from Hazar-enan to Shepham. And the Coast shall go down from Shepham to Riblah, on the East-side of Ain; and the Border shall descend, and shall reach unto the Side of the Sea of Chinnereth, (or, of Tiberias) Eastward. And the Border shall go down to Jordan; and the Goings-out of it shall be at the Salt-sea (or, the Dead-sea). The Name of Daphne is not found in the Hebrew; but the Chaldee Paraphrasts and St. Jerom explain the Fountain of Riblah by that of Daphne, near to Antioch. Ezekiel puts the Northern Bounds of the Land of Promise from the Mediterranean-Sea to Hazar-enan, or Atrium Enan. He says, that Emath is the City that limits the Holy Land towards the North; and that its Southern Limits go through the Middle of Auran, Damascus, and the Mountains of Gilead. He makes no mention of Riblah; but he marks out Emath, in the Territory of which Riblah was situate.

The Habitation of Riblah was one of the most agreeable of all Syria; whence it was that the Kings of Babylon were so willing to make their Abode there. Pharaoh Necho King of Egypt made a Stop there, at his Return [2 Kings xxiii. 33.] from the Expedition of Carchemish; and having made Jehoahaz King of Judah to come thither to him, he deprived him of the Royal Dignity, and put Jehoiakim in his Place. Nebuchadnezzar King of Babylon continued at Riblah, while his General Nebuzaradan laid Siege to Jerusalem; and after [2 Kings xxv. 6, 20, 21. Jer. xxix. 5. & lii. 9.] the Reduction of this Place, King Zedekiah and the rest of the Prisoners were brought to him to Riblah, where Nebuchadnezzar caus'd Zedekiah's Eyes to be put out, and made his Sons and principal Officers to be put to Death in the Presence of this unfortunate Prince.

Right-Hand

RIGHT-HAND. The Right-hand denotes Power, Strength. The Scripture generally imputes to God's Right-hand, all the [Exod. xv. 6.] Effects of his Omnipotence. Dextra tua, Domine, magnificata est: Dextra tua, Domine, percussit inimicum. See Psal. xx. 9. xliii. 4. & alibi passim.

To sit down at the Right-hand of God, is generally put for obtaining an Equality of Glory and Power. The Son of God is often represented as sitting at the Right-hand of his heavenly Father. Dixit dominus domino [Psal. cix. 1. Mat. xxvi. 64. Colos. iii. Hebr. i. 3. & x. 12, &c. 1 Samuel xxiii. 19, 24.] meo, Sede à dextris meis. And, Hereafter shall ye see the Son of Man sitting on the Right-hand of Power, and coming in the Clouds of Heaven.

The Right-hand commonly denotes the South, as the Left-hand denotes the North. For the Hebrews speak of the Quarters of the World in respect of themselves, having their Faces turn'd towards the East, their Backs to the West, their Right-hands to the South, and their Left to the North. Thus Kedem, which signifies before, stands also for the East; and Achor, which signifies behind, marks out the West; Jamin, the Right-hand, is the South; and Shemol, the Left-hand, is the North. For Example; Doth not David hide himself with us in strong Holds in the Wood, in the Hill of Hachilah, which is on the South of Jeshimen? Heb. on the Right-hand of Jeshimen.

[Psal. cviii. 6. Zech. iii. 1.] The Accuser was commonly at the Right -hand of the Accused; as for Example, Diabolus stet à dextris ejus. And in Zechariah, the Devil was at the Right-hand of the High-priest Jeshua to accuse him. Satan stabat à dextris ejus, ut adversaretur ei.

[Psal. xvi. 8. Psal. cix. 31.] Often, in a quite contrary Sense, to be at any one's Right-hand, signifies to defend, to protect, to support him. As for Example: I have set the Lord always before me; because he is at my Right-hand, I shall not be moved. And elsewhere, For he shall stand at the Right-hand of the Poor, to save him from those that condemn his Soul.

To depart from the Law of God, neither to the Right-hand, nor to the left, is a frequent Scripture Expression, the Meaning of which is, that we must not depart from it at all, neither by attempting to go beyond it, and doing more than it requires, nor by doing less. But we must observe it closely, constantly, and invariably, as a Traveller, who does not go out of his Way, either to the right or to the left.

Our Saviour, in the Gospel, to shew with what Privacy we should do good Works, [Mat. vi. 5.] says; That our Left-hand should not know what our Right-hand does. Above all things we should avoid Vanity and Ostentation in all the Good we undertake to do.

[Exodus xxxv. 22. Numbers xxxi. 50.] Dextralia, or Dextraliola, are Bracelets with which Men, as well as Women, us'd to dress themselves. It was of these Bracelets that Moses spoke, when he enjoin'd the Israelites to have always the Law of God in their Minds; and that it should [Ex. xiii. 9.] be for a Sign unto thee upon thine Hand, as a Seal fastned to their Ring or Bracelet. Compare this Passage with Ecclus. xlix. 13. Quomodo amplificemus Zerobabel? Nam & ipse quasi signum in dextra manu.

The Right and Left-hand joined together signify on this Side, or that Side, indifferently. If you go to the Right, I will go to the Left. Turn not aside from the Commandments of God, neither to the Right or Left; or do not turn from them at all. David's Archers are commended, [1 Chron. xii. 2.] who could use their Sling as well with their Left-hands as Right; they were Ambidexters. [Jonah iii. 11.] In Jonah it is said, that there were above six-score thousand Persons in Nineveh, who could not distinguish between their Right and Left-hands. This may be understood as the former Passage, of Persons that could make use of either Hand indifferently, to fight with; but it is generally explain'd of Infants, who knew not yet any Distinction of Right and Left-hands, as a Token of their Innocence.

To give the Hand, dare dexteram, is a Mark of Society and Friendship. St. Paul says, that James, Cephas, and John, gave him the Right-hand. Dexteras dederunt mihi & Barnabæ societatis. In the Books of the Maccabees this Expression recurs very often. Demus dexteras hominibus. Postulaverunt ab eo dexteras. Dexteram dedit, accepit, abiit.

In taking an Oath they lifted up their [Is. lxii. 8.] Right-hand. Juravit Dominus in dexterâ suâ.

Rings

[1 Kings xxi. 8.] RINGS. The Antiquity of Rings is known from Scripture and profane Authors. [Gen. xxxviii. 18.] Judah left his Ring with Tamar. When Pharaoh committed the Government of all Egypt to Joseph, he took his [Gen. xli. 42.] Ring from his Finger, and gave it to Joseph. After the Victory that the Israelites obtained over the Midianites, they offer'd to the Lord the Rings, the Bracelets, and the golden Necklaces, that [Numb. xxxi. 50.] they had taken from the Enemy. The Israelitish Women wore Rings, not only on their Fingers, but also in their Nostrils and their Ears. St. James distinguishes a Man of Wealth and Dignity by the Ring of [James ii. 2. Vir aureum annulum habens, &c. Luke xv. 22. Jer. xxii. 24.] Gold that he wore on his Finger. At the Return of the prodigal Son, his Father orders him to be dress'd in a new Suit of Cloaths, and to have a Ring put upon his Finger. When the Lord threatned King Jeconiah with the utmost Effects of his Anger, he tells him, that tho' he were the Signet or Ring upon his Finger, yet he should be torn off.

The Ring was us'd chiefly to seal with, and the Scripture generally puts it in the Hands of Princes and great Persons; as the King of Egypt, Joseph, Ahaz, Jezabel, King Ahasuerus, his favourite Haman, [Esther iii. 10, &c. Dan. vi. 17.] Mordecai, who succeeded Haman in his Dignity, King Darius. The Patents and Orders of these Princes were sealed with their Rings or Signets, and it was this that [Bibliot. Orient. titul. Solyman, p. 819.] secured to 'em their Authority and Respect.

The Ring was one of the Marks of Sovereign Authority. We have already observed, that Pharaoh gave his Ring to Joseph, as a Token of that Authority with which he invested him, and which he intended [Quint. Curt. l. x. c. 5.] he should exercise over all his People. When Alexander the Great gave his Ring to Perdiccas, this was understood as [1 Macc. vi. 15.] nominating him to be his Successor. When Antiochus Epiphanes was at the Point of Death, he committed to Philip, one of his Friends, his Diadem, his Royal Cloak, and his Ring, that he might give them to his Son and Successor young Antiochus. Augustus being very sick of a Distemper which he thought mortal, he gave his [Xiphilin. in Aug.] Ring to Agrippa, as to a Friend of the greatest Integrity.

We read of certain magical Rings, to which several extraordinary Effects were ascribed, either as Preservatives against certain Evils, or for procuring certain Advantages and good Fortune. The Orientals, for Example, relate a thousand things of a pretended Ring of Solomon's, which communicated to him a wonderful Sagacity, and caus'd him to be esteem'd the wisest and happiest of Kings. They tell us, that one Day this Prince put off his Ring to go into a Bath, when an infernal Fury Fury stole it from him, and threw it into the Sea. Upon this Accident Solomon would not sit upon his Throne for forty Days, not thinking himself able to govern as he should, when he was depriv'd of so necessary an Assistant. But at last he recover'd his Ring again, by the Means of a Fish that had swallow'd it, and which happen'd to be served up at his Table.

The Rings and Pendants for the Ears, so frequent in Palestine and Africa, were also probably superstitious Rings, Talismans, or Phylacteries, to which certain supernatural Effects were imputed. When Jacob arrived at the Land of Canaan, at his Return from [Gen. xxxv. 4.] Mesopotamia, he gave Orders to his People to put into his Custody, all the strange Gods which were in their Hand, and all their Ear-rings which were in their Ears. This seems to insinuate, that those strange Gods were superstitious or magical Figures, engraven upon their Rings, their Bracelets, and the Pendants in their Ears. Or else, according to some Commentators, that these Rings and Pendants were upon the Hands, and in the Ears of these false Gods. St. Austin inveighs very pathetically against these Phylacteries of false Gods, which his Countrymen the Africans fastened to their [Aug. qu. cxi.inGen.] Ears, and to which they imputed a thousand supernatural and superstitious Vertues; intending by this kind of Ornament, not so much to dress themselves out to please Men, as to please and serve Dæmons. Execranda superstitio ligaturarum, [Aug. Ep. ad Possidium. 73.] in quibus etiam in aures virorum in summis ex una parte auriculis suspensæ deputantur; non ad placendum hominibus, sed ad serviendum dæmonibus, adhibetur.

Riphath

[Gen. x. 3. ריפ.ת Riphat. 1 Chron. i. 6. דיפ.ת Diphat.] RIPHATH, or Riphat, second Son of Gomer, and Grandson of Japhet. He is call'd Diphath in the Chronicles. The Resemblance of the two Hebrew Letters ר*Resh* and ד*Daleth* is so much, that they are very often confounded. The Learned are not agreed about the Country that was peopled by the Descendants of Riphath. The Chaldee and Arabick take it for France; Eusebius for the Country of the Sauromatæ; the Chronicon Alexandrinum for that of the Garamantæ; Josephus for Paphlagonia [Mela l. 1.] . Mela assures us, that antiently the People of this Province were call'd Riphatæi, or Riphaces; and in Bithynia, bordering upon Paphlagonia, may be found the River Rhebeus, a People call'd Rhebantes, and a Canton of the same Name. These Reasons have prevail'd with Bochart to believe, that Riphath peopled Paphlagonia. Others think he peopled the Montes Riphei, and this Opinion seems the most reasonable to us, because the other Sons of Gomer

River

RIVER. The Hebrews give the Name of the River, without any Addition, sometimes to the Nile, sometimes to the Euphrates, and sometimes to Jordan. 'Tis the Tenour of the Discourse that must determine the Sense of this uncertain and indeterminate Way of Speaking. They give also the Name of River to Brooks and Rivulets that are not very considerable.

Here follows a List of the principal Rivers or Brooks of Palestine.

The Jordan. The Arnon, } beyond Jordan.

The Jabok, The Karith, The Sorek. The Beser. The Kishon. The Belus. The Brook of Jezreel, which falls into the Jordan, near Scythopolis.

The Eleuthera. The Sabbation. The Brook of Reeds, or of Kannah. The Barrady, otherwise Abanah and Pharphar, Rivers of Damascus.

All these Rivers may be seen under their proper Articles, or under the Cities to which they belong.

[Jonah ii. 4.] The Name of River is sometimes given to the Sea; for Example, Jonah says, He found himself surrounded by the Rivers, that is, by the Waters of the Sea. And Habakkuk, speaking of the Passage [Habak. iii. 8, 9.] through the Red Sea, says, That the Lord divided the Waters of the Rivers. And the [Psal. lxxiv. 15. Ps. xxiv. 2.] Psalmist, That the Lord dried up the rapid Rivers, or the Rivers of Strength. And elsewhere, That the Lord had founded the Earth upon the Sea, and established it upon the Rivers: Which signifies the same in both Places. Herodotus relates,[1] that when King Xerxes cast Bonds into the Hellespont, and order'd it to be whip'd, he said to it: 'Tis with good Reason that no Body offers Sacrifices to thee, O thou deceitful and turbulent River.

Herodot. l. 7. ὡς ἐόντι κὺ δολερῷ τε κὺ

Rizpah

RIZPAH, or Respha, the Daughter of Aiah, the Concubine, or Wife of the second degree, to King Saul. This Prince having put to Death a great Number of the Gi- beonites, beonites, for what Reason, or upon what [2 Sam. xxi. 1, 2, 3, &c.] Occasion is not known; God, to punish this Massacre, sent a great Famine into the Land of Israel,[1] which held for three Years. David, who then reign'd, being acquainted by the Oracle of the Lord, that this Famine was sent as a Punishment for the Cruelty of Saul to the Gibeonites, caus'd them to come to him, and said to them; “What can I do to repair the “Injury that has been done you, that you “may bless the Lord's Inheritance?” They answer'd him; “Let seven of the “Children or Grand-children of Saul be “deliver'd to us, and we will hang them “up, to appease the Anger of the Lord.” Then David gave them up Armoni and Mephibosheth, two Sons that Saul had by Rizpah, the Daughter of Aiah; and also five Sons that Michal, the Daughter of Saul, had by Adriel, the Son of Barzillai; or rather by Phaltiel. These they hung up upon the Mountain near to Gibeah, at the beginning [Vid. 1 Sam. xxv. 43.] of Barley-Harvest.

Then Rizpah the Daughter of Aiah took a Sackcloth and spread it upon the Rock; and continued there from the beginning of Harvest, till the Waters of the Heavens fell down upon them, or till the Lord sent his Rain upon the Earth, and restored it to its former Fertility. She hinder'd the Birds from tearing the Bodies by Day, and the ravenous Beasts from devouring them by Night. When this Action of Rizpah was related to David, he was moved with Compassion, and sent to fetch the Bones of Saul and Jonathan, which were at Jabesh-gilead, brought them to Gibeah, and put them in the Tomb of Kish, the Father of Saul; together with the Bones of the seven Men that had been executed by the Gibeonites.

On this Occasion they acted contrary to [Deut. xxi. 23.] the Law of Deuteronomy, which orders that they should take the Bodies down from the Cross or Gibbit, before the setting of the Sun. Non permanebit cadaver ejus in ligno; sed in eadem die sepelietur. But these unhappy Remains of the Family of Saul were left there, probably from the beginning of the Spring to Autumn: Whether it was because the Crime of their Father deserved this severe Treatment, or because the Gibeonites, being only Proselytes of Habitation, were not obliged to the Observation of this Law of Moses. Lastly, Whereas God had order'd David to give Satisfaction to the Gibeonites, this Prince thought fit to leave the Management of it to themselves.

A long Time before what we have now related, and soon after the Death of Saul,[2] Abner, the General of his Army, fell in Love with Rizpah, and took her for Wife, or, at least, us'd her as such. It was thought a heinous Crime, according to the Notions of those People, for a Subject to meddle with one of the Wives of a King. Ishbosheth, the Son of Saul, who reign'd at Mahanaim beyond Jordan, and who was supported in his regal State, only by the Credit of Abner's Valour, resented this as a great Injury, and upbraided him with daring to approach his Father's Concubine. [2 Sam. iii. 7, 1. 1 Sam. xxiv. 2, 4, 5.] Abner was so nettled at this Reproach, that from that Minute he vow'd the Ruin of Ishbosheth, and enter'd into a League with David, to bring into his Interest all those that had adhered to Ishbosheth. This is all we are told about Rizpah.

Rock

ROCK. Palestine being a mountainous Country, had also many Rocks; which Rocks made Part of the Strength of the Country, for in Times of Danger they retired to them, where they found a Refuge against any sudden Irruptions of the Enemy. When the Benjamites were overcome and almost exterminated by the Israelites of the other Tribes, they secured themselves [Judg. xx. 47. Jud. xv. 8. 2 Sam. xxiii. 25, 28. xxii. 1.] in the Rock of Rimmon. Samson kept Garison in the Rock Etam. When David was persecuted by Saul, he often concealed himself in Caverns made in a Rock; for Example, at Maon, at Adullam, at En-gedi, where there was a Cave of a vast Extent, in which David and his People hid themselves, and wherein Saul enter'd and continued for some Time, without discovering them. Joshua shut up five Kings of the Canaanites, whom he had [Josh. x. 16, 17, &c. Judg. vi. 2. Hieronym. Numb. xxiv. 21. Bellon. observat. l. 2. c. 61.] subdued, in the Cave of Makkedah. During the Oppression that the Children of Israel suffer'd from the Midianites, they were forced to hide themselves in the Cavities of the Rocks. St. Jerome says, that the southern Parts of Judah are full of Caves under Ground, and of Caverns in the Mountains, to which the People retired in Time of Danger. The Kenites dwelt in the hollow Places of the Rocks. Even at this Day, the Villages of this Country are subterraneous, or in the Rocks. Josephus in several places speaks of hollow Rocks, where Thieves and Robbers had their Haunts; and Travellers still find a great Number of them in Palestine, and the Provinces adjoining to it.

[Ps. xviii. 2.] The Name of Rock is also given to God, by way of Metaphor, because God is the Strength, the Refuge, and the Azylum of Israel; as the Rocks were of those Places, whither the People retired in case of an unforeseen Attack or Irruption of the Enemy. The Lord is my Rock, and my Fortress, and my Deliverer: My God, my Strength, in whom I will trust, my Buckler, [Psal. lxi. 2, 3. Psal. lxxi. 3. Psal. xciv. 22.] and the Horn of my Salvation, and my high Tower. Who is a Rock, save our God? Be thou my strong Rock, for an House of Defence to save me. For thou art my Rock, and my Fortress. Then he forsook God which made him, and lightly esteemed the Rock of his Salvation. Of the Rock that begat thee thou art unmindful, and hast forgotten God that formed thee. How should one chase a Thousand, and two put ten Thousand to Flight, except their Rock had sold them, and the Lord had shut them up? For their Rock is not as our Rock, even our Enemies themselves being Judges. And so of others; for this way of speaking is very common in the Hebrew Text.

The Hebrews also give in general the Name of Rock to all Places of Retreat and Security, to which they retire. Lead me to the Rock that is higher than I. For thou hast been a Shelter for me, and a strong Tower from the Enemy. Be thou to me for a Rock of Habitation, whereunto I may continually resort: Thou hast given Commandment to save me, for thou art my Rock and my Fortress. But the Lord is my Defence, and my God is the Rock of my Refuge.

The Word Rock or Stone is also used to signify Knives; for they made use of Knives of Stone or Flint in Circumcision. [Ex. iv. 25. Josh. v. 2, 3.] Zipporah took a sharp Stone, and cut off the Foreskin of her Son. At that Time the Lord said unto Joshua, make thee sharp Knives, (or Knives of Flint) and circumcise again the Children of Israel a second time. And Joshua made him sharp Knives, and circumcised the Children of Israel, at the Hill of the Fore-skins.

[Deut. viii. 9. Isai. li. 1. Deut. xxxii. 13.] Moses says, that the Lord had settled his People in a high Country, and made him to suck Honey out of the Rock, and Oyl out of the flinty Rock. That is, he brought them out of Egypt, which was a flat Country, and subject to Inundations, and placed them in Palestine, which was a mountainous Country of great Fertility, the Hills of which were loaded with Vines and Olive-trees; and of which the very Rocks were fill'd with Swarms of Bees, whose Honey did not add a little to the Happiness of the Climate. He says in another Place, Palestine was a Land whose Stones were Iron, and out of whose Hills thou mayst dig Brass. That is, it abounded with good Mines of Iron and Brass.

Rock is also us'd for a Quarry, and in a figurative Sense, for the Patriarch of a Nation, or the first Father, who is, as it were, the Quarry from whom the Men of that Nation have proceeded. For Example, Look unto the Rock whence ye are hewn, and to the Hole of the Pit whence ye are digged. Look unto Abraham your Father, and unto Sarah that bare you. And Moses, [ii. 31. Psal. xxxi. 2, 3. Deut. xxxii. 15, 18, 30, 31. Deut. xxxii. 18. Numb. xxi. 14, 15.] speaking to the Jews, says; Of the Rock that begat thee thou art unmindful; that is, of the Quarry from whence thou wast taken.

Mention is made in Scripture of several Rocks. As, for Example,

The Rocks of Arnon: Probably these were Rocks upon the Banks of the River or Brook Arnon, chiefly at the Place where the Israelites pass'd over it. They us'd to say, as it were by an antient Proverb, that the Lord had broke down or made plain the Rocks of Arnon, to make a Passage for his People. Scopuli torrentium inclinati sunt.

The Rocks Bozez and Seneh, 1 Sam. xiv. 4. They were between Michmash and Gibeah.

Sela-hammah-lekoth, or the Rock of [1 Sam. xxviii. 21.] Divisions. This was in the Desart of Maon, and had this Name given it, because Saul was here obliged to quit his Pursuit after David, and to return to the Assistance of his Country, which was then invaded by the Philistines.

[Ex. xvii. 6. Ex. xxxiii. 21, 22, 23. xxxiv. 6, 7. 1 Kings xix. 10, 11, 12, &c. Judg. vii. 25. Isa. x. 26.] The Rock of Horeb. There are three Rocks by this Name, distinctly mark'd out in Scripture. The first is that from whence Moses caus'd the Waters to gush out, to supply the Necessities of the People, when they were encamped at Rephidim. The second is that on the Top of Mount Horeb, where God manifested a Part of his Glory to Moses, and afterwards to Elijah. The third is that where Oreb, the Prince of the Midianites, was put to Death. But this latter is rather written Oreb, whereas the other two are written Horeb.

The Rock Adullam; it was in the Neighbourhood of the City of this Name, in the Tribe of Judah.

[Judg. xv. 8, 11, 13.] The Rock Etam; probably near the City of this Name, mark'd in the Greek. Josh. xv. 60. 1 Chron. iv. 32. 2 Chron. xi. 6. They were in the Tribe of Judah; to the South of Jerusalem. See ETAM.

The Rock Jektiel. This, according to several Interpreters, is the same as Petra, the capital City of Arabia Petrea. See PETRA and JEKTIEL.

The Rock or Stone of Zoheleth, 1 Kings i. 9. See ZOHELETH.

The Rock of the Waters of Meribah, or Strife. This is the Rock where the Faith of Moses fail'd, and where the Scripture reproaches him with having hesitated in his Heart, and did not honour God as he ought, before the Children of Israel. Num. xx. 10, 11. It had the Name of the Rock of Strife given to it, and to the Waters, the Waters of Strife, because of the Murmurings of the Children of Israel, and their Sedition against Moses.

If there are still any other considerable Rocks, they may be seen under their proper per Articles, or under the Articles of those Cities, in whose Neighbourhood they were situated.

Rod

ROD, Virga. This Word is us'd, sometimes for the Branches of a Tree: And Jacob took him Rods of green Poplar, and of [Gen. xxx. 37. Ex. iv. 17, 20. Lev. xxvii. 32.] the Hasel and Chesnut-tree. Sometimes for a Staff or Wand: And thou shalt take this Rod in thine Hand, wherewith thou shalt do Signs. And Moses took the Rod of God in his Hand. Or for a Shepherd's Crook: And concerning the Tythe of the Herd, or of the Flock, even of whatsoever passeth under the Rod; the tenth shall be holy unto the Lord. Or for a Rod, properly so call'd, which God makes use of to correct Men: If he commit Iniquity, I will chasten him with the Rod [2 Sam. vii. 14. Job ix. 34. Esth. iv. 11. Psal. xlv. 6. Heb. i. 8. Psal. ii. 9. Rev. ii. 27. xii. 5. xix. 15. Numb. xxiv. 17. Is. xi. Ps. lxxiv. 2. Jer. x. 16.] of Men, and with the Stripes of the Children of Men. Let him take his Rod away from me. Sometimes it is taken for a royal Scepter: Auream virgam ad eam tetendit. Virga æquitatis, virga regni tui. The Empire of the Messiah is sometimes represented by a Rod of Iron, to shew its Power and its Might. Thou shalt break them with a Rod of Iron. Elsewhere Virga is put for a young Sprout or Branch, and to point out the miraculous Birth of the Messiah, who was to proceed from a Virgin Mother. Consurget virga de Israel. There shall come a Star out of Jacob, and a Scepter (or Rod) shall rise out of Israel. And Isaiah says; There shall come forth a Rod out of the Stem of Jesse, and a Branch shall grow out of his Roots. Lastly, Rod is sometimes put to signify a Tribe, or a People; Remember thy Congregation which thou hast purchased of old, the Rod of thine Inheritance which thou hast redeemed. Israel is the Rod of his Inheritance. In Jeremiah, the watchful Rod (Virgam vigilantem ego video. Jerem. i. 11. Vulgat.) according to the Hebrew, stands for a Branch or Rod of an Almond-tree. This Tree flourishes before any other, and the Lord intended to mark out Nebuchadnezzar by it, who was just then ready to pour out all his Forces upon Judea.

[Exod. iv. 2, 3, &c.] The Rod of Moses, is that which God gave him, or rather, it was the Staff or Wand that Moses generally made use of for driving his Flock, and which God commanded him to take along with him, for the working of those Miracles he was to perform before Pharaoh, and before all his People. The Lord said unto him, What is that in thine Hand? And he said, A Rod. And he said, Cast it on the Ground, and it became a Serpent. And Moses fled from before it. And the Lord said unto Moses; Put forth thine Hand, and take it by the Tail. And he put forth his Hand and caught it; and it became a Rod in his Hand. This Rod Moses kept as long as he lived, and it became the Instrument of performing a great Number of Miracles, which he wrought through the Course of his Life: The Scripture does not inform us what became of it after his Death; it is probable that it devolved to Joshua, as Moses's Successor in the Government of the People: But of this there is no Proof. The Musulmen say, that it was laid up in the Ark of the Covenant; but they confound it with that of Aaron.

The Rabbins relate many wonderful things of this famous Rod. They say, it was first created by God for the Use of Adam; that it came by Succession to Abraham, and thence to the Patriarch Joseph, who left it to the Kings of Egypt as a Pledge of his Acknowledgment. Jethro coming into Egypt, stole it away from thence, and carry'd it into his own Country. He there planted it in a Garden, where it took such Root, that no one could pluck it up. Jethro, who knew the whole Virtue of it, promis'd his Daughter in Marriage to whosoever could pull it up. Many young Men offered themselves, and attempted to pull it out of the Ground; but no one could perform it, till Moses undertook it, and plucked it up without any Difficulty. Zipporah was the Reward of his Success. The Name of God was written upon this Rod, and it was this that indued it with all its Virtue and Merit.

The Rod or Caduceus of Mercury, which is always represented to us as twisted about with two Serpents, and endued with prodigious Vertues, is an Imitation of what the sacred History tells us of the Rod of Moses changed into a Serpent, and of the Miracles that God wrought by its Means.

[Numb. xvii. 1,2,3.] The Rod of Aaron, is the Staff that this High-priest commonly us'd. In the Conspiracy of Corah, Dathan, and Abiram, against Moses and Aaron, God gave Orders to Moses, to receive a Rod from every one of the Heads of the Tribes, and to add that of Aaron to the Number, that the Lord might shew by a Miracle which was the Tribe that he chose, for the Exercise of the Priest's Office. They gathered therefore twelve Rods, according to the Number of the Tribes, and that of Aaron made the thirteenth. They wrote upon each of those Rods the Name of the Prince of the Tribe who offer'd it; they put them in the Tabernacle of the Congregation, where the Lord had used to manifest himself to Moses; and the Day following, when they took these Rods again, they observed, that in the Night-time the Rod of Aaron had put forth Buds, had blossom'd, and that the Blossoms were those of the Almond-tree.

There was no Room for any Suspicion, that the Rods had been changed. Every one had wrote his Name upon his own, and that of Aaron was very well known; and no human Industry could produce so

7 B great a Change. Thus the Priesthood, by this Prodigy, was confirm'd to Aaron and his Posterity. To preserve the Memory of so miraculous an Event, God commanded Moses to lay up this Rod in the Tabernacle of the Congregation, or of Testimony, that it might serve as a Monument of what had happen'd upon this Occasion.

Some think it preserved its Leaves and Fruit as long as it continued in this holy Place. And indeed it was necessary, that to answer the Design of God, it must preserve those Marks of the Miracle, for the Conviction of Posterity.

It is inquired, whether it was put within the Ark of the Covenant, or only by it. God commands Moses only to put it in the [Numb. xvii. 20. Heb. ix. 4.] Tabernacle to be preserved there. But St. Paul says it was within the Ark, with the Urn full of Manna, and the Tables of the Law. Others affirm, it was not put within, but only at the Side of the Ark. They alledge for this Opinion, a Passage out of [1 Kings viii. 9.] the first Book of the Kings, which intimates, that there was nothing in the Ark but the Tables of the Law; but others contend, that this Passage of St. Paul ought to be understood literally; that there could be no Hindrance to prevent the putting of Aaron's Rod into the Ark, since it was five Foot long, and its Capacity was much more than would be requir'd to hold it. This Rod was sanctified by the Miracle that was work'd upon it; and when the Scripture says, that there was nothing in the Ark, but the Tables of the Law, it may be understood with this Limitation, that nothing else was originally there, the Ark being only intended for this Use. But this need not hinder, but that afterwards other things might be put into it.

Artapan in Eusebius[1] informs us, that the Rod of Moses, which Aaron made use of in performing so many Prodigies in Egypt before Pharaoh, became in after Ages the Object of Idolatrous Worship to the Egyptians, that they kept it in the Temple of Isis, and paid Adoration to it. 'Tis also said, that even at present it is shew'd at Rome in the Church of St. John Lateran, where it is honour'd as a very precious Relick.

Some Learned Men have thought,[2] that the Thyrsus, carry'd by Bacchus and the Bacchanals, and which is represented to us as a Lance or Dart, incircled with Vinebranches, is an Imitation of Aaron's Rod that flourish'd. Euripides relates, that one of the Priestesses of Bacchus struck one of the Rocks of Mount Cytheron with her Thyrsus, and that a Spring of Water immediately gush'd out; another Imitation of the Miracle that happen'd at Horeb, where Moses and Aaron brought forth Water out of a Rock, by means of this miraculous Wand.

[Isai. xi. 1, 2.] The Rod of St. Joseph, the Husband of the Virgin Mary. We read in the false Gospel of the Nativity of the Holy Virgin, that when Mary was arrived at the Age of Matrimony, and that, according to Custom, they were about to send her to her Parents, that she might be marry'd; she answer'd, that she could not consent to be bestow'd in Marriage, because she had made a Vow of Virginity. This being a singular Case, the Highpriest consulted the Lord upon it, who answer'd by an intelligible Voice, that was heard by every one present, that they must provide a Person, to whom this Virgin was to be committed as the Guardian of her Virginity. That for this purpose all the unmarried Men of the House of David must present themselves before the Altar, each holding a Rod in his Hand; and that he whose Rod should bud and blossom, and upon whom the Spirit of the Lord should light in the Form of a Dove, should be the Person chosen by the Lord to be the Spouse and Guardian of the Virgin, according to those Words of Isaiah; And there shall come forth a Rod out of the Stem of Jesse, and a Branch shall grow out of his Roots. And the Spirit of the Lord shall rest upon him, the Spirit of Wisdom and Understanding, the Spirit of Counsel and Might, the Spirit of Knowledge, and of the Fear of the Lord.

Those, therefore, that were mark'd out presented themselves in the Temple, each holding a Rod in his Hand. Joseph came thither also, but had brought no Rod with him. The Highpriest not finding upon any of the Rods the Token that God had promis'd, he consulted the Lord again, and it was answer'd him, that he that had brought no Rod was the only one whom God had chosen. He had no sooner then brought his Rod, but a Dove came down from Heaven, and rested upon it; by which Mark every body knew that he was appointed to be the Spouse of Mary.

The Protevangelium of St. James[3] relates the same thing, but with some Variety of Circumstances. It says, that when the Virgin had attain'd the tenth Year of her Age, the Priests told the Highpriest Zachariah, that he should think of marrying her, for fear the holy Place might be exposed to some Defilement. That Zachariah consulted the Lord thereupon, who told him by an Angel, that he must assemble all the single Men of Isreal; that he should command every one to bring his Rod, and that he upon whom a Miracle should be wrought was to be the Spouse of Mary. The Affair was publish'd through the whole Country by Sound of Trumpet; there came to the Temple a vast Number of Candidates; Joseph left his Carpenter's Shop and came with the rest.

The Highpriest took all their Rods, and went into the Temple, where, having pray'd, he return'd to each his Rod. When Joseph received his, a Dove flew out of it, and went to light upon his Head. Then the Highpriest declared to him, that it was the Will of God he should take Mary to Wife: Joseph excused himself, saying; I have Children, I am Old, she is Young, I am afraid of becoming the Sport of Israel. The High-priest answer'd; Fear the Lord, remember what happen'd to Corah, Dathan, and Abiram. Oppose not the Will of God, which has been manifested by this Prodigy. Joseph consented and took Mary; but he left her in a House, and return'd to work at his Carpenter's Trade.

It is from these antient Gospels, and from the Tradition of the Orientals, that our Painters have a Custom of representing Joseph with a flourishing Rod; but as the Fountain from whence this is drawn, is of no Authority in the Church, as the Story itself is but ill put together, and as a Miracle is by no means necessary on this Occasion, all this may be reckon'd only as a Fable. Romans

ROMANS. St Jerome seems to have thought, that Chittim was put for Italy, since he translates this Word by Italy. Balaam [Numb. xxiv. 24. Ezekiel xxvii. 6.] says; And Ships shall come from the Coasts of Chittim, and shall afflict Ashur, and shall afflict Eber, and he also shall perish for ever. Here St. Jerome translates, Ships shall come from Italy. But this Passage ought rather to be understood of the Greeks, who under the Conduct of Alexander the Great, came to invade the Hebrews, that is, the Persians who reign'd beyond the Euphrates. They overthrew their Empire, but were afterwards overthrown themselves by the Romans. The same St. Jerome says in Ezekiel,[1] that the Workmen of Tyre made use of what came from the Isles of Italy, to make Lodgings (or Cabbins) for the Captains of the Tyrian Ships. Praetoriola de insulis Italiae. Vulgat. But what Rarities could there be in these Islands of Italy, that were not to be found in Phenicia and the neighbouring Provinces?

The Hebrew may be translated two Ways. They have made thy Benches of Ivory trod under Foot, and brought from the Isles of Chittim; or from Macedonia. Ivory trod under Foot, is that which has been for a long Time hid under Ground, where the Elephants are used to conceal their Teeth when they shed them. Dentes deciduos casu aliquo, vel senectute, defodiunt. 'Tis known that Macedonia was a Country where Ivory was not common, any more than in Italy; [Bochart. de Animal. part. 1. l. 8. c. 3. Glass. Gram. l. 3. c. 1. Plin. l. 16. c. 16. Vid. Liv. l. 44, 45. Bochart. Phaleg. l. 3. c. 5. Plin. l. 8. c. 3.] wherefore Bochart and Glassius maintain, that the Hebrew ought to be translated thus; They have made thy Benches of Ivory, and of Box brought from Macedonia. Now the Box of Macedonia was in great Reputation, as may be seen from Pliny: And we have shewn under the Article CHITTIM, that this Word stood for Macedonia.

The same St. Jerome also translates the Hebrew Word Tubal by Italy, in Isaiah lxvi. 19. which according to some signifies Spain, and according to others the Tibarenians. See the Article TUBAL.

Lastly, the same Father has render'd the Hebrew Word Chittim by Romans, which elsewhere[2] he has translated by Italy, and which, as far as we can judge, signifies Macedonia. See Gen. x. 4. and the Commentators upon Dan. xi. 30. True it is, that in this Place the Prophet speaks of the Romans; but it is because the Romans he mentions sailed from Delos in a Macedonian Fleet, which they found in the Harbour of the Isle of Delos. Bochart has display'd all his Learning to support the Opinion of the Rabbins, who by Chittim understand Rome and Italy. He shews, that in this Country are found Cities by the Name of Cethim and Echetia, and a River call'd Cethus; but he also brings very good Proofs that Chittim is put for Macedonia.

The Jews generally call the Romans, Idumeans, and the Roman Empire, the cruel Empire of Edom. It is difficult to guess for what Reason they give this Denomination to Italy, and Rome, which are so far from Idumea, and have never had any Communication with the Idumeans. When the more knowing Rabbins are asked the Reason of this, they maintain with great Assurance and Obstinacy, that the Idumeans embraced Christianity, settled themselves in Italy, and there extended their Dominions.

Abravanel, who passes among them for a Man of Sense, pretends that the Romans, and all Christians in general, may be call'd Idumeans, in the same Sense as Isaiah call'd the wicked Jews of his Time by the Name of People of Sodom and Gomorrah, because they follow'd their Manner, and espoused their Sentiments. As Esau brought many Strangers into the Family of Jacob; so in the Roman Empire, and in the Christian Church, are to be found a Confusion of all Sorts of Nations that provoke God. Esau hated Jacob, and endeavour'd to rob him of his Birth-right and other Privileges; the Christians do the same thing by the People of Israel. The Cabalists maintain, that the Soul of Esau passed into the Body of Jesus Christ by Transmigration; whence it is that we find the Names of Jesua and Esau to be written in Hebrew with the same Letters, though not in the same Order. Esau was born under the Constellation of Mars, from whence he became a great Hunter, and a Man of Blood. The Roman Heroes, who were descended from Kings, had the same Inclinations. Esau was Red; the Roman Emperors wore Purple Robes, and the Cardinals wear them still. Jesus Christ was born under the same Planet Mars, he was a Man of Blood, for which Reason he was put to death, with a Part of his Disciples. But what Impertinencies are these?

JOSEPH the Son of Gorion relates this Affair in a more Historical, or rather more Fabulous Manner. Tsepho the Grandson of Esau, being kept Prisoner by Joseph in Egypt, made his Escape to Æneas then King of Carthage, who made him the Commander of his Forces. Æneas went from Africa into Italy, where he twice defeated Turnus King of Beneventum, and took Lavinia from him to make her his own Wife. Pablus the Nephew of Æneas was kill'd in the Battle, as also Turnus, and they had two Towers, or Mausolea, erected to their Memory, which were still to be seen between Alba and Rome, at the Time that this Historian wrote: One of which was call'd Copablus, and the other Cophurnus.

The Africans under the Command of Tsepho, often made Incursions into Italy, and committed great Havock. 'Twas in one of these Expeditions, that losing a young Heifer, he found it again in a Cave, where it was devour'd by a monstrous Beast, half a Goat and half a Man, whom he then kill'd. The Inhabitants being delivered from this Monster, honour'd Tsepho as an Hero, and made Offerings and Libations to him. They gave him the Name Janus, which was the Name of the Monster slain by him, and also that of Saturn, which was the Name of a Star that was then worshipped. Such therefore was Tsepho, the Grandson of Esau.

Latinus succeeded him, then Æneas the Trojan; and a long time after that reign'd Romulus, the Founder of Rome. At this Time David made War with the Idumeans;

ישוע*Jesu*. עשו*Esau*. then Adarezer had his Grandson Zir, Officers of King David, revolted from him, and fled into Italy, where they built old Alba. There they reign'd, and their Posterity continued there down to the Times of Joseph Son of Gorion, the Contriver of all these Whimsies. I pass over a great many Circumstances, that I may not trespass too much upon the Patience of the Reader. And thus he makes out, how the Idumeans by the Means of Tsepho, and the Jews by means of Adarezer and Zir, settled themselves in Italy. It is not amiss now and then to shew something of the Genius of the Jews, by the Traditions and Histories of their own Invention. See Basnages's History of the Jews, t. 1. l. 2. c. 5.

But this Tradition is not peculiar to the Jews; for it has pass'd from them to the Arabians, and we read it in almost all the Mussulman Authors. That Esau had a Son called Roum, from whom are descended all [D'Herbelot. Bibl. Orient. p. 80.] the Grecian and Roman Emperors. Lastly, this Tradition is common to almost all the Nations of the Levant, who have any Knowledge of the Sacred Writings; that from the Time of Abdon, Judge of the Hebrews, a Colony of Idumeans pass'd into Italy and settled there. That Latinus reigned among them, and that Romulus the Founder of Rome derived his Original from them. There is a great deal of Probability, that these Fables were first invented with no other Design, than to give a Pretence to the Jews among themselves, to apply to the Christians all those Curses that they find in their Holy Writings against Edom, and the Idumeans. And when these Stories once got footing, they became the common Belief of all the Jews and Orientals.

The Roman Empire is mark'd out in [Dan. ii. 40.] Daniel, by the Kingdom of Iron, which bruises and breaks in Pieces all the other Kingdoms. This is the Explication of almost all Interpreters. But we think it is rather the Empire of the Lagidæ in Egypt, and of the Seleucidæ in Syria. See our Commentary upon Dan. ii. 40. In the Books of the Old Testament written in Hebrew, I find no mention of the Names Rome, Romans, or Italy.

But in the Books of the Maccabees, and in the New Testament, there is often mention made of them. For Example, it is said,[3] That Judas had heard of the Fame of the Romans, that they were mighty and valiant Men, and such as would lovingly accept all that joined themselves unto them, and make a League of Amity with all that came unto them. And that they were Men of great Valour. It was told him also of their Wars and noble Acts, which they had done among the Galatians, and how they had conquered them, and brought them under Tribute. Judas had also been informed of the Conquests they had made in Spain; that they had brought under their Empire very distant Countries, and had overcome Kings that came to make War with them, from the Extremities of the World. Lastly, that they had conquer'd Philip and Perseus, Kings of Macedonia, or of the Chittims, and Antiochus the great King of Syria; that they had deprived him of a great Part of his Provinces ; that they had also reduced the Greeks, who had attempted to make Head against them ; and in a Word, that they confirm'd in their Kingdoms all those they had a mind should reign, and on the contrary deprived those of their Crowns whom they did not intend should enjoy them any longer : Yet nevertheless, that none of them would wear either the Diadem or the Purple, but that they had chosen a Senate from among themselves, consisting of Three hundred and Twenty Senators, who consulted every Day about the Affairs of the Republick ; that they committed every Year the Sovereign Magistracy to one Person, who had the whole Command through all their Territories, and that thus all were obedient to one, without any Envy or Jealousy among them.

This is what Fame had published in Judea concerning the Romans, and what inclined Judas Maccabeus to send two Ambassadors to Rome, to make Friendship and Alliance with them, and to desire them to free them from the Yoke of the Syrians, who would oppress them in their Liberties, and overturn their Religion. These Ambassadors were very well received by the Romans, and here is the Substance of the Reply they sent back to Jerusalem, which remained written at Rome upon Tables of Brass : " May the Romans and the Nation " of the Jews, be replenish'd with all " Happiness for ever, both by Sea and " Land, and may the Sword and the " Enemy be removed at a great Distance " from them. If any War should happen " against the Romans or their Allies, thro' " the whole Extent of their Dominions, " the Jews shall assist them heartily in the " same, as far as the Circumstances shall " allow them to do, nor shall the Romans " be obliged to provide any thing for such " Troops as shall come to their Assistance. " And on the other Side, if any War " should happen against the People of the " Jews, the Romans shall assist them " heartily in the same, as far as the Circumstances shall allow them to do, nor " shall the Jews be obliged to provide " any thing for such Troops as shall come " to their Assistance. That if in time to " come, either of the Parties shall think " fit to add any thing to, or to take any " thing from, what is here agreed to, it " shall be done by mutual Consent, and " whatever shall be added or taken away, " shall be firm and stable. And as to the " Misfortunes that Demetrius Soter has " occasion'd to the Jews, we have writ to " him in these Words ; Why have you " laid such a heavy Yoke upon the Jews, " who are our Friends and Allies ? Know " therefore, that if they shall any more " make these Complaints to us, we shall " do them Justice, and shall invade your " Dominions by Sea and Land."

[1 Macc. xii. 1, 2, 3, &c.] Such was the first Alliance that the Jews made with the Romans, in the Year of the World 3842, before Christ 158, before the vulgar Era 162. Some Years after this, in the Year of the World 3860, before Christ 140, before the vulgar Era 144, Jonathan, the Brother of Judas Maccabeus, finding the Opportunity to be favourable, sent a Deputation to Rome, to renew their Alliance with the Senate ; and the Senate gave them Letters directed to the Governors of the several Provinces, to have them reconducted safe to Judea. Lastly, Simon Maccabeus, Brother to Judas and Jonathan, a sent to Rome upon the same Errand, an Ambassador call'd Numenius, with a Present of a great golden Buckler. Numenius was very well received, the Senate granted what was desired, and the Romans called the Jews their Friends, Brethren, and Allies. Demetrius Nicator being inform'd of this, conferr'd great Honours upon Simon the Highpriest, confirm'd him in the Priesthood, declared him his Friend, and rais'd him to a high Degree of Glory.

Before this happen'd, in the Year of the World 3841, before Christ 159, before the vulgar Era 163, Quintus Memmius and [2 Macc. xi. 34, 35, 36.] Titus Manilius, the Roman Legats, being sent into Syria to settle some Affairs with King Antiochus Eupator, interested themselves in promoting the Tranquility of the Jews, and wrote to them in this Manner. " We confirm to you the same Things that " Lysias the King's Kinsman has granted to " you. And as to such things which he " thinks ought to be laid before the King, " send somebody hither as soon as you " can, after you have well consider'd " among your selves, that we may make " such Determinations about them as may " be for your Advantage ; for we are " going soon to Antioch. Wherefore " make haste to write to us, that we may " be well inform'd of what you desire."

The Romans took the City of Jerusalem no less than three times : First by the Arms of Pompey, in the Year of the World 3941,[4] before Christ 59, before the vulgar Era 63. The second was by Sosius, in the Year of the World 3967, before Christ 33, before the vulgar Era 37. The third and last Time was under Titus, in the Year of the World 4070, in the Year of Christ 73, and of the vulgar Era 70; at which time both the City and the Temple were utterly destroy'd.

They reduced Judea into a Province; that is, they took from it the Privilege of being a Kingdom, and of having Kingly Government. First after the Banishment of King Archelaus, Son of Herod the Great, in the ninth Year of Jesus Christ, which was the sixteenth Year of the vulgar Era; and the Country continued in this State to the fortieth Year of Christ, which was the Thirtyseventh of the vulgar Era. Secondly, it was again reduced to a Province after the Death of King Agrippa, in the Year of Christ 47, which is the 43d of the vulgar Era; and it remained in this Condition till it was intirely overthrown, which happen'd in the Year of Christ 73, or the 70th Year of the vulgar Era.

Epistle of St. Paul to the Romans. This was placed before the other Epistles of St. Paul, not because it was first in order of Time, but either because of the Dignity of the Romish Church to which it is directed, or because of the Excellence of the Matter; or, lastly, because of the Magnificence and Sublimity of the Mysteries, which are here treated of and explain'd. It passes for the most exalted and the most difficult of all St. Paul's [Hieron. Epist. 151. c. 8.] Epistles. St. Jerome was of Opinion, that not one Book only, but many Volumes were necessary, for a full Explanation of it. And some have thought, that St. Peter had chiefly this Epistle in his Eye, when he said, As our beloved Brother Paul also, according to the Wisdom given unto him, hath written unto you. As also in all his Epistles, speaking in them of these things; in which are some things hard to be understood, which they that are unlearned and unstable, wrest, as they do also the other Scriptures, unto their own Destruction. But it must also be observed, that others with good Reason think, these Words of St. Peter are rather to be referr'd to St. Paul's Epistle to the Hebrews.

St. Paul's Design, in the Epistle to the Romans, is to put an End to certain domestick Disputes, which then prevailed among the Believers at Rome, and divided among themselves the converted Jews, and the Gentiles that were become Christians. The Jews were opinionated concerning their Birth-right, and the Promises made to their Fathers; and for this, pretended to a certain Priority or Preference before the converted Gentiles, whom they look'd upon as Foreigners and Interlopers, that out of pure Favour had been admitted into the Society of the Faithful, and to the Participation of the Prerogatives of Christianity. The Gentiles on the other hand, being irritated by these Reproaches of the Jews, stood up for the Merit of their own Sages and Philosophers, the Prudence of their Legislators, the Purity of their Morality, their Exactness in following the Rules of the Law of Nature. And at the same time they accused the Jews with Infidelity towards God, and with Violation of his Laws. They aggravated their Faults, and those of their Fathers, which had excluded the greatest Part of them from the Inheritance of the Saints, and from the Gift of Faith; whereas the Gentiles, being found less blameable than they in the Eyes of God, had deserved to be call'd to the Faith, when they were excluded.

To put an End to these Contentions, St. Paul applies himself to restrain the Presumption of the Jews, and of the converted Gentiles. He sets forth the Extravagancy of both Parties, and shews that neither of them could pretend to any Merits, nor had any Reason to glory or boast of their Vocation, which proceeded from the mere Grace and Mercy of God. He proves to 'em, that even though the Jews had observed the Law of Moses, and the Gentiles had kept the Law of Nature, this could not have merited for them the Grace of their Vocation, nor of Justification. That nothing but Faith in Jesus Christ, enlivened by Charity, and accompanied with good Works, is able to justify us; that without Faith, all the rest signifies nothing. He answers some Objections in his Way, by Arguments taken from the Principles he had laid down. As for Example, about the gratuitous Vocation, and absolute Reprobation, of both Jews and Gentiles; about the Insufficiency of the Works of the Law, without Faith; about the Superiority of the Jews above the Gentiles; about the Infallibility of the Promises of God. This leads him into a Discussion of the Mystery of Predestination and Reprobation, which though in some manner foreign to his first Design, yet, however, makes a principal Part of this Epistle, and contains some of the greatest Difficulties in it.

In Chapters xii. xiii. xiv. xv. he gives them excellent Rules of Morality, concerning the Harmony that ought to subsist among them, and concerning that mutual Forbearance and Condescention they ought to have for one another's Infirmities, for fear of scandalizing or offending one another, by any indiscreet Liberties. He marks out the false Apostles, and exhorts the Faithful to avoid them. Chap. xvi.

contains contains only some Civilities and Recommendations, which he addresses to some particular Persons whom he salutes. This Letter was writ in the 58th Year of the vulgar Era, in the City of Corinth, from whence St. Paul was immediately to depart, in order to carry to Jerusalem some Collections that had been made for the Saints there. Phebe, a Deaconess of the Church of Cenchrea, which was near Corinth, was the Bearer of this Letter. No doubt has ever been made of its being Authentick, and though it was address'd to the Romans, yet it was written in Greek. a Tertius was St. Paul's Secretary on this Occasion.

The Marcionites made great Defalcations in the Epistles of St. Paul, especially in this to the Romans, of which they suppress'd the two last Chapters intirely. There is some likelihood that St. Paul's first Design was to finish his Epistle to the Romans at the End of the fourteenth Chapter; but finding Leisure afterwards, he added the two last Chapters to it. At the End of the fifteenth Chapter, we see this Conclusion. Now the God of Peace be with you all. Amen; which seems to shew that the Letter was then finished. We see the [Rom. xvi. 20, 24, 27.] same Conclusion no less than three Times in the sixteenth Chapter, which gives Room to imagine that it was compos'd at several Intervals of Time.

Rome

ROME. The City of Rome was founded by Remus and Romulus, according to Usher, in the Year 3966 of the Julian Period, in the Year of the World 3256, before Christ 744, before the vulgar Era 748, towards the End of the Reign of Hezekiah King of Judah. This City is so well known, that it is needless to give any Account of it here; nor I believe will any one expect it in a Dictionary of the Bible. The Sacred Authors of the Old Testament have never once mention'd it, as we know; but it is well known in the Books of the Maccabees, and of the New Testament. St. Peter in his first Epistle, v. 13. has mark'd it out by the figurative Name of Babylon. The Church that is at Babylon elected together with you, [Rev.xiv.8. xvi. 19. xvii. 5. xviii. 2,10, 21.] saluteth you. St. John in his Revelation, points it out more than once by the same Name, and describes it in such a Manner, as can only agree to Rome; by its Command over all Nations, by its Cruelty towards the Saints, and by its Situation upon Seven Hills. Rev. xvii. 9.

The Rabbins commonly give to Rome the Name of Edom, and think that the Prophesies pronounced against Edom, shall have their Accomplishment in the Destruction of this great City.

Some Protestants have deny'd, against the concurrent Testimony of all Antiquity, that St. Peter the Apostle ever was at Rome. They pretend that the City of Babylon, mentioned by him in his first Epistle, is the Babylon of Chaldea, or that of Egypt. They reject as so many Fables, all that has been published concerning the Voyages of St. Peter to Rome, his Opposition to Simon Magus, and his Martyrdom in this City. But surely if this Fact is not to be depended upon, I do not know any thing that can, in all Ecclesiastical History. We have all Antiquity to attest it, which consequently affirms it, nor has any one till now ever deny'd it. Lastly, we have Monuments, Tombs, Statues, Paintings, publick Places, which give Testimony to the Imprisonment and Martyrdom of St. Peter at Rome. The Authors may be consulted who have spoken of this Matter, and our Dissertation upon this Subject, printed in the last Tome of our Commentary.

St. Paul came twice to Rome. First, in the 61st Year of Jesus Christ, when he appeal'd to Cæsar. And, secondly, in the Year 65, a Year before his Martyrdom, which happened in the Year 66 of the vulgar Era.

St. Peter was also at Rome more than once. 'Tis thought he went thither in the Year 42, and that then he fix'd his Episcopal Seat there. He might return thither again about the Years 45, 58, and 65, of the vulgar Era. He suffer'd Martyrdom there in the Year 66.

St. John the Evangelist was banished from Ephesus, and sent to Rome, during the Persecution of Domitian, in the Year 95 of the vulgar Era. He was there plunged[1] into boiling Oil, without receiving any Hurt from it, but on the contrary, came out more Hale and Vigorous than he was before.

Root

[1 Tim. vi. 10.] ROOT. Covetousness or Desire is the Root of all the Evils, and of all the Sins that we commit. The Root, that is, the Fountain, the Cause, the Occasion. Ne sit inter vos radix germinans fel & amaritudinem. [Deut. xxxix. 18.] Let there not be seen among you pestilential Men, who draw down upon you the Effects of the Anger of God. Roots of Gall and Bitterness. Radicem verbi inveniamus [Job xix. 28.] contra eum. Let us seek against him Occasions of Discourse and Reproof; or let us find Opportunities to accuse him. The Hebrew says, The Root of the Word is in me. I am always in a Condition of defending myself sufficiently. Deus evellet [Psal. li. 7.] radicem tuam de terra viventium. God will pluck up thy Root out of the[1] Land of the Living. He will snatch you out of the World, and destroy you.

The Root may also denote the Race, the Posterity. Radix justorum non commovebitur. [Prov. xii. 3. Jerem. xii. 1.] The Root of the Just shall not be disturb'd, shall not fail. And Jeremiah; Whence is it that the Wicked prosper in all things? Thou hast planted them, and they have taken Root. In Daniel, and in the Books of the Maccabees, Antiochus Epiphanes, the Persecutor of the Jews, is represented as a young Sprout or Sucker, or Root of Iniquity, proceding from the Kings, the Successors of Alexander the Great. And Jesus Christ, in his Passion, is de-scribed to us as a Root illnourished, plant-ed in a dry and barren Soil. Sicut radix de terra sitienti. And elsewhere [Isai. liii. 2. Isai. xi. 1, 10.] he is call'd a Root of Jesse.

In a contrary Sense St. Paul says, that the [Rom. xi. 16, 17, 18.] Jews are, as it were, the Root that bears the Tree, upon which the Gentiles are ingrafted. And that the Patriarchs are the pure and holy Root, of which the Jews are, as it were, the Branches. Si radix sancta, & rami. And elsewhere, that Jesus Christ is the Root, upon which Christians depend, and from whence they derive their Life and Subsistence. Radicati [Coll. ii. 7.] & super ædificati in ipso.

Rosh

ROSH, or Ros, Son of Benjamin, Gen. xlvi. 21.

We find in the Hebrew of Ezekiel xxxviii. 2, 3. a People call'd Rosh, which is not found in the Vulgate. St. Jerome has taken it in an appellative Sense, to signify the Head, or the Prince.[1] Principem capitis Mosoch & Thubal. Whereas the Hebrew reads, b Principem Rosh, Mesech & Thubal. In Genesis,[2] where mention is made of Tubal and Meshech, we find also Tiras, which has some Relation to Rosh. The Septuagint have follow'd the Hebrew in Ezekiel, and the best Interpreters make no Question, but that Rosh is the Name of a People. But they are not agreed about the Country they inhabit, nor the Name they are known by now.

[D'Herbelot. Bibl. Orient. p. 722.] The Orientals hold, that Japheth had an eighth Son call'd Rous, who is not men-tion'd in Moses, and who peopled the Russia we now call Moscovy. They add, that Rous was of a very uneasy and turbulent Disposition. He possess'd the Country be-yond the Esel, or the Volga, and often made Inroads into his Brother's Territories, call'd Khozar, who to live in Peace with him was forced to make a Cession of all the Islands of this great River, which empties itself into the Caspian Sea. In all these Islands Rous caused to be sown Turkey Wheat, which the Turks to this Day in their own Tongue, call Wheat of Rous, or of Bulgaria; and in all his Dominions he caus'd very unjust Laws to be proclaim'd, to which he forc'd all his Subjects to sub-mit. One amongst others there was, which excluded the Male Heirs from succeeding to their Fathers Estates, and made them devolve intirely to the Females. He like-wise introduced the Custom, of putting a Sword into the Hands of the Boys, as soon as they were able to manage it, with these Words; This is your Inheritance.

[Idem, p. 795.] The same Authors relate, that Japheth had a Son call'd Seclab, who chiefly turn'd his Mind to building of Houses and Cities, because of the Number of his Children. When these were increased to a great Multitude, they desired Lands for Cultivation, of their Brethren the Children of Rous, but they would not grant their Request. They afterwards address'd themselves to the Descendants of Khozar and Gomari, their Brethren also, but not with better Success; so that they thought themselves obliged to take Possession by Force. But then all their Neighbours enter'd into a Confederacy against them, so that they were obliged to desist from their Enterprize, and to retire into a very cold Country, be-yond the seventh Climate. Mirkond says, that the Seclabs inhabit the Country of the Hyperboreans even to this Day, where they are forced to live under Ground during the Winter Season. M. D'Herbelot thinks, that these are the Samoiedes, or the Laplanders.

The same Mirkond says, that Seclab had a Son, whose Mother died when she brought him into the World; so that they were obliged to feed him with the Milk of a Hare. And this was the Reason, that when the Child grew up, he could leap and run with an incredible Nimbleness and Swiftness, which Qualities continued hereditary in the whole Family. The Name of Se-clab has so much Relation to that of Sclaves, or Sclavonians, and to what M. D'Herbelot says elsewhere of the Sclaves, that I am much inclined to think it is of these that Mirkond speaks. See Bibl. Orient. p. 470.

To return to Rosh, or Ros, mentioned by Ezekiel: We question not but it signi-fies Russia, or the People that dwell upon the Araxes, call'd Rosch by the Inhabi-tants, and which is the antient Habitation of the Scythians.

Rue

RUE, Rutha; a well-known Garden-herb. Jesus Christ reproaches the Phari-sees with their superstitious Affectation, of paying the Tythe of the Mint and Rue that grew in their Gardens, and which for this Reason was not in reality subject to the Law that injoin'd paying of Tythe. He did not blame, however, this scrupulous Exactness of theirs, which in the main had nothing of Evil in it; but he chiefly reproves them for the strict Observance of these Niceties, while at the same time they neglected the more essential Parts of the Law. Hæc[1] autem oportuit facere, & illa non omittere.

'Twas said to have been in that Place ever since the Time of Herod the Great; that is, at least Seventy-three Years before the End of the Jewish War, at which time it perished.

Rufus (I)

I. RUFUS, Son of Simon the Cyrenean, which Simon assisted our Saviour in carrying his Cross to Mount Calvary. Rufus probably was famous among the first Christians, since St. Mark names him with Distinction. Simonem Cyrenæum patrem Alexandri & Rufi. Is this the Rufus whom St. Paul in his Epistle to the Romans [Rom. xvi. 13.] salutes with his Mother? St. Polycarp in his Letter to the Philippians, written in the Year 107, proposes to 'em St. Ignatius, and one St. Rufus, as Models and Patterns of Patience. Usuard, Ado, and other antient Martyrologers, place St. Rufus the Martyr, on the 18th of December, and insinuate, that he was the Son of Simon the Cyrenean, since they say he was one of the antient Disciples, by whom the first Churches were founded among the Jews and Gentiles. The Chronicon of Lucius Dexter, a Work of no Credit, and contrived by an Impostor, speaks of St. Rufus Bishop of Tortosa in Catalonia, and honour'd upon the 11th of November, or rather the 14th, according to Ferrarius; and of St. Alexander his Brother, martyr'd at Cartagena on the 11th of March.

Rump

RUMP of the Sacrifices. Moses had ordain'd, that the Rump and Fat of the Sheep, that were offered for a Peace-offering, should be put upon the Fire of the Altar[1]. The Rump was esteem'd as the most delicate Part of the Animal, as being the fattest. Travellers both ancient and modern speak of these Rumps of the Sheep of Syria and Arabia, that are so large as to weigh, some of 'em, not less than twenty or thirty [Herodot. l. 3. c. 113.] Pounds. Herodotus says, that some of 'em may be seen that are no less than three Cubits long, or four Foot and an half: They draw upon the Ground; and for fear they should be hurt, or the Skin torn off, the Shepherds are us'd to put under the Tails of these Sheep certain little Carriages, which these Animals always draw after them. Runcina

RUNCINA, properly signifies a Joiner's Plane[1]. Hermolaus Barbarus and Calepin are mistaken, taking this for a Saw to saw Timber with. The Latin Translator of Isaiah xliv. 13. makes use of the Word Runcina: Artifex lignarius extendit normam, & formavit lignum in runcina. The Hebrew Word Shared[2] signifies rather the Line which the Carpenters rub with Red, White, or Black, to mark the Wood they intend to cut. The Septuagint make use of the Word Paragraphis, which, according to Martinius, signifies the Ruler with which Children rule their Paper. Isaiah therefore would say, that the Carpenter first takes a Piece of Wood without Shape, which he cuts; and to square it, he uses a colour'd String, to draw Right Lines upon it.

Rupture

[1 Sam. vi. 7.] RUPTURE; Confractio. To make a Rupture, is a common Expression in the Original Text of Scripture, instead of saying, to strike dead. The Lord made a Rupture in Uzzah; he smote him dead. Purify [Exod. xix. 10, 12.] your selves, for fear the Lord should be angry, and make a Rupture in the midst of [Psal. cv.] you. And in the Psalms,[1] God resolved to destroy them; and would have done it, had not Moses his Servant stood in the Gap, or the Rupture, in his Presence; had he not presented himself between, to turn away the Wrath of God.

[Isai. lviii. 12.] Ruptura is also put for a Breach: Thou shalt be called Repairer of the Breach, or Rupture: Vocaberis ædificator sepium. The Hebrew says, Sepient rupturas. And Amos; [Amos ix. 11.] In that Day will I raise up the Tabernacle of David that is fallen, and close up the Breaches thereof, or its Ruptures.

Ruth

[Ruth, ch. i.] RUTH, a Moabitish Woman, who having marry'd Chilion the Son of Elimelech and Naomi, who had settled themselves in the Country of Moab, dwelt some time with him, without having any Children. Naomi having lost her Husband and two Sons, and being desirous to return to Bethlehem her own Country, her two Daughters-in-law being now Widows, would also go along with her. But she making known to them her Inability of providing for them there, Orpah was persuaded to continue in the Land of Moab, but Ruth would go along with Naomi to Bethlehem. This happen'd at the End of the Time of the Judges, and under the Government of Eli, if we may take Josephus's Word for it. [Joseph. Antiq. l. 5. c. 11.] The Rabbins pretend, that Boaz, who married Ruth, was the same as Ibzan the Judge of Israel, who govern'd them for seven Years, about the Year of the World 2823, between Jephthah and Elon. The great Chronology of the Hebrews places this History in the Time of Ehud, and of the Servitude of the Israelites under Eglon King of Moab. Others place it under Barak and Deborah; others, under Gideon; others, under Abimelech. Usher, [Tostat. Lyran. Torniel. Genebr. &c.] whom we follow, places it under Shamgar, about sixscore Years after the Time of Joshua.

When Naomi came to Bethlehem, she found her self reduced to great Poverty, and Ruth went a Gleaning, to get something to support them. She came by chance into the Field of a rich Citizen of Bethlehem, named Boaz, who was akin to Elimelech her Father -in-law. When Boaz came to see his Harvesters, he found Ruth, and commended her Dutifulness to Naomi her Mother-in-law, bid her go and eat and drink with his People, and gave them Orders to leave something behind them, that she might have the better Gleaning. Ruth returned Home at Evening, told Naomi what had happen'd to her, and inform'd her of the Civilities of Boaz, who had also bid her to go no-where else to glean but in his Field. Naomi blessed God for it, that he had put such Sentiments of Humanity in Boaz's Heart, and acquainted Ruth that this was their Kinsman.

At the End of Harvest Naomi told Ruth, [Ruth iii. 9.] that she had a Design to provide for her, and to procure her a solid State of Repose. Go this Night, says she, and lie at the Feet of Boaz, who is to go this Evening to winnow his Corn; and you must do what he shall bid you. Ruth agreed to it; and having observed the Place where Boaz went to lie down, probably, under some Tree in his Field, Ruth went thither also in the Night, and lay down at his Feet. Boaz awaking, and seeing something near him, was afraid. But Ruth said, I am Ruth thine Handmaid; spread therefore thy Skirt over thy thine Hand-maid, for thou art a near Kinsman. Boaz acknowledg'd, that indeed he was a near Kinsman, but there was another nearer than he; and if this Man should refuse to marry her, he himself would take her to Wife. Then rising very early in the Morning, before it was Day-light, he filled Ruth's Lap with Corn, and sent her away to Naomi.

When it was Day, Boaz went to the Gate of Bethlehem, and having call'd together the Elders of the City, he cited him to appear who was the nearest Kinsman to Elimelech, that he might marry Ruth the Widow of Chilion his Son. This saying, that he could not do it; Boaz then insisted, that he should renounce his Right to it. This he willingly did; and then Boaz declared, that he intended to marry her himself. Thus Ruth became the Wife of Boaz, by whom she had a Son call'd Obed, who was Father to Jesse, and Grandfather to King David.

The Book of Ruth, which contains the History of which we have now given an Abstract, is placed, in our Bibles, between the Book of Judges and the Books of Samuel, as being the Sequel of the former, [Hieron. Prolog. Galeat.] and an Introduction to the latter. Saint Jerom informs us, that the Jews added it to the Book of Judges, because the Transactions it treats of happen'd in the Time of [Judg. i. 1.] the Judges of Israel: In diebus unius Judicis, quando Judices præerant. And several of the ancient Fathers make but one Book of the Judges and of Ruth. But the modern Jews commonly place in their Bibles, after the Pentateuch, the five Megilloth, which are, first, The Song of Songs; secondly, Ruth; thirdly, the Lamentations of Jeremiah; fourthly, Ecclesiastes; and fifthly, Esther. Sometimes Ruth is plac'd the first of the five, sometimes the second, and sometimes the fifth.

The Scope of the Author of this Book, is to make known to us the Genealogy of David; and, in all Probability, he was the same Author as composed the First Book of Samuel; in which, because he could not conveniently place this Genealogy of David, he chose rather to give it by it self, than to perplex his Discourse. The Writer observes, at the Beginning of his Work, Work, that the History he was going to relate, happen'd at the Time that the Judges governed Israel; therefore they ceased to govern it at the Time he wrote. Besides, he speaks of David at the End of his Book; which shews, that, at sooneft, it must be written in the Time of David. Besides, I have observed two ways of Speaking in it, or particular Phrases, which are only found in the Books of Samuel and of the Kings: The first is,a The Lord do so to me, and more also: The second, b I have discovered to your Ear; for I have told you.

The Canonicalness of this Book was never disputed. We have observed before, that the Learned are not agreed about the Epocha of the History it relates. Ruth the Moabitess is found in the Genealogy of our Saviour, Matth. i. 5.

Sabacon

SABACON King of Egypt. Herodotus gives an Account, that Sabacus, or Sabacon, King of Ethiopia, having made an Incursion [Herodot. l. 2.] into Egypt, Anysis, who reigned there at that time, being blind, made his Escape into the Marshes, and abandon'd his Kingdom to Sabacon, who reigned there fifty Years. His Maxim was, Never to put any Person to Death, but to condemn all Offenders to work upon the Banks of the Nile, to prevent the Inundations of that River. At last he withdrew into his Kingdom of Ethiopia, having first had a Dream, which commanded him to put to Death all the Priests of Egypt, and to cut them in two in the Middle. He could not comply with this Command, and chose rather to quit the Country; and this so much the rather, because the Number of Years was compleated, which the Oracle had told him he should reign in Egypt. After he was withdrawn, Anysis came again out of his Retreat, and resumed the Government of his Kingdom. He had Sethon for his Successor, who lived under SENNECHARIB. See his Article.

[2 Kings xviii. 9. See Africanus in Syncellus, 8, 74. Euseb. Chronic.] Some Authors relate, that when Sabacon invaded Egypt, he laid hold of King Bocchoris, then reigning there, and caused him to be inhumanely burnt alive, and seized his Kingdom. It is probable, that Sabacon is the same whom the Scripture calls So. After this Usurper had in a short time made himself very powerful, Hoshea King of Israel made an Alliance with him; thinking, by his Assistance, to shake off the [2 Kings xvii. 4.] Yoke of the Assyrians. With this Hope, he refused to pay to the Assyrians the Tribute that was due to them. To revenge this, Shal- manesar marched with an Army against him, ravaged all the plain Country, and besieged Hoshea in Samaria. He was forced to surrender, after he had sustained a Siege of three Years, in the Year of the World 3283, before Christ 717, before the Vulgar Era 721.

SABAOTH, or rather Zabaoth, an Hebrew Word that signifies Hosts or Armies. Jehovah Sabaoth, The Lord of Hosts. Whether, by this Expression, we understand [1 Kings xxii. 19. Numb. iv. 3, 23, 30, &c.] the Host of Heaven, or the Angels and Ministers of the Lord; or the Stars and Planets, which are as an Army ranged in Battle-array, and performing the Will of God; or, lastly, whether it be explain'd by the People of the Lord, both of the Old and New Covenant, which is truly the Army of the Lord, of which God is the General and Commander. The Hebrew Word Zaba is often used also, to signify the Service that his Ministers perform for him in the Temple; because they are there, as it were, Soldiers or Guards attending at the Court of their Prince. This Word is also us'd, to express [Exodus xxxviii. 8.] the Duty of the Women who watched at the Door of the Tabernacle, and kept Guard there in the Night-time.

Sabeans

SABEANS. Isai. xlv. 14. The Sabeans, Men of Stature. These are probably the Sabeans of Arabia Fœlix, or those of Asia. They submitted themselves to Cyrus, and acknowledg'd his Government.

The Sabeans, a People of Arabia, were descended from Saba: But as there are several known by the Name of Saba, who were [Job i. 15.] were all Heads of a People, or of Tribes; we must also distinguish several Kinds of Sabeans. Those that took away the Flocks of Job, were, probably, a People of Arabia Deserta, who dwelt about Bozra; or, perhaps, they were a flying Troop of Sabeans that infested that Country. We shall hereafter mention Saba, or Sheba, the Son of Jockshan, who might be the Father of the Sabeans here spoken of.

The Sabeans, Descendants from Sheba [Gen. x. 7.] Son of Cush, are, probably, those of Arabia Fœlix, who are famous for their Spices; to whom the Poets give the Epithet of soft and effeminate, and who had Women to command them:

[Claud. in Eutrop. l. 2.] Medis, levibusque

Sabæis Imperat hic Sexus. Several are of Opinion, that it was from [1 Kings x. 1,2.] hence the Queen of Sheba came to hear the Wisdom of Solomon; and that it is of these Sabeans that the Psalmist speaks; [Psal. lxxi. 10. Jer. vi. 20. Isai. lx. 6.] Reges Arabum & Saba dona Domino Deo adducent. And in Jeremiah; Ut quid mihi thus de Saba affertis? And in Isaiah; Omnes de Saba venient, aurum & thus deferentes.

The Sabeans, Sons of Shebah, Son of Rheumah, probably also dwelt in Arabia Fœlix. I imagine it to be these of whom Ezekiel speaks, who came with their Merchandises [Ezekiel xxvii. 22.] to the Fairs of Tyre: Venditores Saba, & Reema, ipsi negotiatores tui. And [Joel iii. 8.] in Joel; I will deliver up your Children to the Tribe of Judah, who shall sell them to the Sabeans, a Nation at a great Distance: Venundabunt eos Sabæis, genti longinquæ.

[Ezekiel xxvii. 23.] The Sabeans, Descendants from Joktan, may very well be those mention'd by Ezekiel; Saba, Assur, and Chelmud, Venditores tui. We believe they inhabited beyond the Euphrates; from whence it is that they are put with Assur and Chelmad.

The Sabeans are also placed in Africa, in [Joseph. Antiq. l. 2. c. 5.] the Isle of Meroe. Josephus brings the Queen of Sheba from thence, and pretends, that this Country had the Name of Shebah, or Saba, before it was call'd Meroe.

Sabeans, or Sabians, or Zabians, is the Name which is given to the ancient Idolaters, or Image-worshippers, in Persia. We shall speak of them at Length in the Article ZABIANS.

Sabbath

[שבת,Sabatum, Requies. Genef. ii. 2, 3.] SABBATH. This Word, in Hebrew, signifies Rest. God having created the World in six Days, rested on the seventh; that is to say, he left off producing any new Beings, in the outward and visible Creation. He blessed this Day, and sanctified it, because he had rested upon it. From that time he set it apart, and appointed it in a peculiar Manner for his Worship. And the Hebrews, afterwards, in Consequence of this Designation, and to preserve the Memory of the Creation, sanctify'd, by his Order, the Sabbath-day, or the Seventh Day, by abstaining from all Work, Labour, and servile Employments, and by applying themselves to the Service of the Lord, to the Study of his Law, and to Prayer.

Sabbath (or Sabathum) is sometimes taken meerly for Rest; sometimes, for eternal Rest and Felicity in Heaven. See Hebrews iv. 4, &c.

The Days of Sabbath (Sabbatha) are taken, sometimes, for all the Jewish Festivals [Lev. xix. 3, 30.] indifferently. Keep my Sabbaths, that is, my Feasts, as, the Passover, Pentecost, Feast of Tabernacles, and the rest.

Sabbathum is also taken for the whole Week. Jejuno bis in Sabbatho, a I fast twice a Week. Una Sabbathi[1] the First Day of the Week.

Upon Occasion of the Sabbath, it is disputed, whether God created the whole World by one only Fiat, all at once, by a simultaneous Action, and by a simple Act; or if he perform'd it at six distinct Operations, and in six Days successively, so that the seventh Day was really and truly a Day of Rest to the Lord, at the End of his successive Creation. Authors are much divided upon this Question. Philo[2], Origen[3], St. Austin[4], Procopius[5], and some Moderns, maintain, that God not only created Matter all at once, and in an Instant, but that at the same time He disposed it in Order, and gave every thing its proper Form, without staying for a Term of six Days. That the Account Moses gives of it, and the Distribution of the Works of the Creator into six Days, is not a Succession of Time, but only a Succession of Order and Reason, propos'd only by way of Accommodation to the Comprehension of the People, and to give them a distinct Notion of the Material Creation, by distributing it into Parts, and into a certain Disposition or Order.

But the greatest Part of the Fathers and Commentators maintain a successive Creation, agreeably to the Account given by Moses. And indeed, there is no Necessity of departing from the literal Sense of Scripture in this Place. The reiterated Acts, and the different Operations mentioned by Moses, ought indeed to be explain'd in such a manner, as is consistent with the infinite Power and perfect Simplicity of the Acts of the Creator, and which may exclude any manner of Notion of his Weakness, Weariness, or Imperfection. But all[6] this may be done, without receding from a successive Creation. God, by his infinite Power, drew forth, out of Nothing, all the Matter of the Universe, or the Chaos; and, by his Wisdom, he gave the Parts all the Motions necessary, that the Chaos might display it self; and that its Parts being disengaged from one another, and each united again with others of the same Nature, might form what we call the Universe in the Condition in which we find it. This Motion, conducted by the Spirit and Wisdom of God, might continue six Days; after which, God rested himself, or ceased to produce any outward Being; but He continued still to act by his Providence and Concurrence, and to preserve the Work he had made, in the State of Beauty and Perfection in which he had created it.

As to those particular Beings, that could not be produced by a Continuation of the general Laws of Motion, communicated by God to Matter, as for Example, Men, Plants, and Animals, it must necessarily be acknowledged, that God form'd them successively, as Moses acquaints us, by applying, forming, animating Matter, agreeably to the Designs of his Wisdom; by inspiring into Man a reasonable Soul; by giving other Animals their several Instincts, for their Preservation and Producing their Kind; by putting into the Plants those Qualities that distinguish them from each other, and their Seeds and Grains that are proper for their Renovation.

Another great Question that is moved about the Sabbath, is, Whether, from the Beginning of the World, God gave the Law of the Sabbath; and whether this Day was always observed, at least among the better sort of the first Men, as the Patriarchs, before the Promulgation of the Law. Whether this be the Sense of these Words, [Gen. ii. 2.] And God blessed the seventh Day, and sanctified it. Some Fathers[7] and some Jewish Doctors[8] have asserted the Affirmative; and Menasseh Ben-Israel[9] assures us, that, according to the Tradition of the Antients, Abraham and his Posterity having preserved the Memory of the Creation, observed the Sabbath also, in Consequence of the Natural Law that obliged them thereto. There are some also that believe, that the Religion of the Seventh Day is preserved among the Pagans, and that the Observation of this Day is as old as the World it self.

[Philo de Mundi Opificio.] In a Word, Philo says, that the Sabbath is not a Festival peculiar to any one People or Country, but is common to the whole World, and that it may be named the General and Publick Feast, and that of the Nativity of the World. Josephus advances, [Joseph. contr. Apion. l 2. Euseb. l. 13. c. 12. Præp.] that there is no City, either of Greeks or Barbarians, or any other Nation, where the Religion of the Sabbath was not known. Aristobulus, in Eusebius, quotes Homer and Hesiod, who speak of the Seventh Day as of a Day that is sacred and venerable. Clemens [Clem. Alex. Strom. l. 5.] Alexandrinus speaks of the Sabbath in the same Terms as Aristobulus, just now cited, and he adds some Passages from the Antients, which celebrate the Seventh Day.

[Abenezra apud Boulduc in Job i. 2, 5. Bechaï ad Berefith. fol. 37. Ezek. xx. 12, 20.] There are some that believe, that Job observed the Sabbath-day; because at the End of Seven Days he offered a Sacrifice to the Lord for his Children. Some Rabbins inform us, that Joseph also observed the Sabbath in Egypt.

But the contrary Opinion is not without its Proofs also. The greatest part of the Fathers and Commentators hold, that the Benediction and Sanctification of the Sabbath, mention'd by Moses in the Beginning of Genesis, signifies only that Appointment then made of the Seventh Day, to be afterwards solemnized and sanctified by the Jews. It does not appear from any Passage of Scripture, that the ancient Patriarchs have observed the Sabbath, or that God had any Design to oblige them thereto, before [Philo Vit. Mos. l. 1.] the Law took Place. Philo says, that the Hebrews having forgot which was the Day of the Creation of the World, began again to be apprised of it, when God having caused it to rain Manna all the other Days of the Week, did not permit it to rain any on the Sabbath-day. The Seventh Day, which was honoured by some Pagans, and of which they have spoke as of an Holy Day, was either dedicated to the Honour of Apollo; or it was in Imitation of the Jewish Sabbath, which some Pagans had in Honour heretofore, either out of Superstition or Devotion.

Ezekiel says expressly, that the Sabbath, and the other Feasts of the Jews, are Signs that God has given to his People, to distinguish them from other Nations. I gave them my Sabbaths, to be a Sign between me and them, that they might know that I am the Lord that sanctify them. And again, Hallow my Sabbaths, and they shall be a Sign between me and you, that ye may know that I am the Lord your God. And Moses in Deuteronomy v. 15. The Lord hath brought thee out of Egypt, therefore the Lord thy God commanded thee to keep the Sabbath-day. Justin Martyr[10], Tertullian[11], Eusebius[12], St. Bernard[13], advance, as a Matter not to be doubted, that neither the Patriarchs before the Deluge, nor those which came afterwards, observed the Sabbath. Irenæus says expressly, that Abraham had Faith, and was call'd the Friend of God; and yet was neither circumcised, nor observed the Sabbath. Abraham ipsè sine circumcisione, & sine observatione Sabbathorum, Deo credidit, & amicus Dei appellatus est. On this Subject may be seen Selden de jure naturali & gentium, juxta disciplinam Hebræorum, l. 3. c. 13, 14, 15. Spencer de legibus Hebræorum ritualibus, l. 1. c.4. Sect. 7, &c. and our Commentary upon Gen. ii. 3.

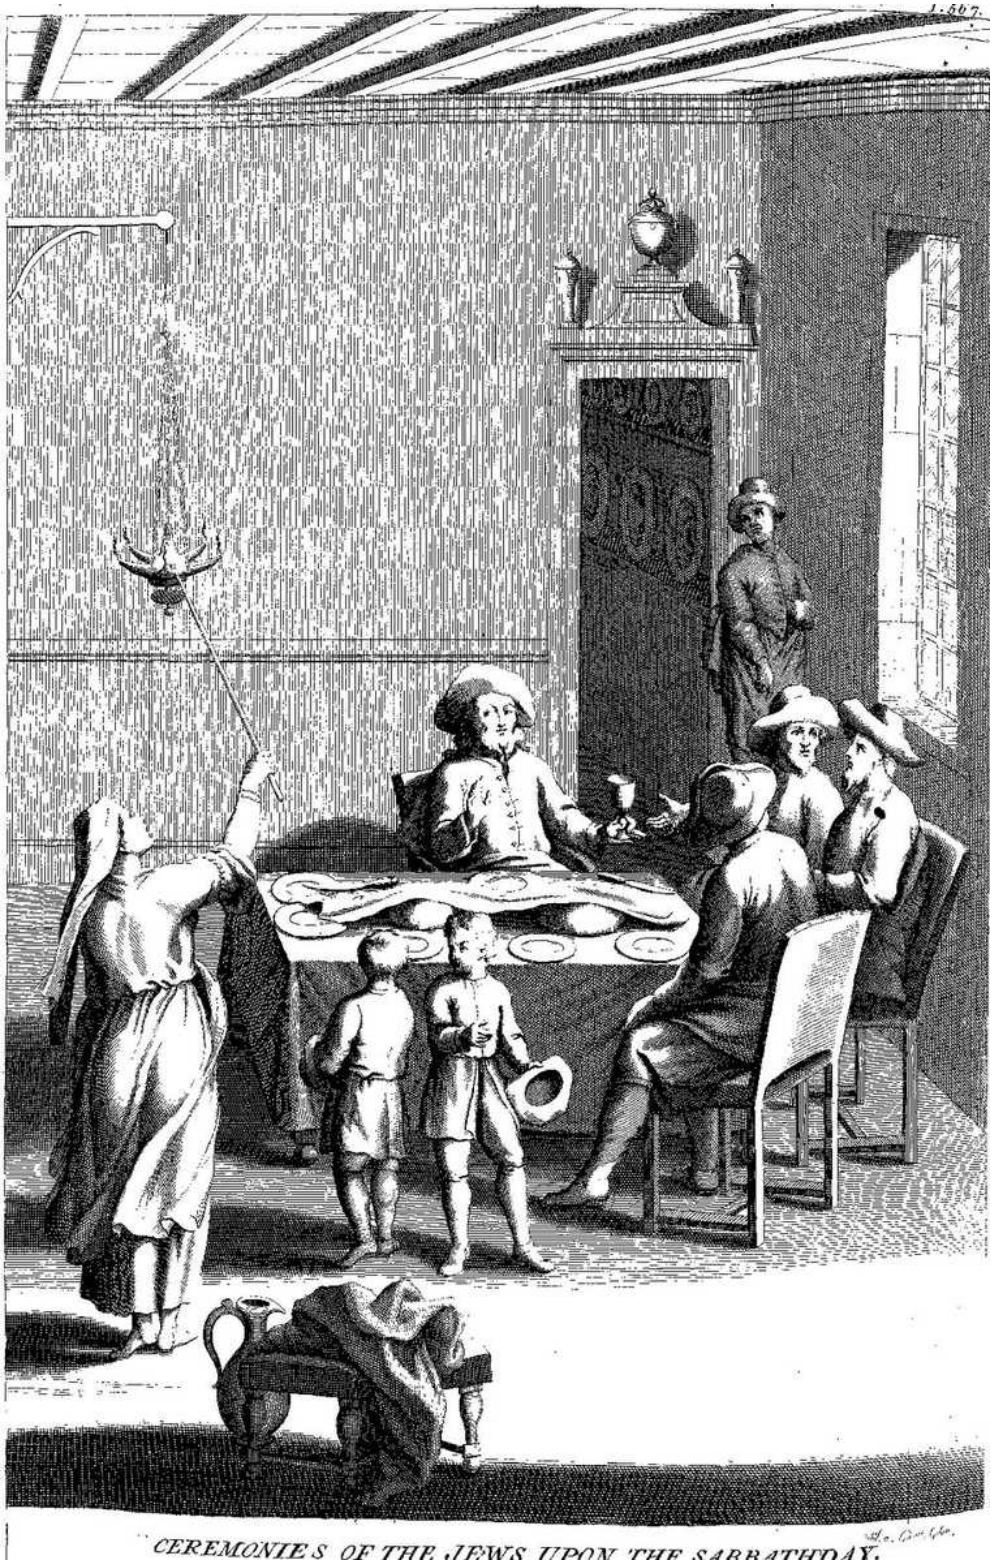
[Ex. xxxi. 13. xxxv. 2.] God gave the Precept of the Sabbath to the Hebrews, when they came to Marah, one Month after their coming out of Egypt, on the 15th of the Month Abib, which answers to our March, in the Year of the World 2513, before Christ 1487, and before the vulgar Era 1491. Manna began to fall, according to several of the Fathers,[14] upon the Sunday, six Days before the Sabbath. According to others, it fell upon the very Eve of the Sabbath. However this be, 'twas probably upon the Occasion of the Manna, that God commanded the Hebrews to observe the seventh Day, and not to go out to gather any on that Day, for none would fall then. The same Command of celebrating the Sabbath is found several times repeated in the Law.[15] " Remember to sanctify " the Sabbath Day. You shall labour for " six Days, and shall do whatever you " have to do; but the seventh Day is the " Sabbath of the Lord your God. Upon " this Day you shall do no Work, neither " you, not your Son, nor your Daughter, " nor your Man-servant, nor your Maidservant, nor your labouring Beasts, nor " the Stranger that shall reside among you. " For the Lord in six Days made the Heaven and the Earth, and whatever is contain'd in them, and rested upon the " seventh Day. Wherefore he blessed the " seventh Day, and hath consecrated it to " his Service ".



[Numb. xv. 32, 35.] In another place it is said, that God established his Sabbath among the Children of Israel, as a Sign to make them call to mind, that he is the Lord that sanctifies them. He adds, that whosoever shall prophane the Sabbath shall be punish'd with Death; and we see the Execution of this Law upon the Man, who having gather'd Wood upon the Sabbath Day, was stoned by all the People for this Offence. Upon other Holy Days it was allow'd to light a Fire, and to dress Victuals; [Ex. xii. 16.] but this was expressly forbid on the Sabbath Day. The Rabbins confine this Prohibition [Ex. xxxv. 2, 3.] to servile Works only; as to bake Bread, to dress Meat, to forge Metals, &c. They suppose that for such sort of Works it is forbid to light a Fire, but not for one to warm himself. On the Sabbath Days the [hær. l. 4. c. 30.] Ministers of the Temple enter'd upon their Week; and those that had attended the foregoing Week went out on that Day. They put upon the golden Table new Loaves of Shew-bread, and took away the [Lev. xxiv. 8.] old ones. Also upon this Day were offer'd particular Sacrifices of two Lambs for a Burnt-offering, with the Wine and the Meal that always accompanied these Sacrifices. Lastly, the Sabbath was celebrated, as also the other Festivals, from Evening to Evening. They began in the Evening, at which Time also they ended. A vesperâ usque ad vesperam celebrabitis Sabbatha vestra. And this is the whole, or very near it, that is commanded in the Law, concerning the Observation of the Sabbath.

And now let us inquire what has been the Practice of the Jews, in Consequence of this Institution. The first Obligation of the Sabbath express'd in the Law, is to sanctify [Numb. xxviii. 9, 10] it. Remember to sanctify the Sabbath Day. But it is sanctify'd by doing good Works upon it, by Prayer, by Praises and Thanksgivings, by publick and private Worship of God, by the Study of his Law, by Justice, Innocence, and Tranquillity of Mind. The second Obligation is that of Rest. Thou shalt do no Work upon the Sabbath. It was forbid to do any servile or laborious Works, that might fix the Mind, and interrupt that Attention which was to be given to God, and which is necessary when we pay any Worship to him worthy of his Majesty. The Jews have often varied about the Manner, in which they think they ought to observe the Rest of the Sabbath. In the Time of the Maccabees, they carry'd their Respect for this Day so far, as that they [1 Mac. ii. 32, 33, &c.] durst not so much as defend themselves from any Invasion of the Enemy on this Day, even in the most pressing Necessity. Since this Time they have not scrupled to take Arms, and stand upon their necessary [1 Mac. ii. 41.] Defence. But it may be seen by Josephus, that they would not attack their Enemies, nor hinder them from advancing their Works; nor would they march with their [Antiq. l. xii. c. 3. xiii. c. 1. Antiq. l. xiii. c. 16. p. 450. Mat. xii. 11, 12.] Armies, even in Time of War, or in the Enemies Country, upon the Sabbath Day.

In the Time of our Saviour, they would not water their Cattle, or take a Beast out of a Ditch that should happen to fall in, on the Sabbath Day: But by a false Delicacy they could not bear with our Saviour's Healing the Sick on that Day. Since that Time they have determin'd, that a Man might give Food to a Beast, that should happen to fall into a Pit, but must not take him out on that Day. The same Jews complain'd of our Saviour's [Mat. xii. 1, 2. Mark ii. 27.] Disciples, that passing through the Corn-fieldson the Sabbath Day, and being pressed with Hunger, they gather'd some Ears of Corn, and rubb'd them between their Hands, in order to eat the Grains of Wheat. This Action of his Apostles, our Saviour excused only from the Necessity of the thing, and because they had need of Nourishment; adding, that the Priests themselves in the Temple do some Work, which every where else would be esteem'd Violations of the Sabbath; and that the Son of Man was Lord of the Sabbath; and lastly, that the Sabbath was made for Man, and not Man for the Sabbath.

CEREMONIES OF THE JEWS UPON THE SABBATHDAY.

The Rabbins reckon up nine and thirty primary Prohibitions, which ought to be observed on the Sabbath Days, and several other secondary ones dependant on them, which are also obligatory. Their Number is so great, that it is almost impossible to keep them all; and the Rabbins make no Difficulty to own, that if the People of Israel could keep but two Sabbaths as they ought to be kept, they should soon see themselves deliver'd from the Evils under which they groan. Their Scrupulosity [Vid, Buxtorf. Syn. Jud. c. xi.] goes so far, as even to forbid to peel or to roast an Apple, to kill a Flea, a Fly, or any other Insect, if it is big enough, as that the Sex may be distinguish'd; to sing, or to play upon an Instrument, so as it may be loud enough to awaken a Child. Yet notwithstanding all this, the Samaritans[16] pretend that the Jews are not religious enough in the Observation of the Sabbath. As for them, they will not light a Fire on this Day, they abstain from the Use of the Marriage-bed, they don't stir from their Places, save only to go to the House of the Lord. They employ themselves wholly upon that Day in reading the Law, in praying to God, and in Thanksgivings.

Of all the Festivals that God has enjoin'd them in his Law, there are none of which the Jews are so jealous, or of which they speak so magnificently, as of the Sabbath. They call it their Spouse, because God has given it to them alone, exclusive of all other Nations of the World[17]. Here is an Extract of what may be found concerning this Matter, in Leo of Modena,[18] who alone is equivalent to all the modern Jews. The Rabbins, says he, have reduced all that is forbid to be done on the Sabbath Day, to these thirty-nine Heads, each of which have their Circumstances and Dependences: These are, to till the Ground, to sow, to reap, to make Hay, to bind up Sheaves of Corn, to thrash, to winnow, to grind, to sift Meal, to knead the Dough, to bake, to shear, to whiten, to comb or card Wool, to spin, to twine or twist, to warp, to dye, to tye, to untye, to sew, to tear or pull in Pieces, to build, to pull down, to knock with a Hammer, to hunt or fish, to kill a Beast, to flay it, to dress it, to scrape the Skin, to tan it, to cut Leather, to write, to scratch out, to rule Paper for writing, to light a Fire, to extinguish it, to carry any thing from Place to Place, to expose any thing to Sale.

Besides these, there are other things forbid, as Consequences from these. For Instance, to file is comprehended under grinding, to curdle Milk under building, and so of others. They must neither light or put out a Fire or Lamp, and commonly they keep Christian Servants in their Houses, to do such Offices for them on the Sabbath Day. They not only forbear from carrying any Burdens, but upon this Day they will not put on their Cloaths, even what is necessary; and carry their Exactness so far, as to inspect the Ornaments and Cloaths of their Women, Children, and Servants. On this Day they speak of no Business or secular Affairs; they neither give or receive, neither sell or buy, or make any Bargain. They handle no Tool, nor any thing that is heavy; they touch no Money, go neither on Horse-back or in a Boat. They don't bathe themselves, nor use any chirurgical Operations, but in Cases of great Necessity.

They may walk as much as they please within the City or Suburbs where they inhabit; but they must not go out of the City or Suburbs, above the Distance of two thousand Cubits, as we shall mention by and by.

They undertake no Work on the Friday, but such as may be easily finish'd before the Evening. About an Hour before Sun-set, they put into a warm Place what they have prepar'd to eat the Day following; and about half an Hour before Sun-set all Work is left off, and the Sabbath is suppos'd to be begun. Then the Women are obliged to light a Lamp in their Chambers, which Lamp commonly has six Wicks, or, at least, four, and it burns a great Part of the Night. They also set out a Table cover'd with a fair Table-cloth, whereon they put Bread, which they cover with another long, narrow Cloth.

There are some of 'em, who, to begin the Sabbath well, will put on clean Linen, and wash their Hands and Face. They all go to the Synagogue, where they rehearse certain Prayers set down in their Books, after which they return to their Houses, and salute one another by wishing a good Sabbath.

Being come Home, the Fathers bless their Children, and the Masters their Disciples; then sitting down to Table, the Master of the Family pronounces certain Blessings on the Bread and Wine, and makes mention of the Institution of the Sabbath. He drinks a little of the Wine that he hath bless'd, and gives it round to all that are at Table. He does the same by the Bread, and then they entertain themselves as well as they can. On the Sabbath Day in the Morning they rise later than upon other Days; and being come to the Synagogue, they rehearse several Psalms and Prayers, in Commendation of the Sabbath, intermingled with Singing, and the ordinary Prayers. Then they bring out the Pentateuch, and seven Persons read the Section that comes to be read in order. Then they read a Section out of the Prophets, which has some relation to what was read out of the Law. Lastly, He that holds the Book in his Hands, lifts it on high, and gives his Blessing to all present. They pray afterwards for those Princes under whose Jurisdiction and Protection they live; and they make a Sermon or Exhortation in the Morning or Afternoon, according to the Custom of the Place.

When Night comes, and they can discover in the Heaven three Stars of a moderate Magnitude, then the Sabbath is ended, and they may return to their ordinary Employments. Those who go to the Synagogue, add to the common Evening Prayers, certain Lessons and Benedictions, which have relation to the Sabbath; and as they think, that the Punishment of the Souls in Purgatory ceases on that Day, they prolong its Continuance as much as they can. When every one is return'd to his Home, they light a Taper or Lamp, which has, at least, two Wicks, the Master of the House takes Wine in a Cup, and sweet-scented Spices, and after pronouncing some Benedictions, he blesses the Wine and the Spices; then he flavours the Spices, and throws the Wine upon the Ground, in Token of Chearfulness, and pronounces some Blessings. Thus the Ceremony of the Sabbath is ended. Those that meet one another make their Compliments, by wishing each other a happy Week.

Some antient Fathers quote the Law which injoins the Rest of the Sabbath, with this Exception; You shall do nothing upon this Day, except what is for the Health of the Soul, or the Preservation of Life; or lastly, except in such things wherein Life is in Danger. Omne opus servile non facietis in eo, præterquam quod ad animam pertinet, as Tertullian reads it; or, as he says elsewhere, [Tertul. adv. Judæo c. 4. Idem cont. Marcion. l. 4. c. 12. Hieron. in Il. xxviii.] nisi quod fiat omnis animæ. Or lastly, as St. Jerom reads it, Lege præceptum est, ne in Sabbatho opus servile faciamus —— ut illa tantum faciamus, quæ ad animæ salutem pertinent. A very antient Gloss this, and authorised by the Practice of the Primitive Jews, who us'd to allow the taking of a Beast out of a Ditch, that should happen to fall in on the Sabbath, and was in Danger of its Life. And much more did they think it allowable to do good Works, either Moral or Charitable.

Such prophane Authors as have ventured to speak of the Original of the Sabbath, have only shew'd their Ignorance of [Tacit. l. 5. hist.] the Jewish Affairs. Tacitus thought they observed the Sabbath in honour of Saturn, to whom Saturday was consecrated in the Pagan Religion. But Plutarch asserts, it [Plut. Sym. l. 4. p. 671.] was kept in honour of Bacchus, who is call'd Sabbos; and because in the Festivals of this false Deity they us'd to cry Saboi. [Appio l. 2. p. 1061, 1062, 1063.] Appion the Grammarian maintain'd, that the Jews celebrated the Sabbath in Memory of their being cured of a shameful Disease, which in the Egyptian Language was call'd Sabbosis. Also Pagan Authors speak pretty frequently of the Fast of the Sabbath, as if the Jews had ordinarily fasted on this Day. Recutitaque Sabbatha [Sat. 5.] palles, says Persius. And Petronius, Et non jejuna Sabbatha lege premet. They were not aware, that Fasting was utterly forbid the Jews on the Sabbath; but either very grossly misunderstood the Sabbath for the whole Week, in which some of the Jews fasted two Days; or they took it in too comprehensive a Sense, for all sort of Feasts; and because they us'd to fast on the Day of the solemn Expiation, they very improperly concluded that they fasted upon all Sabbath Days.

A Sabbath Day's Journey. We have already [Joseph. Antiq. l. 13. c. 16. p. 450.] explain'd from Josephus, under the Article of JOHN HIRCANUS, that, in an Expedition he made beyond Euphrates [Mat. xxiv. 20.] , with the King of Syria, he was the Occasion that the whole Army halted on a Sabbath Day; which proves that long Journeys were forbidden the Jews on that Day. We see the same thing in the second Book of the Maccabees, viii. 26, 27. where Judas could not pursue the Victory he had obtain'd over Nicanor, because of the Interposition of the Sabbath. Pray ye that your Flight be not in the Winter, neither on the Sabbath Day, says our Saviour in the [Ovid. de remed. amor.] Gospel. And Ovid says, Fear not the Rain, and let not the Jewish Sabbath hinder you.

Nec pluvias vites, nec te peregrina morentur Sabbatha.

[Acts i. 12.] But, however, it is evident they were allow'd to go a certain Space on the Sabbath Day, since we know they went, at least, to the Temple or Tabernacle, from the remote Parts of the City or Camp. [of] And St. Luke informs us, that the Mount of Olives was distant from Jerusalem the space of a Sabbath Day's Journey. Sabbathi habens iter. The Rabbins generally fix this space at two thousand Cubits. Josephus says, that the Mount of Olives was five Stadia from Jerusalem, which make six hundred and twenty-five Paces. Thus the Journey that might be made on a Sabbath Day, was about six or seven hundred Paces, or something more. For the [De bello, l. 6. c. 3.] same Josephus, in another Place, puts the Mount of Olives at six Stadia from Jerusalem. Origen, quoted by Oecumenius[19], says, that the Journey of a Sabbath Day is one Mile, or two thousand Cubits. The Jews[20] also have us'd to make a Mile consist of two thousand Cubits: So that their Cubit must be two Feet and an half, since their Mile contains a thousand Paces, or five thousand Feet, taking their Paces at five Feet a-piece. Maimonides[21] will have it, that he that does not know exactly the Distance of a Place, may walk upon the Sabbath Day two thousand moderate Paces, which makes a thousand geometrical [Epiph. hæres. 66.] Paces of five Foot each. Epiphanius says, that the Jews believe it is not allow'd them to walk upon the Sabbath Day above six Stadia, or seven hundred and fifty Paces. The Syriack Translator of the Acts of the Apostles puts about seven Stadia for a Sabbath Day's Journey; which is according to what some Rabbins say[22], that a Mile is seven Stadia and an half. Upon this see Selden de Jur. Nat. & Gent. l. 3. c. 9.

Sabbathum secundo-primum. The second Sabbath after the first. Luke chap. vi. 1. This Expression has much divided the Commentators. Some[23] have taken it for the second, others[24] for the last Day of unleavened [Maldon. Mercat. Ex. xxiii. 10. Levit. xxv. 2, 3, &c.] Bread; and some for the Day of Pentecost. The Passover was the first Sabbath, according to them, and Pentecost the second. Others have thought, that the first grand Sabbath was the first Sabbath of the Civil Year, in the Month Tizri; and that the second was the first of the Holy Year, or of the Month Nisan. But Joseph Scaliger,[25] who is follow'd in this by a great Number of able Writers[26], thinks that to have been the first Sabbath, which follow'd the second Day of unleavened Bread. The Jews thus reckon'd their Sabbaths from the Passover to Pentecost; the first was call'd secundo-primum, or second after the first; that is, the first after the second Day of unleavened Bread. The second was call'd secundo-secundum, or the second Day of the Sabbath after the second Day of unleavened Bread. The third was call'd secundo-tertium, or the third Day of the Sabbath after the second Day of unleavened Bread. And so of all the rest, as far as secundo-septimum, that is to say, the seventh Day of the Sabbath after the second Day of unleavened Bread. This seventh Sabbath immediately preceded Pentecost, which was celebrated the fiftieth Day after the second Day of unleavened Bread. See the Commentators upon St. Luke, chap. vi. ver. 1.

Parasceue Sabbati, or the Preparation for the Sabbath, is the Friday before; for as it was forbid to make a Fire, to bake Bread, or to dress Victuals on the Sabbath Day, they provided against this Day, and prepared on Friday every thing that was needful for their Sustenance on the Sabbath Day. See the Article PARASCUE before.

The Sabbath transferr'd to Sunday. The Obligation of giving a Portion of our Time to God to be employ'd in his Worship and Service, is founded upon natural Right. The Law of Moses had fix'd this to the seventh Day, or the Sabbath for the People of the Jews. The Apostles of Jesus Christ, to do Honour to the Day of his Resurrection, have also determin'd it to be every seventh Day, and have fix'd it on Sunday, or the first Day of the Week among the Hebrews, and on the Day dedicated to the Sun by the Pagans. This Day, among us Christians, is known by the Name of the Lord's-Day. See the Article SUNDAY.

Sabbatical Year was celebrated among the Jews from seven to seven Years, when the Land was to rest, and to be left without Culture. They set Slaves at Liberty, and every one re-enter'd into the Inheritance [Levit. xxv. 2, 3, 4.] that had been alienated.

God appointed the Observation of the Sabbatical Year, to preserve the Remembrance of the Creation of the World; to enforce the Acknowledgment of his sovereign Authority over all things, and particularly over the Land of Canaan, which he had given to the Hebrews, by delivering up the Fruits of their Fields to the Poor and the Stranger. It was a kind of Tribute which they paid to the Lord for it. Besides, he intended to inculcate Humanity to his People, by commanding that they should resign to the Slaves, to the Poor, to Strangers, and to Brutes, the Produce of their Fields, of their Vineyards, and of their Gardens.

It has been much disputed, at what Season of the Year the Sabbatical Year began. Some have been of Opinion, that it began on the first Month of the sacred Year, that is, at Nisan, or in the Spring. Others think it began at the first Month of the civil Year, or at the Month Tizri, which answers nearly to our September. Moses does not explain himself upon this Matter very clearly. He says only, that the Land shall not be cultivated, and that there shall be no Harvest for that Year. In Palestine, the Time of Sowing both of Wheat and Barley was in Autumn; and Barley-harvest began at the Passover, and that of Wheat at Pentecost. Therefore, to enter into the Spirit of the Law, for observing the Rest of the Sabbatical Year, that the Land may not remain two Years without Cultivation, we must necessarily begin it at Autumn, after all the Crops were gather'd in: They did not till the Land in Autumn, and they had no Harvest after the Winter; but the Autumn following they began again to cultivate the Land, that they might reap their Harvests in the Spring and Summer following.

In the Sabbatical Year all Debts were [Deut.xv.2. Ex. xxi. 2.] remitted, and the Slaves were set at Liberty. But were Debts absolutely forgiven, or was the Payment of them only suspended? [Hebr. Drusius. Estius, alii.] Several think, that this Remission was absolute, and that all Debts were totally extinguish'd in the Sabbatical Year. The Caution of Rich Men, taken Notice of by [Deut.xv.9.] Moses, who would not lend to their Brethren at the Approach of the Sabbatical Year, seems to prove, that after this Year nothing was to be hoped for from their Debtors. For if the Payment of Debts was only suspended till this Year was over and past, it would not have been a sufficient Motive to hinder them from lending. As there was no lending for Interest in the Case, which was forbid to the Hebrews towards their Brethren, as it could be only a simple Loan, the Creditor might require it again either before or after the Sabbatical Year, upon the Supposition of those who think that the Remission was not absolute[27].

[Rab. Grot.] Others distinguish between Debts mortgaged upon Security, the Contracts of which included a Clause of perpetual Debts; and those that were not mortgaged, but made upon simple Contracts: These last were for ever acquitted on the Sabbatical Year, but the others not so. Menochius also thinks, that the Remission of Debts was general and absolute, but not of Loans or Deposits. All this regarded only the natural Hebrews, or such as were Proselytes to Judaism, but not Strangers.

'Tis also inquired, whether Debts were remitted, and Slaves set at Liberty, at the Beginning or only at the End of the Sabbatical Year. The Hebrew says literally,[28] At the End of every seven Years thou shalt make a Release. This has given Occasion to some to think, that Debts were not remitted, nor Slaves set at Liberty, till the End of the Sabbatical Year. But most are of a contrary Opinion, that it was the Beginning of the Sabbatical Year. The original Text explains it very naturally of the End of the Week of the Year, after which came the Sabbatical Year, with which it concludes.

Sabbatical River, or Sabbation. Josephus says,[29] That, when Titus went into Syria, as he pass'd between the Cities of Arces or Arques, which belong'd to the Kingdom of Agrippa, and the City of Raphanea in Syria; he saw the River call'd the Sabbatical River, which falls from the Libanus into the Mediterranean Sea. This River runs only upon the Sabbath Day, or rather, at the end of seven Days. All the intermediate Time its Channel is dry; but on the seventh Day it flows in abundance into the Sea, and even with an impetuous Stream. Hence it comes, that the Inhabitants of the Country have given it the Name of the Sabbatical River. 'Tis probable that Pliny means the same River, when he says, that there is a Brook in Judea, which continues dry every seventh Day. In Judæa Rivus omnibus Sabbathis siccatur. A little before he speaks of a Fountain in the Isle of Andros, that every seventh Day yields a Liquor of the Taste of Wine; but this Liquor takes again the Quality of Water, as soon as it is taken at any Distance from the Temple of Bacchus, which is in this Island.

The Greek Text of Josephus intimates, as we have already said, that this River runs only on the Saturday: But to reconcile this with Pliny, who affirms, on the contrary, that it is dry only on the Saturday; and with other Evidences of but little Certainty, which speak of a certain Sabbatical River, which continues dry every Sabbath: Casaubon, Fuller, and some others[30], make a Transposition in the Greek Text of Josephus, to make him say the direct contrary of what he said before. It should seem indeed, that the Sabbatical River would not well express the Rest of the Sabbath, if it runs only upon this Day: To express it significantly, it ought to cease running on this Day, in Imitation of the Repose and Rest of the Jews.

The Rabbins[31] mention another Sabbatical River, or Sambation, but very different from this now spoken of. They place it beyond the Euphrates, in a very distant Country, where they pretend that the ten Tribes are still intire and subsisting: There they possess very great Riches and Estates. The River of which they speak, runs all the Week with a very rapid Stream, and makes so great a Noise, that it is heard in the Night-time at the Distance of a Day's Journey, and in the Day-time at half that Distance. It is so broad, so deep, and so rapid, that it is impossible to go over it; and on the Sabbath Day, on which it does not run at all, they place Guards on the River, that the Israelites may not go over it. Jonathan, the Son of Uziel, to whom is ascribed a Chaldee Paraphrase, has mention'd the River Sabbation. This Author, they say, is more antient than Josephus. But it is believed, the Paraphrase we have under his Name, was not his, and that Josephus is the first and only Author of the Sabbatical River, which probably never existed; at least nothing is known of it at this Day, nor is it mention'd by any Traveller or Geographer. For as to what Pliny says of it, 'tis very likely he took it from Josephus.

'Tis true, Dominick Magri, in his Travels into Syria, at the Age of nineteen Years, assures us, that he came to the Banks of the Sabbatical River with his Caravan, upon a Friday, June the Twenty -first, in the Evening, where he saw the River dry about Sun-set on the Friday, and continue dry till the next Day; when, the Caravan going away, he had not the Opportunity to observe, whether the River began to run again on Saturday-Evening, after the Rest of the Sabbath Day was over. This Traveller appeals to the Merchants in his Caravan, and the Country People that inhabit the Place, as Witnesses of what he affirms; and he infers from thence, that Josephus was mistaken when he says, that this River runs only upon the Saturday, since, on the contrary, it runs all the Week excepting Saturday. But it were to be wish'd, that Magri had observed not one Night only, but one or several whole Weeks, in order to have been a competent Witness of so extraordinary a Fact as this is. There are many Causes that may dry up a Stream that falls from the Mountains; and it is very possible, that, on this Occasion, Chance alone may have produced this Effect on the Friday Evening. See Bartolucci, Bibliotheca Rabbinica, t. 1. p. 117, 118.

Sabec

SABEC. In Genesis[1], instead of what we read in the Vulgate[2]. Abraham saw a Ram intangled by its Horns in a Ticket; Vidit arietem inter vepres hærentem cornibus. The Septuagint and Theodotion read, He saw a Ram caught by its Horns in the Bush Sabec. Philo, Eucherius, Diodorus, as well as the Septuagint and Theodotion, have taken the Hebrew Word Sabec for a particular Species of Shrubs. Eusebius of Emesa thinks, that Sabec signifies a Goat, because of its upright Horns. But the best Interpreters translate this Word by, Branches of Thorns and Briars entangled in one another.

Sabinus

[Joseph. Antiq. l. 17. c. 12.] SABINUS, Augustus's Procurator in Syria. After the Death of Herod the Great, and the Departure of Archelaus from Rome, he attempted to seize the Fortress of Jerusalem, and the Treasure that Herod left when he died: But he found such a vigorous Resistance from the People, that he could not at first compleat his Design. But after a great Struggle with the Jews, wherein they were much abused, he caus'd Fire to be put to the Doors of the Sacred Treasure, and took away four hundred Talents of it for his own Share, permitting his Officers and Soldiers to distribute the rest among them. This so provoked the People, that they besieged Sabinus in the Royal Palace, and press'd so hard upon him, that if he had not speedily sent to require Succour from Varus, then Governor of Syria, either he or his Soldiers would hardly have escaped out of their Hands. Varus therefore set out with his Troops, and came to Jerusalem; but Sabinus knowing himself guilty, durst not appear in his Presence, but thought best to retire towards the Sea-side, to avoid the Punishment he had deserved. This happen'd in the Year of the World 4001, of Christ 1, before the vulgar Era 3.

SACÆ. The Sacæ are a People of [Herodot. l. 3. Athenæ. l. 14 c. 10. This People has no other relation to our Subject, than that we believe Shesbach, mention'd by Jeremiah, xxv. 26. li. 41. stands for Babylon, and that the Sacean Feasts were celebrated in Honour to the Moon. Sack

SACK. Sack-cloth. This is a pure Hebrew Word, and has spread into almost all Languages. Besides the common Signification, which is very well known, it stands also for a Suit of Mourning, which was wore at the Death of a Friend or Relation. In great Calamities, in Penance, in Trouble, they wore Sack-cloth about their Bodies. Accingimini saccis & plangite ante exequias [2 Sam. iii. 31.] Abner. Gird yourselves with Sack-cloth, and mourn for Abner. Let us gird ourselves with Sack-cloth, and let us go and implore the Clemency of the King of Israel. Ahab tore [1 Kings xx. 31.] his Cloaths, put on a Shirt of Hair-cloth next to his Skin, fasted, and lay upon Sack-cloth. [1 Kings xxi. 27.] Dormivit in Sacco.

When Mordecai was inform'd of the Misfortune that threaten'd his Nation, he put on Sack-cloth, and cover'd his Head with Ashes. [Esth. iv. 1, 2, 3. Job xvi. 16.] Job says, that he has sew'd a Sack upon his Flesh.

On the contrary, in the Time of Joy, and upon the hearing of any good News, those that were clad in Sack-cloth, tore it from their Bodies, and cast it from them. Concidisti saccum meum, & circumdedisti me [Psal. xxix. 12.] lætitia, says the Psalmist.

The Prophets were commonly cloathed in Sack-cloth. The Lord bids Isaiah to put off the Sack-cloth that was about his Body, [Isa. xx. 2. Zech. xiii. 4.] and to go naked. Zechariah says, that the false Prophets should no longer prophesy in Sack-cloth, to deceive the Simple. St. John [Rev. xi. 3.] in the Revelations says, that the two Prophets that God should raise up at the End of the World, should prophesy a thousand, two hundred and sixty Years, cloathed in Sack-cloth. Baruch intimates, that this Habit of Sack-cloth, was that in which good People cloathed themselves when they went [Baruch iv. 20.] to Prayers. Exui me stola pacis, indui autem me sacco obsecrationis.

Sackbut

SACKBUT, Sambuca, a sort of antient [Dan. iii. 5, 7.] musical Instrument, which was in use in Chaldea, and which is thought to be a String -Instrument, of a shrill Sound, and which had generally but four Strings. Thus it is [Athæn. Dipnos. l. 14. c. 3. p. 633. Vitruv. l. 6. c. 1.] described by Athenæus, Vitruvius, and Festus. Athenæus gives us to understand, that this Instrument was pretty near the same as Magadis, Pectis, and Trigonos, String-Instruments, the Figure of which is not much known to us, but which cannot be very far from our modern Psaltery, except that they had not so many Strings. See our Dissertation upon the Instruments of Musick of the Hebrews, before the second Tome of the Commentary upon the Psalms. Isidore of [Isidor. Origin. l. 3.] Sevil seems to have thought, that it was a kind of Flute or Haut-bois, since he says, that Sambuca takes its Name from the Elder-tree, call'd in Latin Sambucus, because at first this Instrument was made with a Pipe of Elder.

Sacrament

SACRAMENT, Sacramentum; in Greek, Mysterion. The Word Sacramentum, is taken, in the Scripture [of the Latin Vulgate], First, for a Secret: Sacramentum Regis abscondere bonum est; It is good to [Tob. xii. 7.] keep the King's Secret. And, Nescierunt sacramenta Dei; The Wicked know not [Wis. ii. 22.] the Secrets of God. Secondly, for a Mystery, a Mysterious and hidden thing. For Example; Nebuchadnezzar's mysterious Dream, which he had forgot, was revealed [Dan. ii. 18, 19. Ephes. i. 9. iii. 3, 9.] to Daniel, with its Interpretation: Ut quærerent misericordiam Dei super sacramento isto. Tunc Danieli mysterium per visionem nocte revelatum est, &c. Thirdly and lastly, it is put for a Sacrament of the New Law, and for the Mysteries of our holy Religion. All this agrees well with the general Sense of Mystery and Secret. St. Paul calls Sacramentum, the Mystery of the Incarnation of Jesus Christ, the Vocation of the Gentiles, the Sacrament of Marriage; lastly, the whole OEconomy [Col. i. 27. Eph. v. 32.] of Man's Salvation, and of the New Covenant. See 1 Tim. iii. 16.

Sacraments of the Old Law. These are, all the Ceremonies, Sacrifices, Expiations, Unctions, Benedictions, Consecrations, that were practised under the Law of Moses. All these Things were mysterious and figurative. Circumcision represented Baptism; the Sabbath, the Rest Everlasting; the Paschal Lamb, the Death of Jesus Christ; the Shew -bread, the holy Eucharist; the Unction of the Priests, used in the Sacrament of Orders; the Expiations, Purifications, Lustrations, the Sacrament of Penance: The Sacrifices, Oblations, Libations, the Sacrifice of Jesus Christ, which is renewed every Day upon the Altar in an unbloody manner; the Tabernacle, the Ark of the Covenant, the Altar of Burnt Sacrifices, that of Incense, and the other Ceremonies that were practised in the Temple-ministry, represented the Body of the Christian Religion, and the Ceremonies that accompany the Administration of the Sacraments of the New Law; not to mention the other Relation that these may have with Heaven and the State of the Blessed, of which St. Paul has discover'd the Mystery, in his Epistle to the Hebrews, ch. ix. ver. 1, 2, 3, &c.

The Sacraments of the New Law. These have infinitely the Preference before those of the Old Law. St. Paul says, those of the Jews were weak and beggarly Elements, which of themselves had no Grace or Efficacy: Infirma & egena elementa. And that the Priesthood and Ceremonies of the Law were abrogated and annulled, because of their Weakness and Insufficiency: For there is verily a Disannulling of the Commandment going before, for the Weakness and Unprofitableness thereof. For the Law made nothing perfect; but the bringing in of a better Hope did, by the which we draw nigh unto God. But those of the New Law are much fewer in Number, are much more excellent, and much easier to put in practice, than those of the Law of Moses. Sacramentis [Aug. Ep. 54. nov. edit. t. 2. p. 124. a.] numero paucissimis observatione facillimis, significatione præstantissimis, Christus societatem novi populi colligavit. They are more venerable and august in what they represent, more excellent in what they operate, more useful in those supernatural Gifts they procure us, more easy in the Practice. Virtute majora, utilitate meliora, actu faciliora, [Aug. l. 19. contra Faust. c. 12. t. 8. p. 320. a.] numero pauciora, quàm antiqua.

The Sacraments of the New Law, are visible Signs of an invisible Grace, instituted by Jesus Christ, for the Sanctification of our Souls. They are in Number Seven: 1. Baptism: 2. Confirmation: 3. Penance: 4. The Eucharist: 5. Extreme Unction: 6. Orders: 7. Marriage.

Baptism makes us Christians, and Children of God: It was instituted by Jesus [Matthew xxviii. 19.] Christ, when he said to his Apostles, Go ye therefore, and teach all Nations, baptising them in the Name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost. The natural Water, is the Matter of this Sacrament; its Form, are the Words now recited; its Effects, are the Remission of original and actual Sins, and the Christian Badge and Character which it communicates to those who receive it.

Confirmation makes us compleat Christians, and gives us an indelible Character. Its special Effect is, to give us the Spirit of God, and Ability to confess his Name, and to maintain the Truths of our Religion, even to the Peril of our Lives. Jesus [Luke xii. 12. John xiv. 17,26. xv. 26,&c. Acts i. 5. Acts ii. 2,4. Acts viii. 15.] Christ had promised to send his Holy Ghost to his Disciples; and he actually did send him on the Day of Pentecost; and the Apostles communicated him, by the Imposition of Hands, to the Faithful who had received Baptism. The Bishops, who are the Apostles Successors, are the only Ministers of this Sacrament; the Matter of which is, the Imposition of Hands, with the Unction of the holy Chrism; and the Form is, the Words pronounced by the Bishop in performing this Ceremony.

[Mat. xvi. 19. & xviii. 18.] Penance is instituted by Jesus Christ, for the Remission of Sins committed after Baptism: Our Saviour instituted it, when he [Gal. iv. 9. Hebr. vii. 18, 19.] gave the Apostles the Power of Binding and Loosing. The Sins to be remitted, are the Object of this Sacrament: The Acts of the Penitent, that is, Contrition, Confession, and Satisfaction, are its essential Parts; Absolution given by the Priest, is, as it were, the Completion of it.

[Mark vi. 13. James v. 13,14,15.] The Eucharist, is the Sacrament of the Body and Blood of Jesus Christ, which are represented under the Appearances of Bread and Wine. Our Saviour instituted it at his Last Supper, which he eat with his Apostles the Evening before his Passion, when, taking Bread, he said, Take and eat, this is my Body: And taking the Cup, he said, Take and drink, this is my Blood.

[Mat. xxvii. 26,27,28. Luke xxii. 17, 18. Mark xiv. 22,23,&c.] Extreme Unction, is a Sacrament instituted by God, for the Consolation of the Sick, both spiritual and corporal. It gives them Strength against the Temptations of the Devil, and against the Terrors of Death. It purges away the Remains of Sin, and even Sins themselves, if there still remain any to be expiated; and it restores Health to the Sick, if that be necessary for their Salvation. St. Mark says, that the Apostles being sent to preach the Gospel in the Cities of Judea, anointed with Oil many that were sick, and healed them. And St. James says, Is any sick among you? let him call for the Elders of the Church, and let them pray over him, anointing him with Oil in the Name of the Lord: And the Prayer of Faith shall save the Sick, and the Lord shall raise him up; and if he have committed Sins, they shall be forgiven him.

Orders, are a Sacrament established by Jesus Christ, to consecrate Ministers for the Use of his Church, and to give them the Power of administring the Sacraments, and to perform the other Duties of their Function. There are several Degrees of Orders, as there are several Functions in the Ministry of the Church; but there is but one only Sacrament of Orders, or Ordination, in which the Bishops, the Priests, the Deacons, the Subdeacons, and the inferior Orders partake, every one in his Manner. Besides the Sanctifying Grace that this Sacrament confers, it communicates a Character also, that for ever remains indelible. The ordinary Minister for Ordination, is the Bishop alone, who, by divine Right, is superior to the Priests. Jesus Christ instituted this Sacrament, when breathing upon his Apostles, he said to them, Receive ye the Holy Ghost. [John xx. 21, 22.] Whose-soever Sins ye remit, they are remitted unto them; and whose-soever Sins ye retain, they are retained.

Marriage, is a Sacrament instituted by Jesus Christ, to unite together a Man and his Wife by indissoluble Bands; that becoming but one Flesh, they may procreate and bring up Children in the Fear of the [John ii. 1, 2.] Lord. Jesus Christ sanctified Marriage, by his own Presence at the Wedding of Cana. He has established the Indissolubility of it, by revoking the Law of Divorce, and allowing [Matth. v. 31, 32.] it only in the single Case of Adultery; and besides, not permitting the Parties so separated to marry again. Lastly, The Apostle has taught us, That the Marriage of Christians was a great Sacrament, or a great Mystery, because it represents the Union of Jesus Christ with his Church: [Ephes. v. 32.] This is a great Mystery: But I speak concerning Christ and the Church.

The Reader may see what we have said upon each Sacrament, in their proper Articles.

Sacrifice

SACRIFICE, is an Offering made to God upon his Altars, by the Hand of a lawful Minister, to acknowledge his Power, and to pay him Homage. Sacrifice differs from a meer Oblation, in this, that in a Sacrifice there must be a real Change or Destruction of the Thing offered; whereas an Oblation is but a simple Offering of a Gift. As Men have always been under an Obligation of acknowledging the Supreme Dominion of God over them, and whatever belongs to them, and as there have always been found Persons that have conscientiously acquitted themselves of this Duty; we may affirm, that there have always been Sacrifices in the World. Adam and his Sons, Noah and his Descendants, Abraham and his Posterity, Job and Melchisedech before the Law, have offered to God real Sacrifices. The Law did nothing more than ascertain the Quality, the Number, and other Circumstances of Sacrifices. Before that, all was Arbitrary. They offered the Fruits of the Earth, the Fat or the Milk of Animals, the Fleeces of Sheep, or the Blood and the Flesh of the Victims. Every one pursued his own Humour, his Acknowledgment, his Zeal, or his Devotion: But among the Jews, the Law appointed what they were to offer, and in what Quantities. Before the Law was given, every one was the Priest and Minister of his own Sacrifices; at least he was at liberty to chuse what Priest he pleas'd, to offer his Victims. Generally this Honour was conferr'd upon the most Antient, or Head of a Family, on Princes, or Men of the greatest Virtue and Integrity. But after Moses, this was wholly confined to the Family of Aaron.

