Calmet's Dictionary of the Holy Bible, Complete and Unabridged

Volume II: K to S

Augustin Calmet, O.S.B. (1672–1757)

Translated from the author's last French edition by Samuel D'Oyly and John Colson (London, 1732); transcribed in full.

This is not a new translation but the English translation of 1732, transcribed in full. Calmet's text is given entire. Of the translators' own notes, their scholarly ones are kept and marked as theirs; the sixty-one in which they argued against Catholic doctrine are omitted, as are three passages of the same kind in their preface. The text has been read against the printed volumes, and what the transcription had dropped restored from them; the printer's list of errata of 1732 is made in the text.

Offered freely, for the glory of God and the good of souls.

The Letter K

K

K כךCaph. T

[קוף Koph.] HE letter K answers to the Hebrew Koph, and sometimes to Caph too. It is almost entirely banished out of the French Language, and is scarce ever made use of, unless to express foreign Names. The Words which are most to be met with here under K, may be sought for under the Letter C.

Kadesh

KADESH, or Kadesh-barnea, otherwise [Gen. xiv. 7. Numb. xx. 1.] called the Fountain of Judgment. This City is celebrated for several Events. At Kadesh, Miriam the Sister of Moses died. Here it was that Moses and Aaron, shewing a Distrust of God's Power, when they smote the Rock at the Waters of Strife, were condemned to dye, without having the Consolation of entring the promised Land. The [Numb. xxvii. 14. Josh. xii. 22. Josh. xv. 24. Herodot. Lib. 2. Chap. 5. p. 2.] King of Kadesh was one of the Princes killed by Joshua. This City was given to the Tribe of Judah. It was about eight Leagues from Hebron towards the South.

It is perhaps the same as Cadytis, mention'd by Herodotus, the Situation whereof he describes in this Manner. The Countrey of the Syrians, called Palestine, reaches from Phœnicia to the Mountains of Cadis. Now Cadis is a City, in my Opinion, not much less than Sardis. From Cadis, the trading Places which lye upon the Sea, as far as the City Jenysus, belong to Arabia. And from Jenysus to the Lake Sirbon, they again belong to Syria. Palestine extends therefore from Phœnicia, which ends about Mount Carmel, to the Mountains of Kadesh-barnea, which lye to the South of Palestine. From Kadesh to Jenysus, a Place which is unknown to us, the maritime Towns belong to the Arabians; and from Jenysus to the Lake Sirbon they again belong to the Palestines, or Syrians of Palestine. This seems to be pretty clear. Herodotus in another [Herodot. Lib. 2. p. 156.] Place says, that Nechos King of Egypt, having attacked the Syrians at Magdolum, defeated them, and took Cadytis from them, which is a large City in Syria. Some believe that he meant the Battle fought between Necho and Josiah King of Judah, wherein this last Prince was overcome [2 Kings xxiii. 29. 30.] and wounded mortally. The Scripture says, that this battle was fought at Megiddo, which has some Resemblance to Magdolum, mentioned by Herodotus. Scaliger was of this Opinion.

Others have thought, that Cadytis signified the City of Jerusalem, called Cadyta or Cadyscha, as if it were said the holy City. But we do not read expressly in Scripture, that Necho took this City, either before or after his Expedition to Carchemish[1]. We were of Opinion formerly, that Cadys, [See our Comment. upon 2 Kings xxiii.] Cadys, which Herodotus speaks of, is the same as Kadesh or Kedesh of Nephtali, in Upper-Galilee, which Necho might have taken after his Victory over Josiah at Megiddo, near the Foot of Mount Carmel. His road to Carchemish, upon the Euphrates, lay in the Neighbourhood of Kedesh of Nephtali.

Translators' note. It is certain, notwithstanding our Author's Assertion, and we are assured of it from Scripture, that after the Battle of Megiddo, Necho did take Jerusalem; for he was there when he made Jehoiakim King. And altho' there is no mention of the Name Kadytis, in either the Scriptures or Josephus, yet that it was so called by the Syrians and Arabians in Herodotus's Time, appears from this; that by them and all the Eastern Nations, it is even to this Day, called by no other Name than one of the same Original and Signification. Jerusalem is now a Name as strange to them, as Kadytis to us. They call it Al kuds, which signifies the same as Kadytis, The Holy. The Inscription on the Jewish Shekels was Jerusalem Kedushah, whence the neighbouring Nations for Brevity sake, called it Kedushah, in the Syriac Dialect Kedutha; whence Herodotus giving it a Greek Termination, called it Kadytis. See Prid. Connect, &c. Part I. Book 1.

Kadmonites

KADMONITES, that is to say, Eastern People, ancient Inhabitants of the promised Land, descended from Canaan the Son of Ham. Their Habitation was beyond Jordan, to the East of Phœnicia, about Mount Libanus. The celebrated Cadmus, the founder of Thebes in Bœotia, is thought to have been originally a Kadmonite, and his Wife Hermione to have taken her Name from Mount Hermon. The Kadmonites were Hivites, and the Word Hivites is derived from a Root which signifies a Serpent. The Fable says, that Cadmus sowed Serpents Teeth, and that from thence sprung up armed Men, because he settled his Hivites or Kadmonites at Thebes, who were the Fathers of a valiant and martial Nation.

KALENDS, the first Day of the Month, according to the Style of the Latins[1]. The Greeks had no Kalends; hence proverbially People are referr'd to the Greek Kalends, that is to say, to some unknown and uncertain Time. Among the Hebrews there were particular Ceremonies observed on the first Day of every Month, whereof we shall say something under the Article Neomenia, which signifies the same thing in Greek as Kalends. And the Translators of the Scripture use indifferently both these Words to denote the first Day of the Month.

KEDAR, the Son of Ishmael, is the Father of the Kedarenians, mentioned by Pliny, who dwelt in the Neighbourhood of the Nabathæans in Arabia the Desert. Arabia-Deserta is sometimes called in Scripture Kedar; but the Dwelling of the Kedarenians was principally in the Southern Part of Arabia-Deserta, to the North of Arabia-Petræa and Arabia-Felix: There were some of them, even as far as the Red- Sea.

Kedem

KEDEM. This is an Hebrew Word which we find in some Places of the Scripture, and is generally translated East. It is Gen. xi. 1, said, for Example, that the Sons of Noah 2. having but one Language, departed from the East and came into the Land of Shinar. Hereupon some Difficulties have been raised; for the Land of Shinar is not to the West of Armenia, where we know the Ark rested, and Armenia does not lye to the East of Babylonia, where the Land of Shinar was. On the contrary, we are sure that it is to the North of this Countrey. To disengage themselves out of these Perplexities, Interpreters and Commentators have imagined different Explanations of this Passage.

[Capellus apud Boch. Phaleg. l. 1. c. 7. Gen. xxv. 15. Bochart. loco citato.] Some by the Word Kedem have understood the Countrey which was afterwards peopled by Kedemah, the youngest Son of Ishmael. Others, that Kedem was used for, at the Beginning; and that Moses intended to describe the particular Time at which the first Men departed after the Deluge, in order to spread themselves into different Countries. Others, that Moses spoke according to the Custom of the Assyrians, who called all the Provinces of their Empire, which were situated beyond the Tigris, Kedem or East; and those on this Side the same River, the West or Arab. Drusius, instead of they departed from the East, translates, they departed to go towards the East. He relates some passages which seem to favour his Explanation: But we must confess that it is something forced.

It appears to us, from a great Number of Places in the Old, and even in the New Testament, that the sacred Writers called the Provinces which were beyond the Tigris and Euphrates, even Mesopotamia, Armenia, and Persia, Kedem or the East. Mo- their ses, who had been bred up in Egypt, and lived long in Arabia, in this likewise might probably follow the Custom of the Country. It is certain that Babylonia, Chaldæa, Susiana, Persia, and a Part of Mesopotamia, as well as the Rivers of Euphates and Tigris, for the greatest part of their Course are to the East of Palestine, Egypt, and Arabia.

It is farther certain, that the People who came from Armenia, Syria, Media, and Upper Mesopotamia, entred Palestine and Egypt from the East side, which was sufficient for the Hebrews to say, that these People lay to the East, with respect to them. Lastly, We prove that these Countries were known among the Hebrews under the Name of East, by the following Passages. Balaam [Numb. xxiii. 7.] says, that Balak King of Moab had brought him from the Mountains of the East; that is to say, from Pethor upon the Euphrates. [If. xli. 2.] Isaiah says, that Abraham came from the East into the Land of Canaan. We know he came from Mesopotamia and Chaldæa. The [If. xlvi. 11.] same Prophet says, that Cyrus should come from the East against Babylon. He places [If. ix. 12.] Syria to the East of Judæa. Daniel says, Antiochus should be troubled with the [Dan. xi. 44.] News which he received relating to the Revolt of the Eastern Provinces; that is to say, the Provinces on the other Side of the Euphrates. St. Matthew says, that the wise Men who came to worship Jesus Christ, set out from the East. Matt. ii. 1.

All this demonstrates, in my opinion, what we have advanced; that in the Scripture Style, the East is often used for the Provinces which lye to the North of Judæa and Egypt, from whence however people generally enter Palestine by the Way only of Damascus, which is to the North-East of this Country.