'Tis disputed, whether, at first, there were any other Sacrifices than Burnt-offerings: No other appear in Scripture. The Talmudists assure us, that Abel offered only Holocausts, consuming the Flesh of the Victim by Fire; because it was not allow'd to eat any of it. Grotius is of Opinion, that this Patriarch did not offer any bloody Sacrifices. The Text of Moses informs us,[1] that he offered of the First-lings of his Flock, and of the Fat thereof. But the Hebrew may be translated by, of the First-fruits, and the Milk. We are told, that the Antients offered to God only the Fruits of the Earth, Herbs, Flowers, Honey, Milk, Wheat, Wool:

[Ovid. Fast. l. 4.] Lacte mero veteres usi narrantur, & herbis, Sponte suâ si quas terra ferebat.

We are told also,[2] that the Antients put no Fire to their Sacrifices, but obtain'd it by their Prayers; and most of the Fathers think,[3] it was thus that God declared the Sacrifices of Abel to be agreeable to him: He consumed them, as they say, by a Fire sent from Heaven; which was a Favour not vouchsafed to Cain's Sacrifices. In the same manner he set Fire to the Sacrifices offered at Aaron's Consecration, to those offered by Gideon, to those offered by Solomon at the Dedication of his Temple, to those of Elijah upon Mount Carmel, and to those offer'd by the Maccabees at restoring the Worship of the Temple, after it had been prophaned by Antiochus Epiphanes.

The Hebrews had properly but three sorts of Sacrifices, which are, the Burnt-offering, or Holocaust; the Sacrifice for Sin, or the Sacrifice of Expiation; and the Pacifick Sacrifice, or Sacrifice of Thanksgiving. Besides these, there were several Kinds of Offerings, of Corn, of Meal, of Cakes, of Wine, of Fruits; and one Manner of Sacrificing, which has no relation to any we have now mentioned, which is, the setting [Lev. xiv. 4, 5, 6, 7, 51, 52, 53.] at Liberty one of the two Sparrows that were offered for the Purification of leprous [Lev. xvi. 10, 26.] Persons; and the Scape-goat, which was taken to a distant and steep Place, where it was left at Liberty: These Animals, thus left to themselves, were esteem'd as Victims of Expiation, which were loaded with the Sins of those that offered them.

The Holocaust was offered and burnt quite up, on the Altar of Burnt-offerings, without any Reserve to the Person that gave the Victim, or to the Priest that kill'd and sacrificed it; only the Priest had the [Philo de Præmiis Sacerdot. & Levit. vii. 8.] Benefit of the Skin: For before the Sacrifices were offered to the Lord, their Skins were flay'd off, and their Feet and Intrails were wash'd. See HOLOCAUSTS, and Lev. chap. i.

The Sacrifice for Sin, or for Expiation, or the Purification of a Man who had fallen into any Offence against the Law, was not entirely consumed upon the Fire of the Altar. Nothing of it return'd to him that had given it, but the sacrificing Priest had a Share in it; and these are the Particulars [Levit. ch. iv, v.] that were observed in this Case: If it were the High-priest who had offended through Ignorance, he offered a Calf without Blemish: He brought it to the Door of the Tabernacle, put his Hand upon the Head of the Sacrifice, confess'd his Sin, asked Pardon for it, kill'd and stuck the Calf, carry'd its Blood into the Tabernacle, with his Finger made seven Aspersions towards the Veil that separated the Holy Place from the Sanctuary, put a little of this Blood upon the Altar of Incense, and afterwards poured out all the rest at the Foot of the Altar of Burnt Sacrifices: After this, he took away the Fat that covered the Kidneys, the Liver, and the Bowels; he put the Whole upon the Fire of the Altar of Burnt Sacrifices; and as to the Skin, the Feet, the Bowels, and the Flesh of the Sacrifice, he caused them to be burnt out of the Camp, in a clean Place, where they used to put the Ashes that were taken away from the Altar of Burnt Sacrifices.

Secondly, If it were the whole People that had offended, they were to offer a Calf in like manner. The Elders shall bring it to the Altar of the Tabernacle, shall put their Hands upon its Head, and confess their Offence; after which, the Priest shall stick the Victim, shall carry its Blood into the Holy Place, shall make seven Aspersions towards the Veil, shall put some upon the Horns of the Altar of Incense, shall pour out the rest at the Foot of the Altar of Burnt Sacrifices, shall burn the Fat upon the said Altar; and the rest of the Body, the Feet, the Skin, and the Bowels, shall be burnt out of the Camp, as has been said of the Sin-offering of the High-priest.

Thirdly, If it be the Prince of the People that has offended, he shall offer a Goat,[4] shall bring it to the Door of the Tabernacle, shall put his Hands upon its Head, and shall confess his Sin. The Priest shall sacrifice it, shall put of the Blood of the Victim upon the Horns of the Altar of Burnt Sacrifices, shall pour out the rest of the Blood at the Foot of the same Altar, shall burn the Fat upon the Fire of the Altar, and the rest of the Sacrifice shall be for himself. He shall be obliged to eat it in the Tabernacle, and not dare to carry any of it without.

Fourthly, If it be only a private Person who has committed an Offence, he shall offer a Sheep, or a She-goat without Blemish, shall present it to the Priest at the Door of the Tabernacle, shall put his Hands upon the Head of the Sacrifice. The Priest shall sacrifice it, shall put some of the Blood upon the Horns of the Altar of Burnt Sacrifices, shall pour out the rest at the Foot of the same Altar, upon which he shall burn the Fat; and all the rest shall be his own.

But if he is not of Ability to offer a Sheep or a She-goat, he shall offer two Turtles, or two young Pigeons; one for his Sin, and the other for a Burnt Offering. That which is for the Burnt-offering, shall be entirely consumed upon the Fire of the Altar. That which shall be offered for his Sin, shall be presented to the Priest, who shall pull off its Head, as some say, or only violently twist it about towards the Wings, without pulling it off, shall make an Aspersion with the Blood of this Bird towards the Altar, shall spill the rest of the Blood at the Foot of the same Altar; and the Flesh shall be his own.

Lastly, If the Person was so poor, as that he could not afford to offer either a She-goat, or two Turtles, he might offer the tenth Part of an Ephah of Meal, that is, a little more than a Gallon of Meal, without Oil or Spice. He presented it to the Priest, who took a Handful of it, and threw it upon the Fire, and the rest was for himself. There are some other Circumstances belonging to this Matter, which may be seen in Leviticus, ch. v. 15, 16. and ch. vi. 1, 2, 3. concerning the Faults in which, besides the Sin-offering and Sacrifice of Expiation, there is a kind of Amends to be made, or Obligation of Restitution to the Lord, or to the Persons offended, according to the Nature of the Offence: For as to the rest, the Ceremonies were always the same.

As to the Sacrifice for Sin, when a Ram was offered, his Rump or Tail was burnt [Lev. vii. 2, 3.] also, which was very fat, along with the rest of the Fat. But if it was a Goat, the Fat only was burnt.

The Peace-offering was offered, to return Thanks to God for his Benefits, or to ask Favours from him, or to satisfy any one's private Devotion, or, lastly, for the Honour of God only. The Israelites offered them when they pleas'd, and there was no Law that obliged them to it. It was free to 'em to present what Animals they would, provided they were such as it was allow'd them to sacrifice. In these Sacrifices no Distinction was observ'd, either of the Age or Sex of the Victim, as was required in the Burnt Sacrifices, and the Sacrifices for Sin. The Law only requir'd, that their Victims [Lev. iii.] should be without Blemish. He that presented them came to the Door of the Tabernacle, put his Hand upon the Head of the Victim, and kill'd it. The Priest pour'd out the Blood about the Altar of Burnt Sacrifices; burnt upon the Fire of the Altar the Fat which is in the Lower Belly, that which covers the Kidneys, the Liver, and the Bowels. And if it were a Lamb, or a Ram, he added to it the Rump of the Animal, which, in that Country, is always very fat.

Before these Things were set in Order upon the Fire of the Altar, the Priest put them into the Hands of the Person that [Lev. vii. 30, 31, &c.] provided the Victim, then made him lift them up on high, and wave them towards the four Quarters of the World, the Priest supporting and directing his Hands. The Breast and the Right Shoulder of the Sacrifice belong'd to the Priest that perform'd the Service; and it appears, that each of 'em were put into the Hands of him that offered them, tho' Moses mentions only the Breast of the Animal. After this, all the rest of the Sacrifice belong'd to him that presented it to the Priest, and he might eat it with his Family and Friends, as any other Meat.

The Sacrifices or Offerings of Meal, or Liquors, which were offered for Sin, were in favour of the poorer Sort, who could not afford Sacrifices of Oxen, of Goats, or of [Lev. vi. 14, 15, &c.] Sheep: They contented themselves with offering Meal or Flour, sprinkled with Oil, with Spice (or Frankincense) over it. And the Priest taking an Handful of this Flour, with all the Frankincense, sprinkled them upon the Fire of the Altar; and all the rest of the Flour was his own: He was to eat it without any Leaven in the Tabernacle, and none but the Priests were to taste of it. As to the other Offerings, where they presented Fruits, Wine, Meal, Wafers, or any thing else, the Priest always cast a Part of it upon the Altar, all the rest belong'd to him and the other Priests. These Offerings were always accompany'd with Salt and Wine, but without any Leaven. Levit. ii. 1, 2, 3, &c.

Those Sacrifices, in which they set at Liberty a Bird or a Goat, were not properly Sacrifices; because there was no shedding of Blood, and the Victim remain'd alive and sound. It was thus they set at Liberty the Sparrow that was offered for [Lev. xiv. 4, 5, &c.] the Purification of a Leper, or of a House spotted with Leprosy. They presented to the Priest a Couple of Sparrows, or two clean Birds, with a Bundle made up of Cedar-wood and Hyssop, and tied with a scarlet String. The Priest kill'd one of the Birds over running Water, which was in a clean Vessel of fresh Earth; afterwards, tying the living Sparrow to the Bundle of Cedar and Hyssop, with the Tail turn'd towards the Handle of the Vessel, he plunged it in the Water drench'd with the Blood of the first Sparrow, sprinkled the Leper or the House with it; then set the living Sparrow at liberty, and let it go where it pleas'd.

The other sort of Animal that was set at liberty was a Goat; and this is the Occasion upon which it was done: On the Day of solemn Expiation, the Multitude of the Children of Israel presented to the High-priest at the Door of the Tabernacle, two Goats for a Sin-offering. The High-priest then cast Lots upon the two Goats, which should be sacrificed to the Lord, and which should be set at liberty, or be the Scape-goat, the Azazel, as the Hebrews call it. He that was determined by Lot to be sacrificed, was put to death, and offered for the Sins of the People. He that, on the other hand, was to be set at liberty, was brought alive before the Lord. The High-priest said over him certain Prayers, laid his two Hands upon his Head, confess'd the Sins of the whole Congregation, charged therewith the Head of the Goat with Imprecations, then sent him into the Wilderness by a Man appointed to that Office. See the Articles AZAZEL and SCAPE-GOAT.

The Sacrifices of Birds, were offered on three Occasions. First, for Sin, when the Person offering was not rich enough to [Lev. v. 7, 8, &c. Lev. xii. 6, 7.] provide a four-footed Animal for a Victim. Secondly, for the Purification of a Woman after her Lying-in. When she could offer a Lamb and a young Pigeon, she gave them both; the Lamb for a

Burnt -offering, and the Pigeon for a Sin-offering. But if she was not of Ability to offer a Lamb, she gave a Pair of Turtles, or a Pair of young Pigeons, to be offered, one for a Burnt-offering, and the other for a Sin-offering. Thirdly, they offered two Sparrows for those who were purified from the the Leprosy; one as a Burnt-offering, and the other was a Scape-sparrow, as we have said before.

For the Sacrifice of the Paschal Lamb, see PASSOVER.

[Gal. iv. 9.] The Perpetual Sacrifice, call'd by the Hebrews, Thamid: The Lord had appointed, that they should offer every Day a two Lambs upon the Altar of Burnt-offerings, one in the Morning, and another at Evening. They were burnt as Holocausts, but by a small Fire, that they might continue burning the longer. The Sheep of the Morning was offer'd about Sun-rising, after the Incense was burnt upon the golden Altar, and before any other Sacrifice. That in the Evening was offer'd between the two Vespers, that is to say, at the Decline of the Day, and before the Night began. With each of these Victims was offer'd half a Pint of Wine, as much of the purest Oil, and an Asaron, or about three Pints of the finest Flour.

And such were the Sacrifices of the Hebrews: Sacrifices indeed very imperfect, and altogether incapable of themselves to purify the Defilements of the Soul. St. Paul has comprehended the Sacrifices, and the other Ceremonies of the Law, under the Character of weak and beggarly Elements. They represented Grace and Purity, but they did not communicate it, says St. Austin:[5] Gratiam multiplicatio victimarum significabat, non efficiebat. They convinced the Sinner of the Necessity that was incumbent on him, to purify himself, and make Satisfaction to God; but they did not impart Innocence to him.[6] Convincebantur peccatores potius quam mundabantur. Lastly, all these Sacrifices were no other than Prophecies and Figures of the true Sacrifice which is offer'd in the Christian Church, and which eminently includes all the Virtues and Qualities of the other Sacrifices;[7] being at the same Time an Holocaust, a Sacrifice for Sin, and a Sacrifice of Thanksgiving; but with this Difference, that it contains the whole Substance and Efficacy, of which the antient Sacrifices were only the Shadow and Representation.

The Sacrifice of the Christian Church is only one. It consists in the Body and Blood of Jesus Christ, offer'd and sacrificed by the Ministry of the Priests upon the Altar, under the Species of Bread and Wine. 'Twas this Sacrifice that was represented by all those of the Jews, and which was the Object of the Confidence of all the Saints, and of all the Prophets of the Old Testament, who had in View this one Oblation, in all those bloody Sacrifices that they offer'd to the Lord. The Paschal Lamb, the Burnt-offerings of every Day, Representation. 'Twas this Sacrifice that was foretold in an express Manner by Malachi, in these Words: I have no Plea-Mal. i. sure in you, saith the Lord of Hosts, neither 10, 11. will I accept an Offering from your Hand. For from the rising of the Sun, even unto the going down of the same, my Name shall be great among the Gentiles, and in every Place Incense shall be offered to my Name, and a pure Offering: For my Name shall be great among the Heathen, saith the Lord of Hosts. In this Prophecy may be seen two essential Points of our Religion admirably well established. First, the Abolition of the Sacrifices, and the Ceremonies of the old Law; and secondly, a new Sacrifice offer'd in the Name of the Lord, in every Place, and in the midst of the Nations. See before the Article MASS.

The Sacrifice of an humble and contrite Heart, is that Sacrifice, that, on our Part, constitutes the whole Merit of all the other Sacrifices that we can offer to God. The Sacrifices of God are a broken Spirit; a broken and a contrite Heart, O God, thou wilt not despise. The Jews, without these Dispositions, could not offer to God any Offering that was agreeable to him; and even the Sacrifice of our Altars, as divine and excellent as it is in itself, becomes of no use, but even dangerous, to those that offer it, or that partake of it, with Inclinations and Dispositions contrary to those; or, at least, who do not desire them, and endeavour to acquire them. God often explains himself upon this Matter in the Prophets. Sacrifice and Offering thou didst not desire, mine Ears hast thou opened: Burnt-offering and Sin-offering hast thou not required. To what purpose is the Multitude of your Sacrifices unto me? saith the Lord. I am full of the Burnt-offerings of Rams, and the Fat of fed Beasts, and I delight not in the Blood of Bullocks, or of Lambs, or of He-goats. When ye come to appear before me, who hath required this at your Hands to tread my Courts? Bring no more vain Oblations; Incense is an Abomination unto me, the New-Moons and Sabbaths, the calling of Assemblies, I cannot away with, it is Iniquity, even the solemn Meeting. Your New-Moons and your appointed Feasts my Soul hateth, they are a Trouble unto me; I am weary to bear them. See Jerem. xxxv. 15. Amos v. 21, 22. Hos. xiv. 2, 3, 4. Joel xi. 12, 13, &c. Psal. xlix. 2.

Human Sacrifices. The natural Notion common to all Mankind, that we must[8] offer to God whatever we have that is most valued by us, has prevail'd on several so far, as to offer Human Sacrifices. It is not agreed, who was the first that introduc'd this Custom. Some a ascribe it to Ilus, call'd otherwise Saturn, who, they say, brought it into Practice among the Phenicians. He offer'd up to the Gods his own Son Jehid, whom he had by the Nymph Anobroth. Philo the Jew insinuates,[9] that the Custom of offering such Sacrifices was known in the Land of Canaan before Abraham; and some learned Men think[10], that the Example of these People, took off much of that Horror that Abraham would otherwise have had, at the Intention of sacrificing his own Son, when he had received that Command from God.

But it is much more probable, that Abraham was the first who attempted to sacrifice his own Son; and that it was his Example ill apply'd, that gave a Rise to this Custom. Sanchoniathon, who is quoted for the Sacrifice of Jehid, made by Ilus, is an Author without any Authority. Philo does not deny indeed, but that the Custom of offering Human Sacrifices might obtain in Palestine before Abraham's Time; but he maintains, that this Patriarch, in the Sacrifice he was going to make, had no Intention to imitate these People, whose Manners and Idolatry he abhorr'd. What Motive could he have to this Action? Was it Fear, Hope, Vanity, Ostentation, the Desire of Praise, or of Riches? Isaac was every thing to him; yet the express Command of God would not allow him to hesitate upon a Matter so contrary to his Inclinations, and so opposite to his Interest.

As to the Human Sacrifices customary in Palestine, in Africa, in Gaul, and almost all the World over, it must be own'd they were very antient, and that they did really sacrifice Men to their false Gods. I know that some learned Men[11] have thought, that among the Canaanites and Moabites, they contented themselves with making the Children to pass through the Flames, or between two Fires, which they call'd, Lustrare per ignem; and I doubt not, but sometimes they did so. But for the most part they really consumed them in the Flames, which is easily proved.

[Lev. xviii. 21.] Moses in Leviticus forbids them to make their Children pass through the Fire in Honour of Moloch. De semine tuo non dabis ut consecretur Idolo Moloch. The Hebrew says, you shall not give your Children to make them pass to Moloch. And this some understand of a Lustration only, like what is mention'd in prophane Authors. Moxq; per ardentes stipulæ crepitantis acervos, Trajicias coleri strenua membra pede; Omnia purgat edax ignis.

Besides, the Scripture makes mention of a Son of King Ahaz,[12] who had been offer'd to Moloch, and yet reigned after his Father.

But there are so many other Evidences, that they burn'd their Children in Honour of false Gods, that it cannot reasonably be call'd in question. Thus the Scripture speaks of this Crime, Levit. xx. 1, 2, 3. Whosoever he be of the Children of Israel, or of the Strangers that sojourn in Israel, that giveth any of his Seed to Moloch; he shall surely be put to Death, the People of the Land shall stone him with Stones. And I will set my Face against that Man, and will cut him off from among his People: because he hath given of his Seed unto Moloch, to defile my Sanctuary, and to prophane my Holy Name. And if the People of the Land do any ways hide their Eyes from the Man, when he giveth of his Seed unto Moloch, and kill him not; then I will set my Face against that Man, and against his Family, and will cut him off, and all that go a whoring after him, to commit Whoredom with Moloch, from among their People. Moses again repeats these Prohibitions, Deut. xviii. 10. And it appears from Amos, that notwithstanding [Amos v. 26.] these Prohibitions, the People did not forbear even in the Desart, to carry with them a Tent consecrated to the God Moloch.

The Passage that speaks of the Consecration that King Abaz made, of one of his Sons to the God Moloch, does indeed only mention, that he made him pass thro' the [2 Kings xvi. 3.] Fire. Consecravit transferens per ignem. But the Scripture adds, that in this he imitated the Abominations of the People of Canaan, whom the Lord had exterminated, and driven out before the Children of Israel. But it is beyond all doubt, that the Canaanites put their Children to Death in Honour [Ps. cv. 37.] of their Gods. Et immolaverunt filios & filias suas Dæmoniis, & effuderunt sanguinem innocentem, sanguinem filiorum suorum, & filiarum suarum quas sacrificaverunt sculptilibus Chanaan. Jeremiah says, They have [Jer. xix. 5.] built also the high Places of Baal, to burn their Sons with Fire, for Burnt-offerings unto Baal. See also the same Prophet, xxxii. 35. It is certain, that, for these Crimes chiefly, God drove out the Canaanites. See Deut. xviii. 10, 11. And Wisdom, xii. 5. Odibilia opera tibi faciebant, per medicamina & sacrificia injusta, & filiorum suorum peccatores sine misericordia.[13]

The Phenicians, who were a Remnant of the Canaanites, continued this barbarous Custom in their Country, which they justify'd by the Example of Ilus or Saturn, as we have shewn above: They carry'd this Custom along with their Colonies into Africa, where it continued for a very long Time. When Gelo, King of Sicily, conquer'd the Carthaginians, by the Treaty [Plutarch Apophth.] he made with them, he obliged them to renounce this Custom of Sacrificing their Children to Saturn. Justin assures us, that [Just. l. 18.] Darius imposed the same Commands upon them by an Embassy, to leave off their Human Sacrifices. But notwithstanding all this, they continued these Practices till the Proconsulate of Tiberias, who caus'd the Priests of Saturn to be hanged upon Trees that were near their Temples. Diodorus [Tertull. Apologet.] Siculus[14] also gives us a Description of Saturn, as adored by the Carthaginians: 'Twas a Figure of Copper, the Hands of which were turn'd backwards, and bending towards the Ground; so that when they put upon his Arms a Child to be consecrated to him, he immediately fell into a Pan of burning Coals beneath, and died miserably at the Feet of the Deity.

'Twould be to little Purpose to heap up here a great Number of Examples of the sacrificing of human Victims. Porphyrius assures us, that the Book of Sanchoniathon was full of them. These Sacrifices were frequent, not only in Phenicia, in Palestine, in the Countries of Ammon and [2 Kings iii. 24.] Moab, in Idumea, in Arabia, and in Egypt,[15] but also in Gaul, among the Scythians, the Thracians, in the Isles of Rhodes, Chios and Cyprus, and even among the Athenians, and finally also in America.

As to what is affirm'd, that Ahaz had the same Son for his Successor, whom he had made to pass through the Fire in Honour to Moloch, no Proof can be given of this. 'Tis true, his Successor was Hezekiah; but he might have had several other Sons. We know another of his Sons, whose Name was Maasiah, who was put to Death at the [2 Chron. xxviii. 7.] Command of the King of Israel.

Sacrilege

SACRILEGE, Sacrilegium. The Action of one that prophanes holy Things, or that commits any Outrage against Persons consecrated to God. The Theft, the Abuse, the Prophanation of sacred Things is Sacrilege. The Scripture gives the Name of Sacrilege to Idolatry, and to other Crimes that more directly insult the Deity. And he is call'd Sacrilegious, Sacrilegus, that commits a Sacrilege, an Impiety, a Prophanation of holy Things; who usurps the Priesthood, who approaches the Sacraments unworthily, who plunders or pillages Things that are dedicated to God.

Sadai

SADAI, Shadai, or Saddai[1]. This is one of the Names of God among the Hebrews, which the Septuagint and St. Jerom generally translate by Almighty. It is most [Numbers xxiv. 4, 16. Ruth i. 21. Job vi. 4.] commonly put alone. For Example, Which saw the Vision of the Almighty, or Shadai. The Almighty (or Shadai) hath afflicted me. The Arrows of the Almighty (or Shadai) are within me. Job makes more frequent Use of this Word, than any other of the sacred Writers. It is not at all found in the Books of Solomon. Sometimes it is join'd with the Word El, which is another Name of God, El-Shadai, God-Almighty. It should seem that the Word Sadai is derived from the Hebrew Sadad, or Shadad, which signifies to ravage, to ruin, to pillage; as much as to say, God the Destroyer, the God of Devastation. Or, according to another Derivation, it may be render'd, the God of the Fields, or the God of Nipples.

Sadoc (II)

II. SADOC, Founder of the Sect of the Saducees. This is what almost all have said, who have treated of this Sect; but they inform us but very little concerning his Person. 'Tis said,[1] that Sadoc succeeded one Antigonus Socchæus, as a Disciple succeeds his Master, in the Tradition of his Doctrine; which Antigonus had in the same manner succeeded Simon the Just, the High-priest of the Jews. But Simon the Just died in the Year of the World 3711, before the vulgar Era 293. So that Sadoc may have lived about the Year of the World 3740.

Antigonus, Master to Sadoc, was, as it is thought, the Head of a particular Sect, who, out of an Excess of Spirituality, taught, that we must give to the Lord a pure and disinterested Worship. Be not like Slaves, said Antigonus to his Scholars; do not obey your God only on a Prospect of a Recompence, but obey him without any Views of Self-interest, and without hoping for any Recompence for your Labours: Let the Fear of the Lord be upon you. His Disciple Sadoc being not able to conform himself to so disinterested a Morality, and yet not being willing to abandon his Master, for whom he had a Respect, gave this Maxim of his a quite contrary turn to what he himself had intended. For he drew this Conclusion from it, that there was no Recompence to be hoped for, nor any Punishment to be fear'd, after this Life; and that Good was to be done, and Evil to be avoided, without any View either to Hope or Fear.

Some Rabbins make Sadoc a Disciple of Dositheus,[2] and pretend that he withdrew to Samaria; that he made a Schism from the other Jews, and worshipp'd upon Mount Gerizim. But this Sentiment cannot be supported, since Dositheus the Samaritan lived a long Time after Sadoc, and a little while after the Death of Jesus Christ.[3] Others will have it,[4] that Alexander the Great having permitted the Samaritans to build a Temple upon Mount Gerizim, Sadoc, Boetus, and several other prevaricating Jews, went to worship upon Gerizim, and thus separated themselves from Simon the Just and Antigonus Socchæus, who continued always stedfast to the Temple at Jerusalem. Lastly, there are some,[5] who, without recurring to Sadoc at all, pretend that the Word Saducees comes from the Hebrew Sedec, which signifies Justice; and that they took this Name to distinguish themselves from others; being desirous to pass for great Lovers of Justice. Josephus observes,[6] that they were very severe in punishing for Faults.

Saducees

SADUCEES, Disciples of Sadoc now mention'd. They constituted one of the four principal Sects of the Jews. What chiefly distinguish'd them from the other Jews, was the Opinion they maintain'd concerning the Existence of Angels, and the Immortality of the Soul. They did not deny but that we had reasonable Souls; but they maintain'd this Soul was mortal;[1] and, by a necessary Consequence, they deny'd the Rewards and Punishments of another Life. [Joseph. ibidem.] They pretended also, that what is said of the Existence of Angels, and of a future Resurrection, are nothing but Illusions.[2] St. Epiphaneus,[3] and after him St. Austin,[4] have advanced, that the Saducees deny'd the Holy Ghost. But neither Josephus, nor the Evangelists accuse them of any Error like this. It has been also imputed to them, that they thought God to be corporeal; and that they received none of the Prophecies.

It is pretty difficult to apprehend how they could deny the being of Angels, and yet receive the Books of Moses, where such frequent mention is made of Angels, and of their Appearances. It is very likely they look'd upon Angels, not as particular Beings, and subsisting of themselves, but as Powers, Emanations, or Qualities inseparable from the Deity,[5] much as the Sunbeams are inseparable from the Sun. Or perhaps they held Angels not to be spiritual, but mortal; just as they thought that Substance to be, which animates us and thinks in us. The Antients do not acquaint us how they solved this Difficulty, that might be urged against 'em from so many Passages of the Pentateuch, where mention is made of Angels.

As the Saducees acknowledg'd neither Punishments nor Recompences in another Life, so they were inexorable in their chastising of the Wicked.[6] They observed the Law themselves, and caus'd it to be observed by others, with the utmost Rigour. They admitted of none of the Traditions, Explications, or Modifications of the Pharisees; they kept only to the Text of the Law; and maintain'd, that only what was written was to be observed[7].

The Saducees are accused of rejecting all the Books of Scripture, except those of Moses;[8] and to support this Opinion it is observed, that our Saviour makes use of no Scripture against them, but Passages taken out of the Pentateuch. But Scaliger[9] produces good Proofs to vindicate them from this Reproach. He observes, that they did not appear in Israel till after the Number of the holy Books were fix'd, and that if they had been to choose out of the Canonical Scriptures, the Pentateuch was less favourable to them than any other Book, since it is often makes mention of Angels and their Apparition. Besides the Saducees were present in the Temple, and at other religious Assemblies, where the Books of the Prophets were read indifferently, as well as those of Moses. They were in the chief Employs of the Nation, many of them were even Priests. Would the Jews have suffer'd in these Employments Persons that rejected the greatest Part of their Scriptures? Menasse ben-Israel says expressly,[10] that indeed they did not reject the Prophets, but that they explain'd them in a Sense very different from that of the other Jews.

Josephus assures us[11], that they deny'd Destiny or Fate, alledging, that these were only Sounds void of Sense, and that all the Good or Evil that happens to us, is in Consequence of the good or evil Side we have taken, by the free Choice of our Will. They said also,[12] that God was far removed from doing or knowing Evil, and that Man was the absolute Master of his own Actions. This was roundly to deny a Providence, and upon this Footing I know not what could be the Religion of the *Sa*ducees;or what Influence they could ascribe to God in things here below. However, it is certain they were not only tolerated among the Jews, but that they were admitted to the High-priesthood itself. This shews what must be then the State of the Religion of the Jews.

[Acts v. 17. iv. 1.] John Hyrcanus, Highpriest of the Nation, separated himself in a signal Manner from the Sect of the Pharisees, and went over to that of Sadoc. a 'Tis said also, he gave strict Command to all the Jews, on pain of Death, to receive the Maxims of this Sect.[13] Aristobulus and Alexander Jannæus, Son of Hyrcanus, continued to favour the Saducees; and Maimonides assures us[14], that under the Reign of Alexander Jannæus, they had in Possession all the Offices of the Sanhedrim, and that there only remain'd of the Party of the Pharisees, Simon the Son of Secra. Caiaphas, who condemned Jesus Christ to Death, was a Saducee; as also Ananus the younger[15], who put to Death St. James the Brother of our Lord. At this Day the Jews hold as Hereticks, that small Number of Saducees that are to be found among them. See upon this Matter Serrar. Tribæres. Menasse ben-Israel, l. 1. de Resurrectione mortuorum; Basnage's History of the Jews, l. 3. c. 5, 14, &c. and our Dissertation upon the Sects of the Jews, n. 13. before the Commentary upon St. Mark.

The Sect of the Saducees is not extinguish'd; it was much reduced by the Destruction of Jerusalem, and by the Dispersion of the Jews; but it revived afterwards. At the Beginning of the third Century it was so formidable in Egypt, that Ammonim,[16] Origen's Master, when he saw them propagate their Opinions in that Country, thought himself obliged to write against them, or rather against the Jews who tolerated the Saducees, though they deny'd the fundamental Points of their Religion. The Emperor Justinian mentions the Saducees in one of his Novels, banishes them out of all the Places of his Dominions, and condemns them to the severest Punishments, as People that maintain'd atheistical and impious Tenets; denying the Resurrection and the last Judgment.

Annus, or Ananus, a Disciple of Juda, Son of Nachman, a famous Rabbin of the eighth Century, declared himself, as it is said, in favour of the Saducees, and strenuously protected them against their Adversaries. They had also a celebrated Defender [Ganz. Tzemath. David. p. 125.] in the twelfth Age, in the Person of Alpharag, a Spanish Rabbin. This Doctor wrote against the Pharisees, the declared Enemies of the Saducees; and maintain'd by his publick Writings, that the Purity of Judaism was only to be found among the Saducees: That the Traditions avow'd by the Pharisees were useless, and that the Ceremonies which they had multiplied without end, were an insupportable Yoke. The Rabbi Abraham-ben-David Italleri reply'd to Alpharag, and supported the Sect of the Pharisees by two great Arguments, that of their Universality, and that of their Antiquity. He proved their Antiquity by a continued Succession from Adam down to the Year 1167; and their Universality, because the Pharisees are spread all the World over, and are found in all the Synagogues.

There are still seen of the Saducees in Africa, and in several other Places. They deny the Immortality of the Soul, and the Resurrection of the Body; but they are rarely found, at least, there are but few, who declare themselves for these Opinions. Among the Mahometans also there is known a Sect of Hereticks call'd Zendik;[17] who believe neither a Resurrection, nor a Life to come. But others maintain, that this Word properly signifies a Magian, a Disciple of Zoroaster, and a Worshipper of Fire. Certain it is, that among the Arabians, and other Mahometans, Zendik signifies in general an impious Person, who is neither Jew, nor Christian, nor Mahometan; or one that makes a Pretence of belonging to one of these three Religions, and yet does not believe the Principles, nor conforms himself to the Practice of it. There have been those that confound the Saducees with such as hold the Metempsychosis, and with the Defenders of the two Principles, that is, the Manichees; but it is very certain these Sects are different from the Saducees.

Safron

SAFRON, Crocus; in Hebrew call'd Carcos or Corcos[1]; a well known Flower. Its Flower is of a blue Colour, in the midst of which are small Threds of a yellow Colour, of a very agreeable Smell. Solomon in his Song of Songs joins it with other Aromaticks: Nardus, & Crocus, & Fistula, &c. Jeremiah speaks of Cloths of a Safron Colour. Qui nutriebantur in Croceis.[2] But the Hebrew of Jeremiah rather signifies Purple or Crimson.

Sagan

SAGAN.[1] The Hebrews thus call the Vicar or Deputy of the High-priest, who supply'd his Office, and who perform'd the Functions of it in the Absence of the High-priest, or when any Accident happen'd to him, that put him out of a Condition to officiate in Person; of which we have some Examples in the History of Josephus. The[2] Jews think the Office of this Sagan to be very antient among them. They hold that Moses was Sagan to Aaron. I do not find the Word Sagan in this Sense in Scripture, but it is frequent in the Rabbins[3].

Sagan is also put for Princes, or the chief Officers of a Kingdom; and this Word is often met with in this Sense, in the Books of Ezra, Nehemiah, Isaiah, Jeremiah, Ezekiel, and Daniel. Sagan is rather Chaldean than Hebrew, and it is very likely that the Hebrews learn'd it from the Chaldees, to express Princes and great Courtiers, Magistrates and Men in Power, not only among the Babylonians, but also among the Hebrews. St. Jerom generally translates this Word by Magistrates, and the Septuagint by Satraps, Princes, Nobles, Governors.

SAGE, or the Wise-man. This Appellation is generally given to Solomon by way of Eminence. Also the Name of Sage is put for a pious, prudent, knowing, and enlightned Man, one that fears God, is vertuous, &c. See the Article WISDOM.

Sagum

SAGUM. St. Jerom translates sometimes by saga cilicina, or saga de pilis caprarum, the Hebrew Words jerioth hezim, which signify the Veils or Curtains of Goat's-hair that cover'd the Sanctum and the Sanctuary. See Exod. xxvi. 7, 8, &c. for the Description of these Curtains. Sagum is also put for a Cassock, an antient military Garment, and it is found in this Sense in the Book of Judges, iii. 16. b where it is said, That Ehud made him a Dagger, which had two Edges, of a Cubit length; and he did gird it under his Raiment, upon his right Thigh. The Vulgate reads here, Accinctus est eo subter Sagum in dextro femore. But the Hebrew says only, under his Cloaths.

Saint

SAINT, Sanctity, to sanctify, &c. These Words are used in different Senses in the Scripture. First, Saint signifies pure, free from all Sorts of Defilements and Sins, which may make a Man unfit to approach to holy Things; and to sanctify signifies to purify, and to put one's self in a Condition to appear before the Lord, and to partake of holy Things. And let the Priests also which come near to the Lord, sanctify themselves, lest the Lord break forth upon them. And again; And the Lord said unto Moses, Go unto the People, and sanctify them to Day and to Morrow, and let them wash their Cloaths. And be ready against the third [Job i. 5.] Day, to receive the Law. Job sent and sanctified his Children.

Secondly, To sanctify, is put for appointing to any holy Use. God sanctified the seventh Day. He sanctified all the First-born. Set Bounds about the Mount, and sanctify it. [41.] Sanctify them, that they may minister unto me in the Priest's Office. There were in the Temple at Jerusalem many rich Spoils that David and his Successors had sanctify'd to the Lord.

Thirdly, to sanctify, is sometimes put for Preparation for any Action, that does not require any extraordinary Holiness. [Numb. xi.] Sanctify yourselves against to Morrow, and ye shall eat Flesh. And Joshua said unto the [18. Josh. iii. 5.] People, Sanctify yourselves, for to Morrow the Lord will do Wonders among you. Blow [Joel ii. 15, 16.] the Trumpet in Sion, sanctify a Fast, call a solemn Assembly, gather the People, sanctify the Congregation. That is, prepare it, or publish a Fast, a Congregation.

Fourthly, Saint, Sanctity, Sanctification. These Epithets in a sovereign manner are ascribed to God, the Author of all Sanctity and Holiness. So the Cherubims and [Isai. vi. 3.] Seraphims cry to him without ceasing, Holy, Holy, Holy. He is named by way of Excellence, The Saint, the Holy One of Israel[1]. All our Holiness before him is nothing but Pollution, his Name is Holy, or, his Name is the Saint, or rather Sanctity itself. We sanctify and hallow his Name, and we pray that his Name be hallow'd, when we praise him, when we acknowledge his Majesty, when we worship him, and when we endeavour to make him known, adored, praised, and beloved by all those that are capable of it.

Fifthly, the Saint, the Sanctum, the holy Place, stands for that particular Part of the Temple, which was between the Porch and the Sanctuary, and in which were placed the golden Candlestick, the Altar of Incense, and that of the Shew-bread.

Sixthly, the Sanctum, or Sancta, is taken for the whole Temple, or even for Heaven. [Psal. xx. 6. Ps. cii. 19.] He will hear him from his holy Heaven. For he hath looked down from the Height of his Sanctuary; from Heaven did the [Psal. cl. 1.] Lord behold the Earth. Praise God in his Sanctuary, praise him in the Firmament of his Power.

Seventhly, the Holy of Holies, Sanctum Sanctorum, or the Sanctuary, signifies the most inward and sacred Part of the Temple, where was placed the Ark of the Covenant, and where Nobody was to enter but only the Highpriest, and that but once a Year, upon the Day of solemn Expiation.

Eighthly, the Saints, is sometimes put for the People of Israel, or sometimes for Christians. The Israelites of the Faction of Corah, Dathan, and Abiram, said to Moses and Aaron; Ye take too much upon you, seeing all the Congregation are Holy (or Saints) every one of them, and the Lord is among them. And in more Places of Scripture than one, the Hebrews are call'd a holy Nation. a Ye shall be unto me a Kingdom of Priests, and an holy Nation. Nothing is more frequent in St. Paul, than the Name of Saints given to the first Christians. See Rom. i. 1. viii. 27, 28. xiii. 13. xv. 25, 26. xvi. 2, &c.

Ninthly, the Saints stand for the Priests [Numbers xvi. 5, 7.] of the Lord. Even to Morrow the Lord will shew who are his, and who is Holy; and will cause him to come near unto him, even him whom he hath chosen, will he cause to come near unto him. Aaron is call'd in Deuteronomy, the holy One, or the Saint [Deuter. xxxiii. 8.] of God. Let thy Thummim and thy Urim be with thy holy One. And in the Psalms; They envied Moses also in the Camp, and Aaron the Saint of the Lord.

Tenthly, also the Saints signify in particular good Men, and the Servants of God. [Prov. ix. 10.] As for Example, The Knowledge of the Holy (or Saints) is Understanding. And [Prov. xxx. 3. Ps. xxxiv. 9.] again, I neither learned Wisdom, nor have the Knowledge of the Holy, or Saints. O fear the Lord, ye his Saints, for there is no want to them that fear him. And elsewhere, [Psal. xvi. 2, 3.] My Goodness extendeth not to thee, but to the Saints that are in the Earth, and to the excellent, in whom is all my Delight.

Eleventhly, the Saints, are often put also for the Angels. To which of the Saints wilt thou turn? And elsewhere, Behold he putteth no Trust in his Saints, yea the Heavens are not clean in his Sight. Which is a parallel Place to that other Passage in the same [Job iv. 17, 18.] Book. Shall mortal Man be more just than God? Shall a Man be more pure than his Maker? Behold, he put no Trust in his Servants, and his Angels he charged with Folly. [Dan. iv. 13, 23. Deuter. xxxiii. 2, 3.] Daniel says, An holy One (or Saint) came down from Heaven. And Moses, the Lord shined forth from Mount Paran, and came with ten thousands of Saints.

Twelfthly, Saints and Saintesses. The Hebrews give these Names, by way of Antiphrasis, to Men and Woman that prostituted themselves in Honour (as they thought) of some prophane Deity, according to the blind and polluted Notions of their false Religion. The Hebrew, for example, gives this Name to Tamar,[2] who was taken for an Harlot or Prostitute. Moses says, c There shall be no Whore of the Daughters of Israel, nor a Sodomite of the Sons of Israel. Or literally thus, there shall be no Saintess or Saint, &c. See also 1 Kings xiv. 24. xv. 12. xxii. 47. and 2 Kings xxiii. 7. Job xxxvi. 14. Hosea iv. 14. where the like Expressions are to be found.

Salah

SALAH, or Sale, Son of Cainan, and Grandson of Arphaxad; or rather, by leaving out Cainan, who is not to be found in the Hebrew Copies; Salah was born in the thirty-fifth Year of his Father Arphaxad, and in the Year of the World 1693. He begat Eber at thirty Years old, in the Year of the World 1723. He died at the Age of 433 Years, in the Year of the World 2126, [Gen. xi. 12, 14, 15.] before Christ 1874, before the vulgar Era 1878.

The Orientals[1] have preserved to us several Traditions concerning the Person of Salah, which it will not be amiss to insert here, though we do not esteem them as indubitable. They pretend, that the Patriarch Salah was fill'd with the Spirit of Prophecy, and that God sent him to the People of the Tribe of Themud, who dwelt in that Part of Arabia call'd Hagr, or Arabia petræa; but he was very ill treated in this Country. He proved his Mission by a surprizing Miracle, when he open'd a Rock with a Word of his Mouth, and caus'd a female Camel to come out, which was immediately deliver'd of her Young. Instead of being converted at this Prodigy, the Themudists put the Camel to Death, which by her Presence reproached them with Incredulity.

After this they began to insult the Prophet Salah, and to deride all his Menaces. But Salah addres'd himself to God, who sent the Arch-angel Gabriel against them. He had no sooner appear'd among them, but he put them all to Death, excepting a small Number who had believed the Prophet, and who follow'd him into the Territory of Mecca, whither he retired and ended his Days. Some say, God was so provoked with the Hardness and Incredulity of the Themudists, that he sent such a violent Earthquake among them, that they were all thrown down dead in their Houses, with their Faces to the Ground.

We read in some Arabian Authors, that the Prophet Salah, the Apostle of the Themudists, was more modern than Salah the Son of Arphaxad; and thus they reckon his Genealogy. Salah was Son of Asaph, Son of Casrehh, Son of Hauver, Son of Chaber or Heber, Son of Themud, Son of Aram, Son of Shem, Son of Noah.

Salathiel (I)

I. SALATHIEL, or Shealtiel, Son of Jeconiah [1 Chron. iii. 17.] , and Father of Zerubbabel. He died at Babylon during the Captivity. The same Salathiel was also Son of Neri, according to [Luke iii. 27.] St. Luke. He descended from Solomon by Rehoboam, according to St. Matthew; and from the same Solomon by Nathan, according to St. Luke. In Salathiel were united the two Branches of this illustrious Genealogy; so that Salathiel was Son to Jeconiah, according to the Flesh, as it appears from the Chronicles, which tell us, that Jeconiah had two Sons, [1 Chron. iii. 17.] Assir and Salathiel, while he was at Babylon. And he might be Son of Neri by Adoption, or having marry'd the Heiress of Neri's Family; or even as proceeding from the Widow of Neri, being dead without Children. For in any one of these Cases he would pass for the Son of Neri according to the Law. St. Luke does not tell us in what Sense he was Son to Neri.

The Jews pretend, that Salathiel was the Titular Prince of the Jews, during their Captivity, exercising a small Matter of Authority over them, in Subordination to that of the Kings of Chaldea. They pretend also, that he had Successors of the House of David, known by the Title of Princes of the Captivity, who were appointed by the Kings of the Country. They give us an uninterrupted Succession of them for several Ages; and there are even some Jewish Authors that maintain[1], that the Heads of the Captivity are still in Being beyond the Euphrates. All this is in View to answer the Objection we make to them, when we urge the Prophecy of Jacob, that intimates, That a Law-giver should not depart [Gen. xlix. 10.] from between the Feet of Judah, till the coming of the Messiah. To which they answer, That the Scepter and the Law-giver are still in Being among them, in the Persons of these Princes of the Captivity.

VI. SALEM, the City where Melchisedech reigned. St. Jerome,[1] the Author of the Chronicon Paschale, and[2] M. Reland,[3] think this City was different from Jerusalem. St. Jerome places it in the Territory of Scythopolis, where the Ruins of it were still to be seen in his Time, which were said to have been the Palace of Melchisedech. We are of Opinion with Josephus, and the Generality of the Fathers and Interpreters, that Melchisedech reigned at Jerusalem. See the Article of JERUSALEM before.

SALIUNCULA, is the Diminutive of Saliunca. But Saliunca signifies Lavender, or Orci tunica, or the Spikenard of the Mountains. This is a very odoriferous Plant, and is us'd to be put among Linen, to preserve it from Moths, and to give it an agreeable Scent. The Hebrew Word Naatzutz[1] is differently understood by the Interpreters. Some take it for a Thorn[2] or Bush: Aquila and Theodotion translate it by Conyse or Flea-bane, a stinking and bitter Herb; the Septuagint by Stoibe, a soft, downy Herb, which was made use of for stuffing Beds and Cushions.

Salome (I)

I. SALOME, Daughter of Antipater, and Sister of Herod the Great; she was one of the wickedest Women that have been [Jos. Antiq. l. 15. c.4.p.517.] known. She first married Joseph, whom she accused of too great Familiarities with Mariamne the Wife of Herod. This suspicious Prince put Joseph to Death, without so much as hearing his Defence; having found, by the Confession of Mariamne herself, that Joseph had discover'd a Secret to her, which no one knew but himself and Herod. Salome afterwards marry'd Costobarus; but being afterwards disgusted with [Jos. Antiq. l. 15. c.9.p.532.] him, she put him away, by an Example 'till then unheard-of among the Jews, whose Law (says Josephus) allows Men to put away their Wives, but does not allow the Women the same Liberty. After this, she accused him of Treason against Herod, who put him to Death.

She caus'd much Division and Trouble in Herod's Family, by her Calumnies and mischievous Informations; and she may be look'd upon as the chief Author of the [Jos. Antiq. l. 16. c.6. l. 17. c.7.] Death of the Princes Alexander and Aristobulus, and of their Mother Mariamne. Salome conceived a violent Passion for an Arabian [Jos. Antiq. l. 16. c. 11.] Prince call'd Sillæus, whom she would have marry'd, against her Brother Herod's Consent. She us'd to see him with so little Caution, that every Body was offended at it. And when Herod made her marry one [Jos. Antiq. l. 17. c. 1.] call'd Alexas, she still continued her Inclination for Sillæus. Salome survived Herod, who, by his Will, left her the Cities of [Jos. Antiq. l. 17. c. 10. p. 559.] Jamnia, Azoth, and Phasaelis, with fiftythousand Pieces of Money. She favour'd Antipas against Archelaus, and died in the 12th Year of Jesus Christ, and the 9th of [Jos. de Bell. l. 2. c.2.p.776. Jos. Antiq. l. 18. c.3.p.619.] the Vulgar Era, a little time after Archelaus had been banish'd to Vienne in Dauphine. A few Days before Herod died, he gave Orders to his Sister Salome, and his Brother-in-law Alexas, that, as soon as he should be dead, they [Jos. Antiq. l. 17. c.8.p.598.] should put to Death all the chief Men of Judea, whom, a little before, he had brought together to Jericho, where he lay sick. But Alexas and Salome could not perpetrate so barbarous an Action, but sent all the Men away, as soon as Herod had given up the Ghost. Salome had five Children by Alexas; Berenice, Antipater, Calleas, and one Son and Daughter more, whose Names we do not find mentioned.

Salome the Dancer (III)

[Jos. Antiq. l. 18. c.7.p.628.] III. SALOME the Dancer, the Daughter of Herodias, and of Herod-Philip the Tetrarch. She first marry'd Philip the Tetrarch her Uncle, and afterwards Aristobulus the Son of Herod King of Chalcis, by whom she had three Sons, Herod, Agrippa, and Aristobulus. When Herodias left Philip the Tetrarch, her Daughter Salome went with her: And as John the Baptist did not forbear to cry out continually against this Incestuous Marriage of Herodias [Mark vi. 17,18,19. Luke iii. 19.] and Antipas, one Day, when this Prince was celebrating his Birth-day, or the Day of his Inauguration, Salome came into the Banqueting Room, and danced before the King and the Nobles that sate with him. Antipas was so taken with Salome's Performance, that he promised to give her whatever she should ask, even to the half of his Kingdom. She presently went to tell her Mother what had been promis'd her, and desired her Advice what she should ask for. Herodias bid her ask for the Head of John the Baptist. Salome came in again to the King, bringing a Dish with her, and said to him, Give me in this Dish the Head of John the Baptist. The King was a little sorry at this Demand; but because he had given his Word, he would not go back from it: So he sent immediately and had the Head of John the Baptist cut off, and given to Salome.

[Nicephor. l. 1. c. 20.] Nicephorus and Metaphrastes relate, that Salome accompanied her Mother Herodias, and her Father-in-law Herod, in their Banishment to Vienne in Dauphine; and that the Emperor having obliged them to go into Spain, as she passed over a River that was frozen up, the Ice broke under her Feet, and she sunk in up to her Neck: Then the Ice uniting again, she remain'd thus suspended by it, and suffered the same Punishment she had made John the Baptist undergo. But none of the Antients mention this Particular; and it is contrary to Josephus, who tells us, that she was first marry'd to Philip the Tetrarch, Son of Herod the Great and Cleopatra, who died about the 33d or 34th Year of the Common Era; and that afterwards she married Aristobulus, Son of Herod King of Chalcis, her Cousin-german, by whom she had several Children. Thus she lived above thirty Years after the Exile of her Father-in-law Herod.

Salome (VI)

VI. SALOME, Wife of Zebedæus, and Mother of St. James Major, and St. John the Evangelist. She was one of those holy [Mat.xxvii. 56.] Women who used to attend upon our Saviour in his Journies, and to minister to him. 'Twas she that requested of Jesus Christ, that her two Sons, James and John, might sit on his Right and Left Hand, when he should come into his Kingdom[1]. But the Son of God answer'd her, and her two Sons that were with her,[2] Ye know not what ye ask. Are ye able to drink of the Cup that I shall drink of, and to be baptized with the Baptism that I am baptized with? They say unto him, We are able. And he saith unto them, Ye shall drink indeed of my Cup, and be baptized with the Baptism that I am baptized with; but to sit on my Right Hand, and on my Left, is not mine to give, but it shall be given to them for whom it is prepared of my Father.

St. Salome gave a great Proof of her Faith, when she follow'd Jesus Christ to Calvary [Mark xv. 40. Mat.xxvii. 55,56.] , and did not forsake him even at the Cross. She was also of the Number of those holy Women who brought Perfumes to embalm him, and who came, for this Purpose, to [Mark xvi. 1, 2.] the Sepulchre on Sunday Morning early. As they went along, they said to one another, Who shall take away the Stone from the Mouth of the Sepulchre? for the Stone was a very great one. But when they came thither, they found it already removed; and entring into the Tomb, they there saw an Angel, who inform'd them, that Jesus Christ was risen. And as they were returning to Jerusalem, Jesus appear'd to them on the Way, and said to them, Be not afraid; go tell [Matthew xxviii. 10.] my Brethren, that they go into Galilee, and there shall they see me. This is what the Scripture informs us of Salome the Mother of the Sons of Zebedee.

[Ita Martyrol. Rom. & alii.] Some give her the Name of Mary Salome; but there is no good Proof of her being call'd Mary: And what some frivolous Histories relate of the three Maries, Mary the Mother of Jesus, Mary the Mother of James, and Mary Salome, deserves no Consideration. Others[3] make her the Daughter of St. Joseph. The Latin Martyrologies make the Feast of St. Salome on the 22d of October. The Roman Martyrology fixes her Death at Jerusalem: Others will have it, that she died in Provence, and that her Body is still there.

Salt

[Lev.ii. 13.] SALT, Sal; in Greek, Hals; in Hebrew, Melach. God appointed that Salt should be used in all the Sacrifices that were offered to him: And every Oblation of thy Meatoffering shalt thou season with Salt; neither shalt thou suffer the Salt of the Covenant of thy God to be lacking from thy Meat-offering: With all thine Offerings thou shalt offer Salt. Jesus Christ makes an Allusion to this, when, speaking of the Sufferings of the Damned, he says, For every one shall be [Mark ix. 48.] salted with Fire, and every Sacrifice shall be salted with Salt. See also Deut. xxix. 23. The whole Land thereof is Brimstone, and Salt, and Burning.

[Ezek. xvi. 4. Hieron. in Ezek. xvi. ita & Theodoret.] We see from Ezekiel, that heretofore they rubb'd new-born Children with Salt: Quando nata es ..... aquâ non es lota in salutem, nec sale salita. St. Jerom thought, that they did this, to dry up the Humidity that abounds in Children; and to close up [Galen. de Sanit. l. 1. c. 7.] the Pores, which are then too open. Galen says, that Salt hardens the Skins of Children, and makes them more firm. Avicenna acquaints us, that they bathed Children with Water in which Salt has been dissolved, to close up the Navel, and to harden the Skin. Others think, it was to hinder any Corruptions that might proceed from cutting off the Navel-string.

The Prophet Elisha being desired to sweeten the Waters of the Fountain of Jericho, and make them fit to drink, required [2 Kings ii. 21.] a new Vessel to be brought to him, and some Salt to be put therein. They follow'd his Orders: He threw this Salt into the Spring, and said; Thus saith the Lord, I have healed these Waters; and for the future they shall not be the Occasion either of Death or Barrenness. And in Reality, the Waters became good for Drinking, and lost all their former bad Qualities. Naturally the Salt must only have served to increase the Brackishness or Bitterness of this Fountain; but the Prophet purposely made use of a Remedy that seem'd contrary to the Effect he would produce, that the Miracle might become the more evident.

[Ecclus. xxxix. 31.] The Wiseman reckons up Salt in the Number of those Things that are most necessary for Life; as Water, Fire, Iron, Milk, Honey, Grapes, Oil, and Cloaths. Job asks if any one could eat that which is [Job vi. 6.] not salted: Aut poterit comedi in sulsum, quod non est sale conditum?

The Valley of Salt was situate in Idumea. See VALLEY.

II. The Salt of the Earth, is, probably, Marl, with which they manure their Land in some Countries, instead of Dung. See our Commentary upon Matth. v. 13.

III. Mineral Salt, or Salt that is dug out of Mines, in Form of a hard Stone. 'Tis thought that Lot's Wife was changed into [Gen. xix. 26.] a Statue of such Mineral Salt, that she became as a Rock or Stone of Salt.

IV. Salt is the Symbol of Wisdom: Let [Col. iv. 6.] your Speech be always with Grace, seasoned with Salt, says St. Paul. And our Saviour [Mark ix. 50.] says, Have Salt in your selves, and have Peace one with another.

V. Salt is the Symbol of Perpetuity and Incorruption. Thus they said of a [Numbers xviii. 19.] Covenant, It is a Covenant of Salt for ever, before the Lord. And elsewhere, The [2 Chron. xiii. 5.] Lord God of Israel gave the Kingdom over Israel to David for ever, even to him and to his Sons, by a Covenant of Salt.

VI. Salt is the Symbol also of Barrenness and Sterility. When Abimelech took [Judg. ix. 45.] the City of Shechem, he destroy'd it, and sow'd the Place with Salt, that it might always remain desart and unfruitful. Zephaniah [Zeph. ii. 9.] threatens the Ammonites and Moabites, from the Lord; Moab shall be as Sodom, and the Children of Ammon as Gomorrha, even the breeding of Nettles, and Salt-pits, and a perpetual Desolation. See also Job xxxiv. 6. Psal. cvi. 34. Jer. xvii. 6.

VII. Salt is likewise the Symbol of Hospitality, and of that Fidelity that is due from Servants, Friends, Guests, and Domesticks, to those that entertain them and receive them at their Tables. The Go vernors of the Provinces beyond the Euphrates, writing to King Artaxerxes, tell [Ezr. iv. 14.] him, Because we have Maintenance from the King's Palace, &c. which, in the Chaldee, is, Because we are salted with the Salt of the Palace.

[Gen. xiv. 3. Numb. xxxiv. 12.] The Salt-sea: This is the Dead-sea, or the Lake Asphaltites. The Scripture and profane Writers sometimes give the Name of Salt to Asphaltus or Bitumen; whence it is that Moses, speaking of a burning or [Deut. xxix. 23. Vulg.] parching Salt, Salis ardore consumentur, means Asphaltus, Bitumen, or Pitch. Herodotus also makes mention of certain Lamps that were lighted up in Egypt, in which were put Salt, that is, Bitumen, or such-like combustible Matter.

[Psal. lx. Tit.] The Valley of Salt. Interpreters generally place it to the South of Mare Mortuum, towards Idumea; because it is said in [2 Samuel viii. 13. 1 Chron. xviii. 12.] Scripture, that Abishai kill'd there eighteen thousand Idumeans; that Joab kill'd there twelve thousand of them; and that a long while after this, Amaziah King of [2 Kings xiv. 7. 2 Chron. xxv. 11.] Judah kill'd ten thousand Idumeans. Galen informs us,[1] that they made use of the Salt of the Lake Asphaltites to season their Meat; and that it was a stronger Caustic, and digested much more, than the other Salts; because (says he) it is more [1 Macc. xi. 35. & x. 29.] boiled. We see also by the Maccabees, that the Kings of Syria had Brine-pits in Judea. Ezekiel, ch. xlvii. 11. says, that the Shores and Marshes on the Dead-sea should be assigned for the Making of Salt. Mr. Halifax, in his Account of Palmyra, speaks of a great Plain all cover'd with Salt, from whence the whole Country round about is supply'd. This Plain is about a League from Palmyra, and extends itself towards the Eastern Parts of Idumea, the capital City of which was Bozra. David beat the Idumeans in the Valley of Salt, as he return'd from Syria of Zobah. It is very probable, that this Plain of Salt, is the Valley of Salt mention'd in Scripture.

Salus

SALUS, Salvation. This Word is taken in several Senses in the Scripture:

I. For eternal Happiness and Salvation hereafter, which is the Object of our Hopes [Luke i. 77. Eph. i. 33.] and Desires. Thus it is said; To give Knowledge of Salvation to his People. The Gospel of your Salvation. Godly Sorrow [2 Cor. vii. 10.] worketh Repentance to Salvation; that is, which leads to eternal Life.

[Gen. xlii. 15, 16. Vulgat. Gen. xlvii. 25.] II. Salus is put for Life. Per salutem Pharaonis; By the Life of Pharaoh. Salus nostra in manu tua est; Our Life is in your Hands. Per salutem tuam, & per salutem animæ tuæ, &c.

[1 Reg. xi. 9. Vulg. 1 Sam. xiv. 45.] III. For Deliverance, or Victory. Cras erit vobis salus, cùm incaluerit Sol; You shall be relieved To-morrow, after the Rising [4 Reg. xiii. 17.] of the Sun. Shall Jonathan die, who hath wrought this great Salvation in Israel? Qui fecit Salutem hanc magnam in Israel? Sagitta salutis Domini contra Syriam; The Arrow of Victory, or Deliverance.

IV. Salvation, is put for the Praise and [Rev. xix. 1.] Benediction that is given to God. Alleluiah, Salvation, and Glory, and Honour, and [Rev. vii. 10.] Power unto the Lord our God. Salvation to our God which sitteth upon the Throne, and unto the Lamb.

Lastly, Salus is put for that Salutation that we give to such Persons as we salute, or to whom we write; a Salutation of Civility [James i. 1.] and Friendship: To the twelve Tribes that are scattered abroad, greeting, or Health. [1 Macc. x. 18.] King Alexander to his Brother Jonathan sendeth greeting, or wisheth Health.

The Hebrews but rarely make use of concrete Terms, as they are call'd, but often of abstracted. Thus, instead of saying, that God saves them, and protects them; they say, that God is their Salvation. Thus, Vox salutis, gaudium salutis, rupes salutis, scutum salutis, sagitta salutis, veritas salutis, cornu salutis, verbum salutis, arx salutis, &c. is as much as to say, a Voice declaring Deliverance; the Joy that attends the escaping a great Danger; a Rock where any one takes Refuge, and where he may be in Safety from his Enemy; a Buckler that secures them from the Arms of the Enemy; an Arrow that procures Safety and Liberty to a whole People; a Truth that saves us; a Horn or Ray of Glory, of Happiness, and Salvation; the Glory that attends those who have escaped out of some great Danger, &c. Thus, Facere salutem magnam in Israel, signifies, to deliver the Israelites from some imminent Danger; to obtain a great Victory over their Enemies. Fieri, or, esse in salutem, is, to save, to protect any one. [Ps. cv. 4. Ps. cxlix. 4. Ps. xlii. 5. Ps. xliii. 5.] Magnificans salutes Regis, to bring a very powerful Succour to the King. Visita nos in salutari tuo; Visit us and save us. Exaltabit mansuetos in salutem; He will replenish them with Glory, and bring them out of Danger. Salutare vultus mei; The Salvation of the Face of the Lord; that is, the Favour he does us, in beholding us with a kind Aspect, or, in shewing us a merciful Countenance; or rather, the Salvation of my Face, the Salvation which is before me, in which I hope, which I wait for. Qui mandas salutes Jacob; Who commandest with Authority, and says, Let Jacob be safe, thou who savest him, and powerfully protectest him. *Long*è à salute meâ verba delictorum meorum[1]; My Sins cry against me, and prevent my Salvation. The Hebrew says, Thou art far from my Salvation, and from the Words of my Crying; Thou refusest to succour me, and to [Prov. vii. 14. Vid. & 2 Macc. iii. 32. Isai. lxi. 10. Jer. xxxix. 18. & xlv. 5. Ps. xxxii. 17. Wisd. vii. 10.] deliver me, or even to hear me.

A Victim or Sacrifice for Salvation; Victimas pro salute vovi. These were pacifick Sacrifices offered to God, either to return him Thanks for his Benefits, or to ask Favours, Protection, or Assistance from him. Fallax equus ad salutem; 'Tis in vain that you put your Confidence in Horses; they cannot save you from Danger, without the Assistance of God. I preferr'd Wisdom before Safety or Beauty: Super salutem & speciem dilexi eam: Before Life, Health, and Beauty. Divitiæ salutis, sapientia & scientia; The Treasures of Salvation; or, according to the Hebrew, the Strength of Safeties, Wisdom and Knowledge, shall adorn the Kingdom of the Messiah. He shall save, protect, defend, and deliver his Elect, by his infinite Power. He shall enrich them with the Gifts of Wisdom and Knowledge.

The Lord hath cloathed me with the Garments of Salvation; Induit me vestimentis salutis, & indumento justitiæ. These Garments of Salvation, may signify the Habits of Joy and Festivity, which were wore on Festival Days, and after the receiving any signal Favour from God, after a Deliverance from any great Danger. Erit tibi anima tua in salutem. The Hebrew says literally, Erit tibi anima tua in spolium; You shall escape Danger, and you shall save your Life, but not without Danger: Your Life shall be saved, but as a Part of the Prey is rescued; or, it shall be your Part of the Booty. Happy that you are deliver'd, even upon these Terms! You shall lose every thing else but your Life. Ezekiel says,[2] Aquâ non est lota in salutem. Salutem. He speaks of a new-born Child, that had not been wash'd, nor salted, and whose Navel-string had not been cut. Probably, they imagined this contributed to Health, ad Salutem. The Hebrew reads; You have not been wash'd with Water, for solacing, for refreshing, and cleaning you.

Samael

SAMAEL. This is the Name that the [Rabboth. in Deuter. cap. ult. fol. 302.] Rabbins, in their mystical Commentaries upon the Pentateuch, give to the Prince of the Devils, who expected, with great Impatience, the Hour of Moses's Departure, that he might seize him, and carry him to the Place where the Dead are detained. But St. Michael reproved him, and said to him; O Wretch! shouldst thou be joyful, while I shed Tears? Samaria

SAMARIA, the capital City of the Kingdom of Samaria, or of the Ten Tribes. It was built by Omri King of Israel, who began to reign in the Year of the World 3079, [1 Kings xvi. 24.] and died in 3086. He bought the Hill Samaria of Shemer, or Shomeron, for two Talents of Silver, or for the Sum of Six hundred eighty four Pounds, seven Shillings and six Pence. It took the Name of Samaria, from Shemer the Owner of the Hill; tho' some think there were already some Beginnings of a City, because before the Reign of Omri there is mention made of Samaria[1]. But others take this for a Prolepsis, or an Anticipation, in the Discourse of the Man of God, who speaks of Samaria under the Reign of Jeroboam.

However this be, it is certain that Samaria was no considerable Place, and did not become the capital City of the Kingdom of Israel 'till after the Reign of Omri. Before him, the Kings of Israel dwelt at Shechem, or at Tirzah. Samaria was situated upon an agreeable [Euseb. in Dothaim. Merro, & Atharo.] and fruitful Hill, had an advantageous Situation, and was twelve Miles from Dothaim, twelve from Merrom, and four [Jos. Antiq. l. 15. c. 11.] from Atharoth. Josephus says, it was a Day's Journey from Jerusalem. Besides, tho' it was built upon an Eminence, yet it must have Water in abundance; since we find Medals struck in this City, whereon is represented the Goddess Astarta, treading a River under Foot; which proves it to have been well watered. And Josephus observes, that when it [Jos. Antiq. l. 13. c. 18.] was taken by John Hyrcanus the Prince of the Jews, he entirely demolish'd it, and caused even the Brook to flow over its Ruins, to obliterate all the Footsteps of it.

The Kings of Samaria omitted nothing to make this City the strongest, the finest, and the richest that was possible. Ahab built [1 Kings xxii. 39.] there a Palace of Ivory, that is, in which there were many Ornaments of Ivory. Amos describes Samaria, under Jeroboam II. as a City sunk into all Excesses of Luxury and [Amos iii. 15. & iv. 1, 2.] Effeminacy: I will smite (says he) the Winter-house with the Summer-house, and the Houses of Ivory shall perish, and the great Houses shall have an end, says the Lord. Hear this Word, ye Kine of Bashan, that are in the Mountain of Samaria, which oppress the Poor, which crush the Needy; which say to their Masters, Bring, and let us drink, [Mic. vii. 8.] &c.

Ben-hadad King of Syria built Publick [1 Kings xx. 34.] Places or Streets in Samaria, probably, for Traffick, where his People dwelt, to promote Trade. His Son Ben-hadad besieged [1 Kings xx. 1, 2, 3. &c.] this Place, under the Reign of Ahab, in the Year of the World 3103, before Christ 897, before the Vulgar Era 901.

He came at the Head of thirty-two [1 Kings xx. 1, 2, 3, &c.] Kings, with a numerous Army, to lay Siege to Samaria. First of all, Ben-hadad sent Ambassadors to the King of Israel, to demand his Treasures, his Wives and Children, and whatever was dearest to him. Ahab finding himself too weak to oppose him, consented to all that was proposed to him. But the Ambassadors returning, insisted upon having whatever they should find, that they liked, in the Houses of his Subjects also. Then Ahab call'd all the Elders of his People together, and acquainted them, That the King of Syria laid Snares for them; That he had surrender'd whatever belong'd to himself; but, not content with that, he demanded all that belong'd to them likewise. All the Elders reply'd, That they exhorted him, not to hearken to these Proposals, nor to submit to such unjust Demands. Ahab then sent back the Messengers, and told them; I will deliver up to you all that belongs to me, to buy a Peace, but I cannot give up the Goods that belong to my Subjects. Ben-hadad being provoked at this Answer of the King of Israel, sent Messengers to threaten him, and gave Orders forthwith to besiege the City.

Then there came a Prophet to Ahab, and encourag'd him from the Lord, saying, Thus [1 Kings xx. 13, &c.] saith the Lord, Hast thou seen all this great Multitude? Behold, I will deliver it into thine Hand this Day, and thou shalt know that I am the Lord. And Ahab said, By whom? And he said, Thus saith the Lord, Even by the young Men of the Princes of the Provinces. Then he said, Who shall order the Battle ? And he answered, Thou.

The King of Israel then made a Review of those young Men of the Princes, and found their Number to be Two hundred and thirty-two. Then he made a Review of all his People, and of the whole Army of the Children of Israel, and found them to the Number of Seven thousand. They made a Sally about Noon, while Ben-hadad was diverting himself in his Tent, eating and drinking with the thirty-two Kings that attended him in this Expedition. The young Men of the Princes marched at the Head of the Army of Israel. When Ben-hadad was informed, that some People were coming out of Samaria, he gave Orders, That whether they came to Fight, or to ask for Terms of Peace, they should be taken alive. The little Army of Israel came on, and every one began to kill all that came in their way. When the Syrians found themselves without any Leader at their Head, they presently gave ground, and began to fly. The Army of Israel pursued them briskly, and Ben-hadad was forced to take to his Horse, to save himself, and the other Kings also that were with him.

 I thought I ought rather to make use of the Term Investing, than that of Siege, in this Attempt of Ben-hadad King of Syria, upon the City of Samaria. This Prince marched thither, in the Company of thirty-two Kings, or petty Princes, with an Intention of laying Siege to it, with a vast Preparation of Machines of War, and a very numerous Army; which made him speak very big, and conceive a great Assurance of Success. He encamped before the Place, and sent to summons Ahab King of Israel to surrender. The Conditions that Ben-hadad offered him by his Ambassadors, were such as were commonly granted to Cities taken by Storm, or upon the Point of being so. As if he had imagin'd, that a People secured within strong Walls, with their Arms in their Hands, their King at their Head, their Religion and Liberty to maintain, would be so cowardly as to surrender, upon such hard Conditions. This is what the King of Syria sends them Word by his Ambassadors; Thy Silver and thy Gold is mine, thy Wives also and thy Children, even the goodliest, are mine. We find, that Ahab paid an extraordinary Submission to these haughty Commands; and never any Vassal shewed a greater. He does not look upon himself as his Vassal and Tributary only; but, in his Answer to the Messengers of Ben-hadad, he seems to acknowledge, that himself and his whole People are of the Number of his Slaves. Without doubt, he must be terrify'd at the immense Number of the Syrian Troops; and he must think himself but little secure in the Place he was in, tho' he had near eight thousand Men of disciplin'd Troops. What does Ahab answer then to these Proposals? My Lord, O King, according to thy Saying, I am thine, and all that I have. Probably, he must mean, all that he had of his own, and what he could properly dispose of, and not what belong'd to his People, which he could not pretend to give away. No doubt but that Ben-hadad intended that this should be included also, and therefore he sent his Ambassadors back again, to acquaint him, Yet I will send my Servants unto thee to-morrow about this time, and they shall search thine House, and the Houses of thy Servants; and it shall be, that whatsoever is pleasant in thine Eyes, they shall put it in their Hand, and take it away. There is a great Difference, as the learned Commentator observes, between what was intended by Ahab, and what was claim'd by the King of Syria. The latter pretended absolutely to dispose of all the Goods, the Persons, and the Subjects belonging to the King of Israel, who only submitted, in Hopes to obtain moderate Terms, and that he might only be obliged to pay a Tribute, or to purchase Peace, and to ransom the Pillaging of the City. But when he saw that Ben-hadad's Designs were not only upon the Possessions, but the Liberty also of his People, he call'd his Elders together, and asked their Opinions. They all unanimously answered, Hearken not unto him, nor consent. Wherefore the King return'd this Answer to the Ambassadors; I consented to your first Proposals; but as to your last, tell the King my Lord, that I cannot comply with them: Hanc autem rem facere non possum.

At this Refusal of the King of Israel, the Ambassadors withdrew, and made their Report to Ben-hadad, who sent them back with bitter Menaces, to intimidate Ahab and his Subjects; and to raise in them an high Idea of his Power and Strength. This is what he makes them say; The Gods do so unto me, and more also, if the Dust of Samaria shall suffice for Handfuls for all the People that follow me. This Hyperbole may surprize the Reader; yet I should not wonder, if the term pulvis Samariæ expresses the Force of the Original. But F. Calmet is of Opinion, that the Chaldee has much greater Force. All the Soil of the Country will not suffice for my People, if every one of 'em only takes away so much of it as will stick to his Shoes. This exceeds the most extravagant Gasconnade. Ahab's Answer is very good, and retrenches much of that unmeasurable Pride. Let not him that girdeth on his Harness boast himself, as he that putteth it off.

Ben-hadad

Ben-hadad received this Answer as he was drinking in the Shade, probably under an Arbor, with the other Kings. He immediately gave Orders to his People, that they should surround the City, which they did. Ahab's Answer had so nettled him, that he resolved to carry on the Siege in Form; for which Purpose he invested the City on all Sides, and even drew a Line of Circumvallation, to hinder any from going in, or coming out.

At the same time there came a Prophet to encourage the King of Israel, who brings this Message from the Lord: I will confound the Pride of Benhadad, and of all the Kings that are with him. Hast thou seen all this great Multitude? Behold, I will deliver it into thine Hand this Day, and thou shalt know that I am the Lord. Even by the young Men of the Princes of the Provinces, shall this formidable Army be put to Confusion, that thou may'st know that I am the Lord. It is probable, as Father Calmet says, that these young Men of the Princes of the Provinces were Pages or young Gentlemen, bred up at the King's Court, who made a Review of them, and found them to be two hundred and thirty-two. And then reviewing the People, he found them to be seven thousand of the Children of Israel.

They went out of the City about Noon; while Ben-hadad was drinking in his Tent, and perhaps drunk, with the thirty-two Kings that were come to his Assistance. What can be expected from a General, and a King that is drunk, and from thirty-two others that were guilty of the same Excess? One may easily conceive what thirty-three Drunkards could do on such an Occasion, who were fitter to lie down and sleep, than to set themselves at the Head of an Army.

The young Men of the Princes of the Provinces march'd forth at the Head of the Army; and Ben-hadad sending out to know who they were, he was told, that they were People coming forth from Samaria. He then gave Orders, that whether they came to sue for Peace, or to try the Event of War, they should all be secured alive. It was not easy to seize a whole Embassy of seven thousand, two hundred and thirty-two Men, who came against an Army without Generals, divided into several Bodies round the City, and of which there were hardly one perhaps in his right Senses and Judgment; for, in Imitation of their Commanders, they might probably have been tippling too. In the mean time the young Men of the Princes advanced, and the rest of the Army after them. That is to say, the small Body compos'd of those young Men, form'd, as it were, an Avant-guard, and first attack'd the Syrian Troops, who presented themselves in order to seize them; but they were repulsed, and driven back into their Camp. The main Body of the Israelitish Army follow'd close after, and attack'd and cut in Pieces all they met in their March, spread Terror and Confusion into the Army of Ben-hadad, who had but just Time enough to take to his Horse, and to fly with the other Kings that accompany'd him.

I marshal the Army of Israel in two Bodies, the Foot in the Center, and the Horse in the Wings. For in the Battle of Aphek, which is mention'd presently after, the sacred Author says, The Children of Israel [1 Kings xx. 27.] pitched before them, like two little Flocks of Kids; but the Syrians fill'd the Country; that is to say, they were divided into two Bodies, and made, as it were, two little Armies. Joab, the General of David's Army, thus divided his Forces into two Bodies in that Battle wherein he defeated the Syrians and the Ammonites. [2 Sam. x. 9, 10.] As to the Cavalry, I presume they had some, because they pursued the Syrians, who abounded in Forces of this Kind.

What is very remarkable, and yet very common, is, that the King of Syria's Flatterers would ascribe the Shame of their Defeat, not to the Pride and Drunkenness of their King, and of the other Kings; but to the Interposition of the Gods of the Jews: Their Gods are Gods of the Hills, say they, therefore they were stronger than we; but let us fight against them in the Plain, and surely we shall be stronger than they. This is the Manner in which the Defects of great Men are palliated, when they commit any Blunders; 'tis not their want of Conduct that is blamed, but their evil Fortune, which deprived them of Victory. Therefore these Flatterers advise Ben-hadad to send away all his Kings, and to put good Officers in their Place, to reinforce all his Army with the same Number of Soldiers, Horses, and Chariots which he had lost. But they did not advise him to dismiss that Pride that swell'd his Heart, that Inclination to Drunkenness, and all his other Vices. Wherefore the Lord deliver'd up his Army into the Hands of the Children of Israel, who cut them to Pieces, and by that gave them to understand, that he was the Almighty Lord, the God of the Plains, as well as of the Hills.

[1 Kings xx. 26, 27.] The following Year Ben-hadad brought an Army into the Field, probably, with a Design to march against Samaria; but his Army was again cut in Pieces. Some Years after this, a Ben-hadad came again, and lay down before Samaria, and reduced[2] it to such Necessities by Famine, that a Mother was there forced to eat her own Child; but the City was relieved by a sensible Effect of the Protection of God. Lastly, it was besieged by Shalmaneser, King of [2 Kings xvii. 6, 7, &c.] Assyria, in the ninth Year of Hoshea King of Israel, which was the fourth of Hezekiah, King of Judah, and the 3280th of the World. It was taken three Years after, in the Year of the World 3283, before Christ 720, before the vulgar Era 724. The Prophet Hosea speaks of the Cruelties exercised [Hos. x. 4, 8, 9. xiv. 1. Mic. i. 6.] by Shalmaneser against the Besieged; and Micah says, that this City was reduced to a Heap of Stones. The Cuthites that were sent by Esar-haddon to inhabit the Country of Samaria, did not think it worth their while to repair the Ruins of this City; they dwelt at Shechem, which they made the capital City of their State[3]. They were still upon this footing, when Alexander the Great came into Phenicia and Judea[4].

However, the Cuthites had rebuilt some of the Houses of Samaria, even from the Time of the Return from the Captivity, [Ezr. iv. 17. Nehem. iv. 2.] since Ezra then speaks of the Inhabitants of Samaria; and that the Samaritans being jealous of the Favours that Alexander the Great had conferr'd on the Jews, revolted from him while this Prince was in Egypt, and burnt Andromachus alive, whom this [Q. Curt. l. 4. c. 21.] Prince had left Governor of Syria. Alexander marches against them, took Samaria, and put in Macedonians to inhabit it[5], giving the Country round about it to the Jews, and to encourage them to cultivate it, he granted them an Exemption from Tribute.[6] The Kings of Egypt and Syria, who succeeded Alexander, deprived them of the Property of this Country.

But Alexander Balas King of Syria, restored to Jonathan Maccabæus the Cities of Lydda, Ephrem, and Ramatha, which he cut off from the Country of Samaria[7]. Lastly, the Jews re-enter'd into the full Possession of this whole Country under Johannes Hyrcanus the Asmonean, who took Samaria, and ruin'd it in such a manner, according to Josephus[8], that he made the River run through its Ruins. It continued in this Condition to the Year of the World 3947, when Aulus Gabinius, the Proconsul of Syria, rebuilt it, and gave it the Name of Gabiniana.[9] But it was yet but very inconsiderable, till Herod the Great restor'd it to its antient Lustre, and gave it the Greek Name of Sebaste, which in Latin is Augusta, in Honour of the Emperor Augustus, who had given him the Propriety of this Place[10].

The sacred Authors of the New Testament speak but little of Samaria; and when they do mention it, 'tis rather in respect of the Country about it, than of the City itself. [Luk. xvii. 11. John iv. 4.] For Example, when it is said, He passed through the midst of Samaria; the Meaning is, he pass'd through the midst of the Country about Samaria. And again, [John iv. 5.] Then cometh he to a City of Samaria which is called Sychar. 'Twas there where he had the Conversation with the Woman of Samaria, that is, with a Samaritan Woman of the City of Sychar. After the Death of [Acts viii. 1, 2, 3.] St. Stephen, when the Disciples were dispersed through the Cities of Judea and Samaria, St. Philip the Deacon withdrew into the City of Samaria, where he made several Converts. When the Apostles heard that this City had received the Word of God, they sent Peter and John thither, to communicate the Holy Ghost to such as had been baptized. 'Twas there they found Simon Magus, who offer'd Money to the Apostles, being in hopes to buy this Power of communicating the Holy Ghost. Samaria is never call'd Sabaste in the Books of the New Testament, tho' Strangers hardly knew it but by this Name. St. Jerome says,[11] that it was thought Obadiah was buried at Samaria. They also shew'd there the Tombs of Elisha and of St. John the Baptist[12]. There are found many antient Medals that were struck at Sabaste or Samaria, and some Bishops of this City have subscribed to the antient Councils.

Samaritans

SAMARITANS. We have already spoken of the Samaritans, under the Title Cuthites. The Samaritans are the People of the City of Samaria, and the Inhabitants of the Province, of which Samaria was the capital City. In this Sense it should seem, that we might give the Name of Samaritans to the Israelites of the ten Tribes, who lived in the City and Territory of Samaria. However, the sacred Authors commonly give the Name of Samaritans only to those strange People, whom the Kings of Assyria sent from beyond the Euphrates, to inhabit the Kingdom of Samaria, when they took away Captive the Israelites that were there before. Thus we may fix the Epoch of the Samaritans at the taking of Samaria by Shalmaneser, in the Year of the World 3283. This Prince carry'd away Captive the Israelites that he found in the Country, and assign'd them Dwellings beyond the Euphrates, and in Assyria. He sent other [2 Kings xvii. 24.] Inhabitants in their stead, of which the most considerable were the Cuthites, a People descended from Cush, and who are probably of the Number of those, whom the Antients knew by the Name of Scythians.

After Shalmaneser, his Successor Esar-haddon being inform'd, that the People which had been sent to Samaria, were infested by Lyons that devoured them; a this he imputed to the Ignorance of the People in the Manner of worshipping the God of the Country. Wherefore Esar-haddon sent a Priest of the God of Israel, that he might teach them the Religion of the Hebrews. But they thought they might blend this Religion with that they profess'd before; so they continued to worship their Idols as before, in Conjunction with the God of Israel, not perceiving how absurd and incompatible these two Religions were.

[Esr. iv. 1, 2, 3.] 'Tis not known how long they continued in this State; but at the Return from the Captivity of Babylon, it appears they had intirely quitted the Worship of their Idols; and when they ask'd Permission of the Israelites, that they might labour with them at the rebuilding of the Temple of Jerusalem,[1] they affirm'd, that from the Time that Esar-haddon had brought them into this Country, they had always worshipp'd the Lord. And indeed after the Return from the Captivity, the Scripture does not any where reproach them with idolatrous Worship, tho' it does not dissemble either their Jealousy against the Jews, nor the ill Offices they had done them at the Court of Persia, by their Slanders and Calumnies, or the Stratagems they contrived to hinder the repairing of the Walls of Jerusalem[2].

It does not appear there was any Temple in Samaria, in common to all these People who came thither from beyond the Euphrates, before the coming of Alexander the Great into Judea. Before that Time every one was left to his own Discretion, and worshipp'd the Lord where he thought fit. But they presently comprehended, from the Books of Moses which they had in their Hands, and from the Example of the Jews their Neighbours, that God was to be worshipp'd in that Place only which he had chosen. So that since they could not go to the Temple of Jerusalem, which the Jews would not allow of, they bethought themselves of building a Temple of their own upon Mount Gerizim, near the City of Shechem, which was then their Capital. Therefore Sanballat the Governor of the Samaritans, apply'd himself to Alexander,[3] and told him he had a Son-in-law, call'd Manasses, Son to Jaddus the High-priest of the Jews, who had retired to Samaria with a great Number of other Persons of his own Nation; that he desir'd to build a Temple in his Province, where he might exercise the High-priesthood; that this Undertaking would be to the Advantage of the King's Affairs, because in building a Temple in the Province of Samaria, the Nation of the Jews would be divided, who are a turbulent and seditious People, and by such a Division would be made weaker, and less in a Condition to undertake new Enterprizes.

[John iv. 20.] Alexander readily consented to what Sanballat desir'd, and the Samaritans presently began their building of the Temple of Gerizim, which from that Time they have always frequented, and still frequent to this Day, as the Place where the Lord intended to receive the Adoration of his People. 'Tis of this Mountain, and of this Temple, that the Samaritan Woman of Sychar said to our Saviour; Our Fathers worshipped in this Mountain, and ye say, that in Jerusalem is the Place where Men ought to worship. See the Article GERIZIM before, where we have mention'd the several Changes of Fortune that have happen'd to this Temple.

The Samaritans did not long continue under the Obedience of Alexander. They revolted from him the very next Year[4], and Alexander drove them out of Samaria, put Macedonians in their room, and gave the Province of Samaria to the Jews. This Preference that Alexander gave to the Israelites, contributed not a little to increase that Hatred and Animosity that had already obtain'd between these two People. When any Israelite had deserved Punishment, for the Violation of some important Point of the Law, he presently took Refuge in Samaria or Shechem, and embraced the way of Worship according to the Temple of Gerizim.[5] When the Jews were in a prosperous Condition, and Affairs were favourable to 'em, the Samaritans did not fail to call themselves Hebrews, and pretended to be of the Race of Abraham. But no sooner were the Jews fallen into Discredit or Persecution, but the Samaritans immediately disown'd them, would have nothing in common with them, acknowledg'd themselves to be Phenicians originally,[6] or that they were descended from Joseph and Manasseh his Son. This us'd to be their Practice in the Time of Antiochus Epiphanes[7][8].

When this Prince would have compell'd the Jews to renounce their Religion, and to conform to that of the Gentiles, they withstood him with great Resolution, and underwent the last Extremities, rather than abandon the God of their Fore-fathers. But the Samaritans wrote in another Strain to Antiochus; that being originally Sidonians or Phenicians, and being now settled at Shechem, they found themselves under a Necessity, by reason of many Misfortunes that had happen'd to 'em, to conform to certain Customs and Usages of the Jews, as the Observation of the Sabbath; that they had built a Temple upon Mount Gerizim, which had not been dedicated to any particular Deity ;[9] that since he had thought fit to shew the Jews the Effects of his Indignation, to chastise them for their Wickedness, they besought him not to confound them with this People; since they were ready to obey his Commands, and to consecrate their Temple to the Grecian Jupiter. Antiochus admitted their Plea, and wrote to the Governors of Samaria, to give the Samaritans no Disturbance upon the Account of their Religion.

Alexander the Great carry'd with him into Egypt six thousand Samaritans,[10] which Sanballat had sent him from Tyre, as auxiliary Troops. He appointed them Lands in Thebais, and trusted them with the Security of that Province. In this Country, and throughout all Egypt, these Samaritans retain'd their antient Antipathy against the Jews, maintaining that Mount Gerizim was the true Place where God was to be worshipp'd; and the Jews, on the contrary, that it was only the Temple of Jerusalem. This Dispute was managed with such Warmth between them, that it grew into a kind of Sedition, and King Philometor himself would take Cognizance of the Affair.[11] It was therefore argued in his Presence, and it was agreed between the contending Parties, that no Proofs should be admitted but what should be taken out of the Books of the Law, and that the Advocates that lost their Cause should be put to Death. One call'd Sabæus and Theodorus defended the Samaritans; and Andronicus, the Son of Messalami was Advocate for the Jews. These latter gain'd their Suit, and the King condemned to Death the Advocates of the Samaritans.

We do not warrant the Truth of this Fact, tho' it is affirm'd by Josephus in a very circumstantial manner.[12] But we give still less Credit to what the Samaritans relate themselves to their own Advantage in their Chronicon,[13] which was compos'd since Constantine's Time, and under the Christian Emperors. They imagine that Joshua, the General of the People of God, caus'd a Temple to be built upon Gerizim, and there appointed Rus, one of the House of Aaron, to perform divine Service. They produce a Succession of Highpriests, who they pretend have officiated here, quite from the Time of Joshua, down to the present Age, without any Interruption. They will not admit that Jeroboam the Son of Nebat, was the first Author of their Schism ; nor own the Transplantation of the Israelites by Tiglath-pileser and Shalmaneser. They tell us, that the Kings of Syria in Confederacy with the King of Jerusalem, made an Insurrection against Bachtnezer King of the Persians. (For so they call Nebuchadnezzar King of Babylon.)

This Prince brought an Army into the Field, took Jerusalem, pass'd from thence to Shechem, gave the Inhabitants but seven Days to quit the Country, and threatned those with the severest Punishment that should dare to continue in it beyond this Time.

At the same Time he sent other People into Samaria and Judea, to inhabit the Cities thus forsaken. But these new Inhabitants could not live there, because the Fruits, which otherwise appear'd fair, contain'd a Poison in them that was mortal to all that eat of them. When Bachtnezer was inform'd of this, he consulted the former Inhabitants upon this Matter. They declared to him that this Evil would not be remedied, till the Hebrews were sent back, who had been unjustly driven away. They were allow'd then to return into their own Country again. They obtain'd an Edict that they should all assemble together to one Place, and all depart together. There arose a Dispute among the Samaritans, Sons of Joseph and Aaron, and the Jews, whether they should return to Jerusalem, and rebuild the Temple of Mount Sion ; or whether they should go to Shechem, to rebuild that of Mount Gerizim. Zerubbabel, who espoused the Part of the Jews, maintain'd, that Jerusalem was the Place mark'd out by the Writings of the Prophets. Sanballat, who stood up for Gerizim, alledged, that the Writings appeal'd to had been corrupted. The Determination of this Difference was referr'd to the Fire. The Copy of Zerubbabel was consumed in an Instant ; whereas that of Sanballat resisted the Fire in three Tryals. For this Reason the King honour'd Sanballat, made him Presents, and sent him back at the Head of the ten Tribes, who went to take Possession of Mount Gerizim and Samaria.

Adramelech. 8. Tartak. Chiun or Remphan. Succoth Benoth. Mercury. Anamelech. Nergal. 10. Nizroch. SEVERAL FALSE GODS WORSHIPPED BY THE SAMARITANS

We need not give our selves any Trouble to refute this History, which is inconsistent with it self. We have the sacred Histories of the Kings, the Chronicles, the Books of Ezra and Nehemiah, and the Writings of the Prophets, which inform us of the Time, the Cause, the Circumstances of the coming of the Cuthites into the Country of Samaria; the Cause and the Manner in which they embraced the Law of the Jews. And Josephus has acquainted us with the History and Original of the Temple of Gerizim. The Monuments produced by the Samaritans are too modern, they have too much the Appearance of a Fiction, and are contradicted by Accounts of too undoubted Authority, to deserve the least Credit. The Rabbins have added to the History of Nehemiah, some Circumstances much to the Disadvantage of the Samaritans. They tell us that these People, to the Number of one hundred and fourscore thousand Men, going to beset Jerusalem; Ezra and Nehemiah got together three hundred Priests, who excommunicated them according to the greater Excommunication. These Priests were attended by three hundred young Boys, carrying a Copy of the Law in one Hand, and a Trumpet in the other. They sounded the Trumpet at the same Time that the Cuthites were excommunicated by the Priests. They cursed whoever should eat Bread with them, with as heavy a Curse as if they should eat Pork. They asked of God, that they might have no Part in the future Resurrection, and that they might never be allow'd to become Proselytes. This terrify'd the Cuthites in such a manner, that they all betook themselves to Flight.

The Samaritans having received the Pentateuch, or the five Books of Moses, from the Priest that was sent by Esar-haddon, have preserved it to this Day, in the same Language and Character it was then, that is, in the old Hebrew or Phenician Character, which we now call the Samaritan, to distinguish it from the modern Hebrew Character, which we now find in the Books of the Jews. They after their Captivity changed their old Characters, and took up those of the Chaldees, which they had been us'd to at Babylon, and which they continue still to use. 'Tis wrong to give this the Name of the Hebrew Character, for that can be said properly only of the Samaritan Text. The Criticks have taken notice of some Variations between the Pentateuch of the Jews and that of the Samaritans; but these Varieties of reading chiefly regard the Word Gerizim, which the Samaritans seem to have purposely introduced, to favour their Pretensions, that Mount Gerizim was the Place in which the Lord was to be adored. The other various Readings are of small Importance.

The Religion of this People was at first the Pagan. Every one worshipped the Deity they had been us'd to in their own [2 Kings xvii. 25. 2 Kings xvii. 30, 31.&alibi.] Country. The Babylonians worshipp'd Succoth-benoth; the Cuthites, Nergal; the Hamathites, Ashima; the Avites, Nibhaz & Tartak; the Sepharvites, Adrammelech and Anammelech. If we would enumerate all the Names of false Gods, to whom the Samaritans have paid a sacrilegious Worship, we should have enough to do. This Matter is sufficiently perplex'd, by reason of the different Names by which they were adored by different Nations, insomuch that it would be almost impossible to clear up this Affair. We shall content our selves to relate those only, of which mention is made in Scripture, and of which we find something in antient Monuments. The Reader may see them represented in the Plate we have caused to be here exhibited.

Explication of the Figures.

Succoth-benoth signifies the Tents of the young Women. 'Tis believed,[28] that the Scripture would here mark out these infamous Places, where the Babylonish Women were us'd to prostitute themselves once in their Lives, to the Honour of Mylitta, and for the Benefit of her Temple. Selden[29] will have it, that the Name of Venus is derived from Benoth. 'Tis perhaps Venus propagatrix, or Venus with her Harlots, represented under the Similitude of a Hen with her Chickens. [Grot.Mun. alii.] 2. Nergal. She was a Goddess that was worshipped under the Form of a wooden Hen, according to the Rabbins, and several Interpreters. Others think it to be the perpetual Fire, which in Persia was worshipp'd in Honour of the Sun. The Hebrew Word Nergal[14], may literally signify Light, or the Fire that flames, that sparkles, that rouls.

Ashima, or Mendez. The Rabbins describe this Deity to us, some under the Shape of a Goat without Hair[30]; others[31] as a Satyr, or as the Poets describe the God Pan. But all this to me seems very uncertain.

Nibhaz, or Anubis, was represented under the Form of a Dog, according to the Jews. The only Proof they give of it is, [Latrare.] that in Hebrew, Nabuch signifies to bark. We know that the Egyptians worshipp'd Dogs, and that Anubis, one of their Deities, had the Head of a Dog. Omnigenûmq; Deûm monstra, & latrator [Virg. Æneid. viii. v. 698.] Anubis.

[Tartak תרתק] 5. Tartak had the Head of an Ass, as the Jews affirm. It is no Hebrew Word. Perhaps it may be the same as Sar-sak. Sar in [שרShar, princeps. ששכor שקSaca.] the Hebrew signifies a Prince. Sak was a Prince, or a Babylonish God, that was very famous. The Feasts called Sacæa are mentioned by profane Authors[15]. Thus Tartak, according to the Chaldean Pronunciation, may signify the God Sak.

Adrammelech may be Juno, represented under the Form of a Peacock, or a kind of Pheasant.

Anammelech is under the Figure of a Horse. The Agreement that may be observed between the Victims offered to these Deities, and to Moloch the God of the Ammonites, and to Saturn the Deity of the Phenicians, has made many imagine, that they were only the same Idol under different Names.

Chiun, or Remphan, is commonly explained by Saturn, one of the seven Planets, represented by a great Star. Interpreters have been at great Pains to discover who this Deity was. The Reader may consult what we have said in the Dissertation concerning the Idolatry of the Israelites in the Desart, before our Commentary upon the twelve lesser Prophets.

Mercury. This Divinity is sufficiently known. He was the God of Eloquence, the Messenger and Interpreter of the Gods; for which Reason the Greeks called him Hermes. [Acts xiv. 11.] In the Acts St. Paul was taken for Mercury, because of his Eloquence, and the Vehemence of his Discourse.

[2 Kings xix. 37.] 10. Nisroch. The Scripture says, that Sennecharib was assassinated by his two Sons, Adrammelech and Sharezer, as he was worshipping his God Nisroch, in his Temple at Nineveh. We do not exactly know who this God was. M. Basnage believes[16], that it is Janus represented by Noah's Ark, perhaps because Noah had seen both Worlds, having lived both before and after the Deluge; for, as 'tis known, Janus had two Faces, one before, and the other behind, because he comprehended both the Time past and present, as being the God of Time. They have included all the Gods worshipped by the Samaritans, in these four Verses, Numina, quæ Samaria colat, vis scire? tuere, Semi-hominemq; asinum, semi-hominemq; canem. En Capriceps, Gallina, Pavo, saxumq; Trigonum, Et sidus cæli: Numinis illa loco.

Afterwards, to this prophane Worship the Samaritans added that of the Lord, the [2 Kings xvii. 29, 30, 31, 32.] God of Israel. They gave a Proof of their little Regard to this Worship of the True God, when under Antiochus Epiphanes, they [Josep. Ant. l. 11. c. 8.] consecrated their Temple at Gerizim to Jupiter Argivus. In the Time of Alexander the Great, they celebrated the Sabbatical Year, and consequently the Year of Jubilee also. We do not know whether they did it exactly at the same time as the Jews, or whether they observed any other Epoch; and 'tis to little Purpose that some Criticks have attempted to ascertain the [Petit Ecl. Chronol. l. 2. c. 4.] first Beginning of it. Under the Kings of Syria they followed the Epoch of the Greeks, or that of the Seleucidæ, as other People did that were under the Government of the Seleucidæ. After that Herod had re-established Samaria, and had given it the Name of Sebaste, the Inhabitants of this City, in their Medals, and all publick Acts, took the Date of this new Establishment. But these Inhabitants of Samaria, of which the greater Part were Pagans or Jews, were no Rule to the other Samaritans, who probably reckoned their Years according to the Reigns of the Emperors they were subject to, till the Time they fell under the Jurisdiction of the Mahometans, under which they live at this Day; and they reckon their Year by the Hegira, or, as they speak, according to the Reign of Ishmael, or the Ishmaelites.

[Epiphan. hæref. 9. Aug. lib. de hæref. Epiphan. hæref. 9.] Some of the Antients, as Epiphanius and St. Austin, have placed the Samaritans upon the Foot of Hereticks; but they were rather Schismaticks in respect to the Jews. They have no more relation to the Christian Religion than the Jews have, since they do not acknowledge Jesus Christ as the Messiah, and are in Expectation of another. As to their Belief, 'tis objected to them as an Error, that they receive only the Pentateuch, and reject all the other Books of Scripture, chiefly the Prophets, who have more expresly declared the Coming of the Messiah. However, they say, in their Letter to M. Ludolph, that they admit the Book of Joshua; but probably, by this Name they mean no other than their own Chronicon. They have also been accused of believing God to be Corporeal, of denying the Holy Ghost, and the Resurrection of the Dead[17]. Jesus Christ reproaches them with worshipping what they know not. John iv. 22. Epiphanius says, they worshipped the Teraphims that Rachel brought away from Laban, and which Jacob hid under Ground. Lastly, 'tis said, they paid a superstitious Worship to a Pigeon, or to the Representation of one[18], and that they even gave Circumcision in the Name of a Pigeon. M. Reland, in his Letter to M. Basnage, maintains, that they deny the Existence of Angels; and Leontius among the Antients, had already asserted, that they denied Angels, and the Immortality of the Soul.

Jesus Christ seems to exclude them from Salvation, when he says, that Salvation is of the Jews. True it is, that these Words might only signify, that the Messiah was to proceed from the Jews; but the Crime of Schism alone, and a Separation from the True Church, was sufficient to exclude them from Salvation. The Samaritan Woman is sufficient Testimony that the Samaritans expected a Messiah, who they hoped would clear [Joh. iv. 25.] up all their Doubts. Several of the Inhabitants of Shechem believed at the preaching of Jesus Christ, and several of Samaria believed at that of St. Philip; but it is said, they soon fell back to their former Errors, being perverted by Simon Magus. Josephus informs [Vide Lightfoot in Mat. x. 5.] us[19], that a certain Impostor having persuaded the Samaritans, that he would make a Discovery of some sacred Vessels that Moses[20] had hid in a hollow Place of the Mountain; the credulous People followed him, and took Possession of a pretty large Town called Tirataba, where they staid for the rest of the Nation, who were to be Spectators of this Sight. But Pilate being jealous of some intended Insurrection, sent some Troops against the Multitude, who were easily dispersed, and the Ring-leaders of this Assembly were punished with Death.

As to the present Samaritans, we may see by their Letters written to their pretended Brethren of England, and to Scaliger, that they believe in God, in his Servant Moses, the holy Law, the Mountain Gerizim, the House of God, the Day of Vengeance and of Peace; that they value themselves upon observing the Law of Moses, in many Points, more rigidly than the Jews themselves. They keep the Sabbath with the utmost Strictness required by the Law, without stirring from the Place they are in, but only to the Synagogue. They go not out of the City, and abstain from Marriage on that Day. They never delay Circumcision beyond the eighth Day. They still sacrifice to this Day in the Temple on Mount Gerizim, and give to the Priest what is injoin'd by the Law. They do not marry their own Nieces, as the Jews do, nor do they allow themselves a Plurality of Wives.

[Joh. iv. 9.] Their Hatred for the Jews may be seen through all the History of Josephus, and in several Places of the New Testament. The Jewish Historian informs us[21], that under the Government of Coponius, one Passover-Night, when they opened the Gates of the Temple, some Samaritans had scattered the Bones of dead Men there, to insult the Jews, and to interrupt the Devotion of the Festival. The Evangelists shew us, that the Jews and Samaritans hold no Correspondence together. The Jews have no Dealings with

Joh. iv. 22. the Samaritans. And the Samaritan Woman of Sychar was much surprized, that Jesus talked with her, and asked Drink of her, being a Samaritan. When our Saviour sent his Apostles to preach in Judea, he forbad them to enter into the Samaritan Cities, because Mat. x. 5. he looked upon them as Schismaticks, and as Strangers to the Covenant of Israel. One Day when he sent his Disciples to provide him a Lodging in one of the Cities of the Samaritans, they would not entertain him, because they perceived he was going to Luke ix. 52, Jerusalem. Because his Face was as though 53. he would go to Jerusalem. And when the Jews were provoked at the Reproaches of Jesus Christ, they told him he was a Samaritan, thinking they could say nothing more severe against him. Josephus relates[22], that John viii. some Samaritans having killed several Jews 48. as they were going to the Feast at Jerusalem, this occasioned a kind of a War between them. The Samaritans continued their Fealty to the Romans, when the Jews revolted from them; yet they did not escape however from being involved in some of the Calamities of their Neighbours. See Josephus de bello, l. 3. c. 22.

[Lib. Josue apud Hotting. p. 116.] The Chronicon Samaritanum says, that the Emperor Adrian having raz'd Jerusalem, passed on to Naplouse, otherwise Shechem, and took all their Books from them; not leaving so much as their Genealogies and Histories. They were forbid to circumcise their Children, but they sent them, as fast as they were born, into the Caverns of the Earth, where they received the Sacrament of the Covenant, and they did not return till they were cured. The Romans mingled Hog's-Flesh in the Feasts of the Samaritans; who were forced to use their Industry to avoid the eating of it. They placed a Pigeon upon Mount Gerizim, to hinder them from going thither to worship ; and they posted Troops at the Foot of the Mountain, to stop those that would go up notwithstanding the Prohibition. Some of 'em were bold enough to attempt going up, and cunning enough to escape the Watch; but the Bird discovered them, and cried out, To the Hebrew. The Guards at this awoke; and flew those that were coming up.

This Calamity continued till Babar-raba sent one of his Nephews, called Levi, to go through a Course of Study at Constantinople. This young Man made so great a Progress in Learning, that he was made Patriarch, and obtained of the Emperor the Liberty of returning to Gerizim. His Design was to free his Nation from the Yoke of the Romans, and to restore it to its former Liberty. We are not told what became of him afterwards, for there ends the Chronicon of the Samaritans. And what it says of the City of Constantinople, is a sufficient Proof that this Chronicon can't be antient. [Just. Mart.] Justin Martyr assures us, that when the Emperor Antoninus Pius granted the Jews the Liberty of circumcising their Children, he excepted the Samaritans. This holy Man being himself of Shechem, might be well informed of this Fact. Symmachus, the famous Translator of the holy Scriptures out of the Hebrew into Greek, was a Samaritan. He left his Country, and became a Jew, and for this received a second Circumcision.

Under the Empire of Zeno, the Samaritans made themselves a King in the City of Naplouse, and kill'd a great Number of Christians. But Zeno punished them severely for it, and put their King to Death. They revolted again under the Empire of Justinian, burnt the Churches of the Holy Land, and massacred many Christians; and among others the Bishop of Naplouse. Their Rage proceeded so far, that the Emperor Justinian was forced to send some regular Troops against them, who destroyed most of the Rebels.

The Chronicon of the Samaritans, called Tarik Samari, intimates, that the Samaritans separated from the antient Jews after the Death of Samson, under the Pontificate of the [D'Herbelot, Bibl. Orient. p. 753.] High-Priest Eli; because, they say, it was then that the Presence and Favour of the Lord, which they call Redhat, and Redhonan, departed from them, and that then Darkness expelled the Light, and involved all those that were in Palestine, except those that then withdrew upon Mount Gerizim, where they have always had Priests since that time, and afterwards Kings of their own to govern them. They also affirm, that the Prophet Samuel was a Magician, and that all his Successors were Apostates from true Judaism.

[Epiph. de ponder. & mentur.] There are still at this Day[23] some Samaritans at Shechem, otherwise called Naplouse. They have Priests there, who say they are of the Family of Aaron. They have a High-Priest, who resides at Shechem, or at Gerizim, who offers Sacrifices there, and who declares the Feast of the Passover, and all the other Feasts, to all the dispersed Samaritans. Some of 'em are to be found at Gaza, some at Damascus, and some at Grand-Cairo. Scaliger received a Letter from the Samaritans of Shechem, printed in 1676. They have also writ since that to their pretended Brethren in England, and M. Ludolf printed a Letter in 1688, which he received from them.

Those that would be more particularly informed of the History, the Creed, the Ceremonies of the Samaritans, may consult the Letters we have now mentioned, Hottinger, Cellarius, the Horæ Hebraicæ of Lightfoot, and the Continuation of the History of Josephus by M. Basnage, through the whole eighth Book, where he gives an Account of the Samaritan Chronicon, and of the Works that have been composed on their Occasion.

Samaritan in the Books of the Jews, is a Term of Injury and Reproach. Say we not [John viii. 48.] well that thou art a Samaritan, and hast a Devil? said the Jews to Jesus Christ, in their Indignation. Our Saviour (as has been already said) would not suffer his Disciples to [Mat. x. 5.] preach in the Cities of the Samaritans; In Civitates Samaritanorum ne intraveritis. To prove that there are no Persons whatever, but what are our Neighbours, even those from whom we are the most estranged, our Saviour in his Parable of the Jew that was wounded, [Luk. x. 33.] on his Journey between Jerusalem and Jericho, says it was a Samaritan that had Compassion upon him. The Samaritan Woman (as has been observed) was not a little surprized, to find that Jesus Christ conversed with her, and asked Drink from her who was a Samaritan [Joh. iv. 9.] ; for, as the Evangelist adds, the Samaritans and Jews have no Correspondence with each other. Non enim co-utuntur Judæi [Eccles. i. 25, 26.] Samaritanis. The Author of Ecclesiasticus places the Samaritans among those People for whom he has the greatest Abhorrence. There be two manner of Nations which my Heart abhorreth, and the third is no Nation. They that sit upon the Mountain of Samaria[24], and they that dwell amongst the Philistines, and that foolish People that dwell in Sichem. These last are the Samaritans, the most odious of all.

The Samaritan Woman converted by Jesus Christ. See the Article PHOTINA The Martyrologies put her Feast upon the Twentieth of March; and this is an Abstract of what the Greeks inform us about her. When Photina was converted by Jesus Christ, or even by St. Peter, for these Acts mention St. Peter also, she instructed her whole Family, composed of two Sons, Joseph and Victor, with Anatolina, Photo, Photis, Parascue, and Cyriaca, who were her Sisters. Photina went into Africa, where she converted the whole City of Carthage to Christianity, under the Empire of Nero. Victor, Son to Photina, was one of the Emperor's Generals, and the Greeks say he commanded his Armies against the People call'd Avari. But the Spaniards say he was sent against the Rebels of Braga in Spain, and that he was Governor of the City Italica in Andalusia.

Victor received Orders from Nero to put to Death all the Christians in his Government. The General of the Troops knowing that Victor had been baptized by St. Peter, made great Remonstrances to him on this Head, but could gain nothing upon the Mind of Victor. God struck this General, and took from him the Use of his Speech. At the End of three Days he was enlightned of God, recovered his Speech, and cried out; That there was but one only God, which was the God of the Christians. He was then forthwith instructed and baptized by Victor.

Nero being informed of what had passed in Africa, by the Preaching of Photina, and what had happened in Spain by the Constancy of her Son Victor, ordered that the whole Family should be brought to Rome. Jesus Christ appeared to them on the Way, and encouraged them. Photina presented to the Emperor her two Sisters Photo and Photis. Nero caused them to be tortured, and then sent his own Daughter Arethusa to them, with a large Quantity of Pearls and precious Stones, thinking to corrupt them. Photina seeing her coming, cried out to her, Spouse of the Lord, you are welcome. To which the Princess replied, Madam, my Mistress, the Brightness of Jesus Christ, the Lord be with you. The Princess became a Convert, and an hundred young Women that attended on her, and they were immediately baptized by Photina. Nero was so provoked, that he would have 'em all poisoned; but Lampadius the Magician, who prepared the Poison, became a Convert also, as soon as he perceived that his Poison had no Effect upon them. No Cruelties were spared to shake their Resolution; but when it was found that all was ineffectual, they were flay'd alive. One need but read this Story, in order to be convinced of its being fabulous. So that it is quite needless to stand to confute it.

Samaritan-Pentateuch. This is the Collection of the five Books of Moses written in Samaritan Characters, or the antient Hebrew Characters, which were in Use before the Captivity of Babylon. I have already spoken of it under the Articles PENTATEUCH and SAMARITAN. Here are still some farther Remarks upon this Subject. The Copies of the Samaritan Pentateuch were unknown in Europe till the sixteenth Century. The famous James Usher was the first, or at least one of the first, who procured it out of the Eastern Countries. [Usher Ep. ad Lud. Capell.] This learned Man having observed, that Eusebius of Cæsarea, Diodorus of Tharsus, St. Jerome, Cyril of Alexandria, Procopius of Gaza, Georgius Syncellus, and some others, had quoted the Samaritan Pentateuch; he could not be at rest till he had procured five or six Copies out of Syria or Palestine. And by examining these Copies carefully, he thought he could discover that they had been corrupted by one Dositheus, of whom Origen makes mention in his first Book against Celsus: An Opinion in which the Learned do not agree with him.

Pietro della Valle bought a very neat Copy at Damascus, in the Year 1616, for M. de Sansi, then Ambassador of France to Constantinople, and afterwards Bishop of St. Malos. This Book was presented to the Fathers of the Oratory, Rue St. Honoré, where it is preserved to this Day. And it was from this Copy that Father Morinus printed the Samaritan Pentateuch in 1632, which is found in M. le Jay's Polyglot, which is the first Copy that has been printed in this Language. It has been reprinted more correctly in Walton's Polyglot, from three Samaritan Manuscripts that belonged to Usher. See Father le Long's Bibliotheca Sacra, t. 1. p. 124, &c.

The Criticks are much divided about the Samaritan Pentateuch. Father Simon[25] in his Critical History of the Old Testament, is of Opinion, that the Priest who was sent by King Assaradon, or Esar-haddon, to the Cuthites, did not carry with him the Books of the Law of Moses, which would have been useless to a People that did not understand Hebrew, and to himself also, since without this Book, he could not put in Practice the Ceremonies of the Law, in which he had been inured from his Infancy. Therefore it was a long time after this, viz. when Manasseh undertook to build a Temple upon Mount Gerizim, that they carried thither the Copy of the Law, as it was made or reformed by Esdras, and which the Jews read in their Temple at Jerusalem.

M. Vandale maintains[26], that we must distinguish between the Law and the Pentateuch. The Volume of the Law, contained only such Ordinances, the Observation of which was necessary for securing the People from the Anger of God; but the Pentateuch comprehended the History of the Creation of the World, of their Bondage in Egypt, of their Deliverance, of their Wanderings in the Wilderness, and the Body of Laws compiled by Moses. The Priest sent by Esar-haddon, brought to the Samaritans only that Law that was necessary for the Observation of all the Rites of the Hebrews; but the Pentateuch that was lost or buried under the Ruins of Jerusalem, was restored and reformed by Esdras, and could not be communicated to the Samaritans till a long time afterwards. This is the System of this Critick.

Another Critick[27] thinks, that he has discovered in the Pentateuch of the Jews and the Samaritans, some Footsteps of an Author that had lived beyond the Euphrates, who was acquainted with that Country, and who mentions some Particulars of it, which Moses could not have any Knowledge of. He therefore imagines, that the Pentateuch was compos'd by the Priest who was sent to the Cuthites or Samaritans. This Man, who came from Chaldea to instruct those Idolaters, thought proper to write them a History of the Creation of the World, and of the Affairs of the Hebrews, 'till the Delivery of the Law to them, that he might shew them there was but one God. As he wrote this exactly in the eighteenth Year of Josiah, in which the Copy of the Law was found in the Temple, he inserted this Piece into his own Work, as being very essential to it. He wrote the Whole in Hebrew, because he had not had Time enough to learn the Chaldee Tongue. The Jews made no Difficulty of receiving this Work; because the Author was not suspected by them, and because the Book contain'd only their History and their Law. This Author pretends, (who is thought to be M. le Clerc) that this Hypothesis avoids all the Difficulties that are rais'd about the Pentateuch compos'd by Moses, and about the Variations that are found between that of the Jews and that of the Samaritans.

The Generality of Divines believe, that the Samaritan Pentateuch, and that of the Jews, are but one and the same Work, written in the same Language, but in different Characters; and, that the Differences that are found between these two Texts, only proceed from the Inadvertency and Inaccuracy of Copiers, or from the Affectation of the Samaritans, who have foisted Things into it, to promote their own Interests and Pretensions; That the Additions were inserted afterwards; and that, originally, these two Copies were exactly the same. According to this Opinion, it must be allow'd, that the Pentateuch of the Jews is preferable to that of the Samaritans, as being exempt from those Alterations which have been made in the latter. But, on the contrary, others give the Preference to the Samaritan Pentateuch as an Original, which has been preserved in the same Character and the same Condition in which Moses compos'd it.

[Prideaux Connect. t. 2. l. 6. An. 409 before Christ:] Dr. Prideaux, who espouses M. Simon's System, before explain'd, maintains, That the Pentateuch of the Samaritans, is only a Copy, taken in other Characters, from the Copy compos'd or reform'd by Esdras; That even this Copy has been altered by Variations, Transpositions, and remarkable Additions. To prove, that the Samaritan Code is only a Copy, he says; First, That it has all the Interpretations of the Edition of Esdras; which it would not have, if it were more ancient. Secondly, There are several Variations in the Samaritan Pentateuch, which evidently proceed from taking one Hebrew Letter for another that is like it; though, in the Samaritan Alphabet, those two Letters have no Resemblance; and consequently, the Samaritan is only a Copy from the Hebrew Pentateuch of the Jews. This incontestably proves, says he, that it was Manasseh the Son-in-law of Sanballat, who brought the Pentateuch with him, when he took Refuge among the Samaritans. And as the Samaritans were then accustomed to the Phenician Letters, the Pentateuch was written in those Characters, for their Use.

He acknowledges, that Esar-haddon sent a Priest to his new Colony at Samaria, to instruct them in the Manner in which the Israelites, who were the ancient Inhabitants of that Country, had worshipped the God of their Fathers: But it does not appear that this Priest executed this Commission, by introducing the Law of Moses among them. For, had they received this at the Beginning, would they have continu'd in their Idolatry, as it is notorious they did? And would they have made a Medley of the Worship of the True God, and of their Idols, which is expressly forbidden by the Law? It is therefore very probable, that they were instructed in the worshipping of God only by Use and Tradition.

As to the Variations, the Additions, and Transpositions which are found in the Samaritan Pentateuch, when compared with the Hebrew, they are all carefully collected, with the utmost Exactness, in the Book written by Hottinger against Father Morinus, and in the confronting of the two Texts, which is inserted in the last Volume of the English Polyglot. Of these Interpolations, some are for the better understanding of the Text; other are a kind of Paraphrase, expressing at length, what was only hinted at in the Original: Others are such Changes as the Samaritans have purposely made, to favour their Pretensions against the Jews; as when, for Example, they put Gerizim instead of Ebal. Other Varieties are only such as are pure Lapses of the Transcribers.

Besides the Hebrew Pentateuch in Phenician Characters, of which we have been now speaking, the Samaritans have also another, in the Language which they spoke at the Time that Manasseh took Shelter among them. This Language is a Mixture of the Chaldee, the Syrian, and the Hebrew, or Phenician. And, just as the Jews were obliged, in Favour of those People who did not understand the pure Hebrew, to make Versions or Paraphrases in Chaldee; so the Samaritans had their Pentateuch in the Vulgar Samaritan Tongue. This is call'd the Samaritan Version, which differs from the Jewish Paraphrases, there being Glosses and Explications; whereas the Samaritan Version is literal, and ex presses the Text Word for Word: It is printed with the Samaritan Text in the Polyglot of Paris, and also in that of London; and because of its great Conformity with the Text, they have only given one Latin Version for both of 'em.

Sameas

SAMEAS, or Sameias, or Shammai, a famous Rabbin, of whom the Jews say many things. They tell us, he was Head of their Schools, and Master of a great Number of Learned Men; among others, of the famous Hillel, who afterwards separated from his Master, and was Head of another School or College, which taught Principles very different from those of Shammai. [Hieron. in Isai. viii.] Some think this Division of Hillel and Sameas produced the Sect of the Pharisees: But this Opinion can by no means be supported; because the Pharisees were a numerous and powerful Sect a long time before Sameas, who lived but under Herod the Great.

[Jos. Antiq. l. 15. c. 1.] Josephus says, that Sameas was the Disciple of Pollio the Pharisee. I have often thought, that this Pollio might be Hillel: For Josephus never mentions Hillel, yet speaks of Pollio more than once. But the Rabbins make Hillel the Disciple of Sameas, and Josephus makes Pollio his Master. It is certain there were two Hillels, and both of 'em very famous Men; one of 'em lived before Christ, and the other afterwards: The last of 'em was Prince of the Captivity in the West, and lived, according to the Jews, about the [Hieron. in Isai. viii.] Year 240. St. Jerom says, that a little time before the Birth of Jesus Christ, two famous Rabbins, Sameas and Hillel, Heads of two celebrated Schools, made two Parties among the Jews, and became Masters, one of the Scribes, and the other of the Pharisees. The Jews, in the Time of this holy Father, ascribed their Misna and their Deuteroses to Shammai and Hillel, or, as he says elsewhere, to Simeon and Helles[1].

This is what Josephus[2] tells us of Sameas: " Herod being yet but Governor of " Galilea, was summoned before the Grand " Council of Hyrcanus Prince of the Jews, " for having committed several Violences " in the Province of which he had the " Government. Herod made his Appearance, but not as a Suppliant; he was " cloathed in Purple; his Hair comb'd and " perfum'd, and accompany'd by a Troop " of armed Men. All that were there assembled to decide his Cause, were so " astonish'd at his Presence, that none of " 'em durst open his Mouth against him. " There was only Sameas, who spoke with " a great deal of Freedom, and who foretold to the Judges, that this young Man, " whom they durst not condemn, should " one Day be their King, and should put " them all to Death, and Hyrcanus himself, who then, as Prince of the Jews, " presided in the Assembly."

The Event did but too-much verify these Predictions: For when Herod came to the Kingdom, he put to Death all these Judges, except Sameas himself, for whom he always testify'd a great Esteem. When Herod was declared King by the Romans, and came with Socius to besiege Jerusalem,[3] Sameas was always of Opinion, that the Gates should be set open to him, and that he should be received into the City; for he said, their Sins were such, that they could no longer hope God would preserve them from his Government. For this Reason, Herod always favoured Sameas, and those of his Party. The Rabbins say, by way of Proverb, Be humble as Hillel, and stedfast as Sameas.

Samson

SAMSON, Son of Manoah, of the Tribe of Dan, and of a Mother whose Name we [Judg. xiii. 2, 3, 4, &c.] no-where find in Scripture. This Woman was barren; and the Angel of the Lord appeared to her,[1] telling her she should become the Mother of a Son; but she must take care, not to drink any Wine, nor any other intoxicating Liquor, nor must she eat any impure Thing: That when God should make her a Mother, she must take the same Care, with regard to her Son: That she must consecrate him to God from his Infancy: That she must make him observe the Rules of the Nazarites, and not let a Razor come upon his Head; for, says the Angel, He shall begin to deliver Israel from the Hands of the Philistines. This Woman went presently to her Husband, and acquainted him with all that had been told her. Manoah begg'd of the Lord to condescend to send his Angel a second time, that he might be inform'd himself of what was to be done to his Son that was to be born. The Lord heard him. The Angel appear'd again to the Woman, and she ran presently to acquaint Manoah with it. He came and spake to the Angel, who repeated to him, what he had before told the Woman. See MANOAH.

Samson was born the Year following;[2] and the Spirit of God began to appear visibly in him, by the extraordinary Strength of his Body. He dwelt in a Place call'd the Camp of Dan, between Zorah and Eshtaol. One Day, as Samson went to Timnath a City of the Philistines,[3] he there saw a young Woman whom he had a mind to marry: He desired his Father and Mother to obtain her for him. They ask'd him, Is there never a Woman among the Daughters of thy Brethren, or among all my People, that thou goest to take a Wife of the uncircumcised Philistines? But Samson still insisted, saying, Get her for me, for she pleaseth me well. His Parents knew not that this was appointed of God, and that this was the Means he thought fit to use, for the Destruction of the Philistines, who then domineered over Israel. He went therefore with his Parents to Timnath; they made a Demand of the young Woman, who was agreed to be given in Marriage to Samson.

As they were going thither, Samson

Greek verse turn'd a little out of the Road, and all of a sudden he saw a young Lion, who was going to seize him. But Samson took hold of him, and tore him in Pieces, as if it had been a young Kid, tho' he had then nothing in his Hand. Afterwards he return'd again to his Father and Mother, but told them nothing of what he had done. Some time after, returning to Timnath, to celebrate his Marriage there, he pass'd by the same Place, to see the Carcase of the Lion. But he found it dry'd up, and a Swarm of Bees had lodg'd themselves in his Throat, and had there form'd an Honey-comb. He took some of it and eat it, and carry'd some to his Father and Mother, who eat of it also. But he told them nothing of his first Exploit, nor of what had happen'd after. Being come to Timnath, the Ceremony of the Marriage was perform'd, and the Wedding-feast was kept, and the Inhabitants of the Place provided thirty young Men for Samson, to do him Honour at his Wedding.

Then Samson said to these young Men at the Entertainment, I will propose a Riddle to you; and if you can explain it to me before the seven Days of the Feast are at an end, I will give you thirty Changes of Raiment: But if you cannot explain it to me, you shall give me thirty Changes of Raiment, or thirty Coats and thirty Clokes, or thirty compleat Suits of Cloaths,[4] which consisted of a Coat or a Gown, and a Cloak. They bid him propose his Riddle, that they might know what it was. Samson told them, That out of the Eater came forth Meat, and out of the Strong came forth Sweetness. They continued as far as the seventh Day, endeavouring to find out the Meaning of this Riddle, but all to no Purpose. Then they apply'd themselves to the young Woman whom Samson had marry'd, and sometimes by Threats, sometimes by Entreaties, they urged her to get the Secret out of her Husband, and to tell it them. She being therefore very importunate with Samson, at last he told her the Meaning of his Riddle; which she had no sooner heard, but she told it again to her own People. Before Sun-set they came to Samson, and asked him, What is sweeter than Honey, and what is stronger than a Lion? He presently told them, That if they had not plough'd with his Heifer,[5] they could never have expounded his Riddle.

At the same Time the Spirit of God moved him. He went to Askalon, a City of the Philistines, and having there killed thirty Men, he gave their Cloaths to those that had explained this Riddle. Hereupon he left his Wife, and returned again to his Father. Some time after this, the Woman married one of the young Men who had accompanied Samson at his Wedding: And Samson's Anger being now over, he return'd to see his Wife, bringing her a young Kid along with him. a But when he came to enter her Chamber, the Father of the young Woman would not let him go in, saying to him; I thought you had hated her, and therefore I have given her to another: But she has a Sister who is younger and handsomer than she; you shall have her for a Wife instead of the other. Samson made no other Answer but this; Hereafter the Philistines will have no Reason to complain of me, if I return them the Evils they have done to me. He then went and caught three hundred Foxes, which he ty'd together in Pairs, Tail to Tail, and every Pair had a Fire-brand between. He sets fire to the Fire-brands, and turns the Foxes into the Corn-fields of the Philistines, who presently set the ripe Corn on fire, and made a great Havock, the Flame not sparing even the Vines and the Olive-Trees. When the Philistines knew it was Samson that had done this, to revenge the Affront he had received from his Father-in-law at Timnath; they took him and his Daughter, and burn'd them both in the Fire. But Samson was not satisfied with this; he told them he would still carry his Vengeance further, before he would have done.