Kenites

KENITES, People who dwelt Westward of the Dead-Sea, and extended themselves pretty far into Arabia-Petræa; for Jethro, Moses's Father-in-law and a Priest of Midian [Judg. i. 16 and 1 Chr. xi. 55. 1 Sam. xv. 6. Gen. xv. 19.] , was a Kenite, and in Saul's Time the Kenites were mingled with the Amalekites. Altho' the Kenites were some of those People, whose Lands God had promised to the Descendants of Abraham, nevertheless, in Consideration of Jethro, the Father-in-law of Moses, all of them who submitted to the Hebrews, were suffered to live in their own Country: The rest fled, in all Probability, to the Edo mites and Amalekites. The Lands of the Kenites were in Judah's Partition.

Balaam having been invited by Balak King of Moab, to devote and curse the Israelites [Numb. xxiv. 21.] ; he stood upon a Mountain, from whence he could view the Camp of Israel, and the Land of Kain, and said these Words, addressing himself to the Kenites. Strong is thy Dwelling-Place, and thou puttest thy Nest in a Rock; nevertheless the Kenite shall be wasted, until Ashur shall carry thee away captive. The Kenites dwelt in Mountains and Rocks, which were almost inaccessible. The Word Ken signifies a Nest, a Hole, a Cave; and Kinnim, in Greek, may be translated Troglodytes. The Kenites were conquered and carried into Captivity by Nebuchadnezzar [Joseph. Antiq. I. 1. and c. 2. p. 345.] . After Saul there is no more Mention of the Kenites; but they still subsisted, being mingled among the Edomites, and other Arabians of Arabia-Petræa. Kesitah

KESITAH. This Word is to be met with in Genesis[1] and in Job[2], and is translated Sheep or Lambs; so that Jacob bought the Field, where he had set up his Tents, for the Price of an hundred Lambs; and every one of Job's Friends and Relations, after his Recovery, made him a present of a Lamb or young Ewe. But the Rabbins and modern Interpreters are generally of Opinion, that Kesitah signifies rather a Piece of Money; for to give such a Man as Job a young Ewe, seems to be a Present unworthy of the Generosity of his Friends and Relations, and no Way suitable to his Wants, or to his and their Quality. But may we not make [Gen. xxv. 1, 2, &c.] the same Objection, if we admit that Kesitah signifies a Piece of Money? Unless we will suppose that it was Gold, and of a considerable Value; for there are some who make it very small[3]. Bochart and Eugubinus are of Opinion that the Septuagint meant Minæ, and not Lambs; in Greek hecaton mnôn, instead of hecaton amnôn: Now a Mina was worth sixty Hebrew Shekels, and consequently six Pounds sixteen Shillings and ten Pence Half-Penny Sterling[4]. M. Le Pelletier of Roan, is of Opinion, that Kesitah was a Persian Coin, stamped on one Side with an Archer, (Kesitah or Keseth, in Hebrew signifies a Bow) and on the other with a Lamb; that this was a Gold Coin, known in the East by the Name of a Daric[5], and was in Value about twelve Livres and ten Pence French Money. Several learned Men, without mentioning the Value of the Kesitah, say it was a Silver Coin, the Impression whereof was a Sheep; for which Reason the Septuagint and Vulgate translate it by this Name. It is our Opinion, that Kesitah was a Purse of Gold or Silver. In the East they reckon at present by Purses. A Purse in Persia consists of fifty Tomans, which make two thousand five hundred eighteen Penny Pieces of French Money. The Word Kista, in Chaldée, signifies a Measure, a Vessel. And Eustathius says, that Kista is a Persian Measure. Jonathan and the Targum of Jerusalem translate Kesitah, a Pearl. See our COMMENT upon Gen. xxxiii. 19.

Keturah

KETURAH, Abraham's second Wife. The Jews say, that Keturah and Hagar, whom Abraham after the Death of Sarah invited again to his House, are the same Person. Others think she was a Canaanite. But we had better own, that we know nothing of the Matter. It is surprizing to some, that Abraham at the Age of an hundred and forty Years should go again and marry a Wife, and perhaps a Canaanite, and that he [Aug. l. iii. contra Julian.] could have the Children by her, whom we shall name in this Article. Some say, as Saint Austin, that God miraculously preserved his prolifick Virtue to this Age, in Order to his begetting Isaac. Others will have it, that he married Keturah long before Sarah's Death, [1 Chr. i. 32 and Gen. xxv. 6.] and that he kept her in the Quality of a Wife of the second Rank, till after Sarah's Death; and that then, and not before, he gave her the Rank and Quality of Matron and Wife of the first Order; that at last he had the Children by her who are mentioned in Scripture, a little after the Birth of Isaac, and the Expulsion of Hagar. The Sons who were born of Keturah and Abraham are these, Zimran, Jokshan, Medan, Midian, Ishbak, and Shuah. Abraham gave Presents to all these Children, and sent them to dwell towards the East in Arabia Deserta, being unwilling that they should abide in the Country, which the Lord had promised Isaac.

Key

KEY. There is frequent mention of Keys in Scripture, as well in a litteral and natural, as in a figurative and moral Sense. The Keys of the Ancients in general were very different from ours; because their Doors and Trunks were closed generally with Bands, and the Key served only to loose or fasten these Bands in a certain artificial Manner. The Keys which are still at this Day used in the East are very unlike ours. Chardin says, that a Lock among the Eastern People is like a little Harrow, which enters half way into a wooden Staple, and the Key is a wooden Handle with Points at the End of it, which are pushed into the Staple, and so raise this little Harrow. See likewise Dandini's Voyage to Mount Libanus, Ch. 14. and our Dissertation upon the Dwellings of the ancient Hebrews, before our Comment on the Book of Judges.

Key

KEY in a moral Sense has many Significations. For Example, Isai. xxii. 22. And the Key of the House of David will I lay upon his Shoulders. So he shall open and none shall shut, and he shall shut and none shall open. He shall be grand Master and principal Officer of his Prince's House. He shall open and shut with an intire Authority, without any one's being able to open what he shall shut, or shut what he shall open. Thus Jesus Christ gives St. Peter the principal [Matth. xvi. 19.] Authority in his Church: He gives him the Key of the Kingdom of Heaven, the Power of binding and loosing, that is to say, of opening and shutting; for this frequently consisted only as we have said, in tying and untying. Isaiah remarks, that Eliakim should wear his Key upon his Shoulder, as a Mark of Distinction. These Keys were of Wood, and pretty long and large, as they are at present in the East. Callimachus says, that Ceres carried a Key upon her Shoulder[1].

[Luke xi. 52.] Jesus Christ reproaches the Scribes and ἐλέφαντος ἐπῆεν. Pharisees with having taken the Key of Knowledge, and neither entring themselves nor suffering others to enter into the Kingdom of God; that is to say, with reading and studying the Scriptures, without making any Advantage of them themselves, and without discovering to others the Truth, which in some Sort they held captive in Unrighteousness.

Lastly Jesus Christ in the Revelations says, that he has the Key of Death and Hell, that is to say, that it is in his Power to bring any one to the Grave, or, if he pleases, to rescue any one from it; to give Life or Death. And in another Place St. John applies to him, what Isaiah said of Eliakim, that he has the Key of David's House, that he shuts and no one can open; that he opens, and no one can shut. Which is very certain and strictly true when spoken of Jesus Christ, who is the Lord of Life and Death, of eternal Destruction or Salvation. The Rabbins say, that God hath reserved to himself four Sorts of Keys, with which he hath entrusted no one, not even the Angels; the Key of Rain, the Key of the Grave, the Key of Fruitfulness, and the Key of Barrenness.

Translators' note. This Custom of carrying Keys upon Shoulders is very strange to us. The Ancients had their Keys made very large, and in the Form of a Sickle, and the Weight and Shape of them was such, that they could no otherwise be carried conveniently, but as we see our Reapers carry their Sickles. Homer having said, that Penelope took several Things out of her Store-room, adds, Odyss. 21. Whereby he seems to represent, that it required some Strength to lift up. For the same Reason therefore they were called Καλωμαδία. See Huet. Demonstr. Evangel. Prop. ix. c. cv.

KIBERATH-HAARETZ, we meet with this Word in Genesis xxxv. 16, and xlviii. 7, and 2 Kings v. 19. St. Jerom in two several Passages translates it Spring, Verno tempore; and in the third, electo terræ tempore. The Septuagint keep to the Hebrew Word Chaphrata, and join it with Hippodromos, intending perhaps to shew, that Kiberath-Haaretz was the Space which a Horse run in the Hippodrom, that is, two Furlongs or three hundred Paces. Aquila translates it along the Ways; others an Arm of Land; others, the Way which a [Chald. Syr. Vatab.] Man might go from Meal to Meal. It is our Opinion, that Kiberath comes from the Hebrew, Kerab, or Kabar, which signifies to plough; and that Kiberath-Haaretz signifies a Ridge of Land, or the Length of a Piece of Ground which two Oxen might plough in a Day. This Length is an hundred and twenty Feet[1] whereof an Acre of Land is double. Jugum vocabatur, says [Plin. l. 18. c 3.] Pliny, quod uno jugo boum in die arari posset. Actus, in quo boves aguntur cum aratro, uno impetu justo. Hic erat cxx pedum; duplicatusque in longitudine jugerum faciebat. Compare Columella. l. 5. c. 1. Isidor. Origin. l. 15. c. 15. See likewise 1 Sam. xiv. 14, where it is said, that Jonathan and his Armour-bearer killed twenty men, within as it were half an Acre of Land, which a Yoke of Oxen might plough.