Upon this he flew a great Number of them,[6] and then retired into the Cave of Etam, in the Tribe of Judah. When the Philistines knew this, they came in great Numbers into the Land of Judah, to lay waste the Country; and the People of Judah coming to ask the reason of this Outrage, the Philistines told them; We are come to bind Samson, and to repay him the Injuries he has done to us. Then three thousand Men of the Tribe of Judah came to the Cave of Etam, and told Samson they were come to bind him, in order to deliver him up to the Philistines. He asked them, Will you promise me with an Oath that you will not kill me? When they had sworn to him, he suffered them to bind him with two new strong Cords, and to bring him to the Philistines. No sooner did they see him in this Condition, but they set up loud Shouts, and were going to fall upon him. Then the Spirit of the Lord seizing Samson all at once, he snapt in Pieces the Cords he was bound with, and happening to find at his Feet the Jaw-bone of an Ass, he took it up, and with this Weapon he flew a thousand of the Philistines. Then he sung that Song, With the Jaw-bone of an Ass, Heaps upon Heaps, with the Jaw of an Ass have I slain a thousand Men. And throwing away the Jaw-bone, he gave that Place the Name of Ramath-lehi, which is as much as to say, the Lifting up of the Jaw-bone. He was afterwards overcome with a great Thirst; and crying to the Lord, the Lord open'd a Rock that was in that Place, and which was call'd Maktesh, that is, the Jaw-tooth, from whence Water gushed out to assuage his Thirst. Here is some Difficulty in this Place,[7] which we have already inquired into, under the Article LEHI, and under MAKTESH. See also the Commentators upon Judg. xv. 19.

After this Samson went to Gaza, a City of the Philistines, and having there seen a Harlot, or a Woman that kept a publick House, he went in to lodge with her.[8] The Philistines being inform'd of it, set a Guard about the House, and at the Gates of the City, to kill him as he went out in the Morning. But Samson rising at Midnight, went and took away the two Gates of the City, and the Gate-Posts, Bar and Chain, and carried them up the Hill which is near Hebron.

Some time after he fell in Love with a Woman call'd Delilah,[9] who dwelt in the Valley of Sorek. Many of the Antients have thought,[10] that Samson had taken her as his lawful Wife; but most of 'em maintain, that Delilah was a publick Woman, and was never marry'd to Samson. The Philistines therefore came to this Woman, and promis'd her a good Sum of Money, if she would discover to 'em in what this extraordinary Strength of Samson consisted, and wherein it lay: This she undertook to do, and omitted nothing to get out this Secret from Samson. He amused her for a considerable Time, and made her believe that his Strength consisted sometimes in one thing, and sometimes in another; and when the Philistines were ready to fall upon him, he burst his Bonds asunder, and defeated his Enemies. He suffer'd himself to be bound while he slept, sometimes[11] with Bands made of green Withs; sometimes with Ropes that had never been us'd; at another time the Locks of his Hair were woven into Tresses, and fastened down to the Floor with a Pin: But all this signify'd nothing. At last Delilah teized him so much, that he told her his Strength lay in his Hair, which had never been shorn, for he was a Nazarite from his Mother's Womb; and that if his Hair was cut off, he should be no stronger than another Man. Delilah then cut off his Hair as he lay sleeping in her Lap; and the Philistines fell upon him, bound him, and put out his Eyes. Then they took him to Gaza, shut him up in Prison, and made him grind at the Mill, as a base and contemptible Slave[12].

'Tis here inquired, whether Samson's Hair was the natural and physical Cause of his Strength; or whether it was only the moral Cause, and, as it were, the Pledge of the Assistance of the Holy Spirit, who thought fit to endue him with this prodigious Strength, as a permanent Quality, so long as he should observe the Laws of Nazariteship, and should keep his Hair untouch'd, which was the visible Token of it. The greatest Part of the Fathers and Interpreters[13] maintain this last Opinion, which indeed seems to be the most probable. For tho' a strong and thick Head of Hair, and of a considerable Length, may be a Token of natural Strength, yet that Strength will not be the less after the Hair is cut off. But it was not so with Samson. Therefore his Hair was neither the Cause nor the Sign of his great Strength; this Strength was supernatural and miraculous, and God had thought fit to connect it with Samson's Hair; or with his due Observance of that Nazariteship that had been injoin'd him.

Samson continued in Prison at Gaza for about a Year[14]. Then his Hair being grown out again,[15] God restored him his first Strength; and the Princes of the Philistines met in a general Assembly, in the Temple of their God Dagon, to return him Thanks for having deliver'd them out of the Hand of this their formidable Enemy. After they had ended their Feast of rejoycing, they order'd Samson to be sent for, that they might make Sport with him, and be diverted by him: He was therefore fetch'd out of Prison, and after they had insulted him as long as they thought fit, by making themselves Pastime with the absurd Behaviour of a blind Man; he desir'd him that led him, to let him lean against the Pillars that supported the Temple, that he might rest himself a little. The Temple was then full of People, both above and below the Galleries. We imagine the Temple to have been round, and perhaps encompass'd with a double Row of Pillars[16]. Then Samson calling upon the Name of the Lord, said; O Lord, my God, remember me: Restore me now my first Strength, that I may once revenge myself of my Enemies, that have deprived me of my Sight. And laying hold of the two Pillars, by which the Temple was supported, taking one in his Right-hand, and the other in his Left, he said; Let me also dye with the Philistines. Then violently shaking the Pillars, the Temple fell down upon the Princes and People that were therein, to the Number of about three thousand Persons; and so he kill'd more at his Death, than he had done before in his Life-time. He lived in the whole about thirty-eight Years; and was Judge of Israel about twenty Years. Judges xvi. 20. from the Year of the World 2867 to 2887.

Some Difficulties are started about the State of the Salvation of Samson. Ought he to have put himself to Death? And when he was wishing to dye, should he have sought Revenge for the Loss of his Eyes? St. Bernard maintains[17], that if he had not a particular Inspiration of the Holy Ghost to move him to this, he could not without Sin be the Author of his own Death. St. Austin[18] also does not excuse him, but only upon the Supposition, that he was urged by the inward Motions of Him, who is Master of our Life and Death. Others maintain[19], that without having recourse to this supernatural Motive, this Action of Samson might be vindicated from his Office, as being the Judge and Defender of Israel; and therefore, without considering the Danger he expos'd himself to, might have nothing in View but the Death of his Enemies, and the Deliverance of his People. But finally, in whatever manner this Action is excus'd, it must be own'd, that he is in the Number of the Saints, since St. Paul himself places him among those [Heb. xi. 32.] whose Faith was commended and recompensed.

Samuel

SAMUEL, Son of Elkanah, and of [1 Sam. i. 1,2,3,&c. 1 Chron. vi. 29.] Hannah, of the Tribe of Levi, and of the Family of Kobath; he was a Prophet and Judge of Israel for several Years. The Dwelling of his Father was at Ramathaim-Zophim, or the City of Ramatha, inhabited by the Levites of the Family of Zophai or Ziph, one of the Descendants of Kohath. Samuel dwelt there himself for the greatest Part of his Time. Ramatha or Ramath was in the Mountains of Ephraim, between Bethel and Gibeah. See RAMATH. 'Tis disputed whether Samuel was a Priest or no. Some of the Antients believed, that he was of the Race of Aaron,[1] and that he exercised the [1 Sam. ii. 18.] Function of High-priest[2]. He wore the Ephod; he consecrated two Kings, Saul and David; he offer'd Sacrifices, and that [Ps. xcix. 6.] out of the Tabernacle. The Psalmist places him in the Rank of Priests; Moses and Aaron among his Priests, and Samuel [Joseph. Antiq. l. 7. c. 15.] among them that call upon his Name. Josephus says, that Samuel appear'd to Saul in a Sacerdotal Habit. We find no one of the Family of the High-priest Eli, after the Death of Hophni and Phinehas, that could exercise the High-priest's Office. It is therefore very probable, that Samuel perform'd the Duties of this Office, till such time as the Grandsons of Eli were of an Age to take it upon themselves.

But it is reply'd, that Samuel not being of the Race of Aaron, there is no likelihood that he should ever have been High-priest. If he had wore an Ephod, and anointed Kings, and even sacrificed in extraordinary Cases, that will not prove that he was a Priest. David wore the Ephod; Gideon [2 Sam. vi. 14. 1 Sam. xiii. 9, 10. xv. 12. Judg. vi. 18. 1 Kings xix. 15,16. 2 Kings xi. 1, 2, 6, 12, &c.] and Saul had sacrificed; some of the Prophets consecrated Kings; Samuel is put in the Number of those who call upon the Lord, that is, the Levites. And if we will have him put in the Rank of Priests, we must take the Word Priest in its greatest Latitude and generical Sense, for all those that are imploy'd in the Service of the Lord, and who perform the Office of Mediators between God and the People. Lastly, in this Question, as well as in many others, we may oppose Authority against Authority; and both Antients and Moderns may be cited, who expressly deny that Samuel was a Priest[3]. As to the Age of the Children of Hophni and Phinehas, we have nothing certain upon that Matter; and if any one was to be employ'd to perform the Functions of the High-priest, they chose rather to take a Priest than a mere Levite.

But now let us come to the Life of Samuel. Elkanah his Father had two Wives, one of which was call'd Peninnah, and the other Hannah. Peninnah had Children; but Hannah was barren. Elkanah loved Hannah very tenderly, and was much concern'd that she had no Children. One Day when he went with all his Family to Shiloh, where the Ark of the Lord was deposited,[4] he there offer'd Peace-offerings, and made an Entertainment for his Wives and Children. Hannah seeing herself alone, while Peninnah was surrounded with a Troop of Children, began to bewail herself; and rising from Table, she went to the Tabernacle, where she pour'd out her Heart before the Lord. Eli the High-priest being near, and hearing her speak pretty loud, thought she had been overcome with Wine; but Hannah soon discover'd to him the Occasion of her Affliction; and made a Vow, that if God would give her a Son, she would dedicate him to his Service all the Days of his Life; that she would cause him to profess the Order of a Nazarite, and suffer no Razor ever to come upon his Head. Eli blessed her, and begg'd of God to grant her her Petition. Hannah, being return'd to Ramatha, conceived and brought forth a Son, to whom she gave the Name of Samuel[5], saying; Because I have asked him of the Lord[6]. Some Years after, when the Child was weaned, she brought him to Shiloh, into the House of the Lord, with an Offering of three Calves, of three Measures of Flour, and of three Baths of Wine. She made her Offering to God, and told the High-priest she was the same Woman, for whom he had pray'd some few Years ago. See the Article HANNAH. The young Samuel officiated in the Temple, as far as his Age [1 Sam. ii. 18, 19, 20.] would allow. He was cloathed with a linen Ephod, and his Mother made him a little Coat of Linen, which she brought to him on the solemn Days, when she and her Husband came to offer their Sacrifices to the Lord.

But Eli was now become very old, and his Eye-sight was grown so dim, that he could hardly see at all. He heard of the Irregularities of his two Sons Hophni and Phinehas, but had not Courage to restrain them, nor the Power to make them remove that Scandal they caus'd to all the People of Israel. One Day as Samuel was in Bed in Eli's Chamber, near the Tabernacle of the Lord,[7] he heard a Voice calling him by his Name very early in the Morning, before they had extinguish'd the Lamps of the golden Candlestick, which burnt in the Holy Place over-against the Door of the Sanctuary. Samuel thinking it to be the Voice of Eli, ran hastily to him, and said; Here am I, for you call'd me. Eli bid him return, and lie down to sleep, for he did not call him. Samuel did so, and the same thing happen'd to him three times. The third time Eli, judging there must be something extraordinary in the Matter, sent Samuel back, and said to him; Go and sleep, and if you are call'd any more, say; Speak, Lord, for thy Servant heareth.

He return'd, and the Lord calling him again, Samuel answer'd; Speak, Lord, for thy Servant heareth. Then the Lord said to him; I am going to do a thing in Israel, that shall make the Ears tingle of all those that shall hear of it. I shall accomplish all that I have resolved against Eli, and against his House, because knowing the Iniquity of his Children, he has not restrain'd them. Wherefore I have sworn that the Iniquity of this House shall never be expiated, neither by Sacrifices nor Offerings. When Day was come, Eli call'd Samuel to him, and obliged him to discover what the Lord had said to him. Samuel told him the whole, and conceal'd nothing from him; to which Eli answer'd, It is the Lord, let him do what is pleasing in his own Eyes. Then it was known to all Israel, that Samuel was the chosen Prophet of the Lord; and whatever he declared, whether to Eli or the People, had always its due Effect.

We have elsewhere related a the Manner in which the Ark of the Lord was taken by the Philistines; the Death of the High-priest Eli, and that of his two Sons Hophni and Phinehas; the manner in which the Ark of the Lord was sent back to Bethshemesh, and from thence placed at Kirjath-jearim. This may be seen related at length in the first Book of Samuel, iv, v, vi.

After the Death of Eli the High-priest,[8] Samuel was acknowledg'd as Judge by all Israel, and as Governor of the People. Probably this was done by that Assembly that met together, on the Occasion of removing the Ark from Beth-shemesh to Kirjath-jearim. Samuel then made this Declaration to the People; If you return to the Lord with all your Hearts, take away the strange Gods from among you, and prepare your Hearts to serve only the Lord, and he will deliver you from all your Enemies. Then the Children of Israel renounced all their strange Gods, and apply'd themselves wholly to the Service of the God of their Fathers. Afterwards Samuel convened another Assembly at Mizpeh, where all the People met in Arms. Samuel pray'd for them; they fasted and pray'd, they pour'd out Water before the Lord;[9] they confess'd their Sins, and Samuel judged them in the same Place. The Philistines hearing that Israel was assembled at Mizpeh, took the Alarm, and came into the Field against them. Samuel call'd upon the Lord, and offered a sucking Lamb for a Sacrifice. No sooner was the Fight begun, but a dreadful Peal of Thunder was heard, that struck Terror and Consternation among the Philistines. They betook themselves to Flight, and Israel pursued them as far as Beth-car. This Defeat was so signal, that for a long Time they durst not any more appear upon the Frontiers of Israel; for the Hand of the Lord was over them as long as Samuel governed the People, and the Philistines were obliged to restore such Cities as they had taken from the Israelites.

Samuel was about forty Years of Age when he began to judge Israel. He judged [1 Sam. vii. 15.] them the whole Time of his Life; for under the Reign of Saul he preserved a great deal of Authority, as well in respect of Saul himself, as the whole People. He went every Year to Bethel, thence to Gilgal, then to Mizpeh; afterwards he return'd to his House at Ramah, and so distributed Justice to all Israel. He also built an Altar at Ramah, as well for the Use of his own private Devotion, as to keep up the Religion of the People, who flock'd to him from all Parts, to consult him, and to have their Causes decided. When he grew old himself,[10] he appointed his Sons as Judges over Israel, and they discharged this Office in Beer-shebah, a City lying upon the southern Limits of the Land of Canaan. But they, instead of walking in the Steps of their Father, were venal and mercenary Judges, and suffer'd themselves to be corrupted by Bribery and Avarice.

Then all the Elders of Israel came to Samuel, and said to him;[11] You see that you are grown old, and that your Children do not pursue your Steps; set a King over us, as all other Nations have, that he may judge us. This Proposal was not agreeable to Samuel, and he address'd himself to God by Prayer. The Lord said to him; Hear the Voice of the People, and give them what they ask for, for it is not you, but me, they have rejected, that I may not reign over them. But declare to them what are the Prerogatives of a King, and what are the Rights he will insist on. Samuel gave Answer to those that had made this Request to him, That the Lord was[12] not averse to their having a King, but they ought well to consider what would be the Consequences of kingly Power: That this King would take their Children from them, to make them serve in his Wars, and in his House: That he would force them to do his Drudgery and Labour, both in City and Country: That he would take their Daughters to make them serve as his Perfumers, Cooks, and Bakers, and in other menial Offices: That he would make them pay the tenth Part of the Profit of their Corn, Vines, and Flocks. That then they would cry unto the Lord, and the Lord would not hear them. But the Israelites were not moved with these Remonstrances; they persisted in desiring a King, and God told Samuel he would appoint them one.

A little while after a Saul the Son of Kish, of the Tribe of Benjamin, being sent by his Father to seek some Asses that were stray'd, came to advise with Samuel about the Asses; but the Prophet told him, that God had appointed him King over his People, and gave him the royal Unction, as we shall more amply relate hereafter, under the Article of SAUL. After which Samuel held an Assembly of the People at Mizpeh, that they might proceed to the Election of a King. The Lot was cast for all the Tribes separately, and fell upon the Tribe of Benjamin. Then it was cast for all the Families of this Tribe, and fell upon that of Matri. Lastly, it fell upon Saul, the Son of Kish. He was sought for immediately, but was not to be found. They ran therefore to the Place where the Baggage was deposited, where he had hid himself, and brought him forth among the People. Samuel then said to 'em; You see who it is the Lord hath chosen, and that there is none like him among all the People. After this he writ down the Laws and Constitutions of this new Kingdom, and publish'd them to the People, and then dismiss'd them.

A Month was scarcely pass'd after Saul's Election, but a War broke out between the Ammonites and the City of Jabesh, in the Country of Gilead.[13] Saul, at the Head of all Israel, marched against the Ammonites, and set Jabesh at Liberty. See SAUL and JABESH. At their Return from this Expedition, Samuel said to the People; Let us go to Gilgal, and there let us confirm the Election of the King. They did so, and acknowledged Saul as King. They offer'd Peace-offerings, and made great Rejoycings. Then Samuel addres'd himself [1 Sam. xii. 1, 2, &c.] to the People, and asked them, Whether they had had any Reason to find fault with his Conduct? The People answer'd, that he had given them no Reason of Complaint. Samuel proceeded, and said to 'em, The Lord is therefore my Witness to Day, and so is also the King he has appointed, that you have nothing to reproach me with. To which the People answer'd; They are Witnesses. Samuel then told them, That God having granted them a King according to their Request, they ought to remain faithful and obedient to the Lord: That if they did so, God would shower down Blessings upon them and their King: That if, on the contrary, they forsook the Lord, the Hand of the Lord would be upon them, as it was upon their Fathers. To which he added, Is it not now Wheat-harvest? A Season in which it is very rare in Palestine to see Rain. Yet I shall call upon the Lord, and he will send out his Thunder, and shower down his Rain, that you may know how great an Evil it is in the Eyes of the Lord, that you have presumed to ask for a King.

At the same Time he cry'd to the Lord, and the Lord sent Thunder and Rain in great abundance. This put the People into such a Consternation, that they asked Pardon of God for the Fault they had committed, in asking him for a King. Samuel exhorted them to continue faithful to the Lord; and promised them, that he would not cease to intercede for them, and to instruct them in the right way. After which every one return'd to his House; and this was what pass'd in the first Year of the Reign of Saul.

In the second Year after his Election[14], he made choice of three thousand Men that were good Soldiers,[15] of which he kept two thousand about his own Person, to drive out the Garisons of the Philistines that were at Michmash and Bethel; and the other thousand Men were with Jonathan his Son, wherewith to drive out the Philistines that were posted at Gibeah. This Jonathan effected, and Saul being desirous to pursue this Advantage, call'd all the People together at Gilgal. The Philistines on the other Side took Arms, and assembled at Michmash, to the Number of thirty thousand Chariots, six thousand Horse, and an innumerable Multitude of Foot. These Preparations so terrified the Israelites that were got together with Saul at Gilgal, that they fled to hide themselves, every one where he best could. Saul staid at Gilgal six Days expecting Samuel[16], and seeing he did not come, on the seventh Day, he had the Victims brought to him, and offer'd a Burnt-sacrifice.

He had hardly compleated his Sacrifice but Samuel came. Saul went out to meet him, and saluted him; Samuel says to him, [1 Sam. xiii. 8, 9, 10, &c.] What have you been doing? Saul replies, That seeing himself press'd hard by the Philistines, and almost intirely abandoned by his own Soldiers, he had offer'd a Burnt-offering. Samuel told him again, That he had committed a piece of Folly. If, says he, you had obey'd the Commandment of the Lord, the Lord would have confirmed your Kingdom over Israel for ever; but now your Reign will not long continue. The Lord has found a Man after his own Heart, to place at the Head of his People. From thence Samuel went to Gibeah, and Saul follow'd him thither with his little Army, which was hardly above six hundred Men: Yet it was with this Handful of Men that Saul fought the Philistines, and beat them, as has been already observed under the Article of JONATHAN, and may be seen under SAUL; or may be read in the xiii and xiv Chapters of the First Book of Samuel.

After this Samuel came to Saul[17], by an Appointment from God, to bid him make War with the Amalekites. Cut them in Pieces, says he, spare none, but destroy all; they are all devoted to the Curse of Extirpation, both Man, Woman and Child, even those that suck the Breast; even their Oxen, Camels, Sheep, and Asses. Saul therefore marched out against Amalek, cut them in Pieces, took and ravaged the whole Country; but, however, he thought fit to preserve such a Part of their Goods and Cattle as he thought deserved it best. Then God said to Samuel; I repent that I have made Saul King, because he has forsaken me, and done contrary to my Orders. Samuel was much afflicted at this, and cry'd to the Lord all Night. The Day following he came to Saul to Gilgal, where he was offering a Sacrifice of the Firstlings of the Flocks, that he had taken from Amalek. Saul saluted him, and told him; He had perform'd the Commands of the Lord. Whence then, says Samuel, is this Lowing of Oxen, and Bleating of Sheep in my Ears? Saul answer'd him, The People brought away what they thought best, to offer in Sacrifice to the Lord their God. Samuel upbraided him very vehemently with his want of Obedience; and Saul, to excuse himself, threw all the Blame upon the People; but Samuel reply'd to him, Is it Burnt-offerings and Sacrifices that the Lord requires? Obedience is more acceptable to him than any Sacrifice. To disobey him is equal to the Crime of Witchcraft, and to withstand him is as the Sin of Idolatry. As therefore you have rejected the Word of the Lord, so also the Lord has rejected you, and will not have you any longer for a King over his People.

[1 Sam. xv. 35. 1 Sam. xvi. 1, 2, 3, 4, &c.] Then says Saul to Samuel, I have sinned in having too great Complaisance for the People; but bear with my Iniquity, and come with me, that we may worship the Lord. Samuel answer'd him, I will not go with you, and at the same time turn'd hastily away from him to be gone. Saul having then hold of Samuel's Garment, it tore in his Hands. On which Occasion Samuel said to him; Thus has the Lord tore the Kingdom out of your Hands, to give it to another, who is better than you. Saul reply'd, I confess I have sinn'd, but however do me the Credit of appearing with me before the Elders of the People, and before all Israel: Return with me, and let us worship the Lord. Samuel was then prevail'd with to follow him, and they return'd to the Camp at Gilgal. There Samuel caus'd Agag, King of the Amalekites to be brought out before him, whose Life had been saved, and who had been brought to Gilgal with the rest of the Booty. Samuel hew'd him to Pieces, and told him, That as his Sword had made so many Mothers childless, so likewise should his Mother be made childless among Women. Then Samuel return'd to Ramah, and Saul went to his House at Gibeah. From this Time Samuel saw Saul no more; but, however, he continually bewail'd him, because the Lord had rejected him, and repented that he had made Saul King of his People Israel.

Some Years after this,[18] the Lord said to Samuel; How long will you mourn for Saul? Arise and go to Bethlehem, and give the Royal Unction to one of the Sons of Jesse, whom I have chosen to be the King of my People. Samuel made Answer; How shall I go? Saul will be inform'd of it, and will put me to Death. The Lord said to him; Go thither as if it were to sacrifice, and you shall invite Jesse to partake of the Sacrifice, and there I will shew you him you are to anoint. Samuel went therefore to Bethlehem, and all the Elders of the Place came to shew their Respect to him, whom he invited to the Solemnity of the Sacrifice. When he went into Jesse's House, all the Sons of this venerable old Man came to salute him. And when they were before him, Samuel seeing Eliab the eldest, said within himself; Surely this is he the Lord has chosen for his Anointed. But the Lord answer'd him; Have no Regard to a good Appearance, or an advantageous Stature; for this is not he whom I have chosen: I judge not of Men by the outside, but by what is within the Heart. Then Jesse caused his seven Sons to come one after another; but Samuel told him, God has not chosen any of these. Jesse said, he had still a younger Son, but he was keeping the Sheep. Send for him, says Samuel, for we will not sit down to Table till he comes. This eighth Son of Jesse was David, who was fetch'd out of the Field; and as soon as he came in, the Lord said to Samuel, Anoint him quickly, for this is he. Samuel poured upon his Head the Oil he had brought with him; and from that very time the Spirit of the Lord rested upon David, and departed from Saul.

Samuel return'd to Ramah, and dwelt there all the rest of his Life among the Prophets, who lived under his Conduct in a kind of Community. Several Years after, a when David was in Disgrace with Saul, and had very hardly escaped out of his Hands, he came to take Refuge with Samuel at Ramah. He acquainted him with the manner of Saul's Behaviour towards him, and they went together to Naioth, where they continued for some Time. Saul had Intelligence of this, who presently sent forth a Party to surprize David. But the Messengers finding Samuel, who was then prophesying in the midst of the Prophets, they were also seized by the Spirit, and began to prophesy among them; that is to say, they were surprized with certain irregular Motions and Agitations, and pronounced certain Words, as the Prophets were us'd to do in their Fits of Enthusiasm. When this was told Saul, he sent a second and a third Company of Messengers, who all were seized in like manner. Lastly, he went himself, and was seized with the Spirit of God, and prophesy'd among the rest. This gave David an Opportunity to escape, and to withdraw himself elsewhere.

Samuel died at the Age of ninety-eight, about two Years before the Death of Saul[19]. All Israel gathered together to mourn for him, and he was buried at his own House at Ramah. Jesus the Son of Sirach, Author of Ecclesiasticus, has consecrated this Eulogy to [Ecclus. xlvi. 13, 17, 20.] his Memory: Samuel the Prophet of the Lord, beloved of his Lord, established a Kingdom, and anointed Princes over his People. By the Law of the Lord he judged the Congregation, and the Lord had Respect unto Jacob. By his Faithfulness he was found a true Prophet, and by his Word he was known to be faithful in Vision. He called upon the mighty Lord, when his Enemies pressed upon him on every Side, when he offered the sucking Lamb. And the Lord thundered from Heaven, and with a great Noise made his Voice to be heard. And he destroyed the Rulers of the Tyrians[20], and all the Princes of the Philistines. And before his long Sleep, he made Protestations in the Sight of the Lord and his Anointed; I have not taken any Man's Goods, so much as a Shoe: And no Man did accuse him. And after his Death he prophesied, and shewed the King his End, and lift up his Voice from the Earth in Prophecy, to blot out the Wickedness of the People.

What the Author of Ecclesiasticus here alludes to, happened about two Years after the Death of Samuel[21]. This is what we read [1 Sam. xxviii. 1, 2, 3, &c.] of it in the first Book of Samuel: The Philistines, having invaded the Territories of Israel with a powerful Army, encamped at Shunem, in the Vale of Esdrelon, and Saul with his Troops took Possession of the Eminencies of Gilboa. This Prince being in great Consternation at the Multitude of his Enemies, and being not able to obtain any Answer, either by Dreams, or by the Priests, or by the Prophets, resolved at last to consult some Witch or Sorceress, to know what would be the Event of this War. It was told him, there was an Enchantress at En-dor, a Place at about two or three Leagues from Mount Gilboa. He disguised himself, and came hither with a small Attendance, that the Witch might not know him; for some Years before he had drove all those of her Profession out of the Country.

Coming then to this Woman, he desired her to raise the Ghost of Samuel to him. She had recourse to her Charms and Spells, and when she saw Samuel really to appear, she set forth a great Cry, and said to Saul; Why have you deceived me, for you are Saul? Saul gave her some Assurances to encourage her, and asked her what she saw? I see, said she, the Gods coming forth out of the Earth[22]. Saul asked her what Sort of a Man it was? She said, an old Man covered with a Mantle. Saul knew it to be Samuel, and bowed himself to the Earth. Samuel said to him, Why have you disturbed my Rest, and caused me to be raised up? Saul answered him, That being in great Straights, and not knowing to whom he should address himself, because God had not given him any Answer, he found himself necessitated to have Recourse to him by the Art of Magick. Samuel told him, that the Lord would deal with him as he had already told him, that the Kingdom should be taken from him, and given to David his Son-in-Law; that God would deliver Israel[23] into the Hands of their Enemies the Philistines. To which he added, To-morrow you shall be with me, you and your Sons, and the Lord shall abandon the Camp of Israel to the Philistines.

Upon this History, a very important Question has been moved, that has divided both Antients and Moderns, that is, Whether the Ghost of Samuel did really appear to Saul, or whether all that is here related of this Matter is only a Trick of the Sorceress, who herself spoke to Saul, and feigned the Voice of Samuel. 'Tis asked also, whether this was done by the Power of the Devil, and by Art Magick; or, whether God permitted that Samuel should appear, by the miraculous Effect of his Power, and not by any Effect of Magick. Justin Martyr, Origen[24], Anastasius of Antioch believed the [Justin. Dial. cum Tryphon. Anast. Antioch. in Odego. qu. 12.] Demons had some Power over the Souls of the Saints, before Jesus Christ descended into Hell, and delivered them out of the Hands of this Prince of Darkness. St. Austin[25] finds no greater Inconvenience in saying, that the Devil caused the Soul of Samuel to appear, than in supposing him to present himself before the Lord among the Children of God, or in supposing him to place our Saviour upon a Pinacle of the Temple.

The Rabbin Manasseh-ben-Israel[26], according to the Principles of the Book Zohar, believes, there are Demons which have so much Power over the Souls of the Dead, for the first Year after their Death, that they do with them almost whatever they please, and oblige them to take whatever Bodies they think fit. We cannot agree that this happened the same Year as the Death of Samuel, but think it was about two Years after the Death of this Prophet: And besides, the Principles of this Rabbin are by no means supportable. But on the other hand, it is hard to oppose a positive Assertion of the Scripture, which expresly affirms, that Samuel appeared, that he spoke, that he foretold the Death of Saul, the Defeat of the Israelites, and the Victory of the Philistines.

Those that maintain that Samuel did not really appear to Saul, are divided among themselves. Some[27] think that the Devil assumed the Form of Samuel, and spoke thus to Saul. Others affirm[28], that the Witch saw nothing, but pretended to see the true Samuel, and spoke in his Name, and so imposed upon Saul and his Attendants. Lastly, others[29] maintain, that the Devil did not appear, nor took the Form of Samuel; but that God, of his own Will and Power, and independantly of the Art of Magick, took occasion from this Invocation of the Enchantress, to make the Figure of Samuel to appear to the Eyes of Saul, to pronounce to this Prince the Sentence of his Death, and his intire Destruction. The Rabbi Levi-ben-Gerson will have it, that all this passed only in the Imagination of Saul. He says, that this Prince being struck with the Apprehension of his present Danger, and with the Consideration of the Threats that God had made to him, believed he saw Samuel appear to repeat these Threats, and to foretel his approaching Destruction.

Of all these Opinions, that which seems to us the most probable, and the best founded, is, that Samuel really appeared to Saul. We are far from imagining that this could be effected by the magical Charms of the Sorceress, or by the Power of the Devil; it could only be by the Almighty Power of God, who, to punish Saul for his criminal Curiosity, might permit the real Samuel to appear to him, on the Occasion of the Witch's Incantations, and discover to him his last and greatest Calamity. Upon this the Reader may consult Allatius, in his Notes upon the Treatise of Eustathius, called De Engastrimytho, as also the Commentators upon 1 Sam. xxviii. and our Dissertation upon this Subject, printed before the First Book of Samuel.

To Samuel are ascribed the Book of Judges, that of Ruth, and the first Book of Samuel. There is, indeed, great Probability that he composed the twenty-four first Chapters of the first of Samuel, since they contain nothing but what he might have written, and in which he had not a great Share. However, in these twenty-four Chapters there are some small Additions, which seem to have been inserted after his Death. We read in the Chronicles, that he [1 Chron. ix. 22.] assisted in regulating the Distribution of the Levites made by David for the Service of the Temple. This may be explained by saying, that David pursued the Order already settled by Samuel, during the Time he was Judge of Israel, after the Death of the [1 Chron. xxvi. 28.] High-Priest Eli. We read also in the same Book, that Samuel enriched the Tabernacle of the Lord, by magnificent Presents, and by rich Spoils, which had been taken from the Enemies of Israel during the Time of his Judicature. [1 Chron. xxix. 29.] Lastly, it is there read, that he wrote the History of David in Conjunction with the Prophets Nathan and Gad. Probably he might write the Beginning of this History, and the two other Prophets might write the Continuation and Conclusion of it; for Samuel was dead before David came to the Throne. The two first Books of Kings bear the Name of the Books of Samuel; but it must be allowed that he could not be the Author of the Second of these Books, which contains Transactions that happened a long time after his Death. Neither could he write the latter End of the First, since his Death is mentioned in the Beginning of Chap. xxv. of this same Book.

It is said, Chap. x. 25. of the first Book of Samuel, that this Prophet wrote in a Book, the Manner of the Kingdom, which was nothing else but the Rights, Prerogatives, and Revenues of the King, and the Limits of his Power and Authority over the People. In a Word, it was a Repetition of what he had proposed, vivâ voce, a little before to the People. The Rabbin Levi-ben-Gerson affirms, that when he had finished it, he put it into the Ark; and Bodin assures us, upon [Bodin. de Repub. l. 1. c. 10.] the Credit of the Rabbins, that the Kings destroyed and suppressed this Book, that they might reign afterwards with less restraint, in what manner they pleased.

Samuel began the Chain of the Prophets, which was never broke or discontinued, from his Time, to that of Zechariah and Malachi. See Acts iii. 24. All the Prophets from Samuel, and those that follow after, as many as have spoken, have likewise foretold of these Days. The Body of Samuel was transported from Palestine to Constantinople, in the Time of the Emperor Arcadius. St. [Hieron. cont. Vig.] Jerome says, they carried the Ashes of this Prophet in a Golden Vessel, lapped up in Silk: That the Bishops and People every-where received them in Multitudes with a Joy not to be expressed, and with Honours almost infinite. The Roman Martyrology sets down his Festival on the Twentieth of August.

Besides the true History of Samuel, which we have given above, there are several Traditions subsisting concerning this Prophet, most of which are very uncertain. The Orientals [D'Herbel. Bib.Orient p. 735. & 1021.] relate, for Example, that Samuel having made his Report to God, that the Hebrews were resolved to have a King; God gave him two Things, one of which was, a Vessel or Horn full of Oyl, and the other was a Staff. He then revealed to him, that the Man in whose Presence the Oyl should boil in the Vessel, and whose Stature should be equal to that Staff, was the Person appointed by God for their King. No sooner was this Determination published among the People, but all the Chiefs of the Tribes came with great Eagerness to measure themselves by the Staff, and to try if the Oyl would boil in their Presence. But neither was any of them of the same measure as the Staff, nor would the Oyl boil before them.

Saul also, otherwise called Sharek, and surnamed Thalout, that is, the Tall, who was no more than a Carrier of Water, or Dresser of Leather, came also to the Prophet among the rest, and immediately the Water began to boil in the Vessel, and he was found to be just of the Heighth of the miraculous Staff. Upon these Tokens Samuel declared him to be King; but the Heads of the Tribes, especially that of Judah, to whom the Royal Dignity had been promised, expostulated with the Prophet, saying; How can this Man be our King, who has no Estate? How can he support the Expence and Dignity of the Royal State? But Samuel replied, 'Tis the Lord who has chose him, and 'tis he who disposes of Kingdoms without Controul, to whomsoever he pleases.

The Israelites would not yet submit, but insisted upon having a Sign from Samuel, that they might be assured from God, that this was his Will. Samuel answered them, This is the Miracle that God gives you to confirm this Choice, The Ark of the Lord, which was taken away by the Philistines, shall be brought back to you by Angels.

This Ark, according to the Description that the Musselmen give of it, was a Chest made of several Metals, round about which the Pictures of all the Patriarchs were engraven, and upon which the Shekinah, or the Majesty of God, rested. This Shekinah, or Sckinah, was the Cherubims, whose Eyes were like two Lamps, and whose dazzling Splendor cast Terror into the Hearts of all those that beheld it. He had the Shape of a Leopard, and in the Time of War he raised himself up, and put forth such a dismal Cry, as put all the Enemies of Israel to Confusion. Others imagine him to have the Figure of a Man, and say; That when the Ark was carried into the Army, he stood up upon his Feet, and came forth like a vehement Wind, that poured upon the Enemies of the People of God, and intirely defeated them.

In this Ark was kept, as they say, the Tables of the Law, the Bason in which the Angels washed the Hearts of the Prophets, the Rod of Moses, the High-Priest's Mitre, the Pontifical Robes of Aaron, the Vessel full of Manna, and a Piece of the Wood Aluah, which sweetned the Waters of Marah.

When therefore the Election of Saul was proclaimed, the Philistines being resolved to conceal the Ark of the Lord, which had caused them so many Misfortunes by its Presence, they hid it in a Dunghil. But they were smote with a shameful Disease in their secret Parts, which made them resolve to send it back to the Confines of the Land of Israel. It was no sooner arrived at this Place, but the Angels of the Lord took it up, and carried it to the Tabernacle at Shiloh; and this Miracle secured Saul in his Kingdom. It is convenient sometimes even to know such Things that deserve neither Esteem nor Credit, if it were only by that, to obtain a Right of contemning them.

Samuel (II)

II. SAMUEL, whom they make to be Son to the Prophet Urijah. Jeremiah xxvi. 23. speaks of the Prophet Urijah, but says nothing of this Samuel. The Scripture no where mentions him, and what the Spaniards say of him deserves no Consideration. They pretend he came into Spain, where he died, and that Six hundred Years after St. James Minor brought him to Life again, baptized him, called him Peter, and made him Bishop of Brague, where he ended his Life again by Martyrdom.

Sanballat

SANBALLAT, the Chief or Governor of the Cuthites or Samaritans, and was always a great Enemy to the Jews. He was a Native of Horon, or Horonaim, a City beyond Jordan, in the Country of the Moabites. When Nehemiah came from Shushan to Jerusalem[1], and began to build the Walls of Jerusalem, Sanballat, Tobiah, and Geshem made themselves Sport with him, and sent to know upon what Authority he undertook this Enterprize, and whether this was not a Revolt against the King. But Nehemiah answered them, 'Tis the God of Heaven that assists us, and we are his Servants: As for you Cuthites, you have no Part or Right in Jerusalem, and your Names shall be forgot there. But Nehemiah proceeding with Vigour in his Undertaking, Sanballat was extremely provoked, and said before the Samaritans; What are [Nehem. iv. 1, 7.] these poor Jews a-doing? Will the People let them go on? Will they finish their Work, and dedicate it one Day? Will they build with these Stones that the Fire has destroyed and reduced to Dust? All these Objections did not make Nehemiah desist, or abate his Courage and Zeal, but he proceeded with so much Diligence and Perseverance, that at last the Walls of Jerusalem were intirely compleated.

Then Sanballat, Tobiah, and Geshem[2], sent to Nehemiah, to desire him to come along with them into the Field, that there they might enter into an Alliance together, and swear inviolable Friendship to each other: But Nehemiah perceived this was only a Stratagem to surprize him, and to do him some Violence. He therefore sent Word, that he was engaged in a great Work that required his constant Attendance, and which he could not intermit upon any Account. They made him the same Invitation four times together, and he as often returned the same Answer. At last Sanballat writ to him in such Terms as these, " There " is a Report spread among the People, " and Geshem confidently affirms it, that " you and the Jews intend a Revolt: That " your Design in Rebuilding the Walls of " Jerusalem, is to declare yourself King of " the Jews; that with this View you have " suborned Prophets to suggest to the " People, that you ought to be King of the " whole Country. Now as all these Things " are to be represented to the King, it will " be convenient for you to give us a Meeting, that we may confer together about " 'em." But instead of going himself, Nehemiah only sent a Messenger to tell him, that these Things were all of his own Invention, and had nothing of Truth in them. [Nehem. vi. 10.] Sanballat also had gained over to his Interest a certain false Prophet called Shemaiah, who would have intimidated Nehemiah, advising him to shut himself up in the Temple, to prevent any Attempt upon his Life. But Nehemiah, by his great Prudence, avoided falling into this Snare.

Nehemiah being obliged to return to King Artaxerxes to Shushan[3], in this Interim, the High-Priest Eliashib married his Grandson Manasseh, the Son of Joiada, to a Daughter of Sanballat, and he allowed one called Tobiah, a Kinsman of Sanballat's, to have an Apartment in the Temple. But Nehemiah at his Return to Jerusalem[4], drove Tobiah out of the Temple, and would not suffer Manasseh, the High-Priest's Grandson, to continue in the City, nor to perform the Functions of the Priesthood. Manasseh being thus expelled, retired to his Father-in-Law Sanballat, who provided him the Means of exercising his Priestly Office upon Mount Gerizim, upon the following Occasion.

When Alexander the Great came into Phenicia[5], and lay down before the City of Tyre, Sanballat quitted the Interests of Darius King of Persia, and went at the Head of Eight thousand Men, to offer his Service to Alexander. This Prince readily entertained him, and being much sollicited by him, gave him Leave to erect a Temple upon Mount Gerizim, where he constituted his Son-in-Law Manasseh the High-Priest. Sanballat must at this time be very old, for One hundred and twenty Years before, that is, in the Year of the World 3550, he was then Governor of the Samaritans. Indeed, some have been of Opinion[6], that the Sanballat who lived in the Time of Alexander, was different from that Sanballat who so eagerly opposed Nehemiah; but we see no absolute Necessity of admitting this.[7] However, Josephus makes Sanballat a Cuthite originally, and makes no mention of him that withstood Nehemiah. The Wife of Manasseh he calls by the Name of Nicaso, and says, that Sanballat died nine Months after he had submitted himself to Alexander.

Translators' note. Dr. Prideaux in his Connexion of the Histories of the Old and New Testament, rejects the Solution of this Difficulty, by supposing two Sanballats, and endeavours to reconcile it to Truth and Probability, by shewing it to be a Mistake of Josephus. This Author makes Sanballat to flourish in the Time of Dar- ius Codomannus, and to build his Temple upon Mount Gerizim by Licence from Alexander the Great; whereas it was performed by Leave from Darius Nothus, in the fifteenth Year of his Reign. This takes away the Difficulty arising from the great Age of Sanballat, and brings him to be Cotemporary with Nehemiah, as the Scripture History requires.

Sanchoniathon

SANCHONIATHON. It is said that this Name in Phenician signifies the Zeal of the Law. Porphyry, as quoted by Eusebius, [Euseb. Præpar. l. 1. c. 9.] says, that Sanchoniathon of Berythus, who lived before the Trojan War, being desirous to make a compleat History of what related to the Phenicians, gathered together out of publick Archives, and from particular Cities, all that might contribute to his Design. That to this he joined the Study of the Jewish History, which was supplied him out of the Memoirs of Jerombal Priest of the God Jevo. This Work of Sanchoniathon was first written in Phenician, and afterwards translated into Greek by Philo of Biblos. Porphyry makes large Extracts out of it, which Eusebius has copied, and has inserted into his Books of the Evangelical Preparation. Some Learned Men have thought[1], that Jerombal Priest of the God Jevo, was no other than Gideon, to whom the Scripture [Judg. vi. 32.] gives also the Name of Jerubbaal, and who might have been taken for a Priest of the God Jevo, because he sacrificed to the God Jehovah, and had an Ephod or Sacerdotal [Judg. vi. 20, 26, 27. viii. 27, 29.] Vestment in his Possession. But other learned Men in great Numbers[2], make a Doubt of all that is said of Sanchoniathon; and some of them proceed so far, as to doubt whether such an Author really existed or no, and think that Porphyry, who only has quoted him, was the first Contriver of him.

These are the chief Reasons that gave room to believe, that this Author never had any Being, and that this Work is fictitious, intending to weaken the Authority of the Sacred Books of the Jews, by shewing that their Theology is taken from that of the Phenicians, and at the same time to subvert the Christian Religion, which is founded upon the Old Testament. The first Argument that is advanced against its being authentick, is the Silence of the Antients. What Probability is there that the Grecians, who made so many Conquests in the East, and who were so inquisitive into antient Books, should neglect or forget this? 'Tis said, that Philo of Biblos did not translate it but in the Time of Adrian. This was still soon enough for its being known and quoted by the antient Greek Fathers, as Justin Martyr, Tatian, Origen, who lived in Egypt or Palestine, who yet make no mention of it. Eusebius, who quotes it, had not seen it intire, he only knew some Fragments of it that were cited by Porphyry.

The second Argument is taken from the Book itself, or from the Fragments of the pretended Sanchoniathon. We may see through his whole Story that he would copy from Moses, and adjust him to the Fables of the Greeks. But in this he succeeds so lamely, that he betrays himself in every Line. He was acquainted with the Chaos of Moses, the Spirit that moved upon the Waters, the Formation of Reasonable Creatures, and of those that are devoid of Reason. He represents the Almighty Fiat of the Creator under the Notion of Thunder, which awakens these Animals, and gives them Life; and under the Name of the Wind Kolpia, or the Word of the Mouth of God. The First-born that he speaks of is Adam, who worships Baal Samin, or the God of Heaven. Nemrum is the same as Nimrod. The Hunter and the Fisher are probably the Founders of Sidon; Zeida in Hebrew signifying Fishing and Hunting. The Husbandman is Noah. Misor is Mizraim the Founder or Father of the Egyptians. Berith is the Wife of Elion. Elion in Hebrew signifies the Most-High; Berith is Covenant. Baal Berith is known in the Book of Judges. Hitherto it is tolerable.

But what does he mean when he says, that the God Dagon is derived from Wheat, and is the same as Jupiter the Siton; that Saturn was surnamed Israel by the Phenicians; that the same Saturn sacrificed his Son Jehud; that they gave the Name of Elohim to the Allies of Ilus or Israel? He had some Knowledge of the History of Abraham and Isaac, but it was so superficial, that he confounds the former with his Grandson Jacob or Israel. The Hebrews sometimes give to God the Name Shadai, that is to say, Self-sufficient. The pretended Sanchoniathon derives it from another Root which signifies the Fields. He has taken many Things from the Fables of the Greeks, which he shuffles into the Theology of the Phenicians and Hebrews. What he says of Leon, and of the First-born, seems to be taken from the Mistake of the Valentinians.

'Tis affirmed, that he has fallen into a gross Error in speaking of the City of Tyre, which must have been unknown to him, supposing that he lived in the Time of Gideon, and before the Trojan War; because it is believed that Tyre was not built till about Two hundred and forty Years before the Temple of Solomon. But this last Fact is [Joseph. Antiq. l. 8. c. 2.] attended with Difficulties upon two Accounts; The first is, because Gideon lived Two hundred and forty Years before Solomon; and the second, because old Tyre, [Josh. iii. 5. Isai. xiii. 3.] built upon the Continent over-against the new one, was probably in being, even from the Time of Joshua. See the Article TYRE. As to Sanchoniathon, the Authors may be consulted whom we have above mentioned.

Sanctify

SANCTIFY. To sanctify is often put instead of to prepare. Thus Joshua says to the People, Sanctify yourselves, for To-morrow the Lord will do Wonders among you. Prepare yourselves to pass over Jordan. In Isaiah, the Lord calls the Medes his sanctified. Ego mandavi sanctificatis meis. I have appointed, and, as it were, consecrated them to be the Executioners of my Vengeance against Babylon. See also Numb. xi. 18. Sanctify yourselves against To-morrow, and ye shall eat Flesh. And Joshua vii. 13. Up, sanctify the People, and say, sanctify yourselves against To-morrow, for thus says the Lord God of Israel, There is an accursed Thing in the Midst of thee, O Israel. Jerem. vi. 4. Prepare ye War against her, or sanctify the War against Jerusalem; prepare yourselves to make War against her. And xii. 3. Pull them out like Sheep for the Slaughter, and prepare them for the Day of Slaughter. The Hebrew says, sanctify them. And li. 27, 28. Assemble the Troops against Jerusalem, prepare the Nations against her, or sanctify them. And Joel i. 14. Sanctify ye a Fast, ordain a solemn Fast. Mich. iii. 5. The false Prophets sanctify (or prepare) War against those who will not give them something: They declare War, or denounce Evils against them. Zeph. i. 7. The Lord hath prapared his Victims for the Day of Vengeance, he hath bid his Guests: The Hebrew says, sanctified them.

We desire of God, that his Name may be sanctified or hallowed; that is to say, honoured, praised, and glorified through the whole World, and especially by those who have the Happiness of knowing him. Let them sanctify it by their good Lives, their Fidelity, their Submission to his Orders. And they that know him not, that they may come to the Knowledge of him, may hear his Word, may become tractable to the Instructions of his Preachers. We may apprehend yet better what is meant by sanctifying the Name of God, by what is opposite to it; that is, profaning the Name of God, by vain swearing, baspheming, and ascribing his Name to Idols; by furnishing wicked Men and Infidels with an Occasion of blaspheming it by our bad Lives, and scandalous Conversation.

[Levit. x. 3.] It is said, I will be sanctified in them that come nigh me; in his Priests, when by the terrible and exemplary Punishment of Nadab and Abihu, the Lord shewed what Purity he required in his Servants, what punctual Exactness he expected in his Service. The Lord complains in another Place, that Moses and Aaron did not sanctify him before the People of Israel. Because ye believed me not, to sanctify me in the Eyes of the Children of Israel, therefore ye shall not bring [Numb. xx. 12.] this Congregation into the Land which I have given them. And how did they not sanctify him? By shewing some Distrust to his Words. Because ye believed me not. God [Gen. ii. 3. Ex. xiii. 2.] sanctify'd the seventh Day, or consecrated it to his Service. He sanctified all the First-born, he commands that they should be offered to him, that they should not be held as prophane, and appointed to vulgar Use. [Exod. xix. 10. xiv. 12.] Moses sanctifies the Israelites, and by Bathing, by Abstinence from the Use of the Marriage-bed, by the Purity of their Cloaths, he prepares them for appearing before the Lord, for receiving him, and entring into a Covenant with him.

[Ex. xxix. 37.] Those that approach to holy Things are sanctified; for Example, 'tis allowed to the Priest only to offer Sacrifices at the Altar. If any one of the Laity should approach thereto, he would have contracted an Uncleanness which must have been expiated. So that to sanctify often stands for to defile, or to contract an Impurity, which would require to be purified by Sacrifices, or at least by bathing and washing of the Cloaths. See also Exod. xxx. 29. Qui tetigerit ea sanctificabitur. Levit. vi. 18, 27. Compare Levit. xxii. 15, 16. when God expresly forbids that the Laity should eat of the sanctified Things.

Sanctuary

SANCTUARY. They called by this Name that part of the Temple of Jerusalem, which was the most secret and most retired of all the rest, in which was the Ark of the Covenant, and wherein none but the High-Priest might enter, and he but once in a Year, which was upon the Day of solemn Expiation. The same Name was also given to the most sacred Part of the Tabernacle, which was set up in the Wilderness, and which remained still some time after the Building of the Temple. Each of these were called Sanctuarium, or Sancta Sanctorum. The Reader may see the Sanctuary described, with all its Dimensions, in the Article TABERNACLE, and in that of TEMPLE.

Sometimes the Word Sanctuary is used in general for the Temple, or for the holy Place, for the Place appointed for the publick Worship of the Lord. It should seem [Ex. xv. 17.] also, that Moses makes use of it instead of the Holy Land. Thou shalt bring them in, and plant them in the Mountain of thine Inheritance, in the Place, O Lord, which thou hast made for Thee to dwell in; in the Sanctuary, O Lord, which thy Hands have established.

[Levit. xx. 3.] And elsewhere he says, of those who offer their Children to the God Moloch, They defile my Sanctuary, and profane my holy Name. [Levit. xxi. 11.] He forbids the High-Priest to go out of the Temple, to mourn for his Relations; Neither shall he go out of the Sanc tuary, nor prophane the Sanctuary of his God. The Temple is here denoted by its principal Part. 'Tis believed that Sanctuary is sometimes [Deuter. xxvi. 15.] put for Heaven. Respice de Sanctuaria tuo, & de excelso cœlorum habitaculo. The Hebrew says, Look from the Dwelling of thy Sanctuary, from the high Heaven.

Sand

SAND. A Similitude taken from the Sand of the Sea is often made use of, to express a very great Multitude, or a very great Weight, or something very mean and of little Consequence. God promises Abraham and Jacob to multiply their Posterity as the Stars of Heaven, and as the Sand of the Sea. Job compares the Weight of his Misfortunes to that of the Sand of the Sea. And Solomon [Proverbs xxvii. 3.] says, That tho' Sand and Gravel are very heavy things, yet the Anger of a Fool is much heavier. And the Author of Ecclesiasticus [Ecclus. xxii. 18.] says, That a Fool is more insupportable than the Weight of Sand, Lead, or Iron.

We have already taken notice, under the Article GLASS, that the Sand of Palestine was much used for the making of Glass. See Deut. xxxiii. 19.

We have also observed, under the Word PHÆNIX, that the Passage of Job translated by sicut palma, or sicut Phœnix multiplicabo dies, signifies according to the Hebrew, I will multiply his Days as the Sand. Job xxix. 18.

The Prophets magnify the Omnipotence [Jer. v. 22.] of God, who has fix'd the Sand of the Shore for the Boundaries of the Sea, and has said to it; Hitherto thou shalt come, and here thou shalt break thy foaming Waves, and shalt pass no further.

[Matth. vii. 26.] Our Saviour tells us, that the Fool lays the Foundations of his House upon the Sand; whereas the Wise-man founds it upon a Rock.

[Wis. vii. 9. Ecclus. xviii. 8.] The Author of Ecclesiasticus says, That the Years of the longest Life of Man are but as a Drop of Water, or as a Grain of Sand. And the Author of the Book of Wisdom says, That all the Gold in the World, compared to Wisdom, are but as the smallest Grain of Sand.

Sandals

SANDALS. We find the Name of Sandals in three Passages of Scripture. When Judith went to the Camp of Holofernes, she put Sandals on her Feet. And Holofernes was captivated at the Sight of these Sandals. Her Sandals ravished his Eyes. They were a magnificent Kind of Stockens or Buskins, of an extraordinary Beauty, and were proper only to Ladies of Condition, and such as dress'd themselves out to be admired. They had generally Slaves to carry their Sandals, which were sometimes of Gold, or other precious Matter; and they had often Cases or [Plaut. in Trinum. Act. 2. scen. 1. Mat. iii. 11.] Boxes to put them in. These Cases in Menander are called Sandalothecæ; and the Slaves that carry'd the Sandals are call'd Pueri sandali-geruli, or Puellæ sandaligerulæ. John the Baptist says of himself, that he was not worthy to be sandali-gerulus to our Saviour. Whose Shoes I am not worthy to bear. The prophane Writers say, That when Hercules became Slave to Omphale, she often us'd to give him Correction with her Sandal[1]. But there were Sandals also belonging to Men, and which were by no means of any Value. Jesus Christ allows the Use of 'em to [Mar. vi. 9. Strabo Geograph. l. 16.] his Disciples; and whole Nations wore them, as the Nabatheans. At first Sandals were only Soles tyed to the Feet with Strings or Thongs; afterwards they were cover'd, and at last they call'd even Shoes Sandals. In Authors that speak of Ecclesiastical Rites and Ornaments, we find the Word Sandals to signify a valuable Kind of Shoes, worn by the Prelates at Solemnities. The Reader may consult Benedictus Baudouinus, in his Treatise de Calceo antiquo. M. Du Cange, Glossar. Sandalia, Saumaise upon Tertullian, De Pallio, &c.

Sanhedrim

SANHEDRIM, or Sanhedria, a corrupted Word, and form'd from the Greek Word Synedrion, which signifies an Assembly, as those of Parliaments and Sovereign Courts, where many Judges and Counsellors meet together, to consult on and determine great Affairs. The Jews call Sanhedrim or Beth-din, the House of Judgment, a Council of Seventy Senators, who assembled in an Apartment of the Temple of Jerusalem, and there determin'd the most important Affairs of the Nation. The Chief of this Assembly was called Nasi or Prince; his Deputy was called Abbeth-din[1], Father of the House of [Nashi, Princeps.] Judgment, and the Sub-Deputy was call'd Chacam, that is, the Wise. The rest were called Elders or Senators. The Room they [Chacham, Sapiens. Senes, Senatores.] met in was a Rotunda, half of which was built without the Temple, and half within; that is to say, there was one Semicircle of the Room within the Compass of the Temple, and as it was never allowed to sit down in the Temple, they tell us this Part was for those that stood up; the other Half or Semicircle extended itself without the Holy Place, and 'twas here the Judges sat.

The Nasi or Prince sat upon a Throne at the End of the Hall, having his Deputy at his Right-hand, and Sub-Deputy at his Left. The other Senators were ranged in order on each Side. This Hall was call'd Lishcath-Haggazith,[2] or the Hall paved with Stones; and some think it to be the same call'd in St. John[3] Lithostrotos, or paved with Stones. a They suppose what to me is very improbable, that when the Jews accused Jesus Christ before Pilate, they would not enter into the Praetorium, that they might not be defiled, but prevailed with Pilate to come into the Sanhedrim, there to hear their Accusations against our Saviour.

The Rabbins pretend, that the Sanhedrim has always subsisted in their Nation from the Time of Moses, down to the Destruction of the Temple by the Romans. They date the Establishment of it from what happen'd in the Wilderness, some time after the People departed from Sinai[4]. Moses being discouraged by the continual Murmurings of the Israelites, addressed himself to God, and desired to be relieved at least from some Part of the Burden of Government. Then the Lord said to him; Gather unto me seventy Men of the Elders of Israel, whom thou knowest to be the Elders of the People, and Officers over them; and bring them unto the Tabernacle of the Congregation, that they may stand there with thee. And I will come down and talk with thee there; and I will take of the Spirit which is upon thee, and will put it upon them; and they shall bear the Burden of the People with thee, that thou bear it not thy self alone. The Lord therefore poured out his Spirit upon these Men, who began from that Time to prophesy, and have not ceased from that Time. The Sanhedrim was composed of seventy Counsellors, six out of each Tribe, and Moses, as President, made up the Number seventyone[5]. To prove the uninterrupted Succession of the Judges of the Sanhedrim, there is nothing unattempted by the Partisans of this Opinion. They find a Proof where others cannot so much as perceive any Appearance or Shadow of it. Grotius may be seen in many Places of his Commentaries upon Scripture, and in his First Book De jure belli & pacis, c. 3. art. 20. and Selden in his large Work divided into three Tomes, where he treats de Synedriis veterum Hebraeorum. Lastly, our Dissertation may be consulted, concerning the Polity of the antient Hebrews, printed before our Comment upon the Book of Numbers.

As to the personal Qualifications of the Judges of this Bench; their Birth was to be untainted. They were often taken of the Race of the Priests or Levites, or out of the Number of the inferior Judges, or from the lesser Sanhedrim, which consisted only of Twenty-three Judges. See the Article JUDGES. They were to be skilful in the Law, as well Traditional as Written. They were obliged to study Magick, Divination, Fortune-telling, Physick, Astrology, Arithmetick, and Languages. The Jews say, they were to know to the Number of seventy Tongues, that is, they were to know all the Tongues, for the Hebrews acknowledged but Seventy in all, and perhaps this is too great a Number. Eunuchs were excluded from the Sanhedrim, because of their Cruelty, Usurers, decrepid Persons, Players at Games of Chance, those that had any bodily Deformities, those that had brought up Pigeons to decoy others to their Pigeon-Houses, and those that made a Gain of their Fruits in the Sabbatical Year. Some also exclude the High-priest and the King, because of their too great Power; but others will have it, that the Kings always presided in the Sanhedrim, while there were any Kings in Israel. Lastly, it was required, that the Members of the Sanhedrim should be of mature Age, rich, of handsom Countenance and Body. We speak now according to the Notions of the Rabbins, without pretending to warrant their Opinions. We have sufficiently explained our selves in this Matter, in the Dissertation referr'd to above.

The Authority of the great Sanhedrim was vastly extensive. This Council decided such Causes as were brought before it by way of Appeal from the inferior Courts. The King, the High-priest, the Prophets, were under its Jurisdiction. If the King offended against the Law, for example, if he married above eighteen Wives, if he kept too many Horses, if he hoarded up too much Gold and Silver, the Sanhedrim had him stripp'd and whipp'd in their Presence. But Whipping, they say, among the Hebrews was not at all ignominious; and the King bore this Correction by way of Penance, and himself made Choice of the Person that was to exercise this Discipline over him. Also the general Affairs of the Nation were brought before the Sanhedrim. The Right of Judging in Capital Cases belong'd to this Court, and this Sentence could not be pronounced in any other Place, but in the Hall called Laschat-haggazith; from whence it came to pass that the Jews were forced to quit this Hall, when the Power of Life and Death was taken out of their Hands, forty Years before the Destruction of their Temple, and three Years before the Death of Jesus Christ.

In the Time of Moses this Council was held at the Door of the Tabernacle of the Testimony. As soon as the People were in Possession of the Land of Promise, the Sanhedrim followed the Tabernacle. It[6] was kept successively at Gilgal, at Shiloh; at Kirjath-jearim, at Nob, at Gibeon in the House of Obed-edom; and lastly, it was settled at Jerusalem, till the Babylonish Captivity. During the Captivity it was kept up at Babylon. After the Return from Babylon, it continued at Jerusalem to the Time of the Sicarii or Assassins. Then finding that these profligate Wretches, whose Number increased every Day, sometimes escaped Punishment by the Favour of the President or Judges, it was removed to Hanoth, which were certain Abodes situated, as the Rabbins tell us, upon the Mountain of the Temple. From thence they came down into the City of Jerusalem, withdrawing themselves by degrees from the Temple. Afterwards they removed to Jamnia, thence to Jericho, to Uzzah, to Shepharvaim, to Bethsanim, to Sephoris, last of all to Tiberias, where they continued to the Time of their utter Extinction. And this is the Account the Jews themselves give us of the Sanhedrim.

But the Learned do not agree with them [Petav. de Doctrin. temp. l. 2. c. 26.] in all this. Father Petau fixes the Beginning of the Sanhedrim not till Gabinius was Governor of Judea, who erected Tribunals in the five principal Cities of Judea[7]; at Jerusalem, at Gadara, at Amathus, at Jericho, at Sephora or Sephoris, a [Grot. ad 1 Par. xxi. 4.] City of Galilee. Grotius places the Beginning under Moses, as the Rabbins do, but he makes it determine at the Beginning of Herod's Reign. Mr. Basnage,[8] in his History of the Jews, at first thought that the Sanhedrim began under Gabinius; but afterwards he places it under Judas Maccabæus [1 Macc. xii. 6.] , or under his Brother Jonathan. We see indeed, under Jonathan Maccabæus, in the Year 3860, that the Senate with the High-priest sent an Embassy to the Romans. The Rabbins say, that Alexander Janneus, King of the Jews, of the Race of the Asmoneans, appear'd before the Sanhedrim, and claim'd a Right of sitting there, whether the Senators would or no. Josephus informs us, that when Herod was but yet Governor of Galilee, he was summon'd before the Senate, where he appear'd. It must be therefore acknowledg'd, that the Sanhedrim was in Being before the Reign of Herod. It was in Being afterwards, as we find from the Gospel, and from the Acts. Jesus Christ in St. [Mat. v. 22.] Matthew distinguishes two Tribunals. Whosoever is angry with his Brother without a Cause, shall be in Danger of the Judgment. This, they say, is the Tribunal of the twenty-three Judges. And whosoever shall say to his Brother, Raca, shall be in Danger of the Council: That is, of the great Sanhedrim, which had the Right of Life and Death, at least generally, and before this Right was taken away by the Romans. Some think that the Jurisdiction of the Council of twenty-three extended to Life and Death also; but it is certain that the Sanhedrim was superior to this Council. See also Mark xiii. 9. xiv. 55. xv. 1. Luke xxii. 52, 66. John xi. 47. Acts iv. 15. v. 21. where mention is made of the Synedrion.

[John xviii. 31.] From all this it may be concluded, that the Origen of the Sanhedrim is by no means to be depended upon; for the Council of the seventy Elders established by Moses, was not what the Hebrews understand by the Name of Sanhedrim. Besides, we cannot perceive that this Establishment subsisted either under Joshua, the Judges, or the Kings. We find nothing of it after the Captivity, till the Time of Jonathan Maccabæus. The Tribunals erected by Gabinius were still very different from the Sanhedrim. This was the only one of its Kind, and fix'd at Jerusalem; whereas Gabinius establish'd five at five different Cities, which Tribunals do not appear to be subordinate one to another. Lastly, it is certain, that this Senate was in Being in the Time of Jesus Christ, and when St. Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John writ their Gospels; since they are mention'd in their Writings: But the Jews inform us themselves, that they had no longer then the Power of Life and Death. See the Authors above cited concerning this Matter.

[Exodus xxviii. 18. Shaphir. & xxxix. 11.] SAPPHIRE, a precious Stone, which in Hebrew also has the Name of Shaphir. The Greeks and Latins write it Sapphirus, and it is often mentioned in Scripture. Job says, [Job xxviii. 6.] there are Places whose Stones are Sapphires ; that is to say, that Sapphires are very common in some Countries. Pliny says, that the best come out of Media ; perhaps, [Plin. l. 37. c. 9. To express the Beauty and Value of the Tables of Moses, and of the wonderful Rod of this Legislator, the Hebrews say they were of Saphir. Sarah (I)

I. SARAH, or Sarai, or Sara, the Wife of Abraham, Daughter of Terah, but born of a Mother different from Abraham's ; since Abraham himself assures us,[1] that she was really his Sister, the Daughter of his Father, but not the Daughter of his Mother. Terah might have had several Wives at once, according to the Custom of the Country where he lived ; or might have marry'd again, after the Death of Abraham's Mother, by which last Wife he might have had Sarai. However this be, this Opinion seems to us much better founded, than the Opinion of those who make Sarah the same as Iscah the Daughter [Gen. xi. 29.] of Haran the Niece of Abraham, and Grand-daughter of Terah. However, this is the Opinion of Josephus[2], of St. Jerom[3], of St. Austin[4], of Tostat, of Genebrard, and of a great Number of Commentators.

Sarai was born in the Year of the World 2018, before Christ 1982, before the Vulgar Era 1986. She marry'd Abraham before this Patriarch left the City of Ur[5]; and when Abraham went out of his Country, he made an Agreement with [Gen. xx. 13.] Sarah, that she should always say she was his Sister. For, being a Woman of exquisite[6]Beauty, he was afraid she should be taken away from him, and that he might be put to Death on her Account. When the Famine prevail'd in the Land of Canaan, which was the Year after Abraham came into this Country, he was obliged to withdraw into Egypt, where the Famine did not reach[7]. He then said to Sarah; I conjure you to say that you are my Sister, that the Egyptians may use me well for your sake, and not take away my Life. When Abraham came into the Country, Sarah was taken away from him, and carry'd to Pharaoh's Palace. But the Lord visited this Prince and all his Family with great Plagues, because of Sarah. And Pharaoh then knowing that she was Abraham's Wife, he reproved him very sharply, for saying she was his Sister, by which means he might have taken her to Wife, if God had not prevented him. He therefore restored her to Abraham, and had them conducted out of Egypt, for fear any Injury or Outrage might be done them.

This Conduct of Abraham and Sarah has given Occasion to many Speculations among the Learned. Abraham seem'd to expose Sarah to the Danger of committing Adultery; and she seem'd too easily to consent to it, by pretending she was only the Sister of Abraham, and not his Wife. There is some Difficulty in vindicating such a Management on both Sides. In Abraham, there seems to have been Lying, Disguise, and too great Easiness, in tempting his Wife's Chastity; and in her, too [Origen. homil. 6. in Genes. Gen. xx. 12.] great Forwardness to consent to it.

Origen, speaking of what happened to Abraham, in respect of Abimelech King of Gerar, where he was in the same Circumstances as these now mention'd, says, that this Patriarch not only told a Lye, but even betray'd and expos'd his Wife's Chastity. Faustus the Manichean[8] calls Abraham an infamous Barterer of his Wife's Modesty, which he sold to two Kings, to gratify his own Avarice and Gluttony. St. Chrysostom[9], who seriously endeavours to excuse Abraham and Sarah, acknowledges, however, that this Patriarch exposed Sarah to the Danger of committing Adultery; and that Sarah consented to be exposed to this Danger, to save the Life of her Husband. Lastly, Some Moderns[10] have very loudly declared, that in this Matter, they could not approve the Conduct of Abraham and Sarah.

St. Austin[11] makes an Apology for Abraham, saying, 1st, That he did not tell a Lye, by affirming Sarah to be his Sister, as indeed she was: He conceal'd a Truth which he was not obliged to discover, by not telling that she was his Wife. 2dly, That being exposed at the same time to two Dangers, one of losing his Life, and the other of having his Wife taken from him, or dishonoured, and not being able to avoid either of them, by owning her for his Wife, but thinking it at least probable that he should escape Death, if he only own'd her for his Sister; he took this last Resolution, and of two Evils, he chose what seem'd to him the least, leaving to Providence the Care of his Wife's Chastity, and knowing besides her virtuous Disposition, that whatever Injury her Body might suffer, her Will would have no Share in it; so that the Adultery (if it should happen) being involuntary on both Sides, it would be without either Guilt or Infamy. St. Chrysostom may be read upon this Passage, and the Commentators upon Gen. xii. 12, 13, &c.

But let us return to the History of Sarah. Knowing, on the one hand, that God had promised a numerous Posterity to Abraham, and, on the other, finding her self to be barren, she thought that possibly the Promises of God were to be performed by Means of some other Woman that her Husband might take; she therefore desired Abraham to take her Servant Hagar,[12] that at least, by her Means, she might see some Issue from Abraham. He complied with his Wife's Request, and took Hagar as a Wife of the second Order, according to the Custom of those Ages. But when Hagar found her self with Child, she began to use her Mistress with Contempt. Sarah complain'd of it to Abraham; who told her, that Hagar was still her Slave, and she might dispose of her at her Pleasure. Upon this she began to use her ill, and Hagar fled away from her; but she return'd some time after, and submitted her self to her Mistress.

[Gen. xviii. 1,2,3,&c.] Some Years after, God appeared to Abraham,[13] made a Covenant with him, instituted Circumcision; changed his Name of Abram, or Exalted Father, into that of Abraham, or Father of a great Multitude; and changed the Name of Sarai, or My Princess, into that of Sarah, or Princess; and promis'd Abraham that he should have a Son by Sarah. The same Year he entertain'd in his Tent three Angels in the Form of Men, who repeated to him the Promise made by God, of the Birth of a Son, and assured him, that the present Year should not expire, before he saw the Completion of this Promise. Sarah was behind the Door of her Tent, and hearing this, began to laugh within her self, saying, After I am now become old, and my Lord is old also, shall I receive Pleasure? Then the Lord said to Abraham, Why did Sarah laugh? Is there any thing impossible to God? Sarah shall indeed have a Son within a Year's time. Sarah deny'd that she had laugh'd; but the Lord said to her, It is not so, for you surely did laugh.

A little while after,[14] Abraham went to dwell at Gerar a City of the Philistines; and Abimelech King of this City took away Sarah, who, tho' now fourscore and ten Years old, and then with Child of Isaac, was still a very handsome Woman. But the Lord appeared to Abimelech in a Dream, and threatned to punish him with Death, if he did not restore her to her Husband. The Day after, early in the Morning, this Prince came to Abraham, and brought his Wife to him, reproaching him very much with his Dissimulation, in pretending she was his Sister. Abraham excused himself, by saying, that she was indeed his Sister, being born from the same Father, tho' not from the same Mother. Abimelech made great Presents to Abraham, and offer'd a thousand Pieces of Silver to Sarah, that she might purchase a Veil to cover her Face, and be no more expos'd to the same Danger.

[Gal. iv. 29.] The Year following she brought forth a Son,[15] to whom she gave the Name of Isaac, that is Laughter, as by way of Allusion to her Laughing, when God promis'd her a Son, and to shew the great Joy that this Birth produced in her: She suckled the Child her self; and when it was to be weaned, that is, about three Years after, as the most probable Opinion is, Abraham made a great Feast for his Friends. Some time after this,[16] when Sarah saw Ishmael at play with Isaac, or, according to St. Paul, Ishmael then persecuted or teized Isaac, she said to Abraham, Cast out this Servant, with her Son, for Ishmael shall not inherit with Isaac. Abraham made some Difficulty at complying with this Request, but God ordered him to do what Sarah desired; so that he sent away Hagar and Ishmael, in the Manner we have mention'd under their Articles.

The Scripture tells us no more of Sarah [Gen. 23. 1, 19.] 'till her Death, which happen'd some Years after the famous Trial that God made of Abraham's Faith,[17] by commanding him to sacrifice Isaac. Sarah was an hundred and twenty-seven Years old when she died: She was then in the Valley of Hebron, [Duplex. See Machpelah.] and Abraham came to Beer-sheba to mourn for her. We know not the Occasion of this Absence of Abraham; but the Scripture says expresly, he went into this Valley to mourn for her; and that after he had paid this his last Duty to her, he came into the City, and bought a Field of Ephron the Ammonite, in which there was a Cave hewn into the Rock, where there were new Tombs. The Text of the Vulgate calls this Cave by the Name of Double; but the Hebrew Text calls it Machpelah, which perhaps might be the Name of the Field where this Cave was.

[Rab. quidam apud Tostat. in Gen. xxiii.] Some have thought, that Sarah knew nothing of Abraham's Intention of sacrificing his Son, and that she was not acquainted with it 'till after they were return'd from Moriah. Others have maintain'd, that she died with Grief, when she was told, that Abraham had really sacrificed Isaac. 'Twas a false Report made to terrify her. Josephus says, she died soon after this Event: But, according to his Calculation, she must have liv'd twelve Years after that; since, according to him, Isaac was five-and-twenty Years old when his Father would have sacrificed him, and Sarah was ninety Years old when she bore Isaac, and one hundred and twenty-seven when she died. Usher also puts eleven or twelve Years between Abraham's Trial, and the Death of Sarah. The Talmudists and St. Epiphanius put Sarah in the Catalogue of Prophetesses of the Old Testament.

[D'Herbelot, Bibl. Orient. p. 759.] Sarah, Abraham's Wife, according to the Orientals, was Daughter of Nahor, and Grand-daughter of Terah, and, consequently, Mother to this Patriarch. Sarah's Mother was another Sarah, Daughter of Terah and Tahouiah his second Wife; for his first Wife, whose Name was Jounah, was Mother to Abraham.

Sarah (III)

III. SARAH, Daughter of Raguel and of Anna of the Tribe of Naphtali, and of the Kindred of Tobit. Sarah was an only Daughter, and her Father had married her to seven Husbands successively; but God had smitten them all with Death, before they consummated their Marriage[1]. 'Twas said, that an Evil Spirit call'd Asmodæus hindred them from coming near her. One Day, when Sarah was reproving one of her Maids for some Fault she had committed, she upbraided Sarah, saying, Let us never see either Son or Daughter from you, you that have murder'd your Husbands: Would you also kill me, as you have already kill'd your seven Husbands? At these Words, Sarah went up into a Chamber that was at the Top of the House, and there continued in Prayer for three Days and three Nights, without either eating or drinking. The third Day she thus finish'd her Prayer to God; " May thy Name be " blessed, O God of our Fathers! Deliver " me, O Lord, from this Reproach, or " take me away from the Face of the " Earth. Thou knowest that I have never " desired an Husband, and that I have " preserved my Soul pure from all evil " Desires, and that I have never sought " for the Company of such as are light " and vain. If I have consented to take " an Husband, I have done it in thy Fear, " and not to gratify any Inclinations of " my own: Either I was unworthy of " those that were given me, or perhaps " they were not worthy of me, and because thou hast reserved me for some " other Spouse. O God of Israel, may " thy Name be blessed in all Ages!"

This Prayer of Sarah was offer'd up to the Lord at the same time as that of Tobit, whom God had afflicted with the Loss of his Sight; and the Lord sent the Angel Raphael to relieve them both. The History of TOBIT may be seen under his Article. Young Tobias being upon his Journey to Rages, under the Conduct of Raphael, who had assumed a human Shape, they came to the City of Ecbatana[2]. Tobias asked Raphael where they should lodge. The Angel told him, There is here a Man call'd Raguel, who is of your Tribe, and one of your Relations; he has a Daughter call'd Sarah, who is his only Child; all his Estate ought to come to you; and you being his nearest Kinsman, according to the Law, ought to marry his Daughter: Ask her therefore of her Father, and he will give her you in Marriage. Tobias told him, He was afraid that the same thing might happen to him, as had already happen'd to Sarah's seven former Husbands. But Raphael encouraging him, and having inform'd him in what Manner good People [Tob. vii. 1,2,3,&c.] should undertake Matrimony, they went together to Raguel. Tobias demanded Sarah in Marriage, and obtain'd her without Difficulty; especially when the Angel acquainted Raguel, that he had nothing to apprehend on this Account; that the young Man feared God; that his Daughter was reserved for him, and that it was upon his Account that no other could have her for Wife. Raguel having put his Daughter's Hand into that of Tobias, he bless'd their Marriage, wrote the Contract, and made them a great Feast.

[Tob. viii. 1,2,3,&c.] When the Evening was come, Tobias was introduced into the Chamber of Sarah; then taking out of his Pocket a Part of the Liver of a Fish that he had taken in the Tigris, he put it upon burning Coals. The Demon Asmodæus being not able to endure this Fume, retired from thence; and the Angel Raphael seized him, and chained him down in the Upper Egypt. This was perform'd in an invisible manner, and no one was sensible of the Departure of the Evil Angel, but by the Safety of young Tobias. It is not easy to apprehend, according to the Notion that we now have of Good and Evil Angels, how Fumes and ill Scents are able to drive them away, nor how they can be pleased with good Smells and Perfumes. The Antients did not judge of these Things as we do. But abstracting from their Prejudices and our own in this Matter, we may believe that this Fume was only the moral or occasional Cause of the Flight of the Demon, and that it was Raphael, by God's Appointment, that really drove him away. The good or ill Smell of the Liver of this Fish, might also make some Impression on the Senses of the married Couple; and might suppress in them the Motions of Concupiscence, and dispose them to pass this Night and the two following in Prayer and Continence. And this was, besides, a very effectual Method to drive from them the Demon of Impurity.

As to the rest, the Scripture often speaks of chaining the Devil a. Even profane Authors sometimes make use of this way of Speaking, to express the Action of a superior Force, or that of a more powerful Demon commanding an inferior, and not suffering him to act; and this, when they speak, for Example, of the Effects produced by Magick and Inchantment, or whether the Demon is overpower'd by Herbs, dead Bones, &c. But in Scripture and the Church, we acknowledge only the Force of the Name of Jesus Christ, the Prayers of the Saints, Exorcisms, and other spiritual Arms, that can really produce this Effect over Demons. Thus, when it is said, that the Angel Raphael chain'd down the Devil in the Desarts of the Upper Egypt; we ought to understand it, of the Power of God, in the Name and by the Orders of whom Raphael acted in all this. Our Dissertation may be consulted concerning the Demon Asmodæus, before the Book of Tobit.

To return to Sarah: Tobias having taken her to Wife, brought her back with him to Nineveh, where his Father Tobit dwelt: She was there the Mother of a numerous Posterity; and after the Death of old Tobit, Tobias took her back to her Parents at Ecbatana, with all their Children and Grandchildren.[3] And this, because his Father Tobit, before his Death, had told them, that the Destruction of Nineveh was at hand, and that they ought to leave it as soon as possible, that they might not be involved in its approaching Calamity. The Year of Sarah's Death is unknown; but she lived after the Year 3363, before Christ 637, before the Vulgar Era 641.

Saraph

SARAPH, the Name of a Man, which, [1 Chron. iv. 22.] in the Vulgate, is translated by Incendens, Burning; Securus & incendens, qui fuerunt Principes in Moab. The Hebrew says, Joab and Saraph, who have ruled in Moab. 'Tis thought these two Persons are the same as Chilion and Mahlon, Sons of Elimelech, who married in the Country of Moab, one to Ruth, and the other to Orpah. See Ruth, chap. i, ii, iv.

Saraph also signifies a kind of winged Serpent, common in Arabia, which God sent among the Hebrews, to punish them [Numbers xxi. 6.] for their Murmurings; Misit in eos ignitos serpentes, The Hebrew says, Seraphim Serpents. We shall speak to them under the Article SERPENT.

Sarasins

SARASINS, or Saracens. This Name is not found in the Bible; but we often meet with the Arabians there, the Hagarens, and the Ishmaelites, who are confounded with the Sarasins. These were not begun to be talk'd of 'till about the fifth Century. The Criticks are not agreed about the Etymology of their Name. Some derive it [Sozom. & alii nonnulli.] from Sarah the Wife of Abraham; as if these People, who were descended from Hagar and Ishmael, had been ashamed of their Original, and had taken the Name of Sarasins, or Children of Sarah, instead of Hagarens, or Children of Hagar. But what overthrows this Etymology, is this, that the Antients call'd them Sara-kenoi, and not Sarænoi, or simply Sarasenoi, as they must have been call'd, if their Name had been derived from Sarah.

Scaliger derives the Name Sarakeni from the Arabic Word Sarack, which signifies to [שארקsharak, furari, prædari.] steal, or plunder. Others fetch their Name from the City Sharakah, or Sharakiah, in Arabia. However this Matter be, as to the Etymology of their Name, 'tis known that they embraced Christianity in the seventh Century; a Prince of theirs, call'd Terebon, having been miraculously cured of a Distemper, by the Name of Jesus Christ. But they soon forsook the true Religion, to follow Mahomet, and they were the first that follow'd him. Their Habitation was in Arabia Fœlix, on the Borders of Arabia Petrea: Satrippa, now Medina, was their Capital. At present there is no Nation known by the Name of Sarasins; they are not distinguish'd from the Turks and Arabs.

Sardanapalus

SARDANAPALUS King of Assyria. He is not known in Scripture under the Name of Sardanapalus; but there is great Probability that 'tis he that repented at [Jonah iii. 6.] the Preaching of Jonas, and who was overcome by Arbaces Governor of Media, and by Belesus Governor of Babylon. We [2 Kings xix. 20. 1 Chron. v. 26. Vid. Justin. l. 1. Diodor. Sicul. l. 2. Ctesiam. Athenæum, l. 12.] think that Pul King of Assyria, who came to the Assistance of Menahem King of Israel, was Father to Sardanapalus: As if it were said Sardan-pul See PUL. Belesus Governor of Babylon is probably the same as Baladan, mention'd in Isai. xxxix. 1. and 2 Kings xx. 12. and who is known in profane Authors by the Name of Nabonassar. Usher places the first Year of the Reign of Sardanapalus in the Year of the World 3237, before Christ 763, before the Vulgar Era 767. He reigned twenty Years at Nineveh, according to Eusebius and Julius Africanus. Every one knows, that the Wealth, the Luxury, and the Effeminacy of this Prince were excessive, even to a Proverb. Being shut up with his Women in the midst of his Palace, he hardly ever appear'd in Publick, and entirely neglected the Affairs of his Kingdom. Two of his Nobles, Arbases and Belesus, ashamed of his Weakness, and weary of obeying so degenerate a Prince, revolted against him in the Year of the World 3254, before Christ 746, before the Vulgar Era 750. They set upon him with an Army of four hundred-thousand Men, compos'd of Medes and Persians, Babylonians and Arabians.

This Army was beaten in the three first Engagements; but in the fourth the Bactrian Troops coming over to their Side, it became victorious, and drove the Enemy out of the Field, having attack'd them by Night. Sardanapalus had left the Command of his Army to a Brother-in -law of his call'd Salæmen, and he himself retired to Nineveh. Salæmen was defeated in two Battles, and lost almost his whole Army. Then the Confederates prepared themselves to besiege Sardanapalus in Nineveh. This Prince, not caring to trust to the Event of a War, sent his three Sons and two Daughters into Paphlagonia, to Cotta the Governor of this Province, that they might be there in Security. He made great Levies of Soldiers, and laid up Store of Pro visions in Nineveh, to be ready there to hold out a long Siege. The City was besieged for three Years, and might have held out much longer, if the Tigris had not overflow'd its Banks, being swell'd by an extraordinary Fall of Rain, which overthrew the City Wall for twenty Stadia, or three thousand five hundred Paces.

Then Sardanapalus, finding he could hold out no longer, made himself a funeral Pile in the midst of his Palace, where -in he gather'd together all his immense Riches, and wherein he burnt himself, with his Concubines and Eunuchs, by putting Fire to his Palace. As soon as the Waters were assuaged, the Conspirators easily entred into Nineveh. Thus ended the Assyrian Empire, a after it had subsisted five hundred and twenty Years, as Herodotus affirms, l. 1. c. 95. Arbaces was proclaimed King of the Medes; and Belesus, or Nabonassar, or Baladan, was made King of Babylon. But this did not hinder the Assyrians from setting up a new King, who governed Assyria properly so called, and reduced to its ancient Bounds. This King, by profane Writers, is call'd Ninus Junior, and by the sacred Authors, Tiglath-pilneser. See 2 Kings xv. 29. and xvi. 7, 10. 1 Chron. v. 6, 26. 2 Chron. xxviii. 20.

Sardis

SARDIS, a City of Asia Minor, formerly the Capital of Crœsus King of the Lydians. St John, in his Revelations, writing in behalf of Jesus Christ, to the Angel [Rev. iii. 1,2,3,&c.] or Bishop of Sardis, says thus: These things saith he that hath the seven Spirits of God, and the seven Stars; I know thy Works, that thou hast a Name that thou livest, and art dead. Be watchful, and strengthen the things which remain, that are ready to die: for I have not found thy Works perfect before God. Remember therefore how thou hast received, and heard, and hold fast, and repent. If therefore thou shalt not watch, I will come on thee as a Thief, and thou shalt not know what Hour I will come upon thee. Thou hast a few Names even in Sardis, which have not defiled their Garments; and they shall walk with me in White: for they are worthy. He that overcometh, the same shall be cloathed in white Raiment; and I will not blot out his Name out of the Book of Life, but I will confess his Name before my Father, and before his Angels.

[Vid. Halloix. in Melitone, p. 819, 820, 838, 839.] We know not the Name of the Bishop that was then at Sardis. Some Moderns have thought that it was St. Melito, a famous Bishop of this City, and Apologist for our Religion, who wrote in the Time of Marcus Aurelius, about the Year 170, or 175, of Jesus Christ. If this were so, we must allow him to have been Bishop above seventy-five Years; which is not easy to believe: For none of the Antients have said that he was a Disciple of the Apostles, or that he lived a very long Time. We ought not therefore to impute this Antiquity to him without any Proof; which besides is not very honourable to him, since St. John speaks of the Angel of Sardis in Terms not at all advantageous to him.

Satan

[שטן Adversarius.] SATAN, or Sathan, or Sathanas: This is a meer Hebrew Word, and signifies an Adversary, an Enemy, an Accuser. It is often translated by Adversary, in the Septuagint [1 Samuel xxix. 4.] , and in the Vulgate. For Example; the Princes of the Philistines say to Achish, Send back David, lest in the Battle he be an Adversary to us, and turn his Arms[1] against us. And again, The Lord [1 Kings xi. 14, 23, 24.] stirred up Adversaries to Solomon, in the Persons of Hadad and Rezon.

624

Sometimes St. Jerom has preserved the Word Satan in the Sense of an Adversary; [1 Kings v. 4. 2 Sam. xix. 22.] for Example, Non est Sathan, neque occursus malus. I have neither Enemy nor Misfortune. Cur efficiamini mihi hodie in Sathan? Ye Children of Zeruiah, why are ye become my Enemies? At other times Satan is put for [Job i. 6, 7, 11, &c.] the Devil; for Example, in Job Satan presented himself among the Sons of God. And the Lord said unto Satan, Whence comest [Ps. cix. 6.] thou? And in the Psalms, Let Satan stand at his Right Hand. And in Zechariah, Satan standing at his Right Hand. And the [Zech. iii. 1, 2.] Lord said unto Satan, The Lord rebuke thee, O Satan.

In the Books of the New Testament, the Word Satan is taken, both in the Sense of an Adversary, and also for the Devil; for Example, [Matt. xvi. 23. Mark viii. 33.] Jesus Christ says to Peter, Get thee behind me, Satan, thou art an Offence unto me; that is to say, Begone, O my Adversary, you that withstand what I most desire. But most commonly Satan is taken for the Devil. If [Matth. xii. 26. Mark iii. 23.] Satan cast out Satan, he is divided against himself. And in the Revelation, He laid hold on the Dragon, that old Serpent, which is the [Rev. xx. 2] Devil and Satan, and bound him a thousand Years.

The Word Satan in Scripture, is often put for an Accuser, a Plaintiff in a Suit, and I think this to be the most literal Signification of the Word. Zechariah says[2], And he shewed me Joshua the High-Priest standing before the Angel of the Lord, and Satan standing at his Right-Hand to resist him. The Septuagint have translated this Word by Diabolus, which also signifies an Adversary, a Slanderer, an Accuser. Satan, or the Accuser, is at the Right-Hand of Joshua, as also in Psal. cviii. 6. Constitue super eum peccatorem, & Diabolus stet à dextris ejus. The Hebrew says, Sathan stet à dextris ejus. Zechariah goes on; And the Lord said unto Satan, The Lord rebuke thee, O Satan. Let him despise thy Accusations, let him contemn thy Malice.

To this Passage is referred what is said in [Jude 9.] St. Jude. Yet Michael the Arch-angel, when contending with the Devil, he disputed about the Body of Moses (which the Devil would have discovered to the Children of Israel, in order to seduce them to pay it a superstitious Worship) durst not bring against him a railing Accusation, but said, The Lord rebuke thee. Diabolus in this Passage is the same as Satan in Zechariah.

Kingdom of Satan. In the Gospel[3], Jesus Christ represents Satan to us as a Monarch, who has other subordinate Devils obedient to him. Beelzebub is, as it were, [Acts xxvi. 18.] their King. If Beelzebub, says he, drives out Devils, his Kingdom is divided against itself, he labours for his own Ruin, which is by no means credible; it is therefore false that I drive out Devils in the Name of Beelzebub. St. Paul acknowledges in the Acts, that all those which are not in the Religion of Jesus Christ, are under the Empire and Power of Satan. St. John in the Revelations says, [Rev. xx. 7.] that after a thousand Years Satan should be unbound, should come forth from Hell, and seduce the Nations.

[Rev. ii. 9, 13. Rev. ii. 24. τὰ βάθεα τοῦ σατανᾶ] The Synagogue of Satan, of which the same Evangelist makes mention, are probably the unbelieving Jews, the false Zealots for the Law of Moses, who at the Beginning were the most eager Persecutors of the Christians. They were very numerous at Smyrna, where St. Polycarp was Bishop, to whom St. John speaks in this Passage.

The Heights or Depths of Satan. S. John writes to the Christians of the Church of Thyatira, and says to them, You know not the Heights or the Depths of Satan, which have not known the Depths of Satan; that is to say, the Mysteries of the Nicolaitans, and of the Simonians, who concealed their Errors under a mysterious Abstruseness; they spoke of certain Intelligences that had created the World, and that were in Opposition to the Creator. They taught a profound Knowledge concerning the Nature of the Angels, and their different Degrees. They had secret Books written in an abstruse and mysterious Manner; and these are what St. John calls the Depths of Satan.

To be delivered up to Satan, is to be excommunicated and surrendered to the Devil for a Season, who visibly possessed this Sort of People, that had deserved this Punishment for their Crimes or Errors. St. Paul delivered up to Satan, Hymeneus and [1 Tim. i. 20.] Alexander, that they might learn not to blaspheme. He also surrendered up to him [1 Cor. v. 5.] the incestuous Person of Corinth, for the Destruction of the Flesh, that the Spirit may be saved in the Day of the Lord Jesus.

[Luke x. 17, 18.] When Jesus Christ sent forth his Disciples to preach in the Cities and Villages of Judea, they returned back with great Joy, and told him, saying, Lord, even the Devils are subject unto us through thy Name. Jesus tells them, I beheld Satan as Lightning fall from Heaven. He seems to allude to that [Is. xiv. 12.] Passage of Isaiah; How art thou fallen from Heaven, O Lucifer, Son of the Morning! By which he insinuated, that the Kingdom of the Devil was coming to a Period. Elsewhere [Luke xxii. 31.] he says to Peter, Simon, Simon, behold Satan hath desired to have you, that he may sift you as Wheat, but I have prayed for thee, that thy Faith fail not, shewing thereby what vain Efforts the Devil would make to destroy the Infant Church.

We have observed elsewhere, that the Hebrews ascribed to the Operation of Satan, the greatest Part of Bodily Distempers. Thus, Ought not this Woman, being a Daughter of [Luke xiii. 16.] Abraham, whom Satan hath bound, lo these eighteen Years, be loosed from this Bond on the Sabbath-Day?

By collecting all the Passages where Satan or the Devil is mentioned, it may be observed, that he fell from Heaven, with all his Company; that God cast him down from thence for the Punishment of his Pride; that by his Envy and Malice, Death, and all other Evils came into the World; that by the Permission of God he exercises a Sort of Government in the World, over his Subordinates, over Apostate Angels like himself; that God makes use of him to prove good Men, and chastise bad ones; that he is a lying Spirit in the Mouth of false Prophets, Seducers, and Hereticks; that it is he, or some of his, that torment, obsess, or possess Men, that inspire them with evil Designs, as he did David when he suggested to him to number his People, and to Judas to betray Jesus Christ, and to Ananias and Sapphira to conceal the Price of their Field. That he roves about full of Rage, like a roaring Lion, to tempt, to betray, to destroy us, and to involve us in Guilt and Wickedness.

That his Power and Malice are restrained within certain Limits, and controuled by the Will of God; that he sometimes appears to Men to seduce them; that he can transform himself into an Angel of Light; that he sometimes assumes the Form of a Spectre, as he appeared to the Egyptians while they were involved in Darkness in the Days of Moses; that he creates several Diseases to Men; that he chiefly presides over Death, and bears away the Souls of the Wicked to Hell; that at present he is confined to Hell, as in a Prison, but that he will be unbound and set at Liberty at the End of the World, in the Time of Anti- Christ; that Hell-fire is prepared for him and his; that he is to be judged at the Last Day. But I cannot perceive very clearly from Scripture, that he torments the Souls of the Wicked in Hell, as we generally believe.

Satrapas

SATRAPAS, or Satrapa. This is a Persian Word, which in its Original properly signifies an Admiral, or Commander of a Naval Armament, but afterwards it was generally given to Governors of Provinces, and to the principal Ministers of the Kings of Persia. We even find them a long time before the Kings of Persia, in the Satrapys of the Philistines, which were in being in the Times of Joshua and the Judges. 'Tis true, that the Satrapys of the Philistines [Judg. iii. 3. סרנים Seranim, Satrapæ.] are called in Hebrew, Seranim; [Plutarch. in Crasso. Jer. li. 27. שפסר Taphsar.] from whence comes the Word Surenæ, which was also a Name of Dignity among the Persians. The General of the Army of the Parthians that killed Crassus, was called Surena. As for the Word Satrapas, with which we are now concerned, I find it in the Chaldee of Daniel[1], in Ezra, and in Esther, under the Name of Achashdarpana, from whence the Greeks have formed Satrapa, by the Elision of some Letters both from the Beginning and End of the Word. This Term, in its Etymology, signifies a great Person that sees the Face of the King, or the Supporters of Majesty. See the Authors of the Hebrew and Chaldee Dictionaries, and the Commentators upon Dan. iii. 2. We find also in Jeremiah and in Nahum the Word Tapsar, which the Interpreters translate by Satrapas.

The Satrapæ, or Lords of the Philistines, were as so many petty Kings, who governed the five Satrapys with absolute Authority, that is, the five principal Cities of the Philistines. These People had sometimes Kings also in other Cities. Abimelech King of Gerar, for Example, and Achish King of Gath, were Philistines, but different from the Surenæ or Satrapæ of the five Satrapys, of which there is frequent mention made in the Book of Judges, and in the first Book of Kings. But the Persian Satrapæ were mere Governors of a Province, sent by the King, or Officers in his Armies. St. Jerome sometimes translates by Satrapæ[2] the Hebrew Word Pachat, which signifies a General of an Army, or Governor of a Province; whence comes the Word Bacha, or Pacha, which is still a Word in use among the Turks to this Day. But the true Name of Satrapa is disguised under the Word Achashdarpana, which is read in Daniel, Ezra, and Esther, which are Books that were written during the Captivity, or soon afterwards.

Saturn

SATURN, a Pagan Deity, whom they make Father to Jupiter. The Scripture no where mentions this false God, but several Interpreters think he is insinuated under the Name of Remphan, Acts vii. 43. where St. Stephen quotes Amos v. 26. See before the Article REMPHAN.

The Mythologists, and Fable-Writers, make Saturn to be the Son of Cælus and Vesta, or Heaven and Earth. He made his Father an Eunuch, that he might have no more Children. He married Cybele, or Rhea, by whom he had several Children; and knowing that one of 'em was to deprive him of the Government, he devoured them all as soon as they were born. Rhea being desirous of preserving her Son Jupiter, that was newly born, instead of the Child, gave to Saturn a Stone wrapt up in a Cloth, which he swallowed. When Jupiter grew up, he made War with his Father, overcame him, loaded him with Irons, and threw him into Hell, with all the rest that had assisted him in that War.

Saturn had three Sons by Rhea; Jupiter, Neptune, and Pluto; and a Daughter called Juno, a Twin-Sister, and the Wife of Jupiter. Some add to these Ceres and Vesta. 'Tis said that Saturn governed in Italy after Janus, that there he set up a Community of Goods, and Equality of Conditions. Hence it was, that at the Feasts called Saturnalia, which were kept in the Month of December, Servants were used to sit at Table with their Masters, or even the Masters waited at the Table of their Servants. 'Twas this Reign of Saturn which was called the Golden Age. Saturn was painted heretofore as a crooked old Man, having a Scythe in his Hand. The Dominion over the Times and Seasons was imputed to him, and in Greek they gave him the Name of Chronos, which signifies Time.

The Name of this false Deity has no Right to be admitted into a Dictionary of the Bible, which naturally should receive no other Names, but such as are consecrated to us by being mentioned in Holy Writ: But as Saturn has several Strokes of Resemblance with the Patriarch Noah; and as several false Gods, mentioned in Scripture, are the same as Saturn, according to the Opinion of several learned Men, the Reader will not think much to find this particular Account of him. It has been thought, that Baal, that Moloch, that Remphan, were the same as Saturn; that the Custom of sacrificing human Victims was derived from Saturn; that he was confounded with Abraham, or with Israel. The Antients speak of Saturn the Phenician, of Saturn the African or Carthaginian, of Saturn the Egyptian. See what has been said of BAAL, MOLOCH, and of the sacrificing of human Victims.

As to those Marks of Resemblance between Noah and Saturn, they are very evident. He is represented with a Scythe, as the Inventor of Agriculture. Noah in Scripture [Gen. ix. 20.] is called Vir Agricola, and it is said he began first to Till the Ground. The Saturnalia that were celebrated with Wine and Licentiousness, and wherein Masters became equal to their Servants, shew the Drunkenness of Noah, and the Curse that made Canaan subject to his Brethren, tho' he was their Equal by Birth. Saturn is said to have devoured all his Children, except only Jupiter, Neptune, and Pluto. Noah saw the Waters of the Deluge destroy all the Men of his Time, many of which were his Relations, and younger than himself. In the Style of Scripture a Man is often said to do a Thing which he does not hinder to be done, or even what he foretells shall be done.

Jupiter, they say, made his Father an Eunuch, because Ham saw Noah's Nakedness, and did not cover him. Shem, Ham, and Japheth, the Sons of Noah, are very plainly Typhon, or Pluto, Jupiter, and Neptune. Ham or Jupiter had Africa for his Portion; Japheth or Neptune had the Sea, or the Islands; Shem, or Pluto, had Asia. Shem had the greatest Privileges of all his Brethren, in respect of the True Religion. He was firm to the Lord, and always faithful to him; he dwelt with his Father. This Attachment made him odious to his Brethren, and their Posterity. Such great Prerogatives provoked their Hatred and Jealousy; for this Reason they feigned that he was God of Hell.

Savaran

SAVARAN, or Saura. This is the Surname of Eleazar the Brother of Judas [43. Ἐλεάζαρ ὁ Σαυαρὴν] Maccabæus. Some think that Saura, or Savaran, was the Surname of Mattathias Father of Eleazar, because the Vulgate reads, Eleazar filius Saura. But the Greek has it, Eleazar surnamed Savaran; and the Syriack, surnamed Horam. 'Tis not known whence he had the Surname of Saura. In 1 1 Mac. vi. Macc. xi. 5. he is surnamed Avaran, Avaron, or Abaron.

Saviour

SAVIOUR, Salvator, Soter. This Name is appropriated to our Lord Jesus Christ, the Saviour of the World, who was prefigured by all those to whom the Scripture of the Old Testament gives the Name of Saviour, as Joshua, the Judges of Israel, the Kings David, Solomon, Josiah, and the Great Men raised up in an extraordinary manner, to deliver the People of God, as Mattathias, Judas Maccabæus, and the rest. The Prophets had marked out Jesus Christ under the Name of Saviour; thus, [Isai. xii. 3. Isai. xix. 20. Isai. xliii. 11.] for Example, With Joy shall ye draw Water out of the Wells of Salvation, or of the Saviour. The Lord shall send them a Saviour, and a Great One, and he shall deliver them. I, even I am the Lord, and beside me there is no Saviour. Lastly, the Apostles and sacred Writers of the New Testament, generally give to Jesus Christ the Name of Saviour by way of Eminence. When the Angel proclaimed his Birth, he said he should be called Jesus, that is, a Saviour; for he shall save his People from their Sins. Matth. i. 21. See also John iv. 42. Acts xiii. 23. Philipp. iii. 20. and elsewhere in many Places.

Saviour, to save, Salvation. We have already examined the several Acceptations of the Word Salvation under its proper Article. The Name Saviour is given to the Patriarch Joseph. Pharaoh changed his Name, when he took him into his Service, and call'd him in the Egyptian Tongue, the Saviour of the World[1]. The Hebrew reads only, he call'd him Zaphnath-phaneah; and these Words are rather Hebrew than Egyptian. St. Jerome himself acknowledges, in his Hebrew Questions upon Genesis, that they signify in Hebrew, he that discovers Secrets. But in Egyptian they may have another Signification. And those who were consulted by St. Jerome upon this Point, might probably tell him, that they signified the Saviour of the World. Nevertheless Philo, Josephus, and others, who thought them also Egyptian, maintain, that in this Language Zaphnath-phaneah signifies one that discovers Secrets, or that interprets Dreams. The Syriack and Chaldee Paraphrasts, and two or three antient Greek Interpreters, are quoted for this, who explain it in the same Sense.

God often takes to himself the Name of Saviour of Israel. Vivit Dominus Salvator [1 Sam. iv. 39.] Israel. David also calls him his Strength and his Saviour. Robur meum & Salvator meus. There is no Saviour besides me, says the Lord in the Prophet Hosea. And Isaiah; Thou hast [Isai. xvii. 10.] forgotten the God of thy Salvation, or thy Saviour. And in truth, God is the Saviour of Saviours, the God of Gods; without him there is neither Salvation, nor Deliverance, nor Succour to be hoped for. 'Tis he that raises up Saviours to his People. For Example, he raised them a Saviour in the Person of Othniel, the Son of Kenez, against the King of Mesopotamia, who oppressed them. He raised them up another in Ehud, Son of Gerah, against Eglon King of the Moabites. Obadiah [Judg. iii. 15. Obad. 21.] promises, that the Lord will send Saviours upon the Mountain of Sion, to judge the Mountain of Esau. Probably he means the Maccabees, who subdued the Idumeans.

To save is commonly taken for defending any one in Danger. 'Tis also taken for flying. Save yourself (or escape) upon this Mountain. I cannot save myself (or escape) upon the [Gen. xix. 17, 19.] Mountain. To save is also put for preserving; for Example, those who have escaped any Danger; who have fled from a Rout or Defeat, those who have escaped the Sword of the Conqueror. Salvatæ sunt reliquiæ populi, says Deborah in her Song. God has preserved his People, and defended it from the Hand of King Jabin. David fled and was saved. David fugit & salvatus est.

[Gen. xix. 17. Prov. xi. 21.] To save one's Soul, to save one's Life. The Seed of the Righteous shall be delivered, or saved. To save the Souls, is to save and preserve the Persons. Thou hast kept me alive (or saved me) from that I should not [Ps. xxx. 3.] go down to the Pit. Thou hast protected me, and preserved my Life; thou hast not suffer'd me to be reduced to the Condition of the [Psal. lix. 3.] Dead. Save me from bloody Men; deliver me out of their Hands. I will save thee from [Jer. xxx. 10. Psal. xxxvi. 6. Mat. xxvii. 40, 42.] afar; I will bring thee back from a distant Country, I will deliver thee out of Captivity. Thou preservest (or savest) Man and Beast; thou givest them their Subsistance; thy Providence is exerted over both of them, tho' after a different Manner. Save thyself. He saved others, himself he cannot save. Thus said the Jews to Jesus Christ. Let him deliver himself out of this Danger; let him deliver himself from Death, as he has deliver'd others.

Saul (II)

II. SAUL, the Son of Kish, of the Tribe [1 Sam. ix. 1, 2, 3, &c.] of Benjamin, the first King of the Israelites. One Day when Kish had lost his She-asses, he sent his Son Saul to seek after them[1]. After he had in vain travell'd over a good Part of the adjacent Country, and was upon the Point of returning to Gibeah to his Father, one of his Servants, that went with him, made this Proposal to him; Here is a very famous Prophet hard by, let us go and consult him; perhaps he may give us some Light into the Matter we were sent about. They went therefore to Ramah, where they were told that Samuel was just come into the City, and was going to offer a solemn Sacrifice with the Chief of the People. Saul therefore advanced towards him, and as soon as Samuel perceived him, he knew by Revelation, that this was he that was to reign over Israel. Saul asked him, where the Seer or the Prophet lived? and Samuel said to him; "'Tis I that am the Seer. Come along with me, you shall eat with the Chief of the People whom I have invited, and to Morrow I will send you away, and will tell you all that you desire to know. As to the Asses you have lost, you need not be in any Concern for them, for they are already found. Who should have of the best of all Israel but you, and the House of your Father?" Saul answered him; "Am I not of the Tribe of Benjamin, which is the smallest in Israel? And is not my Family the least in the whole Tribe? Why therefore do you speak to me in this manner?" Samuel made Saul and his Servant enter into the Room where the Feast was kept, and placed them at the Head of the Table, and, by way of Distinction, served up to Saul a whole Shoulder of a Sacrifice. After Supper Samuel conducted Saul to his Lodging, which was upon the Platform of the House, and on the Morrow Morning he brought him down again, and came with him below the City of Ramah.

As they were going down the Hill, Samuel said to Saul; Make your Servant go before, and stay with me a little, that I may let you know what the Lord has said to me concerning you. At the same time Samuel took a little Phial of Oil, which he poured upon the Head of Saul, kissed him, and [1 Sam. x. 1, 2, 3, &c.] told him; "By this Unction the Lord consecrates you this Day to be the Prince of his Inheritance, and you shall deliver his People from their Enemies. And this is the Token that you shall have, that the Lord has chosen you for King: As soon as you shall have left me, you shall meet two Men coming from towards the Grave of Rachel, who will tell you that your Father's Asses are found again. From thence, when you come to the Oak of Tabor, you shall meet three Men who come to worship the Lord at Bethel; they shall present you with three Loaves, which you shall receive from their Hands. Lastly, when you shall come to the Hill of God, where is the Station of the Philistines, you shall find a Company of Prophets coming down from the high Place, with all Sorts of Instruments of Musick. At the same Time the Spirit of the Lord shall seize you, you shall prophesy along with them, and you shall be changed into another Man. After all these Signs shall have been given you, act as Occasion shall require, and the Lord shall be with you." All that Samuel had foretold him was fulfilled that same Day, and God changed him into another Man. When he came to the Company of the Prophets, he began to prophesy along with them; and all those that saw him, said with wonder; What is it that has happened to the Son of Kish? Is Saul also among the Prophets? And this afterwards became a kind of Proverb among them.

Some time after this,[2] Samuel assembled all the People at Mizpeh, to give them a King as they had desired. He cast Lots upon all the Tribes of Israel, and the Lot fell upon the Tribe of Benjamin. Then he cast them upon all the Families of this Tribe, and it fell upon the Family of Matri. Lastly, he cast them upon the Family of Kish, and the Lot fell upon the Person of Saul. He was immediately sought for, but could not be found. They then consulted the Lord, and he gave Answer; That he was then concealed in his own House. They ran thither, and brought him forth; and when he was in the midst of the People, he appeared taller than the rest by the whole Head. Then Samuel said to the People; You see who it is that the Lord hath chosen. And all the People shouted and cry'd, God save the King. After this Samuel declared before all the People, what were the Laws and Conditions of the new Kingdom, and then dismiss'd the Assembly. Saul returned to Gibeah, accompanied by a Part of the Army, consisting of such whose Hearts the Lord had inclined to the Interests of Saul. Others despised Saul, and said; How shall this Man save us? But Saul regarded them not, and pretended not to hear them.

About a Month afterwards, Nahash King of the Ammonites, laid Siege to the City of Jabesh-Gilead; and the Men of Jabesh agreed to surrender themselves to him, if in seven Days none should appear in Israel to bring them Relief. To this Nahash consented, and Messengers were sent from Jabesh to Gibeah, to acquaint the People, that the King of the Ammonites had lain down before the City, and threatened to put out every Man's right Eye, and to make them all a Reproach to Israel. Saul then happened to return out of the Field with his Oxen, and seeing the People weep, he asked the Reason of it. When he was told it, he fell into a great Passion, took his Oxen and cut them to Pieces, and sent the Pieces into all the Coasts of Israel, saying; Thus shall it be done to the Oxen of all those that shall not follow Saul and Samuel. All the People therefore repaired to Bezek, where Saul reviewed them, and found the Number of the Men of Israel to be three hundred thousand, and those of Judah thirty thousand. The Army then began to march, pass'd over Jordan, and the Day following by Break of Day arrived near the Camp of the Ammonites. Saul attack'd them in three Places at once, put them to the Rout, and kill'd a great Number of them; and so dispersed them, that hardly two could be found together. After this all the People return'd to Gilgal, where they solemnly renewed the Election and Inauguration of King Saul. This is what happened in the first Year of the Reign of Saul[3].

Two years afterwards[4] Saul chose three thousand Men out of all Israel, of which he gave a thousand to Jonathan, and kept two thousand about his own Person, that he might make head against the Philistines, who had taken Possession of strong Posts at Mickmash, Bethel, and Gibeah. Jonathan defeated the Garison that was at Gibeah, upon the News of which the People took Courage, and thought that this was the Time for shaking off the Yoke of the Philistines. They assembled therefore in great Numbers, and appear'd in Arms before Saul in Gilgal. On the other side, the Philistines having Intelligence of this, came with a prodigious Army, and encamped at Michmash, to the East of Bethel. When the Israelites saw themselves thus inclosed, they began to withdraw themselves, some one way and some another. Saul continued seven Days at Gilgal, expecting the Arrival of the Prophet Samuel. At last, seeing he did not come, tho' he had promised to be with him within seven Days, he began to offer Sacrifices to God. But he had no sooner finished than Samuel arrived, and told him he had done ill to offer Sacrifices, without staying for an Order from the Lord. If he had done this, God would have confirmed his Kingdom for ever over Israel. But now, added he, your Reign will not continue long; the Lord has found out a Man according to his Heart's Desire, whom he has appointed to be the Head of his People, because you have not obey'd what he had directed by my Mouth, and have not staid for my Arrival for seven Days.

[1 Sam. xiv. 1, 2, 3, &c.] Samuel and Saul, with the six hundred Men that had continued with them, went from Gilgal to Gibeah; and the Philistines that were at Michmash came also and encamped at Gibeah. One Day as Jonathan and his Armour-bearer went towards the Camp of the Philistines, and entering therein in such manner as is mentioned before under the Article JONATHAN; all on a sudden the Camp of the Enemy was in Confusion, and the Centinels of the Camp of Saul saw the Ground all covered with dead Bodies. They began to examine then who was gone out of the Camp, and it was found to be Jonathan. Saul then consulted the Lord by the High-priest; but before the Ceremony was over, a great Noise was heard, 'twas perceived that the Philistines had slain one another, and had made a great Havock in their Camp. Saul with his People then began to pursue the Enemy; and the Israelites rallying that had fled away before, they kill'd a great Number of the Philistines, and pursued them on one Hand as far as Bethel, called afterwards Beth-aven, because of the golden Calves that were set up there; and on the other Hand as far as Aijalon.

But upon this Occasion there happened a thing that gave some Disturbance in Israel. Saul on this Day had denounced a Malediction, and said; Cursed be he that shall eat any thing till the Even. Now Jonathan not knowing what had passed, as he went through a Wood he found some Honey, and taking some upon the End of his Staff, he just tasted it. In the Evening, when the People were gathered together after the Victory, Saul said to 'em; This Night let us make an Assault upon the Camp of the Philistines, and let not one remain till to morrow Morning. The People answered him; Do what you please. The High-priest proposed to them to consult the Lord, but the Lord answered not. Then Saul judging that God was provoked by some Crime that had been committed among them, he ordered the Lot to be cast upon all the Tribes, and all the Families of Israel; and the Lot fell upon Jonathan. Saul told him, that on Necessity he must dye for his Inadvertence; but all the People opposed it, and delivered him from this Danger. When Saul had strengthned himself in the Kingdom of Israel, he carried his Arms abroad, among all the Enemies of his Nation; against Moab, Ammon, Edom, against the Kings of Zobah in Syria, and against the Philistines;[5] and which way soever he turn'd himself, he always remained victorious. The Times and Circumstances of these Wars are unknown.

After this Samuel brought him Orders from the Lord, that he should make War against the Amalekites, and utterly exterminate this People; that he should spare no body, neither Man nor Beast, nor any valuable Things whatever that should fall into their Hands. Saul therefore took the Field against the Amalekites, set upon them and defeated them; but he saved the Life of the King, and of the best of the Cattle, and preserved some of the best Things of the Booty. Afterwards he returned to Gilgal; but as he passed by Mount Carmel, which is to the South of the Portion of Judah, and very different from that Carmel that lies upon the Mediterranean, he there erected a Triumphal Arch; or, as the Hebrew speaks,[6] He set him up a Hand,[7] or Monument. Samuel also coming to Gilgal, Saul went to meet him, and said to him; I have fulfilled the Word of the Lord. To which Samuel replied; Whence then is this lowing of Oxen, and bleating of Sheep, that sounds in my Ears? Saul answered him; The People have brought of the best of the Flocks of Amalek, to offer Sacrifices to the Lord. Then Samuel said to him; When you were little in your own Eyes, the Lord made you the Head of his People, and he sent you utterly to root out Amalek; but you, on the contrary, have preserved what you thought fit of the Plunder of this People. Saul endeavoured to excuse himself, and would have thrown the Fault upon the People, who were obstinately bent to preserve these Things for a Sacrifice to the Lord. But Samuel told him; It is not Sacrifice that the Lord requires, but an implicit Submission to his Commands: That Obedience was better than Burnt-offerings, and that God regards the Sin of Disobedience with the same Detestation as Witchcraft or Idolatry. As you have rejected the Word of the Lord, so has the Lord rejected you, and will not have you any longer as a King over his People.

Saul then replied to Samuel; I have sinn'd in disobeying the Commands of the Lord; but pray to God that he will forgive me this Fault, and come along with me to worship the Lord. Samuel said he would not go, and at the same time turn'd away from him. But Saul laying hold of his Garment, it tore in his Hands. Then Samuel said to him; Thus has the Lord torn away the Kingdom from you, and has given it to another that is better than you. a The Strength (or Victory) of Israel will not lye nor repent; for he is not a Man that he should repent. Some apply these Words to Saul; as if Samuel, by a bitter Irony, should say, that a Prince like him that could erect triumphal Arches, was not a Man to repent: But it seems most eligible to refer them to God, who would not revoke the Sentence he had pronounced against Saul. However Samuel did not persist in refusing to follow Saul, but return'd with him to the Camp at Gilgal. Then he made Agag King of the Amalekites be brought before him, and cut him in Pieces with his own Hand.

Some Years afterwards[8] Samuel went by Order from the Lord, to give the Royal Unction to David; from which Time the Spirit of the Lord withdrew from Saul, and God suffered that he should be actuated by an evil Spirit, who taking Occasion from the evil Disposition of the Humours of this Prince, and his melancholy Temper, moved and agitated him, or possessed him. Then his Courtiers caus'd David to attend him, to sooth his Distemper by the Sound of musical [Ita Rab. & Interpret. plures.] Instruments, upon which David could play very skilfully. Saul took an Affection for David, made him his Esquire or Armour-bearer, and always had him near his Person. About eight Years afterwards,[9] when the Philistines came and encamped between Shochoh and Azekah, Saul with the Army of Israel took their Station in the Vale of Elah. But in the Army of the Philistines there was a Giant, by Name Goliath, who came daily to insult the Army of Israel, challenging any one to come forth and fight him. Saul had promis'd to give his Daughter in Marriage to any one that should fight with him and overcome him, but no one was found hardy enough to encounter him. David, who now for a long Time had retired from Court, and lived with his Father at Bethlehem, was sent by him into the Camp about this Time; and being offended at these daily Insults of Goliath, undertook to fight with him, which he did, and beat him, as we have elsewhere observed under the Articles GOLIATH and DAVID. Saul had now so far lost all Remembrance of David, that he knew him not when he presented himself before him. But after this Victory over Goliath, he kept him always about him, and made him one of his Commanders.

[1 Sam. xviii. 1, 2, 3, &c.] But he took a Grudge against him, because at his Return from an Expedition against the Philistines, the Women that sung and danced before the victorious Army, cry'd out, that Saul had kill'd his thousands, and David his ten thousands. One Day therefore, as he was in his House under the Influence of the evil Spirit, and David was playing upon an Instrument before him, he attempted to pierce him through with a Lance that he held in his Hand: But David turned aside, and avoided the Blow. He afterwards gave him the Command of a thousand Men, and promis'd him Merab his eldest Daughter, tho' at the same Time he had no Intention to let him have her. He only sought for an Occasion of putting him to Death by the Hand of the Philistines, by often exposing him to imminent Dangers. He afterwards marry'd his Daughter Merab to another, and promis'd him his second Daughter Michal; then he acquainted David, that he required no other Dowry for his Daughter than an hundred Foreskins of the Philistines. David soon perform'd this Condition, and married Michal. Saul seeing that David by his Valour acquired new Reputation every Day, resolved to put him to Death[10]. Jonathan for a time diverted him from his Purpose; but afterwards, when Saul relapsed into his usual Melancholy, and being moved by the evil Spirit, he attempted once more to pierce David with the Lance he held in his Hand. David escaped this Blow also, and immediately retired to his own House, which Saul order'd to be beset. In the Night-time Michal let him down out of a Window, by which means he escaped.[11] He then withdrew to Samuel at Naioth in Ramah. Saul sent some Messengers thither to apprehend him, but those he sent, for three times together, were no sooner come to Naioth, but were seized there by a prophetick Spirit, and began to prophesy among the Prophets, in the midst of whom was David. When Saul at last came thither himself, he began to prophesy as well as the rest. In the mean Time David withdrew [1 Sam. xix. 1, 2, 3, &c.] to Gibeah, where he had a Conference with Jonathan Saul's Son. There they renew'd their Friendship, and Jonathan promis'd David to let him know two Days after, all that he could discover of Saul's Intentions concerning him. The Day following he spoke to his Father, and easily perceived by the Answer he received, that David's Destruction was resolved upon. He gave him Information of it, and then they parted. See the Articles DAVID and JONATHAN.

[1 Sam. xxii. 6, 7, 8, &c.] David then came to Nob, a and having received a Sword and some Refreshments from the High-priest Ahimelech, Saul was inform'd of it some time after by Doeg the Idumean, who happened to be at Nob when David came thither. Saul immediately sent to Nob, to fetch all the Priests to him that were there; and no sooner did they come before him, but he severely reproached them with having supported his Enemy; and not having Patience to hear their Excuses, he had them all butcher'd before his Face, to the Number of fourscore and five Persons. He went himself afterwards to Nob, and put all the Inhabitants to the Sword, Man, Woman, and Child; not so much as sparing the sucking Infants, nor the Cattle that came in his way.

Some time after,[12] Saul being informed that David was in the City of Keilah, he said to himself; Now has God delivered him into my Hands, since he is shut up in a walled City. But David quitted this City, and retired into the Wilderness of Ziph, so that Saul's Expectation was disappointed. Once when this Prince was advertised, that David concealed himself in the Desart of Maon, he pursued him thither with an Army; but when he was very near taking him, he had Intelligence that the Philistines were just coming to make an Irruption into the Country; upon which he quitted his Pursuit, and went to the Succour of his own People.

Then David retired into the Wilderness of En-gedi,[13] and Saul went after him with his Troops; but finding himself constrain'd by the Necessity of Nature, he enter'd into a Cave, where David and his People were hid. David coming softly behind him, cut off the Lappet of his Coat, he not perceiving any thing of the Matter. When he went out, and was at a good Distance, David went after him, and shew'd him the Lappet of his Coat that he had cut off, and told him, that it was in his Power to have killed him, but that he would never lift up his Hand against the Lord's Anointed. Saul was moved with the Generosity of David, and could not forbear shedding Tears; acknowledging himself to be unjust, in thus pursuing the Life of a Man that intended him no Harm. After this he went back into his own House, and David retired into the Wilderness of Ziph[14]. When the Ziphites knew it, they went presently and gave Saul Notice of it, who came with his Army upon the Hill of Hachilah. While he was encamped in this Place, David went by Night into his Camp, and penetrated even into the King's Tent, where having found every body asleep, he took the King's Lance and Cup, and then went again out of the Camp.

When he was on the other Side of the Mountain, he cry'd out to the Camp of Saul, that some one should come to fetch the King's Cup and Lance that he had taken; and at the same Time made Remonstrances of his Innocence to Saul, and of his Injustice in persecuting him thus, tho' he had never done him any Injury. Saul acknowledged both, and returned again to own House. But David being apprehensive that he might at last fall into the Hands of this Prince, he took Refuge with the King of Gath; which when Saul [1 Sam. xxvii. 1, 2, 3, &c.] knew, he thought no longer of seeking after him. Some Years after this the Philistines invaded the Land of Israel with a powerful Army,[15] and encamped at Shunem in the Valley of Jezreel. Saul and his Troops took the Field also, and encamped upon the Mountains of Gilboa. But when Saul saw the Army of the Philistines, which was very formidable, his Heart began to fail. He consulted the Lord by his Priests and Prophets, but the Lord returned him no Answer; so that not knowing who to address himself to, he found out a Witch or Enchantress, who had a Spirit of Prophecy, or a familiar Spirit, and who was then famous for raising the Ghosts of the Dead.

Some time before, Saul had banish'd all Wizards and Magicians out of his Dominions; and that he might not be known by the Witch, he disguised himself, and[16] went with a small Retinue. He desired her to raise up Samuel to him, who had been now dead for some time. As soon as she saw the Prophet come up, she put forth a great Cry, and said to Saul; Why have you deceived me, for you are Saul? Saul bid her fear nothing, and asked her who she saw. She answer'd, I see the Gods, or a great [1 Sam. xxviii. 13. אלהים ראית] Man, a Prince, a Judge of Israel. The Hebrew makes use of Elohim, which is a Name given to Princes and great Men. What is he like? says Saul. She answer'd; He is an old Man covered with a Mantle. Saul knowing it to be Samuel, fell down at his Feet; and Samuel said to him; Why have you disturbed my Rest, by raising me up? The Lord is withdrawn from you, and will perform all that he has promis'd in favour of your Competitor. To Morrow you shall be with me, you and your Sons, and the Lord will deliver the Camp of Israel into the Hands of the Philistines. Saul fell down immediately, and remain'd extended upon the Earth; for he had eat nothing all that Day.

The Witch intreated him to take a little Nourishment, and not to suffer himself to be overcome by his Trouble. He refused it at first, but being much importuned by the Woman, and by his own People, he eat something of what was at hand; after which he went away, and marched all Night, that he might come soon enough to his Camp. The next Day the Battle was [1 Sam. xxix. 1, 2, 3, &c.] fought, in which the Israelites were put to Flight before the Philistines; and the Sons of Saul, Jonathan, Abinadab, and Malchishua, were slain in the Battle. Saul himself was pressed very hard, the Archers shooting at him, and wounding him dangerously. Seeing his Case was desperate, he said to his Armour-bearer; Draw your Sword and kill me, that these Uncircumcised may not still insult me, and take away my Life; but his Armour-bearer was startled at this Proposal, and refused to do it. Saul then took his Sword and fell upon it; and his Armour-bearer finding him to be dead, follow'd his Example, and slew himself also. Thus died Saul the first King of Israel, after a Reign of forty Years. An Amalekite, who by chance was near, took off his Crown and Bracelet, and brought [2 Sam. i. 1, 2, 3, &c.] them to David. He told David that he himself had slain Saul, because the Sword of Saul could not pierce through his Armour; but we think he disguised the Truth to David, and falsly boasted that he had slain the King of Israel. He hoped, no doubt, that David would have given him some great Reward for this Service; but instead of that he had him put to Death, for presuming to lay Hands upon the Lord's Anointed. David bewail'd the Fate of Saul and Jonathan, and composed a mournful Elegy upon this Occasion, in which he celebrated the Valour and great Actions of those two Princes.

[1 Sam. xxxi. 8, 9.] The Day after the Battle, when the Philistines came to take the Spoils of the Dead, they found Saul and his three Sons extended upon the Plain. They cut off Saul's Head, and took away his Armour, which was carried to the Temple of Ashtaroth; and they hung up his Body against the Walls of Beth-shan, which probably were opposite to the chief Street, [2 Sam. xxi. 12.] because it is said in the Second Book of Samuel, that his Body was hung up in the Street of this City. As to his Head, we [1 Chron. x. 10. 1 Sam. xxxi. 11, 12, 13.] read in the Chronicles, that it was fastened up in the Temple of Dagon. Some time after, when the Inhabitants of Jabesh-gilead were inform'd of the Indignities that were offer'd by the Philistines to the Bodies of Saul and his Sons, whom they had hung up against the Walls of Beth-shan; they went by Night and took them down, and brought them into their City beyond Jordan, where they burnt the Remains of the Flesh of the Bodies, and buried the Bones in the Grove that was near their City. They fasted and mourned for the King for seven Days, in Commemoration of that Service he had done their City at the Beginning of his Reign, when he delivered them from the Cruelty of the King of the Ammonites. Several Years afterwards David had these Bones removed from the Grove at Jabesh, and put into the Sepulchre of Kish the Father of Saul, at [2 Sam. xxii. 12, 13, 14.] Gibeah. Ish-bosheth, the fourth Son of Saul, succeeded him in the Kingdom, and reigned at Mahanaim beyond Jordan, over the eleven Tribes; for David then began to reign over the Tribe of Judah.