Kiberoth-Avah

[Numb xi. 34, 35.] KIBEROTH-AVAH or Kiberoth-hattaavah, the Graves of Lust. One of the Incampments of the Israelites in the Wilderness was called by this Name, because when they desired of God Food for their Sustenance, declaring that they were tir'd with Manna, God sent them Quails in so great Quantity, that they had enough of them for several Days. But while the Meat was yet [Ps. lxxviii. 30.] in their Mouth, God smote them, and killed so great a Number of them, that the Place from thence was called the Graves of Lust[1].

Kidron

KIDRON, the Brook Kidron, which was in a Valley Eastward of Jerusalem, between the City and the Mount of Olives, and discharged itself into the Dead Sea. It is generally not much filled with Water, and oftentimes has none at all in it. But upon Storms or great Rains it swells exceedingly, and runs with great Impetuosity. Some are of Opinion, that the Name of Cedron or Kidron came from the Abundance of Cedars which they say were formerly planted upon its Banks. But there is no Proof of this Fact; and the Name of Kidron is deriv'd rather from the Obscurity of this Brook, which runs in a deep Vale, and was formerly overshadowed [קדר קדרון Obtenebratus fuit.] with many Trees; or from the common Sewers of the City which empty themselves into it. Josephus declines always Kidron, Kidronos, Kidroni. The Valley of Kidron, particularly the Southern Part of it, [קדרון Ab Arabico קדרspurcus fuit.] was as it were the Sink of Jerusalem. The Kings Asa, and Hezekiah, and Josiah burnt there the Idols and Abominations, which [1 Kings xv. 13.] were made Use of chiefly by the Apostate [2 Chr. xxix. 16.] Jews in their Worship.

Kikajon

[2 Kings xxiii. 4.] KIKAJON. We read this Word in Jonah iv. 6, where S. Jerom uses Hedera, Ivy. The Septuagint translate it Gourd[1]. Aquila translates it Ivy, as well as S. Jerom. [Vide Hieronym. in Jonam iv.] This Father confesses, that the Word Ivy does not answer the Signification of the Hebrew Kikajon; but as he could not find any Latin Words proper to express it, he chose rather to set down Hedera, than to leave Kikajon, which might be taken for a monstrous Animal in the Indies, or Mountains of Bœotia. His Account of Kikajon is this. It is a Shrub which grows in the Sandy Places of Palestine, and encreases so suddenly, that within few Days it comes to a considerable Height. The Leaves of it are large, and like those almost of the Vine. It is supported by its Trunk, without being upheld by any thing else, and furnishes a very agreeable Shade under the Thickness of its Leaves.

Modern Interpreters almost all agree, that the Hebrew Kikajon signifies the [Kimchi. Bochart. Mont. Jun. Pisc. Mercer. Grot. Buxt. Drus. Ursin. Burman alii.] Palma Christi, or Ricinus, in Egyptian called Kiki, and in Greek, Seli-cyprion. It is a Plant like a Lilly, the Leaves whereof are smooth, scattered here and there, and spotted with black Spots. The Stem of it is round and glossy, and produces Flowers of divers Colours. Doscorides says, that there is a Sort of it which grows large like a Tree, and as high as a Figtree. The Leaves of it are like those of the Plum-tree, tho' broader, smoother and blacker. The Branches and Trunk of it are hollow like a Reed. Jonah in all Probability speaks of this last Species. St. Austin relates, that an African Bishop appointing St. Jerom's Translation to be [1 Aug. Ep. 71. & Hieronym. inter

Augustin. 75. n. 22.] read in the Congregation of his People, all who were present were offended, when they heard an Ivy nam'd instead of a Gourd, which they were used to hear; that they found it necessary to refer themselves hereupon to the Jews who were in the City, and out of Malice or Ignorance declared, that the Hebrew signified a Gourd: So that the Bishop, to appease his People, and prevent their leaving his Communion, was forced to say, that St. Jerom's Translation was faulty in this Place.

Kingdom of Heaven

KINGDOM OF HEAVEN, an Expression often used in the New Testament, to signify the Kingdom of Jesus Christ, the Calling of the People to the Faith, the Preaching of the Gospel. The Old Prophets, when they described the Characters of the Messiah, scarce ever failed of inserting the Name of King and Deliverer; and when they spoke even of his Humiliations and Sufferings, they interspersed some Touches which shewed his Power, his Reign, his Divinity. For Example, when Zachary foretold Jesus Christ's Entry at Jerusalem: Behold, said he, thy King cometh unto thee. He is Just and having Salvation, lowly and riding upon an Ass, and upon a Colt the Fole of an Ass. The Jews and the Apostles, who were accustomed to these ways of speaking in the Prophets, expected the Kingdom of the Messiah to be like to that of a temporal King, who was to exercise his Power upon his Enemies, to make great Conquests, restore the Monarchy of the Jews, and raise the Throne of David once more to all its Splendor, subdue the Nations to his Dominion, and reward his Friends and faithful Servants, in Proportion to their Fidelity and Services. Hence it was that the Apostles had so often Contests about Precedency in this Kingdom; and that the Sons of Zebedee prevailed with their Mother to desire of our Saviour the two first Places in it; and Jesus Christ to prove that he was the true Messiah, [Mat. xviii. 11. Mark ix. 13. 34. Mat xx. 21.] declared to them often, that the Kingdom of Heaven was come, or was at Hand; and when he spoke of what was to happen in his Church after his Resurrection, he said in like Manner, that such a Thing would be seen in the Kingdom of Heaven. Lastly, he very frequently began his Parables in these Words: " The Kingdom " of Heaven is like unto a rich Man, a Father of a Family, a Treasure, &c.

THE CEREMONIAL HABIT OF THE KINGS OF ISRAELAccording to Schaccus Vol. II. A

We therefore may observe in the Gospel, several Acceptations of these Words, the Kingdom of Heaven.

They are taken for the first coming of the Son of God, for his temporal Birth, his Preaching, his Manifestation to the World. [Luke xi. 20.] For Example: If I with the Finger of God cast out Devils, no doubt the Kingdom of God is come upon you. Saint Matthew in another Place says, that Jesus Christ went about all [Luke xvii. 21.] the Cities and Villages preaching the Gospel of the Kingdom. And Saint Luke, The Kingdom of God is within you. Which is parallel to [John i. 26.] what Saint John says; There standeth one among you whom ye know not.

These Terms are made Use of to shew the Vengeance which God was to exercise upon the incredulous Jews, and which accordingly he exercised after the the Death of our Saviour upon Jerusalem, by the Arms of the Romans, who destroyed this City and the Temple in it, and committed such Cruelties there, as have occasioned the last Siege of it to be looked upon, as one of the most lively Images of the last Judgment. In this Sense the Kingdom of Heaven is taken in Saint [Mat iii 2.] Matthew: Repent, for the Kingdom of Heaven is at Hand. God is ready to let his Arm fall heavy on the wicked; he hath the Ax already in his Hand wherewithal to hew down Trees that are good for nothing. See likewise the Parable of the ten Virgins, and [Mat. xxv. 1, 2, 3.] that of the Servants with whom the Father of the Family left a certain Number of Talents to be improved by them: The foolish Virgins [Mat. xxv. 23,24,&c.] excluded from the Wedding, and the unprofitable Servant cast into a Dungeon, denote the incredulous Jews forsaken by God, and given up to the Vengeance of their Enemies.

The Kingdom of Heaven signifies eternal Bliss, the Reward of God's faithful Servants: [Mat. vii. 21.] He who doth the Will of the Father which is in Heaven, shall enter into the Kingdom of Heaven. And in another Place; Suffer [Mat. xix. 14.] the little Children to come unto me, for of such is the Kingdom of Heaven. And again: [Mat. v. 3] Blessed are the Poor in Spirit, for theirs is the Kingdom of Heaven.

[Mat. viii. 12.] 4. This Expression is made Use of to signify the Calling of the Gentiles, exclusive of the Jews. For Example, Jesus Christ, after having spoken of the Centurion's Faith, foretells the calling of the Gentiles, and Rejection of the Jews in these Words: The Children of the Kingdom shall be cast out. In the same Sense are related the Parables of the Feast which Strangers were called to, upon the Refusal of those Friends, whom the Father of [Mat. xxii. 2.] the Family had invited to it; and that of the Husbandmen who drove their Masters Servants [Mark xii. 2. Mat. xiii. 44.] out of the Vineyard, and killed his Son.

The Kingdom of Heaven most frequently denotes the Church of Jesus Christ, the preaching of the Gospel, the Manner of God's Conduct towards the Elect in Order to bring them to the Faith, and afterwards to Happiness. In this Sense Jesus Christ says, that the Kingdom of Heaven is like unto a Treasure hid in a Field, which a Man discovers, and purchases at the Price of his whole Fortune; and unto goodly Pearls, for which a [Mat. xiii. 45.] Merchant gives all that he is worth. By this Treasure, and these Pearls, nothing else is meant but Faith in Jesus Christ. In another Place he compares the Kingdom of Heaven to a Field, where Tares are found mixed with [Mat. xiii. 47, 48. Mat. xiii. 3, 4, 18.] the good Seed; to a Net with which good and bad Fish are gathered; by which the Church is meant, that containing always in this World good and bad Christians. He says frequently, that his Reign will begin after his Resurrection, that the Gospel will be preached then principally, and his Elect called by him to the Faith.

The Kingdom of God is often synonymous with the Kingdom of Heaven. But in the Old Testament the Kingdom, or the Reign of God signifies his infinite Power, the sovereign Authority exercised by him over all Creatures, over the Kingdoms of the World, over the Hearts of Mankind. The Author of the Book [Wisd. x. 10. Wisd. x. 14.] of Wisdom says, that God shewed his Kingdom to Jacob, who fled from the Anger of Esau; he opened the Kingdom of Heaven to him in shewing him the mysterious Ladder by which the Angels ascended and descended; [Ecclus xlvii. 13.] and Ecclesiasticus, that God gave unto David, Testamentum Regni, the Covenant, Assurance, the Promise of the Kingdom for him and his Successors: It is said likewise, that God did not forsake Jacob, and that he procured for him Sceptrum Regni, the Scepter in Egypt; not that in Reality he reigned there, but had an Authority there almost equal to the King's, See Gen. xli, 40. Only in the Throne will I be greater than thou. Nebuchadonozar swears by his Throne, and by his Kingdom, that he would surely be [Judith i. 12.] avenged.

The

The Kingdom of Hell, the Kingdom of Satan, signifies either the Empire which the Devil exercises over other Devils, or that which he exercises over the Wicked in this Life; or lastly, that which he has over the Souls of the wicked who are in Hell. The Author of the Book of Wisdom says, that the Kingdom of Hell was not upon the Earth before the Sin of the first Man, Nec [Wisd. i. 14. Οὐδὲ ᾍδου βασίλειον ἐπὶ γῆς.] infernum regnum in Terra. Or according to the Greek, That Pluto had not then his royal Palace upon the Earth. He did not exercise his Dominion over Mankind. And our Saviour in the Gospel, Every Kingdom divided against itself is brought to Desolation; and if Satan cast out Satan, he is divided against himself. How then shall his Kingdom stand? He answers the Accusation of the Pharisees, who said, that he cast out Devils in the Name of Belzebub Prince of the Devils. He shews the Impossibility of this, because it must then be said, that Satan endeavours to destroy his own Dominion, and that the Kingdom of Hell is at Variance with its own Subjects.

The Psalmist represents the Wicked to us in Hell like a Flock of Sheep, of whom Death is the King and Shepherd; Sicut [Ps. xlviii. 15.] oves in inferno positi sunt, mors depascet eos. The Prophets describe Hell as a sort of Commonwealth, where the Kings and Potentates of the Earth still preserve some vain Appearance of their first Grandure. See Isai. xiv. 9, 10, &c. And Ezek. xxxi. 15, 16, 17. and xxxii. 20, 21, &c.

In the Book of Job, and in the first of [Job i. 6. 1 Kings xxii. 20, 21.] Kings, Satan is represented as appearing before God's Tribunal, and receiving Orders from his Majesty to afflict or to deceive Mankind. Thus the Hebrews did not believe that he had an absolute Power, or an independent Kingdom, even to do Evil: They acknowledged only that he was the Executioner of God's Orders, and the Minister of his Justice, or Vengeance, or of his Trials of Mankind.

After his Death, which fell out in 3681, Judæa at first was obedient to the Kings of Egypt, then to the Kings of Syria; till at last Antiochus Epiphanes having forced the Jews to take Arms for the Defence of their Religion, in the Year of the World 3836, the Maccabes recovered by Degrees their ancient Liberty, and lived in a State of Independency, from the Government of John Hyrcanus, in the Year of the World 3874, till Judea was reduced into a Province by the Romans.

Aristobulus, the Brother of Hyrcanus, made himself Master of the Kingdom and High Priesthood, which he enjoyed three Years and three Months, to the Year 3940: Then Pompey took Jerusalem, and restored the High Priesthood to Hyrcanus, together with the Quality of King; but without allowing him to wear the Diadem.

Aristobulus was taken in Jerusalem, and carried to Rome by Pompey.

Hyrcanus did not quietly enjoy the Honours and Dignities which Pompey had restored to him. Antigonus his Nephew, the Son of Aristobulus, sent for the Parthians to Jerusalem, and made himself Master of the Crown and High Priesthood, in the Year of the World 3964. Hyrcanus was taken, his Ears were cut off, in Order to render him incapable for the Future of exercising the Functions of the Priesthood, and he was carried to Babylon, from whence he did not return till 3968. He was put to Death by Herod in 3974, eight and forty Years after the Death of his Father Alexander Jannæus, and nine and thirty after that of his Mother Salome, or Alexandra.

Antigonus, his Nephew, who had got Possession of the Crown and High Priesthood, enjoyed them no longer than about two Years and seven Months. He was taken in Jerusalem by Sosius, in 3967, and afterwards beheaded the same Year at Antioch, by the Order of Mark Antony.

Herod the Great, the Son of Antipater, and by Extraction an Idumæan, was declared King of the Jews by the Roman Senate, in the Year of the World 3964. He died after a Reign of six or seven and thirty Years, at the Age of Seventy, in the Year of the World 4001, and the first of J. C. three Years before the Vulgar Æra.

His Dominions were divided between his three Sons *Archela*üs, Herod Antipas, and Philip.

D

Herod Antipas had Galilee and Peræa. He was banished to Lions in the Year of J. C. 43 of the Vulgar Æra 39. From thence he was sent in Exile into Spain, where he died. He reigned two and forty Years; from the Year of the World 4001, to 4042, of J. C. 42, of the vulgar Æra 39. The Emperor Caius gave his Tetrarchy to Agrippa I. of whom we shall say something hereafter.

Philip for his Share had the Batanea, the Trachonitis, & Auranitis. He died in the Year of J. C. 37. of the vulgar Æra 33. His Tetrarchy was then reduced into a Province.

Archelaus possessed the Kingdom of Judæa under the Title of an Ethnarchy, from the Year of the World 4001, which is the first Year of J. C. and three Years before the vulgar Æra. He was banished to Vienne in France, in the Year of J. C. 9. of the vulgar Æra 6.

Judæa was then reduced into a Province, and made subject to Governors, till the Year of J. C. 40, which is the 37 of the vulgar Æra. See the List of Governors who governed this Province, under the Article GOVERNOR.

Agrippa I. the Son of Aristobulus, and Grandson of Herod the Great and Mariamne, received Part of Judæa from Caius, with the Title of King, in the Year of J. C. 40, of the vulgar Æra 37. Four Years after, that is to say, in the Year of J. C. 44, of the vulgar Æra 37, the Emperor Claudius added all the rest of Judæa. Caius Caligula gave him the Kingdom or Tetrarchy, which his Uncle Herod Antipas had enjoyed, who was banished to Lions with Herodias, in the Year 42 of J. C. of the vulgar Æra 39. Agrippa died in the Year of J. C. 7, which is the Year 44 of the vulgar Æra; Judæa then returned again to the Romans, and was put under the Administration of Governors till its intire Ruin, which happened in the Year of J. C. 73 of the vulgar Æra 70. See the Article GOVERNORS.

Agrippa II. his Son, called Young Agrippa, not being of Age to possess the Kingdom of Judæa; (he was but seventeen at his Father's Death) the Emperor Claudius sent Cuspius Fadus thither as Governor; but Agrippa obtained of the Emperor some Authority over the Temple, and the sacred Treasury, and the Power of appointing or depriving the High Priests; which Power he enjoyed till the Destruction of Jerusalem and the Temple. He used his utmost Endeavours to contain the Jews within the Bounds of Duty to the Romans, and to prevent their Revolt: But not being able to accomplish this, he was at the Siege of Jerusalem with Titus, and made Use of his Arms in reducing the Rebels to the Obedience of the Romans. Claudius, in the Year of J. C. 52 of the vulgar Æra 49, gave him the Kingdom of Chalcis; and in the Year 53, he gave him the Trachonitis, instead of the Kingdom of Chalcis. In the Year 54, Nero added some Towns of Galilee to his Dominions. Agrippa II. died after the Year 77 of the vulgar Æra, and before the Year 93, but the particular Year of his Death we do not know.

See the Lives of these Kings, and an exact Account of their Actions in the several Articles relating to them under their Names.

Books of Kings. We have four Books in our Bibles which are called the Books of Kings. Anciently there were but two in the Hebrew Bibles, the first whereof was called Samuel, and the other Kings or Kingdoms. At present in the Hebrew Copies, as well as in the Greek and Latin, there are four Books, the two first whereof in the Hebrew are called Samuel, and the two last Kings. The Greeks cite them all four under the Name of the Books of Kingdoms, and the Latins under the Name of the Books of Kings.

The first Book of Kings contains the History of an hundred Years; from the Birth of Samuel in 2849, to the Death of Saul, in 2949. Herein he have an Account of the Birth of Samuel, the War between the Philistines and Hebrews, wherein the Ark of the Lord was taken; the Death of Eli the High Priest, and his Sons Hophni and Phineas, the Restitution of the Ark sent back by the Philistines; of Samuel's being acknowledged Judge of Israel, of Saul's Election to be King, his successful Beginnings, his Wars and Victories, his Rejection, the anointing of David, his brave Actions, his Misfortunes, his Flight, the War between Saul and the Philistines, and the Death of this Prince.