It has been Matter of Inquiry, whether Saul upon this Occasion could put himself to Death, without being guilty of a Crime? And what may be thought of his Salvation? The Rabbins a commend Saul for his Submission to the Orders of God, and exalt the Obedience of this Prince, who notwithstanding the terrible Denunciations of Samuel, and the Certainty of his own and his Sons Death in the Battle, yet did not endeavour to avoid it. They add, that what induced him to put himself to Death was, the Fear he had that the Name of God should be blasphemed and affronted by the Philistines, if the King of his People should come alive into their Hands. But these Reasons have but little Solidity in them. In the last Actions of Saul, no more than in the first, there does not appear any Mark of a certain and solid[17] [Rom. iii. 8.] Repentance. We do not see that he had Recourse to God, or that he had any View to his Glory, when he put himself to Death. And tho', by an erroneous Conscience, he might persuade himself that by this means he should hinder the Philistines from blaspheming the Name of God; it would not follow that his Action would be lawful or praise-worthy. St. Paul tells us, that we must not do Evil that Good may come of it. But Self-murder is certainly a very great Evil. Besides Saul by his Death could not prevent the blaspheming of the Philistines, since they would equally blaspheme the Name of the Lord, whether Saul fell into their Hands dead or alive. Lastly, the Scripture will not allow us to doubt of the final Perdition of Saul, when [1 Chron. x. 13, 14.] it says; So Saul died for his Transgression which he committed against the Lord, even against the Word of the Lord, which he kept not, and also for asking Counsel of one that had a familiar Spirit, to enquire of it: And enquired not of the Lord. Therefore he slew him, and turned the Kingdom unto David the Son of Jesse.

AT SAUL'S REQUEST THE WITCH OF ENDOR RAISES UP SAMUEL.2.d Ga. X

As to Saul's Action of consulting the Witch, it is needless to examine it according to the Rules of Morality, since it is so manifestly contrary to the Laws of God. Under the Article SAMUEL, we have already seen the several Opinions that have been advanced concerning the Appearance of this Prophet to Saul.

Saw

SAW. The Punishment of the Saw was not unknown among the Hebrews. It is mentioned in Daniel, and in the Epistle to the Hebrews. I imagine this Punishment came originally from the Persians or the Chaldeans. I am assured that it is still in Use among the Switzers, and that they put it in Practice not many Years ago, upon one of their Countrymen guilty of a great Crime, in the Plain of Grenelles near Paris. They put him in a Kind of Coffin, and saw'd him at Length, beginning at his Head, as a Piece of Wood is sawn. Parisalis, King of Persia, caused Roxana to be sawn in two alive. Valerius Maximus [Ctesias in Persic.] says,[1] that the Thracians sometimes made living Men to undergo this Torture: Vivos homines medios secare. The Laws of the twelve Tables, which the Romans had borrowed from the Greeks, condemned certain Crimes to the Punishment of the Saw. But the Execution of them was so rare, as [Aul. Gell. Noct. Att. l. 12. c. 2. Herodot. l. 6.] Aulus Gellius says, that none remembred to have seen it practised. Herodotus relates, that Sabacus, King of Egypt, received an Order in a Dream, to cut in two all the Priests of Egypt. Caius Caligula the Emperor, often condemn'd People of Condition to be sawn [Sueton. in Caio.] in two through the Middle; aut medios serrâ dissecuit.

This Matter is not less frequent in Scripture. St. Paul in his Epistle to the Hebrews[2], speaking of the Calamities suffered by the Prophets and Saints of the Old Testament, says, there were some who had undergone the Torture of the Saw. Serrâ secti sunt. Origen[3], Justin Martyr[4], St. Jerome[5], the Author of the Poem against Marcion, printed under the Name of Tertullian[6], and several others of the Antients, have explain'd this Passage concerning the Death of Isaiah, who is said to have been put to Death by King Manasses, with a wooden Saw. This Circumstance of a Saw of Wood is perplexing; for no Saws are made of Wood; and besides, a Man could not be cut in two with such a Saw. We have elsewhere proposed our Conjecture upon this Matter, by supposing this Saw of Wood was perhaps nothing else but a Sledge loaded with Stones and Iron Spikes, with which they smooth'd the Ears of Corn, to get out the Grain. Or might it not be understood more simply of a Wood-Saw, that is, a Saw fit for sawing Wood? For there are Saws of several Kinds, for Stone, for Marble, for Iron, for Bones, for Trees, for the Use of Gardeners, for Wheelwrights, for Joiners.

Daniel also speaks of the Punishment [Susan. 55.] of the Saw. Even now the Angel of God hath received the Sentence of God, to cut [Mat. xxiv. 51.] thee in two. St. Matthew says, that the wicked Servant shall be cut in two, and thrust among the Hypocrites. The Hebrew Text of the Old Testament often makes Allusion to this Custom, when it uses the Word, to cut in two, to divide, for putting to Death. See 1 Sam. xvi. 31, 33. Exod. xix. 14. and 2 Sam. vi. 8.

Scandal

SCANDAL, Scandalum. This Word in antient Greek Authors, according to Pollux, signifies that Part of a Mouse-trap, that is suspended by the Noose; or the bended Piece of Wood that supports what they call the Hammer, according to the Scholiast of Aristophanes. In general, according to Hesychius, Scandalum signifies a Snare, an Incumbrance. In Scripture and in Ecclesiastical Authors, Scandal is put for [Levit. xix. 14. apud 70.] any thing that a Man finds in his Way, that may occasion him to fall. Thus Moses forbids to put a Stumbling-block (or Scandal) before the Blind; that is, neither Wood, Stone, nor any thing else, that may [Ex. xxiii. 33.] make him stumble or fall. Elsewhere he forbids the Israelites to make a Covenant with the Canaanites, for fear they should be pervertedto Idolatry, which would be a great Snare or Scandal to them. Saul gave David his Daughter Michal in Marriage, hoping this Match might prove a Snare and Scandal to [1 Reg. xviii. 21.] him. Ut fiat ei in scandalum. The Lord shall be the Happiness and the Sanctification of those that fear him; but for a Stone of stumbling, and for a Rock of Offence (a Scandal) to both the Houses of Israel; for a Gin, and for a Snare to the Inhabitants of Jerusalem. Jesus [If. viii. 14.] Christ says to St. Peter, when he would persuade him against his Passion; Get thee behind [Matt. xvi. 23.] me, Satan, thou art an Offence unto me. Lastly, he says of himself; Blessed is he whosoever [Matt. xi. 6.] shall not be offended (or scandalized) in me; or for whom I shall not be an Occasion of Scandal; to whom my Life, my Poverty, my Birth, my Death, my Cross, shall not give or administer Scandal.

The Greek Word Scandal a answers to the Hebrew Mashcul, which comes from the Root Shacal, to fall, to tumble; and in the Conjugation Hiphil signifies, to make to fall, to overthrow, to lay Snares, &c. In a moral Sense, there is an active and a passive Scandal. The first is that which we afford others by our Words or Actions; and the second is that which we receive from others, by seeing their evil Actions, or by hearing their pernicious Discourses. Jesus Christ in his Gospel affirms, It must needs be that Offences come, or Scandals [Matt. xviii. 7.] must of necessity arise. But he adds, Woe to that Man by whom the Offence cometh. If your Hand or Foot are a Cause of Scandal to you, cut them off, and cast them from you; you had better enter into the Kingdom of God without Hand or Foot, than be cast into outward Darkness with all your Limbs intire. He says moreover, Have a Care of offending (or scandalizing) one of these little ones that [Mark ix. 41.] believe in me; it were better for him that gives the Scandal that a Mill-Stone were hung about his Neck, and he were cast into the Sea, than that he should administer an Occasion of Scandal. Jesus Christ, in respect of the Jews, was a Scandal and Rock of Offence, against which they struck, and upon which they have fallen, and are broken.

[Rom. ix. 33. 1 Pet. ii. 8.] In the Latin Vulgate, the Word Scandalum is often used in different Senses, which it may be convenient to explain here. Usquequ [Exod. x. 7.] ò patiemur hoc Scandalum? How long shall Moses be a Snare to us? How long shall he pursue us, as a Fowler pursues his Game? Or else, How long shall we suffer the Israelites to continue among us, who are a stumbling Block to us? Or, more plainly, How long shall we suffer these Misfortunes that thus overwhelm us? Pax multa diligentibus legem [Psal. cxviii. 165.] tuam, & non est illis scandalum. [Ezek. vii. 19.] They enjoy profound Peace, without Misfortune, without Discontent. Scandalum iniquitatis eorum factum est. They are fallen into those Disasters which their Iniquities deserved. They have undergone the Punishment of their Crimes. Ne ponas scandalum [Prov. xxii. 25.] animæ tuæ. Do not expose yourself to the Fury of a passionate Man, for fear it should be as much as your Life is worth. The Humiliation of Jesus Christ, his Cross and Sufferings, are, as it were, for a Stone of Stumbling, and for a Rock of Offence to both the Houses of Israel, for a Gin and for a Snare to the Inhabitants of Jerusalem[1], because they could not be convinced, that such humble Qualifications could belong to the Messiah they expected.

[Eccl. xxiii. 7. Eccl. xxxii. 19.] The Author of Ecclesiasticus generally takes the Verb to scandalize, in the Sense of exposing one's self to Danger. Ne fueris hypocrita, & non scandalizeris in labiis tuis[2]. Forbear to use Hypocrisy and Dissimulation, and let not your Lips expose you to the Danger of passing for a double Heart. The Greek says, Form not yourself upon the Words of Men, and give no Attention to their Discourse. Reckon not upon every Thing that Men may say of you, nor upon what they may say to you. Their Discourse ought not to be the Rule of your Conduct. And elsewhere, Doctrinam oris audite, filii, qui custodierit illam ----- non scandalisabitur in operibus pessimi. He that will hear my Instructions, shall not fall into criminal Actions: Or rather, shall not be overturned, as a Man that hits against a Stone, and he shall not be seen to commit criminal Actions. And again, Qui insidiose agit scandalisabitur in ea (sapientia). He that seeks not Wisdom sincerely, instead of finding it, shall fall into a Snare, and be overthrown.

The Mountain of Scandal, Mons offensionis, was the Mountain of Olives, upon which Solomon built Temples, and erected Altars to his false Gods, to please the strange Wives he had taken. See 1 Kings xi. 4. 2 Kings xxiii. 13.

Scenopegia

SCENOPEGIA, a Greek Word[1], which properly signifies the rearing of Tents, and which is used for the Feast of Tabernacles, in which the Hebrews dwelt under green Tents for eight Days, in Commemoration of the Pilgrimage of their Fathers in the Wilderness, where they lodged under Tents for forty Years. Levit. xxiii. 34, 35, &c. Sceptre

SCEPTRE, Sceptrum, in Greek, Skeptron, in Hebrew, Shebet. This Word properly signifies, I. A Rod of Command, a Staff of Authority, a Sceptre, which is supposed to be in the Hand of the Gods, of Kings, of[1] Governors of a Province, of the Chief of a People. Jacob foretold to Judah, that the [Gen. xlix. 10.] Sceptre should not depart from Judah, nor a Lawgiver from between his Feet, until Shiloh come, and unto him shall the gathering of the People be. And Balaam also foretelling [Numb. xxiv. 17.] the Coming of the Messiah, says, A Sceptre shall rise out of Israel. Baruch speaks of the Sceptre that the Babylonians [Bar. vi. 14.] put into the Hands of their Gods. Sceptrum habet ut homo, sicut Judex regionis. They are given also to Scribes, to Commissaries, [Judges v. 14. Isai. xiv. 5. xix. 11,14.] who keep a List of the Troops. Also the Prophets often speak of the Sceptre of Dominion; and Amos represents the sovereign Power by him that holds the Sceptre. Abasuerus carried in his Hand a Golden Sceptre, [Amos i. 5, 8.] &c. Esther viii. 4.

II. The Sceptre is put for the Rod of Correction, for the sovereign Authority that punishes and humbles. Thou shalt break [Psal.] them with a Rod of Iron, or with an Iron Sceptre. The wise Man often uses the Hebrew Word Shebet, to express the Rod with which the disobedient Son, and the intractable Servant are disciplined.

III. The Sceptre is very often taken for a Tribe; probably, because the Princes of each Tribe carried a Sceptre or a Wand of Command, to shew their Dignity. The Seventy, and St. Jerom, generally translate this Hebrew Word by Tribe; but sometimes also they preserve the Word Sceptre. For the Seventy, see 1 Sam. ix. 21. x. 19, 20, 21. xv. 17. 1 Kings viii. 16. xi. 13, 32, 35. xii. 20, 21. And for the Vulgate, see Numb. xviii. 2. Jerem. li. 19.

IV. The Sceptre, or the Hebrew Word [Lev. xxvii. 32. 2 Sam. xxxiii. 21. 1 Kings xviii. 14. Isai. xxviii. 27. Acts xix. 14, 15, 16. 1 Chron. xxiv. 7, 8, &c.] Shebet, signifies a Shepherd's Wand, the Truncheon of a Warrior, or any common Staff; the Dart, Javelin, or Lance of a Soldier, the Rod or Flail with which they thrash the smaller Grains.

Σκάνδαλον, or πρόσκομμα, or σκῶλον, answer to the Hebrew משכולMashcul, which signifies Fall, Ruin, Sin, that which hinders from walking, and makes one fall.

Sceva

SCEVA, chief of the Priests; that is to say, either Chief of the Synagogue at Ephesus, according to some, or rather, Chief of one of the Twenty-four Sacerdotal Families, who waited each in their Turn in the Temple at Jerusalem. Lastly, they gave the Name of Chief of the Priests to the High-Priests that were deposed, and were [Joseph. Antiq. l. 17. c. 15.] no longer in Office. Josephus speaks of the High-Priest Jesus the Son of Siah, who lived nine or ten Years after the Birth of Jesus Christ. The same Author speaks also in another Place[1], of another Priest called Jesus the Son of Sapha, or Saphia, who had a great Share in the Affairs of the Jews, during their last War against the Romans. This might be the Son of the one or the other of these Priests, who went from City to City, as several other Jews did, to exorcise those that were possessed. These Exorcists being at Ephesus, pretended to invoke the Name of Jesus over those that were possessed; saying, We conjure thee by Jesus whom Paul preaches. But the evil Spirit answered them; Jesus I know, and Paul I know, but who are ye? And at the same time, he that was possessed, threw himself upon two of these Exorcists, and handled them so rudely, that they were forced to run out of the House naked and wounded.

Schinus

SCHINUS, or Schinum, a Lentisk or Mastick-Tree. This Word is found in Susanna, ver. 54. Daniel asked one of Susanna's Accusers, under what Tree he had observed Susanna in the Company of her Lover? He answered, under a Mastick-Tree, Sub Schino. Daniel alluding to this Word, replied, The Angel of God hath received the Sentence of God, to cut thee in two: Schisai se. As this Allusion can take place only in the Greek, it gives reason to doubt, whether this Story of Susanna, in which it is read, was ever writ in Hebrew. See PRINUS before.

Schism

SCHISM, a Word formed from the Greek Word Schisma, which signifies Rupture, [1 Cor. i. 10.] or Division. St. Paul exhorts the Corinthians to live in Union together, that there may be no Schisms among them: [Joh. ix. 16.] That there be no Divisions among you. St. John says, that the Jews were divided among themselves concerning Jesus Christ, some affirming, that he was a true Prophet, and others, that he was a Deceiver. And there was a Division (or Schism) among them. When Jeroboam revolted against Rehoboam, and was acknowledged as King of the Ten Tribes, he made a Schism, and separated from the Religion of the Lord, forsook the Communion of the Tribe of Judah, and no longer frequented the Temple, which was the chosen and appointed Place, to offer to the Lord the Worship that was due to him. The Cuthites, otherwise called Samaritans, who came from beyond the Euphrates, to settle in the Cities of the Ten Tribes, continued also in Schism, 'till the Establishment of the Christian Religion. The Jews at this Day look upon the Caraites as Schismaticks, because they do not receive their Traditions.

We have seen several Seditions in the Christian Church, from its Original to this Day. The Difference they make between Schism and Heresy, is this, that Heresy is founded upon Capital Errors, which the Heretick maintains obstinately, and in Contempt of the Censures and Thunders of the Church. Schism, on the contrary, is not merely founded upon the Errors of him that separates from the Church, but upon his Obstinacy in not acknowledging its true Head, or in continuing separate from its Communion. Thus we have often seen Schisms in the Churches of the West, because some obeyed one Pope, and some another, when there were several Competitors that claimed the Popedom. The Greeks, and the greatest part of the Christians of the East, are still Schismaticks to this Day, because they acknowledge not the Authority of the Pope, and do not communicate with the Latin Churches.

Schools

SCHOOLS, or Academies of the Jews. The Hebrews were always very diligent to teach and study the Laws that they had received from Moses. The Father of the Family studied and taught them in his own Family. The Rabbin taught them in the Temple, in the Synagogues, and in the Academies. They pretend that even before the Deluge[1] there were Schools for Knowledge and Piety, of which the Patriarchs had the Direction. They place Adam at their Head, then Enoch, and lastly Noah. Melchizedek, as they say, kept a School in the City of Kariath-zepher, otherwise Hebron, in Palestine. Abraham, who had been instructed by Heber, taught in Chaldea and in Egypt. From him the Egyptians learned Astronomy and Arithmetick. Jacob succeeded Abraham in the Office of teaching. The Scripture [Jos. Antiq. l. 1. c. 8. Gen. xxv. 27.] says, he was a plain Man dwelling in Tents; which according to the Chaldee Paraphrast, is, that he was a perfect Man, and Minister of the House of Doctrine.

All this indeed, must needs be very precarious and uncertain. It cannot be doubted, but that Moses, Aaron, and the Elders of Israel, instructed the People in the Wilderness; and that many good Israelites were very industrious to instruct their Families in the Fear of God. But all this does not prove to us that there were any such Schools we are now inquiring after. Under Joshua we see a kind of Academy of the Prophets, where the Children of the Prophets, that is, their Disciples, lived in the Exercise of a retired and austere Life, in Study, in the Meditation and Reading of the Law of God. There were Schools of the Prophets at Naioth in Ramah; David and Samuel withdrew thither. [1 Sam. xix. 19,20, &c.] Saul sent Messengers thither to apprehend David, but no sooner had they come near the Company of the Prophets, who had Samuel at their Head, but they also prophesied themselves. The second and third Troop of Officers that this Prince sent for the same Purpose, did in like manner. And when he himself went at last, he was seized with the Spirit of God, and began to prophesy as well as others.

We find more also under the Prophets Elijah and Elisha at Bethel[2], and in the Plain of Jericho. There was also a great Number of them in the Kingdom of Israel[3]. Some have thought[4], that Elijah had also a Society of them upon Mount Carmel. These Prophets were consulted upon Affairs of Importance: People went to hear their Lessons, as appears from the Hostess of Elisha. Her Husband asks her, Why she went to see the Prophet, seeing that Day was neither the Sabbath nor the New-Moon? These Schools continued [Lightfoot, Centur. p. 661. 2 Kings iv. 23. Ezek. xx. 1, 2, 3, &c. xiv. 1, 2. xxv. 31.] down to the Captivity of Babylon; and it should seem, that even the Captives went still to hear the Prophets, when there were any in the Places where they resided. Ezekiel relates several Conversations that he had with the Elders of Israel, who came to see him, and to consult him several times. The People also assembled about him, as it were to hear him, and be instructed by him; but they were not very careful to put his Instructions in practice.

These Schools or Societies of the Prophets were succeeded by the Synagogues. 'Tis doubted whether there were any before the Captivity of Babylon. Yet we [Psal.] read in the Psalms, that Nebuchadnezzar burnt all the Synagogues of the Country. The Elders of Israel passed the Night in [Judith vi. 21, 22.] Prayer in the Place of Assembly. Per totam noctem intra Ecclesiam oraverunt, asking the Assistance of the Lord against Holofernes. The Greek of Esther, iv. 16. insinuates, that there were also Synagogues at Susa in the Time of Esther and Mordecai. We are assured, that they were become so numerous in Judea, after the Return from the Captivity, that in the City of Jerusalem only, there were upwards of Four hundred, according to some, or Three hundred, fourscore and fourteen, according to others. Every trading Company had their own, and the Strangers had several also[5].

'Twas only after the Return from the Captivity that there was found in Israel that Distinction of Sects, of Pharisees, Sadducees, Essenians. We also find that of the Herodians mentioned in the Gospel. Each Sect had their particular Schools. See their several Articles.

The Method of teaching in the Synagogues and in the Schools, is plainly observable in the Gospels and in the Acts. When Jesus Christ was of the Age of twelve Years, he was found in the Temple in the Midst of the Doctors, hearing them and asking them Questions. Entring [Luk. ii. 46. Luke iv. 16, 17.] one Day into the Synagogue of Nazareth, his own Country, they presented to him the Volume of the Prophet Isaiah. He unfolded and opened it, and having read a Passage out of the Prophet, he rolled it up again, and sat down to speak. He read it therefore standing, just as we now read the Gospel. St. Paul says, that he had studied at the Feet of Gamaliel. Philo relates, that in the Assembly of the Essenians, the Children sit at the Feet [Philo lib. quod omnis probus liber.] of their Masters, who interpret the Law to them, and explain the figurative and allegorical Sense of it, after the manner of the antient Philosophers. The Author published under [Ambrosiast. in Cor. xiv.] the Name of St. Ambrose, upon the Epistles of St. Paul, says, that among the Hebrews the Rabbins sat upon Chairs that were raised aloft, the Scholars, that were the greatest Proficients, were upon Benches just below their Masters, and the younger Sort sat upon the Ground on Hassocks. But the Authors of the Thalmud teach us, that antiently the [Thalmud. tit. Megillah.] Masters sat down and the Scholars stood up. But this Custom was changed even before the Destruction of the Temple by the Romans; and from that Time, the Master sat in the first Place, and the Scholars sat round about him in Chairs, or upon the Ground. The Master taught either by himself, or by an Interpreter. If he made use of an Interpreter, he spoke Hebrew to him, and the Interpreter explained it in the vulgar Tongue. If the Scholars had a mind to propose any Question to their Master, they addressed themselves to the Interpreter, who proposed it to the Rabbin, and reported his Answer to the Scholars.

[Hieronym. in Isai. c. 8. l. 3.] St. Jerome says, that a little before the Birth of Jesus Christ, two famous Rabbins, Shammai and Hillel, the Heads of two celebrated Schools, formed two Parties among the Jews, and were Masters of the Scribes and Pharisees. Akiba succeeded them, and was Master of the famous Aquila, the Translator of the Scriptures of the Old Testament. Akiba had Meir for his Successor, after whom appeared Jobanan Son of Zachai, then Eliezer, afterwards Delphon, Joseph the Galilean, and lastly Joshua, who presided over this School at the taking of Jerusalem. 'Twas thus that the Jews made out the Succession of their Doctors in the Time of St. Jerome.

The Rabbins affirm, that after the Destruction of Jerusalem, they set up a School at Japhne in Galilee, called afterwards Iveline, and another at Lydda, or Diospolis. Akiba first professed at Diospolis, then at Japhne. Gamaliel succeeded him at Diospolis, and he succeeded Gamaliel at Japhne. But the most famous Academy of all this Country, was that of Tiberias upon the Sea of Galilee. There Juda the Holy, a Disciple of Meir, Chinina, and Johanan, were Professors successively. After some time Juda withdrew from Tiberias, and opened a School at Sephoris, and there professed for seventeen Years. But it is proper to observe, that all this Succession of Masters and Schools is very uncertain. See [Acts xxii. 3.] F. Morin in his Exercitationes Biblicæ, l. 2. Exer. 2. c. 1, 3.

After the Fall of the Schools in Palestine, which is fixed to be about the Middle of the third Century, the Jews are constrained to seek the Succession of their Doctors beyond the Euphrates, at Sora, at Pundebita, at Nahardea, and at Perutz-shibbur; Places but little known, and of which the very Situation is doubtful. They think it was the Doctors Rab and Samuel, Disciples of Juda the Holy, who founded them about the Year 220. They subsisted, as they say, for Eight hundred Years, till about the Year of Jesus Christ 1030, when they were destroyed by the Saracens.

Upon the Ruins of these Schools were formed those of Egypt and Europe. Their Doctors chiefly made their Appearance in Spain. Moses Son of Maimon, or Maimonides, was born at Cordua, he was a Disciple of Averroes, he withdrew into Egypt, and there died about the Year of Christ 1205. Rabbi Nathan, Chief of the School of Rome, died in 1106. Abenezra, another famous Rabbi, died at Rhodes in 1174. Rabbi Solomon, otherwise called Raschi or Jarchi, a Native of Lunel in Provence, or of Troyes in Champaign, died at Treves in 1180. Kimchi was born at Narbonne, he flourished from the Year 1200, till towards the Year 1250. These are the principal Rabbins, and the Times in which they lived. By what has been said, one may form a Notion of their Schools, and of the Succession of their Doctors. We have treated of this more at large in a Dissertation concerning the Schools of the Jews.

SCINIPHES, or Ciniphes; the third Plague wherewith God punished the Egyptians, was that of the Sciniphes, or Flies, which some have taken for what we call Gnats. Origen says, that the Sciniphe is so [Origen. in Exod. Homil. 4.] small a Flie, that it is hardly perceptible to the Eye, but when it fixes to the Body, it causes a very quick Pain, and a sharp stinging. Philo reports, that these little Insects [Philo de vita Mosis. l. 1. p. 618.] penetrate into the very Eyes, the Nose, and the Ears, where they make the Points of their Stings to be felt. St. Jerom, [Excerpt. Valesi. p. 77, 86. Liv. l. 35.] upon chap. xi. of Daniel, says, that Scopas retiring into the City of Sidon, was there besieged by Antiochus; that Ptolemy Epiphanes attempted to deliver him from thence, and sent three very experienced Captains, Æropus, Menocles, and Damoxenus; but they not being able to raise the Siege, Scopas was forced to surrender, happy enough in having his Life saved, with the Remainder of his Troops. He return'd into Egypt, but did not long remain quiet; for two Years afterwards[3] he took it in his Head to be made King of Egypt, with the Assistance of the Etolians whom he commanded; but his Irresolution ruin'd him. Aristomenes and Polycrates accused him of High Treason; and he was become so stupefy'd, that not knowing what Defence to make, he was unanimously condemn'd to die, by all that were present. The following Night Aristomenes put him to Death in Prison, by making him swallow some Poison he had provided for him.

Scorpion

SCORPION. The Scorpion is a small Animal that has a Bladder full of a dangerous Poison: It may be distinguish'd into three Parts; the Head, the Breast, and the Belly. The Head appears to be join'd and continu'd to the Breast: It has two Eyes in the Middle of its Head, and two towards its Extremity, between which come out, as it were, two Arms, which are divided into two, like the Claws of a Lobster. It has eight Legs proceeding from its Breast, every one of which is divided into six Parts, cover'd with Hair, at the End of which are six Talons or Claws. The Belly is divided into seven Rings, from the last of which the Tail proceeds, which is divided into seven little Beads, of which the last is arm'd with a Sting. In some are observed six Eyes, and in others eight may be visibly perceived. The Tail is long, and made after the manner of a String of Beads ty'd End to End, one to another, the last bigger than the others, and something longer, at the End of which are sometimes two Stings, which are hollow, and fill'd with a cold Poison, which it squirts into the Part which it stings. The Scorpion is of a blackish Colour, like Soot; it waddles as it goes, and fixes violently with its Snout, and by its Feet, on such Persons as it seizes upon, so that it cannot be pluck'd off but with Difficulty. There are some that have Wings, like those of Locusts, which fly from one Region to another; and are something like Bats, as is affirmed by Pliny and Strabo. There are also of several Colours: The Antients mention the black ones, yellow, ash-coloured, red, green, white, wine-colour'd, of the Colour of Soot. They say, the Dam brings forth eleven young ones, which are small round Worms, hardly bigger than a Louse: The Mother sits upon them; and we are told, that when they are hatch'd, they kill the Mother that gave them Life. They are more mischievous to Women than Men, and more to Girls than Women. Those which have seven Knots in their Tails are more dangerous than those that have but six.

They tell us, that in cold Countries the Scorpions are not venomous, no more than those that are of a whitish Colour. The best and the surest Remedy against the Bite of a Scorpion, is, to squeeze it to Pieces upon the Wound. Moses tells us,[1] that the Hebrews passed through great and terrible Wildernesses, where were Scorpions, and the Serpent call'd Dipsas. Tertullian, at the Beginning of his Book call'd Scorpiacum, has well described the Scorpion. The Hebrew reads Hakarab, or Akrab; from whence is Acrabatene, a Name given to a Canton of Palestine, and the Ascent of Akrabbim, or Scorpions.

In Scripture, Scorpions are used in a figurative Sense, for wicked Men; Thou dost dwell among Scorpions; Thou livest with wicked and rebellious People, says the Lord to Ezekiel. He that hath hold of her, (an evil Wife) is as though he had held a Scorpion, says the Author of Ecclesiasticus: He runs a Hazard of being infected by her Poison. [Ezek.ii.6. Ecclus. xxvi. 7. Ecclus. xxxix. 36. Rev. ix. 3,5.] The same Author places Scorpions among the Instruments of God's Vengeance. St. John, in his Revelations, very well describes the Qualities of the Scorpion, and the Pain that proceeds from its Biting: And there came out of the Smoke Locusts upon the Earth, and unto them was given the Power, as the Scorpions of the Earth have Power. And to them it was given that they should not kill them, but that they should be tormented five Months. And their Torment was as the Torment of a Scorpion, when he striketh a Man.

Scorpions were also a kind of Whip armed with Points. When the Israelites complained to Rehoboam, of the Weight of the Yoke wherewith Solomon had loaded them, he returned them this Answer;[2] My Father hath chastised you with Whips, but I will chastise you with Scorpions; that is, with Rods or Whips armed with Points, or pointed Thorns, like the Tail of a Scorpion. Isidor.

[Numbers xxxiv. 4. Josh.xv. 3.] The Mountains call'd the Scorpions, or Akrabbim, or Acrabim, were towards the Extremity of the Red Sea, to the South of the Tribe of Judah. As for Acrabatene, lying in the Country of Samaria, and which also took its Name from the Scorpions, or from the Place call'd Akrabbim, see this Word, and ACRABATENE.

[1 Macc. vi. 51.] Scorpions were also Machines of War, with which Arrows were thrown. The Name of Scorpion was also given to the Arrows themselves. This Machine is thus described by Tertullian, at the Beginning of his Book call'd Scorpiacum: Bellicam machinam, & retractu tela vegetantem, de Scorpio nominant. Id spiculum & fistula est, patula tenuitate in vulnus & virus, quâ figit, effundit. And Vegecius, l. 4. c. 22. *Scorpiones dicebantur quos nunc manubalistas vocant: ide*ò sic nuncupati, quod parvis subtilibusque spiculis, inferant mortem. Scourge

[Deut. xxv. 1, 2, 3.] SCOURGE, or Whip. This Punishment was very common among the Jews. Moses ordains, That if there be a Controversy between Men, and they come unto Judgment, that the Judges may judge them; then they shall justify the Righteous, and condemn the Wicked. And it shall be, if the wicked Man be worthy to be beaten, that the Judge shall cause him to lie down, and to be beaten before his Face, according to his Fault, by a certain Number. Forty Stripes he may give him, and not exceed; lest if he should exceed, and beat him above these with many Stripes, then thy Brother should seem vile unto thee. There were two ways of giving the Lash; one, with Thongs or Whips, made of Ropes-ends, or Straps of Leather; the other, with Rods, Twigs, or Branches of some Tree.

The Rabbins think, that ordinary Faults committed against the Law, and submitted to the Penalty of the Scourge, were punish'd, not with Blows with a Rod, but with a Whip. They reckon up as far as One hundred and sixty-eight Faults liable to this Penalty[1]; and they hold, that all punishable Faults, to which the Law has not annex'd the Penalty of Death, are to be punish'd by the Scourge. The Offender was stript from his Shoulders to his Middle, and he was tied by his Arms to a pretty low Pillar, that he might lean forward, and the Executioner might the more easily come at his Back. There are some that maintain, that they never gave more or less than thirty-nine Strokes, but that in greater Faults they struck with greater Violence. But others think, that when the Fault and Circumstances required it, they might add to this Number of Blows. St. [2 Cor. x. 24.] Paul informs us, that at five different times he received nine and thirty Blows from the Jews; which should insinuate, that this was a fix'd Number, and that they never went beyond it.

[Acts xxii. 24, 25.] The same Apostle clearly shews in the same Place, that the Correction with Rods, was different from that with a Whip; Ter virgis cæsus sum. And when he was seized by the Jews in the Temple, the Tribune of the Roman Soldiers ran and took him out of the Hands of the Jews; and desiring to know the Reason of the Tumult that happen'd upon this Occasion, he or-der'd him to be tied and stretch'd upon the Ground, to put him to the Question, and to have him beat with Rods; for so, commonly, the Romans put the Question. The Bastinado, that was sometime given upon the Back, and which at this Day, among the Eastern People, is given upon the Soles of the Feet raised aloft, while the Patient lies down upon his Belly; this Punishment is different from that of the Scourge or Whip.

The Rabbins teach us, that the Penalty of the Scourge was not at all ignominious among them, and that it could not be objected as a Disgrace to those that had suffer'd it. They pretend, that no Israelite, not so much as the King, or High-priest, was exempted from this Law, when he had committed any Fault that deserved this Punishment. But this must be understood of the Punishment of Whipping that that was inflicted in their Synagogues, and which was rather a legal and particular Penalty, than a publick and shameful Correction. [Philo in Flacc. & de Specialibus legib.] Philo, speaking of the Manner with which Flaccus treated the Jews of Alexandria, says, he made them suffer the Punishment of the Whip, which (says he) is not less insupportable [Mat. xx. 19.] to a Free-man, than Death it self. Our Saviour, speaking of the Pains and Ignominy of his Passion, commonly puts his [Mark x. 34. Luk. xviii. 32.] Scourging in the first Place.

Scribe

SCRIBE, Scriba; in Hebrew, Sopher[1]; in Greek, Grammateus. The Word Scribe is very common in Scripture, and has several Significations. I. A Clerk, Writer, or Secretary. This was a very considerable Employment in the Court of the Kings of Judah, in which the Scripture often mentions the Secretaries, as [2 Samuel viii. 17. 2 Samuel xx. 25. 1 Chron. xxiv. 6. 1 Kings iv. 3.] the first Officers of the Crown. Seraiah was Scribe or Secretary to King David. Shevah and Shemaiah exercised the same Office under the same Prince. In Solomon's time we find Elihoreph and Ahiah [2 Kings xix. 2. 2 Kings xxxii. 8, 9, 10.] Secretaries to the King: Shebna under Hezekiah; and Shaphan under Josiah. As there were but few in those Times that could write well, the Employment of a Scribe or Writer was very considerable.

II. A Scribe, is put for a Commissary or Muster-master of an Army, who makes the Review of the Troops, keeps the List or Roll, and calls them over. It is said, for Example, that in the War of Barak against Sisera, Out of Machir came down Governors, and out of Zebulun they that handle the Pen of the Writer. Under the Reign of Uzziah King of Judah there is found Jeil the Scribe, who [2 Chron. xxvi. 11.] had under his Hand the King's Armies. Jeremiah speaks of a Scribe that was Prince or Chief of the Soldiers, and who made the newlisted Soldiers perform their Exercise: Scribam principem militum, qui probabat tirones. The Hebrew has it, The Scribe, [Jer. lii. 25. 2 Kings xxv. 19.] Prince of the Army, who made the People of the Country go to War. In the Books of Maccabees, Judas gives Orders to the Scribes, to stand upon the Banks of the Brook that the Army was to pass over, and bids [1 Macc. v. 42.] them let no one remain beyond the Water, but cause them all to pass over to the War.

III. Scribe, is put for an able and skilful Man, a Doctor of the Law, a Man of Learning, that understands Affairs. Jonathan, David's Uncle by the Father's side, was a [1 Chron. xxvii. 32.] Counsellor, a Wise-man, and a Scribe. Baruch the Disciple and Secretary of Jeremiah, is also call'd a Scribe; so is Gemariah the Son of Shaphan; and Jonathan, who lived under [Jer. xxxvi. 10, 12, 20, 26. Ecclus. x. 5.] the Reign of Josiah. Jesus the Son of Sirach says, In the Hand of God is the Prosperity of Man, and upon the Person of the Scribe shall he lay his Honour. 'Tis known what Commendation the Scripture gives to Ezra, who is celebrated as a skilful Scribe in the Law of [Ezra vii. 6.] his God; He was a ready Scribe in the Law of Moses. The Scribes of the People, which are frequently mention'd in the Gospel, were publick Writers, and profess'd Doctors of the Law, which they read and explain'd to the People.

[Vid. Casaubon. Exercit. in Baron. exercit. 1. n. 8. Judg. v. 14.] Some place the Original of Scribes under Moses; but their Name does not appear 'till under the Judges. Others think that David first instituted them, when he established the several Classes of the Priests and Levites. Epiphanius places their Original at the Time [1 Chron. xxiv, xxvi. Acts xxiii. 9.] when the Sect of the Sadducees began. Mention is made in the Acts, of Scribes that were of the Party of the Pharisees; which has made some believe, that all the Scribes were of the Sect of the Pharisees. But they did not espouse any particular Sect, but there were some of all Sects.

Scribes, and Doctors of the Law, in Scripture-phrase, mean the same thing. And he that in St. Matthew xxii. 35. is call'd a Doctor of the Law, in St. Mark xii. 28. is named a Scribe, or one of the Scribes. And as the whole Knowledge of the Jews, at that time, chiefly consisted in Pharisaical Traditions, and in the Use that was made of 'em to explain the Scriptures; the greatest Number of the Doctors of the Law, or of the Scribes, were Pharisees; and we almost always find them join'd together in Scripture. Each of 'em valu'd themselves upon their Knowledge of the Law, upon their studying and teaching it: They had the Key of [Mat. xxii. 52. Mat. xxiii. 2.] Knowledge, and sat in Moses's Chair. Epiphanius, and the Author of the Recognitions, imputed to St. Clement, reckon the Scribes among the Sects of the Jews; but it is certain, they made no Sect by themselves; they were only distinguish'd by their Study of the Law.

Scripture

SCRIPTURE, or Writing. There is great Dispute concerning the first Inventer of Letters and Writing. Some maintain, that there was Writing before the Deluge, and that Adam was the Inventer of Letters. Others think, that Moses is the first Author of whom we have any Writings, and that before him there were no written Monuments. Thro' the whole Lives of the Patriarchs, we see no Footsteps of any Writing. Moses does not quote any Writing that was extant before his own; for the Book of the Wars of the Lord, mention'd Numb. xxi. 14. is a Passage added to the Text of Moses, or was a Writing compos'd in his Time. It is true, they talk of a Book compos'd by Adam, and another by Enoch, and that certain other Writings are ascribed to the First Man, and to Enoch. Josephus speaks of certain Pillars with Inscriptions made before the Deluge; they mention also certain Writings that were said to have been compos'd by Abraham: but all this is look'd upon as fabulous and apocryphal, in the Judgment of the most judicious Criticks.

It is agreed by all, that there is nothing extant this Day in the World, either more ancient, or more authentick, than the Books of Moses; but it will not follow from thence, that there was no Writing before him. It appears, on the contrary, by his own Account, that Writing was common enough at that time, both in Egypt, from whence the Hebrews were just come forth, and also among the Hebrews. This People seemed already prepared and accustomed to express their Thoughts and Sentiments after this manner. The Chief of the Nation, without doubt, read the Tables of the Law. Moses had been instructed in all the Knowledge of the Egyptians, and, doubtless, had learned their Manner of Writing[1]. See the Article LETTERS.

The Word Scripture taken absolutely, generally stands for the sacred Books of the Old and New Testament. Did ye never read in the Scripture? How then shall the Scriptures be fulfilled? All Scripture is given by Inspiration of God, and is profitable for Doctrine, for Reproof, for Correction, for Instruction in Righteousness.

Canonical Scriptures. See the Article CANON OF SCRIPTURES. They generally ascribe the forming of the Canon of Scriptures, or the Collection of the sacred Books of the Old Testament, to Esdras, who ranged them in a convenient Order. First, the Law: Secondly, the Prophets: Thirdly, the Kelubim, or Hagiographa, that is to say, sacred Writings. Our Saviour seems to have had regard to this old Manner of dividing the Bible, when he says; All things must be [Luk. xxiv. 44.] fulfilled which were written in the Law of Moses, and in the Prophets, and in the Psalms, concerning me. The Psalms are at the Head of the Hagiographa. Josephus, [Lib. 1. contra Appion.] against Appion, acknowledges the same Distribution. We have, says he, two and twenty Books that are of divine Authority, of which five are of Moses; the Prophets that succeeded Moses compos'd thirteen of them; the other four are Hymns to the Honour of God, and Rules for the Conduct of Life. We must however observe, that the Jews have varied in the Division of their holy Books; and at this Day, instead of twenty-two they reckon twenty-four. But this is a Difference only in Name; and when it is said, that the Canon was fix'd by Esdras we must understand it with some Restriction; for he could not insert Malachi into it, nor Esther, nor even Nehemiah, where there is mention of the High-priest Jaddus, and of Darius Codomannus, King of Persia, who lived all after Esdras.

Sea

SEA, in Latin, Mare; in Hebrew, Jam; in Greek, Thalasse. The Hebrews give the Name of Sea to all great Collections of Water, [Hieron. Tradit. Hebr. in Genes. i, &c.] to great Lakes or Pools. Thus the Sea of Galilee, or of Tiberias, or of Cinereth, is no other than the Lake of Tiberias or Genezareth in Galilee. The Dead Sea, the Sea of the Wilderness, the Sea of the East, the Sea of Sodom, the Sea of Salt, or the Salt -sea, the Sea Asphaltites or of Bitumen, is no other than the Lake Asphaltites, or the Lake of Sodom. The Sea of Semechon is the [Jerem. xvii. 32.] Lake of the same Name. The Sea of Jazer is the Lake that was near the City Jazer, beyond Jordan. The Sea of Suph or Zuph is the Red-sea. The western Sea, or the great [1 Kings vii. 23.] Sea, or the hindermost Sea, is the Mediterranean. [Matt. xxi. 42. Ibid. xxvi. 54. 2 Tim. iii. 16.] They gave also the Name of Sea to a very great brazen Basin, that Solomon caus'd to be made for the Temple, for the Conveniency of the Priests, who there wash'd the Feet and Bowels of the Sacrifices, and the Instruments they made Use of for sacrificing.

[Herbelot. Bib. Orien. p. 672.] The Arabians, and Orientals in general, sometimes also give the Name of Sea to great Rivers, as the Nile, the Euphrates, the Tigris, and others, which by their Magnitude, and by the Extent of their Overflowings, seem as little Seas or great Lakes. It is necessary to give some Proofs of this, because there are several Passages in Scripture, the Explication of which would be almost impossible without this Consideration. Isaiah [Isai. xi. 15.] says, The Lord shall utterly destroy the Tongue of the Egyptian Sea, and with his mighty Wind shall he shake his Hand over the River, and shall smite it in the seven Streams, and make Men go over dry-shod. All this can be understood only of the Delta, which is, as it were, the Tongue of the Nile, here call'd the Egyptian Sea. 'Tis known that upon the Coasts of the Mediterranean, where it washes the Shores of Egypt, there is neither Tongue of Land or of Sea; and besides the whole Description of the Prophet marks out the Nile, and its seven Arms. Septemplicis ostia Nili.

The same Prophet again denotes the Nile by the Name of Sea in this Passage. Woe to [Isai. xviii. 1, 2.] the Land shadowing with Wings, which is beyond the Rivers of Ethiopia. (He calls here [Plin. l. 6. c. 22.] the Red-sea by the Name of the Rivers of Ethiopia, or of Cuth, because the People of Cuth inhabited upon the Eastern Shore of this Sea.) That sendeth Ambassadors by the Sea, even in Vessels of Bulrushes upon the Waters. Here he insinuates the Nile by the Word Sea. These Vessels of Bulrushes were peculiar to Egypt, as Pliny observes. Ex ipso papyro navigia texunt, & ex libro vela. The Prophet Isaiah goes on to address his Words to those Ambassadors, who sailed upon the Nile in Vessels of Bulrushes. Go, ye swift Messengers to a Nation scattered and peeled, to a People terrible from their Beginning hitherto; a Nation meted out and trodden down, whose Land the Rivers have spoiled. This Description could only agree to Egypt, which was then torn in Pieces by domestick Divisions. Egypt is known and wasted by the Inundations of the Nile; 'tis a Country meted out and trodden down, because the Mud being often spread over the Land, and so concealing the Bounds and Limits, they are often obliged to measure it out again, &c.

The Country of Babylon, which was water'd by the Euphrates, is call'd by the same [Isai. xxi. 1.] Prophet, the Desart of the Sea: Whether it was because of that Solitude

8 A and Devastation to which it was to be reduced; or by way of Irony or Antiphrasis, because Babylon was then a much frequented and populous City. This City situate upon great Waters, upon the Sea, and which is the Habitation of such a Multitude of People. Jeremiah speaks of it in [Jerem. li. 36,42. Isai. xxvii. 1. Eze. xxxii. 2.] the same manner. The Sea is come up upon Babylon, she is covered with the Multitude of the Waves thereof. And a little before; I will dry up her Sea, and make her Springs dry. And Isaiah, speaking of the King of Babylon, calls him Leviathan, or the Dragon that is in the Sea. Ezekiel gives the same Name to the King of Egypt; Thou art as a Whale in the Seas, because his Habitation was upon the Banks of the Nile.

[Dan.xi.45.] Daniel, speaking of Antiochus, who carry'd his Army beyond the Euphrates, and who encamped in the Plains of Mesopotamia, says, that he encamped at Padan, between the Seas, that is, between Tigris and Euphrates. Hosea calls the [Hos.xi.10. Vulgat.] Babylonians and Egyptians, Children of the Sea. Formidabunt filii maris, & avolabunt quasi avis ex Ægypto, & quasi columba de terra Assyriorum; and the Jews that were Captives in Babylonia, [Nahum iii. 8.] and in Egypt, shall return into their own Country. Nahum, speaking of the City of No, or No-ammon, which many think to be the same as Thebes, or Diospolis, says, that the Sea is its Treasure, and that the Waters serve it for a Rampart. This Sea, and these Waters, certainly can mean nothing else but the Nile.

The great Sea, the western Sea, the hindermost Sea, the Sea of the Philistines, generally express the Mediterranean, which was to the West of the Land of Promise, and which was consider'd as behind a Man who should look towards the Sun-rising, having his Left-hand to the North, and his Right-hand to the South. For 'tis thus the Hebrews mark out the Situation of Places, which are to the right or left, before or behind. The Sea is often put for the West, as the Right is put for the [Gen. xii.8. xiii. 14. & passim.] South. 'Twas upon the Mediterranean that Jonah embark'd himself; and it was upon this Sea that they floated the Timber that was cut down from Mount Libanus, and which was brought to Joppa, for the building of the Temple.

The Sea of Suph or Zuph; that is to say, the Sea of Rushes, is what we call now the Red-sea. It is call'd the Sea of Suph, because of the great Quantity of Rushes or Sea-wrack which is found at its Bottom, and on its Shores. It is still, at this Day, call'd Bahrsuf, and the Weed that grows there is call'd Sufo. Diodorus [Diodor. Sicul. Bibl. l. 3.] Siculus says, that it appears all over green, because of the Weeds that grow under its Waters. Those that have sailed upon this Sea tell us, that it appears red in some Places, because of a red Sand at the Bottom. In other Places the Water seems to be white, because of the white Sand that is found there. Lastly, it appears green where the Sea-wrack is found. But this is only observed in such Places where the Water is low; and the Colour of the Sand or Weeds appears through the Water, only because it is very clear and transparent. Don John de Castro, Viceroy of the Indies for the King of Portugal, believes, that the Name of the Red-sea had its Original from hence, because there is a great Quantity of Coral found in this Sea. Certain it is, that the Books of the Old Testament never Name this the Red-sea, but the Sea of Zuph. Pliny says,[1] that it obtain'd the Name of the Red-sea, in Greek Erythrea, because of a certain King call'd Erythros, who reign'd in Arabia, and whose Tomb was to be seen in the Island Tyrine or Agyris.

Several learned Men believe, that this King Erythros is no other than Esau or Edom. Edom, in Hebrew, signifies red or ruddy, just as Erythros does in Greek. But I cannot be persuaded that Edom ever dwelt, either upon the Shores of the Red-sea, or the Persian Gulph, which is sometimes also call'd by the Name of the Red-sea. His Dwelling was to the East of the Land of Canaan, towards Bozra. Those that have observed the reddish Parts of this Sea tell us, that there were none at the Place where the Israelites passed over, nor a great deal lower. That is to say, there were none from Tor, over-against Mount Sinai, as far as Suez, to the northern Extremity of this Sea. So that I am inclined to believe, that the Name of the Red-sea was not given to it, till after the Idumeans descended from Edom had spread themselves from East to West, as far as the Red-sea. Then it might have the Name of the Sea of Edom given to it, which the Greeks render'd by the Red-sea, or Thalassa Erythrea. In the Books of the Kings and Chronicles, I find the Sea [1 Kings ix. 26. 2 Chron. viii. 17.] of Suph in the Land of Edom, which may be brought as a Confirmation of this Conjecture.

This is the Description of the Sea of Kolsum, or of the Red-sea, according to Abulfeda[2]. It takes its Name from the City of Kolsum, lying at the Extremity of its northern Coast, under the forty-fourth Degree and a Quarter; others say the forty-sixth Degree and a Half of Longitude, and under the twenty-third Degree and one-third of Latitude. From Kolsum this Sea runs on to the South, bending a little towards the East, as far as Kasir, which is a Harbour of Kous, whose Longitude is forty-nine Degrees, and Latitude twenty-six. From thence it runs on still to the South, verging a little towards the West, about Aidad, whose Longitude is forty-eight Degrees, and Latitude twenty-one. From Aidad it goes on in a right line towards the South, as far as Sawakam, a little City of Ethiopia, which is also under the forty-eighth Degree of Longitude, and the seventeenth of Latitude. Thence, going on towards the South, it wheels about the Island of Dahlac, which is at a small Distance from the western Coast, and whose Longitude is one and sixty Degrees, and Latitude fourteen. From this Island the Sea stretches still on towards the South, and washes the Shores of Ethiopia, as far as Cape Almandab; and there is the end, or rather beginning of the Red-sea, toward the South, near the Strait or Mouth, by which the great Indian Sea pours in, or the Eastern Ocean. The Mountain of Almandab, and the Desarts of Aden, are very near to each other, and are only separated by so narrow a Strait, that one Man may see another from the opposite Shore. This Strait is call'd Bab-al-mandab; and Travellers have assured me, that Bab-al-mandab is below Aden, and is as far distant from Aden towards the North-west, as a Ship may sail in a Day and a Night. The Mountains of Almandab are situate in the Country of the Abyssines, and they may be seen from the Mountains of Aden, tho' they are at a great Distance. In this Place the Mouth of the Sea of Kolsum is entirely shut up and straitened in the manner we have already described. Aden in, respect of Bab-al-mandab, lies between the East and the South; and this is all we find observable upon the western Coast of the Red-sea, from Kolsum to Mandab.

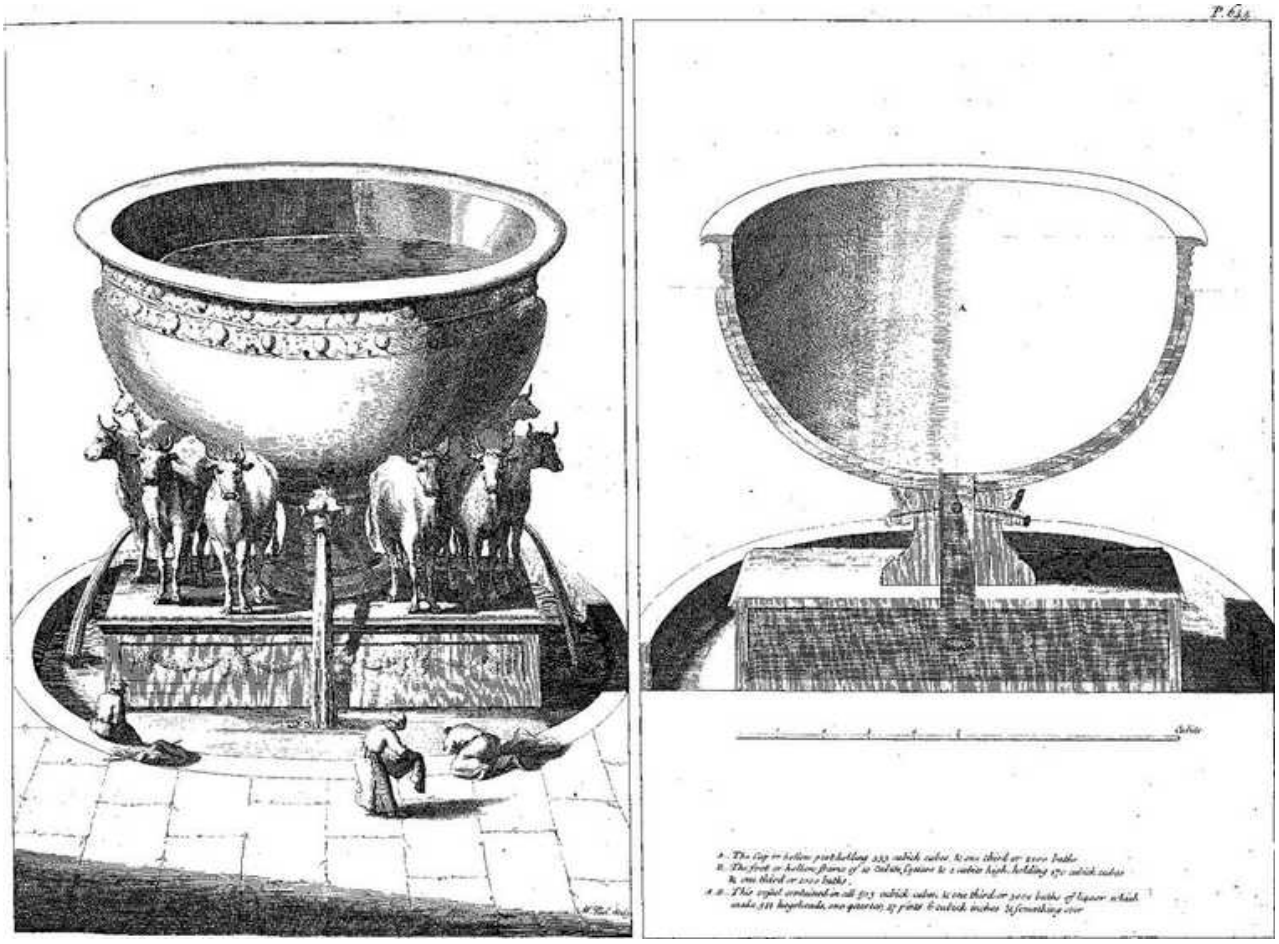
Now let us proceed to the Shore which stretches out from the other Side of the Mountain of Mandab, and which is the Land of Aden. Here we may take notice, that from Aden the Red-sea runs toward the North. The Longitude of this City is sixty-six Degrees, and its Latitude eleven. Then this Sea turns about the Coasts of Yemen, till it arrives at the Extremity of the Coast bearing this Name, where the Longitude is sixty-seven Degrees, and the Latitude nineteen all but ten Minutes. From thence it stretches still towards the South, as far as Gioddah, whose Longitude is sixty-six Degrees, and Latitude twenty-one. From Gioddah it runs North-west, as far as Algiahasah, a Station of the Egyptians, under the sixty-fifth Degree of Longitude, and the twenty-second Degree of Latitude. Afterwards it goes on towards the North, verging a little westwardly, as far as the Shore of Yambaak, whose Longitude is sixty-four Degrees, and Latitude twenty-six. From thence it runs wholly between the West and the North, till having left Madian, it arrives at Ailah, which is under the fifty-fifth Degree of Longitude, and the twenty-ninth Degree of Latitude. Almoshtarec says in the Kanum, that the Longitude of Ailah is fifty-six Degrees, and forty Minutes, and its Latitude is twenty-eight Degrees fifty Minutes. From Ailah this Sea bends about towards the South, as far as Altour, which is the Mountain of Sinai, which by a very high Promontory stretching out into this Sea, divides it into two Arms. Thence turning about towards the North, it arrives again at Kolsum, whose Position we have already determin'd. Kolsum and Ailah are situated at the two Ends of this Sea; Ailah at the Extremity of the eastern Arm, and Kolsum towards the Extremity of the western Arm. Mount Altour or Sinai is situated between these two Cities, upon a Kind of Peninsula, surrounded by the Sea towards the East, West, and South, and joined to the Land only towards the North.

Every one knows the famous Miracle of the Passage over the Red-sea, when the Lord open'd this Sea, dry'd it up, and made the Israelites pass through it dry-shod, to the Number of six hundred thousand Men, without reckoning the old Men, Women, or Children. The Rabbins and many of the antient Fathers,[3] relying upon these Words of Psalm cxxxvi. 13. To him which divided the Red-sea into Parts. Qui divisit mare rubrum in divisiones, have maintain'd, that the Red-sea was so divided, as to make twelve Passages; so that each of the twelve Tribes pass'd through a different Passage. But other Authors[4] have advanced, that Moses having lived a long time near the Red-sea, in the Country of Midian, had observed that it kept its regular Ebbing and Flowing like the Ocean; so that taking the Advantage of the Time of the Ebb, he led the Hebrews over; but the Egyptians not knowing the Nature of the Sea, and rashly entering it just before the Return of the Tide, were all swallowed up and drowned, as Moses relates it. 'Twas thus that the Priests of Memphis explain'd it, according to the Report of Artapanus; which Opinion has been adopted by a great Number of the Moderns.



[Joseph. Antiq. l. 2. c. ult. Thom. in 1 Cor. x.] Josephus having related the History of the Passage through the Red-sea, as it is told by Moses, adds, that this ought not to be look'd on as impossible, since God might as well have open'd a Passage for the Israelites thro' the Waters, as a long time afterwards he open'd one for Alexander and his Macedonians, when they pass'd thro' the Sea of Pamphilia. But the Historians,[5] that have mention'd this Passage of the Macedonians, assure us, that they enter'd into the Sea, and coasted the Shore where it was not deep; so that the Soldiers marched all Day in the Water, which was not above their Middle. Arrian says, that this is unpassable when the South Winds blow; but the Wind having changed on a sudden, gave the Soldiers an Opportunity of passing without Danger. 'Twas perhaps this Reflection of Josephus that gave Occasion to some of the Antients to think,[6] that the Israelites did not pass thro' the Red-sea from Shore to Shore, but only coasted it, and during the Time of the Flux ascended a little from the Place they were in towards the Shore upon the higher Ground; so that they made a Kind of Semicircle in the Sea. This Opinion is also espoused by Thomas Aquinas, Tostat, Paul de Burgos, Grotius, Genebrard, Vatablus, and some Rabbins.

But not to enter into a nice Discussion of all these Opinions, not to undertake to refute them particularly, and not to deny that the Red-sea may have its Ebbing and Flowing; we need only alledge the Text of Moses and other sacred Authors, who have mention'd this miraculous Passage: We may see plainly that no other Account is supportable, but that which supposes the Hebrews to pass through the Sea from Shore to Shore, in a vast space of dry Ground, which was left void by the Waters at their retiring. Lift thou up thy Rod, and stretch out thine Hand over the Sea, and divide it; and the Children of Israel shall go on dry Ground through the midst of the Sea. And Moses stretched out his Hand over the Sea, and the Lord caused the Sea to go back by a strong East-wind all that Night, and made the Sea dry Land, and the Waters were divided. And the Children of Israel went into the midst of the Sea upon the dry Ground, and the Waters were a Wall unto them on their right Hand and on their left. When the Egyptians likewise were enter'd into the Sea, the Lord said unto Moses; Stretch out thine Hand over the Sea, that the Waters may come again upon the Egyptians, upon their Chariots, and upon their Horsemen. And Moses stretched forth his Hand over the Sea, and the Sea returned to his Strength when the Morning appeared, and the Egyptians fled against it, and the Lord overthrew the Egyptians in the midst of the Sea. But the Children of Israel walked upon dry Land in the midst of the Sea, and the Waters were a Wall unto them on the right Hand and on the left.

[Ex. xv. 8. Ps. lxxviii. 13. Psal. cxiv. 3, 5. Psa. lxxvii. 19. Isai. lxiii. 11, &c. Habak. iii. 15.] And in the Canticle that Moses sung at their coming out of the Red-sea, he says; With the Blast of thy Nostrils (or, with the Wind of thy Fury) the Waters were gathered together; the Flood stood upright as an Heap, and the Depths were congealed in the Heart of the Sea. And the Psalmist says; He divided the Sea, and caused them to pass through, and he made the Waters to stand as on a Heap. He says elsewhere, that the Sea fled at the Sight of God; that the Lord made himself a Path in the Sea; that he walked in the midst of the Waters. Isaiah says, that the Lord divided the Waves before his People, that he conducted them through the Bottom of the Abyss, as a Horse is led through the midst of a Field. Habakkuk says, that the Lord made himself a Road to drive his Chariot and Horses cross the Sea, across the mud of great Waters. Lastly, the Author of the Book of Wisdom says, that the dry Land appear'd all on a sudden in a Place where Water was before; that a free Passage was open'd in a Moment through the [Wisd. xix. 7, 8. See also Wisd. x. 17, 18.] midst of the Red-sea; and that a green Field was seen in the midst of the Abyss, &c. See the Commentators upon Exod. xiv, M. le Clerc's Dissertation upon the Passage over the Red-sea, and that which we have compos'd upon the same Subject, prefix'd to our Commentary upon Exodus. 'Tis thought the Place where the Hebrews pass'd the Red-sea, is two or three Leagues below its northern Point, at the Place call'd Kolsum, or Chysma, where some of the Antients[7] have testify'd, that in their Time might still be seen the Ruins of the Wheels of Pharaoh's Chariots, and evident Marks of those Chariots.

The Dead-sea, Salt-sea, Eastern-sea, Sea of Sodom, Sea of the Wilderness, or of the Plain. This is the Lake Asphaltites, to which Josephus allows five hundred and fourscore Furlongs in Length, and one hundred and fifty Furlongs in breadth, that is to say, about twenty-five Leagues long, and five or six broad. The Jordan empties itself into the Dead-sea, and we are assured, that the Salt and Bitumen, with which the Waters are impregnated, make them so pungent and briny, that no Fish can live there. This Sea has taken Possession of that Part of the Country that was formerly occupy'd by the Cities of Sodom, Gomorrah, Admah, and Zeboim, and their Territory, which was heretofore as the Paradise or Garden of the Lord. This Sea is properly no more than a Lake, having no sensible Communication with any other Sea. See what we have observed under the Article ASPHALTITES. The Name of Dead-sea is not read in the Text of Scripture; it is probable this Name was given it, because nothing can long continue in it alive. The Name of Salt-sea, or Sea of Salt, is of the same Signification as the Sea of Asphaltites; for under the Word SALT the Hebrews comprehend Asphaltus, Bitumen, and Nitre. The Name of the Eastern-sea is given it, because of its Situation, being opposite to the Western-sea, or the Mediterranean. Lastly, the Name of the Sea of the Wilderness, or of the Plain, in Hebrew, Arabah, comes from Araboth, desart Plains which are beyond Jordan, to the West and North of the Sea we are now speaking of.

The Sea of Jazar; this is only a Lake or Pool that lay near this City. See JAZER.

The brazen or molten Sea that Solomon made for the Temple; it had ten Cubits in Diameter from Side to Side, and therefore about thirty Cubits in Circumference. Taking the Hebrew Cubit at twenty [1 Kings vii. 23,26, &c.] Inches and an half, the ten Cubits make seventeen Foot and an Inch; and the thirty Cubits make one and fifty Foot and three Inches. This Vessel was round, and of the depth of five Cubits. The Brim was adorn'd with an Edging, and embellish'd with Lilies, and Knobs and Oxe's Heads in [The Bath contains about 7 Gall. 4 Pints.] Demi-relief. It contain'd three thousand Baths, as is said 2 Chron. iv. 5. or two thousand Baths, as mention'd 1 Kings vii. 26. This may be reconciled by saying, that the Cup or Bowl contain'd two thousand Baths, and the Foot, which was hollow, contain'd a thousand more. Thus this great Vessel was but of one Capacity within, tho' it seem'd without to be double. This Sea was supported by its Foot now mention'd, which was as a thick hollow Column; besides which it was supported by twelve Oxen of Brass, disposed into four Groups, by three in a Group, and leaving four Passages between, by which they went to draw Water by three Cocks fix'd to the Foot of this Vessel. See 1 Kings vii. 23, &c. 2 Chron. iv. 2, 3, 4, 5, &c.

The Sea of Egypt, mention'd in Isaiah xi. 15. means that Part of the Mediterranean that waters the Coasts of Egypt.

The Tongue of the Sea. The Hebrews and Arabians call that a Tongue of the Sea which runs into the Land; as we call that a Tongue or Neck of Land, that advances into the Sea. See Joshua xv. 5. xviii. 19. Isai. xi. 15.

Seal

[Esth. ii. 12.] SEAL, sigillum, signum, signaculum. The antient Hebrews wore their Seals or Signets in Rings on their Fingers, or in Bracelets on their Arms. Haman seal'd the Decree of King Abasuerus against the Jews with the King's Seal. The Priests of Bel desired the King to seal up the Door of the Temple of this God with his own Seal, to convince him that they did not go in there by Night. [Bell. ii. Cant. viii. 6.] The Spouse in the Canticles wishes, that his Spouse would wear him as a Signet upon her Arm: Pone me ut signaculum super brachium tuum.

[Plin. l. 33. c. 1.] Pliny observes, that the Use of Seals or Signets was yet rare at the Time of the Trojan War, and that they were put to the Shift of shutting up their Letters with several Knots: But among the Hebrews they are much more antient. Judah the Son of Jacob left his Seal, his Bracelet, and his [Genesis xxxviii. 25. Deuter. xxxii. 34. Job ix. 7.] Staff, as a Pledge with Tamar, whom he did not know. Moses says in Deuteronomy, that God keeps seal'd up in his Treasuries, under his own Seal, the Instruments of his Vengeance. Job says, that he keeps the Stars as under his Seal; that he is Master of them, and allows them to appear when he thinks proper. And elsewhere; My Transgression [Job xiv. 17.] is seal'd up in a Bag.

[Isai. viii. 16, 17.] When they intended to seal up a Letter, or a Book, they wrapp'd it up with Flax or Thread, and then apply'd the Wax to it, and afterwards the Seal. The Lord commanded Isaiah to tie up or wrap up the Book wherein his Prophecies were written, and to seal them up till the Time he should bid him to publish them. Liga testimonium, & signa legem in discipulis meis.

He gives the same Command to Daniel. [Dan. xii. 4] Tu autem Daniel, signa sermones, & claude librum usque ad tempus. The Book that was shewn to St. John the Evangelist in the Revelations, was seal'd with seven Seals, [Rev. v. 1. vi. 1, 2, &c.] and written within and without. No one durst open it, or explain it to him, but the Lamb that was slain from the Beginning of the World. It was a rare thing to put such a Number of Seals; but that insinuated the great Importance and Secrecy of the Matter.

In civil Contracts they generally made two Originals, one continued open, and was kept by him for whose Interest the Contract[1] Contract was made: The other was seal'd up, and deposited in some publick Office. It was seal'd up to prevent any Fraud or Falsification. Jeremiah bought a Field in his Country of Anathoth, of one call'd Hananeel; he himself wrote the Contract, call'd [Jerem. xxxii. 10, 11, 14.] Witnesses, and seal'd it up: He put it into the Hands of his Disciple Baruch, and said to him; Take these Evidences, this Evidence of the Purchase, both which is sealsd, and this Evidence which is open, and put them in an earthen Vessel, that they may continue many Days. The Grecians did in the same manner with their Writings: They preserved the Originals of their Contracts, and other Instruments of any Consequence, in Vessels of Brass or Earth. Seat SEAT. The Seat of Moses, upon which the Scribes and Pharisees sat, is to express the Authority of the Doctors of the Law, and the Office of Teaching which was granted to them, or which they took upon themselves. Our Lord commanded that they should be heard and respected, but he forbid that their Actions should be made Precedents and Examples.

[Psal. I. 1.] The Seat of the Scorners, of the Pestilent, of which there is mention in the first Psalm, stands for scandalous Discourse, the licentious Manners of Libertines, who corrupt as much by their scandalous Example and Conduct, as by their loose Principles, all those that hear them and keep them Company. Instead of Pestilent, the Hebrew says Scorners, Revilers, those pretended Free-thinkers, that deride the Credulity and Simplicity of plain and honest Minds. Solomon often speaks of them in his Proverbs[1], and takes great Care to secure his Pupil against the Strokes of their dangerous Tongues.

The Seat of Honours, mention'd by Ecclesiasticus [Ecclus. vii. 4.] , the chief Places in the Synagogues, which the Pharisees assum'd to [Matth. xxiii. 6.] themselves; the Seat that was prepar'd for Job in the Assemblies, the Seat or Throne of the King, and of God, are clear enough of themselves. The Throne belongs to God, and to the King, the Seat of Honour to the Friends of the King, and to great Men. The Seat of the Doctors belongs to such as make it their Profession to teach and instruct.

Sect

SECT. This Latin Word has the same Signification as the Greek Word Hæresis, tho' the Sound be not so odious. Among the Jews were known four several Sects, which were distinguish'd by the Singularity of their Practices and Opinions, and yet continued united in Communion with each other, and with the Body of their Nation. These Sects are those of the Pharisees, the Saducees, the Essenians, and the Herodians, of which we have already spoke under their several Articles. At the Beginning of Christianity they would have had the Religion of Jesus Christ to pass as a new Sect of Judaism. Tertullus the Advocate for [Act. xxiv. 5.] the Jews, accusing St. Paul before Fœlix, says, that he was Chief of the seditious Sect of the Nazarenes; and the Jews of Rome said to St. Paul, when he arrived in this [Act.xxviii. 22. 2 Pet. ii. 1—10.] City, that as to this Sect, it was every where spoke against. St. Peter in his second Epistle, foretels to the Faithful, that false Teachers should arise among them, who privily shall bring in damnable Heresies (or Sects) even denying the Lord that bought them, and bring upon themselves swift Destruction. He adds, that these People being great Lovers of themselves, blaspheme sound Doctrine, and are not afraid to introduce new Sects; but here the Word Sect is taken in the same Sense as Heresy.

[1 Cor. i. 12. iii. 22, &c.] What probably gave Birth to the different Sects among the Jews, was what they observed to obtain among the Greeks, whose Philosophers were divided into different Sects. For Example, the Academicks, the Stoicks, the Peripateticks, the Cynicks, the Epicureans, &c. The Jews, in Imitation of the Greeks, began to divide themselves into several Sects, about the Time of the Maccabees. It seems as if the Corinthians had a mind to introduce something like this into Christianity, when they boasted, I am a Disciple of Peter, I of Paul, I of Apollos. Which Abuse St. Paul with great Vehemence corrects in his first Epistle to the Corinthians. Even at this Day, in the Christian and Catholick Church, we labour under a kind of Sects in Philosophy, and even in Divinity, in respect of some Questions that the Church has not decided, and which it leaves to the Liberty of the Schools. Thus we see in Philosophy Peripateticks, Scotists, Nominals, Cartesians, Gassendists, &c. and in Divinity Thomists, Augustinians, Scotists, Molinists, Congruists.

Seeing

SEEING, to See. This is said, not only of the Sense of Vision, by which we perceive external Objects, but also of inward Perception, of the Knowledge of spiritual Things, and even of that supernatural Sight of hidden Things, of Prophecy, of Visions, of Ecstasies. Whence it is that formerly they were call'd Seers, who afterwards were call'd Nabi, or Prophets: And that Prophecies were call'd Visions; Visio Amos, Visio Abdiæ, &c.

Moreover, the Verb to See, is used to express [Exod. xx. 18.] all kind of Sensations. It is said in Exodus, that the Israelites saw Voices, Thunder, Lightning, the Sound of the Trumpet, and the whole Mountain of Sinai cover'd [Aug. ep. 167. nov. edit. c. 1. p. 476.] with Clouds, or Smoke. And Saint Austin observes, that the Verb to See, is imputed to all the five natural Senses; to see, to hear, to smell, to taste, to touch: He says, Non enim tantum dicimus, vide quid luceat, sed etiam, vide quid sonet, vide quid oleat, vide quid sapiat, vide quid caleat.

[Psal.xxvi. 13.] To see Good, or Goods, is, to enjoy them: Credo videre bona Domini in terra viventium; I hope that God will bring me back into my own Country, into the Land of [Job vii. 7.] Judea, and that I shall live there in Peace and Prosperity. Job says, Non revertetur oculus meus, ut videat bona; I shall die, and see no more; I shall no longer enjoy the [Psal. iv. 6.] good Things of this World. And the Psalmist says, There be many that say, Who will shew us any Good? Can we hope still [Esth. i. 10, 14.] to enjoy any Happiness in this Life?

To see the Face of the King, to be of his Houshold, to approach near him. The Kings of Persia, under the Pretence of maintaining that Respect and Majesty that was due to them, seldom permitted their Subjects to see them, and hardly ever shew'd themselves in Publick: None but their most intimate Friends, or their familiar Domesticks, had the Advantage of beholding their Faces. Erant primi & proximi qui videbant faciem Regis, says Esther. Frequent Allusion is made to this Custom in Scripture, when mention is made of the seven principal Angels that have the Honour of seeing the Face of the Lord, and of appearing in his Presence. See Tobit xii. 15. Ego sum Raphael Angelus, unus de septem qui astamus ante Dominum. See Rev. i. 4.

Seir (I)

I. SEIR, or Sehir, the Horite, whose [Gen.xiv.6. & xxxvi. 20. Deut. ii. 12.] Dwelling was to the East and South of the Dead-sea, in the Mountains of Seir, where at first reign'd the Descendants of Seir the Horite, of whom Moses gives us the List in Gen. xxxvi. 20, 21, — 30. See also 1 Chron. 38, 39, &c. The Posterity of Esau afterwards were in Possession of the Mountains [Gen.xxxii. 3.& xxxiii. 14. & xxxvi. 8,9. Deut. ii. 12.] of Seir, and Esau himself dwelt there when Jacob return'd from Mesopotamia. Moses acquaints us, that Esau made War with the Horites, and utterly destroyed them; but we know none of the Particulars of these Wars. As to Seir the Father of the Horites, he must needs be very ancient, since the Horites or Chorites his Children were already a powerful and numerous People in [Gen.xiv.6.] the Time of Abraham, before the Birth of Isaac, when Chedorlaomer and his Confederates came to make War with the Kings of Pentapolis[1]. 'Tis without good Reason, what some have advanced, that Esau himself had born the Name of Seir, or the Hairy[2]; for he was never known by this Name, tho' his Country is often call'd the Country of Seir, because of the first Inhabitants that dwelt there.

Seir (II)

II. SEIR, or, the Mountains of Seir: They were to the East and South of the [Deut. i. 2.] Dead-sea. Moses tells us, there were eleven Days Journey between Horeb and Kadesh-barnea, by the Way of Seir; or rather, going round the Mountains of Seir, Deut. i. 1, 4, 5, 8. Deborah, in her Canticle, says, that the Lord is come forth from Seir, Judges v. 4. Moses affirms, that the Lord appeared to his People at Seir, at Sinai, and at Paran, Deut. xxxiii. 2. This proves, that the Mountains of Seir were to the South of the Dead-sea, inclining towards Elath and Esiongeber upon the Red-sea.

[Gen. xxxii. 3. & xxxiii. 16.] Jacob, at his Return from his Journey to Mesopotamia, fearing that Esau should come and set upon his Company, sent to him at Seir; and Esau soon after came to meet him, between Peniel and Jordan, and returned the same Day to Seir: Therefore he must live not far off, in the Mountains which are to the East of the Dead-sea. Joshua seems to say, that they stretched out still farther towards the North, since he gives an Account, that he [Josh. xi. 17. & xii. 7.] made a Conquest of all the Country, from Seir, as far as Baal-gad, at the Foot of Libanus, and of Mount Hermon, and that he distributed all this Country among the Children of Israel. But it is known, that the Israelites had no Possessions beyond the Country of Moab to the East, nor to the South. Lastly, Moab and Mount Seir are frequently [2 Chron. xx. 10, 22, 23. Ezek. xxv. 8.] mention'd together; but Moab inhabited to the East of the Dead-sea. See IDUMEA.

Seirath

SEIRATH. After that Ehud had kill'd Eglon King of Moab, who oppress'd the Israelites [Judg. iii. 26.] , he went to Seirath, which probably was towards Bethel or Gilgal, near to a Place where there were Images or Idols: Pertransivit [פסיליםPesilim, Sculptura.] locum Idolorum, unde reversus fuerat, venitque in Seirath[1]. There is some likelihood, that these Engravings or Inscriptions that were at Seirath, are those that Josephus would insinuate, when he says, that in Syria [Jos. Antiq. l. 1. c. 2.] there were Pillars full of Inscriptions, which had been there from before the Time of the Deluge, and which had been made by the Children of Seth. This Conjecture is proposed and admitted by several learned Men, as Vossius, Huet, Valois. See our Commentary upon Genesis vi. 13.

This is what Josephus relates, concerning [Jos. Antiq. l. 1. c. 3.] the Pillars set up in this Place; “ The Posterity of Seth, having heard that Adam “ had foretold, that the World should one “ time be destroyed by a Deluge of Water, “ and at another time by Fire; they resolved to preserve the Discoveries they " had made in Astronomy, and in the " Knowledge of heavenly Things: Therefore they erected two Columns, one of " Stone, and the other of Brick, that if " the Deluge should destroy that of Brick, " at least that of Stone might remain, to " inform Mankind of what they should " transmit to Posterity. And it is said, says " Josephus, that the Column of Stone " which they erected is still in Being in " Seirath, or Syrias. "

This Relation of Josephus is confirm'd by Manetho,[2] who says, that the second Mercury King of Egypt, surnamed Trismegistus, translated, or rather transcribed into the ordinary Letters, what the first Mercury, or Thoth, had formerly caused to be engraven in Hieroglyphick Characters, upon Columns that he had caused to be set up in Syriad. If Josephus took what he related from Manetho, he has plainly corrupted it, since both the Thoths, or Mercuries, are much later than the Deluge; but he might have had this Tradition by some other Canal. Monf. de [Ammian. l. 23.] Valois, in his Notes upon Ammianus Marcellinus, conjectures, that instead of Syriadike ge, as it is read in Manetho, it ought to be read Syringice, the same as in Ammianus Marcellinus, who says, that the Antients, foreseeing the Deluge that was about to come, and fearing that the Knowledge of their Ceremonies would then be lost, dug subterraneous Places which they call'd Syringas, with a vast deal of Labour, and in different Places, and upon the Rocks of these Cavities they engraved several Figures of Animals, which they call'd hieroglyphical Letters. Pausanias says, that there were Syringes [Pausan. l. 1. p. 78.] , or subterraneous Caverns, at Thebes in Egypt, on the other Side of the Nile, not far from that Statue at Memnon, which render'd an harmonious Sound at Sun-rising.

From all these Passages thus set together, and compared one with another, it is a very hard Matter to get a distinct Knowledge, either of these ancient hieroglyphick Inscriptions, mention'd by Ammianus Marcellinus and Manetho, and which one of 'em places in Syrias, and the other in the Syringes in Thebais. The Invention of Letters, and particularly of the Hieroglyphicks in Egypt, is doubtless more modern than the Deluge; the two Thoths also lived after this famous Event; but what Josephus tells us, must have happen'd before the Deluge. And if it is true, that the Stone Pillars he mentions were in Palestine and at Seyrath, they must be different from those of Manetho: So that nothing certain can be collected from all this.

Selah

[סלהSelah. LXX. Διάψαλμα.] SELAH. This Hebrew Word is found seventy times in the Hebrew Text of the Psalms, and thrice in Habakkuk. The Septuagint read it still oftener, since they have put Diapsalma in some Places where we don't find Selah in the Hebrew. Those Interpreters, a Symmachus and Theodotion, generally translate Selah by Diapsalma, which signifies a Rest or Pause in Singing. Diapsalma interpositum in canendo silentium, says St. Austin: Or a Change of Tone, according to Theodoret[1] and Suidas. Others will have it, that it marks the Beginning of a new Sense, or a new Measure of Verses: Quidam Diapsalma dixerunt esse [Hieron. ad Marcellam.] *commutationem metri, alii pausationem spiritûs, non-nulli alterius sens*ûs exordium, sunt qui rythmi distinctionem, says St. Jerom. He adds, that Selah joins that which follows to that which goes before, and shews, that what has been said, deserves to be always remember'd: *Ex quo animadvertimus hoc verbum superiora pariter & inferiora connectere, aut cert*è dicere sempiterna esse quæ dicta sunt. He follows Aquila, in the fifth and sixth Edition, in translating Selah by for ever.

Some Antients have thought,[2] that Selah shew'd the Intermission or Cessation of the actual Inspiration of the Psalmist, or of the internal Motions of his Devotion[3]. Saint Hilary and Cassiodorus think,[4] that Diapsalma points out a Change of the Voice, or of the Person, or of the Tune, in the Psalms. Some Moderns pretend,[5] that Selah has no Signification, and that it is only a Note of the ancient Musick, whose Use is no longer known. And indeed, Selah may be taken away from all the Places where it is found, without interrupting the Sense of the Psalm: It only perplexes the Text, instead of making it any thing clearer. Others say,[6] it was a Note which shew'd the Elevation of the Voice; and that in these Places the Reader should cry out, and make an Exclamation. Aben-ezra teaches, that it is as the Conclusion of a Prayer, and answers nearly in Signification to Amen, or, So be it. At the End of their Epitaphs and Books the Jews generally put Selah, Finis, So be it.

We make no doubt but that Selah intimates the End, or a Pause, and that this is its proper Signification: But as we do not always find it at the End of the Sense, nor at the End of a Canticle, we guess that the ancient Musicians sometimes put Selah in the Margin of their Psalters, to shew where the Pause was to be made, and where the Tune ended. Just as in the old Books of the Gospels,[7] which were read solemnly in the Church, they writ upon the Margin, either at Length, or with a Contraction, the Greek Word Telos, or the Latin Word Finis, to shew the Place where the Deacon was to make an End of the Lesson: For at that time the Text was read in Books which contain'd the four Evangelists at Length. Or else the ancient Hebrews sung pretty nearly as the Arabians do at this Day,[8] with great Pauses, ending all at once, and also beginning again all at once. For this Reason, it was necessary, in publick Ceremonies, to mark in the Margin of the Psalm the Place of the Pause, and of the End, that the whole Choir might rest at once, and begin again at the same time.

He began to reign in the Year of the World 3682, one Year after the Death of Alexander the Great, and reign'd for forty-two Years, dying in the Year 3724, before Christ 276, before the Vulgar Era 280. We do not see that his History has any Relation to that of the Jews; since in his Time Judea was under the Jurisdiction of Ptolemy the Son of Lagus King of Egypt. Yet Josephus says, [Jos. Antiq. l. 12. c. 3.] that he shew'd great Favour to the Jews in his Territory, and granted them the Right of Freedom in such Cities as he built, and particularly in Antioch the capital City of Syria.

This History may be seen under the Title HELIODORUS, and in the Second Book of the Maccabees, chap. iii. 3, &c. where it is said, that under the Reign of this Prince Judea enjoy'd a profound Peace, insomuch that Seleucus himself furnish'd the Sacrifices of the Temple at his own Cost and Charge.

Selling

SELLING. The Hebrews might sell their own Liberty; Fathers had a Power of selling the Liberty of their Children: Si [Lev. xxv. 39.] paupertate compulsus vendiderit se tibi frater tuus, non eum opprimes servitute famulorum; If your Brother sells himself to you because of his Poverty, you shall not oppress him, nor sell him again as a Slave: He shall abide with you only as a Workman for Hire. Maimonides says, that an Hebrew could not sell his Liberty, but in [Exod. xxi. 7.] case of extreme Necessity. If a Man sell his Daughter to be a Maid-servant, she shall not go out as the Men-servants do. Her Master shall not dismiss her, as another Slave is dismiss'd at the Sabbatical Year. He shall take her as his Wife, or shall marry her to his Son. If he cares to do neither of these, he shall set her at Liberty.

[Mat. xviii. 25. 2 Kings iv. 1.] They sold also insolvent Debtors, and even their Children, as we find by the Gospel, and by the Books of the Kings. Sometimes they sold Free-men for Slaves, as Joseph was sold by his Brethren. This Crime was call'd Plagium, and the Law [Exod. xxi. 16. Deut. xxiv. 7.] punish'd it with Death: Qui furatus fuerit hominem, & vendiderit eum, convictus noxæ, morte morietur. The Jews confine this to the Theft of a Man of their own Nation. Esau sold his Birthright; and for [Hebr. xii. 16.] this, it is thought, that St. Paul calls him profane. [Isai. l. 1 Zech. xi. 3 Joel iii. 8 Baruch. vi. 6. 1 Kings xxi. 25. Macc. i. 16.] It is said in the Prophets, that the Lord had sold his People to their Enemies; as a Master parts with a vicious Slave, to punish him for his Infidelity.

Thou hast sold thy self to work Evil in the Sight of the Lord, said the Prophet Elijah to Ahab; Qui venundatus est, ut faceret malum in conspectu Domini. And the wicked Israelites mention'd in the Maccabees; Venundati ut facerent malum: They sold themselves as Slaves to Sin, being Subjects to all their bad Inclinations, as Slaves are to their Masters. These Expressions were very familiar to the Hebrews. See Judith vii. 13.

[Rom. vii. 15.] St. Paul, speaking of himself in like manner, or rather speaking of all Mankind in his own Person, makes no scruple to say, Ego autem carnalis sum, venundatus sub peccato; I am altogether carnal; and sold under Sin; the Slave of Concupiscence and of Sin by Nature, but set at Liberty from Sin by Baptism, and fortify'd against Concupiscence by the Grace of Jesus Christ.

Semechon

SEMECHON, or Samechon, a Lake through which the Jordan passes; it is sixty Furlongs long, and thirty broad; that is, about seven thousand five hundred Paces long, and three thousand seven hundred and fifty broad. Some think this is the same Lake that, in Joshua, is call'd the Waters of Merom, or, the Upper Waters; and in Judges, the Canton of Merome[1]. But we think Merom to be near Dothaim, and far enough from Semechon. See EUSEBIUS, and our Commentary upon Josh. xi. 5. 'Tis not known whence the Name Semechon was taken: Some derive it from Samach, which in Arabick signifies a Fish; others, from the Chaldee Word samak, which signifies red, as if the Waters were reddish and turbid. Certain it is, that there was marshy Ground about this Lake: The City of Hazor, where Jabin a King of the Canaanites reign'd, was upon the Side of the Lake Semechon; and afterwards the City of Seleucia was there.

[Joseph. de Bello, l. 4. c. 1.] The Lake Semechon must be pretty near the City of Dan, and the Fountains of Jordan, and at one hundred and twenty Furlongs from the Lake of Tiberias, towards the South. Josephus says, that the Marshes of this Lake extended even as far as Daphne. But there is great Probability, that, instead of Daphne, it should be read Dane; for he says in the same Place, that the Waters of Jordan fall into this Pool, below the Temple of the Golden Calf. Now it is known, that the Temple of the Golden Calf was at Dan. It is pretty extraordinary, that this Lake should never be took Notice of, or mention'd in any Passage of the Scripture, as we know of. 'Tis thought that Pliny intended to speak of this Lake, when he says, that there is a Lake at one hundred and fifty Furlongs [Plin. l. 12. c. 22.] from the Mediterranean, not far from Libanus, where the sweet-scented Reed grows.

Semiramis

SEMIRAMIS Daughter of Dercetis, or of the Syrian Venus, a famous Queen of Assyria, the Wife of Ninus, who for a long time govern'd the Empire of Assyria, during the Minority of her Son Ninias. She undertook several Wars, which succeeded very fortunately, and executed many great Works at Babylon, and elsewhere. [Herodot. l.1. c.184.] Herodotus speaks of several Ramparts and Moles that she had thrown up near Babylon. [Diodor. l. 1. Bibloth. Trog. seu Justin. l. 1. Strab. Geograph. l.2,16.] Diodorus Siculus, Trogus, Strabo, and many others, ascribe to her the Honour of building the Walls of Babylon; but the more exact Chronologers believe, that Semiramis did nothing at Babylon; and it is very probable, that her other Actions have been extravagantly enlarged upon. However this be, as this Princess is no-where named in Scripture, we shall content our selves with observing, that she began to reign at Nineveh in the Year of the World 2789, before Christ 1211, before the Vulgar Era 1215, about the Beginning of the High-priest Eli's Administration; and that she died after two and forty Years Reign, in the sixty-second Year of her Age, in the Year of the World 2831, before Christ 1169, before the Vulgar Era 1173. Ninias her Son kill'd her, out of Horror at the Proposal she made him, of Lying with her. Justin. l. 1. Seneca SENECA : Lucius Anneus Seneca, a Native of Corduba, a Disciple of Sotio the Stoick, Preceptor to Nero, and famous for his Writings, would have no Place in this Dictionary, but on Account of certain Letters, that are extant, which bear the Title of St. Paul to Seneca, and of Seneca to St. [Hieron. in CataScript. Eccles. Aug. Ep. 153. nov. Edit.] Paul. St. Jerom makes mention of them, and this determined him to place Seneca among the Ecclesiastical Writers. St. Austin also mentions these Epistles, and several modern Authors after him. They are found printed in many Places; and James le Fevre of Estaples thought them genuine, publish'd them with those of St. Paul, and wrote a Comment upon them. Sixtus Sinensis, in his Bibliotheca Sacra, has wrote in Defence of them, as also Antonius Posfevinus, Alphonsus Salmeron, Franciscus Bivarius, Jacobus Pamelius, Margarin de la Biggue. Others[1] have suspected, that perhaps heretofore there might have been true Epistles of St. Paul to Seneca, and of Seneca to St. Paul, which were known to St. Jerom and St. Austin; but being since lost, some Impostor has compos'd others in their Place, which are those we now have. But as no Proof is given of this Conjecture, we readily acknowledge our selves to be of the Number of those, who admit that the Epistles we now have, are the same that were known to the Antients, and which, however, are not the better for that, nor do they deserve any Consideration. The Reader may consult such as have written Ecclesiastical Bibliotheca's, particularly Monf. Fabricius in his Apocryphal Works of the New Testament, tom. 1. p. 880, &c. where he exhibits the Judgment of several learned Men concerning these Letters, before the Edition that he has made of them.

Sennacherib

SENNACHERIB, King of Assyria, Son and Successor of Shalmaneser; he began to reign in the Year of the World 3290, before Christ 710, before the vulgar Era 714. He reign'd but four Years, having been kill'd by his own Sons in the Year of the World 3294, as we shall see afterwards. Hezekiah, King of Judah, having shook [2 Kings xviii.7,13.] off the Yoke of the Assyrians, which King Ahaz, his Father, had suffer'd to be put on [2 Kings xvi. 11. 2 Chron. xxviii.20, 21.] by Tiglath-pilneser King of Assyria; Sennacherib had Notice of the Revolt of this Prince, marched an Army against him,[1] and took all the strong Cities of Judah. Hezekiah seeing that he had nothing left but Jerusalem, and which, perhaps, he found Difficulty enough to secure, sent Ambassadors to Sennacherib, who was then engaged at the Siege of Lachish, and told him; " I have committed a Fault; but withdraw your Army out of my Territories, and I will bear whatever you shall impose upon me." Sennacherib demanded of him three hundred Talents of Silver, and thirty Talents of Gold; which Hezekiah remitted to him soon after. But yet the King of Assyria would not leave him for all this.

He sent from Lachish to Jerusalem three of his chief Officers, Tartan, Rab-saris, and Rab -shakeh, to summon Hezekiah to surrender himself. Rab-shakeh, among his other Discourse, utter'd many Blasphemies against God, and many Insults against Hezekiah. For this may be seen the Articles of RAB-SHAKEH and HEZEKIAH. In the mean Time Sennacherib quitted the Siege of Lachish, and apply'd himself to that of Libnah. Rab-shakeh [2 Kings xix. 8.] having given him an Account of what he had said to Hezekiah, and having told him that this Prince return'd him no Answer, Sennacherib wrote a Letter to him, in which he urged him to return to his Duty, and to follow the Example of so many other Nations that had submitted to his Empire. At the same Time he went away with all his Army, to meet Tirhakah, King of Ethiopia, or of Cush, who was marching towards him to give him Battle. But the Lord sent a destroying Angel against the Army of Sennacherib, who put to Death in one Night an hundred and eighty-five thousand Men. Sennacherib rising next Morning, and finding himself almost [2 Kings xix. 35.] alone, was forced to return with all speed to Niniveh. But he did not live long there in Peace; for while he was paying his Adorations to his God Nisroch in his Temple, his two Sons Adrammelech and Sharezer slew him with their Swords, and then fled into Armenia. Esar-haddon his Son reign'd in his stead, in the Year of the World 3294, before Christ 706, befor the vulgar Era 710.

[Tob. i. 21.] Tobit acquaints us, that when Sennacherib return'd to Niniveh, he began to persecute the captive Israelites whom he look'd upon as the Cause of his Disgrace. But five and forty Days were hardly over, according to the Latin Text, or five and fifty according to the Greek, but this Prince was put to Death by his own Sons, as has been now related. The Rabbins think,[2] that what determin'd Sennacherib's Sons to use him thus, was a Resolution he had made, as they were inform'd, of sacrificing them to his Idol. Wherefore they thought it best to prevent him.

As to the Defeat of his Army by the destroying Angel, our Dissertation may be consulted upon this Subject, prefix'd to the Commentary upon Isaiah. The Rabbins believe,[3] that Fire fell upon them from Heaven, and reduced their Bodies to Ashes, without doing any Harm to their Cloaths, which fell to the Possession of the Israelites, as they pretend. They found this Tradition upon a Passage of Isaiah. Therefore shall the Lord, the Lord of Hosts, send among his fat ones Leanness, and under his Glory he shall kindle a burning, like the burning of a Fire. By Glory, they say, is meant their magnificent Habits. Other Hebrews[4] had told St. Jerome, that the Angel Gabriel was sent forth among the Assyrians, to destroy them. Some fansy[5] it was the Plague, or some internal Distemper, that kill'd them all in one Night. Others will have it, that this vast Army was disturb'd by a Tempest, and that being seized by a panick Fear, and mistaking each other for Enemies, they turn'd their Arms against themselves, and kill'd one another.

Herodotus speaking of Sennacherib, relates his Disaster in a very different Manner from what we have here seen. He quotes the Authority of the Egyptian Priests, who had told it him in this Manner. Sethon King of Egypt, and Priest of Vulcan, having been attacked by Sennacherib King of the Arabians and the Assyrians, and seeing himself deserted by his own Soldiers, address'd himself to Vulcan, and begg'd of him some speedy Assistance. Vulcan appear'd to him the Night following, and promis'd to help him. Sethon therefore began to march with the few Troops he had remaining, and advanced as far as Pelusium. The same Night a Body of Field-Rats came pouring upon the Camp of the Assyrians, and gnaw'd the Thongs of their Bucklers, and the Strings of their Bows; so that the next Morning, when they found themselves in no Condition to make use of their Arms, they were forc'd to betake themselves to Flight.

The greatest Part of Commentators are of Opinion, that the Army of Sennacherib was destroyed before Jerusalem, as they were preparing for the Siege of this City. But it appears [Isai. x. 24, 25, 26.] plainly from Isaiah, that Sennacherib did not actually form the Siege of this Place, and that it was in his March against Tirhakah, that this Calamity fell upon him. [Berosi apud Joseph. Antiq. l. x. c. 1. Joseph. Antiq. l. x. c. 1.] Berosus tells us, that Sennacherib had carry'd the War into Egypt, and had subdued all Asia. Josephus relates, that this Prince having spent a long Time in the Siege of Pelusium, when his Works were now far advanced, and he was upon the Point of becoming Master of the Place, he was obliged to raise the Seige, for fear the King of Ethiopia should surprize him in his Camp, who was now advancing with a vast Army, to the Assistance of the Egyptians. Lastly, the Rabbins pretend, that the Angel that destroyed [Author. Tradit. in Lib. Reg. & Paral.] the hundred and eighty-five thousand Assyrians in one Night, cut off the Hair and Beard of Sennacherib himself, and sent him home into his own Country thus loaded with Ignominy and Disgrace. They found this Tradition upon these [Isa. vii. 20.] Words of Isaiah: In the same Day shall the Lord shave with a Razor that is hired, namely, by them beyond the River, by the King of Assyria, the Head and the Hair of the Feet, and it shall also consume the Beard.

The Babylonian Thalmud will have it, that the Army of Sennacherib was destroy'd by Thunder. The Targums, or Chaldee Paraphrases, are quoted, which affirm the Prideaux's same thing. Others believe, that they perish'd [Connect. t. 1. l. 1. p. 43.] by means of a hot Wind, that God caus'd to blow against them, a Wind very common in those Parts,[6] and which makes great Ravages there, stifling thousands of Persons in a Moment, as it often happens to those great Caravans of Mahometans, that go yearly on Pilgrimage to Mecca. Jeremiah [Jer. li. 1.] calls this Wind a destroying Wind. The Threatning made by Isaiah to Sennacherib; Behold I will send a Blast upon him, and he shall hear a Rumour, seems also to insinuate this great Wind.

[D'Herbel. Bib. Orien. p. 804.] Khondemir relates, that in the 18th Year of the Hegira, or 640 of Jesus Christ, under the Kaliphship of Omer, while the Mussulmen were making their Conquests in Syria, and at a Time that the Pestilence raged; they found in a Sepulchre under Ground in Mount Libanus, the Body of Sennacherib, in a Chair of Gold inscribed with Syrian or Chaldee Characters, which were to this Effect; " The greatest Evil " that can happen to Men, is the Forgetfulness of Death, and of the Account that " they must give to God of their Actions; " although the Sepulchres of their Friends " and Relations, with which they are surrounded, give them notice of these " two Things. " But I doubt very much whether this Tomb was that of Sennacherib King of Niniveh. They add, that this Sennacherib we now speak of, was of the Race of Esau, and that he had suffer'd great Calamities in his Life-time. This also is not compatible with that Sennacherib mention'd in Scripture.

Sense of the Scripture

SENSE of the Scripture. These five different Senses may be distinguish'd in the Scripture. I. The Grammatical Sense. II. The Historical or Literal Sense. III. The Allegorical or Figurative Sense. IV. The Anagogical Sense. V. The Tropological or Moral Sense.

I. The Grammatical Sense is that which the Words of the Text present to the Mind, according to the proper and usual Signification of those Words. Thus when it is said that God repents, that he is in Anger, that he ascends or descends, that he has Eyes open, or Ears attentive, &c. the Grammatical Sense of all these Expressions might induce one to think, that God is corporeal, and subject to the same Weaknesses as ourselves. But as Reason and found Faith will assure us, that he has none of our Infirmities and Imperfections; upon such Occasions we are not to abide by, or confine ourselves to, the Grammatical Sense.

II. The Literal and Historical Sense is that which belongs to the History or Fact, to the Sense which the Rehearsal and Terms of the Scripture immediately present to the Mind. Thus when it is said, that Abraham marry'd Hagar, that he afterwards sent her away, that Isaac was born of Sarah, that he received Circumcision: All these Facts, taken in the Historical and Literal Sense, mean nothing else than what is express'd in the History; that is, the Marriage of Abraham with Hagar, the Birth of Isaac, &c.

III. The Allegorical and Figurative Sense, is that which examines what may be conceal'd under the Terms, or under the Event mention'd in the History. Thus the Marriage of Abraham with Hagar, who was afterwards repudiated and driven away because of her Insolence, and that of her Son; is a Figure or Representation of the Synagogue, which was only a Slave, and which was divorced and rejected because of its Infidelity and Ingratitude. Sarah is the Figure of the Christian Church, and Isaac of the People chosen of God.

IV. The Anagogical Sense, or Sense of Analogy and Agreement, is that which refers some Expressions of Scripture to eternal Life and Happiness; because of some Conformity or Similitude between the Terms that are brought to express something happening in this World, and what shall happen hereafter in Heaven. For Example, on Occasion of the Sabbath, or of the Seventh-Days Rest that was enjoyn'd the People of God, a Transition may be made to that Repose or Rest that the Saints enjoy in Heaven. On Occasion of the Israelites entering into the Land of Promise, we naturally pass to treat of the entering of the Elect into the Land of the Living, &c.

V. The Moral or Tropological Sense, is that which deduces Moral Reflections for the Conduct of Life, and for the Reformation of Manners, from what is related historically and literally in Scripture. For Example, on Occasion of those Words of [Deut. xxv. 4.] Deuteronomy, Thou shalt not muzzle the Ox, when he treadeth out the Corn, St. [1 Cor. ix. 10.] Paul says, that the Preachers, and those that instruct us, ought to be supply'd with the Necessaries of Life.

The Object of the Literal Sense are Facts and History; of the Allegorical, what we believe, or the Mysteries of our Faith; of the Anagogical, eternal Happiness, and what has relation thereto; of the Moral or Tropological, the Regulation of our Manners; all which is comprehended in this Distick.

Litera gesta docet, quid credas Allegoria, Moralis quid agas, quò tendas Anagogia.

These five Senses now mention'd may be observed in this one Word Jerusalem. According to the Grammatical Sense, it signifies the Vision of Peace; according to the Literal and Historical, the capital City of Judea; according to the Allegorical, the Church Militant; according to the Anagogical, the Church Triumphant; according to the Moral, a faithful Soul, of which Jerusalem is a Kind of Figure.

Sepharad

[Obad. 20.] SEPHARAD. This Hebrew Word is found in Obadiah. Here is the whole Passage of this Prophet. Transmigratio exercitûs hujus filiorum Israel, omnia loca Chananæorum usque ad Sareptam, & transmigratio Jerusalem, quæ in Bosphoro est, possidebit civitates Austri. Instead of Sarepta here, the Hebrew Text reads Zarphath; and instead of Bosphorus, it reads Sepharad. By the Name of Canaanites, the Jews understand Germany; by Zarphath, France; and by Sepharad, [Usque ad Zarphath. Quæ in Sepharad. Hieron. in Abdiam.] Spain. The Jew that taught St. Jerome the Hebrew Tongue, did assure him, that Sepharad stood for the Bosphorus, which is (said he) the Place whither the Emperor Adrian transported the Jews. The modern Hebrews by the Name Sepharad understand Spain. But there is a much greater Probability that this Word signifies one of those Cities beyond the Euphrates, whither the Jews had been transplanted; and perhaps it may be Sippara, or Sipparat in Mesopotamia, a little above the Division of the Euphrates. By this Name the Septuagint seem to have understood the Euphrates, or the City of Ephrata, which is Bethlehem. [LXX. Ἐφρ. alias Ἐφραθά.] But Ephrata makes no Sense in this Place. The Jews of Jerusalem were certainly carry'd away beyond the Euphrates by Nebuchadnezzar. Cyrus sent them back into their own Country, and there they inhabited the southern Cities, Idumea, and Arabia Petræa.

The Jewish Historians[1] tell us, that Nebuchadnezzar besieged Jerusalem, assisted by a great Number of Allies, who lent him their Troops. One of the chief of them, as they say, was Hispanus, who gave his Name to Spain. He was present at this Siege along with his Son-in-law Pyrrhus King of the Grecians. When the City was taken, it was easy for them to divide the Spoil and the Prisoners, because the City was separated by three Enclosures of Walls. Nebuchadnezzar took for his Share all the Artisans and Handicraft Men, who were in the first Enclosure, and gave to Pyrrhus all that were within the second. That was the Dwelling of the House of David, and of the Priests. Pyrrhus took his Prisoners along with him into Andalusia, and from thence to Toledo. The Descendants of David pass'd on to Seville, and into the Kingdom of Granada. Thus, say they, we see the Completion of the Prophecy of Obadiah. But as all this is but meer Fable, we shall not give ourselves the Trouble to refute it. The same is to be understood of such other Monuments, which, they say, have been found in Spain, by which they pretend to prove, that King Solomon extended his Empire into that Country. These are Inscriptions invented at Pleasure, to establish a chimerical Empire.

Sepharvaim

[Jun. Milvend. Grot. ad 4 Reg. Ptolem. l. 5. c. 18. Abyden. Herodot. l. 1. c. 103. l. 3. c. 94. l. 7. c. 79. Ezr. iv. 10] SEPHARVAIM. When Shalmaneser, King of Assyria, carry'd away the Israelites from the Kingdom of Samaria to Places beyond the Euphrates, he brought other People in their stead into Palestine, among whom were the Sepharvaim.[1] It is not exactly known where the Place was of their former Habitation. Some pretend they inhabited the City of Siphera, or the City of the Siphareniens, upon the Euphrates. We think their Dwelling to have been in the Mountains of Sephar, of which mention is made Gen. x. 29. and that the Saspires, who, according to Herodotus, were the only People that inhabited between the Colchians and the Medes, are the same as the Sepharvaim of the Scriptures. Strabo, l. 10. places the Sarapares in Armenia. In the Book of Ezra, this Transportation of the Nations from beyond the Euphrates into the Country of Samaria, is imputed to the great and noble Asnappar, who is probably King Esarhaddon. But in the Enumeration that is there made, of all those Nations, we do not find the Sepharvaim, or Sepharvaites; except they are express'd by the Name of the Tarpelites, which may be put for the Tapyres, or Sapires, according to the Pronunciation of the Chaldeans.

[Isa. xxxvii. 13. 2 King. xx. 13.] The Scripture speaks of the King of the City of Sepharvaim, which probably was the Capital of the People of this Name; and the King of Sepharvaim is no other than the God of these People. This appears pretty plainly from comparing these Passages. Where are the the Gods of [2 Kings xviii. 34. Isa. xxxvii. 13. 2 King. xix. 13. 2 Kings xvii. 31.] Hamath, and of Arpad? Where are the Gods of Sepharvaim, Hena, and Ivah? And elsewhere, Where is the King of Hamath, and the King of Arpad, and the King of the City of Sepharvaim, of Hena, and Ivah? Lastly, it is said, The Sepharvites burnt their Children in the Fire to Adrammelech and Anammelech the Gods of Sepharvaim. There is therefore great Probability that Hena and Ivah are the same as Anammelech and Adrammelech, the Gods of the Sepharvites. But Anammelech apparently stands for the Moon, and Adrammelech for the Sun. The first Word signifies merciful King, and the second magnificent King. The Orientals gave to the Moon the Name of God and King.

Sephet

SEPHET. Tobit was of the City of [Tob. i. 1. Vulgat.] Naphthali, situate in the Upper Galilee, having on its Left-hand the City of Sephet. This is the only Place in the Vulgate where we find any mention of Sephet; but we read in the Septuagint of Sephaat, or Zephaat, or Horma. But Sephet of Galilee was at a great Distance from Sephaat, which was to the South of Judah, or of Simeon. Some Moderns have pretended, that Sephet of Galilee was Bethulia, but without any Proof. They say it is between Ptolemais to the West, and Naashon to the East, twelve Miles from Carmel, and six from Cana of Galilee. Others place it nine Miles from Bethsaida, in the Upper Galilee. I cannot reconcile this with Tobit, who places Sephet on the Left-hand, or to the North of the City of Naphthali, which apparently is Cedes. However this be, Sephet or Sapheta is built upon a Mountain with three Eminencies, and very difficult of Access. The Jews live there in great Numbers, and have a famous Academy there, where Youth is sent to study the Hebrew Tongue, and the Law of Moses. And for some Ages the Academy of Sapheta is for the Jews, what Tiberias was heretofore, whose Place it has taken. 'Tis likely this Academy was not erected so soon as the Time of Benjamin of Tudela, at the End of the twelfth Century, since he makes no mention of it; but it must be soon after.

Sephiroth

SEPHIROTH. This Hebrew Word signifies Brightnesses; and the Cabalists give the Name of Sephiroth to the most secret Parts of their Science. The Knowledge of the Sephiroth is not acquired but with much Study and Labour; and is the highest Step of the Contemplative Theology. They reckon up ten Sephiroths, 185, 186. which are sometimes represented by ten different Circles included in each other: And sometimes by the Figure of a Tree, pretty much like what, in the Schools, they call Porphyry's Tree, to shew the different Categories of Ens, or Being. The ten Sephoriths are, first, the Crown; secondly, Wisdom; thirdly, the Understanding; fourthly, Strength (or Severity); fifthly, Mercy (or Magnificence); sixthly, Beauty; seventhly, Victory (or Eternity); eighthly, Glory; ninthly, the Foundation; tenthly, the Kingdom. These are the Perfections and Attributes of the Divine Essence, which are inseparably united together, and on the Connection of which depends the Creation, the Preservation, and the Management of the Universe.

They have imagin'd Canals, by which the Influences of one Brightness or Splendor are communicated to another. The World, said Simon Jochaid, a the first of all the Cabalists, could not be managed by Mercy alone, and by the Column of Grace; so that God was obliged to add to it the Column of Strength, Force, or Severity, which makes the Judgment. It was moreover necessary, to reconcile these two Columns, and to put all things in Proportion, and in a natural Order. Wherefore, the Column of Beauty is put in the Middle, which adapts Mercy to Justice, and introduces Order, without which it is impossible that the Universe should subsist. From Mercy, which forgives Sins, proceeds a Canal extending to Victory, or to Eternity. Lastly, The Canals that proceed from Mercy and Strength, and reach to Beauty, are replete with a great Number of Angels; there are five and thirty in the Canal of Mercy which reward the Saints, and a like Number in that of Strength to punish Sinners.

The Rabbin Shabte compares the Sephiroth, or Splendors, to a Tree, in which are distingish'd the Root, the Trunk, and the Branches: These three Things compose the Tree; and the only Difference to be observed therein, is, that the Root is conceal'd, while the Trunk and the Branches appear. The Trunk communicates its Virtue to the Branches, which bring forth Fruit: But at the Bottom, the Trunk and the Branches belong to the Root, and form together one and the same Tree. The same thing is to be said of the Brightnesses: The Crown is the Secret and inaccessible Root; the three Spirits, or Sephiroth, are the Trunk of the Tree; and the seven other are the Branches united to the Stock, without a Possibility of being separated: For he that would separate them, does as a Man that would tear[1] tear off the Branches of a Tree, would cut off the Trunk, and offer it Nourishment, after he had separated it from its Root. The Crown is the Root which unites all the Brightnesses which propagates its Influences to them; they are comprehended in its Bosom, and in its Virtue.

We must also observe the Connexion that is found among these Brightnesses, and that which they have with the Creatures that compose the Universe. To each Sephiroth they annex a Name of God, one of the principal Angels, one of the Planets, one Member of the human Body, one of the Commandments of the Law; and on this depends the Harmony of the Universe. Besides, one of these Things makes one think of the other, and serves as a Step to arrive at a higher Degree of Knowledge in the speculative Theology. Lastly, by this one learns the Influence that the Brightnesses have upon the Angels, the Planets and the Stars, and upon all the Parts of a human Body.

A learned Man, who had much studied the Mysteries of the Cabala, thinks that the Sephiroths [Morin. epist. in Cabalam, t. 2. p. 53.] are only Numbers, which have a Relation to the ten Fingers of the Hand. Others think a, that in it they discover the Mystery of the Trinity. But it is needless to seek for more Mysteries therein, than what the Cabalists find themselves. They will always disown what is not according to their Taste, and of their own Invention. The best way is to leave their mysterious Secrets to themselves, and not to lose one's time in endeavouring to penetrate into 'em. See M. Basnage's History of the Jews, tom. 4. l. 6. c. 5. n. 7, 8. and tom. 6. l. 9. c. 11.

Sephoris

SEPHORIS, a famous City of the Tribe of Zebulun, and Capital of Galilee. Afterwards it had the Name of Diocæsarea. The Jews [Rabb. in Echa Rabbati, fol. 75. 2.] place it at eighteen Miles from Tiberias, though others put it but at ten Miles from this City. It was not far from Tabor, and the great Plain. I do not find it in Joshua, nor in any other of the sacred Authors; but Josephus often speaks of it. He says, that Gabinius placed [Jos. Antiq. l. 14. c. 10.] there one of the five Tribunals, which he set up in Judea for deciding of Controversies; that Sephoris was in the Midst of Judea, that it was the largest and best City in this Country, and that it became the Capital of it, after Nero had [Joseph. de bel. l. 3. c. 3. c. 1. Joseph. de vita sua, p. 1025. Joseph. de bel. l. 2. c. 23.] given Galilee to the younger Agrippa; that Mount Asamon is pretty near Sephoris, which is as it were the Center of Galilee. The first City of Galilee that one came to from Ptolemais, was Sephoris.

Septuagint

SEPTUAGINT, or Seventy Interpreters. By this Name are generally understood the Seventy, or rather Seventy-two Interpreters, who, according to the prevailing Opinion, translated from Hebrew into Greek the Books of the Old Testament, or at least the Pentateuch, if we will believe St. Jerome, and several other Criticks. Here is the History of this [Hieronym. in Ezech. c. 5. & in Mich. ii.] Translation, as Aristæus relates it. Demetrius Phalareus, Librarian to King Ptolemy Philadelphus, having used his utmost Industry to collect a vast Number of Books in the Library at Alexandria; King Philadelphus asked him one Day, how many Books he had already? Demetrius answered, that he had Two hundred thousand, and hoped in a short time to have Five hundred thousand; For, says he, I have been informed, that the Laws of the Jews deserve well to have a Place here, but they ought to be first translated out of Hebrew into Greek. The King replied, he would write to the High-Priest of the Jews about it.

Then Aristæus, Author of this Narration, who was then present, and who had the Honour of being of the Life-Guard to this Prince, thought of a Matter that he had had a good while in his Mind, and which he had communicated to Sosibius of Tarentum, and to Andreas, two of his Friends, that were chief Officers in the King's Guards; which Matter was, to procure the Liberty of a great Number of Jews, whom King Ptolemy, Son of Lagus, and Father of Ptolemy Philadelphus, had formerly brought Captive into Egypt, when he made War in Syria and Phenicia. Aristæus, Sosibius, and Andreas took therefore this Opportunity to tell the King, that since he desired to have a Translation of the sacred Books of the Jews, it would become his Liberality and Magnificence, to free from Servitude a great Number of Jews that were in his Territories, that the whole Nation being obliged by this Favour, might the more readily send him the Books that he desired.

The King then asking, how many these Captives might be, it was answered, about One hundred thousand. This large Number did not discourage Philadelphus, and he promised to set them at Liberty. At the same time he gave Orders, that twenty Drachma's a Head should be distributed to all those that had Jewish Slaves, who were forthwith to be made Free. And he published an Edict in their Favour, in which he restored to Liberty, not only all the Jews that his Father or himself had brought into Egypt, but likewise all others that might happen to be in Servitude there, upon any Account whatever. The King's Expence on this Occasion was above Six hundred Talents, which in our Money is 136,875 l. Sterling, taking the Talent to be the Egyptian, Attick, or Eubœan Talent of Silver, of 228 ⅛ Pound.

After this Philadelphus wrote to the High-Priest Eleazar, to desire him to send him[1] the Books of the Law, together with Translators capable to render them out of Hebrew into Greek. This Letter was carried by Ambassadors, who had rich Presents with them; and Andreas and Aristæas were of the Number of those whom the King sent to Jerusalem on this Occasion. Eleazar complied with the King's Request without any Hesitation, and sent him the Book of the Law, together with Seventy-two Jews, who were skilful in the Greek and Hebrew Tongues, that they might translate those sacred Books. At the same time he wrote to the King, to give him Thanks for his rich Presents, to commend his Piety towards God, and the Generosity he had shewed to the Jews that were in his Dominions.

Philadelphus received Eleazar's Commissioners with great Humanity, expressed a great Respect for the holy Books they had brought, worshipped them, and bowed himself before them for seven times together, admired the Beauty of the Vellum, and the writing in golden Letters, as also the Variety of the Colours and Embellishments of the Leaves. He assured these Deputies, that he should always look upon the Day of their Arrival as a Festival Day. And as this Day fell upon the same on which this Prince had overcome Antigonus in a Sea-fight, he did them the Honour of making them eat with him. At Dinner he put several Questions to them, to which they returned Answers intirely to his Satisfaction. And the King was so pleased with their Conversation, that he treated them for seven Days together, that he might hear them all one after another.

Three Days after this, Demetrius Phalereus took these Seventy-two Hebrews, and conducted them into the Isle of Pharos, by a Causey seven Furlongs long; and having brought them over the Bridge, he led them into a very fine House, built at the Northern Part of the Island, upon the Sea-shore, and at a Distance from any Noise, that they might with the greater Tranquillity apply themselves to the Translation of the Holy Books. They began therefore to go about their Work, and discussing among themselves whatever Difficulties they might meet with, when they had fixed upon any thing, and brought it to a Condition of being enter'd fair, they reported it to Demetrius, who had it fairly writ down by his Copyers. They laboured thus from Morning to the ninth Hour, that is, till three Hours before Sun-set; then they returned into the City, where they were plentifully furnished with whatever Necessaries they wanted. The next Day early in the Morning they returned into the Isle of Pharos, to their Work; which they applied themselves to, as soon as they had washed their Hands, and said their Prayers. This they continued to do for Seventy, or rather Seventy-two Days together[2]. When the Work was finished, they put it into the Hands of Demetrius, who read it in an Assembly of the Jews at Alexandria, that they might be Judges of its Agreement with the Original. They were much pleased with it, and greatly extoll'd, as well Demetrius who had procured them this Version, as the Interpreters that had made it. After which they pronounced an Anathema against any one that should make any Alteration in the Text of this Version, in any manner whatever. The King being informed of what had passed, expressed much Satisfaction at it. He had the Law of Moses read to him, and greatly admired the Wisdom of it. He asked Demetrius, why no Historian or Poet had made any mention of so divine a Work? Demetrius replied, it was out of that Respect which had always been paid to this Divine Book, that Authors had been deterred from it: That Theopompus having inserted something of it in his History, had been struck with a Disease that had deprived him of his Understanding; and that Theodotus, a Tragick Poet, endeavouring to put something of it in his Poems, had been struck with Blindness: But that each of 'em had been miraculously cured, after having acknowledged and confessed their Fault.

Philadelphus therefore received the Work of the Interpreters with great Tokens of Veneration, and caused it to be laid up in his Library, where he ordered it to be kept with great Care. He greatly caressed the seventy Translators, invited them to come often to see him, and sent them back into Judea with ample Rewards, and rich Presents for Eleazar. This is the Substance of the History of Aristæas, which this Author addresses to his Brother Philocrates, to whom he gives an account of all this as an Eye-witness, and as [Jos. Antiq. l. 12. c. 2. Philo de vit. Moni. l. 2. p. 659.] one that was perfectly well informed of every Thing that passed. The same Story we read in Josephus, who has taken it out of Aristæas. Philo also speaks of the Version of the Septuagint, as having been performed by inspired Writers; but he makes no mention either of Aristæas or Demetrius Phalereus.

Justin Martyr's Account is very different [Just. Mart. Exhort. ad Græcos.] from this of Aristæas. He says, that Ptolemy King of Egypt being informed, that the Jews had antient Histories written in Hebrew, he sent for seventy Men from Jerusalem, to translate these Works out of Hebrew into Greek. He had these Men put into the Isle of Pharos, into seventy different Cells, that they might study without Interruption, and without communicating with each other; so that he might be the more secure secure of the Faithfulness of the Translation. God himself order'd it so, that they should translate in so uniform a manner, that they did not only use the same Words, but also in the same Number. This caused in the King so great an Admiration, that he gave them great Rewards, and sent them back with Honour into their own Country. Justin adds to this, that when he was at Alexandria, they shewed him, in the Isle of Pharos, the Ruins of those Cells in which these Interpreters had been shut up.

The same Justin in his second Apology relates the Thing in another manner; he says, that Ptolemy having a Design to collect a very ample Library, wrote to Herod King of the Jews, to send him the Books of the Prophets which were in his Country. Herod sent them to him, but as these Books were written in Hebrew, Ptolemy sent again to Herod, to desire him to send some Men to him, that were able to translate them into Greek. This being done, the Books were put into the King of Egypt's Library, where they are at present, says St. Justin, in the [Iren. l. 3. contr. adv. hæres. c. 25. seu 21. nov. edit. Cyrill. Jerosol. Catech. 4. p. 36, 37. Epiph. de ponderibus & mensuris, n. 9, 10, 11.] Hands of all the Jews. St. Irenæus, St. Cyril of Jerusalem, St. Chrysostom, and St. Austin, speak also of the Seventy-two Cells of the Seventy-two Interpreters; but Epiphanius allows but Thirty-six. Thus he relates the Story;

He says, that Aristæas, in his History of the seventy Interpreters, informs us, that Ptolemy Philadelphus erected a Library at Alexandria, in the Place called Bruchium, and committed the Care of it to Demetrius Phalereus. One Day as the King was asking Demetrius how many Books he had, Demetrius answered, there were about Fifty -four thousand and Eight hundred, but that there might easily be a much greater Number, if Translations were made of such Books as were among the Ethiopians, the Indians, the Persians, the Elamites, the Babylonians, the Assyrians, the Chaldeans, the Romans, the Phenicians, the Syrians, and those that inhabited in Greece, says he, formerly called Latins, and not Romans. In all appearance he meant the Greeks of Italy, or of great Greece. He added, that in Judea, and at Jerusalem, there were several Divine Books written by Prophets, which might be obtained if they were desired of the Jews.

The King wrote therefore a Letter to the Jews, which is to be seen in Epiphanius, by which he desires them to send him these Books. The Jews sent him the Two and twenty Books of the Old Testament, written in Golden Letters; as also Seventy-two Apocryphal Books. But these Works being in Hebrew, the King wrote to them again, desiring them to send him Interpreters, to render them into Greek. They sent him Seventy-two chosen Men, six out of each Tribe; and in order that the Translation might be as exact as possible, and that the Interpreters might have no Communication with each other, the King caused to be built, in the Isle of Pharos, Thirty-six Cells, in each of which he shut up two Translators, that they might study together: And he allowed them Servants to attend them, and Transcribers to write down in Notes or Short-Hand, what should be dictated to 'em. These Cells had no Windows, that no body might look within; but they had each a Sky-light. Every two Interpreters had a Book given them, and when they had translated it, it passed through the Hands of those in the next Cell, and so on, till all the Books were translated six and thirty times.

They laboured thus shut up from Morning to Evening, and at Night they were fetched away in six and thirty Boats, and brought to the Palace, where they eat with the King. Then they were put into six and thirty Chambers, where they lay by two in a Chamber. The Day following early in the Morning they were carried back in the like manner to their Cells. When the whole Work was finished, the King sate upon his Throne, and had the Work read to him. Thirty-six Readers held the Thirty-six Copies of the Translation, and a Thirty-seventh held the Hebrew Original. In confronting all these Versions, it was found, they were so perfectly alike, that what one had added or retrenched, had also been added or retrenched by every one; and that what was retrenched was really useless and superfluous. This convinced all the Assembly that the Interpreters had been inspired by the Holy Ghost. The King laid up the Translation in the Library called Bruchium, which was as the Mother of the second Library called Scrapæum.

The Talmuds of Jerusalem and Babylon say, that King Ptolemy having made the Seventy-two Elders come to him, without letting them know what he desired of them, he shut them up in Seventy-two Cells. Then he told them he would have them translate the Holy Books out of Hebrew into Greek. They complied with the King's Desire, and with such Success, and God so happily directed them, that they all translated in the same manner. The Samaritans have also laid Claim to the Honour of this Translation; and they relate, that the King of Egypt having caused the High-Priest of the Samaritans to come to him, and also that of the Jews, with other Assistants on both Sides to translate the Holy Scriptures into Greek; the Translation of the Samaritans was preferred before that of the Jews, and laid up in the Library of Alexandria.

[Philo de vit. Mos. l. 2. p. 659.] Philo relates, that the Jews of Egypt were so transported upon making this Translation of the Law into Greek, that they appointed an annual Feast to perpetuate the Memory of it. They went every Year into the Isle of Pharos, accompanied by several Strangers, Strangers, who came thither out of Devotion as well as themselves; and after this they refreshed themselves with Entertainments of Piety, some under Tents, others upon the Shore, and upon the Sand, being filled with Respect for a Place which had been sanctified by the Presence of the seventy Interpreters. The Hebraizing Jews, on the contrary, conceived so much Contempt and Abhorrence for this Version, that they made a Fast on the eighth Day of Thebet[3], which answers to the Month of December, to shew how much they disapprove of the Liberty the Hellenistical Jews had taken in translating the Laws into a foreign and impure Language. They say, that the Day on [In Massechet Sopherim.] which this Translation was made, was as fatal to Israel, as that on which Jeroboam the Son of Nebat made the the golden Calves; and that then the Heavens were covered with Darkness for three Days together.

Many of the antient Fathers of the Church[4] have had so great a Respect for this Version of the Septuagint, that they have looked upon it as infallible, and as inspired by the Holy Ghost; and St. Austin has carried this Point so far, that he thinks in those Passages where the Septuagint differs from the Hebrew, which often happens, we ought to believe that the Holy Ghost, who inspired them as well as he inspired the first Authors, conducted their Pen by a particular Providence; so that each of 'em tell us nothing but what is absolutely certain, though sometimes they appear contrary and different from each other. Thus this holy Doctor preserves the Authority of the Septuagint, without derogating from that of the original Text. St. Hilary will have it, that in such Places where different Interpreters vary [Hilar. in Ps. cxxxi. n. 24.] from each other, upon any Passage of the Old Testament, we ought to adhere to the Septuagint, as the most antient Version, and which has been most authorized by the Use of the Church.