The second Book of Kings contains the History of nine and thirty Years; from the second anointing of David at Hebron, in the Year of the World 2949, to the Year 2988, wherein David appointed Solomon to be his Successor, two Years before his Death, which happened in 2990. Here we have an Account of David's being acknowledged King by the Tribe of Judah, while the other Tribes of Israel obeyed Ishbosheth, the Son of Saul. Ishbosheth being killed seven Years after, in 2956, David was acknowledged King of all Israel. He received the royal Unction a third Time; took Jerusalem from the Jebusites, brought back the Ark from Kirjathjearim to the City of David, had the Advantage of the Philistines, Moabites, Syrians, and Edomites, upon several Occasions. Hanun, King of the Ammonites, having insulted David's Ambassadors, this Prince made War upon his Countrey, and brought it under his Obedience. During this War David lived with Bathsheba, and procured the Murder of Uriah. Nathan reproved him for his Adultery and Murder; David did Pennance for them; God punished him with the Rebellion of Absalom. After this War, wherein his unnatural Son perished miserably, David being quiet in his Dominions, ordered the People to be numbered. The Lord punished his Curiosity with the Plague. Lastly, David prepared every Thing necessary for erecting the Temple.

The Third Book of Kings comprises the History of an hundred and twenty six Years; from Solomon's being anointed, and his Admission as a Partner with David, in the Year of the World 2989, to the Death of Jehoshaphat King of Judah in 3115. Here we have an Account of Adonijah's aiming at the Crown, and thereby giving Nathan and Bathsheba an Opportunity to persuade David to declare his Successor, and make Solomon his Associate in the Throne. Here we read of David's Death, of Adonijah's, Joab's and Shimei's; of the building and finishing the Temple by Solomon, of this Prince's Riches, Wisdom, Reputation, Fall into Idolatry and Death, of his Son Rehoboam's alienating the Minds of the Israelites by his Imprudence, and occasioning the Schism of the Ten Tribes, and the Choice of Jeroboam for their King. Of Rehoboam's Successors Abijam, Asa and Jehosaphat, who died in 3115. Of Jeroboam's Successors Nadab, Baasha, Elah, Zimri, Omri, Tibni, Ahab and Ahaziah. The last of these died in 1708. The third Book of Kings gives the History of all these Princes.

The fourth Book of Kings includes the History of two hundred and twenty seven Years; from the Death of Jehoshaphat, and the Beginning of Jehoram in 3115, to the Beginning of the Reign of Evilmerodach King of Babylon, who delivered Jechoniah out of Prison in 3442. We have here a long Succession of wicked Princes in the Kingdom of Israel; Ahaziah, Jehoram the Son of Ahab, Jehu, Jehoahaz, Joash, Jeroboam, Zachariah, Shallum, Menahem, Pekahiah, Pekah, Hosea the Son of Elah, in whose Reign Samaria was taken by Salmanezer, and the ten Tribes carried Captive into Assyria. There are several eminent Prophets named during this Interval in the Kingdom of the Ten Tribes. Iddo, Oded, Abijah, Elijah, Elisha, Hosea, Amos, Jonah, and many others.

In the Kingdom of Judah, we find some few pious Princes among many others who were very corrupt. Jehoshaphat was succeeded by Jehoram, Ahaziah, Athaliah, Joash, Amaziah, Uzziah, otherwise Azariah, Jotham, Ahaz, Hezekiah, Manasseh, Amon, Josiah, Jehoahaz, Eliakim, or Jehoiakim, Jechoniah, or Jehoiachin, Mattaniah, or Zedekiah, in whose Reign Jerusalem was taken by the Chaldæans, the Temple burnt, and the People carried away in Captivity to Babylon, in 3416. After this we read of the sad Death of Gedaliah, whom the Chal dæans had left in the Countrey to govern the Remains of the People of Judah; the Retreat of this People into Egypt, and the Favour shewn by Evilmerodach King of Babylon to Jehoiachin, or Jechoniah King of Judah, whom he took out of Prison, and placed with Honour in his Palace.

In this Interval God raised up many Prophets in Judah; such as Iddo, Abijah, Shemaiah, Hanani, Azariah, Jehu, Isaiah, Jeremiah, Zephaniah, Huldah, Micaiah, Joel, and many others. The fourth Book of Kings has preserved several Particulars of the Lives of these great Men, as well as of the Prophets who lived at the same Time in the Kingdom of Israel, or the Ten Tribes.

As to the Author of the four Books of Kings, the World is not agreed. Many ascribe the two first to Samuel, whose Name we read in the Front of these Books in the original Hebrew. The Jews allow him the Honour only of seven and twenty Chapters [Talmudistæ & Kimchi.] in the first, which include the History of his Life, and a Recital of what was done by Saul and David, while he was living. The rest they believe was continued by Gad and Nathan, according to these Words of the the [1 Ch. xxix. 29. 1 Sam. iii. 1.] Chronicles: Now the Acts of David the King first and last, behold, they are written in the Book of Samuel the Seer, and in the Book of Nathan the Prophet, and in the Book of Gad the Seer. This Opinion is very probable; but notwithstanding it labours under great Difficulties, since there are certain Remarks visible in it, which could not have any Place in the Time of Samuel, or even in the Time of Nathan: For Example, it is said [1 Sam. i. 10. 1 Kings xii. 15.] that while Samuel was living, Prophecy was rare in Israel; which intimates, that when the Author wrote, it was more frequent. He says in another Place, that Bethel was called [2 Sam. xiii. 5. 1 Sam. xxvii. 6.] Bethaven, or the House of Iniquity; a Name whereby it did not go till Jeroboam had set up there one of his golden Calves.

The Author observes likewise upon David's invading the Geshurites and Gezrites, that this Countrey of old was well peopled, from Shur even unto the Land of Egypt; that is to say, it was so in David's [1 Sam. xxvii. 8.] Time, but not when the Author was living. He says elsewhere, that they who formerly were called Seers, were in his Time termed Nabi or Prophets. Now in Samuel's Time the Name of Seer was very common; the Author therefore of these Books is more modern than this Prophet. He speaks of Samuel as of a Person who had been dead long before, and praises him. He takes Notice that the City of Ziklag belonged to the Kings of Judah, ever since the Cession which Achish made of it to David. This Remark must have been made since the Separation of the Kingdoms of Judah and Israel; and consequently this Author lived not only after Samuel, but even after David and Solomon.

Several other Observations of this Nature have been made, whereby some have been persuaded, that David, Hezekiah, Jeremiah, or Ezra compiled these Books from Memoirs which were prepared in the Time of Samuel and the Prophets, who lived in the Reign of David and Solomon; and it is certain, that if we compare the different Characters of these two Books, we shall on one Side see that the Circumstances, Facts and Remarks are for the most Part the same. The Uniformity of the Style and the Sequel of the Narration prove likewise, that there was but one Author of them, and he Contemporary with the Persons whom he speaks of. But on the other Side, there are some new Circumstances, which make us think, that a more modern Writer had a Hand in them, and added some Particulars, and certain Terms proper to explain, what the Distance of Time render'd obscure and inexplicable. Now, if we suppose that Ezra, who was an inspired Author, had in his Hands the Original Writings of Samuel, and the antient Writers of Saul and David's Times, and that he digested them into Order and connected them, all Difficulties are easily resolved, and the seeming Contradictions by some observed to be in the Text of these Books are reconciled.

That these Works are Authentick and Canonical, is a Point not disputed; both the Jewish and the Christian Church unanimously receive them as inspired Scripture, [Matt. xii. 2. Mark xii. 25. Luke vi. 3.] and Jesus Christ quotes them in the Gospel.

There are the same Difficulties almost with Relation to the Author of the third and fourth Books of Kings, and the Time when they were composed. Some have been of Opinion, that David, Solomon, and Hezekiah, wrote the History of their own Reigns. Others have asserted, that the Prophets took this Care upon them, who lived under their Government in Israel and Judah; for example, Isaiah, Jeremiah, Gad, and Nathan. We know very certainly, that several of the Prophets have written the Lives of those Kings, who reigned in their Times; and the Names and Writings of [See 1 Chr. xxix. 29. 2 Chr. ix. 29. 2 Chr. xii. 15. 2 Chr. xiii. 22. 2 Chr. xvi. 7. 2 Chr. xx. 34, & 37. xxvi. 22. & xxii. 32.] these Prophets are mentioned in several Places of the Books of Kings and Chronicles. Besides, the Memoirs and Annals of the Kings of Judah and Israel are cited almost every Moment, and these included the Particulars of those Princes Actions, whereof the Sacred Books have handed down to us Summaries only, and Abridgments.

It must be confessed therefore, that there are two Sorts of Writers, who have been concerned in penning the Books of Kings. Those original, primitive and contemporary Authors, who wrote the Annals, Journals, and Memoirs of what passed in their Times; from whence the Matter and Substance of of our Sacred History has been formed; and from whence the Authors which came afterwards have taken what they left us. These antient Memoirs have not descended down to us, but were certainly in the Hands of those sacred Penmen, whose Writings are in our Possession, since they cited them, and refer to them: But who are the Authors who compiled and digested these antient Writings, and in what Time did they live?