This Sentiment of the Fathers concerning the Inspiration of the Septuagint, was founded upon that surprizing Agreement which was found among the several Copies of those Interpreters, though they had no Communication with each other, having been shut up separately in Thirty-six, or in Seventy-two different Cells. But as this Fact itself is very doubtful, it could not serve as a Foundation for an Article of this Consequence. Therefore the Church has never made any Decision about the Inspiration of these Interpreters; and St. Jerome[5] very much inveighs against the first Author that invented the Fable of the seventy Cells. He maintains, that these Interpreters conserred [Hieron. in Ezech. v. & in Mich. ii.] together, and assisted each other in their Translations. In a Word, that they were nothing else but mere Translators, and no Prophets. In una Basilica congregatos contulisse, non prophetasse; aliud est enim esse Vatem, aliud Interpretem. He shews there are many Faults in their Translation, and he thinks that they did not translate the whole Scripture, but only the five Books of Moses. He says, that Josephus and Philo, and the whole School of the Hebrews affirm the same; and Aristæas, who is the first Author of the Version of the Seventy, says only, that they read to the King the Books of the Law.

The greatest Part of modern Criticks undertake to shew the Falsity of what has been said, concerning the Manner by which the Version of the Septuagint was made; and it must be own'd, that their Reasons have the Appearance of Truth. They shew, First, The Diversity of Opinions that have been started in this Matter. Secondly, Aristæas, who is said to be the Author of the oldest Account we have of this Matter, does but ill support the Part he acts. He would pass for a Pagan, and yet speaks and acts as if he were a zealous Jew. Thirdly, He speaks of Ptolemy Philadelphus, as of a wise and religious Prince, full of Respect for the True God, for his Temple, and for his Scriptures; and yet it is known from History, that he was a very corrupt and wicked Prince. Fourthly, He tells us, that Demetrius Phalereus was Friend and Library-keeper to King Philadelphus; whereas it is known,[6] that Demetrius having advised Ptolemy the Son of Lagus to exclude his Son Ptolemy Philadelphus from the Kingdom, he was so provoked at it, that when he came to the Throne, he sent Demetrius into Exile, 'till he should determine something farther about him. But Demetrius not being able to bear the Tiresomeness of this Banishment, put himself to Death by the Bite of an Asp. Fifthly, They observe the same Stile, and that a Stile full of Hebraisms, in the whole History of the pretended Aristæas, in the Letters of Philadelphus to the High-priest Eleazar, and in those of Eleazar to the King, and in the Petition of Demetrius to the same Philadelphus. Several other Remarks are made upon the History of Aristæas, which make it much to be suspected, and give reason to judge, that it is the Work of some Jew, who has borrow'd the Name of Aristæas, the better to disguise his Forgery[7].

But what then are we to think of the ancient Greek Version of the Bible, that we have at this Day in our Hands, and which goes under the Name of the Septuagint? 'Tis agreed, that this must be an ancient Version, and might well have been made in the Time of Ptolemy Philadelphus; at least, the five Books of Moses, the Translation of which is more faithful and exact than that of the other Books; but we cannot know precisely, either the Time, or the Authors of it. The Translations of the other Books seem to have been done by other Hands, which are as much unknown as the former, and the Authors might live at different Times; for there is no Proof that they were by the same Pen. The Diversity of Stile, and of the Manner in which the same Word is translated, give reason to judge, they were done by several Hands. Neither can it be known, whether it proceeds from the Translators or Copiers, that so many Variations are found in the Greek Text of Scripture, from the Hebrew Original; and the Alterations that have been made in Genesis, concerning the Ages of the Patriarchs that lived before and after the Flood, as far as the Building of Babel. These Changes and Additions could not be the Effect of Chance, they are so very numerous; especially in Job, in the Proverbs, in the Great Prophets, and in the Books of Samuel and the Kings.

[Gen. xxiii. 4, 6.] Those that would see more at large what are the Opinions of learned Men concerning the Septuagint, may consult the Criticks who have expresly handled this Matter; as Scaliger, Usher, Walton, Frassen, M. du Pin, Vandal, Hoddy, the new Edition of Origen's Hexapla, and several others.[8]

Sepulchre

SEPULCHRE, or Grave. The Hebrews have always taken great Care about the Burial of their Dead. The greatest Part of their Sepulchres were hollow Places dug into Rocks; as for Example, that bought by Abraham for the burying of Sarah; those of the Kings of Judah and Israel, and that wherein our Saviour was laid in Mount Calvary. Sometimes also their Graves were dug in the Ground, and commonly without their Towns, in Burying-places set apart on Purpose. Generally they used to put some hewn Stone, or other thing, over the Grave, to shew it was a Burying-place, that the Passengers might be warned not to come near it, that they might not be polluted.

[Mat. xxiii. 17.] Jesus Christ, in the Gospel, says, that the Pharisees were like whited Sepulchres, which appeared fine without, but inwardly were full of Rottenness and Corruption. Lightfoot shews, that every Year, on the [Luke xi. 44.] 15th of February, they took care to whiten them anew. In another Place, our Saviour compares the Pharisees to Graves which appear not, and the Men that walk over them are not aware of them, or know not that the Places are unclean, so that they contract an unknown and involuntary Impurity. We have spoke of the Sepulchres of the Jews, in our Dissertation concerning their Funerals. The Reader may also consult the Book of John Nicholai, de Sepulchris Judæorum; and for the Moderns, Leo of Modena's Ceremonies of the Jews, Part 5, 6. and Buxtorf's Synagog. Judæorum, c. 35.

Sepulchre of Absalom, or the Hand, Pillar, or Monument of Absalom. 'Tis seen at this Day to the East of Jerusalem. See the Article ABSALOM.

Sepulchre of Sarah. Abraham not being Master of a Foot of Land in Canaan, apply'd himself to the Children of Heth, who dwelt at Hebron, desiring them to sell him the Sepulchre which was in the Field of Ephron the Son of Zohar, Gen. xxiii. This he bought for four hundred Shekels of good Money, and buried Sarah there. The Vulgate calls the Place where she was buried, Speluncam Duplicem, a Double Cave; whether because it might contain two Cavities dug in the Rock, or because there were two Tombs in the same Cavern. The Hebrew Text calls it [Ambrosiast. in Gal. iii. Jude 9.] the Cave of Makpelah. See MAKPELAH.

Sepulchre of Moses. After the Death of this famous Law-giver, the Arch-angel Michael had a Dispute with the Devil about his Body. But what was the Subject of this Dispute, has been much contested for a long Time. Some have thought,[1] that the Devil withstood the Burial of Moses, maintaining, that he had not deserved this Honour, having unjustly kill'd an Egyptian in Egypt. Others have maintain'd,[2] that Moses was buried by the Hands of Angels, without letting the Hebrews have any Knowledge of it, for fear they should be tempted to pay him divine Honours after his Death.

Lastly, Others pretend, that the Devil would have had him be buried with publick Solemnity, that the People might thence take Occasion of frequenting his Tomb, and worshipping him as a God. There are those that think[3] he did not die like other Men, but that he was translated out of this World into the Earthly Paradise. Clemens Alexandrinus[4], and Evodius in St. Austin, say, that after the [Evod. Epist. ad Aug. ep. 259. inter Augustin.] Death of Moses, there were found two Bodies of this Law-giver, one to be buried in his Tomb, and the other which was to remain with the Angel that was his Guide.

Cedrenus relates, that Moses's Tomb is [Cedren. Hist. l. 1.] always cover'd with a bright Cloud, which conceals it from the Eyes of Men, and hinders them from approaching to it. The Text of Deuteronomy says expressly, that no one [Deuteron. xxxiv. 6.] knows the Place of his Burial to this Day. Yet, for all this, it is told, that in 1655, in [Vid. Horn. hist. Ecclef. sæcul. 17. art. 31.] the Month of October, as some Marionite Shepherds were feeding their Goats in the Mountains of Nebo and Abarim, they observed that, from time to time, some of their Goats would straggle from the Flock for two or three Days Journey, and, at their return, they appear'd as it were embalmed with Perfumes of a most excellent Scent. To find out the Reason of such an extraordinary Event, they follow'd their Goats, and arrived at Precipices of a prodigious Depth, in the midst of which they perceived a small Valley, but extremely agreeable, at which they could not come but over a Number of broken Rocks, which had probably been tore up from the neighbouring Mountains by Earthquakes.

They got thither with a great deal of Trouble, where they found a Cave dug into a living Rock, wherein was a short Inscription which they could not understand. The whole Cavern was fill'd with a most delicious Perfume; and the Shepherds went back with their Cloaths scented strongly with this Perfume. This Affair was presently related by them to Mataxat Patriarch of the Marionites, who dwelt upon Mount Libanus, in the Monastery of Canobean Kadischa Mariam. The Smell of their Cloaths, was a sufficient Proof of the Truth of what they related.

The Patriarch sent thither two of his Priests, Men of approved Knowledge and Wisdom, particularly Aben-Useph, who had recommended himself by his great Learning and Capacity. They found the Monument which had been described to them, and read the Inscription upon it, which was, Moses, the Servant of God. The Patriarch was transported with Joy, and went to wait on Morat the Basha of Damascus, to ask of him the Keeping of the Tomb. The Greeks, the Armenians, the Jews, the Franciscans were inform'd of this Affair, made great Interest, and disbursed a great deal of Money, to obtain the Care of this precious Tomb, exclusive of others: The Jews especially bestirr'd themselves much in this Matter, to have it determin'd in their Favour: They remonstrated, that it belong'd to them preferably to all others, because Moses was their Founder and Law-giver. The Ottomans were already flatter'd with the Glory of being the Depositaries of the Sepulchres of Jesus Christ at Jerusalem, of Moses upon Mount Nebo, and of Mahomet at Mecca.

Hornius adds, that to elude the Hopes and frustrate the Pretensions of all these Competitors, the Jesuits obtain'd from the Turks, that the Tomb and all the Avenues to it should be shut up, and that, upon Pain of Death, all Persons should be prohibited from going thither. So that the Basha Morat sent Orders to the Saniac of Jerusalem and of Saphet, to have the Tomb and the Cave stopt up. But this was not the View of those who had procured this Order: They did it with this Design, that they themselves might remove the Body out of the Tomb, and carry it into Europe; for which Purpose they took with them the Druses of Mount Libanus, and went privately to open the Sepulchre; but they found nothing in it: Yet however, they resolved to bring along with them at least some of the Stones of this Tomb. But the Saniac of Jerusalem being inform'd of this Enterprize, sent People after them, who dispersed them, and disappointed their Expectations.

This Accident made a great Noise at the Court of Constantinople, and the Learned were divided in their Sentiments about this Discovery. A learned Jew named Jechonias, Son of Gad, who dwelt at Saphet, composed a Book to prove, that this was not the Sepulchre of Moses the Law-giver of the Hebrews, but of another Moses who was his Junior by many Ages. Thus that Hope vanish'd, with which they had fed themselves upon this Occasion. This is what Hornius acquaints us with. But Bartolocci[5], who has nicely enquir'd into this whole History, shews the Falshood of it, or at least makes it to be very suspicious, by these three Observations. The First is, That the Jew Jechonias Son of Gad is unknown, and seems to be an imaginary Person. Secondly, The Patriarch of the Marionites, who lived in 1655, was not call'd Mataxat, but John, whose Successor was George Besbebel. Thirdly, The Basha of Damascus at that time was call'd Beschis, and not Morat.

The Sepulchre of Elisha, is known to us by a very remarkable Circumstance: In the very Year of the Death and Burial of this Prophet, some Parties of Moabites coming to make an Inroad upon the Territories of Israel; it happen'd that some Israelites going to bury a Man, threw him hastily into the Tomb of this Prophet, that they might fly away with more Expedition. But the Corpse had no sooner touch'd the dead Body of Elisha, but the Man revivedand stood upon his Feet. They are not agreed as to the Place where the Tomb of this Prophet was: St. Jerom[6], and several others after him, have told us, that it was at Samaria, or thereabouts; and they found themselves upon this, that probably he died at Samaria, and therefore may be presum'd to be buried there too. Others will have him to have been buried at Abelmeula his own Country; others, on Mount Carmel. See the Article ELISHA.

Sepulchre of David. We have already spoke of it under the Article DAVID, as also of the Riches that were pretended to be there conceal'd. Here is the Description that curious Travellers give us of this Sepulchre:[7] 'Tis a magnificent Edifice, which now is without the Walls of Jerusalem, but probably was then included within the Walls of the City. You first enter into a large Court, about six and twenty Foot square, cut out and smooth'd within the Rock, which is of Marble. On the Left -hand is a Gallery, cut out of the Rock likewise, as also the Pillars that support it. At the End of the Gallery there is a little Opening, thro' which you pass by, creeping upon the Ground, to go into a large Chamber of about four and twenty Foot square, round about which there are other smaller Chambers, which communicate one with the other, by Doors of Stone. The Ceiling, the Doors, as well as the rest, their Hinges, their Posts, their Frames, &c. are all out of the same Rock, which is justly look'd upon as a Wonder; for the Doors were never out of their present Places, nor brought from elsewhere; they were work'd before the Chambers, and they still adhere to the same Rock, out of which they were wrought. In the Sides of the small Chambers now mention'd are several Niches, within which the Bodies of the Kings are deposited in Stone Coffins. This Work is perhaps the only real one that now remains of Ancient Jerusalem. See the Figure.

Sepulchre or Tomb of our Lord Jesus Christ. This was upon Mount Calvary, to [John xix. 41.] the North-west of Jerusalem, and was hewn out of a Rock, as the Gospel informs us. 'Tis a kind of small Chamber, almost square within; its Height from Bottom to Top eight Feet and an Inch, its Length six Feet and an Inch, and its Breadth fifteen Feet and ten Inches. The Entrance, which looks towards the East, is but four Feet high, and two Feet four Inches wide: This Door [Mark 16. 3. Matthew xxviii. 2.] was shut up by a Stone out of the same Rock: 'Twas to this Stone that the Chief Priests affix'd their Seal, and which the holy Women doubted they had not Strength to remove: Who shall roll us away the Stone from the Door of the Sepulchre? Lastly, 'Twas upon this same Stone that the Angel sate down, after Jesus Christ was come out of the Tomb. The Place where the Body of our Saviour was laid takes up a whole Side of this Cave; 'tis a Stone rais'd from the Ground to the Height of two Feet and four Inches; its Length is five Feet eleven Inches, and its Breadth two Feet and eight Inches, placed lengthwise from East to West. It remains even to this Day, but all incrusted with a white Marble. See the Voyage of Paul Lucas in Asia Minor, t. 2. p. 12, &c. He has several times visited this holy Place, and gives an exact Description of it, as it is to be seen at this Day.

[Concil. t. 3. p. 561, 574.] Sepulchre of the Holy Virgin. There are two Traditions concerning the Burial of the Holy Virgin, as there are two concerning the Place of her Death. Those who affirm, that she follow'd St. John the Evangelist to Ephesus, and that she died there, pretend, that her Tomb was still to be seen in the Year 431, when the Council of Ephesus was held: And this Opinion is expressly taken Notice of, in a Letter of this Council's. According to another Opinion, she died at Jerusalem, where her Tomb is to be seen; which Opinion is as much follow'd as the other. Juvenal Bishop of Jerusalem, who could not be ignorant of what had pass'd at the Council of Ephesus, since he himself was present at it, wrote to the Empress Pulcheria, and to the Emperor Marcian, who sent to him for Relicks of the Virgin Mary, That her Tomb was shewn at Gethsemani near to [Nicepb. Hist. l. 2. c. 32. & l. 15. c. 14.] Jerusalem, but that it was empty. 'Tis added, that when the Emperor was inform'd of this, he caus'd this Tomb to be brought to Constantinople, with an Handkerchief that was put therein, and which he caus'd to be set up about the Year 455, in the new Church consecrated to our Lady of Blaquern.

Yet since that time they have not left off to shew the Tomb of the Virgin at Jerusalem. Adamnan says, that it was to be [Adamnan. de locis sanctis, c. 9. Beda, l. 3. lib. de loc. SS. c. 3.] seen in the Valley of Jehoshaphat near to this City. Bede testifies, that it might be seen at Jerusalem in his Time, but empty. It was put into the Basilicon that the Empress Helena caused to be built there. Travellers assure us,[8] that it may still be seen in the Vale of Jehoshaphat, wherein the Brook Kedron runs, but on the other Side of this Brook, over-against Gethsameni and the Mount of Olives; that the Part of the Monument which appears above-ground is very little raised; that they descend into the Sepulchre by fifty Steps; that it is made in the Form of a Cell, or small Grotto, where is seen something like an Altar of Stone, upon which the Coffin or the Body might have been placed; that both the Cell and the Altar are hewn out of the Rock. This is what they say of it; but this is not Authority enough to convince us, that this is the real Sepulchre of the Holy Virgin.

Sepulture

[Tacit. Annal. c. 5.] SEPULTURE, or Burial. The Hebrews, as is said, were always very careful about the Burial of their Dead. To be deprived of Burial, according to them, was one of the greatest Misfortunes that could happen to a Man. They did not refuse to pay this Duty to any one, not even to their Enemies. But it was not perform'd to such as had laid violent Hands upon themselves, a till after the Sun was set; and they believed that their Souls were plunged into Hell. This great Care about Sepulture proceeded from their full Persuasion of the Immortality of the Soul. The Scripture threatens the Wicked, that they should be deprived of Sepulture, as one of the greatest Calamities that can be inflicted on them. Altho' a Man should live a long Time, and should have an hundred Children; yet when he dies, if he should be deprived of the Honour of Burial, I maintain, says the [Ecclef. vi. 3. Jer. viii. 2.] Wiseman, that he would be no better than an Abortion. Jeremiah threatens the Kings, Priests, and false Prophets, who have worshipp'd Idols, that their Bones should be cast out of their Graves as the Dung of the Earth. The same Prophet foretells, that Jehoiakim, King of Judah, [Jer. xxii. 18, 19.] who built up his House in Iniquity, who deliver'd up himself to all sorts of criminal Actions, to Avarice and Violence; he tells him, he should be buried with the Burial of Asses; Sepulturâ asini sepelietur; That he should be cast out of the Gates of Jerusaleem to the Fowls of the Air. It is observable, that Jason, who had hindred [2 Macc. v. 10.] many Jews of the Honour of Sepulture, was himself treated after the same manner. He dy'd in a strange Country, and was thrown out like Carrion into the Fields, without so much as being put into a strange Grave. Sepulturâ negne peregrinâ usus. Good Men made it a Part of their Piety and Devotion to bury the Dead, as may be seen by the Example of Tobit. See SEPULCHRE, and our Dissertation upon the Funerals of the Hebrews, printed before the Book of Ecclesiasticus; and the Book of John Nicolai, De Sepulchris Hebræorum, and what we have already said upon the Article of the DEAD.

The Hebrew reads, he was Prince of Menucha; which may be translated by Prince of Menucha, a City or Canton of the Tribe of Benjamin; (see 1 Chron. ii. 52, 54. viii. 6.) or Prince of Rest, Guard of the King's Chamber or Bed; or Prince of the Presents, Distributer of the King's Liberalities, his Almoner, or Intendant of the Offerings the King made to the Temple; or rather, in this Deputation Seraiah was charged with the Tributes or Presents that Zedekiah sent to Nebuchadnezzar; and this Acceptation of the Words returns to that of the Vulgate, Princeps Prophetiæ, Head of the Embassy or Deputation.

When therefore Seraiah was sent to Babylon by King Zedekiah,[1] Jeremiah sent a Letter by him, which was to be read to the Captives there. This Letter contain'd a Prophecy of the Fall of Babylon; and after it was read, Seraiah was order'd to tie it to a Stone, and to throw it into the[2] Euphrates, and to say; Thus shall Babylon sink, and shall not rise from the Evil that I will bring upon her. Baruch went with his Brother Seraiah upon this Commission. Seraphim

SERAPHIM, or Zeraphim. This Word comes from the Hebrew Word Zaraph, which signifies to burn, to melt Metal, to purify. Zeraphim is us'd to signify Goldsmiths [Zeraphim. Aurifices, Conflatores. Numbers xxi. 6.] or Founders. Also the Name Seraphim or Saraphim is given to those winged fiery Serpents, that destroy'd the Israelites in the Desart, and which we have spoke of under the Article SARAPH, and shall mention again under the Title [Isai. vi. 2. Sheraphim.] SERPENTS. Lastly, Seraphim, in Isaiah, is put for a Kind of Angels, which were over the Throne of the Lord, and had six Wings; with two of which they cover'd their Face, with two they cover'd their Feet, and flew with the two others. They cry'd to one another and said; Holy, holy, holy is the Lord of Hosts, the whole Earth is full of his Glory. The Word Seraphim taken in this Sense, is found only in this one Place of the Old or New Testament. Their Name is writ with ש*Shin* or Schin; but the Signification is still the same as if it had been writ with צ*Tzade*. In the Distinction of the nine Choirs of Angels, the Seraphims are put in the first Rank, and above the Cherubims.

Serapis

SERAPIS, a God of the Egyptians. His Name is not to be found in the Text of Scripture; but we can hardly be excused from bringing it in here, because it has been pretended, that the Egyptians adored the Patriarch Joseph under the Name of Serapis. This Opinion is found in some antient Authors, as Julius Firmicus and [Jul. Firm. de Errore prophan. Religion. Rufin. hist. l. 2. c. 23.] Rufinus, and has been embraced by some learned Moderns, as Vossius, Onzelius, Spencer, and some others. They found their Opinion upon several seeming Coincidences, between Joseph and Serapis. 'Tis said that Serapis had merited divine Honours in Egypt, for having deliver'd the Country from a grievous Famine; he is painted with a Basket, and Ears of Corn upon his Head.

They pretend that Serapis is the same as Apis, and that there is no more Difference between them, than between an Ox alive, and an Ox dead and put into a Coffin. While the Bull Apis was alive, he was worshipp'd by the Name of Apis; but he was no sooner dead, than they gave him the Name of Serapis, which is as much as to say in Greek, Apis en soro, Apis in his Coffin, or Soros Apidos, the Coffin of Apis[1]. Serapis was also confounded with Pluto, with Jupiter, with Osiris, with the Sun, with Esculapius. Besides, they gave him an Hebrew Etymology, which is still more conformable to the Character of Joseph. Sar,[2] in Hebrew, signifies a Prince; Apis, the Bull Apis; or Sar-abir, the powerful Prince. And as between Joseph and Apis or Osiris, there are still found other Strokes of Resemblance, they are persuaded, that the Egyptians intended to honour Joseph under the Names of these Deities.

But to all this a Reason is oppos'd, which subverts this whole Hypothesis. The Historians teach us, that Serapis is but an upstart Deity in Egypt. Tacitus[3] relates the History of his Translation from Sinope, a City of Pontus, to Alexandria, by the Care of Ptolemy, the first King of Egypt. Origen, [Origen. l. 1. contra Cels. p. 257.] speaking of this God, says, that he was but a new Comer into Egypt; that his Story was long, and of little Credit, and that he was not in Vogue till King Ptolemy brought him in, who attempted to introduce his Worship into his Kingdom. Upon this Account it cannot be affirm'd, that Serapis is the same as Joseph; or that the Egyptians intended to pay Adoration to this Patriarch under the Name of Serapis, since Joseph was so many Ages more antient than Serapis in this Country. As for the Etymologies of the Word Serapis, taken from the Greek Language, they deserve no Consideration, since the Greek Tongue was not known in Egypt till after the Time of the Ptolemy's; and besides, these Etymologies prove nothing at all for that Opinion, that makes him the same as Joseph.

'Tis true, some have thought,[4] that there were two Serapis's acknowledged in Egypt, one more ancient, known long before him, who was brought from Sinope, since he is the same as Apis and Osiris; the other more modern, of whom we have [Tacit. hist. l. 4. c. 84.] spoke before. Tacitus clearly distinguishes these two Deities, when he says, that King Ptolemy caus'd a magnificent Temple to be built to Serapis, at Rachotis, a Place where formerly was a Chapel consecrated to Serapis and Isis. Fuerat illic sacellum Serapidi atque Isidi antiquitus sacratum. But how came this pretended antient Serapis to escape the Diligence of Herodotus, and other Antients, who have treated of the Religion of the Egyptians? Therefore Tacitus has certainly put Serapis and Isis instead of Osiris and Isis.

Sergius Paulus

SERGIUS PAULUS, Proconsul or Governor of the Island of Cyprus, who was converted by St. Paul, in the Year of [Acts xiii. 7.] Christ 44 or 45. This Proconsul, who was otherwise a Man of Prudence, had a Magician about him, whom he took for a Man enlightened and favoured of God. Having heard of the Arrival of Paul and Barnabas in the Isle of Cyprus, he sent for them, and desired to hear the Word of God. But Elymas did what he could to hinder him from it. Then Paul, fill'd with the Holy Ghost, said to him; O full of all Subtilty and all Mischief, thou Child of the Devil, thou Enemy of all Righteousness, wilt thou not cease to pervert the right Ways of the Lord? And now behold, the Hand of the Lord is upon thee, and thou shalt be blind, not seeing the Sun for a Season. And he immediately became blind. When Sergius Paulus beheld this, he embraced the Christian Faith, and admired the Doctrine of the Lord. Some believe[1] Sergius Paulus to be the same whom the Church at Narbonne honours as its first Bishop; but the more knowing think, that this Bishop must be later than Sergius Paulus by above two Centuries. Others think[2], St. Paul did not bear this Name till after the Conversion of Sergius Paulus, and that he took it up as a Trophy of the Victory he had obtain'd upon this Occasion, over the Prince of Darkness. But this Opinion is not universally follow'd, tho' St. Luke does not give him the Name of Paul till after this Event.

Seron

[1 Macc. iii. 14, 23.] SERON, General of the Army of Antiochus Epiphanes. He having heard of the Defeat of Apollonius, and that Judas Maccabæus had gather'd together an Army of Jews zealous for the Law of their Fathers; fancied with himself, that he had an Opportunity of acquiring great Glory and Reputation, by fighting with Judas and those that adhered to him, who contemned the Orders of the King. He came therefore with a powerful Army, and advanced as far as Bethoron. Judas took the Field against him with his little Army; and his People seeing the Multitude of their Enemies, said to him; How shall we be able to fight with so great an Army, especially being weakened with Fasting, as we are this Day? But he encouraged them, saying; It is equally easy to God, either to give the Victory to the many or the few. And at the same Time he charged the Army of Seron, put it to flight, and pursued it as far as Bethoron and the Plain. He kill'd eight hundred of them, and the rest took Refuge in the Land of the Philistines. No farther mention is made of Seron in History after this Battle, which happen'd in the Year of the World 3838, before Christ 162, before the vulgar Era 166.

Serpent

[Gen. iii. 15. נחש Opis Serpens. Eccles. xxv. 15.] SERPENT; in Latin, Serpens; in Greek, Ophis; in Hebrew, Nachash. Interpreters have much speculated concerning the Nature of the first Serpent, that tempted Eve. Some have thought, that then the Serpent had two, or four, or many Feet. But there is no Probability that this Animal was otherwise than what it is now. And it cannot be doubted, but that under the Name of the Serpent we are to understand the Devil, who made use of a real Serpent to seduce the first Woman. In the Curse that God gave the Serpent, he told him, that the Seed of the Woman should bruise the Serpent's Head; because in reality, the Serpent having his Heart under his Throat, and very near his Head, the readiest way to kill him is to squeeze or cut off his Head. Many have suppos'd that his chief Subtilty, or Wisdom, as the Gospel calls it,[1] consists in this, that he chuses to expose his whole Body to Danger, that he may save his Head.

Jesus, the Son of Sirach, says, There is no Head above the Head of a Serpent; but by the Word Head in this Place, we should understand the Venom: For the Hebrew Word Rosh, which signifies the Head, signifies [See Deut. xxxii. 33.] also the Venom of a Serpent, which some place in its Gall, others in its Tongue, and others in its Teeth. The Scripture in different Passages expresses itself, sometimes as supposing the Gall of the Serpent to be its Venom, Job xx. 14. His Meat in his Bowels is turned; it is the Gall of Asps within [Psal. cxl. 3. Proverbs xxiii. 32.] him. David seems to place it in the Tongue. They have sharpened their Tongues like a Serpent. And Solomon in the Teeth. At the last it biteth like a Serpent, and stingeth like an Adder.

[Gen. iii. 14. Isa. lxv. 25. Mic. vii. 17.] Another Curse that God gave the Serpent was, that it should feed upon Dust. Dust shalt thou eat all the Days of thy Life. Isaiah says also, that Dust is the Food of the Serpent. Dust shall be the Serpent's Meat. And Micah; They shall lick the Dust like a Serpent. 'Tis true, however, that they eat Flesh, Birds, Frogs, Fish, Fruits, Grass, &c. But as they continually creep upon the Earth, it is impossible but that their Food must be often defiled with Dust and Dirt. Some of 'em may really eat Earth out of Necessity, or at least Earth-worms, which[2] they cannot swallow without a good deal of Dirt with them.

The Craft, the Wisdom, the Subtilty of the Serpent, are things insisted on in Scripture, as Qualities that distinguish them from other Animals. Moses intending to prepare the Mind of his Reader for the relation of Eve's Temptation, begins with affirming, Now the Serpent was more subtil than any Beast of the Field which the Lord God had made. And Jesus Christ himself recommends to his Apostles, to have the Wisdom of the Serpent. They bring several Proofs of this Subtilty of the Serpent. They tell us, that the Cerastes hides himself in the Sand, in order to bite the Horse's Foot, that he might throw his Rider. Jacob makes an Allusion to this in the Blessing he gave to Dan. Dan shall be a Serpent by the Way, an Adder in the Path, that biteth the Horseheels, so that his Rider shall fall backward. [Epiphan. Physiolog.] Epiphanius brings four Proofs of the Wisdom of the Serpent. First, When he is old, he has the Secret of growing young again, and of stripping off his old Skin or Slough, by squeezing himself between two Rocks. Secondly, He assaults a Man if he sees him naked, but flees if he finds him cloathed. But it is probable there is a Fault in this Passage of Epiphanius, and that he intends to say the contrary of this. For it is generally affirm'd,[3] that the Serpent is afraid of a naked Man, but attacks him if he has his Cloaths on. Thirdly, When he is assaulted, his chief Care is to secure his Head. This is attested by a great Number of Writers. Lastly, When he goes to drink at a Fountain, he first vomits up all his Poison, for fear of poisoning himself as he is drinking. This Observation is not assented to by every Body, tho' it has a great many Defenders.

They relate still other Instances of the Serpent's Subtilty; as, for Example, it stops up its Ears that it may not hear the Voice of the Charmer or Inchanter. The Psalmist takes notice of this piece of Subtilty of the Adder. Like the deaf Adder that stoppeth her Ear, which will not hearken to the Voice of the Charmers, charming never so wisely. 'Tis said it applies one of its Ears hard to the Ground, and stops up the other with the End of its Tail. We have written a Dissertation upon this, which is put before our second Tome upon the Psalms. See also Bochart, De Animal. sacr. par. 2. l. 3.[4]. 6. and the Commentators upon Psalm lviii. 4. Others say, the Subtilty of the Serpent consists in its Agility and Suppleness; or in a Secret it has in recovering its Sight by the Juice of Fennil. Lastly, every one proposes his own Conjectures in this matter. [Bochart. de animal. sacr. t. 1. l. 3. c. 5.] We have particularly spoken of the Serpents mentioned in Scripture, under their proper Articles. There were eleven Kind of Serpents known among the Hebrews;[5] 1. Ephe, the Viper. 2. Chephir, a sort of Aspick, or a Lion. 3. Acshub, the Aspick. 4. Pethen, the Aspick. 5. Tzeboa, a speckled Serpent, call'd Hyena by the Greeks and Egyptians. 6. Tzimmaon, according to St. Jerome. This is the Serpent call'd Dipsas, because of the Thirst that its Biting produces. But Bochart maintains, that it does not signify a Serpent, but a dry and burnt-up Place. 7. Tzepha, or Tziphoni, a Basilisk: Not the fabulous Serpent or Cockatrice, of which they tell so many foolish Stories, but the true Regulus or Basilisk, which is a Serpent made like others, but more dangerous, and whose Poison is more subtil. See BASILISK, and Bochart de Animal. sacr. p. 2. l. 3. c. 9, 10. 8. The Kippos, which the Septuagint, St. Jerome, and the Chaldee understand of the Urchin or Hedge-hog; but the same Bochart thinks it to be the Serpent call'd by the Greeks Acontias, that is to say, the Dart, so call'd, because it darts itself very far and very high after its Prey. See Bochart, de Animal. sacr. par. 2. l. 3. c. 11, and the Authors he refers to. 9. The Shephiphon, which St. Jerome has translated by Cerastes, Gen. xlix. 17. This Serpent is of the Colour of Sand, in which it hides itself, and where it watches its Prey. The Name of Cerastes is given it, because it has a sort of fleshy Horns, or two Bunches in the Shape of Grains of Barley. Bochart, de Animal. sacr. p. 2. l. 3. c. 12. 10. The tenth sort of Serpents is call'd in Hebrew, Shacal, and is mention'd in Psalm xci. 13. Thou shalt tread upon the Lion and Adder; the young Lion and the Dragon shalt thou trample under Feet. The Septuagint, the Syriack, and the Arabick understand it here; Bochart supports their Opinion,[4] and shews, that the Name of Black, for that's the Signification of Shacal, agrees to several Serpents, and particularly to the Aspick, the Dipsas, the Hydra, &c. but the greatest Part of the more knowing Interpreters are of Opinion, that the Word Shacal, in this place, signifies a Lion, and not a Serpent. And this Sentiment seems to us much more probable. It is certain that this Hebrew Word generally signifies a black Lion, as this Author proves himself. 11. Lastly, the Saraph is a flying [Bochart. de animal. sacr. t. 1. l. 3. c. 5.] Serpent, and is the only Serpent that we know that has Wings. The Word Saraph properly signifies to burn, and 'tis thought this Name was given it, either because of its Colour, or because of that Heat and [Herodot. l. 2. c. 75, 76.] Thirst it creates by its Biting. Herodotus, who had seen of these Serpents, says, they had great resemblance to those which the Greeks and Latins call'd Hydræ. Bochart endeavours to prove they were real Hydræ. The same Herodotus tells us, he went on purpose to the City of Butus, to see those flying Serpents of which he had heard speak. He saw near this City great Heaps of Bones, and the Spines of those Animals, that had been put to Death and devoured by the Ibis. The Place, says he, where they are to be seen is a narrow Neck that widens towards Egypt. When therefore, at the Beginning of the Spring, these Serpents endeavour to come out of Arabia into Egypt, the Bird call'd Ibis sets upon them, and destroys a great Number of them. The Wings of these Serpents are not Feathers, like the Wings of Birds, but rather like to those of Batts.

THE BRASEN SERPENT SET UP BY MOSES IN THE WILDERNESS.Num. XXI. v. 6. VOL. II. 2d Gath. Dd.

[Idem. l. 3. c.107,108, 109, 110.] He says elsewhere, that these Serpents are not large; that they are speckled, or of several Colours; that they are in such great Quantities in Arabia, that the Inhabitants could not subsist for 'em, if Providence had allow'd them to multiply according to the usual Laws of Nature. But the Arabians affirm, that the Female puts the Male to Death when they engender, and that the young ones at their Birth kill their Mother. They love sweet Smells, and frequent such Trees as bear Spices, and the Marshes where the aromatick Reed (or Casia) grows. The Arabians drive them away from about the Trees by the Smoke of Styrax; and when they go to gather the Reed (or Casia) they cloath themselves with Skins, and cover their Heads, all but their Eyes; then they go into these Marshes, from whence they drive away the winged Serpents, whose Flight has something terrible, and whose Biting is very dangerous.

We have a little enlarged upon these [Numbers xxi. 9. Isa. vi. 2. xiv. 29. xxx. 6.] Serpents, call'd Saraph in Scripture, because it was these Serpents that made so great a Destruction among the Israelites, and were the Death of so many People in the Desart. 'Twas one of these Saraphs that Moses caus'd to be put up in the Wilderness, at the Sight of which the Israelites were made whole. On this Subject may be read Bochart de Animal. sacr. p. 2. l. 3. c. 13, and Cicero, l. 1. de Natura Deorum; Mela, l. 3. c. 9. Lucan, l. 6. Solinus, c. 32. Ammianus Marcellinus, c. 22. Ælian, l. 2. c. 38. and other of the Moderns, quoted by the same Bochart, who speak of these flying Serpents.

Brazen Serpent. This was a Figure of the Serpent Saraph, of which we have now spoke, which Moses caus'd to be put on the [Numbers xxi. 9.] Top of a Pike, promising the Hebrews, that all those that should be bit by Serpents, and who should look upon this Image, should be presently healed. The Event was answerable to this Promise. Our Saviour [John iii. 14.] in the Gospel of St. John informs us, that this Serpent thus rais'd up, was a Representation of his Passion and Crucifixion. As Moses lifted up the Serpent in the Wilderness, even so must the Son of Man be lifted up. This Brazen Serpent was preserved among the Israelites down to the Time of Hezekiah, who being inform'd the People paid a superstitious Worship to it, had it broke in Pieces, and by way of Contempt gave it the Name of Nehushtan, that is to say, a brazen Bawble or Trifle. See [2 Kings xviii. 4.] HEZEKIAH and NEHUSHTAN.

The Arrow Serpent, call'd in Greek, Acousias, is a flying Serpent, known to the [Bib. Orien. p. 684.] Turks by the Name of Ocilan. They are often seen in the Archipelago, and chiefly in the Island of Metelin; they fight with one another in the Air, but do Men no Harm. 'Twas this kind of Serpent that set upon the Israelites in the Wilderness. A learned English-man pretends[6], that the Activity and Splendor accompanying these Animals, may serve for an Emblem to express the Zeal and Purity of the Angels which in Scripture are call'd Seraphim, which is the Name that the Hebrews gave to the Serpents we are speaking of. He thinks that the Angels, when they made their Appearances to Men, assum'd the Form of Seraphs, or of flying Serpents; that the Devil spoke to Eve in the same Shape; that it was this that deceived her, and made her fall into the Snare, imagining him to be a Seraphim or Angel. He adds, that it was this that gave occasion to that odd Thought of some antient Hereticks,[7] who pretended, that the Serpent who tempted Eve was the Son of God, or the Christ, very different from Jesus, and that she believed him as such. But to leave these Whimsies;

I think we may put into the same Class another [Marsham. Canon. Chronic.] Opinion of a learned Man, who imagin'd that the Brazen Serpent was a kind of Talisman, that is to say, one of those Pieces of Metal which are cast and engraven under certain Constellations, from whence they derive an extraordinary Vertue to procure Love, to cure Distempers, and such like. Some impute their Effects to the Devil; others to the Nature of the Metal, and to the Influence of the Constellation. This Author, therefore, would make us believe, that the Brazen Serpent set up by Moses cured the Hebrews when bit by Serpents, just as the Talismans cure certain Distempers by the Sympathy there is between the Metals of which they are made, or the Influence of the Stars under which they are form'd, and the Disease they are to cure. Buxtorf, on the contrary, thinks,[8] that the Sight of the Brazen Serpent, ought naturally to increase the Distemper of the Wounded, instead of healing it; and that God shew'd a double Efficacy of his Power, by healing with Means which ought to have had a quite contrary Effect. But it is to little purpose to multiply Miracles here; that which God wrought by the Brazen Serpent is here very manifest.

In the Church of St. Ambrose at Milan they pretend to keep a Brazen Serpent, which they shew for that of Moses; but every one may believe of this as he pleases. The Serpent that is always represented with Esculapius, and with the Goddess Salus, and often with the Egyptian Deities, is a Symbol of Healing or Health, which perhaps is derived from the Brazen Serpent of Moses.

The Worship of the Serpent is observed through all the Pagan Antiquity. The Devil who tempted the first Woman under the Shape of a Serpent, takes a Pleasure to deify this Animal, as a Trophy of his Victory over Mankind. The Babylonians in Daniel's Time worshipp'd a Dragon, which was demolish'd [Bell and Dragon.] by this Prophet. 'Tis well known what Worship was paid to the Serpent at Epidaurus, and the Manner in which it was pretended he was brought to Rome. The Egyptians sometimes represented their Gods with the Bodies of Serpents; and they paid an Idolatrous Worship to these so odious and dangerous Animals. They call'd them their good Genius's, and look'd upon them as the Symbol of Medicine, of the Sun, of Apollo. They were put into the Charge of Ceres and Proserpine. Herodotus says, that in his time, near [Herodot. l. 2. c. 74.] Thebes, were to be seen tame Serpents consecrated to Jupiter. They did nobody any harm, and after their Death they were buried in Jupiter's Temple. They were of the Cerastes, had two Horns, and were but small.

[Ælian. de anim. l. xi. c. 22. Idem. l. xi. c. 17.] Elian speaks of a sacred Dragon, that was kept in Phrygia, in a Wood dedicated to Diana. He also speaks of domestick Serpents, which were in the Houses of the Egyptians, were there fed, and look'd upon as Houshold-Gods; and of another Serpent worshipp'd in a Tower at Melitus in Egypt. He had a Priest and Officers to attend him. He was served every Day upon a Table or Altar with Meal kneaded up with Honey, which the next Day was found to be eaten up. At this Day Serpents are honour'd in Calecut; the Kings and the Bramins look upon them as sacred Animals, created by God to afflict Men, and to punish them for their Sins.

The Ophites took their Name from Ophis, which, in Greek, signifies a Serpent. These antient Hereticks[9] worshipp'd the Serpent that betray'd Eve, and ascribed all sorts of Knowledge to this Animal, of which they thought them to be Masters and Inventors. In a word, they believed the Serpent that tempted Eve was the Christ, which afterwards came down and was incarnate in the Person of Jesus. That it was Jesus, but not the Christ, that suffer'd. For which reason they made all Proselytes to their Sect to renounce Jesus. When their Priests celebrated their Mysteries, they made one of these Creatures to come out of his Hole, and after he had roul'd himself upon the things that were to be offer'd in Sacrifice, they said that Jesus Christ had sanctified them, and then gave them to the People to worship them.

[Isa. xxv. 1. נחש ברח] Serpent crossing like a Bar; Serpens vectis, Vulgate. This Serpent is found in two Passages of Scripture: First in Isaiah, In die illa visitabit Dominus in gladio suo ——— super Leviathan serpentem vectem,[10] & super Leviathan serpentem tortuosum. The Hebrew says, Nachash beriach, and Nachash aktalon. Job[11] speaks of the same Serpent; but St. Jerome has translated the Hebrew by serpentem tortuosum. Some render the Hebrew, Nachash beriach, by flying Serpent, or shutting Serpent, as a Bar that shuts a Door. Bochart[12] thinks, that this Serpens vectis is no other than the Baratell, a Fish known in Oppian, Elian, Galen, Suidas, under the Name of Zygæna. Its Head is neither round, nor high, nor flat, nor pointed, but swelling on the two Sides, one stretching transversly like a Bar. 'Tis known that the Hebrews reckon'd Fishes in the Tribe of Reptiles and Serpents, and that the Crocodile or Leviathan is also of this Number.

[Job xxvi. 13. Is. xxvii. 1.] Serpent is also taken for the Devil. The invisible Serpent that tempted Eve by the Organs of the sensible Serpent, was the Devil, as the Scripture and the Commentators allow. Some also explain of the Devil what Job says of the crooked Serpent, and what Isaiah says of the Serpent like a Bar. See the foregoing [Rev. xii. 9, 14.] Article. St. John in his Revelation observes plainly, that the Old Serpent is the Devil and Satan. And the great Dragon was cast out, that Old Serpent call'd the Devil and Satan, which deceiveth the whole Word. The Jews also call the Devil, the Old Serpent.

Serug

SERUG, or Sarug, Son of Reu, and Father [Gen. xi. 20, 21, 22. 1 Chron. i. 26.] of Nahor.

'Tis pretended that it was Serug, who was the first after the Deluge, that began to worship [Clem. Alex. Euseb. Epiphan. Theodor.] the Creatures. In his Time Men form'd a Multitude of Idols, by which the Devil perform'd many Prodigies. He thought he might adore the Images of Men, who had distinguish'd themselves by their Vertues, and by the good Deeds they had perform'd for Mankind. This introduced the Worship of the Dead, and by natural Consequence, all sorts of of Idolatry and Polytheism.

Servant (I)

I. SERVANT. This Word generally signifies a Slave. For formerly among the Hebrews, and the neighbouring Nations, the greatest Part of Servants were Slaves, that is to say, they belong'd absolutely to their Masters, who had a Right to dispose of their Persons, their Bodies, Goods, and even of their Lives in some Cases.

II. SERVANT. The Hebrews had two [Levit. xxv. 44, 45, &c.] sorts of Servants or Slaves. Some were Strangers, either bought, or taken in the Wars, and their Masters kept them, exchanged them, or sold them; in a Word, dispos'd of them as their own Goods. The others were Hebrew Slaves, who being poor, sold themselves, or were sold to pay their Debts; or were deliver'd up for Slaves by their Parents, in Cases of Necessity. This sort of Hebrew Slaves continued in Slavery but to the Year of Jubilee; then they might return to Liberty again, and their Masters could not retain them against their Wills. If they would continue voluntarily with their Masters, they were brought before the Judges; there they made a Declaration, that for this Time they disclaim'd the Privilege of the Law, had their Ears bored with an Awl, by applying them to the [Exod. xxi. 2, 5, 6, 7, &c.] Door-posts of their Master; and after that they had no longer any Power of recovering their Liberty, except at the next Year of Jubilee, which was at the end of nine and forty Years.

III. SERVANT, is also taken for a Man that dedicates himself to the Service of another, by the choice of his own Will and Inclination. Thus Joshua was the Servant of Moses, Elisha of Elijah, Gehazi of Elisha, St. Peter, St. Andrew, St. Philip, and the rest, were Servants of Jesus Christ.

Servant (IV)

IV. SERVANT, is also put for the Subjects of a Prince. The Servants of Pharaoh, the Servants of Saul, and those of David, are their Subjects in general, and their Domesticks in particular. In like manner also the Philistines, the Syrians, and several other Nations, were Servants of David; they obey'd him, they were his Subjects, they paid him Tribute.

V. The SERVANTS of God, the Servants of the Lord, are the Priests, the Prophets, those that make Profession of a particular Piety. The Name of the Man of God, and the Servant of God, is often given to Moses by way of Eminence; and St. Paul often takes the same Character. He gives very excellent Rules of Morality to Christian Slaves. See 1 Cor. vii. 21, 22; &c. Ephes. vi. 5, 6, 7. Colos. iii. 22. 2 Tim. ii. 9.

VI. SERVANTS, or Slaves, as oppos'd to those that are free, and to the Children of the Promises, represent the Jews in Contradistinction to the Christians. The Jews were the Slaves, represented by Hagar and by Ishmael; the Christians are the Children of Liberty, represented by Sarah and by Isaac. St. Paul confirms this Truth through all his Epistles, and especially in that to the Galatians.

Sesostris

SESOSTRIS, a King of Egypt. We should not have mention'd this Prince here, since his Name is not to be found in Scripture; but that several have pretended that he is the same as Shishak, or Sesac, who came to invade Rehoboam, Son of Solomon King of Judah; wherefore it is proper to speak a Word or two of him in this Place. [Herodot. l. 2.] This is what Herodotus informs us of him. This Author says, that from Maris till Sesostris, there was no King whose Actions deserved any Notice. When this Prince had reduced the People which were beyond the Gulph of Arabia, or the Red-sea, he turn'd his Arms against those Nations that dwelt upon the Continent, and brought them under his Obedience. But those whom he found to be warlike, and valiantly to fight for their Liberties, he distinguish'd from others by honourable Inscriptions, which he set up in their Countries, that made mention of their Valour and brave Resistance. But those, on the contrary, who did not gallantly defend themselves, he set a Mark of Infamy upon, by erecting Monuments in their Country, which shew'd they had behaved themselves like Women. And this was expressed upon the Monuments after a manner that was equally shameful and ignominious, not only by Letters, but also by Figures engraven thereon.

He was not satisfied with subduing the Nations of Asia, but he passed into Europe, and conquer'd the Thracians and Scythians; and what made it believed that he went no farther, was, that none of Sesostris's Monuments are found beyond these Countries. Herodotus thinks, that from thence they pass'd into the Country of the Colchians, of which he has no certain Proofs, except that the Colchians, as well as the Egyptians, received Circumcision; that their Tongue is the same, and that they make Linen after the same manner. Herodotus assures us, that in Palestine he had seen these Inscriptions and Monuments of Sesostris, with disgraceful Figures, shewing the the small Resistance, and little Generosity he had found among those People. The Inscriptions bore these Words; I have won this Country by my Shoulders.

While he was absent, his Brother usurped the Government of Egypt; and when Sesostris return'd, he was invited by his Brother to enter into a House, where he was immediately surrounded by Flames, which proceeded from Wood placed round about. On this Occasion Sesostris follow'd the Counsel of his Wife, who had kept him Company in all his Expeditions. He cast two of his six Sons upon the lighted Wood, and thus making himself a Passage through the Flames, he step'd over their Bodies with his other Sons, and so escaped the Danger. He severely punish'd his Brother for what he had done against him, and employ'd a Multitude of Captives, which he had brought along with him, to perform several great Works in Egypt. His Successor was Pheron. This is the Substance of what Herodotus informs us concerning Sesostris, wherein he mentions but one Word about the Conquests of this Prince in Palestine; yet this is all the Foundation that they have, who make Shishak to be the same as Sesostris.

Sestertius

SESTERTIUS, a Roman Money. Its Name is not found in Scripture. Its value was about three Half-pence;[1] ten Sestertii made one Shilling and five Pence; one hundred Sestertii made fourteen Shillings and three Pence; and a thousand Sestertii made seven Pounds, two Shillings, six Pence three Farthings, and three Quarters of a Farthing, Sterling.

A great Sestertius, unum Sestertium, was valued at a thousand small Sestertii.

Seth

SETH, Son of Adam and of Eve, was [Gen. v. 3, 6, 10, 11.] born in the Year of the World 130. Seth at the Age of one hundred and five Years begat Enos, in the Year of the World 235. He lived after this eight hundred and seven Years; in all nine hundred and twelve Years, and died in the Year of the World 1042, before Christ 2958, before the vulgar Era 2962. Seth was the Chief of the Race of the Saints, and of the Children of God, as the Scripture calls them, who preserved the [Gen. vi. 2.] true Religion and Piety in the World, when as the Descendants of Cain gave themselves up to all Sorts of Wickedness.

The Apocryphal Book call'd the lesser [Syncell. Chronic. p. 10. ex parva Genesi.] Genesis, pretends, that when Seth was forty Years of Age, he was rapt, up into Heaven by the Angels, and was there told of the Crime that the Watchers or Angels should commit; the Deluge that should drown the World, and the coming of our Saviour into the World: Of which Events he inform'd his Parents Adam and Eve. 'Tis there read also, that the Posterity of Seth continued for a thousand Years after the Creation of the World in the Country, just above Eden, where they lived in profound Peace and Quiet; but the Devil being envious of their Happiness and Innocence, seduced them by the Charms and Beauty of the Daughters of Men. Or as Moses says, The Sons of God saw the Daughters of Men, that they were Fair; and they took them Wives of all which they chose. Lastly, the same Book tells us, that Seth at the Age of one hundred and ninety one Years, took to Wife his own Sister call'd Azura. Epiphanius a calls her Orea; [Irenæ. l. 1. c. 34. ex Gnost. Epiphan. hæres. 39. c. 1.] and Irenæus, or rather the Gnosticks in Irenæus, call her Norea.

The Hereticks call'd Sethians believed, that Seth was the Christ, and that Jesus Christ was no other than this Patriarch, who after having been transported out of the World, did at last return into it again in a miraculous Manner, and was named Jesus. They did not acknowledge his Birth of the Virgin Mary, but pretended he appear'd again in the World after a Manner that was altogether miraculous. They said he had the Name of God given him before the Deluge;[1] for it was of his Sons that it was said, The Sons of God saw the Daughters of Men. And this was either because of his eminent Piety, or because he invented the Use of Letters and Writing, and the Names of the Stars and Planets. An antient Chronicle says[2], that this Patriarch being snatch'd up into Heaven, as we have said before, his Face ever afterwards appear'd luminous, like Moses's Face after he had conversed with the Lord upon Mount Sinai. Several impertinent Books have been [Ex. xxxiv. 29, 30. Joseph. Antiq. l. 1. c. 2.] ascribed to Seth. 'Tis known what Josephus says of the two Columns erected before the Deluge by the Children of Seth. One was of Brick, to withstand the Fire; and the other was of Stone, to withstand the Water, upon which they inscribed their Discoveries in Astronomy. Lambecius cites [Lamb. l. 7. p. 261.] a Manuscript in the Emperor's Library, call'd, The Astronomy delivered by an Angel to the Patriarch Seth. The Author of the imperfect Work upon St. Matthew, [Aut. Oper. imperf. in Matth. homil. 2.] speaks of a certain Book that bore the Name of Seth, which mention'd the Star that appear'd to the Magi, and the Presents they made to our Saviour. Epiphanius says,[3] that the Gnosticks and Sethians had several Books that bore the Name of Seth. The Mahometans assure us,[4] that God sent Seth not less than fifty Volumes, which were[5] brought him from Heaven. The Arabians, the Ethiopians, and the Samaritans, pretend also to have the Books of this antient Patriarch. See Fabricius, Apocrypha V. T. Art. SETH.

The Mussulmen hold by a fabulous [D'Herbel. Bib. Orien. p. 734. col. 2. Gen. vi. 2.] Tradition, that those who are call'd in Scripture, the Children of God, were of a peculiar Species, between Men and Angels. They made a continual War with the Dives or Giants, which were the Children of Cain. The Patriarch Seth had made a Law, which was contain'd in a Book call'd, the Book of Seth, wherein were the pretended Revelations he had received to confirm his Mission. And his Descendants usually swore, by the true Law of the Prophet Seth. The same Mussulmen believe, that when this Patriarch had visited the Sepulchre of Adam, which was in the midst of the Earth, in the Place where afterwards was built Jerusalem, and the Temple; he came into Arabia foelix, and there built the City Medinath Al-Scheith, the City of Seth, and Medinoth Al-Jemen, the Cipital City of Jemen, which still bear those Names.

Sethon

SETHON, King of Egypt, reign'd in this Country, at the Time that Sennacherib invaded Hezekiah King of Judah. Herodotus l. 2. thus speaks of this King Sethon: " He succeeded King Amasis, who was Blind. Sethon committed a great Fault in Government, by neglecting warlike Men, as useless, disgracing them on all Occasions, and taking from them those Estates that had been given them by the Kings his Predecessors. This was the Reason that in the War, which was declared against him by Sennacherib King of Assyria and Arabia, they refused to obey him. In this Perplexity Sethon address'd himself to his God, and with Tears laid before him the Danger he was in. After Prayer he fell asleep, and while he slept his God commanded him in a Dream, to march out boldly to meet his Enemy, and he would supply him with auxiliary Troops. He therefore took with him what Soldiers he had, and went to encamp at Pelusium, which is, as it were, the Key of Egypt. His little Army was compos'd only of Citizens and Merchants, Men without Experience in Affairs of War; for those that had made War their Profession would not follow him. The same Night that he arrived at Pelusium, a Multitude of Field Rats set upon the Camp of the Enemy, gnaw'd their Bows and Quivers, and the Thongs of their Bucklers; so that the Day following, finding themselves unable for War, they betook themselves to Flight, after losing many of their Men. To preserve the Memory of this Event, they represented Sethon in the Temple of Vulcan, in a Statue of Stone, holding a Rat in his Hand, with this Inscription; Those that look upon me, let them remember to be pious. This Figure was still to be seen in Herodotus's Time.

'Twas thus the Egyptian Priests related the Defeat of Sennacherib; but the Hebrews tell it in another Manner, as may be seen under the Article of this Prince.

Seven

SEVEN. The Number Seven is consecrated in the holy Books, and in the Religion of the Jews, by a great Number of Events and mysterious Circumstances. God created the World in the Space of seven Days, and consecrated the seventh Day to Repose. This Rest of the seventh [Heb. iv. 4.] Day, according to St. Paul, intimates eternal Rest. And not only the seventh Day is honour'd among the Jews, by the Repose of the Sabbath, but every seventh Year is also consecrated to the Rest of the Earth, by the Name of a Sabbatical Year; as also the seven times seventh Year, or forty-nine Years, is the Year of Jubilee. In the Prophetick Style, a Week often stands [Dan. ix. 24, 25, 26. Numbers xxvii. 11. xxix. 17, 21, &c. Josh. vi. 4, 6, 8.] for seven Years. Jacob served his Father-in-law Laban seven Years for each of his Daughters. Pharaoh's mysterious Dream represented to his Imagination seven fat Oxen, and seven lean ones; seven full Ears of Corn, and as many that were empty and shrivell'd. These stood for seven Years of Plenty, and seven of Scarcity. The Number of seven Days is observed in the Octaves of the great Solemnities of the Passover, of Tabernacles, of the Dedication of the Tabernacle and the Temple, the seven Branches of the golden Candlestick, the Number of seven Sacrifices appointed on several Occasions: Seven Trumpets, seven Priests that founded them, seven Days to surround the Walls of Jericho. In the Revelations, are the seven Churches, seven Candlesticks, seven Spirits, seven Stars, seven Lamps, seven Seals, seven Angels, seven Phials, seven Plagues, &c. In a word, we may say we find the Number seven in every Page of Scripture.

[Isa. iv. 1. 1 Kings ii. 5. Jer. xv. 9.] In certain Passages the Number Seven is put for a great Number. Isaiah says, that seven Women should lay hold on one Man, to ask him to marry them. Hannah the Mother of Samuel says, that she who was barren should have seven Children: Or, according to the Vulgate, hath had several Children: Peperit plurimos. Jeremiah makes use of the same Expression. God threatens his People, to smite them seven [Lev. xxvi. 24.] times for their Transgressions; that is to say, several times. The Psalmist, speakspeaking of very pure Silver, says it is purify'd seven times. And elsewhere; Render unto our Neigbbours sevenfold into their Bosom. Punish them severely, and as often as they deserve it. The Slayer of Cain was to be punish'd seven times; but of Lamech seventy times seven times. The Wiseman [Ecclus. vii. 3.] says; Sow not upon the Furrows of Unrighteousness, and thou shalt not reap them sevenfold; that is, many times. The slothful [Prov. xxvi. 16.] Man thinks himself wiser than seven Men, that set forth Proverbs. He thinks himself of more Worth than seven wise Men. St. Peter asks our Saviour, How [Mat. xvii. 21, 22.] many times shall I forgive my Neighbour? Till seven times? And Christ answers him, I say not only seven times, but seventy times seven times. Amos often repeats, Super [Amos i. 3, 6, 9. ii. 13.] tribus sceleribus, & super quartam non parcam. I will not pardon the seven Sins of Damascus, of Edom, of Gaza, of Tyre, of Ammon, &c. but I will punish them with the utmost Rigour.

Shalmaneser

SHALMANESER, or Salmanasar, King of Assyria; he succeeded Tiglath-pileser, and had Sennacherib for his Successor: He began to reign in the Year of the World 3276, reigned fourteen Years, and died in 3290. It is very probable 'tis he who is call'd Enemessar [2 Kings xvii. 3. Tob. i. 2. Hos. x. 14.] in the Greek of Tobit, and Shalman in Hosea: Here is what the Scripture tells us of Shalmaneser. This Prince came into Palestine, subdued the Kingdom of Samaria, and obliged Hoshea the Son of Elah to pay him Tribute. Hoshea continued in Subjection to Shalmaneser for three Years a; but in the third Year, being weary of paying Tribute, he took secret Measures with So King of Egypt, to deliver himself out of this Subjection. When Shalmaneser knew this, he brought an Army against him, ravaged the whole Country of Samaria, besieged Hoshea in his capital City; and notwithstanding his long Resistance, (for he held out three Years[1]) he took the City, put Hoshea into Bonds, carry'd away the People beyond the Euphrates; and thus he ruin'd the City and Kingdom of Samaria, which had subsisted for two hundred and fifty-four Years, from the Year of the World 3030, to the Year 3283, before Christ 717, and before the Vulgar Era 721. Tobit was of the Number of those Captives that [Tob. i. 14.] were carry'd away by Shalmaneser, but afterwards got into the good Graces of this Prince, who gave him Liberty to do what he pleas'd, and to live where he would: He even made him his Purveyor, according to the Greek, which was an Officer to furnish Provisions to the King's Houshold. This is all we know of Shalmaneser. His Successor was Sennacherib, whom we have spoken of already.

But besides what we know from the Scripture concerning Shalmaneser, profane Authors tell us,[2] that this Prince made War also with the Tyrians. Eluleus King of Tyre, seeing the Philistines were much weaken'd by the War which they had with Hezekiah King of Judah, took this Opportunity of reducing to his Obedience again the City of Gath, which had revolted from him some time before. The Gittites, fearing the Power of the King of Tyre, had recourse to Shalmaneser, who marched with all his Forces against the Tyrians. At his Approach the City of Sidon, otherwise Ace, afterwards Ptolemais, and now Acre, and the other maritime Cities of Phenicia, which 'till then were subject to the Phenicians, shook off this Yoke, and submitted themselves to Shalmaneser.

But the Tyrians, with only twelve Ships, having in a Sea-fight defeated the united Fleet of the Assyrians and Phenicians, acquired by this Victory so great a Reputation at Sea, and became so formidable, that Shalmaneser durst no more engage with them by Sea: He withdrew therefore into his own Dominions, but left a great Part of his Army to form the Siege of Tyre. But when the Besiegers made but a slow Progress, by reason of the brave Resistance of the Besieged, the Troops of Shalmaneser stopt up the Aqueducts, and cut the Pipes that brought the Water into the City, which brought the Tyrians to the last Extremity. To remedy this Scarcity of Water, the Tyrians began to dig Wells in their City, and, by means of this Assistance, they held out well enough for five Years longer; and in the mean time, Shalmaneser happening to die, they were then deliver'd of their Siege. Usher places this Siege of Tyre in the Year of the World 3287, before Jesus Christ 713, before the Vulgar Era 717.

Shame

[Lev. xviii. 15, 17, &c.] SHAME, Ignominia. To uncover the Shame, Ignominy, or Nakedness of a Person, are synonymous Terms. Isaiah threatens the Egyptians, that they should be led away [Isai. xx. 4.] Captive stark naked, without any thing to[1] cover their Shame, or their Nakedness. The golden Calf worshipped by the Israelites in the Wilderness, is call'd by Moses, Ignominia [Exodus xxxii. 25.] sordis, a filthy Shame, an Idol of Dross and Filth. Habakkuk calls shameful [Hab. ii. 16.] Spewing, that which a Man is obliged to return, in a shameful and indecent manner, after drinking to Excess. St. Paul calls [Rom. i. 26.] shameful or vile Affections, those ignominious and brutish Passions, which were indulged [Prov. iii. 35.] by the carnal Pagans: Shame shall be the Promotion of Fools; Stultorum exaltatio ignominia. The Promotion of Fools shall be their own Shame, and the Disgrace of those who promote them. He that reproveth a [Prov. ix. 7.] Scorner, getteth to himself Shame: He loseth his Labour, and shall only get Discredit by [Psal. lxxxii. 16.] it. Fill their Faces with Shame, says the Psalmist: Reprove them, O Lord, and let them fall into Disgrace. When the Syrians took King Joash Captive, they executed shameful Judgments against him; they [2 Chron. xxiv. 24.] treated him shamefully, or made him suffer Corrections that were shameful, and not befitting the Dignity of a King.

Shamir (IV)

IV. SHAMIR a : This Word is found in several Places of the Hebrew Text of the Old Testament, and signifies sometimes Thorns, Briars[1], or the Place where they grow; and sometimes a Stone[2], or an Instrument of extraordinary Hardness, proper to polish Precious-stones; from whence it is sometimes translated by Diamond. The Rabbins have much amused themselves about the Shamir; they pretend it was a Worm, and that it was one of the ten [Vid. Pirke Aboth.] Things that God created on the Saturday Evening: They think that Moses made use of it to polish and engrave the Precious-stones of the Breast-plate; that Solomon used it also to polish and cut the Stones that were used in the building the Temple, [1 Kings vi. 7.] where the Scripture says, there was neither Hammer, nor Axe, nor any Iron Tool to be heard; because, according to the Rabbins, Solomon without any Noise, by means of the Shamir, cut all the Stones as they were brought out of the Quarry. Some Hebrews pretend, that the Devil Asmodeus, having been taken and chain'd by this Prince, was forc'd to give him this marvellous Worm. Others tell us, that Solomon having inclosed the Young-ones of a Lap-wing in a Glass Vessel; in order to deliver her Young-ones out of Prison, the Lap-wing went and fetch'd the Worm Shamir, by means of which she easily broke the Glass. This Experiment let Solomon into the Knowledge of the Virtue of this little Animal. Vincent [Vincent. Bellov. l. 16. c. 123.] of Beavais, in his Doctrinal, was not unacquainted with this Fable; but instead of a Lap-wing, he has put an Ostrich; and instead of Shamir, he has put Thamur.

[Bochart. de Animal. sacr. p. 2. l. 6. c. 12.] Bochart having well examin'd what is said of the Shamir, has very well proved, that it was neither a Worm, nor a Rock, nor a Diamond, but a Stone that is so hard, that the Lapidaries commonly make use of it to polish their Precious-stones. This Author shews, against the Opinion of Cardan, that the Antients knew it, and apply'd it to this Use.[3] Hesychius says, it was a kind of Sand; but this is, because it is reduced to Powder, which Powder is used in polishing Gems.

It is not so large as a Squirrel, of a greyish Colour, with the Fore-feet and Tail of a Rat: The End of its Tail, the Eyes, and the Head, are like those of a Rabbit: Its Hindlegs are longer than those before: It chews the Cud, loves to be among the Rocks, and they herd together in Flocks. Shaving

SHAVING. The Use of Shaving the Beard and Hair, and sometimes the whole Body, was common among the Hebrews. [Numbers viii. 7. Lev. xiv. 8, 9. Deut. xxi. 12.] The Levites on the Day of their Consecration, the Lepers at their Purification, shaved all the Hair of their Bodies. A Woman taken Prisoner in War, when she married a Jew, shaved the Hair of her Head. The Hebrews, and Nations bordering upon Palestine, shaved themselves when they mourn'd, as also in Times of great Calamity, whether publick or private[1]. God commanded [Lev. xxi. 5. Numb. vi. 9, 18.] the Priests to cut neither their Hair nor Beards in their Mournings. The Nazarites also meddled not with their Hair for the whole Time of their Nazaritesbip: But if it should happen that, during this time, any Man should die in their Presence, they were to shave their Hair, and begin the Exercises of their Nazaritesbip anew. The Strength of Samson, was in the Hair that he wore without cutting it, in the manner of a Nazarite; for no sooner was he shaved, but he became as feeble as another Man.

To shave the whole Beard and all the Hair, or but half the Beard and Hair, was [2 Sam. x. 4. 1 Chron. xix. 4.] an Insult, and a Piece of Mockery. Hanun King of the Amorites having thus treated David's Ambassadors, this Prince took his Revenge by a War, which was fatal to the Ammonites: God said, he would make use of a borrow'd Razor, to shave off all the Hair from the Body of his People: Radet [Isai.vii.20.] Dominus in novacula conducta, caput, & pilos pedum, & barbam universam; that is to say, he would take Vengeance against his People, by the Sword of the People inhabiting beyond the Euphrates. In Mourning, sometimes, they suffer'd their Beards to [2 Sam. xix. 24.] grow long. Mephibosheth did not shave his Beard for the whole time that King David was driven away from Jerusalem by Absalom. [Jer. xi. 26.] Jeremiah describes the Arabians bordering upon Judea, by their manner of shaving their Heads: His qui attonsi sunt in comam. They cut their Hair in a Circle, in Honour of a profane Deity. God prohibits the Israelites to imitate them, Levit. xix. 27. Neque in rotundinem attondebitis comam. See SISOE.

Sheaf

SHEAF. The Day after the Feast of the [Lev. xxiii. 10,11,12.] Passover they brought a Sheaf into the Temple, as the First-fruits of the Barley-harvest; and these are the Ceremonies that were then perform'd: On the fifteenth of the Month Nisan, in the Evening, when the Feast of the first Day of the Passover was ended,[1] and the second Day was begun, which was a Working-day; the House of Judgment deputed three Men to go in Solemnity and gather the Sheaf of Barley. The Inhabitants of the neighbouring Cities came together, to be present at the Ceremony. The Barley was gather'd in the Territory of Jerusalem. The Deputies demanded, three times together, if the Sun was set; and were as often answer'd, that it was. Afterwards they demanded three times, if they might have Leave to cut the Sheaf; and Leave was as often granted. They reap'd it out of three different Fields with three different Sicles, and put the Ears into three Boxes, to carry them to the Temple.

When the Sheaf, or rather the three Sheaves, were in the Temple, they were thresh'd in the Court; and of the Grain that came out, they took a full Omer, that is, about three Pints: After it had been well winnow'd, parch'd, and bruised, they sprinkled over it a Log of Oil, that is, near a Pint.

They added to it an Handful of Incense; and the Priest that receiv'd this Offering shook it before the Lord, towards the four Quarters of the World cross-wise; he cast part of it upon the Altar, and the rest was his own. After this, every one might begin their Harvest.

Sheba (IV)

IV. SHEBA, the Queen of Sheba, of whom mention is made in the Book of Kings[1], and who in the Gospel is call'd[2] Queen of the South, was, according to some[3], a Queen of Arabia; according to others[4] a Queen of Ethiopia. Josephus says, that Sheba was the ancient Name of the City of Meroe, before Cambyses gave it that of his Sister; and that it was from thence the Queen came, of whom we are speaking. This Opinion has much prevail'd. The Ethiopians at this Day maintain, that this Princess was of their Country, and that her Posterity reign'd there for a long time[5]. They preserve the Catalogue of them, their Names, and Successions. The Eunuch of Queen Candace, who was converted and [Acts viii. 27.] baptized by Saint Philip, was an Officer belonging to a Princess of the same Country. The Antients acknowledge, that Women are us'd to govern in this Country[6]. The Isle of Meroe is sometimes comprehended in Ethiopia; and this Country, as well as Egypt, is to the South of Palestine.

Those who would have this Princess to come from Arabia, rely, First, upon the general Consent of all the World, that there are Sabeans and Cushims, or Ethiopians, in Arabia. This Princess was Queen of Sheba, or of Cush, and Ethiopia. Secondly, Arabia is to the South from Judea. Thirdly, This Country, I mean Arabia Fœlix, may very well be said to be at the uttermost Parts of the World; as it is said, that [Matth. xii. 42.] the Queen of Sheba came from the uttermost Parts of the Earth, to hear the Wisdom of Solomon; because Arabia the Happy borders upon the Ocean to the South, and formerly they knew no Land beyond it: [Tacit. l. 5. hist.] Terra, finesque, quæ ad orientem vergunt, Arabiâ terminantur, says Tacitus. Fourthly, Arabia abounds in Gold, Silver, Spices, and Precious-stones, which are the Presents that this Princess made to Solomon; which cannot be conveniently said of the Island of Meroe. Lastly, several understand these Verses of Claudian, of the Sabeans in Arabia Fœlix, where, he says, the Women are us'd to govern:

Barbariæ pars magna jacet.

And if popular Traditions may be any thing rely'd on, that of the Arabians may be produced, who think that Queen Balkis came out of the City of Sheba, otherwise call'd Marib or Mareb, situated in Yemen, to visit Solomon.

The Reader may see what has been said in the Article of Candaule, which is the Name that Josephus and several others give to the Queen of Sheba: She came to see Solomon about the Year of the World 3012, before Christ 988, before the Vulgar Era 992.

VIII. SHEBA, Son of Bichri, of the Tribe of Benjamin, a very turbulent Fellow, who was very near engaging the Israelites in a Civil War. After the Defeat of Absalom, when the Tribe of Judah, without waiting for the other Tribes, came to King David, and brought him over the River Jordan on his Way to Jerusalem; the other Tribes resented the little Notice that was taken of them, and said[1], Why have you taken our King away, and brought him over Jordan without us? Those of Judah answer'd, Because we are most concerned in the King. There was other provoking Language given on both Sides, insomuch that Sheba the Son of Bichri sounded a Trumpet, put himself at the Head of the Mal-contents of Israel, and proclaim'd; We have no Share [2 Sam. xx. 1,2,3,&c.] in David, nor any thing to do with the Son of Jesse: O Israel, return every Man to his own House. Thus all Israel forsook David, and followed Sheba.

When David came to Jerusalem, he sent Abishai, with what Troops were at hand, in pursuit of this Traytor. Joab also took the Soldiers under his Command, and crossing over the Country which is to the North of Jerusalem, he arrived at Abel- Beth-maacha a City lying at the Entrance of the Pass that is between Libanus and Antilibanus, whither Sheba was retired, with the Choice of his Army. Joab besieged the Place, and began to demolish the Walls, when a Woman of the City, who was wiser than the rest, spoke to him from the Wall, and asked, If he was come to destroy Abela? Joab answer'd, That he had to do with none but with Sheba the Son of Bichri, who was a Rebel. She told him, That Sheba's Head should be thrown to him over the Wall. She then persuaded the People to cut off Sheba's Head, and to throw it to Joab. This was no sooner done, but Joab and his Army retired, without entring into the Town.

Shebnah

[Isai. xxii. 15.] SHEBNAH, or Sebna: He exercised the Office of Secretary under King Hezechiah, 2 Kings xviii. 18. This Prince sent Shebnah, Joah, and Asaph, to hear what Rab-shakeh had to propose from King Sennacherib. Some have pretended, that Shebna had been High-priest; but the Scripture only gives him the Title of Treasurer, or Præpositus Templi, which is very different from the Dignity of High-priest. See the [אל הסכן ad hunc Sochen.] Prophecy that Isaiah pronounced against him: Go, says the Lord, get thee unto this Treasurer (Sochen), even unto Shebna, which is over the House, or the Temple. The Word Sochen, signifies one that has the Oversight of the King's Magazines, a Treasurer.

What he is to say to him there, follows; What hast thou here; and whom hast thou here; that thou hast hewed thee out a Sepulchre here, as he that heweth him out a Sepulchre on high, and that graveth an Habitation for himself in a Rock? Behold, the Lord will carry thee away with a mighty Captivity (as a Cock with the Feet tied together, says St. Jerom) and will surely cover thee[1]: Or, He will fall upon you, as a Bird of Prey falls upon his Game. He will surely violently turn and toss thee, like a Ball, into a large Country; there shalt thou die, and there the Chariots of thy Glory shall be the Shame of thy Lord's House: And I will drive thee from thy Station, and from thy State shall he pull thee down. And it shall come to pass in that Day, that I will call my Servant Eliakim the Son of Hilkiah. 'Tis thought that all this happen'd to Shebna, under the Reign of Manasseh, and that he was taken Captive with this Prince to Babylon, in the Year of the World 3328, before Christ 672, before the Vulgar Era 676.

Shechem (III)

III. SHECHEM, a a City of Samaria, call'd otherwise Sichar, Neapolis, or Naplouse. Josephus says, that the People of the Country call'd it Mabartha; perhaps because of the Vale of Moreh that [Josh. xvii. 7. xx. 7.] was hard by. Joshua appoints this City to the Tribe of Benjamin; it was in the Mountains belonging to this Tribe. We have elsewhere spoke of Mount Gerizim, [Gen. xlvii. 22. Josh. xxiv. 32. John iv. 5.] situate near Shechem. Jacob bought a Field in the Neighbourhood of this City, which by way of Overplus he gave to his Son Joseph, who was buried there. Near the same City was to be seen Jacob's Well or Fountain, near which Jesus Christ enter'd into Discourse with the Woman of Samaria. After the Ruin of Samaria by Shalmaneser, Schechem was the Capital of the Samaritans; and Josephus says,[1] it was still so in the Time of Alexander the Great. It was ten Miles from Shiloh,[2] forty from Jerusalem, and fifty-two from Jericho[3]. St. Jerome says,[4] that St. Paula visited the Church that was built upon Jacob's Fountain. Antoninus Martyr, Adamnanus, and Villibaldus, who wrote in the eighth Century, speak then of this Church. Phocas who wrote in the twelfth Century makes no mention of it.

Sheep

SHEEP. The Sheep or Lamb was a very common Sacrifice of the old Law. When Moses speaks of this kind of Victims, he never omits to appoint,[1] that the Rump must be laid whole upon the Fire of the Altar. This was the most delicate and valuable Part of this Animal. In the East there are seen Sheep, whose Tails or Rumps are all over fat, and weigh sometimes five and twenty Pounds or more. Those of Tartary, according to the Testimony of John Kinson, are so large, that they weigh sometimes eighty Pounds. Those of Indostan have also their Tails large and heavy, and their Wool very short and fine. The Tails alone of the Sheep of Madagascar weigh fifteen or sixteen [Herodot. l.3. c.113.] Pounds. Herodotus says, that in Arabia are seen two sorts of Sheep of a singular Kind. Some have their Tails so long, [Busbeg. Ep. 3.] that they reach even three Cubits, and if they are suffer'd to draw them along the Ground, they are much bruised, and become ulcerous. Therefore the Shepherds of that Country are forced to make little Carriages, upon which they lay the Tails of these Sheep, and draw them about with them where-ever they go. The other Sheep are not less extraordinary; they have their Tails two Cubits long, or about three Feet. Busbequius tells us in his Voyage, that some of this sort are found in Asia Minor. In eam aliquando magnitudinem accrescit, ut duas rotulas cum media tabella subjici necesse sit.

When Jacob was employ'd in Mesopotamia, in feeding the Sheep of his [Gen. xxxi. 12, 13, 14.] Father-in-law Laban, the Angel of the Lord appear'd to him, and said: Lift up now thine Eyes and see, all the Rams which leap upon the Cattle are ringstreaked, speckled, and grisled. At the same Time he discover'd to him a Secret, to make all the Sheep be produced of different Colours, by means of Branches of Trees, half peeled and half with the Bark on; which were to be placed near the Troughs at which the Sheep drank. The Matter is related at full length in the thirtieth Chapter of Genesis; as also how Laban alter'd and changed Jacob's Wages several times. We shall not dwell upon that, but shall content ourselves to examine three things. First, whether the Artifice here made use of by Jacob were natural or miraculous. Secondly, in what Jacob's Request consisted, for the Text does not clearly explain it. And thirdly, whether this Artifice of Jacob may be look'd upon as lawful, fair, and allowable.

As to the first Question, it is agreed, that the Females of all Animals, have received from Nature a very great Power of communicating to their Offspring certain Inclinations, Antipathies, Figures, Marks, and Colours. We have so many Evidences of this from every Day's Experience and Observation, that it cannot by any means be doubted. Women have experience of this every Day; and we see it especially in domestick Animals, which are more exposed than others to receive Impressions from the several Objects that are presented to their View. Horses, Dogs, Cats, Pigeons, Fowls, tame Rabbits, are often of different Colours, and their Young generally take the Colour of what strikes the Imagination of the Dam the most forcibly at the Time of Conception. This is what is observed by both antient and modern Philosophers;[2] and this is what St. Jerome,[3] and St. Austin i, and the greatest Part of the Commentators acknowledge after them, upon the present Question. Therefore there was nothing miraculous in what Jacob did in this Matter; but the Miracle consisted in the Appearance of the Angel, who discovered to him in a Dream a natural Method of propagating Sheep of different Colours.

As to the second Difficulty, we think that Jacob requir'd of Laban, 1st, Every thing that should be born spotted and of several Colours, both of the Sheep and Goats. 2dly, What should be produced quite black, or with some white Spots. He left to Laban whatever should be quite white, both among the Sheep and the Goats. After this Laban and he separated from the rest whatever was wholly white, both among the Goats and Sheep, and Laban left all these Animals to the Care of Jacob, thinking that Sheep or Goats would be produced from them only of one Colour. This was to make Jacob's Condition the least favourable to him that was possible, and would certainly have been so, had he not prevented it by a Stratagem. The party-colour'd Branches of Trees laid at the Watering-places, had the same Effect upon the Imaginations of the Sheep and Goats, as party-colour'd Sheep and Goats themselves would have had. As to Laban, he took under his own immediate Care all the Animals of different Colours, that might naturally be presum'd to produce young ones of different Colours.

A second Artifice of Jacob was, not to expose the party-colour'd Branches at all times, nor to all sorts of Sheep or Goats; but only to expose them in the Spring, that he might have his Young in Autumn; and, on the contrary, to let Nature proceed in her ordinary Course in Autumn, that Laban might have the Lambs conceived in Autumn, [Boch. de animal. sacris.] and yean'd in the Spring. Or according to others, he expos'd his Branches only to the best and strongest Ewes in the Flock, letting the others take the natural Course. Besides, it is thought, that when the Number of Lambs and Kids of several Colours was sufficient, instead of the striped Branches he expos'd these Lambs and Kids, which would produce the same Effect.

As to the third Difficulty, it is objected, that Jacob made use of a kind of Trick to out-wit Laban. No doubt but Laban understood the Bargain made between him and Jacob in the most obvious and natural Sense, in which Jacob was to yield up to him all such Lambs and Kids as should be produced white, and reserve to himself only the black ones, or party-colour'd; and instead of honestly pursuing this Intention, he has Recourse to an Artifice unknown to Laban, and of which he had no Suspicion, to make the greatest Part of the Kids and Lambs fall to his own Share. This appears to be directly contrary to all the Rules of common Honesty and fair proceeding. It signifies nothing to say, that Jacob had a Right to do himself Justice against the Incroachments and Iniquity of Laban, who for so many Years had made him no Recompence for all the Service he had done him; for according to the Rules of true Morality, No-body is to make himself a Judge in his own Cause, nor to take it upon himself to do himself Justice. Besides, in Strictness, what did Laban owe to Jacob? Had he not obliged himself to serve Laban fourteen Years for his two Daughters? After this Term was ended, Jacob had nothing else to do but to withdraw. But the best Argument for Jacob's Vindication is this, that God himself approved of his Conduct, and suggested this Method to him by the Mediation of an Angel. This Judge, infinitely Just, saw Laban's Injustice, and intimated to Jacob a sure Method how he might grow rich at Laban's Expence, without giving Laban any just Cause of Complaint, if he consider'd the Matter in Strictness and Rigour. Is it not allow'd every one to make Use of his own Industry, and to advance his Interests by Art and Stratagem, especially when he has to deal with Persons of Laban's Character?

By the Name of Sheep, the Scripture often understands the People; We are thy People, and the Sheep of thy Pasture. And [Ps. lxxviii. 3. Ps. lxxx. 1. Matth. xv. 24.] elsewhere, O Shepherd of Israel, thou that leadest Joseph like a Flock. Jesus Christ says, that he was sent only to the lost Sheep of Israel. The Righteous are often compared to Sheep, exposed to the Violence of the Wicked, to the Fury of Wolves, to the Slaughter. Psal. lxiii. 22. Æstimati sumus sicut oves occisionis. At the last Judgment, the Just, being represented by Sheep, shall be at the Right-hand of the Sovereign Judge, and put in Possession of the Kingdom of Heaven. Our Saviour says, that Deceivers are Wolves that are cloathed in Sheep's Cloathing. Matth. vii. 15.

Shekel

SHEKEL, Siclus; an Hebrew Weight and Money. It is derived from the Verb Shacal, which signifies to weigh. The Name of Shekel is used to denote the Weight of any thing, as Iron, Hair, Spices, [Exod. xxx. 23, 24. 2 Sam. xiv. 26.] and all other things. Among the different Opinions that have been proposed, concerning the Weight and Value of the Shekel, we shall adhere to the Sentiments of M. Le Pellitier of Roban, who says it is of the Weight of half an Ounce, or four Roman Drachmæ, or nine Penyweight and three Grains; and that the Shekel of Silver is worth two Shillings three pence Farthing and half a Farthing of our Money. Moses and Ezekiel say, it was worth twenty Oboli, or twenty Gerah. Numb. xviii. 16. Ezek. xlv. 12. See the Table of Weights and Measures.

The Shekel of Gold was of half the Weight as the Shekel of Silver, and was worth eighteen Shillings and three Pence of English Money.

The Shekel of the Sanctuary, according to several Interpreters, was double to the common Shekel; but this Opinion wants good Proof. We think it to be the same as the common Shekel, and the Words of the Sanctuary are added, to express a just and exact Weight, according to the Standards that were kept in the Temple or Tabernacle.

Shekinah

SHEKINAH. Nothing is more frequent [שכינה Shekinah.] in the Writings of the Jews, than the Shekinah, by which they understand the Presence of the Holy Spirit. In the Targums, or Chaldee Paraphrases, we find the Names Jehovah, or God; Memar, or the Word; and Shekinah, or the Holy Ghost.[1] They suppose the Holy Spirit, as speaking and communicating itself to Men by Revelation, first, in the Prophets; secondly, in the Urim and Thummim, which were in the Highpriest's Breast-plate; and thirdly, the Shekinah resides in what the Hebrews call Bath-col, or the Daughter of the Voice. The Shekinah was given them only since the Ruin of the first Temple, and when Prophecy and the Oracle of Urim was taken away from them. The Bath-col is Tradition, which supplies the Place of Revelation, and explains the Law. The Shekinah is the Presence of the Holy Ghost, which resided in the Temple of Jerusalem, and which, as the Rabbins say, drove away from thence the Princes of the Air, and communicated a particular Sanctity to it.

They say also, that it rests upon the Mild and the Humble, but that it flies from the fierce and passionate Man. It resides with him, whose House is open to the Stranger, and is found in the midst of two or three Persons that meet to study the [Echa Rab. fol. 59. 1.] Law. Lastly, they say, that the Shekinah has ten times changed its Dwelling; and lastly, going upon the Mount of Olives, it continued there three Years and an half, crying out to the Israelites; Return to me, my Children, and I will return to you. But seeing they would not be converted, it retired to its own Place. This last Circumstance seems to denote our Saviour's Preaching among the Jews, and his Ascension that happen'd to be from the Mount of Olives.

The Shekinah was the most sensible Mark of the Presence of God, which was to be observed among the Hebrews, and which rested over the Propitiatory, or over the golden Cherubims, which adhered to the Propitiatory, or the Covering of the Ark. There the Shekinah abode in the Shape of a Cloud. 'Twas from thence that God gave forth his Oracles with an articulate Voice, when he was consulted by the Highpriest in Favour of his People. Thence it is that it is often said in Scripture, that God sits upon the Cherubims, or between the Cherubims; that is to say, that he gives the most evident Tokens of his divine Presence, by answering from hence the Israelites that consulted him. The Rabbins tell us, that the Shekinah first resided in the Tabernacle prepared by Moses in the Wilderness, and that it descended therein on the Day of its Consecration in the Figure of a Cloud. It passed from thence into the Sanctuary of Solomon's Temple, on the Day of its Dedication by this Prince; where it continu'd to the Destruction of Jerusalem and of the Temple by the Chaldeans, and was not afterwards to be seen there.

Shelomith (I)

[Lev. xxiv. 10, 11.] I. SHELOMITH, Salomith, or Salumith, Daughter of Dibri, of the Tribe of Dan, and Mother of that Blasphemer, who having blasphemed the Name of the Lord in the Camp, was condemned to be stoned. The Scripture tells us, that Shelomith had this Blasphemer by an Egyptian, which should be naturally understood of an Egyptian that had marry'd her: But the Rabbins explain it otherwise. They say that Shelomith was a very handsome and virtuous Woman, who having been much tempted by an Egyptian to criminal Conversation with him, one who was an Overseer of the Hebrews Labours, without complying with him in the least; he at last found an Opportunity by Night, of slipping into the House and Bed of Shelomith, in the Absence of her Husband, and so abused her Simplicity.

The Day following, when this Woman had discover'd the Injury that had been done her, she bitterly complain'd of it to her Husband, as soon as he return'd. He at first thought of putting her away from him, but he still kept her for some time, to see if she should prove with Child by the Egyptian. After some Months her Pregnancy was evident, he sent her away, and with Words he assaulted the Officer, who had done this Outrage to him. But the Egyptian abused him still further, both by Words and Blows; so that Moses coming thither by Chance, and hearing of the Injury that the Egyptian had done to the Israelite, he took up his Defence, kill'd the other, and buried him in the Sand.

The Brethren of Shelomith seeing their Sister to be put away like an Adulteress, from the House of her Husband, pretended to call him to Account for it, and to oblige him to take her again. He refus'd it, and the Quarrel grew so high, that at last they came to Blows. Moses happening to be there again, had a mind to reconcile them; but the Husband of Shelomith ask'd him, What he had to do in the Matter? Who had made him a Judge over them? and, Whether he had a mind to kill him also, as Yesterday he kill'd the Egyptian? Moses hearing this, was afraid, and withdrew out of Egypt, into the Country of Midian.

The Blasphemer that was ston'd in the [Lev. xxiv. 10, 11.] Wilderness was, as the Jews say, the Son of Shelomith and the Egyptian. The Officer who had the Oversight of the Hebrews Labour, is he that Moses speaks of Exod. ii. 11, 12. and the Husband of Shelomith is intimated in the same Place, Exod. ii. 13, 14. 'Tis thus the Jews sometimes corrupt the Scriptures, by supplying the Text, and refining upon its Narrations.

Shem

[Gen. vi. 10.] SHEM, or Sem, Son of Noah. He was born in the Year of the World 1558, before the Deluge 98 Years, before Christ 2442, before the vulgar Era 2446. We think he was younger than Japheth, and older than Ham[1]. He enter'd into the Ark with Noah his Father; and when the good old Man was overtaken with Wine, and was found lying naked in his Tent,[2] Shem and Japheth cover'd him, nor would see any thing in him that was indecent. When Noah awoke, he conferr'd his Blessings upon Shem, saying; Let the Lord God of Shem be blessed, and let Canaan be the Slave of Shem. The greatest Prerogative of Shem was, that from his Race the Messiah was to proceed, and the Worship of the true God was to be preserved among his Posterity. Being an hundred Years of Age he begat Arphaxad, and died at the Age of six hundred Years, in the Year of the World 2158, before Christ 1842, before the vulgar Era 1846. The Posterity of Shem obtain'd for their Portion the best Provinces of Asia.

The Jews ascribe to Shem the Theological Tradition of the Things that Noah had learn'd from the first Men. Shem communicated them to his Children, and by this means the true Religion was preserved in the World. The Rabbins think also, that Shem set up an Academy or School of Religion upon Mount Tabor. They say that Shem is the same as Melchizedek, and that he himself had been at the School of Methuselah before the Deluge for seventyeight Years; that he gave Abraham the whole Tradition, the Ceremonies of the Sacrifices of Religion, according to which this Patriarch afterwards offer'd his Sacrifices. Lastly, the Hebrews think, that he taught Men the Law of Justice, and the manner of reckoning Months and Years, and the Intercalations of the Months. They pretend God gave him the Spirit of Prophecy an hundred Years after the Deluge, and that he prophesy'd for four hundred Years, tho' with little Success, because Men were become so corrupted. Methodius says, that he dwelt in the Island of the Sun, that he invented Astronomy, and that he was the first King that govern'd upon the Earth. They impute to him the Foundation of Septa, a Maritime City of Africa, of Salernum in Italy, and of Salem in Judea. Those that confound him with Melchizedek, ascribe to him Psalm cx. The Lord said unto my Lord, &c. and a Book of Physick which is found in an Hebrew Manuscript in the Library of the Elector of Bavaria. See P. Scipio Sgambat, Archiv. vet. Testament. l. 1. p. 165.

Shem had five Sons, Elam, Asher, Arphaxad, Lud, and Aran, who peopled the finest Provinces of the East. See their several Articles. The principal Design of Moses being to give the History and the Laws of the Jews; he has carry'd the Genealogy of Shem farther than that of the other Sons of Noah, which did not directly belong to his Subject. 'Tis pretended that Noah committed to Shem the Care of the Body of Adam, which he sent and buried upon Calvary. 'Tis said also, he deposited his Will with him, by which he distributed the whole Earth among his three Sons. There is reason to conjecture, that the Heathen have confounded him with Typhon a famous Giant, or hurtful Deity. Ham is Jupiter, Japheth is Neptune, and Shem is Pluto. Shemaiah (III)

III. SHEMAIAH, a Prophet of the Lord. He was sent to Rehoboam King of Judah,[1] with this Message from God; Ye shall not go up, nor fight against your Brethren the Children of Israel; return every Man to his House, for this thing is from me. They hearkened therefore to the Word of the Lord, and returned to depart, according to the Word of the Lord.

Some Years after this,[2] Shishak King of Egypt came into Judea, made War against Rehoboam, and took the best Places of his Kingdom. Then the Prophet Shemaiah told Rehoboam and the Princes of Judah, who had retired into Jerusalem, that they had forsaken the Lord, and now he in his Turn would forsake them, and deliver them into the Hands of Shishak King of Egypt. The King and the Princes being in a Consternation, answer'd; The Lord is Just. God seeing their Humiliation, sent his Word to Shemaiah, saying; Since they have humbled themselves under my Hand, I will not entirely destroy them, I will give them some Succour, and my Wrath shall not be poured out upon Jerusalem; but I will bring them into Subjection to this foreign Prince, that they may know the Difference between my Government, and that of the Kings of the Earth. Shishak enter'd into Jerusalem, and contented himself with taking away what was most valuable in the Treasuries of the Temple, and the King's Treasury, and so return'd into Egypt. The same Prophet Shemaiah wrote the History of King Rehoboam. 2 Chron. xii. 15. This is all we know of this Prophet.

Shemer

SHEMER, Semer, or Somer. This is the Name of him that sold the Mount of Somer to Omri King of Israel, upon which he built the City of Samaria. a The Name of Semer or Somer is also given to the Mountain itself. See SAMARIA.

Shemer, or Shomeron, was a very agreeable and fruitful Mountain, and of an advantageous Situation, about twelve Miles from Dothaim, twelve from Merrom, and four from Atharoth,[1] upon which King Omri built the City of Samaria. Before that Time this Mountain was famous for the Battle between Abijah King of Judah, [2 Chron. xiii.] and Jeroboam King of Israel. Abijah at the Head of four hundred thousand Men, encamped upon the Mountain of Shemer; Jeroboam was as strong again, having an Army of eight hundred thousand Men, all stout and chosen Soldiers. The King of Judah had a mind to harangue Jeroboam and his People, who were encamped in the Plain, to endeavour to bring them to their Duty, by representing to them the Guilt and Injustice of the Cause they were engaged in. While he was thus speaking, Jeroboam, having the superior Army, caus'd his Troops to file off, in order to surprize Abijah, and to hem him in behind. But he perceiving this, cry'd out to the Lord, and the Priests sounded the Trumpets. At the same Time the whole Army of Judah put forth loud Cries, and the Lord spread a Pannick Terror into the whole Army of Israel, who betook themselves to Flight. The Children of Judah then falling upon them, kill'd so great a Number of them, that they counted five hundred thousand of those that were routed. Abijah pursu'd his Victory, and took several Cities from the Enemy; and after this time Jeroboam was no longer in a Condition to make any Enterprizes upon Judah.

 Here is a famous Battle between two [Observations upon the Defeat of Jeroboam by Abijah, at the Foot of Mount Shemer. 2 Chron. xiii. 3, &c.] Armies, whose Numbers would be almost incredible, did we not find Armies still more numerous in Scripture.

Here are all the Subjects of two Kings, that were able to bear Arms, assembled together to decide the Fate of two Kingdoms, and to finish a War at one Stroke. The Jews were all Soldiers; for their perpetual Wars, either with neighbouring Nations, or among one another, had extreamly inured them to War. Therefore the Scriptures tell us, that they were all brave and valiant. However, if we are to believe Abijah in his Harangue, the Army of his Enemy was composed of a Multitude of worthless, wicked, and scoundrel People.

It is a Hardship upon the Subjects of two neighbouring Kingdoms, that they must be obliged to expose their Lives, to forsake their Wives, Children, and Estates, to engage in an uncertain Enterprize, only to decide the Quarrel of two wicked and passionate Princes. It is a sad thing to[2] have such Governors, and that a People must hazard all that is near and dear to 'em, to gratify the Ambition of such a King as Jeroboam was; who to his Wickedness and Impiety, had join'd Cowardice and want of Experience. For it is the Completion of Misfortune, and a certain Loss of an Army, when it is commanded by a General who has neither Courage, Honour, Conduct, nor any other Quality that makes him fit to command. Neither the Superiority nor the Valour of his Troops are of any Effect; that they know him, and despise him is enough to make them despair of a Victory.

Abijah was not the stronger; for he had but four hundred thousand Men against Jeroboam, who had an Army of eight hundred thousand. So that being no very expert Warrior, he had need of all his Rhetorick to encourage his Army. He did not fail to make use of the Topick of Religion; for that was the surest Means of raising the Courage of a People, who were full of Zeal for the Worship of the Lord, and who had not yet forgot the Miracles that had been done in their Favour, tho' they were always ungrateful and unworthy of them, as may be observed here; especially in the Case of Jeroboam and his Subjects, who were plunged in Wickedness and Idolatry.

When two Generals have taken a Resolution to fight, they are not long without finding an Occasion. Tho' Abijah was inferior to his Enemy, yet he did not intend to decline Battle; for he knew very well what kind of Person he had to do with. He encamped upon Mount Shemer, or Zemaraim, which is in Mount Ephraim. There these two Armies faced one another, and Abijah made an Oration to them. It is a very good one, and full of Craft. I call it crafty, because he pretends to be very devout, and delivers it like an Apostle, tho' he was not much better than Jeroboam as to Matter of Religion. It was no hard thing to impose upon the Jews, who were generally simple and ignorant People; but to awaken them and provoke their Courage, it is enough that Religion be the Theme; they were immediately fired with Zeal for the Lord, and so he gave them the Victory. Their King had hardly any Share in it, if it is of him that the sacred Author speaks, when he says; And the Lord struck him, and he died.

[2 Chron. xiii. 20.] When Abijah thus turn'd Preacher, and seem'd as if he were inspired, the Audience must have been very attentive to hear him. For while he was speaking, Jeroboam endeavour'd to surprize him with an Ambush behind him, which encompass'd him before he was aware. Jeroboam had caused some Troops to file off behind the Hills, in order to surround him with the Multitude of his Army, and afterwards to attack him in Front and in Rear, and to cut off all Retreat from him. That he might have Time for such a Motion as this, Abijah's Speech must have been longer than what is deliver'd in Holy Writ. However this be, the Troops of Jeroboam set themselves in Array; and began to extend themselves, and to get behind the Army of Abijah.

There is Nobody but will imagine, when they read this Piece of Management of Jeroboam's, that I am not very consistent with my self, when I describe him as a meer Ignoramus in the Art of War, and that this Stratagem of his, confutes my Opinion of him; since Abijah turns Haranguer, while his Enemy lays a Snare for him, into which he was very like to have fall'n. I cannot accuse Abijah of Imprudence in this, tho' I do not think he was very skilful in martial Affairs. But I find here a Piece of Cunning, which was not however the Result of any deep Reasoning. Perhaps he might not be the Author of this Management himself, but God thought fit to bring it about, in order to give the Victory to that smaller Number of his People who were faithful to him; and intended that the Stratagem of Jeroboam should be the Occasion of his Defeat, and of the Loss of his reprobate Army.

That this may be the better apprehended, it must be explain'd as clearly as possible, and in a few Words. Does it appear, at first Sight, that this Ambush of Jeroboam was a subtle, crafty, and profound Artifice? Not at all. For by thus dividing his Forces, to surround and encompass so large an Army on all Sides, he makes half of his Troops useless, by making a Motion that could not be done in a small Time. What he has left to oppose his Enemy in Front, is no more than what his Enemy has to oppose him. And such a Motion of a stronger Army, which is intended to encompass a weaker, serves only to make them desperate, that is, they are reduced to a Necessity either to conquer or to die.

And when Judah looked back, behold, the Battle was before and behind. When Abijah perceived that he was almost inclosed, and that his Enemy requir'd more Time to compleat his Stratagem, than was necessary for him to fall on with equal Force, he takes the Advantage of so favourable an Opportunity. And they cried unto the Lord, and the Priests sounded with the Trumpets. Then the Men of Judah gave a Shout; and as the Men of Judah shouted, it came to pass that God smote Jeroboam and all Israel before Abijah and Judah; that is to say, Judah made a vigorous Assault, and pierced through 8 M every thing that durst oppose them. The Slaughter must be very dreadful, since there fell down slain of Israel, five hundred thousand chosen Men. Thus was this Kingdom almost depopulated by the Sword, in the Cause of a Prince who had neither Courage, Experience, nor Religion.

Shepherds

SHEPHERDS, or Pastors. When the Patriarch Joseph invited his Father and [Gen. xlvi. 31, 32, 33, 34.] Brethren to settle in Egypt, he bid them tell Pharaoh, that they were Shepherds or Breeders of Sheep, that they might have the Land of Goshen assign'd to 'em for an Habitation; Because, says Joseph, the Egyptians have an Abomination to Shepherds. Quia detestantur Ægyptii omnes Pastores ovium. Now it is inquir'd, whence it is that the Egyptians had such an Abhorrence to Shepherds? There are two Reasons generally assign'd for this. First, because the Hebrews who bred Sheep, made no Difficulty to kill and eat them, or to sacrifice them to their Gods. Whereas the Egyptians worshipped Sheep and Goats, and all Creatures of that Kind, [Diodor. Sicul. l. 1.] and would have thought it a great Crime to kill or sacrifice them. Diodorus Siculus says, that Sheep are in very great Veneration throughout all Egypt. And Strabo assures us, that they sacrificed them only in the Nome or Province of Nitria, or in that [Herodot. l. 2. c. 42.] of Mendese, according to Herodotus. Tacitus observes, that the Israelites sacrificed Sheep and Lambs, as if it were to insult Jupiter Ammon, a Deity of the Egyptians; and that they kill'd Oxen without any Scruple, to affront the Ox Apis. Cæso ariete velut in contumeliam Ammonis; Bos quoque immolatur, quem Ægyptii Apim colunt. But all this does not prove, that the Employment of Oxkeepers or Neatherds was of itself odious to the Egyptians, as the Scripture insinuates it was: On the contrary, this Office would have recommended them to the Esteem of the People, if they had not kill'd these Animals; as in the Nome of Mendese, the Keepers of Goats were honour'd, because the Goat was the favourite Deity of that Canton.

We must therefore seek for another Cause of the Aversion which the Egyptians [Joseph. cont. App. l.i.p.1042.] express'd towards Shepherds. Manetho relates, that an Army of Strangers from the Coasts of Arabia, or from the East, made an Irruption into Egypt, and finding it without Defence, they subdued it, and had a Succession of Kings in Lower Egypt for about five hundred and eleven Years. After which the Kings of Thebais, and of the rest of Egypt, maintain'd a long War against them, and at last drove them out of the Country. The Race of these Princes was call'd Hicsos, that is to say, Kings of Shepherds. Some, says Manetho, affirm, they were Arabians; but we find in other Books, that they were not Kings, but Captives. For in Egyptian, the Word Hic, when pronounced as Hoc, signifies a Captive. This Reason of the Hatred of the Egyptians against Shepherds appears to be more plausible. But whatever the Motive was, the Fact itself is beyond Controversy. See before the Article EXODUS.

Abel was a Keeper of Sheep, according to [Gen. iv. 2.] Moses, and the greatest Number of the antient Patriarchs follow'd the same Profession. When Men began to multiply, and to be distinguish'd from one another by following different Employments, Jabal, Son of Lamech bigamus, and his Wife Adah, [Gen. iv. 20.] was acknowledg'd as Father and Founder of Shepherds and Nomades, whose Dwelling was in Tents: He was the Father of such as dwell in Tents, and of such as have Cattle. God sometimes takes the [Isa. xl. 11.] Name of the Shepherd of Israel; in the same manner as Kings, both in Scripture and antient Writers, are distinguish'd by the Title of Shepherds of the People. And [Eze. xxxiv. 23. Numbers xxvii. 17. 1 Kings xxii. 17. Judith xi. If. xliv. 28. 15. Isa. xl. 11.] the People forsaken, are compared to a Flock without a Shepherd. Isaiah says, that the Messiah shall feed his Flock. God calls Cyrus his Shepherd. The Prophets often inveigh against the Shepherds of Israel, against the Kings, who feed themselves, and neglect their Flocks; who distress them, treat them ill, seduce them, and lead them astray. See to this purpose Ezekiel xxxiv.

The Lord says, that he brought through the Red-sea his People with their Shepherds; [If. lxiii. 11.] that is, having Moses, Aaron, and the Chief of the People at their Head. [Mic. v. 5.] Micah says, that the Lord shall raise up seven Shepherds over his People, and an eighth to govern the Land of Assyria, and to bring from thence the People of Israel. We take these seven or eight Shepherds to be the seven Princes confederate with Darius Son of Hystaspis, who killed Smerdis the Magian, who had possessed himself of the Empire of the Persians, after the Death of Cambyses.

[Zech. xi. 8.] Zechariah makes mention of three Shepherds that the Lord had cut off in one Month. These three Shepherds were Aaron, Moses, and Miriam, who died in the Wilderness; not indeed within the Space of one Month, but who all had the Sentence of Death passed upon them in a Month, and died at a little Distance of Time from one another. This is the Explication of the Rabbins. Others think that these three Shepherds were David, Adonijah, and Joab, who did indeed die all in the Space of one Month. Others are of Opinion, they were the three Brethren Maccabees, Judas, Jonathan, and Simeon, who died within a Month of Years, that is to say, within thirty Years. We think it may be understood of the three Roman Emperors who succeeded Nero, that is, Galba, Otho, and Vitellius, who were put to Death by their own Subjects within the Space of a Year and some Days. Afterwards the Prophet makes God speak in this manner; [Zec. xi. 10.] And I took my Staff, even Beauty, and cut it asunder. This Rupture happen'd when the Jews revolted against the Romans; and when these attack'd them, took Jerusalem, destroy'd the Temple, and dispersed the Nation of the Jews.

The same Zechary received Order from [Zech xi. 14, 15.] the Lord, saying, Take unto thee yet the Instruments of a foolish Shepherd; for, says the Lord, I will raise up a Shepherd in the Land, which shall not visit those that be cut off, &c. The Shepherds having forsaken Jesus Christ, who was their lawful Shepherd, were deliver'd up to foolish Shepherds, who misused them, and plunged them into Calamities. These Shepherds are the Roman Emperors, Successors of Tiberius, under whom Jesus Christ was crucified. Caligula succeeded Tiberius, Claudius, Caligula; and Nero succeeded Claudius. Every one knows the Characters of those Princes; that they were truly foolish Shepherds, mad, wicked, and cruel.

The Messiah is often represented under [Jer. xxiii. 4, 5.] the Name of a Shepherd. I will set up Shepherds over them, which shall feed them. I will raise unto David a righteous [Isai. xl. 11. Zec. xiii 7.] Branch. Isaiah speaks in the same manner. He shall feed his Flock like a Shepherd, he shall gather the Lambs with his Arm, and [Math. xxvi 31.] carry them in his Bosom, and shall gently lead those that are with young. And Zechariah says, Awake, O Sword, against my Shepherd, and against the Man that is my Fellow, saith the Lord of Hosts. Smite the Shepherd, and the Sheep shall be scattered, and I will turn mine Hand upon the little ones. Jesus Christ makes the Application of this Passage to what should happen at his Passion. He takes upon himself the Title of a good Shepherd, who gives his Life for his [John x. 11, 14, 15. Heb. xiii. 20.] Sheep. St. Paul calls him the great Shepherd of the Sheep; and St. Peter gives him the [1 Pet. v. 4.] Appellation of Prince of Shepherds.

God gives up to his Ministers the Tythe of Oxen, of Sheep, and of Goats, which pass under [Lev. xvii. 32.] the Crook of the Shepherd, or are under his Care. Or he makes an Allusion to what is done when the Tythe was given to the Priest: The Shepherd stands with his Hook at the Entrance of the Sheep-fold, and as the young Kids or Lambs go out of the Fold, he counts them, and retains the Tenth for the Priest or the Levite.

[Amos i. 1.] Amos says, that the Beauty of Shepherds is in Mourning during a dry Season. Luxerunt speciosa pastorum. The Hebrew says according to the Letter, the Huts or Abodes of the Shepherds are in Mourning. These are what are elsewhere call'd Cameræ Pastorum, or [2 Kings x. 12.] Habitacula Pastorum. St. Jerome, speaking of the City and Desart of Tekoah, says, that one cannot so much as see there the Hovel of the Shepherds, being like subterraneous Ovens, which the Africans call by the Name [Jerom. præf. in Amos.] of Mapalia.

In the Description that our Saviour gives [John x. 11, 12, &c.] us of a good Shepherd, he says, that he lays down his Life for his Sheep; that he knows them, and they know him; that they hear his Voice, and follow him; that he goes before them; that no one shall force them out of his Hands; that he calls them by their Name; that the Hireling, or the bad Shepherd, forsakes the Sheep, and the Thief enters not by the Door of the Sheep-fold, but climbs over by another Way.

Sheshach

SHESHACH, or Sesach; by this Name [Jer. xxv. 26. li. 41.] Jeremy hints at Babylon. Jeremiah was to cause all Nations to drink of the Cup of the Fury of the Lord, and the King of Sheshach shall drink after them. And elsewhere, How is Sheshach taken, and how is the Praise of the whole Earth surprized! How is Babylon become an Astonishment among the Nations! But how comes it that he gives this Name to Babylon? St. Jerome[1] thinks he does it out of Caution, that he might not provoke Nebuchadnezzar, who then was laying Siege to Jerusalem. We take Shesbach to be a Pagan Deity, who was chiefly worshipped at Babylon. He gives this City the Name of its tutelar Deity, as he says elsewhere, Babylon [Jer. l. 2.] is taken, Bel is confounded, Merodach is broken in Pieces. Bel and Merodach were the Gods of the Country. Shesbach was probably the Moon. At Babylon[2] they celebrated Feasts call'd Sacæa, which had a great Resemblance to the Saturnalia of the Romans. The Servants then acted the Part of Masters. Strabo says, they were celebrated [Strab. l. xi. p. 351, 352.] in Honour of Anais, which is the same as Diana, or the Moon. Sheshbazzar SHESHBAZZAR, or Sassabasar. When King Cyrus restor'd to the Jews the sacred Vessels of the Temple of Jerusalem, which had been carried away to Babylon by Nebuchadnezzar [Ezr. i. 8. Zec. iv. 9.] ; he had an Account taken of them, and committed them to Sheshbazzar Prince of Judah. The greatest Part of Interpreters think, that Sheshbazzar is the same as Zerubbabel, and that he bore the Name of Sheshbazzar among the Babylonians, as Daniel had that of Belshazzar. The Scripture says, that Zerubbabel laid the Foundation of the Temple, and it says the same of [Ezr. v. 16.] Sheshbazzar. Others will have Sheshbazzar to be a Persian Officer, sent to govern the Jews. It is not very certain that Zerubbabel had this Government conferr'd upon him. The Grecians give to Sheshbazzar, or (as they call him) Sammanaser, the Quality of Governor of Judea[1]. See the Commentators upon Ezr. i. 8.

Shew-Bread

SHEW-BREAD. The Hebrew[1] signifies literally, Bread of Faces, or, of the Face. They thus call'd the Loaves of the Bread, that the Priest of the Week put every Sabbath-day upon the Golden Table which was in the Sanctum before the Lord. These Loaves were square, and had four Faces, as the Rabbins say: They were cover'd with Leaves of Gold: They were twelve in number, and represented the twelve Tribes of Israel. Every Loaf must be of a considerable Bigness, since they us'd [Lev. xxiv. 5, 6, 7.] two Tenth-deals of Flour for each, which are about six Pints. They served them up hot on the Sabbath-day in the Presence of the Lord, and at the same time took away the stale ones, which had been expos'd for the whole Week, and which could not be eaten but by the Priests alone. [Mat. xii. 4.] If, in an extraordinary Case, David [1 Sam. xxi. 4. Lev. xxiv. 9.] thought he might eat of them, nothing but urgent Necessity could exempt him from [Lev. xxiv. 7.] Sin. This Offering was accompany'd with Frankincense and Salt. Some Commentators [Lev. ii. 13.] think,[2] that Wine was added to it also. The Frankincense was burnt upon the Golden Table every Saturday, when they set on fresh Loaves.

They are not agreed as to the Manner in which the Loaves of Shew-bread were ranged upon the Altar of the Sanctum. Some think there were three Piles of them, of four in each. Others will have them to be in two Piles of six in each; and it is hard to conceive it could be otherwise, or that a Table of two Cubits in Length, and one in Breadth, could allow Room enough for twelve Loaves, in each of which were six Pints of Flour. The Rabbins say, that between every two Loaves there were two Golden Pipes, supported by Forks of the same Metal, whose Ends rested upon the Ground, to convey Air to the Loaves, and to hinder them from growing mouldy.

[Lev. xxi. 8.] Moses seems to say, that the Israelites furnished the Loaves that were presented before the Lord; but this ought to be understood only, as it was the People that paid the First-fruits and Tenths to the Priests, which was the chief of their Income. And of these Tenths and First-fruits they took wherewith to make the Shew-bread, and whatever else belong'd to 'em to furnish, in the Service of the Temple. In the Time of David,[3] the Levites of the Family of Kahath had the Care of the Shew-bread, or, as it is call'd in the Chronicles, the Bread of Ordering. Probably it was the Levites that baked and prepared them; but it was the Priests that offer'd them before the Lord, as it is said in another Place, Sacerdotes autem [1 Chron. xxiii. 28. Vulg. Hieron. in Mal. i.] super panes propositionis. However, St. Jerom says, from a Tradition of the Jews, that the Priests sowed, reaped, ground, kneaded, and baked the Shew-bread: Panes propositionis, quos juxta traditiones Hebraicas, ipsi ferere, ipsi demetere, ipsi molere, ipsi coquere debeatis. See the Commentary upon 1 Chron. ix. 33. & xxiii. 28.

There are still several Rabbinical Remarks about these Loaves, which the Commentators take care to glean: They were placed six in a Pile one upon another, upon a Salver of Gold; and above they were cover'd with another Golden Salver, upon which stood a Golden Cup full of the purest Incense. They were made without Leven, and kneaded with Oil. Tostat says, that they were baked on a Baking-pan of Gold. Others maintain, they were baked in an ordinary Oven, but one that was kept for this Use only; and that the Wood used on this Occasion was chosen on purpose, the soundest and closest that could be got. Beside these Loaves was a Vessel full of excellent Wine; this Vessel was close stopt, that the Wine might not grow sour, and it held the fourth-part of an Hin; that is, something above two Pints.

When the Loaves were changed, the Wine was poured out as a Libation before the Lord. The Vessel or Cup that was fill'd with Salt near these Loaves was of Gold, and cover'd, as well as the Vessel of Incense, that no Dust or any other thing should defile it. These Loaves were eaten in the Temple by the Priests of the Week; and it was not allow'd to take them out of the Temple, to eat them at Home.

Shibboleth

SHIBBOLETH, or Sibboleth, an Hebrew [שבלתShibboleth, Spica.] Word which signifies an Ear of Corn, Spica. After Jephtha had beat the Ammonites, the Men of Ephraim were jealous of this Advantage obtain'd by the Tribes beyond Jordan,[1] and came in Arms into the Country, complaining heavily that they had not been call'd to have a Share in this Expedition. Jephtha answer'd them with much Moderation; which yet did not restrain the Ephraimites from using Words of Contempt towards the Men of Gilead, telling them, they were only Fugitives from Ephraim and Manasseh, a kind of Bastards that belong'd to neither of the two Tribes; in a Word, that they were only By -blows of Joseph. But this Reproach was very false, since Machir the Father of Gilead was Manasseh's own Son, Numb. xxvi. 29. It may be doubted, whether these Invectives happen'd before or after the Combat, but to Blows they went, wherein the Men of Gilead had the Advantage, and kill'd a great Number of the Children of Ephraim. After which, they set Guards at all the Passes of Jordan; and when any Ephraimite that had escaped out of the Battle came to the Water-side, and desired to pass over, they asked him if he was not an Ephraimite? If he said, No; they bid him pronounce Shibboleth, which signifies an Ear of Corn. But he pronouncing it Sibboleth, according to the Pronunciation of the Ephraimites, and not well pronouncing the first Letter, they kill'd him upon the Spot: So that, on this Occasion, there were kill'd no less than forty-two thousand Ephraimites.

Shield

SHIELD. In Scripture, God is often call'd [Gen. xv. 1. Psal. v. 12.] the Shield of his People: I am thy Shield, says God to Abraham. The Psalmist says, Thou, Lord, wilt bless the Righteous; with Favour wilt thou compass him, as with a Shield. Princes and Great Men are also call'd [2 Sam. i. 21. Ps. xlvii. 9.] the Shield of the People. Saul is call'd the Shield of Israel. The Shields of the Earth belong unto God, or are in his Dependance. The Septuagint have it; The strong Gods of the Earth have greatly exalted themselves.

They hung their Shields upon Towers for Ornaments, and to make use of upon Occasion. The Tower of David was adorn'd with a thousand Shields, which hung round about it. There were to be found Arms of [Cant. iv. 4.] all kinds: Mille clypei pendent ex ea, omnis armatura fortium. The Maccabees adorn'd the Front of the Temple with Shields [1 Macc. iv. 57.] which they hung thereon: Ornaverunt faciem templi coronis aureis & scutulis. They took them down from thence when there was Occasion to march against the Enemy: [Isai. xxii. 16.] Parietem nudavit clypeus. Ezekiel says, that the Persians, the Lydians, and the Lybians had hung up their Shields in Tyre, for an Ornament to that City: Clypeum & galeam [Ezekiel xxvii. 10.] suspenderunt in te, pro ornatu tuo.

The common Materials of a Shield were Wood: It was cover'd with Leather, with Plates of Gold, or Brass. Sometimes they were made all of Gold, or Brass. Those that Solomon made were of massy Gold. Shishak King of Egypt took these away, and Rehoboam made others of Brass to serve in their stead. Goliah's Shield was of Brass. Nahum [1 Sam. xvii. 45. Nahum ii. 3.] describes the Shields of the Chaldeans as all bright and sparkling. The Psalmist says, that God shall cause Peace to reign among his People, and that they shall throw their Shields into the Fire: Et scuta comburet igni, Psal. xlv. 10. These Shields therefore were of Wood.

Shiggaion

SHIGGAION, Shigionoth, or Sigaion[1]. This Word is found in the Hebrews, in the Title of Psalm vii. and in Habakkuk iii. 1. The Septuagint have translated it by Psalm, or Canticle; but Aquila and Symmachus have render'd it by Ignorance, or Sins of Ignorance. Theodotion, in Habakkuk, has it, for voluntary Sins[2]: but there is reason to doubt whether his Text be very intire. However it be, some think Shiggaion is an Instrument of Musick; others, that it is a certain Air or Tune, to which this Psalm was sung. Others translate it, The Error of David; others, The Secret of David; others, The Delight of David; and others again, The Disquiet of David. We think it ought to be translated, A Song of Trouble, or, A Song of Consolation of David. The Arabick Word Schaga, signifies to be in Trouble; and the Hebrew Word Schagah, or Shagah, to rejoyce, to be comforted. See our Preface to Psalm vii.

Shiloh (I)

I. SHILOH. This Term is famous among Interpreters and Commentators upon Scripture. It is found Gen. xlix. 10. to denote the Messiah. The Patriarch Jacob foretells his Coming, in these Words; The Sceptre shall not depart from Judah, nor a Law-giver from between his Feet, until Shiloh come, and unto him shall the Gathering of [Gen. xlix. 10. עד כי יבא שלה] the People be. The Hebrew Text reads, Donec veniat Shilo. All Christian Commentators agree, that this Word ought to be understood of the Messiah, of Jesus Christ: But all are not agreed about its literal and grammatical Signification. Saint Jerom, who translates it by Qui mittendus est, manifestly read Shiloach, Sent, instead of Shilo. The Septuagint translate,[1] Until the coming of him to whom it is reserved; or, Till we see arrive that which is reserved for him.

It must be own'd, that the Signification of the Hebrew Word Shiloh is not well known. Some translate, The Sceptre shall not depart from Judah, 'till he comes to whom it belongs[2]. Others, 'Till the Coming of the Peace-maker[3], or, the Pacifick, or, of Prosperity. Shalah signifies, to be in Peace, to be in Prosperity. Others, 'Till the Birth of him who shall be born of a Woman, who shall conceive without the Knowledge of a Man[4]. Otherwise, The Sceptre shall not depart from Judah, 'till its End, its Ruin; 'till the Downfall of the Kingdom of the Jews. Some Rabbins have taken the Name Silo, or Shilo, as if it signify'd the City of this Name in Palestine. The Sceptre shall not be taken away from Judah, 'till it comes to Shiloh[5]; 'till it shall be taken from him, to be given to Saul at Shiloh. But in what Part of Scripture is it said, that Saul was acknowledg'd as King, or consecrated, at Shiloh? If we would understand it of Jeroboam the Son of Nebat, the Matter is still as uncertain. The Scripture mentions no Assembly at Shiloh, that admitted him as King. A more modern Author[6] derives Shiloh from Shalah, which sometimes signifies to be weary, to suffer; 'till his Labours, his Sufferings, his Passion shall happen.

But not to amuse our selves about seeking out the grammatical Signification of Shiloh, it is sufficient for us to shew, that the ancient Jews are in this Matter agreed with the Christians: They acknowledge, that this Word stands for the Messiah the King. 'Tis thus that the Paraphrasts Onkelos and Jonathan, that the ancient Hebrew Commentaries upon Genesis, and that the Talmudists themselves explain it. If Jesus Christ and his Apostles did not make use of this Passage, to prove the Coming of the Messiah, 'twas because then the Completion of this Prophecy was not sufficiently manifest. The Sceptre still continu'd among the Jews; they had still Kings of their own Nation, in the Persons of the Herods; but soon after the Sceptre was intirely taken away from them, and has never been restored to them since.

The conceited Jews seek in vain to put forced Meanings upon this Prophecy of Jacob; saying, for example, that the Sceptre intimates the Dominion of Strangers, to which they have been in Subjection, or the Hope of seeing, one Day, the Sceptre, or supreme Power, settled again among themselves. It is easy to perceive, that all this is contrived, to deliver themselves out of Perplexity. In vain likewise they take Refuge in certain Princes of the Captivity, whom they pretend to have subsisted beyond the Euphrates, exercising an Authority over their Nation little differing from Absolute, and being of the Race of David. This pretended Succession of Princes is perfectly chimerical; and tho' at certain Times they could shew a Succession, it continu'd but a short Time, and their Authority was too obscure, and too much limited, to be the Object of a Prophecy so remarkable as this was. This Affair is treated on in its due length in the Commentaries upon Genesis, and in such Authors as have expresly discoursed upon it. See our BIBLIOTHECA SACRA annex'd to this DICTIONARY.

Shiloh (II)

[Josh. xviii, xix, xxi.] II. SHILOH, or Silo, a famous City of the Tribe of Ephraim, at twelve Miles or four Leagues Distance from Shechem, according to Eusebius; or ten Miles, according to St. Jerom. It was in Acrabatena, according to both of 'em. In St. Jerom's time Shiloh was intirely ruin'd[1], and nothing remarkable was found there, but the Foundation of the Altar of Burnt-offerings, which was there when the Tabernacle was set up there. It was at Shiloh that Joshua assembled the People,[2] to make the second Distribution of the Land of Promise. 'Twas in the same Place that the Tabernacle of the Lord was set up, when the People were settled in the Country, Josh. xix. 51. The Ark and the Tabernacle of the Lord continu'd at Shiloh, from the Year of the World 2560, when it was set up by Joshua, to the Year of the World 2888; before Christ 1112, before the Vulgar Era 1116, at which time it was taken by the Philistines, under the Administration of the High-priest Eli. 'Twas at [1 Sam. iv. 1 Kings xiv. 2. Jer. vii. 12, 14. & xxvi. 6, 9. 1 Sam. vi. 21.] Shiloh that Samuel began to appear: 'Twas there also that the Prophet Abijah dwelt. Jeremiah foretold, that the Temple of Jerusalem should be reduced to the same Condition as Shiloh was. After the Return of the Ark out of the Country of the Philistines, instead of taking it back to Shiloh, it was laid up at Kirjath-jearim.

[Pausan. l.6. c.24.] Mr. Reland conjectures, that it is from the Name Shiloh, that Pausanias took Occasion to say, that Silenus the Companion of Bacchus was buried in Palestine. Benjamin of Tudela affirms, that the Tomb of Samuel was still to be seen there. Upon the Medals of Shechem, or Neapolis, we see Silenus represented; which should make us think, that it was rather at Shechem than at Shiloh, that they might expect to find the Tomb of this Demi-god.

V. SHIMEI, Son of Gera, a Kinsman of Saul's. When David was obliged to retire from Jerusalem, a because of the Rebellion of his Son Absalom, Shimei met him at Bahurim, began to curse him, and to throw Stones at him, saying, Come out, come out, thou bloody Man, and thou Man of Belial: The Lord hath returned upon thee all the Blood of the House of Saul, in whose stead thou hast reigned, and the Lord hath delivered the Kingdom into the Hand of Absalom thy Son; and behold, thou art taken in thy Mischief, because thou art a bloody Man. Then Abishai the Son of Zeruiah says to the King, Why should this dead Dog curse my Lord the King? Let me go over, I pray thee, and take off his Head. David reply'd to him, What have I to do with you, ye Sons of Zeruiah? So let him curse, because the Lord hath said unto him, Curse David. Who shall then say, Wherefore hast thou done so? Thus Shimei continued to persecute him, walking along the Side of the Hill, throwing Stones, and raising the Dust as the King passed along.