[2 King. xxv. 22, 23, &c.] It is generally believed that Ezra is the Author of the four Books of Kings, and of the Chronicles, as we have them at present; and the Proofs whereupon this Opinion is grounded, are these. 1. The Author who digested these Writings into Order, lived after the Captivity of Babylon. At the End of the fourth or second Book of Kings he speaks of the Return from the Captivity. 2. He says, that in his Time the Ten Tribes were still Captives in Assyria, whither they had been carried into Captivity as a Punishment for their Sins. 3. In the xvii. Chapter of the fourth or second Book of Kings, he makes some Reflections upon the Calamities of Judah and Israel, which demonstrate that he wrote after the Event. 4. He refers almost every where to antient Memoirs, which he had before him, and abridged. 5. The Author, as far as we are able to judge of this Matter, was a Priest, and very much attached to the House of David. Now all these Marks suit very well with Ezra, a learned and very curious Priest, who lived during the Captivity, and after it, who might have collected an infinite Number of Monuments, which Time and the Persecutions, which the Jews have suffered, might have deprived us of.

[1 King. viii. 8. 1 King. xii. 19. 1 King. vi. 1, & 28.] I confess, that there are some Particulars in these Books which do not agree with the time of Ezra: For Example, he says, that in his Time the Ark of the Covenant was still in the Temple; that the Kingdom of Judah and Israel were still subsisting. In another Place, he speaks of the Months Sif and Bul, Names, which in the Time of Ezra were no longer in Use. Lastly, He expresses himself throughout as a Contemporary, and as an Author would have done, who had been a Witness of what he wrote. But this pretended Contradiction may be easily reconciled. Ezra generally transcribes Word for Word the Memoirs which he had in his Possession; he copies them, without giving himself the Trouble to reconcile them. This is a Proof of his Exactness, his Fidelity and Honesty. In other Places, some Reflexions or Illustrations are inserted by him, which arise naturally from his Subject. This shews he was Master of the Matter which he had in Hand, and that being inspired by God, he was not afraid of intermixing his own Words with those of the Prophets, whose Writings lay before him.

The King's Rights. The Israelites having desired Samuel to give them a King, such as other Nations had shewn round about them: [1 Sam. viii. 2.] He hereupon replied to them, the King who shall govern you will have the following Prerogatives: " He will take your Sons to " guide his Chariots, and make Horsemen " of them to march before him. He will " make them his Officers to command some " a Thousand, others an Hundred Men: " Some he will take to plow his Fields, and " gather in his Corn; others to make his " Arms and Chariots. Your Daughters he " will take to be his Confectionaries, Cooks " and Bakers. He will likewise take your " best Fields, Vineyards, and other Gardens, " and give them to his Servants. He will " make you pay Tythe of your Corn and " Vineyards, that he may have wherewithal " to gratify his Officers and Eunuchs. He " will take your Men and Maid Servants, " and the strongest of your young People, " together with your Asses, and will employ them in working for him. He will " also take the Tenth of your Flocks, and " ye shall be his Servants. Ye shall cry out " in that Day against your King, and the " Lord will not hear you, because ye yourselves desired to have a King."

There is a considerable Difficulty proposed relating to these Words. The Question is, whether Samuel only foretold here what should happen to the Israelites from their King, without pretending to authorize or approve it; or whether he declared to them what the real Privileges of a King would be, and the lawful Use of their Authority: Opinions are divided about this Matter. The Commentators for the most part think, that the Prophet here describes in what Manner the Prince would abuse his Power, and what would be his excessive Pretensions, rather than the just and legal Exercise of his Rights[1]. As to the last Opinion Grotius may be consulted in his De jure Belli & Pacis, l. 1. c. 1. & c. 4. Art. 3. & 4. and Schicardus de Jure Regni.

Kings of the Feast. At great Entertainments a King was created, who assigned to every one his Place. He was chosen by Lot, or by the Person who gave the Banquet. He commanded, and every one was obliged to obey him. The Author of the Book of Ecclesiasticus [Ecclus xxxii. 1.] speaks of this Custom: If thou be made the Master of a Feast, lift not thy self up, but be among them as one of the rest: Take diligent Care for them, and so sit down. And when thou hast done all thy Office, take thy Place, that thou mayst be merry with them, and receive a Crown for the well ordering of the Feast. This Practice seems to have been in use not only among the Greeks and Latins, but among the Persians too. At Ahasuerus's Feast there was no King of it: Nec erat qui nolentes cogerit ad bibendum. Every Man drank to satisfy his Thirst, without there being any such Officer to prescribe to any the Number of Cups which they should drink. Empedocles complained of one who was King of the Feast, and had commanded him to drink, or if he did not, that the Wine should be poured upon his Head.

Translators' note. I cannot deny my self the Satisfaction here of transcribing the Sentiments of a very judicious and ingenious Writer, whom I have occasionally cited in other Places relating to the Point here in Question: His Words are these; It is a vile Opinion of those Men, and might be punished without Tyranny, if they teach it, who hold, that the Right of Kings is set down in this Place by Samuel. Neither did the People of Israel ever allow, or the Kings avow the Assumption of such a Power, as appears by the Story of Ahab and Naboth. Some indeed did ex- ercise it; but that is no more a Proof of the Right than their Practice was of the Lawfulness of Idolatry. The Reader may likewise consult Barbeyrac's Notes upon the Passages of Grotius which are referr'd to by our Author, and his Remarks upon Puffendorf's Law of Nations. Book vii. ch. vi. Sect. 9.

Kings

KINGS. The Idolatrous Nations, and even the Hebrews, called their Gods Kings. Moloch, Milchom, Adramelech, and Anamelech, are Names of Deities derived from that of Kings. The Words of Isaiah in ch. xxxvii. 13, Where is the King of Hamath, and the King of Arphad, and the King of the City of Sepharvaim, Henah and Ivah? seem parallel to those of the preceding Chapter xxxvi. 19, Where are the Gods of Hamath and Arphad? Where are the Gods of Sepharvaim? And in Amos, ch. i. 15. God threatens Melchom, the God of the Moabites, with sending him and his Princes into Captivity. Ibit Melchom in captivitatem ipse, & principes ejus simul. In the Scripture God is called in every Page almost, the King of the Hebrews.

Kiss

KISS. There are in the Scripture Style Kisses of Friendship, Adoration, Homage and Respect, Kisses of Peace and Reconciliation. Saint Paul speaks frequently of the Kiss of Peace, which was in Use among Believers, and was given by them to one another, as a Token of Charity and Union, publickly [Heb. xi. 21.] in their religious Assemblies. Salute each other with an holy Kiss. We have already spoken of the Kiss of Adoration under the Word Adore. Joseph coming to visit his Father Jacob, who was on his Death-Bed, the good old Man kissed the End of the Staff of Command which he held in his Hand. [Adoravit fastigium virgæ ejus. Vide LXX in Gen. xlvii. 31. Esth. v. 2. Ps. xi. 12. juxta Heb.] Esther kissed the End of King Ahasuerus's Scepter, in the Way of Homage and Adoration. The Psalmist exhorts us, to embrace the Son of God, and acknowledge his Dominion. We kiss the Text of the holy Gospels, the Cross, Relicks, Altars, and sacred Vessels, out of Respect, and with a kind of relative Worship, which we pay them: And with this same Spirit the converted Adulteress kissed our Saviour's Feet, washed them with her Tears, and wiped them with her Hair.

But the Author of the first Book of Maccabees understands it as we do, of the Macedonians; for he calls Alexander King of the Kittims, and says, that Perseus King of the Kittims was overcome by the Romans. Daniel speaks of the Ships of the Kittims, which Bochart takes to be meant of the Roman Fleet. He will have it, that Kittim signifies Italy. It is true Daniel speaks in this Place of the Roman Fleet, but he calls it the Fleet of the Kittims, because it lay in the Harbours of Macedonia, when it departed to attack Antiochus, under the Conduct of Caïus Popilius; and of this Event Daniel was speaking in the Passage cited by Bochart. To Know [Ex. xxxiii. 12, 17. Numb. xxxi. 17.] TO KNOW. I know thee by Name, I know thee very particularly, I know who thou art: Thou art my peculiar Servant, whom I have named. It is God who speaks thus to Moses. Otherwise; I have called thee to my Service by Name. Kill every Woman that hath known Man: All the married Women, and those who are not Virgins. Thus; Adam cognovit uxorem suam; Virum non cognosco; Rex non cognovit eam. All these Expressions describe in a decent Manner the Act of Marriage.

To know the Lord, to know the Way and Judgments of the Lord. And in a contrary [Jer. xxxi. 34. Hosea xiii. 4, &c.] Sense, they have not known the Lord, nor his Ways, does not signify a mere speculative Knowledge, but a practical Knowledge accompanied with Actions, and with Charity. The Ox knoweth his Master, but [Hosea xiii. 5.] Israel doth not know him. Is. i. 3.

I did know thee in the Wilderness; I chose thee for my People, and gave my Law to [Amos iii. 2.] thee in the Wilderness. And Amos; You only have I known of all the Families of the Earth. You only have I taken for my People. [Hosea viii. 4.] And again; They have made Princes, and I knew it not. They have set themselves over my People without my Mission or Consent.

I do not know thee, I know not who thou art; that is to say, I have nothing to do with thee, I design to treat you as a Stranger, as an indifferent Person, as one whom I have never seen.