[2 Sam. xix. 16, 17. In the Year of the World 2981.] But when David return'd to Jerusalem, after the Defeat and Death of Absalom, Shimei made haste to come with the Men of Judah, and accompany'd with a thousand Men of Benjamin, he went before David. And when this Prince had passed over Jordan, he came and threw himself at his Feet, desiring him to forgive and forget the Fault he had committed, when he loaded him with his Curses. Then Abishai the Son of Zeruiah expostulated in an angry manner; Shall not Shimei be put to Death for this, because he cursed the Lord's Anointed? But David disapproved of Abishai's Zeal, and promised Shimei, with an Oath, that he should not be put to Death. And in truth, he suffer'd him to live in Peace as long as he liv'd himself; but as it was an Example of dangerous Consequence, to let such Crimes go away with Impunity, and as he ought to give an Example of Justice to his People; before his Death, he recommended to Solomon,[1] not to let Shimei go unpunish'd, but to take Revenge for it, according as his Discretion should furnish him with an Occasion.

When Solomon therefore ascended the Throne,[2] he caus'd Shimei to come to him, and said to him, Build thee an House in Jerusalem, and dwell there, and go not forth thence any whither: For it shall be, that on the Day thou goest out, and passest over the Brook Kidron, thou shalt know for certain, that thou shalt surely die: Thy Blood shall be upon thine own Head. Shimei obey'd the King, and came and dwelt at Jerusalem. But it happen'd three Years after,[3] that some of his Slaves run away from him, and took Sanctuary with Achish King of Gath. Shimei having Notice of it, went after them, and brought them back to Jerusalem. The King being inform'd of this Journey, caus'd Shimei to come before him, and said to him; Did not I command you not to go out of Jerusalem? and did not I assure you, that the Day you went out, you should be put to Death? At the same time he gave Orders to Benaiah the Son of Jehoiada to fall upon him, and kill him. Thus the Vengeance of the Lord at last found out this wicked Man.

Shishak

SHISHAK, or Sesac, King of Egypt[1]; he declared War against Rehoboam King of Judah, in the fifth Year of the Reign of this Prince.[2] The King of Egypt had twelve thousand Chariots of War, and sixty thousand Horse, with an innumerable Multitude of People that follow'd him out of Egypt, the Country of Lubim of Sachim, and of Cush. He enter'd into Judea, and made himself Master of the strongest Places of the Country, advancing to Jerusalem. Then the Prophet Shemaiah came to Rehoboam and the Princes of Judah, who had shut themselves up in Jerusalem, and said to them; Thus saith the Lord, As you have forsaken me, so have I delivered you up into the Hands of King Shishak. The King of Judah and the Princes with him were in great Consternation, and only reply'd, The Lord is just. God seeing their Humiliation, said to Shemaiah; Since they have humbled themselves under my Hand, I will not destroy them, and will not let all my Fury fall upon Jerusalem by the Arms of Shishak; but they shall be subject to him, that they may know what Difference there is between being under my Discipline, and that of the Kings of the Earth.

Shishak therefore enter'd into Jerusalem, but withdrew soon after, taking with him the Treasures of the Lord's House, and those of the King's Palace. He carry'd away with him so much as the golden Bucklers that Solomon had made. The Rabbins are of Opinion, that the chief Motive that prevail'd with this Prince to declare War against Rehoboam, was because he had a great mind to the Ivory Throne that Solomon had made, and with which he was charm'd. This is the same Shishak[3] to whom Jeroboam fled, towards the End of Solomon's Reign; and when this King of Egypt came into Judea, he did no Harm to Jeroboam's Territories. Perhaps Jeroboam might have persuaded him to invade Rehoboam's Country. Till the Time of Shishak the Scripture always mentions the Kings of Egypt by the general Name of Pharaoh, which signifies King. Shishak is the first whose proper Name is mention'd. Chronologists are not agreed as to the Order that Shishak should obtain among the Egyptian Dynasties. Some will have him to be the same as Sesonchis; others[4] Sesostris, or Sethosis. Usher thinks him to be Sesonchis, and places the Beginning of his Reign to be in the Year of the World 3026, before Christ 974, before the vulgar Era 978.

Translators' note. Shittim

SHITTIM, or Sethim,[1] sort of precious Wood, of which Moses made the greatest Part of the Tables, Altars, and Planks belonging to the Tabernacle. St. Jerome generally keeps the Hebrew Word Shittim in his Translation. The Septuagint have render'd it by incorruptible Wood. The same St. Jerome says,[2] that the Shittim Wood grows in the Desarts of Arabia, that it is like White-thorn as to its Colour and Leaves, but not as to its Bigness; for the Tree is so large, that it affords very long Planks. The Wood is hard, tough, smooth, without Knots, and extreamly beautiful; so that the Rich and Curious make Screws of it for their Presses. This Kind of Wood does not grow in cultivated Places, nor in any other Place of the Roman Empire, but only in the Solitudes of Arabia. He says likewise in another Place,[3] that the Shittim Wood resembles White-thorn, and that it is of an admirable Beauty, Solidity, Strength, and Smoothness. 'Tis thought he means the black Acacia, which is (they say) the only Tree that is found in the Desarts of Arabia[4]. It is so hard and solid, as to become almost incorruptible. It is of the Colour of a Lote-tree when it is cut, and Planks are taken from it of twelve Cubits long. Its Branches don't rise up in height; its Leaves are round and large, like those of a Pear-tree, of the Colour of Soot underneath, and green above. from it, which the Arabians call Akakia. But it is plain from St. Jerome's Description of the Shittim Wood, that it cannot be this Acacia of Prosper Alpinus[5] and Thevenot[6]. Yet very credible Authors affirm, that no other Trees grow in the Desarts of Arabia. See our Commentary upon Exodus xxv. 5.

Shoes

SHOES. We have already spoke of 'em under the Article HOSING of the Hebrews; and the Title SANDALS may also be consulted. Pythagoras would have his Disciples wear Shoes of the Barks of Trees; probably that they might not wear such as were made of the Skins of Animals; for they refrain'd from the Use of every thing that had Life. The Antients had Shoes which wholly cover'd their Feet, like ours; and others that only defended the Soals of their Feet, with Leather Bands above, that left a Part of the Foot uncover'd. The first Sort was call'd Calceus, Mulleus, Pero, Phœcasium; the latter Caliga, Solea, Crepida, Baxea, Sandaleum. Antiently among the Romans their Shoes were generally of crude or untann'd Leather. None but those that had discharged the Office of Edile, were to wear the Mulleus, which was of Leather dress'd with Allum, and of a red Colour. 'Tis said that the Roman Senators also wore Shoes of dress'd Leather, but of a black Colour. The Roman Women wore [Ælian. var. hist. l. 7. c. 11. Juven. Sat. 7.] their Shoes pretty much as the Men. Juvenal speaks of the Moon, or Lunula, which was wore upon black Shoes.

Adpositam nigræ Lunam subtexit alutæ.

Isaiah speaks also of the Moons that the Jewish Women wore upon their Shoes. In die illa auferet dominus ornamentum calceamentorum & lunulas. The Emperor [Vopisc. in Aureliano, ad finem.] Aurelian forbid the wearing of red, yellow, white, or green Shoes, and would allow only Women to use them. And Heliogabalus publish'd a Proclamation, to declare what Women should be permitted to wear Gold and precious Stones in their Shoes. Among the Hebrews it is known, that Women of Fashion and Substance wore very valuable Shoes and Stockens. But we know none of their particular Ornaments.

As to the military Dress for the Feet, we see from Moses, that it was sometimes of Metal. Ferrum & æs calceamentum ejus, says he, speaking of Asher. And in the Description [Deuter. xxxiii. 25. 1 Sam. xvii. 6.] of the Arms of Goliah, we find he had Boots of Brass. Ocreas æreas habebat in cruribus. Homer likewise gives them to his Heroes; some had Boots of Brass, others of Copper, and those of Hercules were Tinsel. Vegetius says, that the Romans wore Iron ones. The Roman Soldiers also put many Nails under their Shoes, they were very sharp, and in great Numbers. Festus calls [Isidor. origin. l. 19. cap. ult. Joseph. de bello. l. 7. c. 3.] them clavata calceamenta. Josephus speaks of a Roman Soldier of such extraordinary Boldness, that he would let himself fall along the Walls of the Temple, because the Nails he had under his Shoes, which the rest of his Comrades had also, would make him slide down. In the Army of Antiochus the Great, Luxury was grown to such a pitch, that most of the Soldiers themselves had golden Nails under their Shoes. We are [Valer. Maxim. Bellon. observ. l. 3. c. 44.] assured that in the East, at this Day, all the People, both Rich and Poor, even the Wives of the Great Turk himself, and of his Bashas, wear Iron Plates at the Heels and Toes of their Pumps.

Shoulder

SHOULDER. To give or lend his [Gen. xlix. 15.] Shoulder, for bearing of a Burden, signifies to submit to Servitude. Issachar bowed his Shoulder to bear, and became a Servant unto Tribute. The Preacher advises his [Ecclus. vi. 26.] Pupil, to submit his Shoulder to the Yoke of Wisdom. The Messiah has deliver'd his [Isa. ix. 4. Bar. ii. 21.] People from the Rod, or from the Yoke to which they were subject: Virgam humeri ejus superasti. Baruch advises the Captive Jews at Babylon to submit their Shoulders to King Nebuchadnezzar, that ἀνθῶν. [Nehem. ix. 29.] they might live at Ease under his Government. In a contrary Sense, the Scripture calls that a rebellious Shoulder, humerum recedentem, that will not submit to the Yoke; and those that bear it together with joint Consent, servientes humero uno. Zephan. iii. 9. [Job xxxi. 36.] Heretofore they wore the Marks of Honour and Command upon their Shoulders. Job desires of God to decide his Cause; Surely I would take it upon my Shoulder, [Isa. ix 6.] and bind it as a Crown to me. Isaiah says, that the Messiah shall bear the Mark of his Government upon his Shoulder. Factus est principatus ejus super humerum ejus. God promises Eliakim the Son of Hilkiah, to give him the Key of the House of David, and to lay it upon his Shoulder; so he shall open, and none shall shut, and he shall shut, and none shall open.

[Isai. xlix. 22.] To be born upon Shoulders, sometimes stands for a kind of Honour and Distinction. God says, that when he shall bring back his People from the Captivity of Babylon, he will give a Signal to the People, and they shall bring thy Sons in their Arms, and thy Daughters shall be carried upon their Shoulders.

Sometimes, on the contrary, this denotes great Weakness, some great Disgrace. God commanded Ezekiel to make a Breach in the Wall, and carry out thereby on his [Ezek. xii. 6, 7.] Shoulder, in the Night time, to represent the taking of Jerusalem, and the Captivity [Isa. xiv. 25. Bar. vi. 3.] of the King and his People. Isaiah and Baruch, to shew the Impotence of Idols, say, that Men are obliged to carry them on their Shoulders.

II. SHUSHAN, Susan, or Suses, the Capital City of Susiana, or of the Country of Elam, that is of Persia. Daniel always gives it the Name of the Palace: I was at Shushan in the Palace; because the Kings of Chaldea had there a Royal Palace. From the Time of Cyrus, the Kings of Persia took up the Custom of passing the Winter here, and the Summer at Ecbatana[1]. The Winter was very moderate at Shushan, but the Heat of the Summer was so great, that the very Lizards and Serpents that were surpriz'd by it in the [Strab. l. 15.] Streets, were even burnt up by the Heat of the Sun. The Hebrew Word Shushan[2] signifies a Lilly. This City stands upon the River Ulai. This City at this Day among the Persians goes by the Name of Tousther or Schousther, and is the Capital of Kusistan. King Sapor caus'd a Digue of a prodigious Height to be rais'd there, to make the River Choaspes to ascend.[6] The Tarikmonteked says, that the Tomb of the Prophet Daniel was still to be seen there in his Time. Some Persian Historians ascribe the Foundation of this City to Huschenk, Son of Siamech, the second Prince of the first [Lightfoot, de Templo, c. 3.] Dynasty of Persia. Lightfoot says, that the outward Gate of the Eastern Wall of the Temple, was call'd the Gate of Shushan; and that upon this Gate was carved the Figure of the City of Shushan, in Acknowledgment of the Decree granted at Shushan by Darius Son of Hystaspes, which permitted the Rebuilding of the Temple.

Sibyls

SIBYLS. The Scripture no where mentions the Sibyls; and all that is said of 'em is of so little Certainty, that we think we ought not to spend much Time in treating of them. The Word Sibyl is Greek, a according to most Etymologists, and signifies the Counsel of God. The Sibyls among the Pagans were, as they say, what the Prophets and Prophetesses were among the Hebrews. They foretold future Events, and reveal'd important Truths to the People. There are generally reckon'd ten of them: The Cumæan, the Cumanian, the Persian, the Hellespontiacan, the Lybian, the Samian, the Delphian, the Phrygian, the Tiburtine, and the Erythrean.

[Cle. Alex. Strom. l.6.] Clemens Alexandrinus quotes these Words as from St. Paul; Take the Greek Books in your Hands, read the Sibyls, and see what they say of the Unity of God, and how they foretel what is to come, and you will there clearly find the Son of God. Several of the antient Fathers have cited the Verses ascribed to the Sibyls, and have drawn Arguments from them in favour of the Christian Religion. But the wiser and more skilful Criticks of our Days are persuaded, that these Verses were composed afterwards, and were never known to the Sibyls. See in this Matter Blondel on the Sibyls, Casaubon against Baron. Exercit. 1. sec. 10. c. 11. Erasm. Schmith. Dissert. de Sibyllis. M. du Pin. Proleg. to the Bible. Servat. Gallæus, Sibyllina Oracula. Amstelod. 1689. Item Dissertationes in Sibyllis of the same Amstelod. 1688.

Plato, Aristotle, Varro, Dionysius Halycarnassæus, Cicero, Livy, all speak of the [Plato in Phædro. Aristot. de admirandis.] Sibyls with Honour. Virgil without doubt took out of the Sibylline Verses, what he says concerning the Birth of the Messiah; for one can hardly apply to any other these Verses of his fourth Eclogue.

Ultima Cumæi venit jam carminis ætas, Magnus ab integro sæclorum nascitur ordo, Jam redit & Virgo, redeunt Saturnia regna, Jam nova progenies cælo dimittitur alto, &c.

'Twas from the same Source that Suetonius derived what he says, “That in the [Sueton. in Vespasiano. Joseph. Antiq. l. 1. c. 5.] Time of Vespasian there was a constant and general Opinion propagated through the whole East, that Fate had decreed, that about that Time should come forth out of Judæa, those who should obtain the Empire of the World”. Josephus the Historian, who is known to have lived in the Time of Vespasian, quotes in his History a Passage from the Sibyls, that mention'd the Deluge. Clemens Alexandrinus assures us, that St. Paul in his Preaching sometimes cited the Sibylline Books, and referr'd the Gentiles to them. The antient Fathers of the Church, such as Justin Martyr, Athenagoras, Theophilus of Antioch, Tertullian, Lactantius, Eusebius, St. Jerome, St. Austin, and others, made good Use of them against the Pagans; and the frequent Use they made of them, occasion'd the Name of Sibyllists to be applied to them.

[Vide Orig. l. 7. contra Celsum.] Here is more than enough to justify us, for producing here this short Account of these famous and antient Prophetesses. Their Lives, and the Times in which they lived, are Circumstances not very well known. She that was the most famous of them all, was that to whom the Greeks gave the Name of Erythrea, because she was born at Erythra in Ionia; and because she left her Country, and came to settle at Cumæ in Italy, the Latins gave her the [Justin. Martyr, cohortatio ad Græcos.] Name of Cumana. Justin Martyr says, "that it was pretended she was by Extraction of Babylonia, and Daughter to Berosus the Chaldean Historian; who coming, 'tis not known how, into Campania, there she gave forth her Oracles, at a City call'd Cumæ, about six Miles from Baiæ. I have seen the Place (adds he) which is a large Oratory cut out of a Rock, which must have cost much Labour to make; for it is very well work'd, and very capacious. There this Sibyl gave out her Responses, as I was inform'd by the Inhabitants of the[1] " Place, who preserve the Tradition from Father to Son. In the middle of the Grotto they shew'd me three hollow Places, which were also cut out of the Rock, where they said she us'd to bathe herself when fill'd with Water. After she had dress'd herself, she withdrew into the most remote Apartment of the Grotto, which was a kind of Cell cut also out of the Rock, and there placing herself upon an elevated Seat, which jutted out into the middle of the Cell, she there pronounced her Oracles. "

This is what Justin Martyr says of the Sibyl's Cave at Cumæ. We are assured[2], that it was seen in the same Condition till the Year 1539, at which Time there was a great Earthquake that shaked the whole Country of Campania, and at Puteoli threw out from the bottom of the Sea great Mountains of Sand, Gravel, and bituminous Matter, which quite overwhelmed this Cave of the Sibyl. If this of whom we are speaking was Daughter to Berosus the Babylonian, she must have lived after the Reign of Alexander the Great. Virgil places her at the Time of the Siege of Troy, since he makes Æneas to consult her at his coming into Italy. Others place her in the Reign of Tarquinius Superbus, the last King of Rome.

Dionysius Halycarnassensis, Aulus Gellius, Lactantius,[3] and some others relate, that under the Reign of this last Prince, there came a strange Woman to Rome, who offer'd to the King nine Volumes of the Sibylline Oracles, for which she asked three hundred Pieces of Gold. Tarquin refused to give her this Sum, upon which she presently burnt three of the nine Volumes, and for the remaining six she asked the same Sum. Tarquin continuing to refuse her with great Derision, she burnt three more of 'em in his Presence, and still insisted upon having the three hundred Pieces of Gold for the three Volumes that remain'd. A Proceeding so extraordinary as this made Tarquin suspect, that there must be some Mystery in it. He therefore sent to inquire of the Augurs, to know their Opinion about it. They answer'd him, that they found by certain Signs, that what he had so despised was a Present sent him by the Gods; that it was great pity he had not bought the whole nine Volumes, and urged him to give the Woman what she asked for the remaining three. He did so, the Woman deliver'd him the Books, and advised that they might be carefully preserved, as containing the future Destiny of Rome. After these Words she withdrew, and it was not known what became of her. Tarquin caus'd these three Books to be shut up in a kind of Stone Chest, and to be put into a subterraneous Vault in the Temple of Jupiter Capitolinus, and committed the Care of it to two Persons of the first Quality in Rome; with a Charge to let no body read them, or to take a Copy of them, without express Orders from the King. After the Abolition of kingly Government at Rome, they continued to have the same Regard for these Books as before, and the Romans made of 'em one of their greatest Secrets of Policy, making the People believe, that whatever they judg'd proper to do, was taken out of these Books, which were never consulted or opened but by an express Order of the Senate.

While the Civil War raged between Marius and Sylla,[4] the Fire by chance took hold of the Capitol, and the Sibylline Books were consumed by the Flames. After some Years, when the Capitol was rebuilt, Scribonius Curio, the Consul, proposed to the Senate to restore the Verses of the Sibyls. They were informed that there were some Verses of the Erythrean Sibyl remaining in the City of Erythra, the Place of her Nativity. Three Senators were deputed to go thither, who there made a Collection of about a thousand Greek Verses, which pass'd for the Prophecies of this Sibyl. They brought them to Rome, and at the same Time made several other Collections from several other Places[5]. The whole was laid up in the Capitol instead of those which the Fire had consumed.

But there being several Copies of these Verses to be found, and as every private Person made such Additions to his own Copy as he thought fit; to preserve the Credit of these Books, the Romans forbid all private Persons, upon pain of Death, to keep any Copies of them at all. These Orders were but ill observed, and Augustus, at the Commencement of his Office of Pontifex maximus[6] renew'd the former Prohibitions, and having made a diligent Search after those Copies, and examin'd them strictly, he caus'd all those to be burnt which appeared to have been corrupted, and deposited the others in the Capitol, with those that were there before. Afterwards Tiberius[7] made a new Review of them, and condemned several Volumes to the Flames. And these Sibylline Oracles were still in Vogue till about the Year 399, when they were intirely destroyed.

This is what gave occasion to this Event. Some time before this a Prophecy was handed about in Rome,[8] taken, as they pretended, out of the Books of the Sibyls, in which it was foretold, that the Christian Religion being founded on the magical Sorceries of Peter, should not continue above three hundred and sixty-five Years, after which Time it should sink intirely. This Period fell upon the Year 398, which is the 368 Year from the Ascension of Jesus Christ. Yet the Christian Religion continued then to be as prosperous as ever. The Emperor Honorius therefore, taking Occasion from this Piece of Pagan Malice, gave Orders to Stilico the Year following, to cause all the Books of the Sibyls to be burnt, which was executed in 399. And they pull'd down the Temple of Apollo to its very Foundations, wherein these pretended Prophecies were us'd to be kept.

Yet this has not prevented the appearing of a Collection of Greek Verses in eight Books, which is now to be seen under the Title of the Oracles of the Sibyls. But this is neither the old Book of the Sibyls, known at Rome from the Time of Tarquin, nor the Collection made a little after the Civil Wars of Marius and Sylla, nor that reform'd and purify'd by Augustus. That which we have at present, includes a Part of the Sibylline Oracles, as in the Time of Augustus and afterwards; but the rest is a Rhapsody put together by some Christian, who had a mind to impose upon the Publick by the Name of the antient Sibyls. But he has perform'd it with so little Wit and Discretion, that the Imposture stares one in the Face every Moment. He makes the Sibyl say, for Example, that she was Wife to one of the three Sons of Noah, and that she had lived with him in the Ark during [Lib. Sibyl. l. 3. in fine. Ibid. l. 8.] the whole Time of the Deluge. The Author declares himself to be a Christian, in a Passage which begins with these Words; Nos igitur Christi de stirpe creati. He speaks of the Incarnation, of the Birth, of the Circumcision, of the Resurrection, of the Ascension of Jesus Christ, with as much Accuracy as the Evangelists. He describes the Reign of Jesus Christ upon Earth, according [Ibid.l. 2, 3. Ibid.l. 5.] to the Notions of the Millinaries. He gives a Succession of the Roman Emperors, according to their Order, from Julius Cæsar down to Antoninus Pius, and to the Adoption of Marcus Aurelius and Lucius Verus. All which prove, that these Books, in the State in which we now have them, were composed about the Middle of the second Age of the Church.

SICERA. They call by this Name any inebriating Liquor: Vinum & Siceram non bibet. The Author of the Vulgate sometimes preserves the Word Sicera; at other times he translates it by Omne quod inebriare potest. St. Chrysostom[1], Theodoret[2], and Theophilus of Antioch[3], who were Syrians, and who therefore ought to know the Signification and Nature of Sicera, assure us, that it properly signifies Palm-wine. Pliny acknowledges, that the Wine of the Palm-tree was very well known through all the East, and that it was made, by taking a Bushel of the Dates of the Palm-tree, and throwing them into three Gallons of Water; then squeezing out the Juice, it would intoxicate like Wine.

The Wine of the Palm-tree is white: When it is drank new, it has the Taste of the Cocoa, and is sweet as Honey: When it is kept much longer, it is strong, and intoxicates like Wine. After long keeping, it becomes Vinegar. See Renaudot's Notes upon the Voyage to China, p. 12.

[,צידהPiscari. Josh. xi. 8.] The Name Sidon is commonly deriv'd from the Hebrew or Syrian Word Zada, which signifies to fish. Joshua calls it Sidon the Great, by way of Eminence. From whence some[1] have taken Occasion to say, that in his Time there were two Sidons, a Greater and a Lesser. But no Geographer has made mention of any other Sidon, distinguished from Sidon the Great. Joshua [Josh. xix. 28. Judg. i. 31.] assign'd Sidon to the Tribe of Asher ; but this Tribe could never get Possession of it. It is situate upon the Mediterranean, in a fine Country, one Day's Journey from Paneas, or from[2] the Fountains of Jordan : It has a fine Harbour. Abulfeda places it sixty-six Miles, or twenty-two Leagues, from Damascus. This City has been always famous for its great Trade and Navigation. At present it is call'd Zaide. There are extant some ancient Medals of Sidon, whereon are seen ancient Phenician Characters, which are the same as the Hebrew Characters which the Jews made use of before the Captivity of Babylon. The principal Deities of the Sidonians were Baal and Astarte, or the Sun and Moon : They also worshipp'd Hercules. Sihon

SIHON, or Sehon, King of the Amorites, refusing Passage to the Hebrews, and coming to attack them, was himself slain, and his Army routed[1]. Heshbon his capital City was taken, and all the rest of his Dominions were distributed among the Israelites. This War happen'd in the last Year of Moses's Life, and some Months before the Israelites enter'd into the Land of Promise; in the Year of the World 2553, before Christ 1447, before the Vulgar Era 1451. Moses observes, that Sihon had made a Conquest from the Moabites of the best Part of the Country he then possess'd, and that he had settled himself in their Place. And 'tis upon this Account, that in the [Judg. xi. 12,13,14.] Time of Jephtha, the Ammonites and Moabites demanded the Country that the Israelites had formerly conquer'd from Sihon, pretending it belong'd to them. But Jephtha return'd Answer, That Moses and the Hebrews having taken it from Sihon, who was then in peaceable Possession of it, and having conquer'd it in a fair War, it belong'd to Israel, and that neither Moab nor Ammon had any Right to it.

Sihon King of Heshbon commanded the [Numbers xxi. 21, &c. Deut. ii. 26, &c.] Amorites on the other Side Jordan. Moses being desirous that the Israelites should pass through the Country of Sihon, sent Deputies to him, to say to him; " Give us " Leave to pass through your Territories; " we will only go by the High-ways, " without turning aside into the Fields or " Vineyards; we will pay for all our Provisions; we will even buy the Water " we shall drink: Allow us then to cross " over your Country, (as we have been " suffer'd to do by the Children of Edom " that inhabit in Seir, and by the Moabites " that dwell at Ar upon the Arnon) 'till " we arrive at the Banks of Jordan, where " we shall come to the Land which the " Lord has promis'd to put us in Possession of." But Sihon refus'd them this Passage, and brought together a powerful Army, because the Lord had hardened his Heart. Then the Lord said to Moses; I shall now begin to perform my Promises which I made to my People, by delivering up Sihon to them, with all his Army. This King then, at the Head of his Army, advanced as far as Jahaz, and gave Battle to the Israelites, who cut the whole Army in Pieces, and became Masters of his Territory, from the Brook Arnon, as far as Jabbok, putting all the Inhabitants to the Edge of the Sword, and settling themselves there, as in a conquer'd Country, which the Lord had deliver'd into their Hands.

When a skilful General has a great Design in Agitation, which cannot be executed without passing through a neutral Country, he does not at first send to ask [Observations upon the Defeat of Sihon by the Israelites, Num. xxi. 23. Deut. ii. 31, &c.] Leave; because too much Civility would make him lie under the Suspicion of Fear. He ought to enter into it first, shew all the Diligence possible, and then send to the Sovereign, to desire his Permission, that he may march his Troops through his Country. This is a Piece of good Policy: But Moses acted otherwise; he first sent Ambassadors to the King of the Amorites, with this peaceable Message, saying; Let me pass through thy Land; we will not turn into the Fields, or into the Vineyards; we will not drink of the Waters of the Well: but we will go along by the King's Highway, until we be past thy Borders: Thou shalt sell me Meat for Money, that I may eat; and give me Water for Money, that I may drink; only I will pass through on my Feet.

After so just Proposals as these, if Sihon would not let the Children of Israel pass through his Country, he ought at least to have contented himself with refusing them Passage. It does not appear, that these had either attempted or threaten'd to force their Passage against his Will, and, as the Greeks us'd to say, stooping their Pikes. If therefore he had had no other Design but to hinder them from entring his Country, he ought only to have encamped upon his Frontier, and kept himself upon the Defensive, in case they would have forced him: But thinking himself to be the Braver, and the Stronger, probably because he was at Home, he sets himself at the Head of his Army, and marches out to fight. This War was very unjust on his Side, and even contrary to the Law of Nations; and Sihon was soon punish'd, for his Injustice and Temerity, with the Loss of his Life.

[Jos. Antiq. l. 4. c. 4, 5.] The sacred Authors give us no Particulars of this important Day, which decided the Fate of the Kingdom of Sihon; and Josephus tells us but little more of it: He even seems to palliate the Injustice of Sihon, by saying, that the Israelites took Arms with Joy, set themselves in Battle-array, and marched against their Enemies. Yet the Scripture says positively, that Sihon [Numbers xxi. 23.] gathered all his People together, and went out against Israel into the Wilderness; and he came to Jahaz, and fought against Israel. We cannot tell what Strength Sihon might have, nor what was the Number of his Troops; nor are we better instructed as to those of the Israelites, unless we adhere to that Enumeration made of them in the [Numbers xxvi.] Book of Numbers, and which amounted to above six hundred and twenty-four thousand Men. Then it will appear almost impossible that Sihon should have an Army sufficient to dare to attack such a formidable Power; and therefore I can only advance some Conjectures concerning the Disposition of the Troops of both Armies. We know the Tacticks of the People of Asia: The Jews who came out of Egypt marshalled themselves in Phalanx. In vain should we seek for the Original of this manner of Fighting, it lying too far back in the first Ages; but it is certain, that the Phalanx of the Jews was distinguish'd by large Bodies with a very great Depth, each Body being larger or smaller, according to the Strength and Ability of the Tribes, because each furnish'd its Contingent.

The Phalanx of the Greeks, when Philip carry'd it to its highest Degree of Perfection, was of sixteen thousand Infantry with heavy Arms. This Number compos'd an Army, not including the Cavalry. Philip divided [Arrian. de Bello Alex. Mag.] this Phalanx into four Corps, each of four thousand Men, and each Corps was call'd a Phalanx. This Division is not observ'd to have obtain'd among the People of Asia, and their military Discipline was nothing near so perfect as that of the Greeks; they set themselves in Array like these, but they left several small Intervals between, to give a Passage for such as brought Orders from the General, and to give Room for the Wounded to retire during the Fight.

The Army of Sihon was therefore ranged in Phalanx, according to the ordinary Custom of those Times. As to the Horse, since the Scripture does not mention them, we only supply them by Conjecture. The Jews never had many of these, and it was but late that they were admitted at all; for I can observe none at the Beginning of the Conquest of the Land of Promise.

Silas

[Acts xv. 22.] SILAS, or Sylvanus, was, according to St. Luke, one of the chief Men among the Brethren; which gives Room to judge, that he was of the Number of the Seventy Disciples. When a Dispute was rais'd at Antioch, about the Observation of the Legal Ceremonies, they chose Paul, Barnabas, Judas, and Silas, to go to Jerusalem, to advise with the Apostles concerning this Question. 'Tis believ'd to be the same [Hieron. Grot. Fromond.] Silas, who is mention'd by the Name of Sylvanus, in the Title of the two Epistles of St. Paul to the Thessalonians. St. Peter sent his first Epistle by him from Rome, wherein he stiles him a faithful Brother. Silas join'd himself to St. Paul; and after [Acts xv. 37—41. In the Year of Christ 51.] that Paul and Barnabas parted, on Account of John Mark, Silas follow'd St. Paul, and went with him to visit the Churches of Syria and Cilicia. Thence they passed into Lycaonia, into Phrygia, and Galatia; and lastly, they cross'd the Sea, and came into Macedonia. The Reader may see the Article of St. Paul, who had the chief Part in all these Transactions.

[Acts xvi. 11,12,&c.] Being at Philippi, they found a Woman who was possess'd with a Spirit of Python, from which St. Paul dispossess'd her. Upon which, the Masters of the young Woman were much provoked, for they got great Gains by the Predictions and Oracles the Devil pronounced, by making use of her Organs; wherefore they seized upon Paul and Silas, dragg'd them before the Magistrates, and accused them of introducing Customs among them, that were contrary to those of the Romans. The People flock'd together in a tumultuous manner, and the Magistrates gave Orders that Paul and Silas should be publickly whipp'd, and then put into Prison. In the Night there was a great Earthquake, the Doors of the Prison open'd, and the Fetters of the Prisoners fell off on their own accord. The Jailor thinking the Prisoners had made their Escape, was going to lay violent Hands on himself; but Paul call'd out to him, and bid him do himself no Harm, for all the Prisoners were safe. At this the Jailor was converted, and received Baptism, with his whole Family, as has been already related in the Article of St Paul. The Day following, the Magistrates sent Orders to set Paul and Silas at Liberty; but Paul reply'd, that Roman Citizens were not to be us'd thus, and that the Magistrates themselves might come and fetch them out of Prison. These Words of St. Paul give Room to judge, that Silas also might have the Freedom of the City of Rome.

From Philippi they went to Thessalonica and Berea, where they preached Jesus Christ; and St. Paul proceeding from Berea to Athens, he sent Silas thither, who however did not join him again 'till they met at [In the Year of Christ 52. 2 Cor. i. 19.] Corinth; 'twas there they wrote together the two Epistles to the Thessalonians. Silas was very useful to him in preaching the Gospel. The Roman Martyrology places the Feast of St. Silas upon the 13th of July. Ado says, he died in Macedonia, and seems to hint, that it was by Martyrdom. The Greeks improperly distinguish between Silas and Sylvanus, and put both their Feasts upon the 30th of July. There are some that refer to Silas, what St. Paul says to the Corinthians; And we have sent with [2 Cor. viii. 18, 19.] him the Brother, whose Praise is in the Gospel, throughout all the Churches: And not that only, but who was also chosen of the Churches to travel with us, with this Grace which is administred by us, to the Glory of the same Lord, and Declaration of your ready Mind.

Silas and Carpus. 'Tis pretended, that these were the two Disciples sent by John [Matth. xi. 2, 3, &c.] the Baptist to Jesus Christ, to enquire whether he were the Christ or no. Not that he had any Doubt about it, but to give these two Disciples an Opportunity of knowing our Saviour, of being instructed by him, and of being satisfy'd who he was. See Gerhard. Comment. ad Matth. xi. & Baron. Not. in Martyrol. Rom. xiii. Jul. & xiii. Octob.

Concerning the Motive of this Deputation of John the Baptist to Jesus Christ, there are many Sentiments both in ancient and modern Commentators; some thinking, that John had entertain'd some Suspicion about Jesus Christ; others, that it was only his Disciples that doubted of his Mission; others, that John desired Instructions from him, concerning the other Life. To this Purpose, the Reader may consult our Commentary upon the Eleventh Chapter of St. Matthew.

Silence

SILENCE. This Word does not only signify the ordinary Silence, or refraining from Speaking; but also, in the Stile of the Hebrews, it is taken for to be quiet, to remain [Exod. xv. 16. ירמו כאבן] immoveable. As for Example; As still as a Stone. The Vulgate has it, Fiant [Lam. ii. 18. Josh. x. 12, 13.] immobiles quasi lapis. Give thy self no Rest; Let not the Apple of thine Eyes cease, i. e. to shed Tears. Sun, stand thou still upon Gibeon: Heb. be silent. And the Sun stood still, and the Moon stayed, or were silent, at the Commandment of Joshua.

[Isai. xv. 1. ער נרמה Jer. viii. 14.] 2dly, Silence is taken for an entire Ruin and Destruction, for a total Subjection. Ar of Moab is laid Waste, and brought to Silence, or, is utterly destroy'd. The Lord our God hath put us to Silence, or, has brought great Calamities upon us.

[Psal. xciv. 17.] 3dly, Silence is taken for Death and the Grave: Unless the Lord had been my Help, my Soul had almost dwelt in Silence.

Silk

[Esth. viii. 15. תכרין בוץ] SILK, Sericum. No mention is made of Silk, in the Latin Text of Scripture, but in three Places. Esth. viii. 15. Mordecai being raised up into Haman's Place, went cloathed in a Mantle of Silk[1]. Ezekiel xxvii. 16. places Silk among the Merchandises that were brought to Tyre. Lastly, St. John, in his Revelation, chap. xviii. 12. speaking of the Downfall of Rome, says, that no longer any Silk shall be seen there, nor the other rich Merchandizes that were formerly brought thither. But the Hebrew Word Buz, which in Esther is translated by Sericum, signifies rather the true Byssus, which is a kind of Silk that comes next to the Shell-fish call'd Pinna, of which we have spoke already in the Article BYSSUS. The Word Ramoth, which in the Vulgate is render'd by Sericum, according to the Chaldee, signifies Precious-stones; [Ezekiel xxvii. 16. ראמות] according to Aquila, Works of Silk; according to modern Interpreters, Coral.

But it is generally thought,[2] that the Hebrew Word Meshi, which in Ezek. xvi. 10. St. Jerom has translated by Subtilia, fine Linen, signifies Silk. The Septuagint have render'd it by Trichapton[3], which some understand of a Web wove with Hair, which Women put upon their Heads, as a kind of Peruke; others, of a Web of Silk, which Women wore upon their Hair. Symmachus translated Meshi by an Head-dress; and Aquila, by flourish'd Work[4]; the Syriac, by a Woman's Dress. All which shew, that the Antients were not well convinced that Meshi signify'd Silk; and that it is very doubtful whether Ezekiel intended to speak of it or no, or that the Scripture has at all made mention of it; unless perhaps in Isaiah,[5] where we find the Hebrew word Shericoth, which St. Jerom has translated by Subtilia; and which others translate by Silk, or fine Flax, or crude Flax, of a yellow or whitish Colour; the Seventy, by divided Flax; Symmachus, by carded Flax. One might imagine that the Word Sericum, Silk, comes from forek, which signifies yellow, Isai. v. 7. for such is generally the natural Colour of raw Silk. But in that Passage of Isai. xix. 9. What is meant by they that work in fine Flax? Sherikoth here probably signifies the Colour of the Flax.

The ancient Greeks and Romans had but little Knowledge of the Nature of Silk: They imagin'd it to come from the Country of the Seres, a People of Scythia; that a kind of Spider spun it out of its own Bowels, wound it with its Feet about little Rods or Branches of Trees, and that these Threads of Silk were unravell'd again by [Plin. l. 6. c. 17.] sprinkling it with Water. Seres lanificio sylvarum nobiles, perfusam aquâ depertentes sylvarum canitiem, says Pliny. The Seres communicated their Silk to the Persians, from whom it pass'd to the Greeks, and from them to the Romans. But the Persians and Orientals for a long Time kept the Secret of manufacturing it among themselves, and would not communicate it to any. 'Tis still unknown by what Means it came, and how it was work'd up in Pliny's Time. Its first Appearance in Europe was after the Conquests of Alexander the Great; and even then it continu'd to be so little known, that it was usually sold for its Weight in Gold. About the Beginning of the Reign of Tiberius, a Law was made, which prohibited the Use of Silk [Tacit. l. 2. Annal. c. 33. Isai. viii. 6.] Garments to Men: Ne vestis seriaca viros fœdaret: None might wear it but Women of prime Quality. Vopiscus assures us, that the Emperor Aurelian refused his Empress a Silk Gown, which she very earnestly desired of him.

The Emperor Justinian, being curious to know the true Method of Making Silk, and desiring to save himself the Expence of buying it of Strangers, about the Year 555, as we are told, sent two Monks into the Indies, to inform themselves in the Silken Manufacture. These Monks, at their Return, made their Report to the Emperor, That it was almost impossible to transport the Silkworms so far alive, but that their Eggs might be brought with more Safety. The Emperor sent them a second time, with a Command to bring some along with them. This they did; and the Managing of them succeeded so well at Constantinople, that it was soon spread over all Europe. They set up Manufactures for them at Athens, at Thebes, and at Corinth. For a further Account, the Reader is referr'd to Salmasius, in his Notes upon Solinus, Tertullian, and the Historiæ Augustæ Scriptores.

Siloam

SILOAM, Shiloah, Siloe, or Siloa, a Fountain under the Walls of Jerusalem, towards the East, between the City and the Brook Kidron. Epiphanius writes,[1] that God gave this Fountain, at the Intercession of the Prophet Isaiah. But it was in Being a long Time before this Prophet; and there is great Likelihood, that it is [Josh. xv. 7. & xviii. 16. 2 Sam. xvii. 17. 1 Kings i. 9.] the same as the Fountain En-rogel, or the Fullers Fountain, which is known in Joshua, and in the Books of Samuel and the Kings. The Situation of the Fountain of Rogel to the East, and below the Walls of Jerusalem, just the same as the Fountain of Siloam, convinces us, that it must be the same Fountain; for there was but one on [Joseph. de Bello, l. 5. c. 26.] this Side. Josephus often speaks of the Waters of Siloe, or Siloam: He says, that when Nebuchadnezzar besieged Jerusalem, this Fountain increased its Waters; and that the same thing happen'd when Titus laid Siege to the City. So that, whereas before Water could hardly be bought for Money, during the Siege it abundantly supply'd the Roman Army, and furnish'd enough beside for watering the Gardens.

Isaiah insinuates, that its Waters flow'd gently, and without Noise: Forsomuch as this People refuseth the Waters of Shiloah [Hieron. in Jer. xiv.] that go softly, &c. St. Jerom says, that Jerusalem has none but the Fountain of Siloam, from whence to draw its Water: And besides, this Spring did not run always; Uno fonte Siloe, & hoc non perpetuo, utitur civitas. But anciently it was not so, at least the Scripture does not give us this Notion of it. St. Jerom himself affirms,[2] that the Waters of Siloam made the Valley through which they ran to be very delicious and agreeable, because it water'd the Gardens and Plantations there. Monconis says,[3] that the Water of this Fountain is a little brackish, and has not a good Taste. The Rabbins relate,[4] that the Priests drank of the Water of Siloam, when they had eat too much Flesh, to assist their Digestion. The Saltness that Monconis mentions might contribute to this.

St. John speaks of the Pool of Siloam, call'd, in Latin, Natatoria Siloe; in Greek, Kolymbethra Siloe, otherwise, the Pool of Bethesda. 'Twas a Pool just below the Walls of Jerusalem, towards the East: Its Waters were supply'd by the Fountain of Siloam. Our Saviour sent the Man that was born blind, to wash his Eyes in the Brook of Siloam, John ix. 7.

[Luke xiii. 4.] The Tower of Siloam. It is said in the Gospel, that the Tower of Siloam fell upon eighteen Men, and buried them in its Ruins. 'Tis thought this Tower was near the Fountain of Siloam, of which we have now spoke.

Silver

SILVER. This Metal does not appear to have been in Use before the Deluge; at least, Moses says nothing of it; he speaks only of the Metals of Brass and Iron: But in Abraham's Time it was become common, and Traffick was carry'd on with this [Gen. xiii. 2.] Metal. The Scripture observes, that this Patriarch was rich in Gold and Silver, and that he bought a Sepulchre for his Wife Sarah for four hundred Shekels of Silver. This Silver was not coined, according to all Appearance, but was only in Bars or Ingots; and in Commerce it was always weighed. See the Article MONEY.

Simeon (I)

[Gen. xxx. 33.] I. SIMEON, Son of Jacob and Leah: He was born in the Year of the World 2247, before Christ 1753, before the Vulgar Era 1757. He was Brother to Dinah by the same Mother; and after Shechem the Son of Hamor had defiled her, in the manner we have said under the Articles DINAH and SHECHEM, Simeon and Levi[1] took Arms, to revenge the Affront, enter'd into Shechem, kill'd all the Men they found there, and brought back their Sister to their Father's House. 'Tis thought that Simeon was one of those who shew'd most Inhumanity to his Brother Joseph, and advised his Brethren to kill him[2]. This Conjecture is founded upon Joseph's keeping him Prisoner in Egypt,[3] and treating him with more Rigour than the rest of his Brethren. Jacob, on his Death-bed,[4] shew'd his Indignation against Simeon and Levi, and cursed the Resentment they shew'd against the Shechemites. : Simeon and Levi are Brethren; Instruments of Cruelty are in their Habitations. O my Soul, come not thou into their Secret; unto their Assembly, mine Honour, be not thou united: for in their Anger they slew a Man, and in their Self-will they digged down a Wall. Cursed be their Anger, for it was fierce; and their Wrath, for it was cruel: I will divide them in Jacob, and scatter them in Israel.

And in Effect, the Tribes of Simeon and Levi were scattered and dispersed in Israel. As to Levi, he never had any fix'd Lot or Portion; and Simeon received for his Portion only a Canton that was dismembred from the Tribe of Judah, and some other Lands they went to conquer in the Mountains of Seir, and in the Desart of [1 Chron. iv. 27, 39, 42.] Gedor. The Targum of Jerusalem, and the Rabbins follow'd by some ancient Fathers, believe,[5] that the greatest Part of the Scribes and learned Men in the Law were of the Tribe of Simeon: And as these Persons were dispersed throughout all Israel, we see by that the Accomplishment of Jacob's Prophecy, which foretold, that Simeon and Levi should be scatter'd among their Brethren. Judith seems to vindicate this Action of Simeon; but she approved only of his Zeal, and not of the other Circumstances of the Action.

The Testament of the twelve Patriarchs intimates, that Simeon died at the Age of One hundred and twenty Years[6]; that he was a Man of an intrepid, implacable, and severe Temper; that he had conceiv'd a strong Aversion against his Brother Joseph, because his Father Jacob loved him better than the rest of his Brethren; that Judah pressing rather to sell Joseph, than to put him to death, Simeon was so far provoked at him, that he would have kill'd him, had not God prevented it, by suffering his Hand to become wither'd; that Simeon, however, humbled himself before God, and had the Use of his Hand restor'd to him again after seven Days. This Author adds, that Simeon was buried at Hebron, and that his Children carry'd him thither secretly, while they had War with the Egyptians. But 'tis well known how little Credit we ought to give to the Testimony of such a Book.

[Exod. vi. 15.] The Sons of Simeon were Jemuel, Jamin, Ohad, Jachin, Zohar, and Shaul. Their Descendants were to the Number of fifty-nine [Numbers i. 22.] thousand and three hundred fighting Men, at the coming out of Egypt; but only twenty-two thousand and two hundred of [Numbers xxvi. 14, 15.] these enter'd into the Land of Promise, the rest dying in the Desart, because of their Murmurings and Impiety. The Portion of [Josh. xix.] Simeon was to the West and South of the Lot of Judah, having the Tribe of Dan and the Philistines to the North, the Mediterranean to the West, and Arabia Petræa to the South.

Simeon (IV)

IV. SIMEON, an holy old Man that was at Jerusalem, full of the Holy Ghost, and expecting the Redemption of Israel: [Luke ii. 25,26,&c.] The Holy Ghost had assur'd him, that he should not die, before he had seen the Christ of the Lord: He therefore came into the Temple, moved by a supernatural Inspiration, just at the time that Joseph and Mary presented Jesus Christ there, in Obedience to the Law. Then Simeon took the Child into his Arms, gave Thanks to God, and said, Lord, now lettest thou thy Servant depart in Peace, according to thy Word; for mine Eyes have seen thy Salvation, which thou hast prepared before the Face of all People, a Light to lighten the Gentiles, and the Glory of thy People Israel. After which, Simeon blessed Joseph and Mary, and said to Mary, as he deliver'd the Child Jesus into her Arms, Behold, this Child is set for the Fall and Rising again of many in Israel, and for a Sign which shall be spoken against: Yea, a Sword shall pierce through thy own Soul also, that the Thoughts of many Hearts may be revealed. And this is all that the Gospel informs us of this holy Man. 'Tis believed, and with good Reason, that he died soon after he had given this Testimony to Jesus Christ.

[Epiphan. de Vita & Morte Prophetarum.] An ancient Author call'd Celsus[1], who has made a Preface concerning the Dispute between John and Papiscus, which is lost, says, that Simeon was blind; and upon taking Jesus Christ into his Arms, he immediately recover'd his Sight, and gave Testimony to our Saviour, in the Presence of all the People. Others think, that Simeon was the officiating Priest, and that, as such, he took our Saviour into his Arms, as a First -born that belong'd to the Lord; and that afterwards he return'd him to his Parents, after they had redeem'd him according to the Law. And indeed, several of the Antients maintain he was a Priest[2]; but others again deny it, with a great deal of Reason[3]. The Silence of Scripture alone upon this Occasion, is a sufficient Proof of it, since it would hardly have omitted mentioning such a Circumstance.

Leo Allatius, in his Dissertation upon the Writings of the Simeons, relates several Particulars that happen'd, as they say, when Simeon came into the Temple to see the Messiah. Among the other Mothers that brought their Children into the Temple, he observ'd the holy Virgin all-shining with Rays of Light. Then putting aside the Multitude, he went directly to her, gave her his Blessing, took the Child Jesus into his Arms, and with a divine Enthusiasm pronounced the Canticle, Nunc dimittis, &c. Nicephorus relates, that Simeon died as soon as he had return'd the Child Jesus to his Mother. And Epiphanius adds, that the Hebrew Priests refused to give him Burial, because he had spoke of our Saviour with too much Advantage. 'Tis easily understood, that this kind of Traditions are not much to be rely'd on.

[Vid.Baron. anno J.C. 1. §. 40.] It has been pretended,[4] that Simeon who receiv'd Jesus Christ into his Arms, was the same as Simeon the Just, the Son of Hillel, and Master of Gamaliel, who had the Honour of having St. Paul among his Disciples. 'Tis also said, that as Simeon one Day was explaining that Passage of Isaiah, A Virgin shall conceive, and bring forth a Son, &c. and not being able to penetrate into the Depth of this Mystery, it was reveal'd to him, that he should not die before he had seen the Accomplishment of it[5]. Others have advanced a thing still more incredible[6], that this Simeon was one of the Seventy-two Interpreters who translated the Hebrew Law into Greek, under the Reign of Ptolemy Philadelphus; and that being come to this Passage of Isaiah now mention'd, he had some Sentiments of Incredulity; but that the Holy Ghost promis'd him, that he should see the Completion of it before his Death. All these Circumstances being added to the true History of Simeon, are an Instance to shew us, what is the Spirit of the modern Grecians, and what Credit we ought to give to their Relations.

The most ancient Latin Martyrologists place the Feast of St. Simeon on the Fifth Day of January. Others put it on the Second or Fourth of February. Usuard and Ado place it on the Eighth of October, which has been follow'd by the Roman Martyrology. The Menologia publish'd by Canisius unite his Feast with that of the Purification of the Virgin. Those of Venice and Hughellus fix it on the Day following. His Tomb was heretofore to be seen in the Valley of Jehoshaphat, near Jerusalem. His Relicks, as they say, were transported from Constantinople to Venice, about the Year 1220. See M. de Tillemont, Not. 6. on Jesus Christ.

Simeon (VI)

VI. SIMEON, or Simon, Cousin-german to Jesus Christ, Bishop of Jerusalem, Son of Cleophas and of Mary Sister of the holy Virgin; probably the same that St. Mark speaks of, by the Name of Simon. It is very likely that Simeon was one of the first Disciples of Jesus Christ[1], and that he began early to follow him. Epiphanius [Epiphan. Hæref. 78. c. 14.] says, that when the Jews massacred Saint James minor, his Brother St. Simeon reproach'd them with this Piece of Cruelty. After the Death of St. James, in the Year 62, of the common Era, the Apostles, the Disciples, and the Kindred of Jesus Christ assembled together, to appoint him a Successor [Euseb.hist. Eccl. l. 3. c. 32.] in the See of Jerusalem, and with unanimous Consent they elected St. Simeon to supply his Place. Probably he withdrew with the rest of the Faithful to Pella beyond Jordan, during the three Years of the War of the Jews against the Romans. After the Destruction of Jerusalem, they return'd into this City,[2] and the Church of Christ appear'd there with new Splendor, by the great Number of Miracles that God work'd by their Means. When the Emperor Trajan made strict Enquiry for all those that were of the Race of David, St. Simeon was accused [Euseb.hist. Eccl. l. 3. c. 32.] before Atticus the Governor of Palestine. He endured several Tortures for many Days together, to the great Astonishment of every Body, and particularly of Atticus himself; for he was then one hundred and twenty Years of Age. At last he was crucify'd, [Euseb. Chronic.] about the 107th Year of the vulgar Era. He had govern'd the Church of Jerusalem about three and forty Years. The Latins place his Feast on the 18th of February, and the Greeks on the 27th of April. He had St. Justus for his Successor to the Bishoprick of Jerusalem. See M. Tillemont, Hist. Eccl. t. 2. p. 202, &c.

Simon (I)

I. SIMON, surnamed the Just, High-priest of the Jews, promoted to this Dignity in the Year of the World 3702, or 3703, and died in 3711, before Christ 289, before the vulgar Era 293. He was Son [Joseph. Antiq. l. 12. c. 2.] and Successor of Onias I. He left a Son behind him, call'd Onias II. who being but a Child at the Death of his Father, and not in a Capacity of exercising the sovereign Priesthood, it was committed to Eleazar, his Uncle by the Father's Side, who dying, left it to his great Uncle Manasseh, the Brother of Jaddus, to whom Onias II. Son of Simon the Just succeeded, in the Year of the World 3771. Several refer to Simon the Just the Character that Jesus the Son of Sirach makes of Simon Son of [Ecclus. l. 1, 2, &c.] Onias: But we rather think it should be referr'd to Simon II. Son of Onias II. of whom we shall speak in the next Article. We do not reject the Opinion of those who think, that Simon the Just is the same as old Simeon, who received Jesus Christ in the Temple.

The Jews tell us very extraordinary Things of this High-priest. It is said in the Talmud of Jerusalem,[1] that during the whole Time of his Pontificate, the Goat Azazel, or the Scape-goat, was already all fall'n to Pieces, before he could fall half way the Height of the Precipice, down which he was thrown. But after the Death of this great Man, the Goat made his escape into the Desart, where he was caught, and eaten by the Saracens; which was look'd upon as a great Misfortune. And moreover, during his whole Life, when upon the Day of solemn Expiation the High-priest drew Lots for the two Goats, one of which was to be sacrificed to God, and the other set at Liberty; or [Levit. xvi. 7, 8, 9, &c.] thrown down a Precipice in the Desart, the Lot which he drew with his Right-hand, had always upon it the Inscription, Pray to God; and those which he drew with his Left-hand were always for the Azazel, or Scape-goat; whereas after his Death this was varied, and the High-priest sometimes drew the Lot for the Azazel with his Right-hand: And this was look'd upon as an evil Omen.

[Isai. i. 18.] Besides, the Scarlet Ribbon[2] which was ty'd to the Head of the Goat Azazel, appointed to be precipitated, always appear'd White the whole Time of the Pontificate of Simon the Just; which was look'd upon as a certain Proof of the Remission of the Sins of the People, which was obtained by the Prayers of the High-priest according to those Words of Isaiah; Though your Sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as Snow. But after the Death of Simon, this was also varied, and the scarlet Ribbon appear'd sometimes red, and sometimes white. While he lived, the western Lamp of the golden Candlestick was always burning; but after his Death it sometimes went out. While he continued alive, the Fire of the Altar burn'd clear; and after a Billet or two were put on it in the Morning, there was no Occasion of putting on any more Wood the whole Day; but when he was dead, the Fire languish'd, and required a continual Supply to keep it in.

While he lived, the Blessing of God multiply'd the two Loaves of First-fruits, which were offer'd on the Day of Pentecost, [Lev. xxiii. 15, 21.] and the twelve Loaves of Shewbread which were set upon the golden Altar in the Sanctum, and which was left there for the whole Week till the Sabbath following, when others were put there in their [Lev. xxiv. 5, 9.] stead. These Loaves, I say, were multiply'd in such a manner under the Pontificate of Simon the Just, that when they were distributed to all the Priests that waited in the Temple, as a kind of Blessing, every one had, at least, one as big as an Olive, which was enough for their Refreshment, and some had to spare. But when he was dead, this Blessing ceased, and the Shares that were distributed to the Priests were so small, that the more modest return'd their Thanks, and the others still held out their Hands. This is what the Hebrews inform us concerning Simon the Just.

This was not appointed in Scripture; but however, Custom had given it Authority.

Simon (II)

II. SIMON, High-priest of the Jews, Son of Onias II. He was advanced to the High-priesthood in the Year of the World 3785, and died in the Year 3805, before Christ 195, before the vulgar Era 199. 'Twas in his Time, and in the Year of the World 3787, that Ptolemy Philopator came to Jerusalem, and attempted to penetrate into the inward Parts of the Temple, where none but the High-priest alone should enter. But Simon, with the other Priests, oppos'd him, and God struck the King of Egypt, and would not suffer him to execute his Design. See the third Book of the Maccabees. We think it to be of this Simon the High-priest, that the Author of the Book of Ecclesiasticus gives the following [Ecclus. i. 1, 2, 3.] Encomium. Simon the High-priest the Son of Onias, who in his Life repaired the House again, and in his Days fortified the Temple. And by him was built from the Foundation the double Height, the high Fortress of the Wall about the Temple. In his Days the Cistern to receive Water, being in Compass as the Sea, was covered with Plates of Brass. He took Care of the Temple that it should not fall, and fortified the City against besieging. How was he honoured in the midst of the People, in his coming out of the Sanctuary! He was as the Morning Star in the midst of a Cloud, and as the Moon at the Full. As the Sun shining upon the Temple of the most High, and as the Rain-bow giving Light in the bright Clouds, &c.

The Author goes on with his Character, representing the High-priest Simon in all the Splendor of his Dignity, adorn'd in his priestly Habit, surrounded by his Priests, and offering a solemn Sacrifice of Thanksgiving. 'Tis thought that Jesus the Son of Sirach intended to describe the Sacrifice that the High-priest Simon II. offer'd in the Presence of Ptolemy Philopator, as a Thanksgiving for the Victory he had then obtain'd over Antiochus the Great, near Raphia. Simon II. had for Successor Onias III.

Simon Maccabeus (III)

III. SIMON MACCABEUS, surnamed Thassi, Son of Mattathias, and Brother of Judas and Jonathan. He was Chief, Prince, and Pontiff of the Jews, from the Year of the World 3860 to 3869, before Christ 131, before the vulgar Era 135. He had for Successor John Hircanus his Son. Mattathias the Father of the Maccabees, just before his Death, spoke thus to his other Sons, of their Brother Simon; a I know that your Brother Simon is a Man of Counsel; give ear unto him alway, he shall be a Father unto you. He gave Proofs of his Valour in the Battle fought between his Brother Judas Maccabeus and Nicanor, in [2 Macc. viii. 22, 23.] the Year of the World 3838; and also in another Battle between the same in 3843. [2 Macc. xv. 17.] Upon another Occasion[1] Simon was sent into Galilee, to succour the Jews of that Province, who were threatened with an intire Destruction, by the Inhabitants of Tyre, Sidon, and Ptolemais. Simon having an Army of but three thousand effective Men, yet fought several Battles, dispersed the Enemy, kill'd above three thousand of them, obtain'd a great Booty, brought into Judea the Israelites that were in Galilee, and return'd triumphant to his Brethren. He again signalized his Valour in the Battle between his Brother Jonathan and Apollonius,[2] the Governor of Celosyria, whom they defeated, and kill'd above eight thousand of his Men. Simon was made Governor of the whole Coast of the Mediterranean Sea, from Tyre, as far as the Frontiers of Egypt, by the young King Antiochus [1 Macc. x. 82.] Theos[3]. He also took Bethsura, and Joppa, and built Adida in the Plain call'd Sephela. [1 Macc. xii. 33. 1 Macc. xii. 48, &c.] All these things he did while his Brother Jonathan was Chief and High-priest of the Jews.

But Jonathan being surprized by Tryphon,[4] and a Report being spread that he was put to Death, Simon came to Jerusalem, and having assembled all the People, he thus address'd himself to 'em; " You " very well know how many Battles we " have fought, I and my Brethren, and " the whole House of my Father, in Defence of our Laws, and for the Temple " of the Lord. All my Brothers are slain " for the Welfare of Israel, and I am left " alone. But God forbid that I should be " sparing of my Life in the same Cause; I " am no better than my Brethren, and I " shall be always ready for the Defence of " my People, against all Nations that shall " attempt to oppress them. " At these Words the People were inspired with a new Courage, and said to him; " Be our " Chief in the room of Jonathan and of " Judas, your Brethren; go before us in " our Battles, and we will be obedient to " you in every thing. " Then Simon had the Walls of Jerusalem repair'd; and knowing that Tryphon was coming into Judea with a great Army, he march'd[5] out to meet him, resolving to give him Battle.

But Tryphon sent Ambassadors to him, to tell him; that he had only detained his Brother Jonathan, because he was a Sum of Money in the King's Debt, occasion'd by some Affairs of which he had had the Management; but if he would send him one hundred Talents of Silver, and his two Sons for Hostages, he should be set at Liberty. Tho' Simon well knew this Message was only to trick him, yet he order'd the Money and his Brother's Sons to be sent, that he might not draw any Odium upon himself from the People of Israel. Tryphon forfeited his Word and Honour, would not send back Jonathan, but fell to spoiling and ravaging the Country. Simon, on his Part, endeavour'd to prevent it what he could, by wheeling about, and continually coasting him. When Tryphon came to Bascama, he there slew Jonathan and his two Sons, and afterwards return'd into Syria. Simon sent to fetch away the Bones of his Brother, and buried them honourably at Modin in the Sepulchre of his Fathers, which he adorn'd very much with Pillars, Pyramids, and Trophies in Sculpture.

Tryphon being come into Syria, there put to Death the young King Antiochus,[6] and usurped his Kingdom. But Simon Maccabeus would not acknowledge him, but his Competitor Demetrius Nicator as King of Syria; to whom he apply'd for confirming Judea in its antient Franchises, and for Freedom from Tribute. Demetrius granted Simon more than he asked, and gave him a general Amnesty for all that had passed, restor'd Judea to Freedom and Liberty, and left Simon the free Possession of all the Places he had fortify'd in the Country: So that this Year, which was the hundred and seventieth of the Greeks, he began to write upon the Tables and publick Registers; The first Year, under Simon sovereign Pontiff, great Chief, and Prince of the Jews. After this he took Gaza, and made a Composition with the Syrians that were in the Citadel of Jerusalem, and appointed an annual Festival in Commemoration of the Reduction of this Fortress, which for so long a [1 Macc. xiii. 43.] Time had been in the Hands of Foreigners.

Simon made his Son, John Hircanus, General of his Troops,[7] and appointed him his Station at Gazara, or Gadara, which was an important Post, for the Defence of the Country. During this Time Simon apply'd himself to Civil Affairs, and to give his Countrymen the Enjoyment of that Peace he had procured them.[8] All Israel beheld with Pleasure the prudent Administration of this great Man. His whole Study was to advance the Happiness of his Nation, and to make them dwell in Prosperity and Security. He took Joppa, and made a Harbour of it, to improve the Trade of the Jews; and every way extended the Limits of his Country. Then did every one cultivate his Lands in Peace, the Fields produced all sorts of Fruits, the Elders sat in the publick Places, and discoursed of what was for the general Advantage, the young Men dress'd themselves splendidly in warlike Habits; in short, every one sat under his Vine, and under his Fig-tree, and no one had Power to disturb the Tranquillity they enjoy'd. And thus the Name of Simon became famous to the utmost Parts of the Earth.

He renew'd their Alliance with the Romans,[9] and with the Lacedemonians,[10] and had a favourable Reception from 'em both. The whole Jewish Nation[11] concurr'd in registring a publick Act, by which they acknowledged their Obligations to Simon and all his Family, and recognized him and his Children as perpetual Prince and Pontiff of their Nation, till some faithful Prophet should arise from among them. They order'd, that he should be obey'd in all things, that all publick Acts should pass in his Name, that he should be cloathed in Purple, and adorned with Gold. This Declaration was written upon a Table of Copper, and set up in the Galleries of the Temple. A Copy of it was also deposited in the Treasury of the Temple, for the Use of Simon and his Children.

Antiochus Sidetes, King of Syria, Son of Demetrius Soter, and Brother to Demetrius Nicator, being inform'd that Demetrius Nicator was taken by the Parthians, wrote [1 Macc. xv. 1, 2, 3, &c.] to Simon from the Isle of Rhodes, to endeavour to engage him on his Side against Tryphon. He confirm'd to him whatever had been granted by Demetrius Nicator, and allow'd him the Privilege of stamping Money;[12] remitted to him all the Debts which he might owe to the Kings of Syria, and declared Jerusalem to be a free and an holy City. Simon consented to the Proposals of Antiochus, and sent him Men and Money to assist him in the Reduction of Dora, a City to the South of Mount Carmel, in which Tryphon had shut himself up. But Antiochus would not receive them, nor would stand by the Articles of the Treaty that he had made with Simon. He even sent Athenobius to him, to demand of him the Surrender of several Places in his Possession, or the Sum of a thousand Talents of Silver; threatning, in case of Refusal, to enter Judea with a Body of Troops, and to treat him as an Enemy. But Simon was not at all discouraged with his Threats, and sent him Word, he had usurped nothing from him, but had only took Possession of the Inheritance of his Fathers. He offer'd to give him an hundred Talents for the Cities of Joppa and Gazara, of which he had made himself Master, because they were the Occasion of great Calamities to the Country.

Antiochus was but ill satisfy'd with this Answer, and therefore sent Cendebeus[13] with an Army into the Country that lies upon the Coasts of the Mediterranean, and order'd him to make what Spoil and Havock he could in Judea. John Hircanus, the Son of Simon, who had his Quarters at Gazara or Gadara, came to inform his Father of this; who sent him back, with his other Son Judas, at the Head of twenty thousand Men of good Troops, and bid them give Battle to Cendebeus. They did so, and defeated this General. See the Article of JOHN HIRCANUS. Three Years afterwards,[14] when Simon went to make a Visit to the Cities of Judea; he came to the Castle of Docus or Dagon, where his Son-in-law Ptolemy, Son of Ambubus, resided. Ptolemy received him, and made him a great Entertainment; but in the midst of the Feast he caus'd him to be massacred, with his two Sons Mattathias and Judas, hoping by this to make himself Master of Jerusalem, and the whole Country. But John Hircanus having Notice of this Treachery, was before-hand with him, and came first to Jerusalem. He was acknowledg'd Sovereign Pontiff and Prince of the Jews, in the place of his Father. The Reader may see the Consequences of this Murder of Simon, under the Article of PTOLEMY, Son of Ambubus.

Simon (IV)

IV. SIMON, of the Tribe of Benjamin, who had the Superintendence of the Temple[1]. He attempted to perform some unjust Enterprize in the City; and not being able to succeed in it, because of the Opposition of the High-priest Onias III; he apply'd himself to Apollonius, Son of Thraseas, at that Time Governour of Celo-syria, and told him there were great Riches in the Temple of Jerusalem, which might easily be put into the Hands of Seleucus the King of Syria. He prevail'd so far, as that the King sent Heliodorus to Jerusalem, to fetch away their Treasures. But God did not suffer him to succeed. See HELIODORUS. Simon seeing his wicked Design baffled,[2] publish'd every-where, that it was Onias himself who had discover'd to the King the Treasures of the Temple; and the Friends of the High-priest opposing these Calumnies, the Dispute grew up to such a Height between the two Parties, that even Murders were committed by the Partisans of Simon, who were supported by Apollonius Governor of Phenicia. This obliged Onias the High-priest to take a Journey to Antioch, to vindicate himself to King Seleucus: For he found, that nothing but the Royal Authority itself was sufficient to prevail with Simon, to desist from his foolish and unjust Enterprizes.

While this Matter was in Agitation, King Seleucus dies,[3] and Antiochus Epiphanes succeeding him, Jason the Brother of Onias III. bought the High-priesthood of this Prince; and some Years after he sent Menelaus, Brother to Simon now mention'd, to carry to Antioch some of the Money to the King. But Menelaus took this Opportunity to buy the High-priesthood for himself, and to cheat Jason of his Money and Bargain[4]. This Circumstance gives Reason to suspect, that neither Simon nor his Brother Menelaus could be of the Tribe of Benjamin, since 'tis known this Tribe could have nothing to do with the Priesthood; and consequently Simon could not regularly be Governor or Captain of the Temple, and much less could Menelaus be High-priest. But they might however pretend to be of the sacerdotal Line, tho' in effect they were not. Or else perhaps the Word Benjamin is a Corruption of the Text. The Scripture does not acquaint us what became of Simon.

Simon (VII)

VII. SIMON, surnamed Canthara, Son of Simon Boethus, High-priest of the Jews; he succeeded Theophilus, Son of Jonathan,[1] in 4044, and had for Successor Matthias, Son of Ananus, in 4045, which is the 42 Year of the vulgar Era. He was again advanced to this Dignity in 4048, by Herod King of Calchis[2]. This second time he succeeded Elioneus, and had for Successor Joseph the Son of Caneus.

VIII. SIMON, the Galilean. He maintain'd, that the Jews ought not to pay Tribute to the Romans, or acknowledge [Joseph. de Bello, l. 2. c. 12.] them for Masters. The Latin Text calls him Simon, but the Greek reads Judas, which was his true Name. Compare Antiq. [Joseph. Antiq. l. 20. c. 3.] l. 18. c. 2. But Judas had a Son call'd Simon, who was crucify'd in the Time of Claudius.

Simon (IX)

IX. SIMON, the Cyrenean. When Jesus [Mat. xxvii. 32. Mark xv. 21.] Christ went to Calvary, and was not able to bear the Weight of the Cross, the Soldiers found a Man who was a Native of Cyrene in Lybia, whose Name was Simon, and was Father of Alexander and Rufus, whom they compell'd to carry the Cross after Jesus; that is, to carry it whole and intire according to some; or only to carry one End of it along with Jesus. 'Tis asked whether Simon was a Jew or a Pagan? Several Fathers have thought that he was a Gentile,[1] and that he was a Type of that idolatrous People, that afterwards was to be call'd to the Profession of the Gospel, and to carry the Cross after Christ. Others[2] hold that he was a Jew. The Latin Text of St. Mark intimates, that he was coming from a Farm near Jerusalem; and there were many Jews that dwelt at Cyrene in Lybia, of which Place he was. Some[3] will have him to be the same as Simon surnamed Niger, mention'd in the Acts. If it were so, then we must readily acknowledge him to have been a Jew. There are those that believe he was Bishop of Bostres in Arabia, and that he ended his Life by Martyrdom, having been burnt alive by the Pagans. As to his Sons Alexander and Rufus, they have been spoken of under their proper Articles.

Simon (X)

X. SIMON, the Canaanite, or Simon Zelotes, an Apostle of Jesus Christ. 'Tis doubtful whether the Name of Canaanite was derived to him from the City Cana in Galilee; or whether it might not be written Chananean;[1] or lastly, whether it should not be taken according to its Signification in the Hebrew, by deriving it from the Root Kana,[2] to be zealous. St. Luke gives [Luke vi. 15. Acts i. 13. Matt. x. 4. Mar. iii. 18.] him the Surname of Zelotes, the Zealous or Zelot, which seems to be the Translation of the Surname Cenaanite, which is given him by the other Evangelists. Some Fathers say,[3] he was of Cana, of the Tribe of Zebulun or Naphtali. The Learned are still divided about the Signification of the Term Zelotes, what it may stand for. Some take it only for the Zeal he shew'd in embracing the Gospel of Jesus Christ; while others think[4] he was of a certain Sect call'd Zealots, of which mention is made in Josephus[5].

The Particulars of his Life are unknown, nor does it appear where he preach'd, or where he died. Nicephorus and the modern Greeks say, that he travell'd through Egypt, Cyrenaica, and Africa; that he preached in Mauritania, and through all Lybia; that he carry'd the Gospel even into the Isles of Britain, and that after an infinite Number of Miracles and Sufferings, he was crown'd with Martyrdom by the Death of the Cross, which he endured with incredible Courage. Others[6] will have it, that he suffer'd Martyrdom in the City of Sunir in Persia; and the antient Martyrology given by Florentinius, sets it down so on the 28th of October, upon which the Latin Church celebrates his Festival. It puts his Martyrdom on the First of July, on which Abdias says he was massacred, in a Tumult rais'd by the Idol-priests against him and St. Jude, whose Feast is kept on the same Day. The Greeks honour him on the Tenth of June, and will have [Menæa. Jun. p. 93] him to be Nathanael, the Bridegroom at the Marriage of Cana.

Simon the Pharisee (XII)

XII. SIMON the Pharisee, with whom Jesus dined, after he had raised the Child of the Widow of Nain[1]. While he was at Table with Simon, a Woman of the Town, who was noted for her ill Life, enter'd into the Room, and pour'd out a Box of Perfume on the Feet of Jesus, wiped them with her Hair, washed them with her Tears, and did not cease to kiss them all the Time he was at Table. Simon seeing this, said within himself; This Man, if he were a Prophet, would have known who, and what manner of Woman this is that toucheth him, for she is a Sinner. Jesus knowing his Thoughts, said to him; There was a certain Creditor which had two Debtors, the one owed five hundred Pence, and the other fifty. And when they had nothing to pay, he frankly forgave them both. Tell me therefore which of them will love him most? Simon made answer; I suppose that he to whom he forgave most. Jesus replied; Thou hast rightly judged. Then turning towards the Woman, he made it appear, that she had done much more for him than Simon, and thus concludes; Wherefore I say unto thee, her Sins, which are many, are forgiven, for she loved much; but to whom little is forgiven, the same loveth little. Jesus had a mind to point out Simon, and those that are like him, under the Character of those to whom little is forgiven, and who love but little.

XIII. SIMON the Leper; he dwelt at Bethany, near Jerusalem[1]. Jesus coming thither a few Days before his Passion, was invited by Simon the Leper to eat with him. Lazarus, whom our Saviour had raised from the Dead some time before, was at Table with them. Martha, his Sister, was very busy in attending upon them; and Mary, his other Sister, to shew her Love and Respect for our Saviour, brought a Box of Perfumes, which she pour'd out upon his Feet. This Entertainment is very different from that which our Saviour had about two Years before, at the House of Simon the Pharisee; as likewise Mary the Sister of Lazarus was a different Person from the Sinner of Nain.

Simon Niger (XVI)

XVI. SIMON NIGER, or the Black, of whom mention is made in the Acts of the Apostles[1]. He was of the Number of the Prophets and Teachers, that were of the Christian Church at Antioch. He was one of those that laid their Hands on St. Paul and St. Barnabas, for the Office to which the Holy Ghost had appointed them. Some think he was the same as Simon the Cyrenean mention'd before; but there is no other Proof of this Opinion, but the Similitude of Names; nor is this a very good one, since St. Luke always calls Simon the Cyrenean by the Name of Simon; but Simon Niger, by [Epiphan. hæres. 20. c. 4.] the Name of Simeon. Epiphanius reckons up one Niger among the seventy Disciples. The Church makes no mention of Simon Niger in its Offices, nor in its Martyrology.

Simon Magus (XVIII)

XVIII. SIMON Magus, or the Sorcerer; he was, as they say,[1] of the Village of Gitton, in the Country of Samaria. St. Philip the Deacon coming to preach at Samaria,[2] converted several Persons there, and among others this Simon, who believed and was baptized. He seeing the Miracles perform'd by St. Philip, was in the utmost Amazement. The Apostles St. Peter and St. John then coming to Samaria, to lay on their Hands, and communicate the Holy Ghost to such as had been baptized by St. Philip; Simon was full of Admiration, upon seeing the wonderful Effect of this Imposition of Hands, and offer'd Money to the Apostles, saying; Give me also this Power, that on whomsoever I lay Hands, he may receive the Holy Ghost. But Peter said to him in great Indignation; Thy Money perish with thee, because thou hast thought that the Gift of God may be purchased with Money. Thou hast neither Part nor Lot in this Matter, for thy Heart is not right in the Sight of God. Repent therefore of this thy Wickedness, and pray God, if perhaps the thought of thine Heart may be forgiven thee. For I perceive thou art in the Gall of Bitterness, and in the Bond of Iniquity. Simon made answer; Pray ye to the Lord for me, that none of these things which ye have spoken come upon me.

[Acts viii. 9, 10, 11.] St. Luke adds, that Simon had addicted himself to the Use of Magick Arts before St. Philip came to Samaria, and that by his Impostures and Enchantments he had seduced the People of this City, and would fain pass for some extraordinary Person, so that they all follow'd him from the Highest to the Lowest, saying among themselves; This Man is the great Power of God. But after St. Peter had reproved him; and had rejected with Horrour the Proposal he made to him, of selling the Power of imparting the Holy Ghost; Simon fell into much greater Errors and Abominations, applying himself to Magick more than ever, taking [Irenæ. l. 1. c. 20.] Pride in withstanding the Apostles, and infecting a great Number of Persons with his impious Errors. For this Purpose he left Samaria,[3] and travell'd thro' several Provinces, seeking out such Places where the Gospel had not been yet preached, that he might prejudice the Minds of Men against it.

When he was at Tyre in Phenicia, a he there bought a publick Prostitute call'd Selene or Helene, and carry'd her every-where along with him, committing all sorts of Crimes in secret with her. He pretended this was the Hellen who had been the Occasion of the Trojan War. Having run through several Provinces, and made himself admired by a vast Number of Persons, for his false Miracles and Impostures; he quitted the Eastern Parts of the World, and came to Rome in the Time of the Emperor Claudius, about the Year of Christ 41. 'Tis said[4] he was honour'd as a Deity by the Romans, and by the Senate itself, who decreed a Statue to be erected for him in the Isle of the Tyber, with this Inscription; To Simon the holy God.[5] This Fact however is disputed by several able Criticks, who think Justin mistook a Statue dedicated to Semo Sanctus, a Pagan Deity, for one erected to Simon Magus. And indeed within this hundred and twenty-five Years there has been found a Statue in the Isle of Tyber, with this Inscription, nearly approaching to that mention'd by Justin. Semoni Sanco Deo Fideo Sacrum Sext. Pompeius Sp. F. Mutianus —— donum dedit. We shall not here enter upon a Scrutiny into this Difficulty. The Reader may peruse those that have expresly treated on it; as Baronius, ann. 44. . 55. Salmasius, Notes upon Spartian, p. 39. F. Halloix in his Life of Justin, M. du Pin, Mr. de Tillemont, Not. 1. upon Simon Magus, t. 2. p. 521, 522, &c.

When St. Peter came to Rome,[6] some time after the Arrival of Simon Magus, he soon reversed all that this Impostor had been doing there. Yet Simon however did not quit this great City, where there was so much Room for spreading his Errors; and under the Reign of Nero, he again acquired a great Reputation by his Inchantments. He pretended to prove, that he was the Christ,[7] and, as the Son of God, that he could ascend into Heaven: And in Reality, he caus'd himself to be rais'd into the Air in a fiery Chariot, by the Assistance of two Demons, having recourse to the Power of magical Inchantments. But St. Peter and St. Paul at the same time betaking themselves to Prayer, the Impostor was deserted by his Demons, fell down upon the Ground, and broke his Legs. And being carry'd to Brindes, for very Grief and Shame, he threw himself headlong [Dio Chrysost. orat. 21.] from the Top of the House where he lodg'd. 'Tis reported, he had this Fall in the Presence of Nero; and hither is referr'd what is said by Dio Chrysostomus, that Nero kept a long while at his Court a Man that pretended to fly in the Air: And also [Suetonius, l. 6. c. 12.] what is said by Suetonius, that in the Publick Games, a Man undertook to fly in the Air, in the Presence of Nero; but at his first Flight he fell down upon the Ground with such Violence, that his Blood spurted up to the Gallery where the Emperor was sitting. He died, probably, in the 65th Year of the Common Era.

[Acts viii. 10. Irenæ. l. 1. c. 20.] As to the Heresies of Simon, besides those which are imputed to him in the Acts, wherein he asserts himself to be the great Power of God, and where he thought the Gifts of the Holy Ghost were venal, and to be purchased with Money; the Fathers accuse him of pretending to be the great Power of God, and that he came down as the Father in respect of the Samaritans, as the Son in respect of the Jews, and as the Holy Ghost in respect of all other Nations: but that it was indifferent which of these Names he went by. St. [Hieron. in Mat. xxiv.] Jerom quotes these blasphemous Expressions out of one of his Books; I am the Word of God, I am the Beauty of God, I am the Comforter, I am the Almighty, I am the whole Essence of God. H was the Inventer of the Eons[8], which were as so many Persons, of whom they composed their fantastical Deity. His Hellen[9] he call'd the first Intelligence, the Mother of all Things; he sometimes gave her the Name of the Holy Ghost, or of Prunica, or Minerva: He said, that by this first Intelligence he had at first a Design of creating the Angels; but that she knowing this Will of her Father, she had descended lower, and had produced the Angels, and the other spiritual Powers, to whom she had given no Knowledge of her Father: That these Angels and Powers had afterwards made Angels and Men: That Hellen had passed successively into the Bodies of Women, and among others, into that of Hellen the Wife of Menelaus, who was the Occasion of the War of Troy; and that at last she had descended into the Body of this Hellen of Tyre, whom he had with him.

He did not acknowledge Jesus Christ as Son of God, but look'd upon him as a Rival, and pretended himself to be the Christ. He believed neither Salvation, nor the Resurrection of the Body, but barely a Resurrection of the Soul. He taught, that Men need not trouble themselves[10] [Jos. Antiq. l. 17. c. 12. p. 607, 608.] about good Works, for all Actions were indifferent of themselves; and that the Distinction of Actions into good and evil, was only introduced by the Angels, to bring Men into Subjection to them. He rejected the Law of Moses, and said, he was come to abolish it. He ascribed all the Old Testament to the Angels; and tho' he every-where declared himself an Enemy to the Angels, he paid them an idolatrous Worship, pretending, Men could not be saved, without offering to the Supreme Father abominable Sacrifices, by the Means of the Principalities that he placed in each Heaven. He offer'd them his Sacrifices, not to obtain any Assistance from them, but to prevail with them that they might not oppose Men. Simon form'd a Sect of Hereticks, which were call'd Simonians, of whom we shall speak presently. Concerning Simon, such Authors may be read as have treated about Hereticks, particularly M. de Tillemont, Hist. Eccl. t. 2. . 5. p. 37, &c.

Simon (XIX)

XIX. SIMON, a Slave of Herod the Great, who, after the Death of this Prince, had the Assurance of aspiring to the Diadem, having no other Merit to found his Pretensions upon, but a graceful Person, and an advantageous Stature. He burnt the Palace of Jericho, and some other Edifices, giving the Plunder to those that follow'd him. But Gratus the Governor of the Province set upon him, overcame him, and having come up with him as he fled away through narrow Passes, he kill'd him: This happen'd three Years before the Common Era.

Simon (XX)

XX. SIMON, Son of Gioras : a He put himself at the Head of a Number of seditious People, began to make Depredations, and even to commit Murders in that Part of Idumea call'd Acrabatane. Ananus sent out Troops against him, which obliged him to retire into the Castle of Massada, from whence he made Excursions into Idumea: From thence he advanced towards Jerusalem, which he put into a Consternation, by the many Cruelties he exercised against those that fell into his Power. The Zealots fearing the Progress of his Arms, fought with him, but could not subdue him; and some time after[1], the People of Jerusalem being drove to Extremities by the Zealots, and seeking Means of skreening themselves from their Violence, call'd in Simon the Son of Gioras to their Assistance. Simon was received into the City with the Acclamations of the People, and began by attacking John of Giscala and the Zealots in the Temple: But they did him more Harm than he could do them. He treated very tyrannically the Inhabitants of Jerusalem who had call'd him to their Assistance, and exercised all [Joseph. de Bello, l. 5. c. 33. p. 938.] sorts of Cruelties against them. He caus'd the High-priest Mattathias to be kill'd, who had insisted the most strenuously upon his being call'd in to Jerusalem.

I shall not attempt to give an Account of all the wicked Actions that this Profligate committed at Jerusalem, 'till the Taking of the City by the Romans. As his Name is not found in holy Writ, I think my self not obliged to give his whole History, but only of such as are recorded in Scripture. When therefore the Romans had taken the City and the Temple,[2] Simon conceal'd himself under-ground, in some of the Common Sewers, and had taken Provisions with him. He remain'd there hid for some Months; but at last his Provisions being all gone, he was forc'd to creep out and appear above-ground, in the Place where the Temple had been, cloath'd in White, with a Robe of Purple; probably thinking, by this Means, to frighten the Romans, and so to make his Escape. They were indeed surprized at the Sight of him, and asked him, who he was? He would not tell his Name, and desired to speak with the commanding Officer. This was Terentius Rufus, for Titus was then gone from Jerusalem. He came to him, and knowing who he was, had him chain'd, sent Word to Titus of his Prisoner, and sent him after him to Cesarea. Titus carry'd him to Rome, where he serv'd to adorn his Triumph, and afterwards was publickly executed.

Simonians

SIMONIANS, or Simonites, a sort of Hereticks, and Disciples of Simon Magus. They embraced all the Principles of their Master, which we have given an Account of [Iren. l. 1. c. 20. Euseb. Hist. Eccl. l. 2. c. 13.] above; and as to their Practices, they indulged themselves in all sorts of Extravagances as much as they could; which exceeded, as Eusebius says, all that can be said of them. And they acknowledg'd in their Books, that when first their more secret Mysteries were revealed to any one, they were fill'd with Horror and Amazement at them. Beside their shameless Filthiness, they gave themselves up to all sorts of Sorcery and Witchcraft; and tho' outwardly they made Profession of a sort of Christianity, yet they did not refrain from worshipping Simon and Hellen, represented under the Shapes of Jupiter and Mars, and offered Victims and Libations of Wine to them. They also look'd upon the ordinary Worship of Idols as an indifferent thing; so that they were not expos'd to the Danger of Persecution and Tortures, as the Christians were, for not offering Incense to Idols: And [3] the Heathen let them[1] continue in Quiet, whilst they openly persecuted the Christians.

There is great Probability, that when St. John, St. Peter, and St. Paul, give Warning, in their Epistles against Hereticks, false Apostles, and false Teachers, that corrupted the sound Doctrine by profane Novelties, and vainly boasted of new Light and particular Revelations in divine Matters; those Enemies of the Cross of Christ, those Men that made their Belly their God, and gloried in what ought to have cover'd them with Confusion; it is likely, I say, that the Apostles intended to speak of the Disciples of Simon, of Cerinthus, and of some other Hereticks of the first Age. The Description St. Paul gives us of them in several Places of his Epistles,[2] shews, that the Corruption of their Manners was grown to a great Extremity, and that their Doctrine was not purer than their Practices.

The Sect of the Simonians continu'd down to the fourth Century. Justin says, [Justin. Apolog. 2. p. 69.] that in his Time, that is, about the Year 150, almost all the Samaritans, and some few others in other Countries, acknowledg'd Simon as the greatest of the Gods. Clemens Alexandrinus says,[3] that his Followers worshipp'd him, and endeavoured to make themselves as like him as they could. Ireneus says,[4] they were call'd Simonians; and Origen assures us,[5] they went also by the Name of Hellenians, from Hellen. The same Author says in one Place,[6] that the Sect of the Simonians was reduced to about thirty Persons: Elsewhere[7] he tells us, they were quite extinct. But 'tis known from other Testimonies, that there were some even at the Beginning of the fifth Century. An Author that wrote upon Baptism against St. Cyprian, about the Year 256, says, that some Hereticks descended from Simon, made Fire appear above the Water, when they gave Baptism. Eusebius[8] still speaks of Simonians that mingled themselves among the Catholick, and receiv'd the Baptism of the Church; afterwards spreading in secret the Venom of their Doctrine among the Faithful. Several of them were discover'd, and expell'd out of the Church, about the Beginning of the fourth Century.

SIMONY. This is giving some Temporal Consideration for a Spiritual Thing, or for something that is annex'd to a Spiritual [Acts viii. 18,19,20.] Thing. We do not read, that Simon or his Disciples professedly taught, that this kind of Trading was lawful; but the Example of Simon, who offered Money to the Apostles, to have the Power of communicating the Holy Ghost, as well as themselves, has caus'd the Name of Simoniacks to be given to them, who, in Imitation of Simon, would purchase for Money, or by their good Offices, or by any other way, some Spiritual Concern, or any thing relating thereto.

[Rom. xvi. 19.] I. SIMPLE, Simplex, is sometimes taken in an ill Sense. St. Paul, for Example, would have the Romans be wise unto that which is good, and simple concerning evil; that is, discerning in the Choice of good, to distinguish the good from the bad Doctine; but they must avoid whatever has the Appearance of Evil, as Children, that, without much Reasoning, fly from every thing that does but seem hurtful to them. This is what he says elsewhere, Be not Children in Understanding; howbeit, in Malice be ye Children: Suffer yourselves not to be led away by Appearances, as Children are.

Simple (III)

III. SIMPLE, Simplex, or Simplicity, is [Matth. vi. 22. Luke xi. 34. סיןSin. Rom. xii. 8. ציןTzin.] sometimes taken for Liberality. The single or simple Eye, oppos'd to an evil Eye, represent a liberal Disposition, in contradistinction to a covetous one. St. Paul says, He that giveth, let him do it with Simplicity; that is, liberally, and with a chearful Heart.

Sin

SIN, or Zin, a City and Desart to the South of the Holy Land, in Arabia Petrea It gave its Name to the Wilderness of Sin, in the same Country. The Scripture distinguishes two Cities and two Desarts of Sin, one is wrote purely Sin, with Samech, Jod, Nun. The other is writ Zin, or Tzin, with [See Num. xiii. 22. xxvii. 14. & xxxiv. 3.] Tzade, Jod, Nun. The first was nearer Egypt and the Red-sea. The Hebrews were no sooner out of this Sea, but they found themselves in the Wilderness of [Exod. xvi. 1. & xvii. 1.] Sin, which is between Elim and Sinai: 'Twas there that God rain'd Manna upon them.

The second is also to the South of Palestine, but inclining more towards the [Deuteron. xxxii. 51.] Dead-sea. Kadesh was in the Desart of Zin: 'Twas from this Wilderness that they sent out the Spies, to examine the Land of [Num. xiii. 21. Numbers xxvii. 14. Numbers xxxiv. 3. Sin

SIN, Peccatum, is any Thought, Word, Action, Omission, or Desire, contrary to the Law of God. The Hebrews have several Words for expressing Sin. They think, for Example, that Chataath,[1] Peccatum, signifies a Sin committed against some positive Precept; and that Ashamath,[2] Delictum, expresses a Sin committed against any Negative Precept: And that Shegaga[3] stands for Sins of Ignorance, Forgetfulness, Omission, or Inadvertency. But certain it is, that these Terms are often used one for another, and that the Scripture seldom observes these Distinctions: It often calls very great Sins, by the Name of Ignorance or Folly; and at other times it gives the Name of Sin to Faults of Inadvertency. Also the Name of Sin is often given to the Sacrifice of Expiation,[4] or to the Sacrifice for Sin. Saint Paul says, for Example, that God was pleas'd that Jesus Christ, who knew no Sin, should be our Victim of Expiation: For he hath made him to be Sin for us, who knew no Sin; that we might be made the Righteousness of God in him.

[Wisd. i. 13, 14.] God was not the Author of Sin, or of Death; but Sin and Death enter'd into the [Wisd. ii. 24. 1 Cor. xv. 20, 21. Rom. v. 12. & vi. 23. Psal. l. 7. Rom. iii. 23. Gen. viii. 21.] World by the Malice of the Devil. Adam, by his Disobedience, has made us all guilty in the Eyes of God; his Sin has merited Death for us; he is the Reason that we are all born Children of Iniquity, and that we are inclined to Evil from our Mothers Wombs. Jesus Christ, by his Death, hath restored Life to us; by his Obedience, he has reconciled us to God the Father; instead of Children of Wrath as we were, he has merited for us the Character of Children of God. 'Tis by our Baptism that we are admitted to the Participation of these Privileges, and by Repentance that we may recover them again, when we have had the Misfortune to lose them.

The Sin against the Holy Ghost, is differently explain'd by the Fathers and the Interpreters. St. Athanasius[5], who wrote expressly upon this Matter, relates the Opinions of Origen, and of Theognostes, who made the Sin against the Holy Ghost, to consist in Crimes committed after Baptism. But Athanasius very well observes, that the Pharisees, whom our Saviour upbraided with this Crime, had not received Baptism, and consequently could not become capable of it. As for himself, he thinks it consists in this, that the Pharisees maliciously imputed the Works of Jesus Christ to the Power of the Devil; though they could not but be convinced in their own Minds, that he acted by a good Spirit: And also in this, that they deny'd the Divinity of the Son, which was so clearly proved to them by his Works. St. Hilary[6] and St. Theophilus of Antioch[7] follow the Opinion of Athanasius, and make the Sin against the Holy Ghost to consist, as he does, in denying the Divinity of the Son; under the Name of the Holy Ghost, meaning the Divinity.

St. Austin says in one Place,[8] that the Sin against the Holy Ghost, consists in subverting brotherly Charity, by Motives of Envy and Malice; and in his Retractations, he adds,[9] that to render this Crime really irremissible, the Sinner must persevere in it to the End. He says elsewhere,[10] that tho' there are several Sins that may be committed against the Holy Ghost, yet however, there are none really irremissible, except final Impenitence, Despair, the Perseverance of a hardened Sinner, who does not return to God during his whole Life. St. Chrysostom[11], the Author of the imperfect Work upon St. Matthew[12], St. Isidore of Damietta[13], and several others, think, that the Sin we are speaking of, consists, in ascribing the miraculous Works of Jesus Christ to a diabolical Power; and that its Irremissibleness is not real and absolute, but only relative, because it is very difficult to obtain the Pardon of it.

St. Ambrose is not altogether consistent with himself, in what he says concerning this Crime: In one Place,[14] he makes it consist in denying the Deity of the Son; which is the Opinion of Origen and Hilary. In the Book of the Holy Ghost,[15] he says, it consists in denying the Divinity of the Holy Ghost, and in imputing his Works to the Power of the Devil. Lastly, In his Book of Repentance,[16] he extends it to Heresy and Schism. The Author of the Apostolical Constitutions[17], and Philastrius[18] also, accuse Hereticks of the Sin against the Holy Ghost. But were the Pharisees guilty of Heresy, those to whom our Saviour imputes this Sin? Hermas says,[19] that the Sin against the Holy Ghost, is the Blaspheming of God: And the Author of the Questions upon the Old and New Testament says,[20] that it is a Renouncing of God. Pacian Bishop of Barcelona says,[21] it is ascribing to the Devil the Works of the Holy Ghost: He believes this Sin to be morally unpardonable. The Author of the Recognitions, imputed to Pope Clement,[22] thinks the Sin against the Holy Ghost, the irremissible Sin, to be that of an harden'd and insolent Sinner. Grotius[23] espouses this Opinion, and gives for Examples of this Crime, the Sin of Korah, Pharaoh, Simon Magus, Ananias and Sapphira.

The Catholick Commentators are divided into two Opinions. One Side follow Saint Austin, and place the Sin against the Holy Ghost, and its Unpardonableness, in final Impenitence. The other Side place it in the wilful Malice of those that withstand the Evidence of Truth, and will not acknowledge the Miracles of Jesus Christ to be the Finger of God, but maliciously and against the Conviction of their own Consciences, impute them to the Prince of Darkness. This was certainly the Crime of the Pharisees, to whom Jesus Christ apply'd his Discourse; and those also become guilty of the same Crime, who oppose a known Truth, and who impute either to Vanity, or Hypocrisy, or, what is still more heinous, to Magick and diabolical Confederacy, such good Actions as they see perform'd by good Men. This is the Opinion of St. Chrysostom and St. Jerom[24], and that which to us seems to be most probable. The Reader may see the Dissertation upon this Subject, which we have prefix'd to our Commentary on St. Mark.

Original Sin. The Catholick Christian Church believes, that the Sin of Adam was communicated to all his Posterity, and that it has infected and corrupted it: And that all Men are born Children of Wrath; [Ephes. ii. 3.] Naturâ filii iræ. That by the Fault of one alone Sin came into the World, and Death [Rom. v. 12.] by Sin: By one Man Sin entered into the World, and Death by Sin, and so Death passed upon all Men. And this is what we call Original Sin, so well described by Job, [Job xiv. 1, 4.] saying; Man that is born of a Woman, &c. Who can bring a clean thing out of an unclean? Not one. And David says; Behold, I [Psal. li. 5.] was shapen in Iniquity, and in Sin did my Mother conceive me.

But notwithstanding the Clearness of these Texts, and of several others that might be cited, both in the Old and New Testament, some learned Men have made a Doubt, whether the ancient and modern Hebrews had any distinct Notion of Original Sin, and of the Remedy that God had provided, to deliver his People from it.

Josephus and Philo, and such among the ancient Christians as admitted the Pre-existence of Souls, and that Souls are born either good or bad, according to the Good or Evil they had done in another Life; these, I say, could not hold Original Sin as we now hold it, neither did they speak of it as we do, nor in any manner that approaches to it. Those among the ancient Jews who believed a kind of Metempsychosis, had still a less Degree of Faith in it, because of the Opposition of these two Opinions. And if they did not believe that Mankind was born criminal, in the Sight of God, they had no need of having recourse to any Remedy for Original Sin. They never speak of this: In the Institution of Circumcision, they only mention Reasons of Decency, Propriety, or of the Distinction of the Jews from other Nations.

The greatest Part of the modern Jews,[25] as well as of the ancient, maintain the Pre-existence of Souls, and a kind of Transmigration, and consequently they cannot be much inclined to admit of Original Sin: They suppose their Children, who die before they receive Circumcision, to pass into a State of Happiness; therefore they do not think that Circumcision remits any Sin contracted at the Birth. They acknowledge in Man a natural Propensity to Evil, which they call Jetzirah raah; but they cannot bear with what we say, of a corrupted Mass appointed to eternal Misery, as a Punishment for the Sin of Adam and Eve. Maimonides, [Maimon. more Neboth. part 1. c. 39.] a famous Rabbi, maintains, that it is not easier to conceive how a Man should be born with Sin, or with Virtue, than to comprehend how he should be born a skilful Master in any Art or Science. He looks upon Original Sin as a thing impossible. Other Rabbins as formally deny Original Sin, and confine the Effects of Adam's Sin to the introducing of Death on all his Posterity: And they also believe, that if Adam could have attain'd to eat of the Tree of Life, even after his Sin, he would not have died at all.

Yet however, we must allow, that some of the Rabbins seem to stand up for *Ori*tempted [c.11. §.7.] Eve, cast upon her such a stinking Smell, that she communicated it to all her Posterity ; but that the Israelites alone [Basnage's Hist. of the Jews, c. 4. l. 6. c. 13.] were freed from it. Others acknowledge, that the bad Inclinations which we find in ourselves, are an Evil : They say, with Moses, that it is the Fore-skin of the Flesh which must be cut off: They call it, after David, a Defilement ; with Solomon, an Enemy ; with Isaiah, an Offence ; with Ezekiel, a Stone, which God must take away, to give us a Heart of Flesh ; having asserted, with Joel, that it is a secret Thing. They add, that as the Fruit is better when the Seed that produces it has any Bitterness, so likewise Children that are born from a corrupted Father must partake of his Corruption. 'Tis asked, in the Gemara, If Concupiscence insinuates itself at the Moment of Conception, or at the Time of the Birth ? To which it is answer'd, At the Birth ; for the Scripture says, Sin lies at the Door. But the Number of Rabbins that thus speak of Original Sin is very small : Others either deny it, or know nothing of it.

[Bibl. Orient. p.440, 583.] The Mahometans admit of Original Sin, as a Consequence of the Sin of Adam : They call this Original Sin, or the Concupiscence that attends it, the Grain of the Heart, or, the black Seed of the Heart, from which Mahomet boasted to be purify'd by Gabriel the Arch-angel, who pull'd it out of his Heart : They affirm also, that our Lord Jesus Christ, and his Mother Mary, were the only Persons that were preserved from it.

Sinai

SINAI, or Sina, a famous Mountain of Arabia Petræa, upon which God gave the Law to Moses a : It stands in a kind of Peninsula, form'd by the two Arms of the Red-sea, one of which stretches out towards the North, and is call'd the Gulph of Kolsum ; the other extends towards the East, and is call'd the Gulph of Elan, or the Elanitich-sea. At this Day the Arabians call Mount Sinai by the Name of Tor, that is, the Mountain, by way of Excellence ; or Gibel Mousa, the Mountain of Moses : It is two hundred and sixty Miles from Cairo, and generally it requires a Journey of ten Days to travel thither. The Wilderness of Sinai, where the Israelites continued incamped for almost a Year, and [Coppin's Voyage to Egypt, c. 10.] where Moses erected the Tabernacle of the Covenant, is considerably elevated above the rest of the Country ; and the Ascent to it is by a very craggy Way, the greatest Part of which is cut out of the Rock ; then one comes to a large Space of Ground, which is a Plain surrounded on all Sides by Rocks and Eminencies, whose Length is nearly twelve Miles. the North Side, two high Mountains shew themselves, the highest of which is call'd Sinai, and the other Horeb. The Tops of Horeb and Sinai have a very steep Ascent, and do not stand upon much Ground, in comparison to their extraordinary Heighth : That of Sinai is at least one third part higher than the other, and its Ascent is more upright and difficult. After one is come to the Top of the Mountain, it terminates in an uneven and rugged Place, which might contain about sixty Persons. Upon this Eminence is built a little Chapel of St. Catherine's, where 'tis thought the Body of this Saint rested for three hundred and sixty Years ; but afterwards it was removed into a Church which is at the Foot of the Mountain. Near this Chapel issues a Fountain of very good fresh Water ; 'tis look'd upon as miraculous, it not being conceivable how Water can flow from the Brow of so high and barren a Mountain.

Horeb is to the West of Sinai ; so that at Sun-rising the Shadow of Sinai intirely covers Horeb. Besides the little Fountain which is at the Top of Sinai, as we have mention'd, there is another at the Foot of this Mountain, or of Horeb, which supplies Water to the Monastery of St. Catherine. Five or six Paces from thence they shew a Stone, whose Heighth is four or five Feet and Breadth about three, which, they say, is the very Stone from whence Moses caus'd the Water to gush out : Its Colour is of a spotted grey, and it is, as it were, set in a kind of Earth, where no other Rock appears. This Stone has twelve Holes or Chanels, which are about a Foot wide, from whence it is thought the Water came forth for the Israelites to drink. We shall not here enter into the the Particulars of what was done during the Encampment of the Israelites at the Foot of Sinai, but refer the Reader to the Article Moses.

[D'Herbel. Bibl. Orient. p.501.] The Arabians reckon among the Children of Israel, one call'd Thor or Thour, who gave his Name to the Mountain of Sinai, which they call Thour-Sinai. They also give the Name of Thour to the City which is at the Foot of the same Mountain, upon the Shore of the Red-sea. Mahomet begins the Chapter in his Alcoran, call'd the Fig, by this Oath : I swear by the Fig, by the Olive, by Mount Sinai, and by the sure and faithful City. The Fig stands for a Mountain of Palestine call'd Thor-lina, the Mountain of the Fig. The Olive stands for the Mount of Olives near Jerusalem. Mount Sinai is known. The faithful City is Mecca. Sinai is in great Veneration among the Mussulmen, because of the Law which God gave to Men upon[1] this Mountain. Also they call it sometimes the Mountain of Moses.

Upon this Mountain there is a Monastery of Greek Monks, who had heretofore only a Tower built near the burning Bush of Moses. But these Monks finding themselves much expos'd to the Insults of the Arabs, who devoured all their Provisions, even so much as the consecrated Bread of the Eucharist; they petition'd the Emperor Justinian to build them a strong Monastery, to secure them from the Depredations of the Arabs. The Emperor comply'd with their Request; but it is said, that he put the Architect to Death, for pitching upon this Place for the Monastery; this he did because of its Nearness to the burning Bush, and for the Conveniency of the Water.

The Name of St. Catherine was given to this Monastery, and to the Mountain itself, because of a Tradition generally received in the Country, that the Body of this Saint was transported hither by the Angels.

Sincerity

[Mat. xxvii. 59. Mark xv. 46.] SINCERITY. a This Word properly signifies Truth and Uprightness, when the Heart and Tongue agree together. Sincerity is oppos'd to Double-mindedness, Deceit, when the Sentiments of the Heart are contrary to the Language of the Mouth. The Latin Word Sincerus is derived from sine and cera, without Wax, Honey separated from the Wax, or pure Honey. In the Scripture sincere signifies pure, or without mixture. Sapientia est emanatio quædam [Sap. vii. 25. Philip. i. 10.] claritatis omnipotentis Dei sincera. St. Paul would have the Philippians be pure, that their Behaviour may be innocent, and give no Offence to any Body. That ye may be sincere, and without Offence till the Day of Christ. And St. Peter exhorts the pure and sincere Mind of the Faithful: Vestram [2 Pet. iii. 1. 1 Cor. v. 8.] excito in commonitione sinceram mentem. St. Paul speaks of Sincerity and Truth, or of Purity and Truth, which he sets in Opposition to the leaven'd Bread of Impurity and Filthiness. He reproaches the false Apostles with not preaching Jesus Christ sincerely, purely, with upright and disinterested Sentiments of the Heart.

Sindon

SINDON. This Word properly signifies a Shroud, and the Evangelists make use of it, to denote the Linen Cloth, in which [Luke xxiii. 53.] Joseph of Arimathea wrapp'd up the Body of Jesus Christ, after he had embalmed it, had winded Bandages about it, and had put the Napkin upon his Head. For St. John [Joh. xx. 7.] supplies those Circumstances that St. Matthew had omitted. The holy Napkins, or Sudaria, which are shewn in several Places, cannot be all the true Sindon in which Christ's Body was involved, but are made in Imitation of it.

[Pro. xxxi. 24.] Sindon is also mention'd in the History of Samson.[1] He promises the young Men that were at his Wedding; Triginta Sindones & totidem tunicas, if they could explain the Riddle that he proposed to them. The Hebrew says thirty Sedinim, and thirty Changes of Raiment. By Sedinim or Sindonem, some understand the Tunica which was put next the Skin; and by Changes of Raiment, compleat Suits of Cloaths, a Tunique and a Coat, for that was a compleat Suit; or only thirty Coats, which, with the thirty Tuniques, made up thirty Changes of Raiment.

[Isa. iii. 23. Mart. l. 4 Ep. 19.] The virtuous Woman mention'd by Solomon, made Sindons and Girdles, which she sold to the Phenicians. The young Women of Jerusalem wore their Sindons, as appears from Isaiah. This was a Fashion peculiar to the Sidonians and the Phenicians, and perhaps the Name was derived from the City of Sidon. Martial says, that the Sindon of Tyre or Phenicia, covers a Man all over, and puts him in a Condition to despise the Rain and the Wind.

Ridebis ventos, hoc munere tectus, & imbres, Nec sic in Syriâ Sindone tectus eris.

The young Man that follow'd Jesus Christ the Night of his Passion, Amictus sindone super nudo, was probably by this defended against the Cold, as with a Night -Gown. Mark xiv. 51.

Sinew

[Vide Interp. ad Gen. xxxii. 25, 32.] SINEW. The Hebrews do not eat the Sinew of the Thigh of Animals, in Memory of the Sinew of Jacob's Thigh, which the Angel touch'd, and which contracted such a Numbness, that according to some Interpreters, he went lame of it all his Life after. This Abstinence from the Sinew of the Thigh of Animals, is not commanded to the Israelites by any Law; for they must have abstained from it even before the Law, if the Observation that we find in Genesis xxxii. 32. was inserted by Moses. There are some Interpreters that think, this Forbearance of theirs is only Matter of voluntary Devotion. In some Places they abstain'd from the Hind-quarter of Animals, and sold it to others. In other Places they contented themselves with taking away the Sinew, and then they eat the Flesh. See what we have observed concerning this in the Article of J*acob*.

Sirens

SIRENS, Sea-monsters, famous in the Writings of the Poets. They tells us, the Sirens were the Daughters of the River Achelous, and of one of the nine Muses. Some say Melpomene; others Calliope or Terpsichore, or Sterope; in a word, they are not agreed, either in their Mother's Name, or in their own. They were three in Number. Some call'd them Aglaepe, Pisinoe, Thelxiopia; others Thelxiope, Molpe, Aglaophonos; others again, Leucosie, Ligea, Parthenope. Their Dwelling was upon the Coast of the Sicilian Sea, and they sung so harmoniously, that the Mariners that pass'd that Way were in Danger of being shipwreck'd, by approaching too near the Shore, in stopping to hear them.

Quaslibet admissas detinuere rates.

[Apollon. Argonaut. l. 4.] They were partly like fine Women, and partly like Birds. They had the Wings and Feet of Birds, and as to the rest, they were Women. When the Argonautes pass'd that Way, the Sirens did what they could to charm them; but Orpheus taking his Harp, made their Songs and other Attempts useless. So that the Sirens, in Despair at being overcome, threw themselves into the Sea, and became Rocks. Others say, they precipitated themselves into the Sea, and were changed into Sea-monsters, having half the Body of a Woman, and the other half of a Fish; and that this happen'd to 'em after Ulysses had disappointed their Expectation, by stopping his Companions Ears with Wax, and making himself to be lash'd fast with Ropes to the Mast of his Ship; forbidding that any one should untie him, whatever Instances he should make.

But we shall not enter upon an Examination of these Fables. What gives us Occasion to speak of Sirens here, is because we find their Name in Isaiah xiii. 22. Respondebunt ululæ in ædibus ejus, & Sirenes in ædibus voluptatis. The Prophet speaks of the Destruction of Babylon; he says, that this famous City shall be reduced to a dismal Wilderness, that the Waters shall cover its Ruins, that Sea-monsters shall be seen there, Birds of ill Omen, Owls, Bitterns, &c. The Latin Text to these adds Sirens; the Septuagint calls them Hedgehogs or Urchins; the Hebrew Text reads Thannim. But if we compare together all the Passages [Thannim. LXX. Ἐχῖνοι.] in which the Word Thannim occurs, we may observe that it signifies a great Fish, a Sea-monster, a Fish that puts forth loud Cries, that feeds its Young by the Nipple, whose Abode is in the Sea, and in watry Places: Qualities which agree with a Whale, or a Sea-calf, which probably Isaiah [Vide Job xxx. 29. Mic. i. 8. Lament. iv. 3. Psal. lviii. 7. Isaiah xxvii. 2. Ez. xxxii. 2.] intended to represent here.

Perhaps St. Jerome, in translating it by Sirens, intended to express certain Sea-monsters which, they say, have a near Resemblance to a Man. 'Tis said in 1672 they caught a Siren at Malta. Cornelius à Lapide speaks of a Siren taken in Frizeland, which, they say, lived long enough to learn to spin. Between the Island Ceilon and the Point of Indus, they took nine Sirens and seven Tritons. Upon the Coasts of Martinico, near a Promontory call'd the Diamond, was seen a Sea-monster, who upwards from his Middle had the Shape of a Man, and the rest was like a Fish. In the Philippine Islands they catch a certain sort of Fishes like Sirens. There are many of them also to be seen in the Province of Angola. They are found to be Male and Female, being eight Foot long, and four in breadth: Their Arms are very short, but their Fingers are long; their Head and Eyes are oval, their Fore-head high, Nose flat, with a large Mouth; but they have hardly any Chin or Ears. When they are kill'd, they cry out as a Man[1] would do, that was going to be murder'd. It is not impossible but that Isaiah and St. Jerome might have a Knowledge of these Sea-monsters, and may intend to describe them in this Place. The Word Siren may be derived from the Hebrew Shir, or Sir, which signifies a Song.

Sisera

SISERA, or Sisara, General of the Army of Jabin, King of Hazer.[1] He was sent by his Master against Barak and Deborah, who had got an Army together of ten thousand Men upon Mount Tabor. Sisera marched against them with nine hundred Chariots armed with Scythes, and a great Number of Infantry. Barak with his small Army fell upon Sisera's with that Impetuosity, that he intirely routed them, kill'd a great Number of them, and put the rest to Flight. Sisera himself fled among the rest, and, as if his Horses did not make Speed enough, he quitted his Chariot, and fled away on Foot towards Harosheth of the Gentiles. He came near the Tent of Heber the Kenite, and Jael, the Wife of Heber, desir'd him to come in and hide himself. She cover'd him with a Mantle; and because he thirsted, she gave him Milk to drink. Then Sisera said to her; " Do you stay at the Door of the " Tent, and if any one asks you who is " here, you shall say No-body. " Jael went out to the Door of the Tent, and afterwards returning, and finding him fast asleep, she drove a great Nail through his Temples with a Hammer, and fastned him down to the Ground. At the same Time Barak arrived, and she shew'd him Sisera weltering in his Blood, and without Life.

We shall hear make some Remarks upon this Defeat of Sisera.

[Observations upon the Defeat of the Army of Sisera, at the Brook Kishon, near Mount Tabor, Judg. iv. 3, &c.] Panick Fears oftener happen in large Armies, than in small ones; for these are less susceptible of them. What hap-pen'd to Sisera has happen'd to a thousand other Generals; and it would not be easy to apprehend the Reason of certain Panick Terrors. An Imagination, a Phantom, a Whim may produce them, and yet this Whim is unknown, as if it proceeded from a superior Impulse. For it seizes at once upon a whole Army, as if it had but one Head. A Prepossession, a foolish Fear, the Cause of which is imperceptible, gets Possession in an Instant, and seizes Armies of one or two hundred thousand Men. All fly, all are for securing themselves in a Hurry, and often a Distance of many Leagues is not able to stop their Course. Every one asks his Neighbour, and would inform himself of the Cause of so strange an Accident; but no one can tell the Reason. Those in the Rear quicken the Flight of those in the Front; they are more afraid, because they think themselves in most Danger. And tho' they neither see nor hear any thing behind them, yet they still imagine there must be Some-body, because the Confusion is general, and none would fly without Occasion. We find in History a Multitude of Examples of this kind of Events; so that there is nothing supernatural in them; tho' I would not infer, for all that, that the Terror of Sisera and his Army, was not the immediate Effect of the divine Power. But let us proceed to the Story.

The Prophetess Deborah had a great deal of Difficulty to persuade Barak to set himself at the Head of the Israelites, in order to deliver them from the Yoke of the King of Hazor. He seem'd to doubt of her Inspiration, for Prophetesses were not frequent in Israel. However, the Commands of the Lord, which she declared to him, would not allow him to hesitate any longer. Then Barak answer'd her; If thou wilt go with me, then I will go; but if thou wilt not go with me, then I will not go. He was afraid, with good Reason, that the People would not be obedient to him, nor follow him to an Enterprize which seem'd to be so rash and dangerous. To this End, as the People had great Confidence in what she said, he would constrain her to accompany him. To this she consented, and when Barak had got together an Army of ten thousand Men of the Tribes of Zebulun and Naphtali, they took the Field. And they shew'd Sisera, that Barak the Son of Abinoam was gone up to Mount Tabor. And Sisera gathered together all his Chariots, even nine hundred Chariots of Iron, and all the People that were with him, from Harosheth of the Gentiles, unto the River of Kishon. The Scripture does not inform us of the Number of the Troops that compos'd Sisera's Army; but it is easy to perceive it must be very numerous, and vastly superior to that of the Israelites, by what the Prophetess says to Barak from the Lord: I will draw unto thee, to the River Kishon, Sisera the Captain of Jabin's Army, with his Chariots, and his Multitude; and I will deliver him into thine Hand. Josephus allows him three hundred thousand Foot, ten thousand Horse, and three thousand Chariots.

Sisera therefore came down into the Plain, at the Bottom of Mount Tabor, on the Banks of the Kishon, where he marshal'd his Troops, and set forth his Chariots in great Pomp. Then the Prophetess inspired Barak with new Courage, saying to him; Up; for this is the Day in which the Lord has delivered Sisera into thine Hand: Is not the Lord gone out before thee? This was but a short Speech, but a very powerful one, as it proceeded from the Mouth of a Woman inspired from Heaven, who gives him Assurance of a Victory. To this is to be added, the ardent Desire of being deliver'd from the Vassalage of an insolent Conqueror, the natural Hatred they had to the Enemies of their Religion, and the Necessity they were under either to conquer or to die. All these Motives have a mighty Influence, rouse the Spirits exceedingly, and excite the Courage and Hope both of the General and the Soldiers.

There is great Reason to believe, that the mighty Confidence Sisera had in his superior Strength, made him believe, that the Israelites, who were encamped upon the Height of Tabor, would not have done this if they had not been in Fear of an Engagement in the Plain, or in a Place of less advantageous Situation. For this intimates, as he thought, that the Hebrews were much afraid; and far from having any Desire of provoking the Battle, they thought themselves very happy if they could only defend themselves by a vigorous Resistance. Having such Notions as these, Sisera disposed his Army in Battle-array along the Side of the River with a very large Front, as well to shew his Strength, and terrify the Enemy, as afterwards to gain the Ascent of the Mountain, where the Jews were posted, and to attack them in several Places. This Disposition would at first appear well contrived, and very prudent; and indeed it would have been so against any other People but the Israelites, who were wearied out with Oppression, and resolved upon gaining their Liberty whatever it should cost them; and what was more, they were full of Assurance that Heaven would fight for them.

When such Troops as these are concern'd, if very much Prudence and Precaution are not used, there is no relying upon the superior Numbers of the opposite Party. If Barak had continued in his Post upon the Defensive Side only, Sisera would have attack'd him on all Sides, and could not but have forc'd him from his Retreat. He imagin'd it could not be otherwise, and that his Enemy would never have the Boldness to come down with so small a Body of Troops. He was deceived; and this very Disposition of his Army was the Occasion of its being put to Confusion.

So Barak went down from Mount Tabor, and ten thousand Men after him, over the Rocks and Precipices, and fell upon the Army of Sisera, which was ranged in Order of Battle along the Banks of the River. Sisera at first took this Motion to be only a Feint, and without doubt could not think that Barak would quit the Advantage of the higher Ground, to come down into the Plain; which made him not draw his Wings together, to re-inforce his Center.

When the Israelites were come to the Foot of the Mountain, they form'd themselves into several Bodies, upon the Side of the River, before Sisera's Face, who doubtless must admire the Boldness and Resolution of Barak. From admiring so uncommon a Piece of Intrepidity, he passes to Astonishment, and thence to a kind of Discomposure, which generally terminates in Fear. At last the ten thousand Men prepared for all Events, and ranged according to the Manner of the Jews in a great Depth, pass over the River or Brook, and fall so impetuously upon the Center of this formidable Army, that they separate it from its Wings, and make their Way over the Bodies of all that dare to oppose them. 'Tis the greatest Misfortune that can happen to an Army, to be open'd and penetrated at its Center. This is nothing in Appearance to so prodigious an Army as Sisera had; but this nothing soon becomes something, and at last proves very fatal in a Battle. When the Wings are cut off from the Body, they make but a feeble Resistance, and are soon put to flight.

And the Lord discomfited Sisera, and all his Chariots, and all his Host with the Edge of the Sword, before Barak; so that Sisera lighted down off his Chariot, and fled away on his Feet. The sacred Author explains himself here in such a Manner, that one would imagine the whole Army of Sisera made no Resistance, but fled away at the very Sight of the Israelites. Yet notwithstanding [Joseph. Antiq. l. 5. c. 6.] the Tempest that Josephus raises upon this Occasion, it is easy to perceive that the Enemies did defend themselves, but that they were penetrated. There are Generals who have been surprized by Fear, upon much more slender Occasions. Several Instances of this might be produced, if this were a proper Place for it.

What creates some Astonishment, is, to see Sisera jump from his Chariot, to run away on Foot, as if he had had the Nimbleness of a Hind, and as if his Horses were not as swift as himself, in order to make his Escape. The learned Commentator observes, that " this General must " have been much discomposed in his Understanding, to think of leaping out of " his Chariot, that he might fly away the " better. 'Tis thus, says he, in Homer, " where a Trojan Warrior being in a Consternation, throws himself out of his " Chariot, that he might escape from Dio- " medes; [Hom. Iliad. v. Ibid. Iliad. xx.] " medes; and another does the same thing " before Achilles. Their Horses were not " so swift as their Fears." So truly it may be affirm'd, that nothing hurries us into Danger so much, as the inconsiderate Eagerness we generally have, of delivering our selves from it.

It is observ'd, that to be discreetly Afraid, requires a good Degree of Courage. This Maxim is true; When our Fears do not intercept our Judgment, when they do not disturb the Understanding, and when of two Dangers we know how to chuse the least, without any Blemish to our Honour. In our own Days we have seen a Horseman take to a River, very deep and wide, after the losing of a Battle. It was hardly possible he should swim over without a kind of Miracle. His Fears had so discomposed him, that he took the River for a small Brook, and thus miserably drowning himself, he lost both his Life and Reputation at once. For he might have escaped the Peril he was in, if he had not quitted his Post. He might have made an honourable Retreat, or surrender'd himself a Prisoner of War. But he had lost his Presence of Mind, and it was not in his Power to chuse the wisest and the safest Measures.

Sisoe

SISOE. This Term is found in the Text of the Septuagint, in Leviticus xix. 27. where we read in the Vulgate; Neque in rotundum attondebitis comam; You shall not cut your Hair round, or in a Circle. The Septuagint says; a You shall make no Sisoe of the Hairs of your Head. The Hebrew Text; You shall not cut round the Corner of your Head. 'Tis inquired, what is this Sisoe? The antient Scholiast upon Leviticus says,[1] it was a Lock of Hair that was consecrated to Saturn. Bochart affirms it to be a Tress of Hair permitted to grow behind the Head, when all the rest was shaved round. The Arabians still wear a Tuft of Hair upon their Heads, and this Custom is very antient in that Country, and in Syria. Lucian mentions it in his Treatise of the Pestilence of Syria. Moses therefore would forbid the Hebrews to imitate the Fashions of these People in cutting the Hair; which was doubtless to avoid some Superstition common among the People of Arabia, in the midst of whom the Israelites then were. See HAIR.

Sister

SISTER, Soror. This Name, in the Stile of the Hebrews, has much the same Latitude as that of Brother. It is used, not only for Sister by Father and Mother; but also for her who is a Sister only by Father or Mother, or is only a near Relation. Thus Sarah is call'd Sister to Abraham, tho' she [Gen. xii. 13. xx. 12.] was only his Niece, according to some, or his Sister by the Father's Side only, according to others. Thus, in Leviticus,[1] it is forbidden to take to Wife the Sister of a Wife; that is to say, to marry two Sisters. Or, according to some Interpreters, to marry a second Wife when one has one before. Thus it is literally, Thou shalt not take a Wife over her Sister to afflict her; as if this Passage was to forbid [Matt. xii. 55. Mark vi. 3.] Polygamy. In the Gospel, the Brothers and Sisters of Jesus Christ, are no other than his Cousins, the Sons and Daughters of the Sisters of the Holy Virgin.

[Cant. iv. 9, 10, 12. v. 1, 2.] In the Song of Songs, the Name of Sister is a Name of Tenderness between the two Spouses. Sometimes the Word Sister shews a Resemblance of Conditions and Inclinations. [Jerem. iii. 8, 10. Ez. xvi. 46.] The Prophets call Jerusalem the Sister of Sodom and Samaria, because it delighted in the Imitation of their Idolatry and Iniquity.

Jesus Christ says, that those who keep his Commandments, are his Brothers and [Matth. xii. 50. Job xvii. 14.] his Sisters. Job, in his Misfortunes, exclaims; I have said to Corruption, Thou art my Father; to the Worm, Thou art my Mother and my Sister. The Wise-man advises [Pro. vii. 4.] his Pupil to say to Wisdom; Thou art my Sister; that is, to love her, and become familiar with her. St. Paul asks, whether it were not as lawful for him as the other Apostles, to carry along with him in his [1 Cor. ix. 5.] Journies some pious Christian Woman; Mulierem sororem circumducere. As Christians were used to salute one another by the Name of Brothers or Brethren, so they call'd Christian Women their Sisters. [James ii. 15, 16.] St. James says, If a Brother or Sister be naked, and destitute of daily Food; and one of you say unto them, Depart in Peace, be you warmed and filled; notwithstanding ye give them not those things which are needful to the Body; what doth it profit?

Sistrum

SISTRUM, an Instrument of Musick, heretofore very common among the Egyptians.

[Auson. Ep. 25] Isiacos agitant mareotica Sistra tumultus.

They say Isis invented this Instrument, and her Priests generally us'd it in her Ceremonies.

[Ovid. de Ponte.] Jactantem Pharia tinnula Sistra manu.

The Sistrum was of an oval Figure, or a dilated Semicircle, in the Shape of a Shoulder -belt, with brass Wires a-cross, which play'd in Holes wherein they were stopp'd by their flat Heads. They play'd on it by shaking the Sistrum in Cadence, and thereby the brass Wires, which made a shrill and loud Noise. This is the Description[1] that Apulius gives of it: Dextrá quidem [Apul. Metamorph. l. xi.] gerebat aureum crepitaculum, cujus per angustam laminam, in modum balthei recurvatam, trajectæ mediæ paucæ virgulæ, crispante brachio trigeminos jactus, reddebant argutum sonum.

The Word Sistrum is found in two Passages of Scripture, 1 Sam. xviii. 6. The Women of Israel came to meet Saul, in tympanis lætitiæ, & in Sistris. a And 2 Sam. vi. 5. They brought the Ark of the Lord with the Sound of all Sorts of musical Instruments: Tympanis & Sistris, b & Cymbalis. I do not observe that the Septuagint have made use of this Term. The modern Interpreters think, that Zalzelim signifies a Sistrum; but the Seventy generally translate it by Cymbalon, a Cymbal. Isaiah has evidently described the Sistrum, Chap. xviii. 1. Væ terræ Cymbalo alarum, quæ est trans flumina Æthiopiæ.[2] The Hebrew reads,[3] Zalzel cenapei, or the winged Zalzel; which agrees very well with our Description of the Sistrum, in which the Rods or Wires are as Wings. The first Instrument that St. Jerome has translated by Sistrum is call'd in Hebrew, Salisim, or Shalishim, which may signify an Instrument with three Strings, or a triangular Instrument. The second is Mananim, or Minnim, which many understand of a string'd Instrument.

Sisuthrus

SISUTHRUS, or Xisuthrus. 'Tis believed that the Babylonians had a Knowledge of the Deluge of Noah, and that this Patriarch was known to them by the Name of Sisuthrus.[1] They say, that Saturn appear'd in a Dream to Sisuthrus, and inform'd him, that all Mankind was to perish by a Flood. He commanded him to write down the Originals, the Progress, and the Completion of all Things, and to bury them in the Ground in the City of Sipharis, probably Kariath Sepher, or Dabir: And to build a Vessel, to go therein with his Relations and Friends, and to put out into the deep Sea. Sisuthrus follow'd his Orders, loaded his Vessel with all sorts of Provisions, and made all sorts of Animals to go in along with him. His Vessel was, as they say, five Stadia, or 625 Paces long, and two Stadia, or 250 Paces wide.