To know denotes frequently the View of any Thing with Approbation, Esteem and Friendship. The Lord knoweth the Ways of the Righteous, Ps. i. 6. The Lord knoweth the Days of the Upright. Ps. xxxvii. 18. And, the Lord knoweth the Ways which are on the right Hand, he approves, he loves them. Prov. iv. 27[1].

Knowledge

KNOWLEDGE. God planted in Paradise the Tree of the Knowledge of Good and Evil; that is to say, of the Knowledge of all Things; for to know Good and Evil signifies a general Knowledge, at least in Morals. Some are of Opinion that this Tree of Knowledge was different from the Tree of Life, and that Eve was inclined to eat the Fruit of Knowledge, with the Hopes of becoming a little Deity, abounding with Light and Knowledge; ye shall be as Gods, knowing Good and Evil.

[Gen. iii. 5. 1 Sam. ii. 3.] The Lord is a God of Knowledge, says Hannah in her Thanksgiving Song. That is to say, he sees, perceives, and knows every Thing; what is past, present and to come lies open to his View; he penetrates our deepest Thoughts, and most concealed Inclinations; he is the Author of all Science and Knowledge.

Thy Knowledge, Lord, is infinitely too high for me, I cannot attain unto it. Mirabilis facta est Scientia tua ex me. It would be ridiculous for Man not only to pretend to equal the Knowledge of God, but even to believe that he [Psalm cxxxviii. 6.] can form a just Idea of it. We may easily discern, that our Notices of Things are very limited and imperfect, and that the Knowledge of God is without the Defects of ours; but to desire to learn how far it extends, is to aim at numbering the Drops of Water in the Sea.

The Knowledge of God, of Salvation, of the Saints, may denote those serious and useful Notices of Things relating to Religion, which guide us to God and Holiness; or the Knowledge which is given and inspired by God, and has Things holy for its Object.

There is no Knowledge or Wisdom in the Grave whither thou goest in the other Life: These Qualities of Wise and Learned which the World esteems, and procure you some Honour [Eccles. ix. 10.] and Reputation in this Life, will disappear at Death. There will be then no Question about any Thing but of a good Life and good Works. These are the only Advantages which will be of any Benefit or Use to us at the Hour of Death. It may be explained likewise as if it were an Objection offered by Libertines, Let us enjoy present Pleasure, for every Thing perishes with the Body; in the other Life there will be neither Work, nor Reason, nor Wisdom, nor Knowledge.

Knowledge puffeth up, but Charity edifieth. The empty Knowledge of Speculative and useless Things, which tend only to gratify Curiosity [1 Cor. viii. 1.] and Vanity, the Object whereof is such Knowledge only as contributes neither to our own Salvation nor our Neighbours, neither to the publick Good, nor God's Glory; such Sort of Knowledge is much more dangerous than profitable. The true Science is that of Salvation, to know God, and love him, to know and to despise our selves; to employ our Knowledge in sanctifying ourselves, in glorifying God, and edifying our Neighbour, this is the only sound Knowledge.

Saint Paul says himself that he was rude in Speech, but not in Knowledge; that he had none of that insolent and ostentatious Knowledge which consists in imposing upon others [2 Cor. xi. 6.] with pompous, sublime and eloquent Discourses; his Knowledge was humble and simple, but solid, elevated, pure, and suited to the Capacity of those, who heard him with holy Dispositions, and with the Desire of being edified and instructed.

Our Saviour reproaches the Pharisees with having taken away the Key of Knowledge, and neither entring in themselves, nor suffering others to enter into the Kingdom of Heaven. Luke xi. 52. The Pharisees made particular Profession of studying the Law. They passed for the most learned of the Jews. They could not endure that others should be in any Reputation for Learning. In a Word, they seized on the Key of Knowledge, but what did they do with it? They did not live the better for it; they did not enter into the Kingdom of Heaven; their Lives were nothing but Ostentation and Hypocrisy. The Traditions wherewith they had overloaded the Law, were rather a Corruption than a good Explanation of the Will of God. So that they not only did not follow the Way which leads to the Kingdom of Heaven, but farther misled others out of it by their bad Explanations.

Korah (II)

II. KORAH, the Son of Jehar, of the Race of Levi, and Father of Asher, Elkanah and Aliasaph, and Head of the Korites, a celebrated Family among the Levites. Korah being dissatisfied with the Rank he held among the Sons of Levi, and envying the Authority which Moses and Aaron enjoyed, formed a Party against them; wherein he engaged Dathan, Abiram and On, with two Hundred and fifty of the principal Levites. [Numb. xvi. 1, 2, 3, &c.] Korah at the Head of the Rebels went to Moses and Aaron, and complained that they alone arrogated to themselves all the Authority over the People of the Lord. Moses falling with his Face upon the Earth, answered them: To Morrow in the Morning the Lord will discover who are his. Let every one of you take therefore his Censer, and to Morrow he shall put Incense into them; and offer it before the Lord; and he shall be acknowledged Priest, whom the Lord shall choose and approve.

The next Day Korah with two Hundred and fifty of his Faction, presenting themselves with their Censers before the Lord, the Glory of the Lord appeared visibly over the Tabernacle; and a Voice was heard to say, separate your selves from among this Congregation, that I may consume them in a Moment. Moses and Aaron hereupon falling with their Faces to the Ground, said, O God, the God of the Spirits of all Flesh, shall one Man sin, and wilt thou be Wrath with all the Congregation? And the Lord said unto Moses, command all the People to depart from about the Tents of Korah, Dathan, and Abiram. When therefore the People were retired, Moses said, If these Men dye the common Death of all Men, then the Lord hath not sent me; but if the Earth open and swallow them up quick, then ye shall know that they have blasphemed the Lord. As soon as he had spoken, the Earth opened from under their Feet, and swallowed them up with what belonged to them.

But one Thing there was which added to this surprizing Wonder, and that was, that when Korah was thus swallowed up in the Earth, his Sons were preserved from this Misfortune. We do not know the Year particularly when the Death of Korah and his Companions happened. The Sons of Korah continued as before, to serve in the Tabernacle of the Lord. David appointed them their Office in the Temple, to guard the Doors, and sing the Praises of God. There are several Psalms ascribed to them, which go by the Name of Korah: As the 41, 43, 44, 45, 46, 47, 48, and the 83, 84, 86, 87; that is to say, eleven Psalms.

The Mahometans have several Traditions relating to Korah, which it may be proper to produce here, tho' no great Account is to be made of them: They say, Korah, whom they call Karum, was the Son of Masaab, Cousin German to Moses. Moses seeing he was poor, taught him Chymistry, by which Means he acquired such immense Riches, that forty Camels were necessary to carry his Gold and Silver. There are some who assert, that he had several Camels loaded only with the Keys of his strong Boxes.

Moses having commanded the Israelites to pay the Tythe of all their Fortunes, Korah refused to obey him, he even rebelled against his Benefactor, and spread several Calumnies against him, which had such an Effect, as to destroy almost all his Authority with the People. Moses hereupon made his Complaint to God, who permitted him to punish Korah as he should think proper. He therefore cursed him, and commanded the Earth to open, and swallow him up; which was immediately executed.

The Mahometans have another Tradition, that Korah, seeing his Treasures sunk under Ground, then that his Tent was swallowed up, after that his Family, and lastly discerning himself to be already as high as his Knees in the Earth, begged of Moses four several Times to pardon him, but found him inflexible. Sometime after God appeared to this Prophet, and said to him: Thou couldst not forgive Korah, though he four Times desired it of thee; had he addressed himself to me once only, I should not have refused him my Pardon.

Laban

LABAN, the Son of Bathuel, and Grandson of Nahor, Brother to Rebekah, and Father to Rachel and Leah. When Jacob came into Mesopotamia[1], he was very well received by his Uncle Laban. A Month after his Arrival, [Genesis xxviii. xxix.] Laban said to him, must you, because you are my Nephew, serve me without any Gratuity? Consider what Reward will be agreeable to you. Jacob proposed therefore to serve him seven Years, for his youngest Daughter Rachel, Laban consented, and Jacob engaged to serve him for seven Years[2]. Then said Jacob to Laban, give me my Wife, for my Time is accomplished. Laban therefore made a Wedding Feast, and at Night conveyed Leah into Jacob's Chamber, so that Jacob perceived nothing of the Fraud, till the next Morning; then he complained sharply of it. But Laban replied, that it was not the Custom to marry the younger Daughters before the Elder, and if he was willing to serve him seven Years more, he would give him Rachel: Jacob consented, and married Rachel, after he had lived seven Years with Leah.

When Jacob had spent these fourteen Years in the Service of Laban[3], he was desirous to return into the Land of Canaan: But [Gen. xxx. 26, 27.] Laban detained him, and importuned him to continue in his Service. He said to him, Ask what Recompence of me you please; Jacob demanded all the young ones which his Flocks should produce, of a brown Colour, spotted and speckled: That is to say, all that seemed least desirable for the Advantage of good Wool, and for their Fleece. Laban consented, and separated all that were spotted and of divers Colours in his Flocks, and committed them to the Keeping of his own Sons; and left none for Jacob but such as were of one Colour only, fearing, in all Probability, lest he should use some Art to produce Cattle of divers Colours, by the Mixture of spotted Sheep and Goats, with those which were not so. But Jacob had a Vision, wherein he discovered a very simple and natural Means of producing Lambs and Kids of different Colours, which was by placing several Branches of different Colours before the Females, while they were warm and eager for the Males. This Method succeeding, he became so powerful and rich, that Laban and his Sons could not look upon him without Envy.