When the Deluge came, all those were drowned that were not with Sisuthrus. When he perceived the Waters to abate, he let go a Bird, which finding no Food nor Resting-place, return'd to him again. Some time after, he sent out others, which return'd with their Legs dawb'd with Mud. Lastly, a good while after, he let others go, which did not return any more. Then he understood that the Earth was quite dry; he broke up his Vessel, and went out with his Wife, his Daughter, and the Pilot. He went up into a Mountain, where he worshipp'd the Earth, erected an Altar, and sacrificed to the Gods. After this he appear'd no longer upon the Earth, neither himself, nor those which went out of the Ark with him. The others that continued in the Vessel, going out likewise, sought every-where for Sisuthrus to no Purpose; and having call'd him several times, they heard his Voice, recommending Piety to them, and the Worship of the Gods. He also told them, that for the future he was to have no more Conversation with Men, but was to live with the Gods. This is what they relate of Sisuthrus, which will easily be observed to have a very great Conformity with the History of Noah.

But soon afterwards God gave them Coats of Skins to cloath themselves withal: Fecit eis tunicas pelliceas & induit eos. By these Coats of Skins, some Antients[1] understood the Barks of Trees. Others translate the Hebrew thus: He made them Coats to cover their Skins. The Chaldee says, He made them Robes of Honour, to cover their Flesh.

Moses leaves to the Priests the Skins of the Victims, and this was one of their chief Perquisites. But when the Sacrifice was offer'd for the Sins of the Priest, the Skin was burn'd out of the Camp, or without the City.

[Levit. xi. 32. xiii. 48. xv. 17. Hab. iii. 7. Cant. i. 4. 2 Sam. vii. 2. Ps. ciii. 2. Jer. iv. 20. 2 Kings i. 8. Slaves

SLAVES. All Men were created free and equal, and Slavery enter'd the World only by Sin. Noah, to punish the Affront that his Son Ham put upon him, by exposing his Nakedness, gave his Curse to Canaan, the Son of Ham, and made him subject to Slavery; [Gen. ix. 25.] Maledictus Chanaan, servus servorum erit fratribus suis. When Abraham was chosen of God, to become the Father of the Race of the Faithful, he received the Badge of Circumcision, as a Character that made him known to be the Servant of the Lord. His Descendants always valued themselves upon their Liberty. Nemini servivimus unquam [John viii. 33.] , said the Jews to Jesus Christ. And St. Paul magnifies the Liberty of the true Children of Abraham, as being really free, born of a free Mother, in Opposition to the Race of Ishmael, born of a Mother that was a Slave; Non sumus ancillæ filii, sed liberæ, quâ libertate Christus nos liberavit. This has regard to moral Liberty and Servitude. But the Rabbins maintain, that they have never been in Subjection to any one by a Servitude which they call Intrinsick, and which changes the Condition of the Person. If they have been reduced to Slavery, that does not destory that State of Liberty to which they were born.

But this does not hinder, but that the Hebrews have often been subjected by several Princes. For Example, the Egyptians, the Philistines, the Chaldeans, the Grecians, and the Romans. Many, compell'd by Necessity, have been forced to sell their Liberty; and others, being taken in War, remain'd Slaves to the Conquerors. Moses himself takes Notice of two or three Sorts of Slaves among the Hebrews. They had foreign Slaves, obtain'd by the way of War, or by their Money, or born in their Houses. The Masters had an intire Sovereign Authority over these; they might sell them, change them, punish them, judge them, and even put them to Death, without any form of Process. If a Man smite [Exod. xxi. 20, 21.] his Servant, or his Maid with a Rod, and he die under his Hand, he shall be surely punished; notwithstanding, if he continue a Day or two, he shall not be punished, for he is his Money.

This must be understood, as the Rabbins say,[1] of Hebrew Slaves, but not of Foreign Slaves, which a Master might [Job xxxi. 13, 14, 15. 1 Sam. v. 9. Vulg.] have, and might use what Severity towards them they pleas'd with Impunity; for in this Case the Law of Moses had enjoined nothing. They follow'd the Rules common to other Nations, among whom all Masters had an absolute Power over their Slaves.[2] Apud omnes perquè nationes animadvertere possumus, dominis in servos vitæ necisque potestatem fuisse. Yet wise Men have always much disapproved that Liberty which certain Masters have assumed to themselves, of thus putting their Slaves to Death. Cato the [Plutarch. in Catone.] Censor would never put any of his Slaves to Death, before they had been condemned and found worthy of Death by his other Slaves.

Job testifies, that he had never declined to enter into Judgment with his Slaves, when any Difficulty arose between them. The Athenians punish'd with Death him that had kill'd a Slave, as much as if he had been a Free-man.

The Samaritan Text, in this Passage now cited, is very different from the Hebrew. It is read thus: He that shall strike his Man-servant, or his Maid-servant with a Rod, if they die under his Hand, he shall not be molested, he shall not die; and if the Servant survives for two or three Days, he shall not be punished, because it is the Price of his Money. As if all this only related to a Slave, Canaanitish or Gentile, which the Civil Laws allow'd to put to Death with Impunity.

[Lev. xxv. 39, 40.] The Chaldee Paraphrast, some Rabbins, and some Commentators, are of the same Opinion, that this has no regard to Hebrew Slaves; for, say they, it cannot be said of an Israelitish Slave, that he was the Price of the Money of his Master: Pecunia illius est. He was in Servitude but for a few Years, and the Damage that his Master would suffer by putting him to Death, and so depriving himself of the Service he might have expected from him, would not have punish'd him enough for it. Whereas the Loss of a Foreign Slave brought a considerable Prejudice to an interested Master, and he was in some measure justly punish'd for his Cruelty, by the Death of a Man that was his own for ever, and who might have left him Children of the same Condition as himself.

Here are the Rules that Moses appoints should be observed, in respect to Hebrew Slaves: If thy Brother, that dwelleth by thee, be waxen poor, and be sold unto thee; thou shalt not compel him to serve as a Bond-servant. But as an hired Servant, and as a Sojourner, he shall be with thee, and shall serve thee unto the Year of Jubilee. And then shall he depart from thee, both he and his Children with him, and shall return unto his own Family, and unto the Possession of his Fathers shall he return. For they are my Servants, which I brought forth out of the Land of Egypt; they shall not be sold as Bond-men. Thou shalt not rule over them with Rigour, but shalt fear thy God. Both thy Bond-men and thy Bond-maids, which thou shalt have, shall be of the Heathen that are round about you; of them shall ye buy Bond-men and Bond-maids. It was not therefore the Design of the Lord, that the Israelites should be reduced to perpetual Slavery by their Brethren, or that they should be sold to Strangers, to remain Slaves for their whole Lives. But if an Hebrew should have sold himself to a Stranger living in the Country; this Hebrew might redeem his Freedom by his Parsimony, if he had Means for it. If not, one of his nearest Relations might redeem him, by paying to his Master the Sum that he had given for him, Deduction being made for the Service he had done him, and reckoning what Time he had still to serve to the Year of Jubilee, for then he had a Right to go out of Servitude without any Ransom.

[Exod. xxi. 1, 2, &c.] In another Place Moses makes these Regulations concerning Hebrew Slaves: If thou buy an Hebrew Servant, six Years he shall serve, and in the seventh he shall go out free for nothing. The Rabbins will have it, that a Slave was obliged to serve for seven Years compleat; but the Generality of Commentators think, that he went out free in the Sabbatical Year, even tho' he should not have served two or three Years. Moses adds; He shall have at going out the same Cloaths he had at coming in, and his Wife shall go out with him. The Hebrew has it; If he came in by himself [with his Body] he shall go out by himself; if he were marry'd, then his Wife shall go out with him. The Rabbins say, that the Master was obliged to maintain the Wife and Children of the Slave, although none but the Husband was a Slave.

If his Master have given him a Wife, and she hath born him Sons or Daughters; the Wife and her Children shall be her Master's, and he shall go out by himself; [or with his Body.] Several Meanings may be affix'd to this Law. A Master might make a Hebrew Slave marry a Woman Slave of a another Nation; and as this Woman is no Israelite, she could not enjoy the Privilege of the Sabbatical Year; but her Husband might quit her, and enter upon his Liberty this Year. 'Tis ask'd, Whether the Marriage was dissolved upon this Separation? The Opinions of Interpreters are divided upon this Question[3]. What to us appears to have the greatest Certainty, is, that as there could properly be no Marriage among Slaves, who had took one another without Choice and without Liberty, so there could be no Dissolution of Marriage in their Separation. See the Commentators upon this Passage.

[Exod. xxi. 5, 6.] If the Servant shall plainly say, I love my Master, my Wife, and my Children, I will not go out free: Then his Master shall bring him unto the Judges; [Heb. Gods] he shall also bring him to the Door, or unto [Deut. xv. 17.] the Door-post, [of his Master's House] and his Master shall bore his Ear through with an Aul, and he shall serve him for ever. That is to say, according to the Commentators,[4] till the Year of Jubilee; for then all Slaves, without Exception, recover'd their Liberty. The Rabbins add, that they were thus set free also at the Death of their Masters, and did not descend to their Heirs.

If a Man sell his Daughter to be a Maid -servant, [or a Slave] she shall not go out as [Exod xxi. 7.] the Men-servants do. That is to say, the Laws we have now mention'd do not concern her. There is another kind of Jurisprudence for Girls, than for Hebrew Men or Boys. A Father could not sell his Daughter for a Slave, according to the Rabbins,[5] till she was at the Age of Puberty, and unless he was reduced to the utmost Indigence. Besides, when a Master bought an Israelitish Girl, it was always with this Presumption, that he would take her for Wife, or that he would permit his Son to marry her. Hence it is that Moses adds, If she please not her Master, and he does not think fit to marry her, he shall set her at Liberty; or, according to the Hebrew, he shall let her be redeemed: To sell her unto a strange Nation he shall have no Power, seeing he hath dealt deceitfully with her, as to the Promise, implicitely at least, that he had made her, of taking her to be his Wife.

[Exod. xxi. 9, 10.] If he have betrothed her unto his Son, he shall deal with her after the manner of Daughters. He shall take care that his Son uses her as his Wife, that he does not despise her, or use her ill. " If he makes " his Son marry another Wife, he shall " give her her Dowry, her Cloaths, and " what is due to her, for her Virginity; " or, according to the Hebrew, " If he make " his Son marry another Wife, he shall " not diminish the Cloaths, the Maintenance, and the Habitation of the former." That is, according to several Commentators,[6] If the Master that bought this Maid, and who made his Son marry her, makes his Son marry a second Wife, he shall take care that his Son treat this first Woman as his Wife, that he allow her Food and Raiment, and perform the Duties of Marriage to her as to his true Wife; if he does not, then shall she go out free without Money.

Otherwise, if the Father of the Family who has bought an Israelitish Maid, does not marry her, nor makes his Son to marry her; or if he would dismiss her after he had kept her for some time, he shall be obliged to marry her to another, or to sell her to another Hebrew Master, on the same Conditions that he had taken her himself, giving her a Portion, her Cloaths, and the Price of her Virginity, agreeable to Custom, or according as it should be regulated by the Judges.

An Hebrew might fall into Slavery several ways. First, If reduced to extream [Lev. xxv. 29.] Poverty, he might sell himself. Secondly, A Father might sell his Children for [Lev. xxi. 7. 2 Kings iv. 1.] Slaves. Thirdly, Insolvent Debtors might be deliver'd up to their Creditors for Slaves. Thieves that were not able to make Restitution for their Thefts, or the Value of them, were sold for the Benefit of the [Exod. xxii. 3.] Sufferers. Fifthly, They might be taken in War, or by Thieves. Sixthly, They might be stole away, by the Crime call'd Plagium, and afterwards sold for Slaves, as Joseph was sold by his Brethren. Lastly, An Hebrew Slave redeem'd from a Gentile by one of his Brethren, might be sold by him to another Israelite.

By the Word Slavery, Servitude, or Bondage, the Scripture often expresses the Subjection of one People to another. For [Gen. xxvii. 37.] Example, Isaac says to Esau; Behold, I have made him thy Lord, and all his Brethren have I given to him for Servants. And elsewhere the Egyptians say to Joseph; Buy us and our Land for Bread, and we and our Land will be Servants unto Pharaoh. And when Samuel declares to the Hebrews what are the Rights and Prerogatives of a [1 Sam. viii. 16, 17.] King, he says; " He shall take your " Slaves, and your Maids, and you yourselves shall be subject to him as Slaves: " Vosque eritis ei servi. And Goliah says to the Israelites; Am not I a Philistine, and you Servants to Saul? [1 Sam. xvii. 8, 9.] Choose you a Man for you, and let him come down to me. And if he be able to fight with me, and to kill me, then will we be your Servants. But if I prevail against him, and kill him, then shall ye be our Servants, and serve us.

Sleep

SLEEP, Sleeping, Slumbering, is taken either for the Sleep or Repose of the Body, or for the Sleep of the Soul which is Supineness, Indolence, Stupidity, or for the Sleep of Death.

You shall sleep with your Fathers, you shall die as they are dead. And Jeremiah [Dan. xii. 2.] li. 39. Dormiam somnum sempiternum. And Daniel says; Qui dormiunt in terræ [John xi. 11.] pulvere: Those that sleep in the Dust of the Grave. Lazarus our Friend sleepeth; let us go and awake him: He is dead, let us go and raise him up. Awake thou that sleepest, and arise from the Dead, and Christ shall [Ephes. 4. 14. 2 Pet. ii. 3.] give thee Light. He speaks to those that were dead in Sin and Infidelity. Saint Peter says of the Wicked, their Damnation slumbereth not. God is not asleep, he will not forget to punish them in his own due Time. And Solomon says, Prov. xxiii. 21. Vestietur pannis dormitatio. The Slumberer shall be cloathed with Rags, the Slothful shall live in Poverty.

Isaiah speaks of a superstitious Practice among the Pagans, who went to sleep in the Temples of their Idols, to obtain [Isa. lxv. 4. בנצורים ילינו] Prophetick Dreams: Qui habitant in Sepulchris, & in delubro idolorum dormiunt. He speaks of the superstitious and idolatrous Jews, who, in Contempt of the Prophets and of the Temple of the Lord, went into the Tombs and Temples of Idols, to sleep there, and to have Dreams that might discover future Events to them. The Pagans for this Purpose us'd to lie upon the Skins of the sacrificed Victims.

[Virgil. Æneid. 7.] —— Cæsarum ovium sub nocte silenti Pellibus incubuit stratis, somnosque petivit.

The Hebrew Passage that we have quoted from Isaiah may be thus translated; They remained in the Sepulchres, and passed the Night among the Monuments, or in deserted [Strab. l. 16. P. 523.] Places. Strabo says, that the Jews slept in their Temples, and there expected Prophetick Dreams, both for themselves and for others; but that God sends none but only to such as live in Purity and Justice. To sleep, is also taken for the Commerce between the Sexes. Thus Gen. xix. 33. The Daughters of Lot slept with their Fathers.

Sling

SLING, in Latin, Funda; an Instrument of Cords, made use of to throw Stones with the greater Violence. The Invention of the Sling is ascribed to the Phenicians, [Plin. l. 7. c. 56. Vegetius de re militari, l. 4.] or to the Inhabitants of the Islands Baleares, call'd now Majorca and Minorca. The Hebrews heretofore made great use of them. Those of the Tribe of Benjamin had so much Skill and Dexterity in managing the Sling, that they could hit their Mark to a Hair, without the least Error. This must be own'd to be an Exaggeration; but however, [Judg. xx. 16.] it proves their great Abilities in the Managment of the Sling. 'Tis known what Glory David obtain'd, when he knock'd down the Giant Goliah by a Stroke of his Sling, who was the Terror of all Israel. The Scripture takes Notice, that when [1 Sam. xvii. 49. 1 Chron. xii. 2.] David was at Ziklag, there came to him a Company of able Slingers, who could use their Left-hands with the same Facility as their right. Uzziah, King of Judah, made great Collections of Arms in his Magazines, [2 Chron. xxvi. 14.] and parparticularly there were Bows, and Slings for casting of Stones.

Smell

[Genesis xxxiv. 30.] SMELL. Jacob said to his Sons, after the Slaughter of the People of Shechem, Ye have troubled me, to make me to stink among the Inhabitants of the Land: or, Ye have given me an ill Scent or Smell among this People. The Israelites in like manner complain'd to [Exod. v. 21.] Moses and Aaron; The Lord look upon you, and judge, because you have made our Savour to be abhorred in the Eyes of Pharaoh, and in the Eyes of his Servants. This manner of Speaking occurs pretty frequently in the Hebrew Text, but St. Jerom has render'd it by equivalent Expressions. In a contrary Sense, St. Paul says, We are unto God a sweet [2 Cor. ii. 15, 16.] Savour of Christ, in them that are saved, and in them that perish: To the one we are the Savour of Death unto Death, and to the other the Savour of Life unto Life.

In the Sacrifices of the old Law, the Smell of the Burnt-offerings is represented to us, in the Scripture, as an Odour agreeable to God: [Gen. viii. 21. Ps. cxli. 2.] And thou shalt burn the whole Ram upon the Altar: It is a Burnt-offering unto the Lord; it is a sweet Savour, an Offering made by Fire unto the Lord. The same thing, by Analogy, is said of Prayer, which is, as it were, a sweet Smell ascending before the Lord: Let my Prayer be set forth before thee as Incense; and the lifting up of my Hands, as the Evening Sacrifice. And St. John, in [Rev. v. 8.] the Revelations, represents the twenty-four Elders with golden Phials full of Odours, which are the Prayers of the Saints.

[Judg. xv. 14. & xvi. 9. Dan. iii. 94.] The Smell of Fire, is sometimes put for the Flame it self consuming any thing: For Example; Quomodo si rumpat quis filum de stupæ torsum putamine, cum odorem ignis acceperit. And again; Sicut solent ad odorem (otherwise ad ardorem) ignis ligna consumi. In Daniel, Odor ignis, the Smell of Fire, seems to insinuate, that not so much as the Cloaths of the three young Men, that were thrown into the fiery Furnace, were singed, or had the Smell of Fire upon them: Quod odor ignis non transisset per eos.

Smerdis

SMERDIS King of Persia, the same who is call'd Artaxerxes, or Artachsarta, in the Book of Ezra, chap. iv. 7. This is is his History: Cyrus the Great left two Sons, Cambyses, [Xenoph. Cyropæd.] and Tanaoxares, otherwise call'd Smerdis, or Mergis, according to Justin. Cambyses took his Brother along with him in his Expedition against Egypt. But when it was found that Smerdis was the only one of his Army who could draw the Bow that the Ethiopians had sent him, Cambyses conceived such a Jealousy against him, that he would not suffer him to stay in his Army, but sent him back into Persia. But, some time after this, having had a Dream, that Smerdis had taken Possession of the Crown of Persia, he sent one of his Confidents, named Prexaspes, with Orders to put him to Death; which was perform'd accordingly.

After a Stay of about three Years in Egypt, Cambyses set out to return into Persia. [Vid. Herodot. l. 3.] When he was come as far as Syria, he there found a Courier dispatched from Persia, with an Account, that Smerdis the Son of Cyrus had ascended the Throne. And indeed, one of the chief of the Magi, or Magians, call'd Pathisites, to whom Cambyses had left the Government of his Kingdom in his Absence, had placed his own Brother call'd Smerdis upon the Throne of Persia. He had a great Resemblance to Smerdis the Prince of that Name, who had been kill'd by Prexaspes, and whose Death was not known to every Body. Cambyses caus'd this Messenger to be stopp'd; and making an exact Enquiry concerning what had been done to his Brother Smerdis, he found that he had been really put to Death, and that it was another Smerdis who had usurp'd the Crown.

[Herodot. l. 3.] Upon this, he gave Orders for the marching of his Troops with all Expedition, to punish this Usurper: But as he was mounting his Horse with too great Precipitation, his Sword happen'd to fall out of the Scabbard, which gave him a Wound in his Thigh, of which he died soon after: But before his Death, he sent for all the Grandees of Persia, acquainted them with the Death of his Brother Smerdis, and with the Usurpation of the Magian, conjuring them all not to submit to the surreptitious Authority of this Impostor. Herodotus calls him Smerdis; Œschilus, Mardus; Ctesias, Spendates; and Justin, Oropastes.

[Ezra iv. 7.] No sooner was he confirm'd in his Government by the Death of Cambyses, but the Samaritans, who always were at Enmity with the Jews, wrote a Letter to him against them, telling him, that the Jews, who were always a factious and turbulent Nation, were now rebuilding the City and Temple of Jerusalem; and that when they had compleated this Undertaking, it was much to be apprehended, that they intended to revolt and shake off the Persian Yoke; which Example might encourage the neighbouring Nations of Syria and Palestine to do the same: That he had need only of consulting the Records of Persia, to be convinced of this Truth, and of the dangerous Temper of the Jews. This Letter having been received at Court, the Archives of the Kingdom were inspected, where indeed it was easy to observe, that the Hebrews had for a long Time maintain'd a War against the Kings of Assyria and Babylon, and that at last they had been subdued by the Arms of King Nebuchadnezzar.

Upon

Upon this, an Order was dispatch'd to the Jews, that they shou'd not go on with their Works, nor proceed in Repairing Jerusalem, or the Temple[1]; and Commission was given to the Samaritans, to see that this Order was comply'd with. This they had no sooner receiv'd, but they came in all Haste to Jerusalem, where notifying to the Jews the Resolution of the Court of Persia, they obliged them, by Force and Authority, to suspend the Execution of their Designs. Thus a Stop was put to this Work 'till the second Year of Darius Son of Hystaspes,[2] who gave Leave to the Jews to go on with their Work for the Repairing [Ezra vi. 1, &c.] of the Temple: But the Prohibition of Repairing or Rebuilding their Walls was not taken off 'till the Year 3550, by Artaxerxes Longimanus.

But to return to Smerdis: He omitted nothing to secure himself in the Possession of the Throne of Persia. He marry'd Atossa Daughter of Cyrus, and granted his Subjects an Exemption from Taxes, and all military Services, for three Years: And as he had great Reason to be afraid of every thing, if it should be once known that he was not the real Smerdis, he took great Care to avoid appearing in Publick; which was no unusual thing in Persia, where their Kings, to preserve the Respect due to Majesty, shew'd themselves but very seldom in Publick. Yet this exceeding Caution of his made him the more suspected. Ozanes, one of the noblest of the Persians, and whose Daughter Phedyma was of the Number of the King's Wives, privately enquired of his Daughter, If the King was the true Smerdis or no? She gave him to understand, that having never seen Smerdis the Son of Cyrus, she could be no Judge of this Matter. He gave her Orders to enquire into the Truth of this, by the means of Atossa the Daughter of Cyrus, and Sister to Smerdis. But Phedyma let her Father know, that the Wives of the King had no Correspondence with one another, nor were allow'd to see one another. At last, Ozanes gave his Daughter Orders to observe, whether or no the King had his Ears; for Cyrus had cau'd the Ears of the counterfeit Smerdis to be cut off, having been convicted of some Crime. Phedyma very artificially discharged this Commission, and while the King was sleeping very soundly by her, she satisfy'd herself, that his Ears were not to be found, of which she gave Intelligence to her Father.

Ozanes open'd the Matter to six of the chief of the Nobility, who forming a Party against him, enter'd the Palace, fell upon the Usurper, and upon his Brother Pasisthes the Contriver of this Intrigue: They kill'd them both,[3] and exposing their Heads to the People, the whole Imposture was fully discover'd. Darius the Son of Histaspes succeeded Smerdis, in the manner as is related under his Article.

Smite

[Psal. lxxvii. 66.] SMITE. To Smite, is often used for to put to Death. David smote the Philistine: he put Goliah to Death. The Lord smote Nabal; he smote Uzzah; that is, he put them to Death. To Smite, is also put for to Afflict, to strike with Fear, with the Pestilence, with Poverty, with Ulcers, with Distempers, with Wounds. To smite an Army, is, to beat it, to rout it intirely. To smite the Camp of the Philistines, is, to disperse it, to obtain a Victory over them. Percutere fœdus, is literally, to strike or smite a Covenant, to contract an Alliance; because generally they kill'd Animals, and offered Sacrifices, for ratifying Covenants or Alliances. God smote the Philistines, in posteriora; he sent them the Piles, or Hemorrhoides, or other Diseases of the Fundament. To smite the Tongue, Jer. xviii. 18. Venite & percutiamus eum linguâ; Let us overwhelm him with Injuries and Reproaches; Let us load him with all sorts of scandalous Reflections. To smite or strike the Hands, is sometimes an Action of Applause and Approbation; and at other times is a Token of Grief, Trouble, and Astonishment.

[Lam. iii. 30. Jer. xxxi. 19. Ezek. xxi. 14.] To smite the Cheek, to smite with the Fist, require no Explication. To smite the Thigh, denotes Indignation, Trouble, Astonishment. To strike Hand against Hand, Percute manu ad manum, signifies, Express your Trouble, by smiting your [Isai. xi. 4. 1 Cor. viii. 12.] Hands. He shall smite the Earth with the Rod of his Mouth, is, God shall destroy them with his Breath. To wound [or smite] the weak Conscience of a Brother, is, to create unnecessary Scruples in his Conscience, and to expose him to the Commission of Sin. To strike or smite one's Heart: David [1 Samuel xxiv. 6.] smote his Heart; he had a Remorse, at having cut off the Lappet of Saul's Garment. See STROKE.

Smyrna

[Rev. ii. 8, 9, 10.] SMYRNA, a City of Asia Minor, upon the Archipelago, having a fine Harbour. St. John the Evangelist, in his Revelation, or rather Jesus Christ by the Mouth of St. John, thus speaks to the Angel or Bishop of Smyrna: These things saith the first and the last, which was dead, and is alive. I know thy Works, and Tribulation, and Poverty, (but thou art rich), and I know the Blasphemy of them which say they are Jews, and are not, but are the Synagogue of Satan. Fear none of those things which thou shalt suffer: behold, the Devil shall cast some of you into Prison, that ye may be tried, and ye shall have Tribulation ten Days. Be thou faithful unto Death, and I will give thee a Crown of Life.

'Tis asked, Who was this Angel, or this Bishop of Smyrna? The Generality think a it was St. Polycarp, who was made Bishop of Smyrna by the Apostle St. John the Evangelist[1]. The Commendations which the Holy Ghost here gives to the Angel of Smyrna, perfectly well agree with St. Polycarp; and it is observable, that here is not one Word of Reproach. There is some Probability, that 'tis the Martyrdom of St. Germanicus, and of the other Martyrs of Smyrna, who suffer'd Martyrdom under Marcus Aurelius, that St. John has here in View, when he says, that the Devil shall cause some of them to be put in Prison.

[Exod. xxv. 38. & xxxvii. 23.] SNUFFERS, Emunctoria. The Snuffers mention'd in Scripture, were to snuff the Lamps of the great golden Candlestick with seven Branches, that was in the Sanctuary. Their Matter was Gold, and their Form was probably like our Snuffers or Pinchers, which we use to snuff our Lamps or Candles. The original Word comes from a Root that signifies, to lay hold of, to pinch, to shut up, to receive.

Soba

SOBA; Syria of Soba, or Aram of Soba. We think Soba to be a City which gave its Name to a Part of Syria. But this City having been destroy'd, or else having chang'd its Name, we cannot certainly say how far Syria of Soba extended. It appears to us, that it must have been at the Northern Extremity of Celo-Syria, from Libanus and Antilibanus as far as towards Antioch; for it is different from Syria of Damascus, of Emath, of Rohob, of Maachah, and of Geshur. Soba is call'd Sobol, or Sobal, in Judith iii. 1, 14. I suppose Soba or Sobal might be Hoba or Hobal, or Abyla, lying between Libanus and Antilibanus.

Sober

SOBER, Sobriety: This is commonly taken for the Vertue opposite to Intemperance. Sometimes also it is put for Moderation, Modesty, and that Vertue that knows how to chuse the Mean or Mediocrity in [Rom. xii. 3.] every thing. For I say, through the Grace given unto me, to every Man that is among you, not to think of himself more highly than he ought to think; but to think soberly, according as God hath dealt to every Man the Measure of Faith. St. Paul would have [1 Tim. ii. 9.] Women dress themselves in modest Apparel, with Shame-facedness and Sobriety, as Decency requires. Also the Word Sobriety is taken for Vigilance:[1] A Bishop must be vigilant, sober. Elsewhere it is taken for Prudent, Moderate:[2] For God has not given us the Spirit of Fear; but of Power, and of Love, and of a sound Mind, or Sobriety. When Antiochus Epiphanes was told of the Murther of the High-priest Onias, he was so moved at it, that he shed Tears; remembring the Wisdom and the Moderation of that Great Man: Because of [2 Macc. iv. 37.] the sober and modest Behaviour of him that was dead.

Sodom

SODOM, the capital City of Pentapolis [Gen. xiii. 12, 13.] , which for some time was the Dwelling-place of Lot the Nephew of Abraham. The Crimes of this City were come to such an Height, that God destroy'd it by Fire from Heaven, with three other neighbouring Cities, Gomorrah, Zeboim, and Admah, which were as wicked as it self[1]. The Plain wherein they stood, which before was pleasant and fruitful like an earthly Paradise, was first inflamed by Lightning, which put Fire to the Bitumen, with which it was replete, and was afterwards overflow'd by the Waters of the Jordan, which diffused themselves there, and form'd the Dead-sea, or Lake of Sodom, call'd also[2] the Lake Asphaltites, because of the Asphaltus or Bitumen with which it abounded. 'Tis believed Sodom was one of the more Southermost of the five Cities that were destroy'd by the Fire from Heaven, because it was near Zoar, which was known to be beyond the Southermost Point of the Dead-sea.

'Tis doubted whether it was within the Space of Land that now is possess'd by this Sea, or whether it was only upon its Border. [Jer. xlix. 18. & l. 38.] The Prophets speak often enough of the Destruction of Sodom and Gomorrah, or make Allusions to it, and every-where insinuate, that these Places shall be desert, dry'd up, and uninhabited ; that they shall be Places cover'd with Briars and Brambles, a Land of Salt and Sulphur, where there can be neither Planting nor Sowing : Sicitas spinarum, & [Deut. xxix. 22. Wisd. ii. 9. Amos iv. 11.] acervi salis, & desertum usque in æternum. They shall be, says Amos, as a Firebrand pluckt out of the Burning, half burnt up, and unprofitable to any Use. In a Word : Through all the Scripture the Ruin of Sodom and Gomorrah is represented as one of the most signal Effects of God's Anger. [Joseph. de Bello, l. 5. c. 5. p. 892. f.] Josephus says, that round about the Lake of Sodom, and about the Cities that were heretofore destroy'd by Fire from Heaven, the Land is all burnt up, and there are still to be seen the dismal Effects of this terrible Burning, and the Remains of those unfortunate Cities[3]. The Fruits which grow there have a fine outward Appearance, and seem to the Sight to be good to eat ; but they are full of Ashes, and, when open'd, they fly away in Dust.

It should seem then, that in Josephus's Time, the Ruins of these five Cities were [Strab. Geograph. l. 15.] still in Being. Strabo also speaks of the Ruins of Sodom, which were sixty Furlongs in Compass, and were to be seen on the Shore of the Dead-sea. The Notitia makes express mention of Sodom as an Episcopal City. There is found one Severus a Bishop of Sodom, among the Bishops of Arabia, who subscribed to the first Council of Nice. M. Reland cannot persuade himself that Sodom was ever rebuilt ; he believes the Word Sodom, which is read among the Subscriptions to the Council of Nice, must be a Fault of the Copiers ; but I cannot be of his Opinion. The Record is very circumstantial ; it puts the Episcopal City of Sodom between Thamar and En-geddi. Stephen the Geographer[4] also puts En-geddi near Sodom. So that I cannot see it can be made a Question of, that the City of Sodom was rebuilt, either in the same Place it was before, or over-against this Place ; for tho' it appears to me very probable, that it was not cover'd by the Waters of the Dead-sea, and that it stood upon the Shore of this Sea, yet I would not too strenuously oppose the common Opinion, that holds the contrary.

Sodomy

[Gen. xix. 5, 6, 23, 24, &c. Judg. xix. xx. Lev. xviii. 22. & xx. 13. Rom. i. 27. Gal. iii. 28. 1 Cor. vi. 10. 1 Tim. i. 10.] SODOMY ; a Crime against Nature, which consists in the abominable Use of a Man, as if he were a Woman. This Crime drew down the most terrible Effects of God's Anger against the Inhabitants of Sodom, Gomorrah, Admah, and Zeboim. 'Twas this same Enormity, with several others, which was the Reason that God destroy'd the Canaanites by the Arms of the Hebrews, under the Conduct of Joshua. The Inhabitants of Gibeah were also given to this abominable Sin ; which brought a War against the whole Tribe of Benjamin, which had like to have utterly exterminated them. Moses condemns this Crime, and forbids it, upon Pain of Death. St. Paul informs us, that it was very common among the Heathen, and declares, that all who fall into such Enormities, shall not inherit the Kingdom of God.

Sohem

[Gen. ii. 12. Shohem.] SOHEM, or Shohem, a sort of precious Stone, which is often spoke of in the Scripture. St. Jerom and the Septuagint generally render this Word by the Onyx-stone ; but we think it rather signifies an Emerald. See Gen. ii. 12. and the Article of PRECIOUS STONES. In the History of the East, we find several Princes by the Name of Soheme, so call'd from the Hebrew Word Sohem, an Emerald or Onyx.

Solarium

[Tectum, Solarium. Josh. ii. 6. 1 Sam. ix. 25. Deut. xxii. 8. 2 Kings i. 2, 3.] SOLARIUM, a Roof. By the Word Solarium, St. Jerom commonly translates the Terrass or Plat-form which serv'd for the Roof or Covering of the House. Rabab lodg'd Joshua's Spies upon the Plat-form of her House : *In solarium dom*ûs suæ. Samuel also put Saul to lodge there. These Plat-forms were all uncover'd, and were defended with a Wall round about, that was Breast-high, to prevent falling down into the Street. Moses had thus appointed it in his Law. Also in the Middle of this Plat-form there was generally an Opening which answer'd to the Hall that was below. 'Twas through this that King Ahaziah fell down from his Terrass to the Dining-room, and was mortally wounded. Lastly ; They descended generally from these Plat-forms, by Stairs that were with-

[Luke v. 19.] out the House. Thus, in the Gospel, those that brought the Paralytick to our Saviour, not being able to bring him through the Door of the House, because of the Croud that was there, carry'd him upon the Solar or Roof, and having taken up some of the Covering, they let him down, with his Bed, and all, before Jesus Christ. In the same Sense we are to understand what our [Mat. xxiv. 17. Luke xvii. 31.] Saviour says, that those who are upon the House-top, should not come down to take any thing out of the House, but should make haste to save themselves. To save themselves, they must indeed come down; but he would have them come down by the Stairs that were without the House, and not enter into the House at all, to amuse themselves with taking Leave, or providing Cloaths or Provisions. Solitude

SOLITUDE, Desart, or Wilderness[1]. The Hebrews give the Name of Wilderness to all Places that are not cultivated, but which are chiefly destin'd to the feeding of Cattle, and on which Trees grow wild. So when a Desart or Wilderness is mention'd in Scripture, we must not imagine it to be a Place forsaken, abandon'd, void of Cities or Inhabitants; this Word only represents the Soil near a City or Village which was appointed for Pasture, and where the Plough never came. Thus, in Scripture, there are few Cities which had not their Wilderness, Desart, or Solitude. Thus we read of the Desarts of Zin, of Kadesh, of Tekoa, of Auran, of Damascus, of Ziph, of Jeruel, of Jericho, of Jerusalem, of Maon, of Gibeon, of Bethel, of En-geddi, of Bethsaida, and so of others. Solomon

SOLOMON, or Salomon, Son of David and Bath-sheba, was born in the Year of the World 2971, before Christ 1029, before the Vulgar Era 1033. His Name Solomon signifies Pacifick, or Peaceable. The Lord [2 Sam. xii. 24, 25.] loved him, and sent the Prophet Nathan to David, to assure him of his Affection towards the Child, and to give Solomon the Name of Jedidiah, or, The Beloved of the Lord. This was, probably, when Nathan assured David, that this Son should succeed him, and that it should be he that should inherit the Promises that the Lord had made him some Years before,[1] when he had conceiv'd the Design of building a Temple to the Lord: For then God told him, by the Prophet Nathan,[2] "You shall not build

" build me an House; but when your Days are compleated, and you are gather'd to your Fathers, I will set one of your Children upon the Throne after you, and will strengthen his Reign; 'tis he that shall build a House to my Name, and I will establish his Throne for ever: I will be a Father to him, and he shall be my Son, and I will not take away my Mercy from him, as I did from your Predecessor: I will fix him in my Kingdom and in my House for ever, and his Throne shall not be shaken: I will be his Father, and he shall be my Son; and if he does any thing amiss, I will chastise him with the Rod with which Men are chastised, and will punish him with the Stripes with which the Children of Men are punished, but will not take away my Mercy from him."

From this time David thought only of preparing what was necessary for the building of the Temple, and of giving Solomon such an Education as might bear some Proportion to the great Designs that God had ordained him to. But towards the End of David's Reign,[3] Adonijah, David's eldest Son, began to make himself popular, to set up a Court, and to act as if he were to succeed to the Crown of his [1 Kings i. 5,6,7.] Father. David did not restrain him; Joab, Abiathar, and several of the principal Men of the Court, were in his Interest: But he had neither Zadok the High-priest, nor Benaiah, nor the Prophet Nathan, on his Side. One Day, when Adonijah had invited several of his Friends to a great Feast, which he prepared for them near the Fountain of Rogel, he invited neither Zadok, nor Nathan, nor Benaiah. Upon which, Nathan went to Bath-sheba the Mother of Solomon, and said to her; " Do you know that Adonijah is going to " declare himself King, without David's " Knowledge or Consent? Go therefore, " and present yourself before the King, " and say to him; My Lord the King, " did not you promise me with an Oath, " that Solomon my Son should reign after " you? Why then does Adonijah reign? " While you are speaking thus to the " King, I will come in, and support what " you shall say." Bath-sheba follow'd Nathan's Counsel; [1 Kings i. 32,33,34.] and David being inform'd of Adonijah's Intrigues, sent for Zadok the High-priest, the Prophet Nathan, and Benaiah the Son of Jehoiada, and gave them these Orders; " Go and set my Son Solomon upon " my own Mule, and conduct him to " Gihon, where let Zadok and Nathan " give him the Royal Unction, and found " the Trumpet before him, saying, Long " live King Solomon! " These Orders they obey'd; Solomon was anointed King of Israel; they brought him back amidst the Acclamations of all the People, and caus'd him to sit upon the Throne of David. This Prince blessed the Lord on his Account, saying; " Blessed be the " Lord, who has this Day permitted me " to see with my own Eyes my Son " Solomon sitting upon my Throne. "

Those that were with Adonijah, hearing [1 Kings i. 49.] what had passed, rose from Table in a great Consternation, and every one retired to his own Home. Adonijah himself, being in fear of King Solomon's Resentment, took Refuge at the Horns of the Altar, and made his humble Supplication to this Prince, That he would promise him, upon Oath, not to put him to Death. Solomon made answer, That if he behaved himself for the future like a good Man, and a faithful Subject, one Hair of his Head should not fall to the Ground; but if he should ever find him guilty of any evil Practices, he should surely die. Adonijah upon this quitted his Azylum, and came to pay his Duty to King Solomon.

And now the Day of David's Death being near at Hand,[4] he sent for his Son [1 Kings ii. 1, 2, 3.] Solomon to him, and earnestly recommended to him a strict Fidelity and Piety towards God. He bid him not let Joab or Shimei go unpunish'd; but to shew all possible Friendship and Acknowledgment to the Sons of Barzillai, who had succour'd him in his Distress. He told him also, that since God [1 Chron. xxii. 2, 3, 4, 5. & xxviii.] had reserved for him the Honour of building him a Temple, he ought to discharge this Trust with all possible Zeal and Diligence. He put into his Hands the Schemes that he had made for the Execution of this Undertaking, and the Accounts of the Treasures he left him for the perfecting this Edifice. He gave him also the Lists of the Priests and Levites, and the Courses in which they were to wait in the Temple. He [1 Chron. xxiii,xxiv, xxv, xxvi.] gave him likewise the Schemes and Regulations of the Officers of his own Court, of the Civil Officers, of the Treasurers, and of the Superintendants of the Revenues belonging to the Crown. Lastly, in a general Assembly [1 Chron. xxvii.] of the People, and of all the great Men of the Kingdom, David deliver'd over all the Gold, Silver, and valuable Materials, that he had collected for the building of the Temple, and exhorted all that were present to make every one their Offering to the Lord, [1 Chron. xxix. 1, 2, 3, &c.] each according to his Abilities and Inclination. They all contributed with a chearful Heart, and the Quantity of Gold and Silver was very extraordinary. After which David died in the seventieth Year of his Age, having reign'd forty Years[5].

Solomon now enter'd into the full Possession of the Kingdom of his Father, and was acknowledg'd by all Israel. Soon after this his Brother Adonijah made Intercession [1 Kings ii. 13, 14.] with Bath-sheba, that she would intreat for him with Solomon, that he might have Abishag the Shunammite to Wife. Bathsheba recommended this Request of his to her Son Solomon; but he perceiving Adonijah's evil Intentions, that he asked for Abishag who had been Wife to David, only to strengthen his Interest, and to favour the Pretensions that he might one Day make to the Crown; Solomon order'd Adonijah to be put to Death. He also banish'd from his Presence the High-priest Abiathar, and confin'd him to his Country-House, because he [1 Kings ii. 26, 27.] had been of Adonijah's Party. Lastly, when Joab heard what had happen'd to Adonijah and Abiathar, he began to be afraid for himself, and retired into the Tabernacle as a Place of Refuge. Solomon commanded him [1 Kings ii. 28,29,&c.] to be brought from thence, and to be put to Death. But Joab refusing to forsake his Azylum, he order'd him to be slain in that very Place; desiring that the Blood that had been unjustly spilt by that Man, might not be imputed to the House of David, or be a Blemish to his Reign. Lastly, Solomon order'd Shimei to build him a House in [1 Kings ii. 36, 37.] Jerusalem, and not to stir from thence. Shimei obey'd this Order for a Time, but then some Servants of his running away from him, and entering themselves into the Service of Achish King of Gath, Shimei goes thither to reclaim them. When Solomon was inform'd of this, he sent Benaiah the Son of Jehoiada to fall upon him and kill him.

Solomon being thus confirm'd in his Kingdom,[6] he contracted an Alliance with Pharaoh King of Egypt, and marry'd his Daughter. He brought her to Jerusalem, and had Apartments for her in the City of David, till he should build a Palace for her, as he did some Years after, when he had finish'd [1 Kings iii. 1, 2, 3.] the Building of the Temple. 'Tis thought it was on the Occasion of this Marriage, that Solomon composed the Canticles, or Song of Songs, which is a Kind of Epithalamium. To the same Time and Occasion is also referr'd Psalm xlv. My Heart is enditing a good Matter, &c. This Marriage has not been generally approved. The Scripture speaks of the Daughter of Pharaoh, as one [1 Kings xi. 1, 2. Neh. xiii. 26.] that contributed to pervert Solomon; and it is very likely, that at first this Princess might seem to be converted to the Lord, but afterwards might return to her idolatrous Worship, and engage the King her Husband in it. Pharaoh gave the City Gezer, as a Portion with his Daughter, which City he had conquer'd from the Canaanites, in the Country of the Philistines. Solomon afterwards rebuilt and fortify'd it.

After this a Solomon, accompany'd by all his Troops, and all Israel, went up to Gibeon,[7] which was then one of the most famous High-places in the whole Country. He there offer'd a thousand Burnt-offerings upon the brazen Altar that was in that Place. And the Night following God appear'd to him in a Dream, and said to him; " Ask of me what you have a mind that I shall give you. " After Solomon had returned Thanks for all the Favours that God had conferred upon his Father David, and for the Honour he had done him also, in placing him upon his Father's Throne; he begg'd of God to give him a wise and understanding Heart, and such Qualities as were necessary for the Government of the People committed to him. This Request was agreeable to the Lord, who said to him; " Since you " have asked neither Glory, nor Riches, " nor Victory over your Enemies, and " have desired only Wisdom to govern " your People; I grant it you, and shall " add all those other Things that you " might have asked me; so that no King " of all the Ages past shall have been " equal to you in this respect. " At his awaking in the Morning he consider'd this Dream, and perceived it was not an ordinary Dream. He return'd to Jerusalem, where he offer'd a great Number of Sacrifices upon the Altar, which was before the Ark of the Lord, and made a great Feast for his Servants.

Then two Women of ill Reputation came before the King,[8] and said to him; " That one of them had stifled her Child " in her Sleep, and having privately convey'd it to her Companion, she stole " away her live Child, and pretended it " to be her own. " As each of these Women eagerly maintain'd the live Child to belong to her, and the dead one to the other, and no one could convince them, the thing being transacted without any Witnesses; the King bid the Attendants to cut the live Child into two equal Parts, that each of the Women might have half the Child they contended for. Then the real Mother of the Child, finding herself moved by natural Affection, said to the King; " Let not the Child be divided, " but rather let her take the whole Child." The other, on the contrary, approved of [ix. 16, 17. 1 Kings iv. 1, 2, 3, &c. 1 Kings iv. 24. 2 Chron. ix. 26.] the Sentence of the King, and said; " Let " the Child be neither hers nor mine, but " let it be divided between us. " Upon which Solomon, without any further Hesitation, determin'd, that the Child should not be kill'd, but given to her that was for preserving its Life, for she was the real Mother of it. All Israel hearing of this Decision, were fill'd with Reverence and Respect for the King, perceiving the great Wisdom that was in him.

Now Solomon enjoy'd a profound Peace through all his Dominions; all Judah and Israel lived in the greatest Security; and his Neighbours either pay'd him Tribute, or were his Friends and Allies. He ruled over all the Countries and Kingdoms, quite from the Euphrates to the Nile, and his Dominion extended even beyond the Euphrates. He had a very great Number of Horses and Chariots of War. Instances of his Wisdom were as numerous as the Sand of the Sea, and he exceeded all the Orientals, and all the Egyptians, in Wisdom and Prudence. In a Word, he was the wisest of Mankind, and his Reputation was spread through all Nations. He compos'd or collected three thousand Proverbs, and a thousand and five Canticles. (The Septuagint and several Interpreters read five thousand instead of a thousand and five, as it is in the Hebrew.) He knew the Nature of all Plants and Trees, from the Cedar upon Libanus, to the Hyssop that grows upon the Wall. He treated also of Beasts, of Birds, of Reptiles, of Fishes. There was a Concourse of Strangers from all Countries to hear his Wisdom, and Ambassadors from the most remote Princes that had heard of his Fame. He made Gold and Silver as common in Jerusalem as Stones in the Street;[9] and Cedars as plentiful as the Sycamores that grow in the Field.

As soon as Hiram King of Tyre knew that Solomon was made King of Israel, he sent Ambassadors to him, to congratulate his Accession to the Crown; and some time after,[10] Solomon sent Ambassadors to him, to desire him to supply him with Wood and Workmen, and to assist him in building a Temple to the Lord.[11] Hiram gladly undertook what Solomon desired of him: He sent him word, He would order Cedar-trees and Fir-trees to be cut down in Mount Libanus; that his People should put them on Floats, and bring them by Sea to the Harbour of Joppa, from whence Solomon might send to fetch them to Jerusalem. Solomon, on his Part, obliged himself to give Hiram for the Maintenance of his Family and Workmen, twenty thousand[12]Measures of Wheat, and twenty thousand Measures of Oil. a Josephus adds;[13] that he furnish'd him with Wine also; and [2 Chron. ii. 10.] indeed in the Chronicles it is said, that Solomon gave to Hiram's Workmen, that work'd for him in Libanus, Wheat, Barley, Wine, and Oil.

SOLOMON HAVING BUILT THE TEMPLE OF JERUSALEM DEDICATES IT TO THE LORD.Vol. II. 2d Gath. Ff.

Josephus says besides,[14] that even in his Time were preserved in the Archives of Tyre, the Letters that Solomon and Hiram wrote to each other. He cites Dion and Menander, who said that these two Princes us'd to send Ænigma's to one another, in order to be solved; that Solomon having once sent a Riddle to Hiram which he could not explain, Hiram was obliged to pay him a great Sum of Money. But after this a Tyrian, call'd Abdemon, gave a Solution of them, and propos'd others to King Solomon, which he could not explain, and therefore was fore'd to give the King of Tyre a good Sum. Thus it is related by Josephus.

Solomon began to work upon the building of the Temple in the fourth Year of his Reign, and the second after the Death of David;[15] four hundred and fourscore Years after the Coming out of Egypt[16]. We shall not here give a Description of this Temple, but refer the Reader to the Article of the Temple of Solomon. He employ'd in this great Work seventy thousand Proselytes, who were the Remains of the antient Canaanites, in carrying Burthens upon their Shoulders; fourscore thousand in cutting Stones out of the Quarries in the Mountains; and three thousand six hundred[17] to oversee the Works. Besides which, he employ'd thirty thousand Israelites to work in the Quarries of Libanus. These thirty thousand Men were commanded by Adoniram, and only ten thousand of them work'd at a Time, and that for a Month only, so that they had always two Months of [1 Kings vi. 37. 1 Kings v. 14.] Rest between. Hiram also sent to Jerusalem a very skilful Workman, whose Name also was Hiram,[18] whose Mother was of the Tribe of Dan,[19] and his Father was by Nation a Tyrian; he could work in Gold, Silver, Brass, Iron, Marble, Wood, and in all Sorts of Work of Linen, Embroidery, and Tapestry. He had the Direction of all the Works of the Temple. 'Twas he that had the Management of the Foundery, and cast most of the principal Things himself. See HIRAM.

The Temple of the Lord having been begun in the fourth Year of the Reign of Solomon, was compleated in his eleventh Year; so that he was but seven Years in performing this vast Piece of Work.[20] The Dedication was made in the Year following,[21] which was the 3001 Year of the World. To make this Ceremony the more august, Solomon chose for it the eighth Day of the seventh Month of the Holy Year,[22] which was the first of the Civil Year, and answer'd to our Month of October. The Ceremony of the Dedication lasted for seven Days, at the end of which began the Feast of Tabernacles, which continued still seven Days longer; so that all the People continued at Jerusalem fourteen or fifteen Days, from the eighth to the twenty-second of the seventh Month. Solomon caus'd to be present at this Solemnity all the Elders of Israel, and all the People. The Priests and Levites carry'd into the Temple, first, all the Presents that David had made to it, and which were laid up in the Treasuries of the Sanctuary; then they set up in their several Places, the Ornaments and Vessels appointed to the Service of the Altar and of the Sanctuary; lastly, they brought thither the Ark of the Covenant with great Solemnity, the King and all the People walking before, while the Priests offer'd an infinite Number of Sacrifices in all the Places through which the Ark passed.

When the Ark was placed in the Sanctuary, while the Priests and Levites, in their turns, were celebrating the Praises of the Lord, the Temple was fill'd with a miraculous Cloud; so that the Priests, out of Veneration, could no longer continue there, nor go on with performing the Functions of their Ministry. Then Solomon, being upon his Throne,[23] prostrated himself with his Face to the Ground; then raising himself up, and turning towards the Sanctuary, he address'd his Prayer to God, and beseech'd him, that the House he had built might be acceptable to him, that he would bless and sanctify it, and hear the Prayers of those that should address themselves to him from this holy Place. He beseech'd him also to fulfil the Promises he had made to David his Servant, in favour of his Family, and of the Kings his Successors. As soon as he had finish'd his Devotions to God, he turn'd himself to the People, and blessed them; [1 Kings viii. 55, 56. 2 Chron. vii. 1, 2, 3.] when Fire coming down from Heaven, consumed the Victims and Burnt-sacrifices that were upon the Altar, and the Glory of the Lord fill'd the whole Temple; so that even the Priests could not go into the Temple, to perform their respective Offices.[24] Then the Children of Israel, who were all Witnesses of this Miracle, fell down upon their Faces, worshipping and adoring the Lord.

On this Day the King caused to be sacrificed twenty-two thousand Oxen, and six-score thousand Sheep for Peace-Offerings. And because the Altar of Burnt-offerings was not sufficient for all these Victims, a the King consecrated the Court of the People, and there offer'd Sacrifices in great Numbers. But the Lord appear'd a second time to Solomon in a Dream; probably in the Night that follow'd the first Day of the Dedication; and said to him: " I have heard your Prayer, and have " chosen this Temple to be my House of " Sacrifice. My Eyes shall be open, and " my Ears attentive to the Prayers of those " that shall call upon me in this Place. " And as for you, if you walk before me " as David your Father walked before me, " and if you keep my Statutes and Ordinances, I will preserve your Throne, " and you shall always have Successors of " your Race, to sit upon your Throne. " But if you or your Children shall turn " away from me, I will destroy you out " of this Land that I have given you, and " will make my People the Reproach of " the World, and this Temple shall become an Occasion of Wonder to all Nations, because of the Destruction I shall " bring upon it. "

After the seven Days of the Dedication were over, and the other seven Days of the Feast of Tabernacles, Solomon dismiss'd the Assembly of the Israelites, and all the People return'd to their own Habitations, praying that all sorts of Blessings might shower down upon the King. Solomon afterwards[25] thought of building himself a Palace, and another for his Queen the King of Egypt's Daughter.[26] He was thirteen Years in finishing these Buildings, and us'd therein whatever the most exquisite Art or the profusest Riches could furnish him with, to make them magnificent, and fit for the greatest Prince that was then in the East. The Palace in which he generally chose to reside, was call'd The House of the Forest of Libanon, probably because of the great Quantity of Cedar that was us'd therein, or because of the great Number of Columns on which it was built. To shew his Gratitude to Hiram King of Tyre, who had been very useful to him in his Buildings,[27] he gave him twenty Cities in the Province of Galilee. Hiram went to see them, but it seems he did not like them, for he said; What Cities are these which thou hast given me, my Brother? And he called them the Land of Cabul unto this Day. See the Article CABUL. Hiram also sent Solomon six-score Talents of Gold; probably he lent them Solomon to go on with his Buildings.

Besides these vast Undertakings now mention'd, Solomon also built the Walls of Jerusalem,[28] the Place call'd Millo in the same City; he repair'd and fortify'd Hazor, Megiddo, Gezer, the two Beth-horons Upper and Lower, Baalath, and Palmyra in the Desart of Syria. He also fortify'd all the Cities where he made his Magazines of Corn, Wine, and Oil, and those where his Chariots and Horses were kept. He brought under his Government all the Hittites, the Hivites, the Amorites, and the Perizites, which any where remain'd in the Land of Israel. He made them Tributaries, and compell'd them to work at the publick Works he had undertaken. As to the Israelites, he would not employ them in this Labour, but made use of them in his Armies, and set them over his Chariots and Horses.

He fitted out a Fleet at Ezion-geber, and at Elath or Elan, upon the Red-sea, to go to Ophir.[29] Hiram King of Tyre furnish'd him with Mariners, and such as understood Navigation, who instructed the Subjects of Solomon. They perform'd this Voyage in three Years, and brought back with them Gold, Ivory, Ebony, precious Wood, Peacocks, Apes, and other Curiosities.[30] In one Voyage they brought Solomon four hundred and fifty Talents of Gold, or, as it is in the First Book of Kings, only four hundred and twenty. About the same Time the Queen of Sheba,[31] a Country of Arabia-Felix, or, according to others, of the Isle of Meroe, formerly call'd Sheba, came to Jerusalem, attracted by the great Fame of King Solomon. She brought with her rich Presents of Gold, Spices, and Precious-stones; and with a Design to try if Solomon's Wisdom was as great as had been represented, she propos'd several Ænigma's and hard Questions to him, to hear his Solutions. But Solomon gave her such satisfactory Answers, that she own'd, what had been told her of his Wisdom and Magnificence, was far short of what she had found. The King, for his Part, conferr'd great Honours on her, and made her rich Presents, so that she return'd into her own Kingdom very well pleas'd. The Reader may see what has been said of the Queen of Sheba, under the Article NICAULE.

Solomon was one of the richest, if not the very richest of all Princes that have ever lived; and the Scripture expresly[32] tells us, a he exceeded in Riches and Wisdom all the Kings of the Earth. We have already observed, that in his Time Silver was not regarded, because it was as plenty as the Stones in the Street. His annual Revenues were six hundred and sixty-six Talents of Gold,[33] without reckoning the Tributes which he received from tributary Kings and Nations, or the Subsidies paid by the Israelites, or the Sums that he received from the Merchants for his Customs. The Bucklers of his Guards, and the Throne that he sat upon, were overlaid with pure Gold. All the Vessels of his Table, and the Utensils of his Palaces, were of the same Metal. From all Parts they sent him Presents in Vessels of Gold and Silver, in precious Stuffs, in Spices, in Arms, in Horses and Mules; and the whole Earth had a Desire to see the Face of Solomon, and to hear the Wisdom that God had put into his Heart.

Hitherto we have seen nothing in Solomon, but what was truly great and admirable; but the later Actions of his Life sadly disgrace his Character. He deliver'd himself up to the Love of strange Women;[34] and besides Pharaoh's Daughter mention'd before, he marry'd Wives from among the Moabites, Ammonites, Idumeans, Sidonians, Hittites. He had to the Number of seven hundred Wives, who were as so many Queens, besides which he had three hundred Concubines. These Women perverted his Heart in his old Age, so that he worshipp'd Ashtoreth the Goddess of the Sidonians, Moloch the Idol of the Ammonites, and Chemosh the God of the Moabites. To these he built Temples upon the Mount of Olives, over-against and to the East of Jerusalem. He did the same by all his strange Women, and had the Complaisance to build Temples for their Gods, to whom they offer'd Incense. Wherefore the Lord said to him in a Dream; " Since you have " not kept my Covenant, nor obey'd my " Commandments, I will rent and divide " your Kingdom, and will give it to one " of your Servants. However, I will not " do it in your Time, for the sake of my " Servant David, but I will divide it in " the Hands of your Son, to whom I will " leave but one Tribe, because of my Servant David. " The Accomplishment of this Menace may be seen in the Article REHOBOAM; and Solomon, even before his Death, saw the Beginnings of this Revolt, and a Tendency towards it, in the Troubles raised by Jeroboam, and by Hadad the Idumean.

Solomon died after he had reign'd forty Years, in the Year of the World 3029, before Christ 1071, before the vulgar Era [Joseph. Antiq. l. 8. c. 3. init. 2 Chron. ix. 29, 30.] 1075. We think he might be about fiftyeight Years of Age; for he was about eighteen when he began to reign. Josephus allows him fourscore Years of Reign, and fourscore and fourteen Years of Life; but this is a manifest Error. The History of this Prince was written by the Prophets Nathan, Abijah, and Iddo: He was buried in the City of David, and Rehoboam his Son reigned in his stead, but not over all Israel.

[Ecclus. xlvii. 12, 13,14, &c.] This is the Character that the Author of the Book of Ecclesiasticus gives of Solomon: After David rose up a wise Son, and for his sake he dwelt at large: Solomon reigned in a peaceable Time, and was honoured; for God made all quiet round about him, that he might build an House in his Name, and prepare his Sanctuary for ever. How wise wast thou in thy Youth, and as a Flood filled with Understanding! Thy Soul covered the whole Earth, and thou filledst it with dark Parables. Thy Name went far unto the Islands, and for thy Peace thou wast beloved. The Countries marvelled at thee for thy Songs, and Proverbs, and Parables, and Interpretations. By the Name of the Lord God, which is called the Lord God of Israel, thou didst gather Gold as Tin, and didst multiply Silver as Lead. Thou didst bow thy Loins unto Women, and by thy Body thou wast brought into Subjection. Thou didst stain thy Honour, and pollute thy Seed, so that thou broughtest Wrath upon thy Children, and wast grieved for thy Folly. So the Kingdom was divided, and out of Ephraim ruled a rebellious Kingdom.

A famous Question is started here, concerning the Salvation of Solomon. Some decide it in his Favour, while others speak of him in a Manner much to his Disadvantage: But, in my Opinion, they are wisest that remain in Silence, and leave the Matter doubtful, as it really is. This is what they say, who are most favourable to the Salvation of this Prince: God says to David, speaking of Solomon; I will be his Father, and he shall be my Son; if he commit Iniquity, [2 Sam. vii. 14. 1 Chr. xvii. 11.] I will chasten him with the Rod of Men, and with the Stripes of the Children of Men. But my Mercy shall not depart away from him, as I took it from Saul, whom I put away before thee. The Scripture says in another [2 Chron. xi. 17.] Place; For three Years they walked in the way of David and Solomon. Several Interpreters are of Opinion, that the Book of Ecclesiastes is a Monument of the Repentance of Solomon, and that this Prince compos'd it after his Fall. Bacchiarius,[35] an Author of the fifth Age, has writ expressly to prove the Salvation of Solomon. St. Irenæus[36], St. Hilary[37], St. Cyril of Jerusalem[38], St. Ambrose a, St. Jerome[39], and several Moderns[40], maintain expressly, that Solomon repented and was saved.

Others doubt of his Repentance, and consequently of his Salvation. The Scripture speaks plainly of his Fall, and of his Idolatry, but it says nothing that can give any Assurance of his Repentance. That which some advance, that the Book of Ecclesiastes is the Fruits of his Conversion, can by no Means be proved; and the Passage of the Proverbs which is quoted for this Purpose, is not to be found, either in the Vulgate, or in the Hebrew Original. This is what that [Pro. xxiv. 30,31.] Passage intimates; At last I repented, and applied myself to chuse a more regular way of Life. But the Hebrew says; I went by the Field of the Slothful, and by the Vineyard of the Man void of Understanding; And lo, it was all grown over with Thorns, and Nettles had covered the Face thereof, and the Stone-wall thereof was broken down. Then I saw, and considered it well; I looked upon it, and received Instruction. If it were true, that he seriously repented of his Fault, would he have left standing upon the Mount of Olives, the Temples that he had built in Honour of Idols, and which were to be seen a long Time afterwards, even in the Time of Josiah? The Author of Ecclesiasticus, who [2 Kings xxiii. 13.] has given us the Character of Solomon, has he made any mention of his Repentance? Do we see any Effect of it, in the revoking of that Sentence that God had pronounced against him? Or rather, do not we see the quite contrary? Finally, Several of the Fathers, as Tertullian[41], St. Cyprian[42], St. Austin[43], St. Gregory the Great[44], rank Solomon among the Reprobates. Several of the more modern Authors[45] are not more favourable to him; so that we may conclude, that the Salvation of this Prince, at least his Repentance, is a thing very hazardous and doubtful. Those Authors may be consulted, who have expressly treated of this Question, and the Dissertation we have composed on this Subject, in our new Collection.

Of all the ingenious Works that Solomon composed, we have nothing now remaining but his Proverbs, Ecclesiastes, and the Canticles, of which we have already spoken at length under their respective Articles. Some have also ascribed to him the Book of Wisdom, and even Ecclesiasticus. But we have shewn under their several Titles, that these Opinions are very improbable. The Jews think he was the Author of Psalm lxxii. Give the King thy Judgments, O God, and thy Righteousness unto the King's Son, &c. And Psalm cxxvii. Except the Lord build the House, &c. There has also been publish'd under his Name, The Psalter of Solomon, containing eighteen Psalms, which were found in Greek in the Library of Ausburg by Andrew Schott; and which have been translated into Latin, and given to the Publick, by Father John Lewis, de la Cerda, with Explications after his manner. The Learned are agreed,[46] that they are none of Solomon's, but of some Hellenistical Jew, much conversant in the reading of the sacred Authors, who has composed them in Imitation of the Psalms of David, of which he has pretty closely imitated the Stile; and has inserted in them several Fragments of the Prophets Isaiah and Ezekiel, which he has well enough accommodated to his Design.

These eighteen Psalms, pretended to be Solomon's, were not unknown to the Antients. They were formerly in the famous Alexandrian Manuscript which is preserved in England, as may be seen by the Index which is still to be found at the End of the New Testament; tho' the Psalms themselves have either been torn out of the Book, or lost by some Accident.[47] Lambecius makes mention of a Manuscript in the Emperor's Library, wherein these Psalms are found placed between the Books of Wisdom and Ecclesiasticus. The Author of the Synopsis under the Name of Athanasius, Zonarus, and Balsamon upon the 59th Canon of Laodicea, and Nicephorus in his Stichometria, (or Enumeration of the Verses contain'd in every Book of the Scripture,) make express mention of the Psalms of Solomon.[48] The Book at Ausburg copied by Andrew Schott, was sent from Constantinople to Hæschelius.[49] But the Hebrews had never any Knowledge of this Work, nor the Latins neither; and the antient Greeks, who might have been acquainted with it, have never quoted it as divine Scripture.

Some of the Orientals impute to Solomon the Invention of the Syriack and Arabick Letters;[50] and the Tradition of the Syrians is, that this Prince communicated the Syrian Characters to Hiram King of Tyre; and that, at the Request of this Prince, he translated not only his own Books, but all the other Scriptures too, into the Syrian Language. But these Traditions deserve little Credit. The Origin of the Arabick Characters, or the Versions of the Scripture[51] into Syriack, are not so antient as Solomon; and besides, of what use could these Translations of the Scriptures into Syriack be to a Tyrian Prince, who spoke Phenician, that is, the same Language as Solomon?

Eupolemus, quoted in Eusebius, alledges a pretended Letter of Solomon to Vapres King of Egypt, and Vapres's Answer to Solomon. Solomon notifies to him his Accession to the Crown, and asks him for Workmen to assist him in building a Temple to the Lord; and Vapres answers him, that he will send him fourscore thousand Workmen for this Undertaking. In the same Place is read a Letter of Solomon to Suran King of Tyre, Sidon, and Phenicia, by which Solomon gives him Notice of his Succession to the Kingdom, and desires him to send him Workmen.

Together with Suram's Answer (probably he means Iram or Hiram,) in which he tells him he has sent him fourscore thousand Workmen, and among the rest a very skilful Architect, a Tyrian by Birth, but whose Mother was a Jewess. But these Letters are look'd upon as merely fictitious, as well as those which are to be seen in Josephus, which are pretty nearly of the same [Joseph. Antiq. l. 8. c. 2.] Taste, and writ with the same Design, but in a different Stile, and more conformable to what we find in the Scriptures.

Josephus assures us,[52] that Solomon composed Books of Inchantments, and several Manners of Exorcisms, or of driving away Devils, so that they shall return no more. He adds, that he had seen Experiments of it by one Eleazar a Jew, who cured several that were possessed in the Presence of Vespasian, of his Sons, and of the Officers of his Army. The Exorcist put a Ring under the Nose of the possessed, in which was inclosed a certain Root prescribed by Solomon; at the meer Smell of this Root the Demon came forth, over-set the Patient, and left him as if he were dead; and for a farther Proof of the Truth of this Cure, they set at some Distance from the Patient a Glass of Water, which was overturn'd by the Demon as he pass'd away. Origen[53] speaks further of the Conjurations us'd by the Jews in his Time, to drive out Devils, by making use of some Writings that they pretended to have received from Solomon. The Orientals think,[54] he had the Secret of tying or chaining up Demons, and of commanding them. The Rabbins say,[55] that the Demon Asmodeus drove Solomon from his Throne, and reigned in his Place, while this Prince travell'd over the several Kingdoms and Provinces of the World; but at his Return to Jerusalem, he put Asmodeus to flight, and chain'd him up, so that he could not hurt any Body. He compell'd the same Demon to teach him the Art of cutting Stones for the Temple, without making any Noise.

[Alcoran. c. 2.] The Greeks tell us,[56] that this Prince composed several Pieces in Physick, and wrote upon the Nature and Vertues of Stones, of Vegetables, and Simples. But King Hezekiah seeing the Abuse that was made of these Works, suppress'd them all. Yet this has not hindred, but that since his Time there have appear'd several Books of Secrets in Magick, Medicine, and Inchantments, under the Name of this Prince. They also quote several other Works under his Name; as, The Instruction of Solomon to his Son Rehoboam; Solomon's Hygromancy to the same; The Testament of Solomon; The Book of the Throne of Solomon; The Books of Magick compos'd by the Demons under the Name of Solomon; The Clavicula or Key of Solomon; The Ring of Solomon; The Contradiction of Solomon; and several others of this Nature. See M. Fabricius in his Apocryphal Writings of the Old Testament, p. 1040, 1041, &c. We have elsewhere observed, that some impute to Solomon the Book of Job[57].

[D'Herbelot. Bibl. Orient. p. 819.] The Orientals have entertain'd such a grand Idea of the Merit and great Qualifications of this Prince, that they give the Name of Solomon or Soliman to all the Kings, whom they thought had possessed the universal Empire of the whole Earth. They reckon up as far as forty, or even seventy-two, who they say have reigned successively for a great Number of Ages, before the Creation of Adam. All these Monarchs commanded each a Set of Creatures of their Kind, which was different from that of Adam, although they were reasonable Creatures as well as Men. They still expect another Lineage descended from Adam, after that now in being, which shall exceed them all in Majesty and Power, after which no more shall appear upon the Earth.

They say that each of these Solimans had the Hereditary Possession of a Buckler, which they continually made Use of in the Wars they had with the Demons their Enemies; and which they transmit as a Pledge of the Empire to him that is to succeed them. They had also the Thundering Sword and the Buckler, which made them invincible in Fight. They say moreover, that like Solomon they had a familiar Spirit or Genius, which in the[58] Shape of a Bird delivered all their Messages, and perform'd all their Orders. But leaving these Dreams, let us return to Solomon the Son of David.

They pretend he was not only King of the Jews, and of the neighbouring Nations subdued by David, but that he possessed also the universal Monarchy of the whole Earth. His Visier, or prime Minister of State, was Asaph, of whom the Scripture makes mention, and to whom David addresses several of his Psalms. And not only all the Men of the World, but also the good and evil Spirits, the Birds, and even the Winds, were under his Direction. He had, as they say, a wonderful Ring, which discover'd to him not only Things present, but also the past and the future. The Form and Matter of his Throne was so magnificent as to exceed all Description of it. Instead of a Canopy and Pavillion, he was shaded by Birds that continually flew about him. Twelve thousand golden Thrones were at his Right-hand, and twelve thousand of Silver at his Left-hand. The golden Thrones were the Seats of the Patriarchs and Prophets, and the Silver ones for the Doctors and wise Men that assisted at his Councils.

The Demons being jealous of the Glory of Solomon, publish'd several Books of Magick and Superstition in the Name of this Prince, in order to persuade the Ignorant and Simple, that it was from these Books that Solomon derived his Knowledge in the Art of governing his Kingdom, which made him so famous in the World. But Solomon gather'd in all these pernicious Books, shut them up in a Chest under Lock and Key, and buried the Key under his Throne, that no one might get at it. But it happen'd that after the Death of this Prince, the Demons or Magicians took away these Books from this Place, and dispers'd them over the World as the Works of Solomon. This perhaps is more than enough to shew the Genius of the Eastern People, and the great Veneration they have for Solomon even to this Day.

Solymi

SOLYMI. Homer, and the Poet Chœrilus,[1] have mention'd the Solymi, an antient and venerable People, who spoke Phenician, who wore their Hair cut round, and who dwelt in the Solymean Mountains, near a great Lake. These are Marks which Josephus and Tacitus thought to agree with the Jews, here call'd Solymi, because of their capital City Jerusalem; a Nation remarkable for the Singularity of their Laws, and of their Actions, speaking Phenician or Hebrew, dwelling in a mountainous Country at Jerusalem, situate in the Mountains, and near the Lake Asphaltites, one of the greatest Lakes known.

Yet notwithstanding all these Tokens, many learned Men maintain, that the Solymi, spoke of by Homer and Chœrilus, are not the Jews. A Circumstance which very much favours their Opinion is this, that according to Chœrilus the Solymi wore their Hair cut round, which was expressly forbid to the Jews by Moses. See Leviticus xix. 7. and SISOE. And besides the Lake Asphaltites was seven or eight Leagues from Jerusalem. The Arms which the Poet assigns to them can hardly agree with the Jews. He says they wore Helmets made of the Leather of a Horse's Head dry'd in the Smoke. The Jews had never much to do with Horses in their Country, being much incommoded with Mountains.

But who then are these Solymi? Some think them to be the Moabites, or the Midianites, bordering upon the Lake Asphaltites, and reckon'd among the Arabians, who, as Historians inform us, us'd to cut their Hair round in a Circle. 'Tis true, we do not any where find them call'd Solymi; but Josephus[2] speaks of a Town or Village of this Name, lying beyond the Jordan in the Gaulonitis. Others think,[3] that the Solymean Mountains were in Pisidia, near to Lycia; and that it is there that we must seek for the Solymi mention'd by Homer and Chœrilus.

Sopher

SOPHER, or Shopher, one of the Commanders of the Army of Zedekiah King of Judah, 2 Kings xxv. 19. But Sopher may rather be taken for a Scribe, Secretary, or Commissioner, who had the Superintendance of the King's Army. Shopher signifies a Secretary.

Sorek

SOREK, or Sorec, a Brook that pass'd through the Tribe of Dan. 'Twas also the Place where dwelt the famous Delilah, Samson's Mistress.[1] Eusebius says, it was not far from Zorah and Eshtaol, which was the Place of Samson's usual Abode[2].

Caphar-Sorek, or the Camp of Sorek, was a Town near Zorah, or Saraa, according to the same Eusebius.

The Wine of Sorek, was that which was made in the Vale of this Name. Some have thought it to be the same as the Wine of Askalon, which is famous among the Antients. The Brook of Sorek did not run far from this City. The Rabbins think Sorek to be a particular Kind of Plant or Vine, which bears a great Quantity of excellent Fruit, and at all Seasons. It is certain, that Sorek does not only signify the Grape or the Wine of the Valley of Sorek, but a Kind of Wine in general; and probably of the white or yellowish Grape, of which they made the White-wines in this Country. The Lord [Isai. v. 2. Isai. xvi. 8. Gen. xlix. 11. Jer. ii. 21. Isa. xix. 9. Zech. i. 8.] says, he planted his Vine of Sorek. Isaiah tells us of the Plant of Sorek, which was to be seen at Jazer beyond Jordan. The Wine of Sorek was excellent; and the Colour of the Sorek was probably yellow, or white inclining to yellow. Isaiah speaks of the Flax of Sorek, or Colour of Sorek; and Zechariah describes Horses of the same Colour.[3] Some will have it, that it was in the Valley of Sorek that the famous Bunch of Grapes was gather'd, which was brought to the Israelites in the Desart, Numbers xiii. 2. But this Opinion is without any Foundation.

Sorrow

SORROW, Tristitia; this is a Passion that contracts the Heart, sinks the Spirits, and spoils the Health of the Body. The Scripture advises us, not to suffer ourselves to be overcome with Sorrow. a St. Paul distinguishes two sorts of Sorrow; one a godly, and the other a worldly Sorrow. Godly Sorrow [2 Cor. vii. 10.] worketh Repentance to Salvation not to be repented of; but the Sorrow of the World worketh Death. For behold, this self-same thing that ye sorrowed after a godly sort, what Carefulness it wrought in you, yea, what clearing of yourselves, yea, what Indignation, yea, what Fear, yea, what vehement Desire, yea, what Zeal, yea, what Revenge! He elsewhere reproves the Thessalonians, for the too great Sorrow that they [1 Thes. iv. 13.] shew'd at the Death of their Relations. The wise Man commends a kind of Sorrow, which is rather a serious and sober Deportment, and a banishing of vain Joys, than a [Eccles. vii. 3.] real Sorrow. Sorrow is better than Laughter; for by the Sadness of the Countenance the Heart is made better. The Heart of the Wise is in the House of Mourning, but the Heart of Fools is in the House of Mirth. He intends to tell us, that the grave and serious Air of a Master that reproves us, is more profitable than the Laughter and Caresses of those that flatter us. Jesus Christ upbraids the Pharisees with that counterfeit Air of Sorrow and Mortification, that they affected to put on when they fasted. But he would have his Disciples avoid all such Affectation, which are the Effects of Self-love, and to gain the [Matth. vi. 16. Isai. xlii. 4.] Approbation of Men. Isaiah, describing the Qualities of the Messiah, says, he shall not be severe or violent, he shall not fail nor be discouraged till he have set Judgment in the Earth. The Hebrew Text says, He shall not quench, and shall not break: His Reign shall be a Reign of Mildness and Mercy. St. James advises those to pray that are in Sorrow [Jam. v. 13.] . Is any among you afflicted, let him pray.

Sosipater (II)

II. SOSIPATER, of whom St. Paul speaks in his Epistle to the Romans, was his [Rom. xvi. 21.] Kinsman, as some think. Lucius, and Jason, and Sosipater, my Kinsmen, salute you. However, there is some Difficulty in this, since Jason was of Thessalonica, and Sosipater of Berea in Macedonia, and therefore very distant from Tarsus the Country of St. [Origen in Rom. xvi.] Paul. Origen believes they were originally Gentiles, which is another Reason to think they were not the Apostle's Kinsmen. But in what Sense then does he call them his Kinsmen? Is it because they were of the same Nation, of the same Tribe, of the same City, of the same Religion, or that they were only ally'd to him? This is what can only be determin'd at Random. I even think that it may be confidently asserted, that this Sosipater, who was at Rome in the 58th Year of Jesus Christ, when St. Paul wrote his Epistle to the Romans, cannot be the Sosipater of Berea; since he accompanied St. Paul in the same Year 58, in his Journey to Jerusalem, and who probably went with him from Corinth, from whence the Epistle to the Romans was written, to go by way of Macedonia to Jerusalem See Acts xx. 4, 5, 6, &c.

[Acts xx. 4.] This is what we know of Sosipater. He was of Berea, as has been said; and it is very likely St. Paul converted him in the 52d Year of the vulgar Era, when he visited that City. The Latin Text of the Acts, and some Greek Manuscripts, call him Pyrrhus. When St. Paul departed from Corinth, in [Acts xx. 4, 5, 6.] order to go to Jerusalem, in the 58th Year of the vulgar Era, he was accompany'd by Sosipater, by Aristarchus, and some other Disciples, they came with him as far as Philippi, from whence Saint Paul sent them before him to Troas, where they staid for him, so that he could not be at the same Time at Rome, as has been observed. We know not what became of Sosipater after this Time: But the Latins make his Feast on the 25th of June, and[1] call him a Disciple of St. Paul's. The Greeks honour him upon the 28th or 29th of April. They join him with Jason, and call him a Kinsman of St. Paul's. Thus they confound Sosipater of Berea with him of Rome. We have made the same Mistake in our Commentary upon the Acts, and upon the Epistle to the Romans; and I know of no Commentator that has not done the same.

Sosthenes

SOSTHENES, Chief of the Synagogue of Corinth. The Jews of Corinth laying hold of St. Paul, carry'd him before the Tribunal of Gallio, and accused him of attempting to introduce a new Way of worshipping God among them. But the Proconsul sent them back again, and told them, That he would not enter into any Controversy, that had relation only to their own Laws and Ceremonies. Then they seized Sosthenes, the Chief of the Synagogue,[1] and began to beat him before the Tribunal; but Gallio would take no Cognizance of the Matter. This is the Account we have of it in the Acts. 'Tis disputed whether they were Jews or Gentiles, that thus laid hold on Sosthenes and beat him. The Greek printed Copy of the Acts intimates, they were the Gentiles. St. Austin[2] and Bede read in the same manner. They imagin'd, that the Pagans seeing Gallio's ill Reception of the Jews, the more to insult them, had a mind to abuse the Chief of their Synagogue, who was at their Head; whether it was meerly out of Hatred to the Jews, or out of Friendship to St. Paul. This Opinion is follow'd by Cajetan, Lyran, Grotius, and some others.

Others[3] think, that Sosthenes, however Head of the Synagogue, yet might be a Friend and secret Disciple of St. Paul's; and that the other Jews, seeing themselves neglected by Gallio, might vent their Malice upon Sosthenes the Head of their Synagogue. These will also have it, that this is the same Sosthenes whose Name is read, with that of St. Paul, at the Beginning of the first Epistle to the Corinthians, written from Ephesus in the 56th Year of the vulgar Era, three Years after this Scuffle happen'd at Corinth. However, it must be own'd, that this Opinion has not always been universal in the Church; since, in the Time of Eusebius,[4] it was thought, that Sosthenes was one of the seventy-two Disciples, and consequently he could not be Chief of the Synagogue of Corinth twenty Years after the Death of Jesus Christ. The Greeks keep his Feast upon the 8th of December, and give him the Title of an Apostle, as being one of the Seventy. They also make him the first Bishop of Colophon. The Latins, ever since the ninth Century, honour him as a Disciple of St. Paul's, upon the 11th of June, and the 28th of November. See M. de Tillemont, t. 1. Hist. Eccl. Not. 45. upon St. Paul p. 592.

Soul

SOUL. The Word Soul is very equivocal, in the Stile of the Hebrews. It is taken for the Soul that animates Mankind, for that which animates Beasts, for a living [Gen. xiv. 21.] Person: Give me the Souls, says the King of Sodom to Abraham, and take the Goods to thy self. And elsewhere; Abraham took Sarai his Wife, and Lot his Brother's Son, and their Substance that they had gathered, and the Souls that they had gotten in Haran; that is to say, the Slaves they had purchased, or the Children that had been born to them.

[Gen. xxxii. 30. Genesis xxxvii. 22.] The Soul is also taken for the Life: My Life [Heb. Soul] is preserved. And, Kill not his Soul; or, Put him not to Death. My Soul shall live; or, Thou shalt preserve me alive. Those that sought my Soul, or, had a Design upon my Life. Not to take his Soul in vain; or, Not to swear falsely by his Life.

[Numbers ix. 6. Num. xix. 11.] It is taken sometimes for Death. Who were defiled by the dead Body of a Man, or, by the Soul. And, He that toucheth the dead Body [Heb. Soul] of any Man, shall be unclean seven Days.

'Tis often used also for Desire, Love, [Gen. xxiii. 8. Numbers xi. 6.] Inclination. If it be your Mind; Heb. If it please your Soul. And, Our Soul is dried away, or disgusted at the Sight of the Manna. To consume thine Eyes, and to grieve thine Heart; or, Thy Soul shall[1] be dried up with Envy, to see thy Rival in the Temple in thy Place.

Lastly : The Soul is taken for the Life [Deut. xii. 23.] of a Beast. Be sure that thou eat not the Blood; for the Blood is the Life, or Soul: Their Blood is to them instead of a Soul. I [Gen. ix. 9, 10.] establish my Covenant with you, and with your Seed after you; and with every living Creature [Heb. Soul] that is with you, of the Fowl, of the Cattle, and of every Beast of the Earth with you, from all that go out of the Ark, to every Beast of the Earth. [Prov. xii. 10.] And, A righteous Man regardeth the Life of his Beast; he compassionates their Labours, and comforts them; but the tender Mercies of the Wicked are cruel.

There is in this Dictionary a particular Article about BEASTS, wherein we enquire into the Sentiments that the ancient Hebrews and Orientals profess'd concerning their Souls.

A great Number of Questions may be proposed, concerning the Soul of Man, its Nature or Essence, and concerning its Creation. Whether all Souls were created at the Beginning of the World, or whether God still creates them every Day? Whether the Soul be immortal? Whether it passes from Body to Body by a Transmigration? Whether all Souls are equally enlightned and perfect? We shall add a Word or two concerning each of these Questions. We have already treated of this Matter at its full Length in a particular Dissertation, which may be found in the new Collection of our Dissertations, printed in three Volumes, t. 1. p. 460, &c.

When God had form'd the Body of Man out of the Dust, or out of the Mud of the [Gen. ii. 7.] Earth, he breathed into his Nostrils the Breath of Life, and Man became a living Soul, or, a living Man. This Breath of Life, has been consider'd by some, as the Principle [Grot. in Genes.] of the Animal Life of Man, which, in this respect, according to them, is in nothing different from that of a Beast. God gives to Men and to Brutes a Breath of [Gen.vi.17.] Life, or a vivifying Spirit : Omnem carnem in quâ est spiritus vitæ; that is to say, All the Animals that were to be consumed and put to Death by the Waters of the Deluge. 'Tis this Spirit of Life that God withdraws when he pleases, and brings all Flesh to [Job xxxiv. 14.] Corruption: Si Spiritum illius & flatum ad se trahat, deficiet omnis caro simul, says Job. And the Psalmist, speaking of the Animals, to which God gives their Subsistence, says, Thou takest away their [Psal. civ. 29. Eccl. xii.7.] Breath, they die, and return to their Dust. And Solomon; Then shall the Dust return to the Earth as it was, and the Spirit shall return unto God who gave it. And St. Paul, speaking to [Acts xvii. 25.] the Philosophers of Athens, says, That God requires not a bodily Worship, as having need of any thing, seeing he giveth to all Life, and Breath, and all things.

But besides this Spirit, this Breath, which is in us the Principle of animal Life, which is common to Men and to Brutes, and which is scattered and dispersed after Death, we must acknowledge, that there is in Man a spiritual Substance, a reasonable and immortal Soul, the Origin of our Thoughts, of our Desires, of our Reasonings; which distinguishes us from the Brute Creation, and in which chiefly consists [Gen. i. 26.] our Resemblance to God: Faciamus hominem ad imaginem & similitudinem nostram. This Substance must be spiritual, [Plato, p. 78,80,81, 95, &c. Horat. l.1. sat. 2.] because it thinks; it must be immortal, because it is spiritual. Some Philosophers have been of Opinion, that it was a Portion of the Deity: Divinæ particulam auræ. But how can the Deity be conceived to be obnoxious to the Evils and Weaknesses of our Souls; to Sin, to Desire, to Pain?

'Tis true, the Scripture ascribes both to Man and Beast, a Soul, a Spirit, Life, and Respiration; but it allows to Man alone the Privilege of Understanding, the Knowledge of God, Wisdom, Immortality, the Hope of future Happiness, and of eternal Life. It only threatens Men with the Punishments of another Life, and the Pains of Hell.

But are Souls meerly spiritual, without any Mixure of Matter, even the most fine and subtile? This is the Opinion of Christian Philosophers and Divines. The Antients were not convinced of this Principle. The ancient Compiler of the Book of Enoch thought the Angels to be corporeal, and consequently the Souls of Men; since he supposes Souls to be of the same Nature as the Angels. The ancient Greek and Latin Fathers, who read in the Book of Genesis,[2] that the Angels of God saw that the Daughters of Men were handsome, and took to themselves such as they thought fit to be their Wives, and from them produced Giants; those Fathers, I say, made no doubt of their having Bodies, and that they were susceptible of all those Passions, which are the natural Consequences of those Bodies, and that Matter, which they imputed to them.

But as it was very difficult to reconcile this Opinion, of the Materiality of the Soul with its other Properties, which can only agree to a pure Spirit; they persuaded themselves, that the Soul was composed of two Parts; one purely spiritual, which has the Faculty of Thinking, and which approaches to the Nature of God; and the other subtile, penetrating, and approaching to the Nature of very fine Air. The Author of the Book of Enoch, of which we have spoken, says, that the Spirits of the Souls of Men put up their Sighs even to Heaven. The Spirit, or the Understanding is inclosed in the Soul, as in its Case. The Soul, when separated from the Body has still a Resemblance of the Body which it animated, and is, as it were, the Image of it. But the Spirit, the Intellectual Part, has nothing that is sensible or corporeal. When Souls appear to Men after Death, 'tis the Soul, and not the Spirit, that returns. The Soul of Patroclus [Homer. Iliad. xxiii.] appear'd to Achilles; it resembled the Hero it had animated; it had his Stature, his Eyes, his Voice, and even his very Cloaths. When Ulysses descended into Hell, he there [Id. Odyss. A. v.600.] saw the divine Hector; that is to say, his Image, his Soul; for as to himself, or his Spirit, it was with the immortal Gods, partaking of their Joys and Festivals.

The Rabbins also ascribe to Souls, after their Separation from the Body, another subtile Body, which they call the Vessel or Scabbard of the Soul. They hold, that immediately after Death, the Souls of the Wicked are invested with a kind of Cloaths, in which they are condemned to suffer: That the Souls of the Saints, on the contrary, are clad in a magnificent Habit, and with a splendid Body, by the Help of which they are inured to the Brightness and Felicity of their happy State. The Apostles made no Doubt of the Apparition of Spirits, and thought these Spirits to have the Form and Appearance, the Voice, and all the outward Marks of the Persons to which they belonged. The Giants [Job xxvi. 5. Prov. ix. 18. Isai. xiv. 9. Ezekiel xxxi. 32.] of old, who groan'd under the Waters, and the Kings of the Nations that are under the Earth, are represented to us, as having the same Ensigns of Honour, the same outward Form, as they had upon Earth. When Jesus Christ appear'd to his Apostles after his Resurrection, St. Thomas, fearing it was only a meer Phantom, or a Spirit, such as sometimes appear'd, according to the Opinion of the People, and that no Conclusion could be drawn from thence, that the Bodies were risen; our Saviour, to confirm him, and to remove his Scruples, bid him touch him, and lay his Hand upon his Wounds, to convince him that he was really risen: And when all [John xx. 25,26,27.] on a sudden he presented himself in the midst of his Disciples, he says to them, Why are ye troubled, and why do Thoughts arise in your Hearts? Behold my Hands and my Feet, [Luk. xxiv. 38, 39.] that it is I my self: Handle me, and see; for a Spirit has not Flesh and Bones, as ye see me have.

Perhaps it will be said, that these Sentiments of the Apostles are only some Remains of those Prejudices that they had imbibed from Judaism, and from which they were afterwards deliver'd, after the Descent of the Holy Ghost. It may be pretended, that the Opinions of the Rabbins, are Errors extracted from the Philosophy of the Pagans, who not being illuminated by the Light of Faith and Revelation, have form'd to themselves plausible Systems, to explain what was advanced concerning Souls. I shall not stay here, only to explain what the ancient Jews believed about this Article, without giving my self the Trouble to refute it.

We commonly believe, that God creates Souls at the time that Bodies are produced, which they are to inform. The Jews,[3] on the contrary, think that God created them all at the Beginning, and that they come to join themselves to Bodies, drawn by a certain Attraction which it was not easy to resist. The Angels, the Demons, and Souls, are Substances of the same Nature, says Philo[4]; they differ only in Name. As there are good and bad Angels, so there are also good and bad Souls. The Angels and Souls make their Abode in the purest and highest Region of the Air, from whence they descend into the Bodies which they animate, and bring thither either their good or bad Qualities. The Essenians, says Josephus[5] hold Souls to be immortal, and that drawn by a certain natural Attraction, they come to shut themselves up in human Bodies, as in Prisons; that after Death, those who have lived well, withdraw into delicious Places beyond the Ocean; and that those who have lived ill, are banish'd to dark Places, there to suffer the Punishment due to their Crimes. And speaking of the Pharisees, he says,[6] that they of this Sect are persuaded, that Souls that have lived well, return, after Death, to the Place from whence they came, with a Power of still returning into other Bodies, but that the Souls of the Wicked are condemned to eternal Punishment.

[John ix. 2.] When the Apostles saw a Man that was born blind, they ask'd Jesus Christ, If it was the Man's own Fault, or that of his Parents, that he was born blind? They thought therefore, that this Man, before his Birth, might have deserved this Punishment for some Sin, and for the bad Use that he had made of his Liberty. Our Saviour tells them, That it was neither as a Punishment for his own Sins, or for those of his Parents; but that God had thus permitted it, that his Works might be made manifest in the Person of this poor blind Man: Thus reproving their vain Curiosity; and insinuating to them, That he restor'd his Sight to him, for the Glory of his heavenly Father.

The Rabbins teach,[7] that the Souls of such Dead as have not been buried, cannot enter into the Place where the Souls of the Departed are, but that they wander about 'till their Bodies are laid in their Tomb. This Opinion may be observed among the old Greeks and Latins. Homer relates, that Patroclus [Iliad. Ψ. v. 70, &c.] appear'd to Achilles, and said to him; " Bury me quickly, that " I may enter within the Gates of the " Kingdom of Pluto; because that the " Souls, those Phantoms of the Dead, drive " me from thence, and will not suffer me " to pass over the River; but I wander " about the Gates of the vast Palace of " the God of Hell." And Virgil says,

Transportare prius, quàm sedibus ossa quierunt.

They were also of Opinion, that the Souls of the greatest Part of the Jews remain'd a Year in a kind of Purgatory, and in a State that was undetermin'd: That during this Time they frequently visit the Bodies they have animated: That they appear, and may receive Assistance from the Prayers and the Alms that are made for them: That the Apparition of Samuel to Saul was during that Year that immediately follow'd his Decease; but that after this Year is pass'd, the Spirits or Demons have no longer any Power over the Souls of the Dead[8]. Justin Martyr[9] and Origen[10] have thought, that the Souls, even of good Men, were, after Death, under the Power of the Devil, who made them sometimes appear, at the Charms and Evocations [Anast. Antioch. in Adeg. qu. 12.] of Magicians. Anastasius of Antioch strongly supports the Sentiments of Origen, and maintains, that the Souls of the Just were in the Power of the Devil in Hell, before Jesus Christ descended thither, and deliver'd them from thence by his Power.

[Vid. Buxtorf. Synag. Jud. c. 35.] The Thalmudists think, that Souls separate from the Body, know all that passes upon Earth, because they are commonly a whole Year before they enter into Heaven: During all this time they go to and fro through the World, and there learn whatever is said or done there. They do not enter into Heaven, 'till after the Body is reduced to Dust, according [Eccles. xii. 7.] to those Words of Solomon; Then shall the Dust return to the Earth as it was, and the Spirit shall return unto God who gave it. In a Conference that was held in the Presence of the Pope, in the Year 1412,[11] the Jews were accused of lighting up Wax-candles at the Feet or the Head of the Dead, that the Soul might have Light when it came to seek for its Body. It is certain, that even at this Day they light up a Lamp at the Pillow of a dead Man's Bed, after the Body is carried away to be bury'd, and that this Lamp burns there for seven Days[12]: But they are not agreed that this is done to light the Soul at its Return thither.

[Gen. ii. 7. Gen. i. 20. Gen. vi. 3.] The Immortality of the Soul, is a fundamental Doctrine of both Jewish and Christian Religion. The ancient Patriarchs liv'd and dy'd in the Persuasion of this Truth. Moses has acknowledg'd it, when he says, that God breathed into Adam's Nostrils the Breath of Life, and Man became a living Soul. And that God said, Let us make Man in our Image, after our Likeness. And when God had resolved to drown all Mankind by the Waters of the Deluge; " My Spirit shall no longer abide " in Man, because he is Flesh"[13]. 'Twas in the Hope of Immortality and of another Life, that the Patriarchs received the Promises of the Lord. For what Recompence did Abraham receive in this Life, for so many virtuous Actions perform'd by him; he that liv'd all his Life like a Stranger, without possessing one Foot of Land in the Country that had been promis'd him? When this Patriarch died, and was gathered to his Fathers, according to the Language of the Scriptures; this was not to tell us, that his Body was laid in the same Tomb with his Fathers. We know that he was originally of Chaldea, that his Fathers were bury'd there; that as to himself, he was bury'd in the Land of Canaan, in a Sepulchre that he had purchased. It must therefore be meant, that he went to join himself to his Fathers in another Life. The same must be said of Aaron, and of Moses, who at their Deaths were gathered to their Fathers; that is, they enter'd into the Place where their Ancestors were waiting for the Redemption and the Coming of the Messiah.

[Numbers xxiii. 10.] When Balaam the Sorcerer asked of God, that his Death might be like to that of the Just, or of the Israelites, what did he understand by that, but that he might die, like them, in the Hope and Expectation of a happy Resurrection? For as to other Circumstances, the Death of the Hebrews was not different from that of other Nations. Death is a Tribute that all Men alike must pay to Nature.

Another decisive Proof, which shew'd that the Israelites believed the Immortality of the Soul, was the Persuasion they had, that the Souls of the Dead sometimes appear'd again after their Decease. Samuel [1 Sam. xxviii. 13, 14, 15.] appear'd to the Witch of Endor, Jeremiah appear'd to Judas Maccabeus. When the [2 Macc. xv. 14.] Apostles saw Jesus Christ walking towards them upon the Sea, they thought him to be [Mat. xiv. 26.] an Apparition; and when he appear'd to them after his Resurrection, he said to [Luk. xxiv. 39.] them; Handle me, and see, for a Spirit has not Flesh, and Bones, as ye see me have. They believed also a Resurrection to come, the Punishment of the Wicked in another Life, an Abraham's Bosom for the Reception of the Just; they had in their Histories Examples of dead Men raised to Life again, as those that were raised by Elijah and Elisha. Moses had forbid them to consult or [Deuter. xxviii. 18.] inquire of the Dead. All this proves, beyond Contradiction, that the Jews believed the Immortality of the Soul.

If the Saducees have deny'd this Immortality, as also the Resurrection; if the Rabbins Maimonides and Kimchi, who taught the Annihilation of the Soul, were look'd upon by their Nation as a Kind of Hereticks and Innovators; those of whom Solomon has express'd the Sentiments in [Eccles. iii. 19, 20.] these Terms: That which befalleth the Sons of Men, befalleth Beasts, even one thing befalleth them; as the one dieth, so dieth the other, yea, they have all one Breath, so that a Man hath no Pre-eminence above a Beast; for all is Vanity. All go unto one Place, all are of the Dust, and all turn to Dust again. These were the Sentiments of impious and wicked People, disapproved and condemned by all good Israelites, and confuted by Solomon himself, [Eccles. xii. 7.] who says; Then shall the Dust return to the Earth as it was, and the Spirit shall return unto God who gave it.

We have spoke of the Metempsychosis, or Transmigration of Souls, in its particular Place, as also of Purgatory, of the Rewards and Punishments of another Life, in the Article of A Life to come. As for the Souls of Brutes; see BRUTES. The Reader may consult the Dissertation of Ludovicus Capellus, concerning the State of Souls after their Departure; and our Dissertation concerning the Nature of the Soul, and concerning its State after Death, according to the Opinion of the antient Hebrews. Spain

SPAIN. All the World knows this Part of Europe, which is surrounded by the Sea; by the Ocean towards the West and North, by the Mediterranean towards the South and East, and by France towards the East and North. The Hebrews call Spain by [Obad. 20. Bochart. Phaleg. l. 3. c. 7.] the Name of Sepharad. Eusebius, and after him Bochart, think that Tharsis is the Father of the Spaniards. St. Paul [Rom. xv. 24, 28.] tells the Romans, that he hopes to see them as he goes to Spain: But it is doubted whether he was ever there or no. See the Commentators upon Rom. xv. 24. Sparrow [νοίθερτΣ צפור, Passer.] SPARROW, Passer, in Hebrew, Tzipphor. This Hebrew Word is us'd not only for a Sparrow, but also for all Sorts of clean Birds, or such whose Use was not forbid by the Law. The Rabbins Kimchi, Pomarius, and Aquinas, even pretend, that it signifies all Kind of Birds in general; which is very well confirm'd by Bochart[1]. But he shews also, that it signifies particularly a Sparrow. In most of the Passages where Passer or Sparrow is read, there is to be understood a Bird in general. As for Example, Transmigra [Psal. xi. 1.] in montem sicut Passer; Flee as a Bird to your Mountain: For it is known, that Sparrows do not frequent Mountains. And [Psal. cii. 7.] elsewhere, I watch, and am as a Sparrow alone upon the House-top. It ought to be understood of the Owl, that hides itself under the Roofs of Houses. And again, Cedri [Psal. civ. 16, 17.] Libani, illic passeres nidificabunt; The Sparrows do not build in the Cedars of Libanus. In these Passages therefore Passer or Sparrow signifies a Bird in general.

There is a famous Passage in Leviticus[2], where Moses appoints him, that is declared clean from his Leprosy, to bring to the Priest at the Entry of the Tabernacle, two young Sparrows alive, and which it is allow'd to eat; or rather, two Birds alive, and clean. For if they must needs be Sparrows, what need it be added, that they must be such as may be eaten; as if there were two Sorts of 'em? Thus the Seventy read only Birds, and the Interpreter of Origen reads two Hens. The Leprous Person therefore was to bring two clean Birds to the Door of the Tabernacle, with a Bundle of Cedar-branches and Hyssop, tied up with a scarlet String. They fill'd an earthen Vessel with Water; then the Priest took one of the little Birds, and tied it with the scarlet String to the Bundle of Cedar and Hyssop, the Head towards the Handle, and the Tail and Wings towards that Part of the Bundle that was to be dipp'd in the Water. The Leprous Person took the other Bird, sacrificed it, and made its Blood run into the Water provided in the Vessel. Then the Priest dipp'd the Bundle of Cedar and Hyssop, with the living Bird, into the Water mingled with Blood, and with it sprinkled the Leper that was healed. After which he set the Bird at Liberty that had been dipp'd in the Blood of its Companion. The same Ceremony was us'd when the Priest purify'd a House, where any Spot had appear'd of what they call'd the Leprosy of Houses. There were also other Sacrifices of Birds, which were appointed by the Law, chiefly in favour of the poorer Sort; but the Kind of the Birds was ascertain'd. Moses expressly required Doves. See the [Lev. i. 15. v. 8.] Article DOVE.

SPEAR, that pierced the Side of our Saviour. Tavernier says, in his Persian Travels, l. 1. p. 44. that in a Monastery near to Erivan, they shew the Iron of a Spear, or Lance, which, according to the Tradition of the Armenians, is that with which the Side of Jesus Christ was pierced upon the Cross. SPECULA. This Word signifies an Eminence, where a Centinel was placed to watch afar off. It is put for the Name of a Place, 2 Chron. xx. 24. Cum venisset ad Speculam, quæ respicit solitudinem. Spikenard SPIKENARD, or Nard. A Plant that grows in the Indies, whose Root is very small and slender. It puts forth a long, small Stalk, and has several Ears or Spikes even with the Ground, which has given it the Name of Spikenard. The Nard of the Mountain is more odoriferous than that which grows near the Waters. All the Species of Spikenard are hot and drying; they provoke Urine, and are binding, when taken to drink. The Indian Nard, commonly call'd Spica Nardi, if it be genuine, must be of a yellowish Colour, inclining towards purple, and should have its Spikes long, so that the Bristles of the Spike should be large and odoriferous. The Taste should be something sharp and bitter, and dry upon the Tongue, and afterwards leave the Mouth full of a very agreeable Savour. 'Tis thought that Rosemary and Lavender are Kinds of Spikenard. They made a Perfume of great Esteem with the Blade or Spike of the Nard, and of which the Scripture speaks pretty often. The Spouse in the Canticles says;[1] While the King sitteth at his Table, my Spikenard sendeth forth the Smell thereof. And in the Gospel, St. Mark[2] speaks of the Perfume of Spikenard; and St. John[3] mentions Nardus pisticus, by which several understand the pure and unsophisticated Nard.

[Plin. l. xii. c. 12.] But there is great Probability, that the Copiers of St. John have put Nardi pistici instead of Nardi spicati, or Spikenard. The Spikenard, as we call it, or the Blade of the Nard, is the most esteem'd for making of Perfumes: And the Perfume taken from the Leaves is much less valuable. Cacumina Nardi in aristas se spargunt, says Pliny, ideo geminâ dote Nardi spicas & folia celebrant.

Spirit

[רוחRuach. Πνεῦμα, Spiritus.] SPIRIT. In Hebrew, Ruach; in Greek, Pneuma; in Latin, Spiritus. In Scripture the Word Spirit is taken sometimes for the Holy Ghost, the third Person of the Holy Trinity, who inspires the Prophets, animates good Men, pours his Unction into our Hearts, imparts to us Light and Comfort, in whose Name we are baptized, as well as in those of the Father and Son; lastly, that enlivening Spirit who proceeds from the Father and the Son.

[Gen. vii. 15. Num. xvi. 22. Job xii. 10.] At other times it is taken for the Breath, the Respiration, the animal Life, which belongs as well to Men as other Animals: This Breath that God has given us, and which he takes away again, when he takes away our Lives.

It signifies also the reasonable Soul which animates us, and which preserves its Being, even after the Death of the Body. That spiritual, reasoning, and chusing Substance, capable of eternal Happiness.

[Psal. x. 7. 1 Kings xix. 11. Psal. xlvii. 8.] The Word Spiritus is sometimes put also for the Wind: Thus, Spiritus procellarum. Spiritus grandis & fortis. In spiritu vehementi conteres naves Tharsis, &c. In all which Places Spiritus signifies only a strong Wind.

Spiritus is also taken to signify an Angel, a Demon, a Ghost, a Soul separated from the Body. It is said in the Acts, that the Saducees deny'd the Existence of Angels and Spirits. Jesus Christ appearing to [Acts xxiii. 8. Luk. xxiv. 39. Heb. i. 14. 1 Sam. xviii. 10. xvi. 14. xix. 9.] his Disciples, said to 'em; Handle me, and see; for a Spirit hath not Flesh and Bones, as ye see me have. In St. Paul the good Angels are call'd Ministring Spirits. 'Tis said in the Book of Samuel, that the evil Spirit from God came upon Saul. And in the Gospel the Devils are often call'd unclean Spirits, evil Spirits, Spirits of Darkness.

Lastly, Spirit is sometimes taken for the Disposition of the Heart, or of the Body; because it was presumed, that the good or evil Inclinations of each of these proceeded from good or bad Spirits. Thus is to be understood, [Numb. v. 14. Hos. iv. 2. Zech. xii. 10. Luke xiii. 10. Eccl. xv. 5. Isai. xi. 2.] a Spirit of Jealousy, a Spirit of Fornication, a Spirit of Prayer, a Spirit of Infirmity, a Spirit of Wisdom and Understanding, a Spirit of Fear of the Lord. and such like.

Concerning the Spirit that inspired the Prophets, and which caus'd the Motions and Agitations; see the Article ENTHU- SIASM.

Distinguishing or Discerning of Spirits. This was a Gift of God, which consisted in discerning, whether a Man was really inspired of the Spirit of God, or whether he was a false Prophet and Impostor, who only follows the Impulse of his own Spirit, or of [1 Cor. xii. 10.] the Spirit of Satan. St. Paul speaks of the discerning of Spirits, among the miraculous Gifts that God granted to the Faithful, and the first Settlement of Christianity. And St. John in his Epistle; Beloved, believe not [1 John iv. 1.] every Spirit, but try the Spirits, whether they are of God: Because many false Prophets are gone out into the World.

To quench the Spirit. St. Paul says to [1 Thes. v. 19.] the Thessalonians, that they ought not to quench the Spirit. Spiritum nolite extinguere. The Spirit may be quenched in these two ways; first, by forcing, in some manner, the Holy Ghost to withdraw himself from us, by Sin, by Irregularity of Manners, by Vanity, by Avarice, by Negligence, and by other Crimes that are contrary to Charity, to Truth, to Peace, and to the other Gifts of the Holy Ghost. Secondly, the Spirit is quenched when we do such Actions as make God to take from us his supernatural Gifts and Favours, such as Prophecy, the Gift of Tongues, the Gift of healing Diseases. For tho' these Gifts were of mere Grace, and that God may communicate them sometimes to wicked People, yet he has often granted them to the Prayers of the Faithful, and took them away again, to punish their Abuse or Contempt of them.

[Ephes. iv. 30.] To grieve the Spirit, may be also taken in two ways; either in the Sense of an internal Grace, habitual or actual. Or in the Sense of miraculous Gifts, with which God favour'd the primitive Christians. We grieve the Spirit of God, by withstanding his holy Inspirations, the Motions of his Grace, or by living in a luke-warm and negligent Manner. We grieve him also by despising his Gifts, or neglecting them, by abusing his Favours, either out of Vanity, Curiosity, or Negligence. And in a contrary Sense, we stir up the Spirit of God which is in us, by the Practice of Vertue, by our Exactness in complying with his Inspirations, by Fervour in his Service, by renewing our Gratitude, &c.

The Spirit, as it is oppos'd to the Flesh, is put for the Soul by which we are animated. [Gen. vi. 3.] " My Spirit shall no longer abide " in Man, because he is but Flesh. " I will destroy all Mankind, I will take from them my Breath that I gave them, and the Soul that I infused into them, because they are all carnal, debased by carnal Inclinations, by brutish Passion: Because, in a Word, all Flesh have corrupted their Way upon the Earth; they have in a great measure forgot that they are reasonable Creatures, and have plunged themselves into the State and Condition of Beasts.

Spirit, in the moral Sense, is oppos'd to [Rom. vii. 25.] the Flesh. With the Mind, or Spirit, I myself serve the Law of God; but with the [Rom. viii. 13.] Flesh the Law of Sin. And again; If ye live after the Flesh, ye shall die; but if ye through the Spirit do mortify the Deeds of [Gal. v. 19, 22.] the Body, ye shall live. And elsewhere; Now the Works of the Flesh are manifest, which are these; Adultery, Fornication, Uncleanness, Lasciviousness, &c. But the Fruit of the Spirit is Love, Joy, Peace, Long-suffering, Gentleness, Goodness, Faith, Meekness, Temperance.

The Spirit of Jesus Christ, which animates true Christians, and the Children of God, and which distinguishes them from the Children of Darkness, who are animated by the Spirit of the World; is the Gift of Grace, and of Adoption, the holy Spirit that is poured into our Hearts, and which gives us Confidence to say to God, [Rom. viii. 5.] My Father, My Father. Those that are animated by this Spirit have crucified the Flesh, with the Affections and Lusts thereof. [Gal. v. 24. Rom. viii. 9.] If we live in the Spirit, let us also walk in the Spirit. And elsewhere; Ye are not in the Flesh, but in the Spirit, if so be that the Spirit of God dwell in you. Now if any Man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of his. The Spirit of Jesus Christ animated [1 Pet. i. 11.] the Prophets, and inclined them industriously to inquire at what Time that should happen, which they had foretold concerning his Passion and Glory.

[1 Pet. iii. 18,19,20.] Christ was put to Death in the Flesh, but quickned by the Spirit, by which also he went and preached unto the Spirits in Prison; which sometime were disobedient, when once the long-suffering of God waited in the Days of Noah. This Passage has very much perplex'd the Commentators; and indeed there are Difficulties in it that can hardly be surmounted. The Commentators may be consulted, who have treated expressly on this Subject. This is the Sense that to us appears the most simple and reasonable. Jesus Christ, after his Resurrection, by the Power of the same holy Spirit who had rais'd him up, descended into Hell, or into the Prison, into the Place where the Souls of the holy Patriarchs were detain'd, and where they waited for his Coming. He proclaim'd Deliverance to them, and took them out of this Confinement. And as to such Spirits as had been heretofore incredulous in the Times of Noah, to the Spirit of Jesus Christ, who had caus'd the Truth to be declared to them, and who had exhorted them to Repentance in the Time of Noah; Noah; but who would not hearken to this Invitation, and therefore were dead in Hardness and Incredulity; these also were inform'd of the Coming of Jesus Christ, and acquainted with his Descent into Hell; but this News served only to increase their Remorse, their Punishment, and Despair.

Spirits. Apparitions of Spirits. The Notion, that Spirits, Angels, Demons, the Souls of the Dead, sometimes appear to Men, is universally spread among all Nations. It is founded upon an infinite Number of Histories, and Experiments, but chiefly upon the Authority of the sacred Books. The Books of the Old and New Testament are full of the Apparitions of Angels and Demons; and there we may also observe the Opinion, that supposes the Return and Appearing of the Spirits and Souls of dead Persons, in the Story of the raising the Ghost of Samuel by the Witch of Endor, in what is said by Jesus Christ to his Apostles; Handle me, and see, for a Spirit has not Flesh and Bones, as ye see me have: In what was imagin'd by the Apostles, [39.] when they saw Jesus Christ in the Night walking upon the Water. Dicentes quia phantasma est. And in the Acts of the [Acts xii. 13, 15.] Apostles, when St. Peter stood knocking at the Door, they thought it was his Angel, because they knew he had been put into Prison but a little before. And in the Books of the Maccabees, the Highpriest Onias, and the Prophet Jeremiah, appear'd in a Dream to Judas Maccabeus.

[Job xxx. 10. Spy

[Gen. xlii. 16.] SPY. The Patriarch Joseph pretended to arrest his Bretheren, and did in Effect secure his Brother Simeon in Prison, feigning that he took them for Spies. According to the Rules of War, a Spy taken in a Camp deserves to be hanged. Moses sent twelve [Num. xiii. 2, 3, &c.] Spies to explore the Land of Canaan, and to find out the Nature of the Country, what was its Strength, its Cities, its Inhabitants. They departed from the Camp at Paran, were forty Days in making the Tour of the Country, and return'd to the Camp of the Israelites loaded with a Vine-branch and its Grapes, which they carry'd on a Staff between two, as well because of the Largeness of the Fruit, as for fear of bruising it. When they return'd, they made their Report to the People, saying; "The Country where we have been is indeed a Country flowing with Milk and Honey, as may be understood from the Fruits we have brought with us; but the Inhabitants are robust and warlike, and the Cities are very strong and well fortify'd. We have seen there Giants of the Race of Anak. Amalek dwells to the South, the Hittites, the Jebusites, and the Ammorites, in the Mountains, and the Canaanites along the Sea-coast." Then the People began to murmur, saying; "We shall never be able to become Masters of this Country, [Num. xiv. 1, 2, 3, &c.] because the People that inhabit it are stronger than we are." But Caleb, one of the Messengers, endeavour'd to encourage them, saying; "Let us go and take Possession of this Country, which we shall easily be able to accomplish." The others, on the contrary, disparaged the Land, insisted upon the great Difficulty there would be to conquer it, and said; "This Country devours its Inhabitants, and the People we have seen are of an extraordinary Size: We saw there Monsters of Men, Giants of the Race of Anak, in Comparison of whom we are but Grasshoppers." At these Words all the People began to cry, and bewail'd themselves all that Night, loudly exclaiming against Moses and Aaron, and saying one to another; "Let us set a Captain over us, that may lead us back to Egypt." Joshua and Caleb used all their Endeavours in vain to pacify them; they took up Stones to stone them.

But of a sudden the Glory of the Lord appear'd over the Tabernacle of the Covenant, directing his Voice to Moses, and threatned to smite the whole Congregation, and utterly to destroy them. But Moses interceded for them, and obtain'd, that they might not all die at once. But the Lord swore, that none of those, who had thus [Josh. ii. 1, 2, 3, &c.] murmur'd against him, should see the Land which he had promis'd to their Fathers, except Caleb and Joshua, who had continued faithful to him.

Mention is again made of Spies in the Book of Joshua. This Captain of the People of the Lord being ready to pass over Jordan at the Head of the Israelites, to put them in Possession of the Land of Promise, sent two Men to Jericho, to learn the Condition of that Place. They went thither, and entered into the House of a Woman named Rahab. She entertain'd them; and when the King of Jericho had Intelligence of their Arrival, he sent to demand them of Rahab. But she concealed them upon the Platform of her House, and told the Messengers, that they went out again a little before Night, and before the Gates of the City were shut. As soon as the Messengers were gone away, she went to the Spies, and told them, that she knew the Lord had delivered up the Land of Canaan to the Hebrews, and that Fear and Consternation had seized all the Inhabitants; that the Fame of the Miracles that the Lord had wrought in their Favour, was spread far and near, and struck the whole Land with a Panick. She desired them, as an Acknowledgement of what she had done to save their Lives, that they would promise her with an Oath, to preserve her and her Family, when they should become Masters of Jericho. The Spies made her this Promise, and she let them down by a Rope, over the Wall of the City, which was just behind her House, and they returned back to Joshua safe and found. St. Paul commends the Faith of Rahab, who received and entertained the Spies.

Stacte

[Heb. ii. 31.] STACTE. This Greek Word signifies the Gum that distils from the Tree which produces Myrrh. Salmasius distinguishes Stacte from Plaste, in that Stacte is the liquid Part of the Myrrh, which is brought from the Myrrh by Contusion, and which was the purest and most valuable Part of it. It was also called simply, The Perfume, or Myrrh. Plaste was the harder Part, which remain'd after the Myrrh call'd Stacte had been squeezed from it, and which was reduced into Lumps or Cakes; so that it was rather a Kind of Incense than a Perfume. Stacte is found in several Places in Scripture; [in the Latin Vulgate.] For Example, Gen. xxxvii. 25. where it is said, that Ishmaelitish Merchants were carrying into Egypt, aromata, & resinam, & staćten. And Gen. xliii. 11. where Jacob bids his Sons carry with them some Stacte, to the Governour of Egypt, who was Joseph. The Hebrew says, Zeri and Lath. 'Tis agreed, the first signifies Resina, Balm; But the Signification of Lat or Lath is unknown. Some explain it by Myrrh, others by Turpentine, or Chesnuts, or Ladanum, or Ledum, which is a certain resinous Liquor distilling from a kind of Cistus.

Moses also speaks of Stacte[1] in the Enumeration of the Drugs that were to enter into the Composition of the Perfume which was to be offer'd in the holy Place upon the golden Altar. But in this Place the Hebrew reads Neteph, which certainly signifies liquid Myrrh, or in Form of a perfum'd Oil.

Lastly, Ezekiel also speaks of Stacte;[2] but the Hebrew has Kidda, which the Septuagint translate by Iris; and St. Jerome in Exod. xxx. 24. by Casia odorifera. It is very likely that it signifies the Essence of Iris.

Stachys

STACHYS, a Disciple of St. Paul's, of whom he makes honourable mention in his [Rom. xvi. 9. Niceph. Calist. l. 2. c. 39.] Epistle to the Romans. We know of none of the Particulars of his Life that can be rely'd on. Nicephorus Calistus assures us, that St. Andrew came and preached for some Time at Byzantium, afterwards call'd Constantinople; but being obliged to leave it, he ordain'd St. Stachys for Bishop there. The Menæa of the Greeks set down the Feast of St. Stachys on the 31st of October; in which they are follow'd by the Roman Martyrology, which also makes him Bishop of Byzantium, and which assures us, 'tis to him that St. Paul makes his Recommendations in the Epistle to the Romans, and whome he calls his well-beloved. The Greeks give him the Title of an Apostle, and put him among the seventy-two Disciples. But we find nothing of all this in any Authors of greater Antiquity than Nicephorus.

Stadium

[Salmas. ad Solin. p. 521. צריZeri לטLat.] STADIUM, a Furlong, a Measure of Length, which consisted of one hundred and twenty-five geometrical Paces. Eight Furlongs make a Mile, and three Miles make a common League. See the Table of Measures.Stadium is also taken for the Place where they perform'd their publick Exercises of Running. St. Paul alludes to these Spectacles and these Exercises, when he [1 Cor. ix. 24.] says, They which run in a Race (in Stadio) run all, but one receiveth the Prize. These Places were call'd Stadia, because they were distinguish'd into Courses or Distances by certain resting Places; so that some of the Racers run but one Distance, some two or more, each according to his Strength.

Staff

STAFF. Anna says of her Son Tobias, [Tob. v. 17.] Is he not the Staff of our Hand? God threatens Moab to break the Staff of his Glory, his Strength, in which he placed his Confidence: How is the strong Staff Jer.

xlviii. 17. broken, and the beautiful Rod! When the Prophets threaten with a Famine, they say, [Ezek. iv. 16.] that God will break the Staff of Bread, or reduce them to the utmost Necessity. Do [2 Kings xviii. 21. Ezek.xxix.] you hope to find Assistance in that Staff of a Reed, in the King of Egypt? He is a brittle Reed, which will break under every one [Isai.xxxvi. 6. Isai. x. 5.] that would lean upon it, and its Splinters will enter into his Hand, and wound him. The Wicked shall be as a Staff in the Hand of God; he shall make use of it to prove the Good: Assur virga furoris mei, & baculus, [Zechar. viii. 4.] &c. In Jerusalem shall still be seen old Men leaning upon their Staffs. Jacob says, that [Genesis xxxii, 10.] he passed over Jordan, having only a Staff in his Hand, and that he passed back again with two great Troops of Persons and Flocks of Cattle. God commanded the Israelites, when they ate the Passover, to have a Staff in their Hands, like Travellers. [Exod. x.] David makes a kind of Imprecation against Joab, saying, that there should always be [2 Sam. iii. 29. מחזיק בפלך] some of his Family that should walk with a Staff; that is to say, there should always be lame Persons. St. Jerom has translated it by Persons handling the Spindle: Tenentes fusum.

Star

STAR, Stella; in Hebrew, Chochab. Under [ככבChochab. Stella, Sidus.] the Name of Stars, the ancient Hebrews comprehended all the heavenly Bodies, Constellations, and Planets; in a word, all the Luminaries, except the Sun and the Moon. The Scripture often expresses it self in such a manner, as should seem to attribute Sense and Understanding to the Stars. The Sun and Moon were call'd, by the idolatrous Israelites, the King and Queen of Heaven; and the Stars were (as it were) [Deut. xvii. 3.] their Army and Militia. Both one and the other have often received those Honours, which were only due to the Creator.

The Number of the Stars was look'd upon as infinite: And the Psalmist, to exalt the Power and Magnificence of God, says, that he numbers the Stars, and calls them by their Names. He is described as a King taking a Review of his Army, and gives every one of his Soldiers such a Name as he thinks fit. When the Scripture would express a very extraordinary Increase and Multiplication, it uses the Similitude of the Stars of Heaven, or of the Sands of the Sea: [Gen. xv. 5. xxii. 17. xxvi. 4. Exodus xxxii. 13, &c. Job xxv. 5. Job xxxviii. 7. Job ix. 7.] I will multiply thy Seed as the Stars of the Heaven, and as the Sand which is upon the Sea-shore. Job says, that in the Eyes of God, the Stars themselves are impure; that they form'd a kind of Concert of Musick to his Honour, at the Beginning of the Creation; and that God locks them up as with a Key, and hinders them from appearing, but when he pleases.

[Ezekiel xxxii. 7. Joel ii. 1. & iii. 20. Amos v. 26. ככב אלהיכם Mat. xxiv. 29. Mark xiii. 25. Job ix. 9. & xxxviii. 31.] In Times of Disgrace and Publick Calamity, 'tis said, the Stars with-hold their Light, and are cover'd with Darkness; [Numbers xxiv. 17.] that they fall from Heaven, and disappear. These are figurative and emphatick Expressions, which are only weaken'd and enervated by being explain'd. Amos says, that the Israelites in the Wilderness carried with them a Star, to which they paid divine Honours: Ye have born ---- the Star of your God, which ye made to your selves. The Hebrew says, Stellam Deorum vestrorum. Job speaks in two Places, of four of the principal Constellations that were known to the Antients; the Bear, Orion, the Hyades, and the Star of the South.

[Gen. i. 14, 15, 16. Job xxxviii. 7. Isai. xiv. 13.] As to the Star that Balaam foretold should come out of Jacob, and which primarily is understood of Jesus Christ, who is the true Star which fills the World with its Brightness; and secondarily, of that material Star that appear'd to the Wise Men, and guided them from the East to Bethlehem; we have spoken of it under the Article MAGI, and in our Dissertation upon the same Subject, which we have prefix'd to our Commentary upon St. Matthew.

Stars

[Deut. iv. 19.] STARS. To give the Hebrews a Caution against the Idolatry that prevail'd through almost all the East, of worshipping the Sun, Moon, and Stars; Moses informs us, in the Beginning of Genesis, that God gave them their Being, and that he separated them from that Mass of Matter which he had produced out of Nothing. Job describes the Stars to us, as praising the Creator at the Beginning of the World. And Isaiah makes Lucifer say at his Rebellion; I will ascend into Heaven, I will exalt my Throne above the Stars of God.

The Beauty and Splendor that Men have observed in the Stars, and the great Advantages that they derive from thence; the wonderful Order that they have discover'd in their Courses; the Influence that has been ascribed to them, in the Production and Preservation of Animals, of Fruits, Plants, and Minerals, have prevail'd with almost all People of the World to impute to them Life, Knowledge, Power, and to pay them a sovereign Worship and Adoration. Moses says; Lest thou lift up thine Eyes unto Heaven, and when thou seest the Sun, and the Moon, and the Stars, even all the Host of Heaven, shouldst be driven to worship them, and serve them, which the Lord thy God hath divided unto all Nations under the whole Heaven. And Job says; If I beheld the Sun when it shined, or the Moon [Job xxxi. 26,27,28.] walking in Brightness; and my Heart hath been secretly enticed, or my Mouth hath kissed my Hand, (by way of Adoration): This also were an Iniquity to be punished by the Judge; for I should have denied the God that is above. The Worship of Baal, of Astarte, of the Queen of Heaven, of the Host of Heaven, &c. with which the Jews were often reproach'd, was no other than the [Acts vii. 42.] Worship of the Stars, especially of the Sun and Moon. St. Stephen, in the Acts, after having spoke of the Worship of the Golden Calf by the Israelites in the Wilderness, says, that God gave them up to their Blindness, and that they paid their Adoration to the Host of Heaven, and that they carry'd in the Desart the Tent of Moloch, and the Ark of their God Remphan. We examine elsewhere into the Meaning of these Words of St. Stephen.

The Jews, both ancient and modern, ascribe great Influence to the Stars. Philo[1] imputes to them a great Part of whatever happens upon the Earth. He says elsewhere,[2] that the Stars are not only Animals, but even most pure Spirits; that the Air is replete with Animals, or Spirits, which are continually descending, to animate Bodies. He had borrow'd these Notions from his Master Plato. Origen was guilty of the same Mistake[3]. The Rabbins also ascribe Intelligence to the Heaven and the Stars[4]: They maintain, that they have a Knowledge of God; that they know themselves; that God is the Object of their Desires; that their Knowledge and Actions are more perfect than those of Men.

Maimonides says, that among wise Men there is no Controversy about the Stars: They all agree, that they have a great Influence upon the Generation and Corruption of sublunary Bodies.[5] Some impute the Direction of Affairs rather to the Angels, than the Stars; but others maintain, that it is the Stars which pour out their Influences upon the Earth: Every Herb, according to them, has its particular Star, from whence it receives its Virtue; which Virtue is even extended to the Body of Man, and to the principal Actions of his Life. However, this does not take away the Liberty of Man; the Planets lay them under no Necessity: Their Effects are chiefly confined to the Body; as Health, Complexion, and whatever depends thereon.

[Job xxxviii. 7.] The sacred Books sometimes seems to ascribe Knowledge to the Stars: We are told, that the Stars praised the Lord at the Beginning of the World. The Sun, the Moon, and the Stars are excited to praise the Lord. The Moon is said to withdraw her Light, to obey the Voice of Joshua: That the Sun stopt its Course, at [Psalm xviii. 6.] the Command of this General of God's People: That the Sun rises as a Bridegroom, that comes out of his nuptial Chamber. Moses seems to favour their Opinion, who impute Influences to the Sun and Moon, when he promises to [Deuter. xxxiii. 14. Job ix. 7.] Joseph the precious Fruits brought forth by the Sun, and the precious things put forth by the Moon. Job says, that the Lord commanded the Sun, and it riseth not; and sealeth up the Stars. And the Psalmist [Psal. ciii. 19. Eccl. i. 5.] says, that the Sun knows the Time and Place of his Setting. And Solomon says, The Sun also ariseth, and the Sun goeth down, and hasteth to his Place where he arose. This is not unlike that Expression of [Ecclus. xlii. 16. Ecclus. xi. & iii. 2. Baruch v. 59.] Ecclesiasticus; Sol illuminans per omnia respicit, & gloriâ Domini plenum est opus ejus. And again; Sol in aspectu annunciaus, in exitu vas admirabile, opus excelsi. Baruch says, that the Sun and the Moon, those shining Luminaries, are obedient to the Lord.

But all these Expressions, which are meerly popular, are not to be understood literally; for then we must say, that the Earth, the Trees, the Waters, are animated, since we find in Scriptures some Expressions that would insinuate as much. All the Creatures glorify God, bless the Lord, and obey him, each in its Way. If we allow any thing more to the Sun, the Moon, or the Stars, 'tis because they are Creatures of greater Perfection, and by which the Glory and Magnificence of God shine forth in a more eminent and conspicuous manner.

Amos, speaking of the Idolatry of the Israelites in the Wilderness, informs us,[6] that they carry'd along with them the Star of their Gods. 'Tis demanded, what this Star was, or this Constellation? For under the Name of Star, the Jews comprehended the Planets, and all the heavenly Bodies, exclusive of the Sun and Moon. Some[7] imagine it was a Representation of the Planet Saturn, and this Opinion is very common. Others think it was the Moon; but I know not whether she was ever comprehended under the Name of Star. The Septuagint have read, the Star of Remphan your God. For this, see the Article REMPHAN, that we may not repeat what is said elsewhere.

The Star foretold by Balaam in this Passage, There shall come a Star out of Jacob, [Numbers xxiv. 17.] and a Sceptre shall rise out of Israel, and shall smite the Corners of Moab, and destroy all the Children of Sheth. According to the modern Jews, this Star signifies King David, who conquer'd the Moabites, and reduced them under his Obedience. But the ancient Jews, as the Paraphrasts Onkelos and Jonathan, explain it of the Messiah, which is certainly the literal and natural Sense of this Passage. Some have thought, a that in this Place Balaam foretold the Appearance of that real Star, which arose at the Time of our Saviour's Birth, and which guided the Magi into Judea, to see the Person whose Birth was declared by that Star. But this Star did not come out of Jacob; and that cannot be apply'd to this Star, which is said there, which plainly points at a Ruler, a Conqueror, a great Prince, and, in a word, a Messiah. The Jews were so well convinced of this, at the Time of Jesus Christ, and some Time afterwards, that the famous Impostor Bar-caliba caus'd himself to be call'd Barcocheba, the Son of the Star, pretending to be the Messiah, and involved the Jews of Palestine in a Revolt, which compleated the Ruin of that unfortunate Nation.

The Star that appeared to the Magi, and conducted them to Bethlehem, where our Saviour was just born, has furnish'd Matter for many Conjectures. Some of the Antients thought,[8] that this was a new Star, purposely created to proclaim to Mankind the Coming of the Messiah. Others were of Opinion,[9] that it was a kind of Comet, which appear'd in the Air after an extraordinary manner. Others have pretended,[10] that it was an Angel cloathed with a luminous Body, in Form of a Star, which, by his Motion, directed towards Judea, excited in the Magi an Inclination to follow it, and to search out what it portended. Several of the Fathers have vindicated this Opinion, founded upon this; That this Star appear'd to be Rational and Intelligent, appearing and disappearing, stopping and going forward, in such manner as was necessary for the Conduct of the Magi to the proper Place. Lightfoot conjectures,[11] that it was the same Light as had appear'd to the Shepherds, who were feeding their Flocks near to Bethlehem; and which having been observed by the Magi, made them imagine, that in this Place the Messiah was born, who had been so long expected.

The Author of the Imperfect Commentary upon St. Matthew says, that this Star descended upon the Mountain where the Magi had expected it for several Ages; that it appear'd to them, having a little Child in the middle of it, and a Cross at top; that this Child spoke to them, and order'd them to take a Journey into Judea. Epiphanius[12] has follow'd the same Tradition, which is taken out of the Apocryphal Book of Seth. Some have advanced,[13] that this Star was the Holy Ghost, which appear'd to the Magi under the Form of a Star, as it afterwards appear'd in the Likeness of a Dove, at the Baptism of Jesus Christ. St. Ignatius the Martyr says,[14] that this Star cast a Brightness which exceeded that of all the Stars in the Heaven; that the Sun, Moon, and the other Stars, waited on it, and follow'd it, by way of Respect; that the whole World was in Admiration at the Sight of its Splendour. St. Austin[15] calls it, with Reason, the magnificent Tongue of Heaven, which spoke to the Magi, and instructed them, in some manner, concerning the Word being made Flesh, and reduced to Silence: Quid erat nisi magnifica lingua cœli?

It is not agreed, at what Time the Star appear'd to the Magi. Several think it appear'd to them two Years before the Birth of Christ, and that the Magi setting out from Home as soon as it appear'd, were two Years upon their Journey.[16] Others will have it, that it did not arise 'till the Moment of our Saviour's Birth: And these are yet divided; for some think that the Magi did not arrive at Bethlehem 'till two Years after the Birth of our Saviour.[17] Others make them arrive there thirteen Days after this Birth; and that they might make the greater Haste, they assign them Dromedaries to ride upon. There are those that think, that the Star appear'd from the Moment of Christ's Incarnation, or even from that of John the Baptist.

There are still some Difficulties started, whether this Star was seen by every Body, or only by the Magi. Some think that every Body saw it,[18] that all People were Witnesses of this Phenomenon; that some, not knowing the Mystery of it, contented themselves to wonder at it; and that it was to the Magi only that God revealed the Signification of it, and gave them an Inclination to follow it. Others, on the contrary,[19] believe that few People saw it; that the Magi themselves only saw it by fits, and from time to time, when it was necessary to them as a Guide, and to encourage them to persevere in their Resolution. Lastly: The Generality will have it,[20] that the Magi saw it for the greatest Part of their Journey, and that it disappear'd to them only when they arriv'd at Jerusalem; then they found themselves under a Necessity of Enquiry, where they might find the new-born King of the Jews.[21]

Stater

STATER, a Piece of Money of the Value of one Shekel. Our Saviour sent St. [Mat. xvii. 26. Exod. xxx. 13. 1 Sam. ix. 8, 16, 18. רבע שקל Jer. xxxii. 9. שבע שקלים septem Staters. Gen. xix. 26. ותהי נצב מלח] Peter to fish in the Lake of Tiberias: This Apostle caught there a Fish with his Anglerod, which had a Stater in its Mouth. This served to pay for Christ and himself, what they ow'd to the Temple, which was half a Shekel apiece. In the First Book of Samuel, a quarter of a Shekel, is translated by quarta pars Sta-teris; and in Jeremy, St. Jerom translates Shekel by Stater. See also Ezek. iv. 10. & v. 1.

Statue of Salt

STATUE of Salt. The Scripture tells us, that Lot's Wife was changed into a Statue of Salt. See LOT. Many Questions have been started about this Metamorphosis of Lot's Wife into a Statue or Pillar of Salt; and many Hypotheses have been made, to explain the Words of Moses in a plain and literal manner. His Text only tells us, that Lot's Wife look'd behind her, and became a Pillar of Salt. Some a explain it thus: She became without Motion, like a Statue of Salt. Others; She dy'd with Grief in the same Place, and there remain'd upright like a Statue. Salt is a Symbol of Hardness and Incorruptibility: Otherwise; She continued as a Statue in that Country of Salt, in the Land of Sodom, which was a Country of Nitre and Salt. But these Explications seem to be a little too violent.

The Antients were of Opinion, that Lot's Wife thinking to walk very softly, was suddenly changed into a Statue of Metalline and solid Salt, such as are to be seen in some Mountains of Hungary, Poland, and Moscovy; that she still preserved the Shape of a Woman; and tho' Travellers often carry'd away Pieces of her, to satisfy their Curiosity, yet the Statue did not diminish, nor did it lose any thing of its Bigness[1]. Irenæus[2] and Tertullian[3] add, that she was still subject to such Infirmities as were incident to her Age.

Dicitur & vivens alio sub corpore sexûs, Munificos solito dispungere sanguine menses.

Josephus assures us,[4] that he had seen this Statue; and the Chaldee Paraphrasts of Jerusalem, and Jonathan the Son of Uziel, say, that she will continue there to the End of the World. Several Travellers tell us, that they have seen it; and it is a common and popular Opinion, that she still continues there near the Dead-sea.

Others pretend,[5] that the Text of Moses may be explain'd, by saying, that the Fire that fell upon Sodom, and which inflamed the whole Country round about, having, by its Activity, prepared Passages for the Particles of Salt, or Nitre, in the Parts of the Body of this Woman, consolidated it, and in some measure imparted their Essence to it, and render'd her like a Pillar of Salt. Such Changes are not without Example. Aventine[6], in the Annals of the Bavarians relates, that above fifty Peasants that were employ'd in milking their Cows, were infected by a poisonous Air at the Time of an Earthquake, and were changed into Statues which were like Salt. There are many Instances of such Changes[7].

In our Commentary upon Genesis we have proposed some Conjectures about the Manner in which this might be effected. We have observed, that the Places about the Dead-sea and Arabia Petræa, had a particular Quality of Petrification; that solid Bodies, that continued there for any Time, might easily be petrify'd; that the Egyptians had Bodies that were embalmed and made stiff as any Statues, which might have been call'd Statues of Salt, or salted Statues. Herodotus and Diodorus Siculus make use of the Word Salting or Pickling, when they speak of the Embalment of those Bodies we call Mummies. Thus Moses might say, that Lot's Wife having fall'n down upon the Ground, she there soon became like a salted or embalmed Statue. See the Commentary upon Genesis xix. 26.

Statue of Nebuchadnezzar; or rather, the Statue that Nebuchadnezzar saw in his Dream,[8] which was very large and terrible to look at: Its Head was of Gold, its Breast and its Arms of Silver, the Belly and Thighs of Brass, the Legs of Iron, and the Feet partly of Iron and partly of Clay. Daniel's Explication was, that the Empire of Nebuchadnezzar, that is, of the Chaldeans, was represented by the Head of Gold; the Empire of the Persians, founded by Cyrus, was represented by the Breast and Arms of Silver; the Empire of the Grecians, founded by Alexander the Great, was insinuated by the Belly and Thighs of Brass: The Empire of the Romans was denoted by the Legs of Iron; or rather, this Empire being divided into two, is that of the Seleucidæ in Syria, and of the Lagidæ in Egypt. The Attempts that the Kings of Egypt and Syria made, to unite their Interests by Intermarriages, not succeeding, are represented by the Feet, being partly of Iron, and partly of Clay. The little Stone that comes from the Mountain, and which overturns the Statue, is the Empire of the Romans, under which appear'd that of the Messiah, which[9] saw the Fall of the Colossus, erected by the Arms of the Romans.

The same Nebuchadnezzar caus'd a Golden Statue to be set up, of sixty Cubits high, and six Cubits thick: He erected this in the Province of Dura in Babylon,[10] and publish'd a Decree to all his Subjects, that they should fall down before this Statue, when they should hear the Sound of the musical Instruments, under the Penalty of being thrown alive into a burning Furnace. Daniel and his Companions not obeying this Decree, were cast into the Furnace; but God deliver'd them from it by a Miracle. See DANIEL.

'Tis enquired, what this Statue was, and what it represented? Some think it to be a Statue of Nebuchadnezzar himself; others, that of his Father, whom he had a mind to deify: But to us it seems most probable, that it was the Statue of the God Bel, to whom he would have a particular Worship paid, at the time of the playing of the Instruments: And, in effect, he did not complain of Daniel, for refusing to worship him, nor his Father, but his Gods: Vere ne Sidrach, Misael, & Abednago, Deos meos non colitis, & statuam auream non adoratis?

Some Difficulties are form'd about the Proportions of this Statue: Some think it to be a Pillar upon which a Statue was placed, and that Daniel sets down the Height of the Pillar and Statue together, making it to be sixty Cubits high, and six in Thickness. 'Tis imagin'd the Statue might be forty Cubits high, and six thick; and that the Base might be twenty Cubits high, and thick in Proportion. They even [Diodor. Sicul. Bibloth. l.2.] go so far as to say, this Statue is the same as that described by Diodorus Siculus, which was forty Foot high, and stood in the Temple of Belus: It was of Gold, like that described by Daniel; it represented the chief Deity of the Babylonians; it was worship'd in the most august of all their Temples. The Proportion of a Statue of forty Cubits high, is six Cubits wide, or thick; for the general Stature of a Man, is four times and an half the Breadth from Shoulder to Shoulder. But four times and an half six Cubits make twenty-seven Cubits, or forty Feet and an half: And this falls in very near with the Measure of Diodorus Siculus.

Stephanas

STEPHANAS, the Name of one of the [1 Cor. i. 16.] principal Christians of Corinth, whom St. Paul baptized, with all his Family, probably about the 52d Year of Christ, or of the Vulgar Era. St. Stephanas devoted himself to the Service of the Church; and in the Year of our Saviour 56 he came to St. Paul [1 Cor. xvi. 17. & vii. 1.] at Ephesus, and, according to Saint Chrysostom, brought him Letters which the [Chrysost. in 1 Cor. homil. 44. p. 486.] Church of Corinth wrote to him, to consult him concerning Marriage, Continence, and perhaps other Subjects; which St. Paul treats of in his First Epistle to the Corinthians. The Apostle wrote it from Ephesus in the 56th Year, and it was sent by Stephanas, Fortunatus, and Achaicus. We know of no other Particulars of the Life of St. Stephanas.

Stephen

[Epiphan. de Christo, c. 4. p. 50.] STEPHEN; in Greek, Stephanos, which signifies a Crown. St. Stephen the first Martyr, was probably of the Number of those Hellenistical Jews that believed in Jesus Christ. Epiphanius thinks he was of the Number of the seventy-two Disciples of Jesus Christ; but this is not very certain. Jesus Christ appointed his seventy -two Disciples to teach and preach; but it seems that St. Stephen, and the six other first Deacons, had as yet no particular Designation, when they were chosen for the Service of the Tables. 'Twas in the Year 53 of Jesus Christ that the seven Deacons were chosen. St. Stephen is always put at their Head, as the chief and most worthy. 'Tis believed he had study'd at the Feet of Gamaliel. As he was full of the Holy Ghost and of Zeal,[1] he perform'd many wonderful Works and Miracles before the People; and some of the Synagogue of the Freed-men, of the Cyrenians, of the Alexandrians, and some others, entring into Dispute with him, could not withstand the Wisdom and the Spirit that spoke from his Mouth.

Then they suborned false Witness to testify, that they heard him blaspheme against Moses, and against God; and they stirr'd up the People by their Calumnies, so that they drew him before the Council of the Nation, or the Sanhedrim; and they produced false Witnesses against him, who deposed, that they had heard him speak against the Temple, and against the Law, and affirm'd, that Jesus of Nazareth would destroy the holy Place, and abolish the Observance of the Law of Moses. Stephen appear'd in the midst of the Assembly, having his Countenance shining like that of an Angel; and the High-priest asking him what he had to answer to these Accusations? he made his Defence, in [Acts vii. 1, 2, 3, &c.] which he shew'd he had not said any thing, either against Moses, or against the Temple, but that the Jews themselves had always opposed themselves to God and the Prophets: He upbraided them with the Hardness of their Hearts, and their Infidelity, with their putting the Prophets to Death, and, lastly, Jesus Christ himself.

At these Words they were in a Rage, and gnash'd their Teeth against him. But Stephen lifting up his Eyes to Heaven, saw the Glory of God, and Jesus Christ standing at the Right-hand of God. Upon which he said; I see the Heavens open, and the Son of Man standing at the Right-hand of God. Then the Jews cry'd out against him with one Voice, and stop'd their Ears, as if they had heard some dreadful Blasphemy; and falling upon him, they drew him out of the City, and stoned him. The Witnesses laid down their Cloaths at the Feet of a young Man call'd Saul, who was then one of the most eager Persecutors of the Christians, and who was afterwards one of the most zealous Preachers of the Gospel. Stephen all the while call'd upon the Lord, and said; Lord, impute not this Sin to them. After which Words he fell asleep in the Lord, and some pious Persons took care to bury him, and to accompany his Funeral with great Mourning.

[Acts viii. 2.] This is what the Scripture informs us of St. Stephen and his Martyrdom. We are told of many Particulars of his Burial, and afterwards of the Discovery of his Body, in a Work printed at the End of the seventh Tome of the new Edition of Saint Austin, under the Name of Lucian the Priest. The Devotion pay'd to him is very antient and famous in the Church; and God has perform'd a great Number of Miracles by Means of his Reliques, the greatest Part of which are very well attested .

Stibinus Lapis

[1 Chron. xxix. 2. Vulg. אבני פוך] STIBINUS LAPIS. This Word is found in the Chronicles, and signifies literally Stones of Antimony: But 'tis thought the Text intends Stones of Alabaster. The Hebrew says, Stones of Phuc; but Phuc, in Hebrew, signifies the Colour with which [2 Kings ix. 40. Jerem. iv. 30. Isa. liv. 11.] Women painted their Eye-brows, which was of a black Colour. We may see by Isaiah, that they also made Use of Stones of Phuc for Pavements. This should make one conclude, that it signifies Stones of Alabaster.

Stigmata

STIGMATA. Certain Marks and Incisions that the Heathen made upon their Flesh, in honour of some false Deity. These Marks were imprinted, either by a hot Iron, or with a Needle, with which they made several Punctures, which they afterwards fill'd with a fine Powder, either black, blue, or some other Colour, which incorporated with the Flesh, and remain'd printed in it for all their Lives after. The greatest Part of the Arabian Women have their Arms and Cheeks marked with these Stigmata. Lucian, in his Book of the Syrian Goddess, says, that all the Assyrians wore these printed Characters, some on their Hands, others on their Necks. Moses[1] warns the Israelites from making any Figure, or any Mark upon their Bodies: Ye shall not make any Cuttings in your Flesh for the Dead, nor print any Marks upon you.

Ptolemy Philopater gave Orders,b that the Jews who had forsaken their Religion, and had embraced that of the Pagans, should be stigmatized with the Mark of an Ivy-leaf, which Tree is dedicated to Bacchus. St. [Rev. xiii. 16, 17.] John in his Revelation alludes to this Custom, when he says, That the Beast printed her Character upon her own, on their Right-hand, and on their Fore-head; and that she allows none to buy or to sell, but those that bore the Mark of the Beast, or her Name, or the Number of the Letters of her Name. Lastly, St. Paul declares, that he [Gal. vi. 17.] bore in his Body the Marks of the Lord Jesus; that is to say, that he bore the Scars of the Stripes that he had received for his Sake, and for his Service, and that he look'd upon them as so many Stigmata, or honourable Marks of his Consecration to his Service.

[Philo, de Monarch. l. 14.] Philo the Jew says, that there were Men, who printed Characters upon their Flesh with hot Irons, to devote themselves more solemnly and avowedly to the worship of their Idols, and to prove with greater Evidence this Engagement and Servitude. Procopius takes notice of an antient Custom [Procop. in Isa. xliv.] among Christians, who made Marks upon their Arms and Wrists, representing the Cross, or the Monogramm of Jesus Christ: A Custom which still continues among the Oriental Christians, and those that make a Pilgrimage to Jerusalem. Prudentius thus describes the manner in which the Pagans made their Stigmata, in honour to their Gods:

[Prudent. Hymn. x.] Quid cum sacrandus accipit sphragitidas? Acus minutas ingerunt fornacibus, His Membra pergunt urere; utque igniverint Quamcumque partem corporis fervens nota Stigmavit, hanc sic consecratam prædicant.

Stoicks

STOICKS, a sort of Heathen Philosophers, who took their Name from the Greek Word Stoa, signifying a Porch or Entry, because Zeno, the Head of the Stoicks, kept his School in a Porch of the City of Athens. Diogenes Laertius may be consulted, in his Life of Zeno, and others that have treated of the Sects of the Philosophers. Josephus says,[1] that the Pharisees approach very near to the Sentiments of the Stoicks. They affected the same Stiffness, Patience, Apathy, Austerity, and Insensibility. The Sect of the Stoicks was still considerable at Athens when St. Paul came thither, since he had Conferences with them. The Stoicks placed the supream Happiness of Man in living agreeably to Nature and Reason. They seem'd to look upon God as the Soul of the

Stones

STONES. We have already spoke, as World. often as Occasion has offer'd, of the several precious Stones, or Gems, of which mention is made in Scripture. All that can be found concerning this Matter in the Commentators, is very little to be rely'd on, since neither the Jews, nor even the antient Greek Interpreters, seem to have had a sufficient Knowledge of the proper Signification of the Original Terms. Louis de Dieu has very carefully treated of it, in his Commentary upon Exod. xxviii. 17, &c. and Braunius, De Vestitu Sacerdotum Hebræorum, l. 2. c. 8, 9, &c. See also Francis de la Rue, de Gemmis. These are the Names of the precious Stones that are spoke of in Exod. xxviii. 17, &c. and which were in the Highpriest's Breast-plate. The Reader may see each of them under their particular Articles.

The Sardius or Sardonyx, in Hebrew, [Odem.] Odem. It was inscribed with the Name of Reuben.
The Topaz, in Hebrew, Pithera. The [Pithera.] Name of Simeon was engraved upon it.
The Emerald, in Hebrew, Barecheth. [Bareketh. Nophech.] The Tribe of Levi.
The Carbuncle, in Hebrew, Nophech. The Tribe of Judah.
The Sapphire, in Hebrew, Sapphir. [Sapphir.] The Tribe of Dan.
The Jasper, in Hebrew, Jahalom. [Jahalom.] The Tribe of Naphtali.

The Ligure, in Hebrew, Leshem. The [Leshem.] Tribe of Gad. Achlamah. 8. The Agate, in Hebrew, Shebo. The [Shebo.] Tribe of Asher. Tharshish. 9. The Amethyst, in Hebrew, Achlamah. The Tribe of Issachar.
The Chrysolyth, in Hebrew, Tharshish. The Tribe of Zebulun.
The Onyx, in Hebrew, Shohem. The [Shohem.] Tribe of Joseph.
The Beryl, in Hebrew, Jashpe. The [Jashpe.] Tribe of Benjamin.

Upon the two Shoulders of the High-priest were two Stones, call'd, in Hebrew, Shohem, in the Vulgate Onyx, in the Septuagint Emeralds. We think this to be the [Exodus xxviii. 9.] true Signification of the Hebrew Word Shohem.

St. John in his Revelation speaks of [Rev. xxi. 19, 20, 21, &c.] the New Jerusalem, the Spouse of the Lamb, the Foundations of which were precious Stones. The first Foundation was Jasper, Acts xviii. 18. [or shish.] the second Sapphire, the third a Chalcedony, the fourth an Emerald, the fifth Sardonyx, the sixth Sardius, the seventh Chrysolite, the eighth Beryl, the ninth a Topaz, the tenth a Chrysoprasus, the eleventh a Jacinth, the twelfth an Amethyst. To these precious Stones may be added the Stone of Shish, Sis, Ses, or Sais, mention'd 1 Chron. xxix. 2. and Esth. i. 6. which is commonly translated by fine white Marble. See PARIUS LAPIS.

[1 Chron. xxii. 2. 1 Chron. xxix. 2. Isa. liv. 11.] The Stone Gazith. But I take this to be a common Marble, sawed and polished.

The Stone of Phuc. Phuc, in Hebrew, signifies Antimony, or Paint. We may see by Isaiah, that the Stone of Phuc was used for Pavements. The Stone of Stibium, or Antimony, is a Mineral of a black Colour, full of shining Veins, like polish'd Iron, and which has an intermediate Nature, between Metal and Stone.

Also in Scripture mention is made of several remarkable Rocks or Stones, that were noted for some memorable Events. Such were,

The Rock or Stone of the Desart. This was the City Petra: See its Article.

The Stone or Rock of Division. This is the Rock wherein David and his People were besieged by Saul, when it was told him, that the Philistines had made an Incursion into his Kingdom. This obliged [1 Sam. xxiii. 28. &c.] him to quit his Undertaking, to go after the Enemy.

The Rock Etam. A Rock wherein Samson lay hid, while he made War against the [Judg.xv.8. Judg. vii. 25.] Philistines.

The Stone or Rock Oreb, where Gideon put to Death Oreb the Prince of Midian.

The Rock of Adullam, wherein was a Cave where David conceal'd himself. 1 Chron. xi. 15.

[1 Sam. v. 1. 1 Sam. xx. 19. Psal. cxv. 21.] The Stone of Ezel, or the Rock near which David was to expect the Answer of his Friend Jonathan.

The Stone of Succour. This is the Place where the Philistines took the Ark of the Lord.

The Corner-Stone, or the Head Stone of the Corner. This is that which is put at the Angle of a Building, whether at the Foundation, or at the Top of the Wall. Jesus Christ was that Corner-Stone which was rejected by the Jews, but is become the Corner-Stone of the Church,[1] and the Stone that binds and unites the Synagogue and the Gentiles in the Union of the same Faith, of the same Baptism, of the same Church.

[1 Kings i. 9.] The Stone of Zoheleth, as the Rabbins say, was a Stone that served for Exercise to the younger People, who try'd their Strength, either in lifting it, casting it, or rolling it; for they are not intirely agreed as to its Use. See also Zech. xii. 3. A Stone of Proof.

The Stone of Bohan, or Aben-bohan, is mention'd Josh. xv. 6. xviii. 17.

[Josh. x. 11.] The Hebrews give sometimes the Name of Stone or Rock to Kings, to Princes, or to God himself. Joseph in Egypt became the Stone of Israel, Gen. xlix. 24. They also give the Name of Stones to the Weights [Levit. xix. 36. Deut. xxv. 13.] they use in Commerce. Just Weights shall ye have: The Hebrew says, just Stones. Thou shalt not have in thy Bag divers Weights, A great and a small. The Hebrew says, a Stone and a Stone. The Stone of the [2Sam. xiv. 26.] King, is the King's Weight. See also Prov. xvi. 11. xx. 10, 23. Mic. vi. 11. A Stone of Fraud, is a deceitful Weight.

They call a great Shower of Hail, Hailstones. See Isai. xxx. 30. Ezek. xiii. 12, 13. xxxviii. 22.

Jacob's Stone. This is the Stone that he made use of for a Pillow, when he went to Mesopotamia, and upon which he poured Oil, [Gen. xxvi. 18.] by a kind of Consecration, because it was to be set up as an Altar to the Lord after his Return. And, in effect, he did come hither to pay his Vows, and to offer his Sacrifices, after he return'd out of that Country. 'Twas from [Gen. xxxv. 14.] Jacob's anointing of this Stone, that the Pagans took up the Practice of pouring Oil upon certain Stones which they worshipped. Clemens Alexandrinus assures us, that they [Cle. Alex. Strom. l. 7. Arnob. cont. Gent. l. 1.] pay'd a religious Worship to these kind of Stones. Arnobius acknowledges, that he himself had fall'n into this kind of Idolatry, before he embraced Christianity: Si quando conspexeram lubricatum lapidem, & ex olivi unguine lubricatum, tanquam inesset vis præsens, adulabar, affabar.

The antient Phenicians call'd by the Name of Bethulæa, such Stones as were [Euseb. præpar. l. 1. c. 10. Apud Photium, cod. 242.] consecrated to divine Worship. Sanchoniathon ascribes the Invention of them to the God Cœlus; he says, they are living and animated Stones. They were seen for a long Time about Mount Libanus. Asclepiades takes notice of 'em near Heliopolis in Syria; and Damascius says, he has seen of 'em in the Air, and in Motion. They ascribed Oracles to them, and the Presence of some Deity, or of some Genius that animated them. Some of these Bethulæa were consecrated to Saturn, others to the Sun, and others to other Deities. Hesychius says, that the Poets call the Stone, which Saturn devoured instead of his Son Jupiter, by the Name of Bethula. I doubt not but that the Word Bethula or Bethulæa, is derived from Bethel, where Jacob anointed a Stone in honour of the true God.

[Job xxviii. 18.] The Mahometans think,[2] that Jacob's Stone was convey'd to the Temple of Jerusalem, and is still preserv'd in a Mosque there, in the Place where they think the Temple formerly stood. They call this Stone Alsakra, or the Stone of Unction. The Cadi Gemaleddin, Son of Vallel, writes, that passing through Jerusalem, in his Way to Egypt, he saw Christian Priests carrying glass Phials full of Wine over the Sakra, near which the Mussulmen had built their Temple, which, for this Reason, they call the Temple of the Stone. This Wine that the Christian Priests set upon the Stone, was, without doubt, design'd for the Celebration of Mass there.

Thunder-Stone. We think the Stone Gabish or Algabish, mention'd by Job and [Ez. xiii. 11.] Ezekiel, to be the Thunder-Stone.[3] The Antients had a Knowledge of the Stones call'd Ceraunia, or Thunder-Stones, and had them in much Esteem. Job reckons the Gabish among precious Stones; and Ezekiel says, that the Lord will overwhelm the Wicked by a violent Shower, and will break them to Pieces by the Stone [Plin. lib. xxvii. c. 9.] Gabish. As Pliny describes it, they were black or red Stones, having the Shape of a Wedge. Anselm de Boot[4] says, they are shewn in Collections of Rarities; have the Form of a Hatchet, of a Ploughshare, of a Hammer, of a Mallet, or of a Wedge. That their Substance is like that of Flint- Stones; their Colour not uniform; that they are generally perforated, and seem to have served for several Uses, either of War, or for Country Business.

[Plin. l. 27. c. 9.] These Observations would make one think, that these pretended Thunder- Stones are nothing else but some of those Stones which the Antients made use of instead of Iron, or Steel, to work with, for Arms to attack or to defend themselves with. We find Hatchets, Knives, and Ploughshares of this kind of Stone. The antient Hebrews made use of Stone- Knives for Circumcision. The Galli, or [Herodot. l. 7. c. 69.] Priests of Iris, also us'd them for cutting. Herodotus says, that the Ethiopians tipt the Ends of their Arrows with very hard Stones. The Hatchets that have been found under the Heads of some Barbarians that were dug up some Years ago,[5] in a Village near Eureux, were of Stone; and some of 'em were of a very beautiful and precious green Stone. It is not therefore to be wonder'd at, that they set such a Value on them, and placed them in the Rank of precious Stones.

Even at this Day they ascribe extraordinary Effects to these Thunder-Stones. Pliny says, that the Persian Magians sought with great Care for a sort of Thunder-Stone that was very rare, and which they made use of in their Operations; that is, says he, the Stone that falls with the Thunder. Lotacus speaks of two other Kinds of them, to one of which they imputed the Power of taking Cities, to the other the Power of defeating Fleets. These Stones are to be found very common at this Day in Picardy, Germany, and in the Country of the Morians.

But the true Thunder-Stones are different from all these. 'Tis pretended they are form'd in the Clouds of a nitrous and sulphureous Matter, which acquires a certain Degree of Consistence by the Agitation of the Clouds, and then takes Fire, and darts forth [Plutarch. in Lysandro.] with Impetuosity. Plutarch speaks at large of a Thunder-Stone that had fall'n formerly in Thrace. The Philosopher Anaxagoras foretold the Fall of this Stone, and pretended, that it was emitted from the Body of the [Diogen. Laert. in Anaxag.] Sun. It was seen for seventy-five Days in the Air, toss'd up and down at Random, and from Time to Time it sent forth Pieces of its Substance all on fire, appearing like those Stars that seem to fall from the Sky. At last the Stone itself fell down, and was quite extinguish'd, being much diminish'd in the Bigness that it seem'd to have in the Air. [Plin. l. 2. c. 68.] Pliny says, that it was preserved even to his Time, was in Bulk as big as a Chariot, and of a dark adust Colour. Qui lapis etiam nunc ostenditur, magnitudine vehis, colore adusto.

[Cardan. de varietate. l.14. c. 72.] That which is to be seen in the Parish Church of Eurishem in Alsatia, fell down from Heaven in the Year 1492. It is blackish, almost round, uneven, and weighs, as they say, about three hundred Pound Weight. That mention'd by M. Gassendi, a which fell November 29, 1637. was of the Bigness of a Man's Head, weigh'd fifty-four Pounds, was of a blackish Colour, and extreamly hard; it is kept at Aix in Provence. Count Marcellin, in his Chronicle for the Year 452, speaks of three great Stones that fell from Heaven in Thrace. Cardan relates, that in 1510 there fell in the Country near Abdua, to the Number of twelve hundred Stones, of the Colour of Iron, of a sulphureous Smell, and of an extraordinary Hardness.

[Diodor. Sicul. Bibl. l. 11.] Some pretend these Stones are not generated in the Air, but that they are broken off from some very high Rocks; that the Sulphur and Nitre in which they are inclosed, are the Cause that they are soon inflamed, and the Flame contributes to their being supported for some Time in the Air: That when the combustible Matter is consumed, with which they are surrounded, they fall down, and are taken for Thunder- Stones. Diodorus Siculus relates, that the Persians attempting to plunder the Temple of Delphos, were repell'd and intirely routed by Thunder, Tempest, and great Fragments of Rocks, that were torn up by the Violence of the Storm. Travellers assure us, that the same thing often happens in America, in certain Places where Hurricanes are frequent. It is very probable, that what they call Thunder- Stones, and what Job and Ezekiel mention by the Name of Gabish, are nothing else but Stones loosen'd from the Mountains, which then obtain'd the Name of Thunder-Stones.

[Josh. x. 11.] Shower of Stones. Joshua speaks of its raining Stones upon the Canaanites. Thus he expresses himself; And it came to pass as they fled from before Israel*, and were in the going down to* Beth-horon*, that the Lord cast down great Stones from Heaven upon them unto* Azekah*, and they died. They were more that died with Hailstones, than they whom the Children of* Israel slew with the Sword. Opinions are divided about these Hailstones. Some pretend, that this was no more than ordinary Hail, but more violent than the Storms we are us'd to see. Others maintain, that Joshua is to be understood literally, of a Shower of Stones. The Text seems to be express for this Sentiment, and the thing is not at all impossible. We have several Instances of Showers of Stones; and tho' we had no Example of Things of this Nature, yet it is enough that the Scripture speaks of it as of a supernatural and miraculous Event, to remove all our Scruples about it. We ought not to have recourse to the figurative and metaphorical Sense, but only when the things related in Scripture include some Contradiction in the literal Sense, something contrary to the Idea of God, or inconsistent with the Laws of Nature. In a word, when there is no real Necessity of having recourse to a Figure, we must not depart from the literal Sense.

[Deuter. xxviii. 24.] As often as the Scripture speaks of these Events, it speaks of 'em as of a Prodigy. But surely a common Shower of Hail has nothing of a Miracle in it. The best Commentators upon Joshua, as Masius, Bonfrere, Grotius, explain it literally of a Shower of Stones. Moses, in Deuteronomy, speaks of a Shower of Dust and Sand, with which he threatens his People: The Lord shall make the Rain of thy Land Powder and Dust; from Heaven shall it come down upon thee, until thou be destroyed. The Romans, who look'd upon Showers of Stones as something very disastrous, in their Annals have taken notice of a great many Instances of them. Under the Reign of Tullus Hostilius, when it was made known to the People of Rome, that a Shower of Stones had fall'n upon the Mountain[6] of Alba, at first it seem'd incredible. They sent out proper Persons to inquire strictly into this Prodigy, and it was found that Stones had fall'n after the same Manner as a Storm of Hail driven by the Wind[7]. Afterwards the same Prodigy happen'd frequently[8]. Some Time after the Battle of Cannæ, there was seen upon the same Mountain of Alba, a Shower of Stones, which continued for two Days together. In 1538, near a Village in Italy call'd Tripergola, after some Shocks of an Earthquake, there was seen a Shower of Stones and Dust, which darkned the Air for two Days, after which they observed that a Mountain had rose up in the midst of the Lucrine Lake[9].

If therefore Showers of Stones have nothing contrary to the Laws of Nature, there can be no good Reason assign'd why we should depart from the literal Sense in this Place, to seek Refuge in Allegory. This is not to affirm that there was no Miracle here, as there was none in those Showers of Stones mention'd by Livy; but the Miracle consists much less in the Thing itself, than in the Circumstances of Time, and that the Shower should fall only upon the Canaanites, without doing the Israelites any Harm. Our Dissertation may be consulted upon this Subject, printed before our Comment upon Joshua, and other Commentators upon the same Book.

Stone of Offence. This is what we meet with in our Way, and which makes us [Isa.viii.14.] stumble or fall. He shall be for a Stone of Stumbling, and for a Rock of Offence, to both the Houses of Israel. St. Peter and St. [Rom. ix. 33. 1 Pet. ii. 8.] Paul have said, that Jesus Christ was a Stumbling-Stone to the Jews who believed not on him.

Moses says, that God would give to the Hebrews a Country, whose Rocks and Stones should supply them with Plenty of [Deuter. xxxii. 13. Psal. lxxxi. 16.] Honey and Oil: He made him to suck Honey out of the Rock, and Oil out of the flinty Rock. And the Psalmist says, speaking of the Miracle by which Moses drew Water out of the Rock; With Honey out of the Rock should I have satisfied thee. In Palestine the Bees often lay up their Honey in the Holes of the Rocks. 'Tis to this that the Scripture alludes in this Place. [Job xxix. 6.] Job says, in the same Sense, that in the Time of his Prosperity, the Rock poured me out Rivers of Oil, because the Olive-trees generally grew upon the Mountains.

Many People bordering upon Palestine, had their Abode in the Rocks and hollow Stones in the Mountains. The People inhabiting upon the Persian Gulph, lived in this Manner. 'Tis for this Reason that they were call'd Troglodytes, which in Greek is as much as to say, People that dwell in the Caves and hollow Places of the Mountains. Those that inhabited in the Desart about Tikoah, lodged in Caverns dug in the Earth, says St. Jerome. The Idumeans had their ordinary Abodes in the [Jer. xlviii. 28.] Clefts of the Rocks. O ye that dwell in Moab, leave the Cities and dwell in the Rock, and be like the Dove that maketh her Nest in the Sides of the Hole's Mouth. Hither the Moabites us'd to retreat in Times of Calamity. The Kenites, who dwelt to the South of the Black-sea, lodg'd [Numbers xxiv. 21.] after the same manner: And he looked on the Kenites, and took up his Parable and said; Strong is thy Dwelling-place, and thou puttest thy Nest in a Rock.

[Isa. li. 1.] In Isaiah God says to the Jews; Look unto the Rock whence ye are hewn, and to the Hole of the Pit whence ye are digged; that is, to Abraham and the Patriarchs from whom ye are descended. And in the Gospel, [Mat. iii. 9.] John the Baptist tells the Pharisees; Think not to say within your selves, We have Abraham to our Father; for I say unto you, that God is able of these Stones to raise up Children unto Abraham. He can convert the most hardned Hearts, and call to him those that are at the greatest Distance. 'Tis believed, that when he spoke this, the Baptist pointed to the Stones in the Desart, and by that Name understood the People that were yet Infidels and Gentiles.

[Ex. iv. 25. Josh. v. 2.] The Knives of Stones that were made use of by the Jews in Circumcision, were not enjoin'd by the Law; but the Use of 'em was founded, either upon Custom, or upon Experience of this kind of Instruments, they being found to be less dangerous than those made of Metal. Zipporah made use of a Stone to circumcise her Sons. Joshua did the same, when he caus'd such of the Israelites to be circumcised at Gilgal, as had not received Circumcision during their Journey in the Wilderness: Fac tibi cultros Lapideos, & circumcide secundo filios Israel. This Expression of Scripture shews, that Knives were not then in common Use. The Egyptians made use of these Knives of Stone to open dead Bodies that [Herodot. l. 2. c. 2. Plin. l. 35. c. 12.] were to be embalm'd. Pliny assures us, that the Priests of the Mother of the Gods had sharp Stones, with which they cut and slash'd themselves, which they thought they could not do with any thing else without Danger: Nec aliter citra perniciem. Catullus observes,[10] that Athys made himself a Eunuch after the same manner.

They made use of Stone Knives to make Incisions in the Tree from whence the Balm distill'd. They also made use of them formerly instead of Pen-Knives, to cut the Canes for writing withal. Scaliger says, that he had seen at Lyons two of these Stone Knives. We have already spoken of Hatchets, and other cutting Instruments of Stone. The Africans of Morocco, and some Americans, still, at this Day, have them in common Use, of which they make Knives, Lancets, and Razors[11]. The Oriental Jews commonly us'd them for the Circumcision of their Children, being not unlike Flints for Guns: But the Western Jews use a Razor. [D. Joh. de Palafox, c. 12.]

Moses forbids the Hebrews to set up in their Country any Stone that is exalted or remarkable. Nec insignem lapidem ponetis in terra vestra. The Hebrew[12] may be translated by a Stone for Sight, a Land-mark, that stands on an Eminence, or in some great Road, that it may be seen at a Distance. Strabo mentions these Stones, [Strab. l.17.] which were to be seen on the High-ways in Egypt. They are raised on high, polish'd, round, and almost of a spherical Figure, made of a kind of a black and hard Stone, of which Mortars are made in that Country. These Stones or Columns are placed upon a larger Stone, or Base, and sometimes have still another lesser Stone over them, serving as a Capital. Some stand alone and separate; the greatest are almost twelve Feet in diameter, and generally they are about half as thick; thus says Strabo. There are also several remarkable and eminent Stones upon Libanus, as the same Author testifies. The Syrians and Egyptians had such a Respect for these Stones, that they almost adored them. They anointed them with Oil, as may be seen from Apuleius, they kiss'd them and saluted them. It is likely that this is what Moses forbid the Hebrews to do.

[Prov. xxvi. 8.] Solomon says in his Proverbs; As he that bindeth a Stone in a Sling, so is he that giveth Honour to a Fool. Or, as the Vulgate hath it, He that heaps Honours upon a Fool, does like one that throws a Stone upon those Heaps, that us'd to be raised to the Honour of Mercury. Statues of Mercury were generally set up in Crossways, and Heaps of Stones were cast at the Feet of these Statues, out of superstitious Views; pretty much like what is done in this Country, where Persons throw Stones at the Feet of certain Crosses set up in the High-ways. They pretend, that so many Stones cast there, are as a Testimony of the Salutation that is paid to it. It is certain that the Pagans were us'd to make Heaps of Stones at the Feet of the Statue of Mercury, and to his Honour;[13] and it can hardly be doubted, but that the Author of the Vulgate had this Custom in View, when he translated that Passage of the Proverbs.

But the Hebrew Text imports;[14] Just as a little Stone, (literally, a Fragment of a Stone) thrown upon an Heap of Stones; so is Honour conferr'd upon a Fool. This little Stone does not augment the Heap, nor is so much as seen upon it; so Honour heap'd upon a Fool, does not render him more worthy of Consideration. Others translate it, To tie a Stone in a Piece of Purple, is to give Honour to a Fool. As nothing can be so ill placed as a Stone in a Piece of fine Cloth; so are Honours ill placed upon a Fool. Lastly, the Hebrew may be render'd thus; To give Honours to a Fool, is the same thing as to put a Piece of try'd Silver in a Sling. The Septuagint translate it;[15] He that gives Glory to a Fool, is like him that ties a Stone in a Sling; for this is to lose Labour, when the Stone is fastned to the Sling.

Great Heaps of Stones, raised up for a Witness of any memorable Event, and to preserve the Remembrance of some Matter of great Importance, are the most antient Monuments among the Hebrews. In those elder Ages, before the Use of Writing, these Monuments were instead of Inscriptions, Pyramids, Medals, or Histories. Jacob and Laban raised such a Monument upon Mount Gilead in Memory of their [Gen. xxxi. 46. Josh. iv. 5, 6, 7. Josh. xxii. 10.] Covenant. Joshua erected one at Gilgal, made of Stones taken out of the Jordan, to preserve the Memorial of his miraculous Passage over this River. The Israelites that dwelt beyond Jordan, also rais'd one upon the Banks of the River, as a Testimony that they constituted but one Nation with their Brethren on the other Side.

[Josh. vii. 26.] Sometimes they heap'd up such a Collection of Stones upon the Burying-place of some odious Persons, as was done in the Case [2 Kings xviii. 17.] of Achan and Absalom.

Mention is often made of the Stones wherewith they overwhelm'd such as were stoned to Death. See the Article STONEING.

Rough and unform'd Stones were look'd upon as purer, and fitter for sacred Uses, than those that were hewn. Moses directed an Altar to be raised to the Lord of rough Stones; If thou wilt make me an Altar of Stone, thou shalt not build it of hewn Stone; for if thou lift up thy Tool upon it, thou hast polluted it. God order'd that an Altar of rude Stones should be built to him upon [Deuter. xxvii. 5.] Mount Ebal; that it should be cover'd with Mortar, and that the Words of the Covenant should be written upon it. This [Josh. viii. 31, 32.] was perform'd by Joshua. The Altar of the Temple at Jerusalem, which was built after the Return from the Captivity, was [Ezr. v. 8. 1 Macc. iv. 46, 47.] also of rude Stones; as likewise was that repair'd by Judas Maccabeus, after the Profanation of it by Antiochus Epiphanes.

In Deuteronomy, Chap. viii. 9. Moses, speaking of Palestine, says, that the Stones of that Country are Iron-Stones; Cujus lapides ferrum sunt. Which signifies, that the Stones of this Country may serve to make Knives, Hatchets, and other Instruments, which are commonly made of Iron; or that the Stones there have the Hardness and Solidity of Iron; or lastly, that the Mountains of this Country will abundantly supply them with Mines of Iron, or Iron-stone.

A Heart of Stone, may be understood several ways. Job, speaking of the Behemoth [Job xli. 15.] , or the Elephant, says, that his Heart is as hard as Stone, as impenetrable as an Anvil: Which is as much as to say, that he is of a very extraordinary Strength, Boldness, and Courage. It is said elsewhere, that the Heart of Nabal became as a Stone, when he was told of the Danger he had incurr'd by his Imprudence. His Heart became immoveable like a Stone, it was contracted or convulsed, and this Convulsion was the Occasion of his Death. [Ezek. xi. 19. xxxvi. 26.] Ezekiel says, that the Lord will take away from his People their Heart of Stone, and give them a Heart of Flesh; that he will convert them, and inspire them with milder and more humane Sentiments. 'Tis pretty nearly in the same Sense, that John [Mat. iii. 9.] the Baptist said, that God was able to raise up to Abraham Children from the Stones of the Desart.

Fire produced from Stones by means of a Steel, or even when they are otherwise set on fire, is reckon'd purer and fitter for religious Offices, than any other Fire. At the Consecration of the Altar of the Tabernacle, and at the Dedication of the Temple of Jerusalem, God sent Fire from Heaven, which set fire to the Wood of the Altar. But when Judas Maccabeus[16] purified the Temple, he lighted the Fire de ignitis lapidibus igne concepto. He caused Flints to be heated, and extracted Fire from them, to light the Fuel upon the Altar.

A Stone is sometimes put for an Idol of [Hab. ii. 19.] Stone; Wo unto him that saith to the Wood, Awake, and to the dumb Stone, Arise, it shall teach. The Assyrians threw into the Fire the [Isai. xxvii. 19.] Gods of the Nations; for they were no Gods, they were only Wood and [Jer. ii. 27.] Stone. And Jeremiah says, Saying to a Stock, Thou art my Father, and to a Stone, Thou hast brought me forth. To be reduced to an Heap of Stones, is said of a City or House which is entirely ruin'd and demolish'd; [Mic. i. 6.] I will make Samaria as an Heap of the Field, and as Plantings of a Vineyard. [Jer. xvii. 1.] Jeremiah says, that Damascus shall cease to be a City, and shall be reduced to an Heap of Stones. Thus also our Saviour, speaking of the Destruction of Jerusalem, [Mat. xxiv. 2.] says, that one Stone shall not remain upon another.

Daniel, speaking of the Kingdom of the [Dan. ii. 34] Messiah, compares it to a small Stone loosned from the Mountain, that falls upon the Feet of the Colossus which Nebuchadnezzar saw in his Dream, and which afterwards fill'd the whole Earth.

[Ecclus. xxii. 1, 2.] The Author of Ecclesiasticus says, that the slothful Man shall be stoned with Stones of Dirt, and Stones of Filth or Dung[17]. That is, besides the Punishment of being stoned, he shall suffer the Shame of Contempt. He shall be defiled with Dirt, and be look'd upon as defiled with Dung.

[Ez. xxviii. 14, 16.] Ezekiel compares the King of Tyre to the Cherubim in the Temple, in the midst of the Stones of Fire, or of burning Stones, in medio lapidum ignitorum. The Cherubims were of Gold, the Pavement of the Sanctuary was of Stones and Marble, precious and shining. Thus the King of Tyre was cloathed with magnificent Garments, Gold and precious Stones surrounded him on all Sides, his Apartments were paved with precious Marble, &c.

Stoning

STONING. To stone, to put to Death by casting Stones. Lapidation was a Punishment very much in Use among the Hebrews, and the Rabbins reckon up a great many Crimes that were subject to this Penalty. These are, in general, all those Criminals that the Law condemns to Death, without expressing the particular kind of Death. For Example, the Incest of a Son with his Mother, or of the Son with his Mother-in-law, or of a Father with his Daughter, or of a Father with his Daughter-in-law; or of a Man that debauches a Woman that is contracted, or of her that is contracted and consents to another; those that are guilty of the Crimes of Sodomy or Bestiality; Idolaters, Blasphemers, Magicians, Conjurers, Breakers of the Sabbath, those that offer their Children to Moloch, those that intice others to Idolatry, a Son rebellious to his Father and condemned by the Judges. The Rabbins tell us, that when a Man was condemned to Death, he was led out of the City, having an Officer before him with a Pike in his Hand, at the Top of which was a Piece of linen Cloth, to make it distinguish'd afar off, and that those that might have any thing to offer in Vindication of the Criminal, might now propose it before they proceeded any farther. If any such presented themselves, they all stood still, and brought back the Offender to Prison, to hear what could be alledg'd in his Favour. If no one offer'd himself, he was conducted to the Place of Execution, and was exhorted to acknowledge and confess his Fault; because those that confess their Sins, have a Part in the Life to come. After this he was stoned. But Lapidation, as the Rabbins say, was perform'd after two Manners[1]. The first was when the guilty Person was pelted with Stones till he dy'd, the Witnesses throwing the first Stones at him. The second Manner was, when the Criminal was brought to a steep Place, whose Heighth was at least that of two Men, from whence one of the two Witnesses threw him headlong, and the other roll'd a large Stone upon his Body. If he did not die by the Fall, they dispatch'd him by throwing Stones upon him. We see more than one Instance in Scripture of the first Manner of Stoning; but we have no Example of the second; for that of Jezabel, who was [2 Kings ix. 33.] thrown out of a Window, proves nothing at all.

What we have said, that they generally ston'd Criminals out of the City, must only be apply'd to regular Executions. For in other Cases the Jews stoned those they thought deserved it where-ever they found them. For Example, when hurry'd away by a Transport of Zeal, they stoned to Death a Blasphemer, an Adulterer, or an Idolater. Thus, when they brought to Jesus a Woman surprised in Adultery, he said to her Accusers in the Temple, where he then was, Let him that is without Fault cast the first Stone at her. And another Time, the Jews pretending he blasphemed, gather'd up Stones to stone him, even in the Temple. They did the same at [John viii. 59.] another Time, when he said to them, I and my Father are one. Upon such Occasions they did not stay for the usual Formalities; they follow'd the Instigation of their own Tempers, and the first Transports of their Passion. And this was what they call'd, The Judgment of Zeal.

We are told, that after a Man had been stoned, they fasten'd his Body to a Stake, by tying his Hands together, and left him in this Condition 'till Sun-set; then they unty'd him, and bury'd him in the Vale of Carcasses, with the Stake to which he had been fasten'd. This was not always done; and they say, it was done only to Blasphemers and Idolaters; and besides, it would be very difficult to prove this Practice by Scripture.

Storax

STORAX. Jacob sent a Present of Storax to the Governor of Egypt, whom he did not yet know to be his Son Joseph.[1] The Hebrew reads Nechoth, which the Septuagint render by Perfume. St. Jerom has follow'd Aquila, who translates it by Storax. Storax is a Plant, which in Magnitude and Form is somewhat like a Quince-tree. It yields a Liquor also call'd Storax. Its Blossom is white, and its Fruit hangs by long Stalks, cover'd with a thin Skin, round and sharp at the Bottom, of the Bigness of a large Nut, wherein there are little Kernels, from whence the Grain is taken. The Storax is a fat thick Liquor, like Balm, and which has a disagreeable Smell. Some do not distinguish Storax from Stacte, which has been spoke of already. It is not at all certain, that the Hebrew word Nechoth signifies Storax. Saint Jerom in Gen. xxxvii. 24. 2 Kings xx. 13. and Isai. xxix. 2. renders it by Aromata; and in Gen xliii. 11. by Storax. The Seventy have always us'd Aromata. Others think it to be Wax, Rosin, Stacte, Balm, or something in general that is very valuable.

Stork

STORK, Ciconia, a kind of Bird well known. The Hebrews call it Chaseda, or Chasida,[1] which signifies Pity or Mercy; probably, because of the Tenderness it shews to its Parents, which it never forsakes, but feeds and defends even to Death. The Stork is a Bird of Passage, which in Winter goes into the hot Countries. Jeremiah says, The Stork in the Heaven knoweth her appointed Times, and the Turtle, and the Crane, and the Swallow observe the Time of their coming. St. Jerom and the Septuagint sometimes render the Hebrew word Chasidah by Herodius the Heron, and sometimes by Pelican, or Kite; but Interpreters are pretty well agreed, that it signifies a Stork. Moses places it among unclean Birds. The Psalmist says, As for the [Lev. xi. 19. Deut. xiv. 18. Psal. civ. 17.] Stork, the Fir-trees are her House. In our Parts of the World, she rather makes her Nest upon some high Tower, or the Top of an House; but in Palestine, where the Coverings of their Houses were flat, she built in the highest Trees. Profane Authors speak much of the Piety of the Stork, and its Gratitude towards its Parents. St. Ambrose says,[2] that for this Reason the Romans call'd it Avis pia; and one of their Poets[3] calls it Pietatis cultrix :

Ciconia etiam grata, peregrina, hospita,

Pietati-cultrix, gracili-pes, crotalistria.

The Stork has its Beak and its Legs long and red; it feeds upon Serpents, Frogs, and Insects: Its Plumage would be quite white, if it was not that the Extremity of its Wings are black, and also some small part of its Head and Thighs: It sits for the Space of thirty Days, and lays but four Eggs. Formerly they would not eat the Stork, but at present it is much esteem'd, for the Deliciousness of its Flesh. They go away in the Middle of August, and return at Spring. Bellonius says, that when they go away, that Stork that comes last to the Place of Rendezvous is kill'd upon the Spot. They go away in the Night to the Southern Countries.

Besides the common Stork which we have now described, there is a black one, which the Egyptians call Ibis; which is not a Bird of Passage, but continues always in the Country. We have spoke of it under the Name IBIS.

Strange Worship

STRANGE Worship. The Hebrews thus call'd all kinds of Idolatry, Superstition, all Imitation of the Worship of strange Nations and Idolaters, all Sacrilege, all religious Worship that was perform'd, even to the True God, in a Place, and at a Time, or even in a Manner, different from what he had appointed: All this is call'd Strange Worship, because it was not conformable to that of the Patriarchs and the Fathers of their Nation.

Studies of the Hebrews

[Exod. xiii. 9.] STUDIES of the Hebrews. The chief Study of the Hebrews, was always the Law of the Lord. We see the Practice of this recommended throughout the whole Old Testament. Moses commanded, that the Law of the Lord should always be in their Mouths Day and Night; that it should be as a Memento before their Eyes, and a Signal in their Hands: He would have them [Deut. vi. 7.] engrave it on their Hearts; that they should teach it their Children; that they should always meditate upon it, whether sitting in their Houses, walking in the Fields, in the Night-time, while they slept, and when they awoke in the Morning; that they should wear it as a Bracelet to their Arm, and as a Pendant between their Eyes, and write it upon their Door-posts. This was the Study of the Prophets, the Patriarchs, and all good Israelites.

But their Study was not confined only to their Laws and Ceremonies prescribed by Moses: They studied their Histories, and even their Genealogies; so that the Children of the Jews, according to the Report of St. [Hieron.] Jerom, knew at their Fingers-ends all the Genealogies that are found in the Chronicles. From their tenderest Infancy, as Josephus [Joseph. l. 1. cont. App.] tells us, they were accustom'd to study the Laws of God, to learn them by Heart, to practise them; and they were so addicted to them, that they were ready to lay down their Lives for their Observation.

After they had the Writings of the Prophets, they apply'd themselves very earnestly to know the Sense of the Prophecies, and to study the hidden Meaning of them. We see it by Daniel, who apply'd himself with so much Care to unfold the Meaning of his own Revelations, and of [Dan. vii. 28. ix. 2, 3, 22, 23, 24. Ecclesiasticus prologus.] those of the Prophet Jeremiah, who fix'd the Time for the compleating the Captivity of the People of God. Jesus the Son of Sirach is described to us as a Man of true Learning, who, after he had with great Diligence study'd the Law, the Prophets, and the other Books that had been written in his Nation, apply'd himself to write something that might be of Use to Posterity. And here is the Description that the Son of Sirach himself gives us of a truly learned Man, according [Eccius. xxxix. 1, 2, 3.] to the Hebrews. “ The “ wise Man who addicts himself to Study, “ and who meditates on the Law of the “ Lord, will search out the Wisdom of “ all the Antients, and will make the “ Prophets his Study. He will lay up in “ his Heart the Discourses of famous Men, “ and at the same Time he will penetrate “ into the Mystery of Parables. He will “ endeavour to dive into the Sense of Proverbs, and obscure Sentences, and will [1 Pet. i. 11.] “ feed himself with what is most abstruse “ in Parables. He will enter into the Service of great Men, and will appear before the Governors of Provinces. He “ will travel into the Territory of foreign “ Nations, to prove Good and Evil among “ Men. —— And if it shall please the sovereign Lord, he will be fill'd with the “ Spirit of Understanding: And then he “ will dispense the Words of Wisdom like “ Rain, &c. ” The Apostle St. Peter informs us, what was the Study of the Prophets. They searched what Times and what other Circumstances the Spirit of Jesus Christ, who spoke in them, had mark'd out, when they predicted the Sufferings of our Saviour, and the Glory that was to follow them.

After the Conquests of Alexander the Great, the Jews, who were mingled with the Grecians in the greatest Part of the Provinces of the East, began to have a Taste for their Language and their Studies. In Imitation of the Grecian Philosophers, they divided themselves into different Sects. Some of them, as the Pharisees, espoused some of the Opinions of the Stoicks and Platonicians; others, as the Sadducees, embraced some of the Notions of the Epicureans; others, as the Essenians, says [Philo. l. quod omnis probus liber.] Philo, had a Contempt for Logick, Physicks, and Metaphysicks; that is to say, whatever is useless, and Matter of meer Curiosity, in the Sciences. They only apply'd themselves to Morality and the Laws of God, which they explain'd after a sublime and allegorical Manner.

In our Saviour's Time it appears, that the main Study of the Jewish Doctors was chiefly the Traditions of their Fathers. Jesus Christ upbraids them frequently with having forsaken the Law of God, and its true Meaning, to ascribe Meanings and Explications to it, contrary to the Sense of the Law, and the Intention of the Law-giver. St. Paul, who had been bred up in these Principles, shews also the Absurdity of them in his Epistles, always calling back the Laws to their Original; and to their true Sense. But all this was not able to cure the Spirit of the Jews upon this Article; at this Day they are more bigotted to their Traditions than ever, and they make them the greatest Part of their Study. The Reader may see what we have said upon the Articles SCHOOLS, SYNAGOGUES, and TRADITIONS.

Style

STYLE, to write with. It is universally known, that the Antients often made use of Styles or Bodkins to write with upon Tables done over with Wax. These Styles were of Iron, Brass, or Bone, with a sharp Point at one End, and flat at the other, or pointed at one End, and the other form'd like a little round Spoon or Spatula. The sharp End was us'd for writing and making of Letters, and the other expung'd them. This was a great Convenience to the Writer; for he could put out again what he pleased, and yet no Erasure should appear. The flat Part of the Style left no Footsteps of what had been written, and they could write anew as they pleas'd upon the same Place. And this they could do as often as they found Occasion. Upon this was founded that Advice of Horace, of turning the Style, and blotting out often, if you would write what might deserve to be read:

Sæpe stylum vertas iterum quæ digna legi sint Scripturus.

[2 Kings xxi. 13.] The Scripture alludes to the same Custom in these Words; Delebo Jerusalem sicut deleri solent tabulæ, & delens vertam, & ducam crebrius stylum super faciem ejus: I will blot out Jerusalem as Men blot out Writing from their Writing-tables. I will turn and often rub the Style upon the Wax, till nothing shall appear. I will not leave the least Footsteps of that devoted City.

[Isai. viii. 1.] Isaiah received Orders from the Lord to write in a great Roll of Parchment, with the Style of a Man, Stylo hominis, what should be dictated to him. 'Tis asked, What is meant by that Style of a Man? Sure it is, it could not be one of those Styles of Metal that we are speaking of. They were not us'd for writing upon Parchment or Vellum, but upon Wood, Ivory, or Wax. It is therefore probable, that the Style of a Man, in this Place, signifies a Manner of Writing, which is easy, simple, natural, and intelligible, without Figures or any enigmatical Expressions. For generally the Prophets express'd themselves in a parabolical, enigmatical, and obscure Style. Here God intended that Isaiah should not speak or write after the Manner of the Prophets, but as other Men us'd to do.

Job wishes that his Discourses were written or engraved in a Book; with a Style of Iron; or upon a Plate of Lead, or on a Stone, with a Chisel or Engraver: Quis mihi det ut exarentur in libro stylo ferreo & plumbi lamina, vel celte sculpantur in silice? The antient Latin Manuscripts vary about the Word celte. The best and oldest generally read certè, the others celte. Now celte [See our Commentary upon Job viii. 24.] signifies an Engraver, which is not mention'd in the Hebrew Text, which is thus; Oh that my Words were now written, O that they were printed in a Book! That they were graven with an Iron Pen and Lead, in the Rock for ever! The Iron Pen or Style served also to write upon Lead, as well as upon Wax and Ivory.

[Jer. viii. 8.] Jeremiah says, that the Style of the Doctors of the Law, is truly a Style of Error, Error, and which writes nothing but Lyes. The Hebrew has it literally; The Pen of the Scribes is in vain. They have promis'd you Peace, but behold War. Elsewhere he says; a The Sin of Judah is written with a Pen of Iron, and with the Point of a Diamond. It is graven upon the Table of their Heart; or it is engraven upon their Heart, as upon Writing-tables. Instead of the Point of a Diamond, the Hebrew says, a Graver of Shamir. The Shamir is a Stone call'd Smyris, which was made use of to polish precious Stones, and to cut Glass[1]. See SHAMIR. All these Passages clearly shew the Use that was made of Styles and Writing-tables.

Succoth (II)

II. SUCCOTH, a City beyond Jordan, between the Brook Jabok and this River. Jacob at his Return from Mesopotamia, passing over the Brook Jabok, set up his Tents at Succoth,[1] where afterwards they [Josh. xiii. 27.] built a City. Joshua assign'd it to the Tribe of Gad. Solomon cast his large brazen Vessels, which he intended for the Service of the Temple, between Succoth and [1 Kings vii. 46.] Zarthan. St. Jerome says,[2] that Succoth was within the Canton of Scythopolis. The Jews tell us the Name of Darala[3] was afterwards given to Succoth. Gideon tore the Flesh of the principal Men of Succoth with Thorns and Briars, because they return'd him an haughty Answer, when he asked some Refreshments of them for his People, who were then pursuing the Midianites, Judg. viii. 5, 6, &c. Succoth-Benoth

SUCCOTH-BENOTH. The Scripture [2 Kings xvii. 30.] relates, that the Babylonians who were brought into the Country of Samaria by Shalmanesser, or by Esar-haddon King of Assyria, still continu'd the Worship of their false Gods, and made there Succoth-benoth, that is, the Tents of the young Women, or Places of Prostitution, where all young Women once in their lives prostituted themselves, in honour of the Goddess [Herodot. l. 1. c. 199.] Milytta[1]. Herodotus says, this was thus practis'd at Babylon. All the young Women of the Country are obliged, once in their lives, to prostitute themselves to a Stranger, in honour of Milytta, who is the same as Venus. Those that are rich present themselves before the Temple in cover'd Chariots, attended by a great Number of Domesticks. They go only out of Ceremony, and do not abandon themselves to Strangers, as the others do. But those of the common Sort stand before the Temple, having Crowns upon their Heads, and are separated from one another by small Cords, which, however, do not hinder Strangers from going in where they are, and choosing which they like best. They throw Money in their Laps, saying; I invoke the Goddess Milytta for you. And these Women must not refuse this Money, be it ever so little, because it is appointed to Uses which they call sacred; nor must they reject such as offer themselves. These lead them away out of Sight of the Temple, and after they have defiled them, they may return to their own Houses. 'Tis probably this abominable Custom, that the Babylonians brought with them into the Country of Samaria. The Rabbins will have it, that Succoth-benoth signifies a Hen and Chickens. Eusebius and St. Jerome seem to think, that it is a City [Euseb. & Hieron. in locis.] which these People built in Samaria: Others think it to be a particular Deity that they adored.

Sudarium

SUDARIUM. This is a Latin Word, which, according to several good Interpreters,[1] signifies a Bandage of Cloth, which was wrapp'd about the Head. Sudarium comes from Sudor, because this Linen was chiefly of use to receive and dry up the Sweat. We generally translate Sudarium by Handkerchief or Napkin; but it is certain its proper Signification and proper Use was to wipe off the Sweat of the Head and Face. Hence it is, that they have given the Name of Sudarium to the Linen Coverings of the Heads of dead Bodies in their Graves. The wicked Servant in the Gospel brought back his Master's Money which he had hid in a Napkin; Quam habui repositam in sudario; instead of putting it out to Use. And in the Acts of the Apostles, we read, that they brought their Sudaria of Linen, which St. Paul had made use of in wiping himself, and which, being apply'd to sick People, restored them to their Health.

The Word Sudarium is chiefly us'd in Ecclesiastical Phrase, to signify the Shrouds in which the Body of our Saviour was wrapp'd in his Sepulchre. They shew at Besancon, at Turin, at Tholouse, at Sarlat, and at Compeigne, the holy Sudarium or Shroud, in which is imprinted the Image of Jesus Christ. That which is at Tholouse was preserved for near the Space of three Centuries in the Abby of Cadoin, and was removed to Tholouse at the Time of the English Wars. 'Tis pretended it was recover'd out of the Hands of a Jew of Antioch in the Year 1098.

But these Sudaria are rather mortuary Cloths or Shrouds, than Sudaria properly so call'd. For in the Gospel of St. John, there is express mention made of the Sudarium that was upon the Head of Lazarus, Brother to Mary and Martha,[2] and upon the Head of Jesus Christ,[3] as they lay in their Tombs. And besides that, they were wrapp'd in Bandages, after the manner of that Country, where they thus wound up the Bodies of such as had been embalmed. Yet I do not pretend to deny, that besides these Bandages, and this Sudarium, there might be still some other Cloths to wrap the Body in. I can see nothing of them in the original Text of the Gospel of St. John; but, however, St. Luke and St. Mark sufficiently take Notice of them, under the Word SINDON. See Luke xxiii. 53. and Mark xv. 46.

Sulphur

SULPHUR. A fat Mineral, inflammable and vitriolick. They distinguish two Sorts of Sulphur; the yellow Sulphur, or common Sort, which is hard, shining, friable, easy to melt and be inflamed. 'Tis got from Mount Vesuvius, is melted on the Fire, and cast into Moulds to form it into Rouls. The Mines of Sulphur which are at the Foot of Mount Vesuvius, and of other Mountains of the same Nature, I mean burning Mountains or Volcano's, are the Cause of the Inflammation of the Earth in the Bowels of these Mountains. The other Kind of Sulphur is what they call, Sulphur vivum, which is a grey, fat, bituminous, inflammable Matter, to be found in many Places, and which serves to make the yellow Sulphur.

The Scripture speaks of Sulphur in more Places than one. The Hebrews call it [Gophrith גפריתGopher גפר] Gofrith, a Name which has much relation to the Hebrew Word Gopher, which signifies the Wood which Noah made use of to build his Ark. Moses says, that the Lord caus'd it to rain Fire and Brimstone upon Sodom and Gomorrah: That is to say, he destroy'd [Gen. xix. 24.] those Cities by sulphureous and fiery Exhalations. And in Deuteronomy xxix. 23. he says, that God consumed them by Sulphur and the burning of Salt. The Hebrews gave the Name of Salt to Nitre, Bitumen, and Sulphur, which are inflammable Substances. It is certain that Fire from Heaven fell down upon those wicked Cities. 'Tis also known, that the Soil wherein they were situate abounded with Nitre and Bitumen. And even to this Day the Bottom of the Dead-sea, and the Places round about, are plentifully stock'd with them. Therefore it is very probable, that the Fire from Heaven taking hold of this Bitumen, Nitre, or Sulphur, did not only burn to Ashes the five Cities of Pentapolis, but also consumed the whole Soil which at this Day is possess'd by the Lake Asphaltites, or the Dead-sea.

[Job xviii. 15.] Job, or rather Bildad one of his Friends, says, by way of Imprecation upon the Wicked, that Brimstone shall be scattered upon his Habitation. That Lightning or Thunder shall fall upon his House, and there leave the Scent of Sulphur. Or otherwise, that the Wicked shall be drove out of his House, and those that take Possession of it, should purify it by the Smell of Sulphur. This was a common Fumigation for driving away any bad Air, and for purifying infected Habitations. The Psalmist allots to [Psal. x. 7.] the Wicked their Portion of Fire, Sulphur, and tempestuous Winds; in a Word, Thunders and Storms: For that is the Meaning of Ignis & sulphur, & spiritus procellarum. [Isai. xxx. 33.] Isaiah, describing the Burning of the Valley of Tophet, which was defiled by Idolatry, says, that a great Pile is provided for it, to purify it by Fire, and that the Breath of the Lord should inflame it as a Torrent of Sulphur. Flatus Domini sicut torrens sulphuris succendens eam.

[Isa. xxxiv. 9.] The same Prophet, that he might give a lively Idea of that Vengeance which God should take of the wicked Nations, says, that in his Presence Rivers should be turned into Pitch, the Earth into Sulphur, and burning Pitch; that they should burn Night and Day, and No-body be able to extinguish them; and that their Smoke should ascend to Heaven without ceasing. What Strength is there in these Images! Ezekiel threatens the Army of Gog with the severest Effects of God's Wrath, the Plague, Blood, violent Rains, Thunder-stones, Fire, Sulphur, should fall upon them. We have already seen a Shower of Sulphur upon Sodom, and we often find it afterwards in the Revelations. Thunder, Lightning, and Fire from Heaven, generally leave after them a sulphureous Smell.

Sun

SUN, Sol. This is the great Luminary that God created at the Beginning, to preside over the Day,[1] as also he created the Moon to preside over the Night. The Sun has always been the Object of Worship and Adoration to the greatest Part of the People of the East. We think it to be the Sun that the Phenicians worshipp'd under the Name of Baal, and the Moabites under the Name of Chemosh, and the Ammonites by that of Moloch, and the Israelites by the Name of Baal, and of the King of the Host of Heaven. They did not separate his Worship from that of the Moon, whom they call'd Astarta, and the Queen of Heaven. They pay'd this Worship upon High-places, in Groves, and upon the Roofs of their Houses. Moses gave the Israelites Caution against this Worship: Take ye [Deut. iv. 19.] therefore good heed unto yourselves, — lest thou lift up thine Eyes unto Heaven, and when thou seest the Sun, and the Moon, and the Stars, even all the Host of Heaven, shouldst be driven to worship them, and serve them, which the Lord thy God hath divided unto all Nations under the whole Heaven. Elsewhere he condemns to Death [Deut. xvii. 3, 4, 5.] those that shall be perverted to the Worship of strange Gods, of the Sun, or of the Moon. [2 Kings xxiii. 11.] Josiah King of Judah took away out of the Temple of the Lord, the Horses, and burn'd the Chariots, that the Kings his Predecessors had consecrated to the Sun. Job says, that [Job xxxi. 26, 27, 28,] he look'd upon it as a very great Crime, and as renouncing the God that is Above, to kiss his Hand as a Token of Adoration, when he saw the Sun in all its Beauty and Splendour. [Ezek. viii. 16.] Ezekiel saw in the Spirit, in the Temple of the Lord, five and twenty Men of Judah, who turn'd their Backs upon the Sanctuary, and had their Faces towards the East, worshipping the Sun at his rising.

The Sun furnishes Matter to the greatest Part of the noble Similitudes, that the sacred Authors make use of. To represent a very great Calamity, an extraordinary Misfortune, they say the Sun was obscured, and the Moon withdrew her Light[2]. They did not believe that the Sun went round about the Earth, or that the Earth turn'd about its own Axis to the Sun; but they imagin'd when the Sun came to its setting, it return'd to the Place of its rising by some unknown [Eccles. i. 5, 6.] Way. See our Dissertation upon the System of the World, according to the antient Hebrews, printed before the Commentary upon Ecclesiasticus. The Scripture acquaints us with three very extraordinary and miraculous Accidents that happen'd to the Sun. The first was, when it stood still at the Command [Josh. x. 12, 13. 2 Kings xx. 11.] of Joshua. The second, when it return'd back in the Time of King Hezekiah. And the third was, when it was involved in Darkness, tho' the Moon was then in the Full, at the Time of our Saviour's Crucifixion. [Matth. xxvii. 45.]

[Psal. lxxi. 1.] To express a long Continuance of any thing that is glorious and illustrious, in Scripture Stile it is said, it shall continue as long as the Sun endures. For Example, it is said of the Reign of the Messiah, Permanebit cum sole, & ante lunam. And elsewhere, that his Throne is as durable as the [Psalm lxxxviii. 38. Isai. xxx. 26.] Sun; Thronus ejus sicut sol. That under his happy Dominion, the Light of the Moon shall be equal to that of the Sun, and that of the Sun shall be seven times more than ordinary. Jesus Christ is call'd the Sun of [Mal. iv. 2.] Righteousness; Orietur vobis sol justitiæ.

Sunday

SUNDAY, Dies Dominicus, the [Rev. i. 10.] Lord's Day. It is mention'd in the Revelations; I was in the Spirit on the Lord's Day. From the very Beginning the Day of the Resurrection of our Saviour, which happen'd to be the Day after the Sabbath, was honour'd by the Christians in a very particular Manner. And to preserve the Remembrance of this Day, so glorious to Jesus Christ, and beneficial to his Church, the Apostles thought fit to transfer to the Lord's Day, that Rest that was observed by the Jews upon their Sabbath. St. Barnabas [Barnab. Ep. p. 56.] in his Epistle says, that we celebrate the eighth Day with Joy, in Memory of the Resurrection of our Saviour, because it was on this Day that he arose again and ascended into Heaven. St. Ignatius the Martyr, in his Letter to the Magnesians, would have us honour this Day of the Lord, this Day of the Resurrection, as the first and most excellent of Days. St. Justin Martyr[1] says, that the Christians assembled together on this Day, because it was the Day of the Creation of the World, and of the Resurrection of Jesus Christ. The same thing may be seen in Irenæus[2], Tertullian[3], Origen[4], and in the Constitutions ascribed to the Apostles.

Superstition

SUPERSTITION, and Superstitious. These Words are found only in the New Testament. Festus Governor of Judea, speaking to King Agrippa, told him, that Paul had some Dispute with the other Jews, concerning Matters of their own Superstition. [Acts xxv. 19.] He spoke like a true Pagan, that was equally ignorant, both of the Christian Religion, and that of the Jews. St. Paul, [Colos. ii. 23.] writing to the Colossians, recommended to them, not to regard those false Teachers, who would persuade them to a Compliance with human Maxims, which have indeed some Appearance of Wisdom, in an affected Humility and Superstition. Lastly, the same Apostle, speaking to the Athenians, says to [Acts xvii. 22.] them; I perceive that in all Things ye are too superstitious.

The Latin Word Superstitio, may insinuate, either that a superstitious Person adds something to the ordinary Worship, quod superstat & superfluit, which is redundant and unnecessary; so that superstitio may stand for a superfluous Worship: Or it may intimate, that a superstitious Man looks upon God and Religion as an insupportable Yoke; Horribili super aspectu mortalibus instans, as Lucretius says. The Greeks call it Deisidaimonia, a the Terror of the Gods. For the superstitious Man looks upon God as a severe and rigid Master, and observes with Fear and Trembling what he thinks to be agreeable to him, for fear of provoking his Anger, and drawing his Resentment upon him. Varro said, that the pious Man honour'd and fear'd God, but the superstitious Man dreaded him, and was seized with Terror before him. And Maximus Tyrius tells us, that a Man truly pious looks upon God as a Friend full of Goodness, and the superstitious Man serves him with Sentiments of a base and mean Flattery.

In the Old Testament we find a great many sorts of Superstition prohibited; as all sorts of Divinations, and superstitious Observations of Dreams, and of the Flight of Birds; the several sorts of Idolatry and superstitious Worship of Angels; the sacrificing human Victims; the Pharisaical Traditions concerning Tythes; concerning the Observation of the Sabbath; concerning Purifications; and a vast many others with which Jesus Christ reproaches the Pharisees in the Gospel. St. Paul always vigorously oppos'd those Jewish Teachers, who would introduce their superstitious and vain Practices into Christianity. See Rom. xiv. 1, 2, 3, 4, &c. 1 Cor. viii. 3, 4, 5, &c. Colos. ii. 18, 19, 20, &c.

Susanna (I)

I. SUSANNA, Daughter of Chelcias, and Wife of Joacim, of the Tribe of Judah.[1] She dwelt at Babylon, being carry'd thither in Captivity with her Husband, probably at the same Time as Daniel; that is, in the Year of the World 3398, before Christ 602, before the vulgar Era 606. Susanna was a Woman of an extraordinary Beauty, and of as much Piety and Fear of God. The captive Jews that were then at Babylon, us'd to assemble at Joacim's House, for the Determination of their Affairs; and every Year they appointed two Judges, for the Decision of such Difficulties as might arise. Every Day about Noon Susanna had a Custom to take a Walk in her Husband's Garden. The Judges whom we mention'd, who were at Joacim's House, seeing her go into the Garden, conceived a violent Passion for her. They continued for some time without imparting their Desires to each other; but, at last, having both met in the same Place, to watch for an Opportunity of seeing Susanna, they discover'd their Inclinations to each other, and agreed upon Methods of surprizing her alone in the Garden. They went therefore and hid themselves; and Susanna coming in, and intending to bath herself, she sent her Maids into the House, to fetch Perfumes and such other Things.

Then the two Judges ran to Susanna, own'd their Passion, and threaten'd, if she would not consent to gratify them, that they would accuse her of meeting a young Man in the Garden, and of entertaining herself with him. Susanna fetch'd a deep Sigh, and told them; I see nothing but Danger on both Sides; for if I should do what you desire me, I am a dead Woman; and if I do it not, I cannot escape out of your Hands. But it is better to fall into your Hands, and be innocent, than to sin against the Lord. She then began to cry[2] out as loud as she could, and the old Men at the same time cry'd out against her; and one of them ran to the Door of the Garden, and open'd it. The People flock'd thither, and the two Judges telling them, that they had surprized Susanna with her Gallant; all the Servants of Joacim's House were much amazed at it, as having never before observed any such thing of Susanna.

The Day following, the People being assembled at Joacim's as usual, the two Judges sent to fetch Susanna, that she might appear before them. She came, accompany'd by her Father, Mother, Children, and all her Family. Then the two Judges stood up, and putting their Hands upon her Head, they testify'd, that they had seen her in the Garden with a young Man, and that they had surprized them in the very Act; that endeavouring to apprehend the Man, he made his Escape from them, but they secur'd Susanna; and confirm'd this Accusation by an Oath. All the Assembly gave Credit to them, as being Elders and Judges of the People, and Susanna was condemned to Death. She address'd herself to God, call'd him to witness her Innocence, and intreated him to make it appear.

The Lord heard her Prayers; and as they were going with her to Execution, a young Man, named Daniel, call'd out with a loud Voice, saying; I am innocent of the Blood of this Woman. Upon this they all stop'd, and Daniel upbraided them with their Credulity, and with making so slight an Enquiry into so weighty an Affair. Return, says he, and try her over again, for they have born false witness against her. When the People were come back to Joacim's House, Daniel said; Separate the Elders from each other, and let me examine them. After this was done, when the first came to be examin'd, Daniel ask'd him; Under what Tree did you see 'em confer together? He answer'd,[3] Under a Mastick-tree. Daniel said to him; Your Lye is ready to fall upon your own Head, for the Angel of the Lord will quickly saw you in two. Then the other Elder came, to whom he put the same Question. He answer'd, I saw them under an Holm-tree. Daniel told him, he should quickly receive the Reward of his Calumny, for the Angel of the Lord was ready to cut him in two in the Middle. Then all the People shouted for Joy, and made the two Elders suffer the same Penalty as they were going to inflict upon Susanna; that is, they took them forth and stoned them.

The History we have now related is not read in the Hebrew of Daniel, but only in the Greek. Many heretofore have disputed its Canonicalness, pretending it was only a pious Fable, invented as a Sample of a chaste and loyal Spouse. Julius Africanus wrote against the Truth of this History; but Origen[4] wrote a good Defence of it. And even St. Jerom, who in some Places is not very favourable to it,[5] and proceeds so far as to censure it as a meer Fable, in other Places says, that he only gave the Opinions of others; and that not only the Greeks and Latins, but also the Syrians and Egyptians, received it and admitted it as Scripture[6]. See our Preface to Daniel, and the Article DANIEL. And as to the Objection which is drawn from the Allusions between the Words SCHINON and SCHISEI, PRINON and PRISAI, see these Words under their several Articles, and the marginal Note a little before.

[Lyran. Salian. Delr. alii.] Several Interpreters have thought, that these two Judges or Elders, who were thus convicted of Forgery by Daniel, were Ahab and Zedekiah, false Prophets of Babylon, whom King Nebuchadnezzar caus'd to be roasted in the Fire for their [Jer. xxix. 21, 22.] Debaucheries: Whom the King of Babylon roasted in the Fire, because they have committed Villany in Israel, and have committed Adultery with their Neighbours Wives. But the History we have now read shews, that Susanna's Accusers were condemned and put to Death by the People, and very probably stoned, as Susanna was to have been, if Daniel had not defeated their Malice: And the King of Babylon did not intermeddle in this Matter.

II. SUSANNA, was an holy Woman who attended upon Jesus Christ with some other Women, as Mary Magdalen, and Joanna the Wife of Chuza, who administer'd to him of their Substance, and supply'd Necessaries not only to Jesus Christ, [Luke viii. 2, 3.] but to his Disciples also. Swallow SWALLOW. Mention is made of the [If. xxxviii. 14.] Swallow in Isaiah; Like a Crane or a Swallow, [Jer. viii. 7.] so did I chatter. And in Jeremiah; The Stork in the Heaven knoweth her appointed Times, and the Turtle, and the Crane, and the Swallow observe the Time of their Coming. [Tob. ii. 11.] It is observed in Tobit, that the Dung falling from a Swallow's Nest into the Eyes of this holy Man, was the Occasion of the Loss of his Sight. The Hebrew Word Sis, which is translated by a Swallow, according [סיסSis. עגורHagur.] to some Interpreters, signifies a Crane;[1] and that which is join'd along with it in Isaiah and Jeremiah, that is, hagur, according to the same Interpreters, stands for a Swallow. The Chaldee and Symmachus translate this Passage of Isaiah thus; I cried as the Swallow which is taken. And Aquila; as the Horse Agur.

The Septuagint, the Vulgate, and Bochart, think that Sis signifies a Swallow. But as for Hagur, the Septuagint, the Vulgate, and Symmachus have took it for a Verb. Bochart thinks it signifies a Crane. It is plain from Jeremiah, that these two Words signify two different Birds. Here are the Reasons that may convince us, that Sis signifies a Swallow. First, The antient Greek Interpreters took it in this Sense. Secondly, The Name Sis answers to the Cry of the Swallow; and the Goddess Isis, as they say, was changed into this Bird. Thirdly, The Swallow is a plaintive Bird, and a Bird of Passage, which perfectly agrees with the Meaning of Isaiah and Jeremiah. As to that Place in Tobit, it is universally agreed to signify a Swallow.

This Bird is black, with some Spots of a dirty Black under her Belly; its Flight is very unequal, and its Sight is very quick. It appears in Spring and Summer, and is gone in Autumn. 'Tis thought that it passes the Sea, and withdraws into hotter Climates, where it either hides itself in Holes in the Earth, or even in Marshes, and under the Water, where sometimes great Lumps of Swallows have been fish'd up, fix'd one to another by the Claws and Beak; and when they are laid in a warm Place, they move and recover, tho' before they seem'd to be dead. 'Tis call'd Chelidon in Greek, whence comes the Name of the Herb Chelidome, in English, Celandine, or Swallow-wort, because it is pretended, that with this Herb the Swallow opens the Eyes of her young ones, tho' they should even be made blind on purpose. We see by the History of Tobit, how dangerous the Fumes or Dung of the Swallow is to the Eyes. We are assured, that the Flesh of these Birds burnt to Ashes, is excellent for Distempers of the Eyes.

We are told by the Fable, that *Philo*mela or Progne, the Wife of Tereus, was transformed into a Swallow, and that by her Note, which is a very mournful one, she bewails the Loss of Atys, whom she loved. The Swallow is good for nothing; she cannot be kept either in a Cage or an Aviary. She is said to breed twice a Year; once in the Climate to which she transports herself while the Winter governs here, and again in those six Months that she continues in this Country. Their chief Food are the Flies that they catch as they fly. They commonly make their Nests in Chimneys, and every Year return to the same Place. Their Nests are made of Clay or Dirt, with little Bits of Straw or Chaff mingled with it.

The Martins that build their Nests in the Windows of Houses and Churches, are a Species of Swallows; but their Flesh is better, and they are whiter under the Belly than Swallows are.

The River-Swallow makes its Nest in Holes that it finds in the Banks of Rivers.

The great Swallow, or Martin, or the Eaglet, lies in great Holes, or in lofty Buildings, where it lays its Eggs. It feeds upon Flies, Butterflies, May-buggs, which it gobbles up as it flies. Bellon says, that its Eye-sight is so quick, that it perceives a Fly at the Distance of a thousand Paces. There are also Sea-Swallows. I do not find that Moses declares himself concerning the Swallow, whether it is to be reputed clean or unclean.

Swine

SWINE, an Animal well known, the Use of which was expresly forbid the Hebrews. [Lev. xi. 7. Deut. xiv. 8.] They had the Flesh of this Animal in such Detestation, that they would not so much as pronounce its Name, but instead of it said, That Beast, That Thing. When old [2 Macc. vi. 18.] Eleazar was taken by the People of Antiochus Epiphanes, he was vehemently urged to taste Swine's Flesh, or, at least, to pretend to taste it. They open'd his Mouth by force, to compel him to eat of it; but he chose rather to suffer Death, than to break the Law of God, and to give Offence to the weaker People of his Nation. Porphyry [Porphyr. de abstin. animal.] affirms, that the Hebrews and Phenicians abstain'd from Pork, because there was none in their Country. It had been much more congruous to have said, there was none, or but very little, because they bred no Hogs, by reason of that Abhorrence they had conceived for 'em: For it is certain they might have had them if they pleas'd, and we know from the Gospel,[1] that there were Herds of Swine in our Saviour's Time. Some antient Authors have thought,[2] that the Jews forbore eating the Flesh of this Animal, only because they paid divine Honours to it;

[Petron. Satiric. Fragment.] Judæus licet & porcinam numen adoret, [; Et Cœli, &c.] Vulgo legitur Et Cilli summas advocet auriculas.

But this is a Calumny so notorious, as not to deserve any Confutation. Profane Authors rallied them upon this Abstinence, saying, that the Jews would as soon chuse to kill a Man as a Hog;

[Juvenal. Satir. 15. Apud Macrob.] Nec distare putant humanâ carne suillam.

Augustus was us'd to say, that it were better to be one of Herod's Hogs than his Son, because this Prince had put to Death two or three of his Sons. This Abhorrence of Swine's Flesh was not peculiar to the Jews; for the Egyptians had such an Horror for this Animal, that if any one had touch'd it, tho' but by chance, he went and plung'd himself in the River, Cloaths and all. They did not allow Swinherds to come into their Temples, nor would have any Correspondence with them. The Arabian [Herodot. l. 2. c. 47. Solin. Polyhist.] Scenites eat no Pork; and Solinus even assures us, that if Hogs were but carry'd into their Country, they would presently die. 'Tis observed, that when Adrian rebuilt Jerusalem, he set up the Image of a Hog in bas relief upon the Gates of the City, to drive the Jews away from it, and to express the greater Contempt for that miserable People.

Our Saviour in the Gospel forbids his Disciples to cast their Pearls before Swine, for fear, says he, they should tread them under Foot, and turn against you and tear you. Which is as much as to say, that we must not rashly fall to discourse on divine Matters, and preach up certain Truths before an Audience ill prepared to receive them. This will serve only to provoke them more, and to expose those Truths to be insulted and despised. The same is injoin'd [Ecclus. xxxii. 6.] in Ecclesiasticus: Do not speak, but when you find a Hearer dispos'd to receive your Doctrine; Ubi auditus non est, ne effundas sermonem. Upon this Maxim is founded the Practice of the antient Fathers of the Church, not to speak of the Mysteries of Christianity before the Pagans, not to speak of 'em but with great Circumspection, and in the Presence of such as are well dispos'd to revere and entertain them. The Prodigal Son, mention'd by St. Luke, [Luke xv. 15.] when he had wasted his Patrimony, was reduced to such Distress, as to be glad to feed Swine; and happy was he that he could feed himself with the same Food.

[Prov. xi. 22.] 'Tis said in the Proverbs; As a Jewel of Gold in a Swine's Snout, so is a fair Woman which is without Discretion. The Jewish and Arabian Women were sometimes used to wear Rings in their Nostrils to adorn themselves. But nothing can be more ridiculous than to put a gold Ring or a Jewel in a Swine's Snout.

St. Peter compares those Sinners that frequently relapse into their Sins, to a Swine that as soon as he is wash'd, goes again to wallow in the Mire. 'Tis a kind of Proverb, that a Hog loves Dirt, and is pleas'd with wallowing in the Mud and Filth.

Sword

SWORD. In the Stile of the Hebrews, the Sword is often us'd for War. The Lord shall send the Sword into the Land; he shall cause War to come. The Mouth of the Sword, is the Edge of the Sword. A Man that draws the Sword; educens gladium, is a Soldier by Profession. The Sword of the [Job v. 15.] Mouth; Gladius oris, is pernicious Discourse, Accusations, Slander, Calumny. Manus gladii, the Hand of an armed Soldier. [Psal. lvi. 5. Ps. vii. 12.] Their Tongue is a two-edged Sword; the Tongue of the Wicked is more dangerous than the Sword. If he turn not, he will whet his Sword: he will send War, or will strike him with his Wounds. Gladius anceps [Ps. cxlix. 6. Ex. xx. 25. Gen. xxvii. 40.] , a two-edged Sword. To lift the Sword upon the Stones, is to cut them with a Chisel or other Instrument. By thy Sword shalt thou live, thou shalt support thyself by War and Rapine. Nation shall not lift [Isa. ii. 4.] up Sword against Nation, shall not make War, smite, wound, or kill. They that take the Sword shall perish with the Sword; [Mat. xxvi. 52.] they that take up the Sword by their own Authority, and would do Justice to themselves, deserve to be put to Death by the Sword of Authority. Or this is a kind of Proverb: Those that take the Sword to smite another, generally suffer by it themselves. The Word of God is quick and powerful, and sharper than any two-edged Sword: It penetrates even to the Bottom of the Soul, and insinuates it self into the Heart and Mind. St. Paul exhorts the [Eph. vi. 17.] Ephesians, to arm themselves with the Word of God, as with a spiritual Sword, to defend themselves against all the Enemies of their Souls.

Sycomore

SYCOMORE, a Tree call'd the Egyptian Fig-tree; its Name is compos'd of Sycos, a Fig-tree, and Moros, a Mulberry-tree. It partakes of the Nature of each of these Trees; of the Mulberry-tree in its Leaves, and of the Fig-tree in its Fruit, which is pretty like a Fig in its Shape and Bigness. This Fruit grows neither in Clusters, nor at the Ends of the Branches, but sticking to the Trunk of the Tree. Its taste is pretty much like a wild Fig. It does not grow ripe till it is rubb'd with Iron Combs, a after which Rubbing it ripens in[1] four Days. Amos shews the same Thing when he says,[2] I was no Prophet, neither was I a Prophet's Son; but I was an Herdman, and a Gatherer of Sycomore-Fruit, or wild Figs. Pliny and other Naturalists observe, that these Figs don't ripen except they are rubb'd; Scalpendo tantum ferreis unguibus, aliter non maturescit. And Saint Jerome upon Amos says, that without this Management the Figs cannot be eaten, because of their intolerable Bitterness; Sycomori agrestes afferunt ficus, quæ si non vellicentur amarissimas cariculas faciunt.

To make this Tree fruitful, they made Chinks and Clefts in the Bark, through which a kind of milky Liquor continually distils. This causes a little Bough to be form'd, sometimes having six or seven Figs upon it. They are hollow, without Grains, and there is found a little yellow Matter, which is generally a Nest of Grubs. These Figs are sweet, but not good for the Stomach; they weaken it, and create a Nausea, but at the same Time moisten and refresh.

A great many of these Sycomores grow in Egypt, especially about Cairo; and some of 'em are of such Substance, that three Men can hardly grasp them. There were some also in Judea, since we find Zaccheus climb'd up into a Sycomore to see Jesus Christ pass by; [Luke xix. 4.] being, it seems, of so low a Stature, that he could not otherwise see him because of the Multitude.

Syene

SYENE, a City to the southern Frontiers of Egypt or Ethiopia, between Thebes and the great Cataracts of the Nile. Ezekiel places it at the Extremity of Egypt, opposite to the [Eze. xxix. 10. xxx. 6.] Land of Cush; A turre Syenes, usque ad terminos Chus. But the Land of Cush is in Arabia petrea, towards the Bay of the Red-sea. But the Hebrew might also be translated in this Manner[1]; From Migdol to Syene, and to the Frontiers of Cush. The Land of Cush was also Ethiopia properly so call'd, which is above, and to the South of Syene, which is the utmost City of Egypt. Migdol signifies a Tower, and we find in Moses a City by this Name. [Ex. xiv. 2. Ezek. xxx. 6.] Ezekiel also puts Migdol and Syene as the two Extremities of Egypt; A turre Sienes, gladio cadetis in ea. Or, according to the Hebrew, from Migdol to Syene. Josephus assigns the [ממגדול סינהJoseph. de Bello, l. 5. c. 11.] Length of Egypt to be two thousand Stadia or Furlongs, from Pelusium to Syene.

As to the City of Syene it self, it was very well known to the Antients,[2] who speak of it as the farthest City of Egypt, towards Ethiopia. Pliny says, it is in a Peninsula, upon the Eastern Shore of the Nile; that it is a Mile round, and that it [Strab. l. 17. Plin. l. 2. c. 73.] had a Roman Garison. Strabo says, that there were three Roman Cohorts, to hinder the Irruptions of the Ethiopians. He adds, that in this City there was a Well, wherein the Sun shone directly to the Bottom; and that here the Sun made no Shadow at Noon, when he is in the Beginning of the Sign Cancer. Pliny also speaks of it; Solstitii die medio nullam umbram jaci. And Lucan;

Syllæus

[Joseph. Antiq. l. 16. c. 11. p. 506.] SYLLÆUS, an Arabian Prince. He came to Jerusalem with a Commission from Obodas King of Arabia, to treat of some Affairs, and fell in love with Salome the Sister of Herod, who was then Widow to Costobarus. He propos'd the Match to her, and Salome shew'd no Repugnance to it; and it was soon perceiv'd at Herod's Court, that Salome and Syllæus had no Aversion to each other. Some Time after Syllæus return'd back to Obodas, but was obliged to make a second Journey into Judea, upon the same Account that had brought him thither before. Then he asked of King Herod, that he might have leave to marry his Sister Salome. Herod spoke to her of it, who easily consented to it. But when it was propos'd to Syllæus to make Profession of Judaism, which was to be one of the Conditions of the Marriage, he absolutely refus'd, saying, He should be stoned at his Return into his own Country, if he changed his Religion. And thus he return'd again to Obodas.

This is the same Syllæus,[1] who, having engaged to provide Ælius Gallus with Guides and Ammunition for an Expedition he was to make into Arabia, betray'd him, and forfeited his Word. He exercised the same Treachery towards his King Obodas, whom he deprived of his Kingdom, and left him only the Name of King. And when Herod demanded of him sixty Talents, which he had lent him for the Use of Obodas his Master;[2] instead of restoring this Sum, as he had promis'd upon Oath in presence of the Governors of Syria, Syllæus went to Rome, where he began to slander Herod to the Emperor Augustus. He, too credulously believing the Insinuations of this Sharper, was in great Wrath against Herod; but Herod afterwards undeceiving him, Augustus remanded Syllæus into the Province, that he might satisfy his Creditors, and be punish'd according to his Merits. He return'd indeed into Judea and Arabia, but perform'd nothing of what the Emperor had order'd him. He afterwards return'd to Rome, where Antipater the Son of Herod renew'd the same Complaints against him as had been made before[3]. Besides, he was convicted of attempting to poison Herod, by the Assistance of one Corinthus, who was one of his Guards; so that at last he there received the just Rewards of all his wicked Actions.

Symbol

SYMBOL. This Word comes from the Greek Symbolon,[1] which signifies a Mark or Pledge, which is agreed upon to distinguish one another; for Example, among such Persons who were join'd together by the Bands of Friendship or Hospitality. When they went to one another, they carry'd their Symbols or Pledges, to shew they were of such a Family, such a Society, of such a Place, or such a Religion. Symbolum also signifies what each contributed to a Feast or Entertainment, that was made at a common Charge, whether each gave a Piece of Money, or brought Wine, or Provisions. We find the Word Symbolum in this Sense in the Proverbs;[2] Noli esse in comessationibus eorum qui carnes ad vescendum conferunt; quia vacantes potibus, & dantes Symbola consumentur. Be not found at the Entertainments of those that bring Provisions to eat together; for passing their Time away in drinking, and in making those Feasts wherein every one supplies his Share of the Charge, and pays his Club, they come to ruin. But the Hebrew says only; Be not amongst Wine-bibbers, amongst riotous Eaters of Flesh: For the Drunkard and the Glutton shall come to Poverty.

In the Language of the Church, that is call'd Symbol which makes the Matter of the Sacraments; which is sensible, and expos'd to the View of the Eyes. Thus in Baptism, Water is the Symbol of this Sacrament, and of that inward Purification, which is represented by this Sacrament. Also in the Eucharist, Bread and Wine are the Symbols of the Body and Blood of Jesus Christ, which are really present in this Sacrament . The Reader may see Suicer in his Thesaurus Ecclesiasticus ex Patribus Græcis, under the Word Symbolum, where he learnedly treats of this Question; tho' we cannot approve of his Sentiments concerning the Eucharist.

Symbol is also said particularly of the Apostles Creed, which is, as it were, an Epitome of the Doctrine of Jesus Christ and of the Christian Church. It was, as it were, the Badge and Signal by which Christians could distinguish one another. Rufinus says, that he had been inform'd by Tradition, that when the Apostles were [Rufin. de Symbol. P. 539.] about to separate from each other, they assembled together, and each communicating his Thoughts concerning the principal Articles of Faith, they compos'd this Symbol, which is, as it were, the Abridgement and Compendium of the Christian Faith. St. Jerome also imputes to the Apostles the Symbol or Creed that we have under their [Hieron. Ep. 61. c. 9. Leo Ep. 27. P. 491, 492.] Name. Leo says, that it contains twelve Articles of the twelve Apostles. Some even pretend,[3] that each Apostle contributed his Article, and shew which Article belongs to which Apostle. But there is no sufficient Authority for this Opinion, nor any Agreement among those that have advanced it.

[Aug. Confess. l. 8. c. 2. Ambros. Ep. 7.] They usually rehearsed the Symbol before Baptism,[4] and in some Places they pronounced it publickly from the Gallery of the Church, in Presence of all the People. 'Twas received from the Apostles without writing, and it was even forbidden to write it down, as several Fathers testify[5]. It appears from what they relate of it, that it was shorter than that we now have; which makes it probable, that it was not every where the same. Saint Ambrose thinks, that the Church of Rome has for a long time preserved it such as it was at first received, without making any Addition to it. But that we now make use of is longer than that of the Romish

Church, as may be seen by what Rufinus says of it, and by the Copies which have been handed down to us. Those Authors may be seen which have expresly treated of this Matter, as Vossius, and Usher de Symbolo, Father Alexander's Dissertation upon Ecclesiastical History, t. 1. M. du Pin, and the Remarks of the Benedictin Fathers of St. Vann upon his Work. 'Tis thought it was about the Year 36 of the vulgar Era, that the Apostles, before their Separation, compos'd the Symbol of which we are now speaking.

Symmachus

SYMMACHUS, a famous Translator of the Books of the Old Testament, out of Hebrew into Greek. He was a Samaritan by Birth, and lived at the End of the second Century, under the Emperor Severus. Epiphanius says, that he was in good Reputation [Epiphan. de ponder. & mensur.] in his own Country, and held a considerable Rank among the learned Men of Samaria. But having an Ambition of becoming the Head and Master of them, and being disgusted at their Refusal of conferring this Dignity upon him, he left Samaria, and settled among the Jews. He even submitted to the receiving of a second Circumcision from them; for the Animosity between the Jews and Samaritans was carry'd so far, that they obliged all Proselytes from one Religion to the other to be re-circumcised.

After this Symmachus embraced Christianity,[1] and herded with the Sect of the Ebionites. It was in Defence of these Hereticks against the Catholicks, that he undertook a new Translation of the Books of the Old Testament into Greek. To which end he gives the most favourable Turn he can to the Text, conformable to the Notions of that Sect, who acknowledged Jesus Christ to be the Messiah, but thought him not to be God, or the Son of God. They likewise deny'd a future Judgment, and maintained several other erroneous Doctrines.

The Method that Symmachus takes in his Translation, is very different from that of Aquila or Theodotion. Aquila endeavours, in a close and servile Manner, to give the literal Sense and Signification of every Word of the Text, without much regarding the Coherence of the Discourse, or the Meaning of the Text; so that his Translation was rather a Dictionary for teaching the literal Signification of the Terms, than a Translation for shewing the Sense of the Text. But Symmachus,[2] on the contrary, endeavour'd much more to express what he thought to be the Meaning of the Text, than the Power of every Word. Theodotion keeps the middle Way between Aquila and Symmachus; his Version does not appear to be a Paraphrase, like that of Symmachus; nor a Dictionary, like that of Aquila. He strives to give the Sense of the Hebrew Text in Greek Words answering to the Hebrew, as far as the different Genus's of the two Languages would allow. We have now only some Fragments of the Versions of these antient Translators, which have been gather'd together by the great Pains of the Reverend Father D. Bernard de Montfaucon, in two Volumes in Folio, intitled, The Hexapla of Origen. The antient Fathers have spoke of certain Hereticks call'd Symmachians, whom some think to have been the Disciples and Followers of Symmachus the Translator, of whom we are now speaking.

Symphony

SYMPHONY. This Word is taken for the Agreement of several Voices, a and a Concert of several Instruments, or for a particular sort of Instrument. St. Luke takes it [Luke xv. 25. Vulg.] in the first Sense, when he says, that the Brother of the prodigal Son, returning out of the Field, heard in his Father's House a Concert of Instruments, and the Rejoycing of those that danced; or the Voices of those that sung; Audivit symphoniam [Dan. iii. 5. 7, 10, 15. Rev. ii. 9. iii. 9. Ex. xxxiv. 31. Num. i. 3 4. xvi. 2, &c.] & chorum. Daniel takes it in the second Sense, for an Instrument of Musick, which was a Viol, or some Instrument approaching thereto. See our Dissertation upon the Instruments of Musick of the antient Hebrews, printed before the second Tome upon the Psalms.

Synagogue

SYNAGOGUE.[1] This Greek Word signifies either an Assembly, or the Place where the Assembly meets. In the first Sense is commonly understood the Church of the Jews, compared or opposed to that of the Christians. Thus we say, that the Synagogue is a Slave, that it is reprobated, that it is the Rival of the Christian Church. St. John in his Revelations, speaking of Hereticks that corrupted the sound Doctrine of Jesus Christ, calls them the Synagogue of Satan.

St. Jerome, in the Latin Text of the Vulgate, gives the Name of Princes of the Synagogue, or of the Assembly, Principes Synagogæ, to those principal Jews who had the Precedence among the People in their Assemblies in the Desart. We find also, Synagoga Deorum, Synagoga potentium, Synagoga peccatorum, Synagoga populi, Synagoga superborum, for the Assembly of the Judges, of great Men, of Sinners, of the People. Mention is made in the Maccabees of the [1 Macc. ii. 42.] Synagogue of the Assideans, who probably were a kind of Sect, or Order of the Jews, which made a Profession of stricter Piety.

[2 Kings iv. 23. Judith vi. 21. Ps. lxxiv. 8. Ezekiel xxxiii. 31] Synagogue most commonly signifies the Place where the Jews assembled to pray, to read, and to hear the reading of the holy Books, and other Instructions. It is often mention'd in the Gospels and the Acts, because Jesus Christ and his Apostles generally went to preach in the Synagogues. The Origin of these Synagogues is not very well known, and many learned Men have thought them a late Institution. Yet we see some Footsteps of them even in the Time of Elisha. Devout Persons in the Time of this Prophet assembled themselves to him on the Sabbath-Day, to hear the Law read to them. Judith pass'd the Night in Prayer, in a Place of Prayer at Bethulia. Her History is commonly placed under Manasseh. The Author of Psalm lxxiv, describing the Havock that the Army of Nebuchadnezzar had made in Jerusalem, says, They have burnt up all the Synagogues of God in the Land. The Captive Jews beyond the Euphrates assembled themselves to Ezekiel, to hear the Word of the Lord. Mordecai made all the Jews of Shushan to come into the Place of Prayer, to recommend to God the Undertaking of [Est. iv. 16. 3 Macc. c. ult. Act. xv. 21.] Queen Esther. The Author of the third Book of Maccabees, who lived under Ptolemy Philopator, King of Egypt, a long Time before the Persecution of Antiochus Epiphanes, says, that the Jews of Egypt being deliver'd from the Danger that threaten'd them, set up a Place of Prayer near Alexandria. See PROSEUCHE. Saint James says in the Acts, that Moses of old Time hath in every City them that preach him, being read in the Synagogues every Sabbath-day.

After the Time of the Maccabees, Synagogues became so frequent in Israel, that there were some in almost every Place in the Country. Maimonides says,[2] that where-ever any Israelites were found, there they us'd to build a Synagogue. 'Tis affirm'd, that in the City of Jerusalem alone,[3] were no less than four hundred and sixty, or even four hundred and eighty. Every trading Fraternity had one of their own, and even Strangers built some for those of their own Nation. Hence it is, that in the Acts of the Apostles we find the Synagogues of the Alexandrians, of the Asiaticks, of the Cilicians, of the Freed-men, of those of Cyrene, appointed for such of the Inhabitants of these Cities, or of these Nations, as should at any Time be at Jerusalem. We shall speak afterwards of the Synagogue of the Freed-men, or Synagoga Libertinorum.

The Synagogue was a publick Edifice, situate either within or without the City, and generally in an elevated Place. The Jews would have them more eminent than the other Buildings, or private Houses, and always insisted upon this, unless they were hindred by a superior Power. Generally they were cover'd, and thereby distinguish'd from the Proseuches, which were commonly in the Fields, and open to the Heavens. In the midst of the Synagogue was a Desk or Pulpit, upon which the Book or Roll of the Law was read very solemnly. There likewise he stood who intended to harangue the People. At the highest Part of the Synagogue, or towards the East,[4] and over-against the Door, which is always to the West, as far as can well be, is the Chest or Press, wherein the Book or Roll of the Law is kept, wrap'd up in some fine embroider'd Cloth. The Women are there distinct from the Men, and seated in a Gallery inclosed with Lattices, so that they may see and hear, but not be seen.

Every Synagogue has its Chief, or perhaps several Chiefs and Officers, more or fewer, according to the Circumstances of Places. There is one call'd Chazan,[5] who appoints and chants the Prayers. There is another who keeps the Keys, and is a kind of Church-warden, whom they call Sciamas, or Servant. The Prince of the Synagogue, in the Gospel, call'd Archisynagogus; and the [Matth. v, 22, 35.] Angel of the Synagogue, or Sage, in Hebrew, Chacham, presides in the Assemblies, and in judicial Affairs that are sometimes there decided, against those who have given any Scandal, and transgress'd the Law in any important Matter; They inflict upon the guilty Person thirty-nine Strokes with a Whip. The same Presidents invite those to speak in the Synagogue, whom they think capable of it, and offer that Honour to Strangers, if there are any that seem to have the Gift of Speaking. Thus our Saviour often spoke in these Assemblies; and St. Paul, [Luk.iv.16. Mat.iv.13. ix. 35. & passim. Acts xiii. 13, 14, 15.] being at Antioch of Pisidia, was invited by the Princes of the Synagogue, to make a Discourse to them for their Edification.

The Word Synagoga, as signifying a Place of Assembly, is us'd also to express Christian Churches. For Example, Saint [Jam. ii. 2.] James says, If there come unto your Assembly (or Synagogue) a Man with a Gold Ring, [Heb.x.25.] &c. And St. Paul says, Not forsaking the assembling of our selves together, as the manner of some is, where the Greek reads Synagogue.

The Synagogue of the Freed-men, Synagoga Libertinorum, was, according to many [Acts vi. 9.] Interpreters, that of those Jews, who having been led away captive by Pompey and by Sosius,[6] had afterwards recover'd their Liberty, and were retired to Jerusalem, when Tiberius drove away the Jews out of Italy.[7] Others will have it, that St. Luke wrote Lybistinorum, and not Libertinorum; and that the Lybistini were People of Libya, joining to Egypt. Libertini is not a Greek Word, and Lybistini would better suit with the Tenor of Saint Luke's Discourse; but the Manuscripts are not favourable to this Conjecture. See the Commentators upon Acts vi. 9.

The Jewish Authors[8] give this general Rule for the Construction of Synagogues. Where-ever there are ten Batelnim, a Synagogue ought to be built. The Signification of the Word Batelnim has been much controverted. Buxtorf[9] thinks them to be Persons receiving a Stipend for duly assisting at divine Service, that there may be always ten Persons, at least, to assemble together. Lightfoot imagines them to have been Ministers and Officers of the Synagogue. But the most probable Opinion is, that they were Persons of a mature Age, free, and in a Condition to assist constantly at the Service, on all Days of assembling, which are, at least, two Days a Week, besides the Sabbath. So that always upon these Days there were present that Number of Assistants, without which the Service could not be perform'd. The three Days of assembling were Monday, Friday, and Saturday, without including the Days of Fasting or solemn Festivals. On these Days they repaired three times to the Synagogue, in the Morning, Afternoon, and in the Evening, where they said their Prayers. As for other Days, they also pray'd three times in private. See PRAYERS.

The great Synagogue. The Hebrews a give this Name to a Company of six-score Persons, at the Head of whom was Ezra or Esdras, at their Return from the Babylonish Captivity. This Company was chiefly establish'd for two Reasons. The first was to take Care of restoring the Observation of the Law, according to the antient and approved Practice, that obtained before the Captivity. The second was, to collect all the sacred Books into a Body, and to compose thereof what is call'd the Canon of the Holy Scriptures, and to give an exact and correct Edition of them. They pretend, that after Esdras, Daniel and his three Companions Shadrach, Meshech, and Abednego, held the first Places ; that Simon the Just was at the lower End of the Assembly, and that all these Members were cotemporary.

But this Disposition cannot be supported by Chronology ; for Simon the Just lived a long Time after Daniel and Esdras. But the Hebrew Chronologers do not look so narrowly into Matters. What appears to be most certain in this Affair, is, that Esdras began the Reformation now mention'd ; that it was continued by some of the wiser and more enlightned Jews, and was at last compleated, especially as to the Canon of the Scriptures, under Simon the Just, who was made Highpriest of the Jews in the Year of the World 3702, before Jesus Christ 298, before the vulgar Era 302 ; and who died in the Year of the World 3711, before Christ 289, before the vulgar Era 293.

Syntyche

SYNTYCHE, mention'd by St. Paul [Phil. iv. 2.] to the Philippians, was a Woman illustrious for her Vertue and good Works, and who was, as it were, at the Head of the Church at Philippi,[1] with another Woman call'd Euodias. 'Tis thought St. Paul speaks of 'em when he says, Help those Women which laboured with me in the Gospel. But some Difficulties or Disturbances had happen'd between them, and therefore the Apostle exhorts them, that they be of the same Mind in the Lord. We know none of the Particulars of their Lives. Syntyche is set down in the Number of the Saints on July 22, and the Martyrologies insinuate, that her Body rests at Philippi in Macedonia.

[Act. xxviii. 12.] SYRACUSE, a famous City in Sicily, standing upon the Eastern Coast of this Island. St. Paul went ashore there in his Way to Rome, and continued there three Days. Thence he went to Rhegium, in the 61st Year of the vulgar Era.

Syria

[Gen. x. 22. Aram.] SYRIA, call'd, in Hebrew, Aram, from the Name of the Patriarch who peopled the chief Provinces of it. We have already spoke of him under the Article ARAM. The Arameans, or Syrians, possess'd Mesopotamia, Chaldea, a Part of Armenia ; Syria, properly so call'd, comprehended between Euphrates towards the East, the Mediterranean towards the West, Cilicia to the North, Phenicia, Judea, and Arabia deserta towards the South. The Hebrews were originally Arameans, since they came out of Mesopotamia, and therefore it is said, that Jacob was a poor Aramean.[1] It is certain, however, that he was not descended from Aram, but from [Amos ix. 7.] Arphaxad, another Son of Shem. Amos seems to say, that the Lord brought up the Assyrians or Aram from Kir, as he had brought up the Philistines from Caphtor. That is to say, that Aram, or his Posterity, came to dwell in Syria, when they quitted the Neighbourhood of the River Cyrus, which is in Armenia.

Syria of the two Rivers, or Mesopotamia of Syria, as it is call'd in the Vulgate, or Aram Naharaim, as it is call'd in the Hebrew, is comprehended between the two Rivers Tigris and Euphrates.

Syria of Damascus, is that of which Damascus was the Capital, and which extended [Aram Damashek,] eastward along by Mount Libanus. Its Borders are not fixed, but varied according as the Princes that reign'd at Damascus were more or less powerful.

Syria of Zobah, or Soba, or Sobal, as it is call'd by the Septuagint, was probably Cele-syria, or Syria the hollow or flat. Its Capital was Zobah, a City unknown, unless [Gen. xiv. 15.] it be the same as Hoba or Hobal, to the North of Damascus. See HOBAL or ABILA.

Syria of Maachah, or of Beth-maachah, [Aram Naharaim. Aram Tsobah. Aram Maacha.] or of Machati, was also towards Libanus. See 2 Sam. x. 6, 8. 1 Kings xiii. 20. 2 Kings xv. 29. It extended beyond Jordan, and was given to Manasseh. Deut. iii. 14. Josh. xii. 4. See MAACHAH.

Syria of Rohob, or Rehob, was that Part [Aram Rehob or Rechob.] of Syria of which Rehob was the Capital.[2] But Rohob was to the northern Frontier of the Land of Promise, Numb. xiii. 21. upon the Way or Pass that leads to Emath or Hamath. It was given to the Tribe of Asher, and is contiguous to Aphek, which was in Libanus. Laish, otherwise call'd Dan, situate at the Fountains of Jordan, was in the Country of Rohob. Hadadezer, King of Syria of Zobah, was Son of Rehob or Rohob, or perhaps a Native of the City of this Name. The Ammonites call'd to their Assistance against David, the Syrians of Rehob, of Zoba, of Maachah, and of Ish-tob. Syria of Tob, or of Ish-tob, or of the Land of Tob, or of the Tubieni, as they are call'd in the Maccabees, was in the Neighbourhood of Libanus, and to the northern Extremity of Palestine. See TOB. When Jephthah was thrust out by his Brethren from Gilead, he withdrew into the Land of Tob, Judg. xi. 3, 5.

Syria of Emath or Hamath, is that of which the City of Hamath upon the Orontes was the Capital. See HAMATH.

Syria, without any other Appellation, stands for the Kingdom of Syria, of which Antioch became the Capital after the Reign of the Seleucidæ. Before this Time it was very rare to find the Name Syria us'd by itself. The Provinces of Syria were generally express'd by the Addition of the City that was the Capital of the Province.

Celo-syria, or Cele-syria, or the Lower Syria, is known in more Places than one of the Maccabees[3]. The Word Cœle-syria, according to the Force of the Greek, signifies Syria cava, or Syria the hollow or deep. It may be consider'd either in a proper and restrain'd Sense, and then it will comprehend only the Tract of Land that lies between Libanus and Antilibanus; or in a larger Signification, and then it will comprehend all the Country in the Obedience of the Kings of Syria, from Seleucia to Arabia and Egypt. This is what Strabo informs us of. We have already observed, that Syria of Zobah was nearly the same as Celo-syria.

Syria of Palestine, Syria Palestina, is read in some Authors,[4] and Josephus[5] himself sometimes comprehends Palestine under Syria. 'Twas because this Province was long under the Government of the Kings of Syria, who appointed Governors there, that were call'd Governors of Syria.

We have already spoke at large of Ben-hadad, Hazael, Hadadezer, Hadad, Rezin, and the other Kings of Syria, as may be seen under their respective Articles. As the Succession of these Princes is unknown, and the Duration of their Reigns, we cannot give a List of them. But we shall presently make a Catalogue of those Kings of Syria, who were known by the Name of the Seleucidæ. Syria at first was govern'd by its own Kings, each of which reign'd in their own Cities, and in their own Cantons. David subdued them about the Year of the World 2960, before Christ 1040, before the vulgar Era 1044. And again, in 2969, before Christ 1031, before the vulgar Era 1035, upon the Occasion of the War he had with the Ammonites, to whom the Syrians thought fit to give Assistance. They continued in Subjection till after the Reign of Solomon,[6] when they shook off the Yoke, and could not be reduced again to their former Obedience, till the Time of Jeroboam II. King of Israel, who began to reign in 3179, before Christ 821, before the vulgar Era 825. Rezin King of Syria, and Pekah King of Israel, having declared War against Ahab King of Judah; this Prince found himself under a Necessity of calling to his Assistance Tiglath-pileser King of Assyria,[7] who put Rezin to Death, took Damascus, and transported the Syrians out of the Country to Places beyond the Euphrates. From that Time Syria continued in Subjection to the Kings of Assyria. Afterwards it came under the Dominion of the Chaldeans; then under that of the Persians; and lastly, it was reduced by Alexander the Great, and was subject to all the Revolutions that happen'd to the great Empires of the East.

After the Death of Alexander, which happen'd in the Year of the World 3681, before Christ 319, before the vulgar Era 323; his Empire was divided among his principal Officers, who at first assumed the Title of Governors, and then that of Kings. Seleucus I. named Nicator or Nicanor, Head of the Family of the Kings call'd Seleucidæ, took the Diadem, and the Name of King of Syria in 3682, and reign'd forty-two Years. He died in 3724, before Christ 276, before the vulgar Era 280.

Antiochus I. surnamed Soter, reigned nineteen Years, from the Year of the World 3724 to 3743.

Antiochus II. surnamed Theus, reigned fifteen Years, from the Year of the World 3743 to 3759.

Seleucus II. surnamed Callinicus or Pogon, that is, the Bearded, reigned twenty Years, from the Year of the World 3758 to 3778.

Seleucus III. surnamed Keraunus, or Thunder, reign'd three Years, from the Year of the World 3778 to 3781.

Antiochus III. surnamed Magnus, reign'd thirty-six Years, from the Year of the World 3781 to 3816.

Seleucus IV. surnamed Philopater, reign'd twelve Years, from the Year of the World 3817 to 3828.

Antiochus IV. surnamed Epiphanes, Son of Antiochus the Great, and Brother of Seleucus IV. reign'd eleven Years, from the Year of the World 3828 to 3840.

Antiochus V. surnamed Eupator, reign'd two Years, from the Year of the World 3840 to 3842.

Demetrius I. surnamed Soter, Son of Seleucus IV. reign'd twelve Years, from the Year of the World 3842 to 3854.

Demetrius II. surnamed Nicator, reign'd ten Years with much Perplexity. He had for Competitors Alexander Balas or Balles, and Antiochus Theos, Son of Balas. Demetrius Nicator died in 3864, and Alexander Balas in 3859, and Antiochus Theos his Son, having begun to reign under the Regency of Tryphon in 3860, was put to Death in 3861, and the Kingdom was usurped by Tryphon, who was also put to Death in 3866.

Antiochus VI. surnamed Pius, or Soter, or Sidetes, that is, the Fisher or Hunter, Brother to Demetrius Nicanor, reigned about ten Years, from 3864 to 3873, when he was put to Death by the Parthians.

Demetrius III. surnamed Nicanor, ascending the Throne, had for Competitor Alexander Zebina. Demetrius was overcome, and put to Death in 3878, as was Zebina in 3882.

Seleucus V. Son of Demetrius Nicanor, reign'd one Year in great Uneasiness, from the Year of the World 3878 to 3880.

Antiochus VII. surnamed Gryphus, or Philometor, dispossess'd Zebina in 3882, and reign'd eight Years in Peace, to the Year 3890. Then Antiochus, surnamed Cyzicenus, his Brother, rose up against him, and overcame him in 3892. They divided the Kingdom. Antiochus Gryphus died in 3910, having reigned in all about nine and twenty Years; and Antiochus Cyzicenus, his Brother, was overcome and put to Death the same Year, by Seleucus, the Son of Gryphus.

Seleucus VI. Son of Gryphus reign'd but one Year. He was conquer'd and depriv'd of his Kingdom in 3911, by Antiochus Eusebes, Son of his Uncle Antiochus Cyzicenus, and was put to Death the same Year 3911, at Mopsuesta in Cilicia.

Antiochus VIII. surnamed Eusebes, reign'd in Trouble two Years. His Competitors were Antiochus and Philippus, Brothers to his Uncle Seleucus, and Demetrius Eucærus, Son of Antiochus Gryphus, who overcame him, and forced him to take Refuge among the Parthians, in the Year of the World 3912.

Thus was Syria divided between Philip and Demetrius Eucærus, of which the latter reign'd at Damascus. But the Syrians finding the Kingdom to be almost ruin'd by the civil Wars, that had been carry'd on between the several Competitors for the Kingdom for many Years, had recourse to a foreign Power for the Support of their Monarchy. Some would have Mithridates call'd in, and others Ptolemy Lathurus, King of Egypt. Lastly, they all agreed upon Tigranes, King of Armenia, who govern'd Syria for eighteen Years, from the Year of the World 3921 to 3939.

Antiochus XI. surnamed Asiaticus, and his Brother, Sons of Antiochus Eusebes, who had still Possession of that Part of Syria that Tigranes had not seized, went to Rome in 3932, to ask the Kingdom of Egypt of the Senate, which they pretended to belong to them in Right of their Mother Cleopatra, surnamed Selene. But Tigranes having put Selene to Death in 3934, Antiochus Asiaticus lost the Hopes of obtaining the Kingdom of Egypt, and return'd into Syria in 3935, where he reign'd for four Years, till Pompey having reduced Syria into a Roman Province, in the Year of the World 3939, this Monarchy was intirely extinct, having subsisted for two hundred and fifty-seven Years.

Syro-Phenicia

SYRO-PHENICIA. This is Phenicia properly so call'd, of which Sidon or Zidon was the Capital; which having by Right of Conquest been united to the Kingdom of Syria, join'd its old Name of Phenicia to that of Syria; Just as Palestine was call'd Palestine of Syria, because it was consider'd as making a Part of Syria. In the Gospel the Canaanitish Woman is call'd a Syrophenician [Mark vii. 26.] by St. Mark, because she was of Phenicia, which was then look'd upon as making a Part of Syria, and was in the Jurisdiction of the Governor of this Province. [Matt. xv. 22, 24. Gen. x. 15] St. Matthew, who wrote in Hebrew or Syriac, calls her a Canaanitish Woman, because this Country was really peopled by the Canaanites, Sidon being the eldest Son of Canaan. The End of the SECOND VOLUME.