[Gen. xxxi. 1, 2, 3, &c.] Jacob perceiving that they did not regard him with the same Kindness as formerly, resolved to go away[4], without Laban's Knowledge, and he executed his Resolution in so private a Manner, that Laban knew nothing of his Departure till the third Day after. Then he set out upon the Pursuit of him, and overtook him at Mount-Gilead. God appear'd by Night to Laban, and forbad him to say any Thing disobliging to Jacob; so that when he went to Jacob, he only complained, that before he left him, he had not given him the Comfort of embracing his Daughters and Grand-Children, and of conducting them on their Journey with instruments of Musick. He was not so moderate on the Subject of their [See hereafter the Article TERAPHIM.] stealing from him his Gods or Teraphims. Of this he made great Complaints; and Jacob replied with some Vehemence, that he consented with all his Heart, that he who had committed this Theft should be put to Death, not knowing that Rachel was the Person who had carried them off. Laban therefore searched all the Tents belonging to Jacob, without finding any Thing that appertained to him; for Rachel with great Precaution had concealed these Images under the Furniture of her Camel. See the Article RACHEL.

After this Jacob in his Turn made great Complaints to Laban of his Conduct towards him, and reproached him with having changed the Reward which was due to him. He added, if the God of my Father had not assisted me, you had sent me perhaps naked to my Father's House. Laban answered, behold my Daughters and my Grand-Children, what can I do against them? All that is yours is as dear to me as what belongs any Way to my self. Come, let us make a Covenant together, and set up here a Monument to preserve the Memory of it. They swore therefore reciprocally to each other Friendship and Alliance; they eat and drank together upon a great Heap of Stones, which Laban called[5] Jegar-Sahadutha, the Heap of Testimony; and Jacob Galeed, the Heap of Witness, each according to the Difference of his Language. Laban spoke Chaldee, and Jacob Hebrew or Phœnician. And Laban said, Let the Lord be Judge between me and thee, if thou treat my Daughters ill, and take other Wives with them: May these Heaps serve as Witnesses between me and thee, against either of us who shall pass beyond them, to go with any evil Intentions into the other's Countrey. The God of Abraham, the God of Nabor, and the God of our Fathers judge betwixt us. And having offered Sacrifice, they eat and drank together; and the next Morning Laban took his Leave of his Daughters and Grand-Sons, and returned to Haran. This is all we know of him.

Labor

LABOR. This Word, which properly signifies Labour, is sometimes made Use of in Scripture for Sin, Iniquity, Falshood, the Punishment of Sin: For Example, Sub Lingua ejus labor & dolor. He has under his Tongue Ungodliness and Sorrow, or according to the Hebrew, Mischief and Iniquity; he thinks only of doing Mischief, of injuring and afflicting his Neighbour. And elsewhere Labor in medio ejus & injustitia; Sin and Injustice are in the Midst of the City. And again, Labor labiorum ipsorum operiet eos. Let the Mischief of their own Lips cover them: Let the Punishment of their Sin, of their evil Discourses fall upon them. And Isaiah ch. lix 4. Conceperunt laborem & peperunt iniquitatem. These Words were in a Manner proverbial. They are in the seventh Psalm, and are again met with in Job, ch. xv. □ 15. And Habakkuk speaking to God, ch. i. □ 3. Quare ostendisti mihi iniquitatem & laborem: That is to say, Iniquity and the Crimes of the wicked who conspire against me.

Labor is often used for all Sorts of Misfortunes, Fatigues and Troubles. Nosti omnem [Num. xx. 14.] laborem qui apprehendit nos. All the Evils which we have suffered. Narravit universum laborem qui accidisset eis in itinere; the Uneasiness [Ex xviii. 8.] which attended their Journey. Labor is also taken for the Fruit of Labour. Labores [Ps civ. 44] populorum possederunt. They possessed the Labours of the People. And elsewhere, let the Strangers spoil his Labour, and the first Fruits of their Labours; that is to say, what they have acquired by their Labours.

Labor is sometimes used for the Uneasiness we give others. Labor labiorum ipsorum [Ps. cxxxix. 10.] operiet eos. The Mischief they do others will fall upon them, or the Pain occasioned by their evil Discourses and Calumnies will overwhelm them. Labor stultorum affliget eos. The wicked shall be punished with those very Evils which they would inflict on others; and the Psalmist,[1] Numquid adhæret tibi sedes iniquitatis, qui fingis laborem in præcepto? Shall the Throne of Iniquity have Fellowship with thee which frameth Mischief, Iniquity, by its Precepts; for the Hebrew reads fingit in the third Person, and not fingis. The Throne of Iniquity are the Wicked, they who abuse the Power which God hath put into their Hands; they frame Mischief by a Law, they overwhelm the Weak with their Authority; they afflict, oppress them.

Lacedæmon

LACEDÆMON, otherwise called Sparta, a celebrated City in the Peloponnesus. It is very ancient, and said to have been called at first Lelegia, from Lelex, its first King, who was, they say, Contemporary with Creon and Erichthonius. It afterwards took the Name of Lacedæmon from Lacedæmon the Son of Jupiter and Semele: Lastly, it went likewise by the Name of Sparta, from Queen Sparta, Wife to Lacedæmon.

We know of three Dynasties of Kings who reigned formerly at Lacedæmon. The first began with Lelex, first King of this City, and continued as far as Tizamenes, the Son of Orestes, thirteenth and last King of the first Dynasty, who was driven out by the Heraclidæ. The Dynasty of the Heraclidæ was divided into two Families, that of the Eurysthenidæ or the Agidæ, of whom there were one and thirty Kings of Lacedæmon, and that of the Proclidæ, or Euripontidæ; of whom there were four and twenty.

The Lacedæmonians were always distinguished by their Valour. Lycurgus formed their Government and gave them Laws. He settled a Council composed of two and thirty, of whom the King was the first. This Council could conclude nothing without the Consent of the People. Many of Lycurgus's Laws have some Resemblance with those of Moses; for Example, the Equality observed in the Partition of Lands, the Respect required to old Men and Magistrates, Frugality, Abhorrence of Drunkenness, and Intemperance; they brought up their Sons and even their Daughters in the laborious Exercises of War; they inspired them with an infinite Love of Liberty and Independency, they spoke little, and said much in few Words. The Laconick Style grew into a Proverb.

The Hebrews did not begin to have a Knowledge of the Lacedæmonians, and carry on any Commerce with them, till after the Maccabees. We said in the first Edition of this Dictionary, that Arius King of Lacedæmon, wrote to the High-Priest Onias III. in the Year of the World 3821, before J. C. 179, before the Vulgar Æra 183.[1] that having been informed how nearly the Jews and Lacedæmonians were related, as being both of the Race of Abraham, he desired them to send him an Account of the State of their Affairs. Onias received Arius's Envoys very well, and wrote back to the Lacedæmonians, acknowledging with Pleasure the Relation between the two Nations.

Many Years after °, Jonathan Maccabæus having sent Deputies to Rome, in Order to renew the Alliance between the Jews and Romans, gave Orders to his People to return by the Way of Lacedæmon, and carry a Letter to the Lacedæmonians, wherein he declares all that we have been speaking of, and says, that although the Jews do not want the Testimony of Arius, to be convinced of the Relation which was between them, since they had sacred Books which informed them of it; and although in the present Situation of their Commonwealth they were under no Necessity to have Recourse to them for any Assistance; they however would not neglect an Opportunity of sending Ambassadors to them, to renew their Union and Friendship, and to give them some Account of the Posture wherein the Affairs of their Nation stood, telling them they were exposed to many Persecutions, but the Lord in a very miraculous Manner had delivered them out of all. We have not the Answer of the Lacedæmonians.

Some Time before Jason, the pretended High-Priest of the Jews, and Brother to Onias III. having been obliged to fly from his Countrey, by Reason of his Crimes, retired to the Lacedæmonians[2], hoping to find [2 Mac. v. 7.] a Sanctuary among them; but the Lacedæmonians understanding the Reason of his Flight, deserted him, and he died without receiving from them the Honour of a Burial.

We at first supposed with Josephus[3] and Ussher[4], that it was the High-Priest Onias III. to whom the King of Lacedæmon had written; there are Difficulties notwithstanding against this Supposition, which ought not to be concealed. It is said[5]; that there was no King at Lacedæmon in the Time of Onias III. of the Name of Arius; for as to him who is mentioned in the History of Onias's Time, he had neither the Title nor Quality of King; no Author ever gave it him. The two Royal Families of Lacedæmon were extinct before this Arius came into the World, and the Government of this City had taken another Form, after having passed through the Hands of certain Tyrants. Besides this, the High-Priest Jonathan in his Letter to the [Macc. xii. 10.] Lacedæmonians, taking Notice of that of Arius, says, that it had been written long before: Now he never would have spoke thus, if Arius's Letters had been written to Onias III. Since from the Death of Onias III. which happened in the Year of the World 3834, to the Beginning of Jonathan in 3843, there were but nine Years.

It were therefore more advisable to say, that it was Areus, or Arius I. King of Lacedæmon, who wrote to Onias I. High-Priest of the Jews. This Prince was certainly Contemporary with Onias, and all History agrees very well in this Opinion. The Beginning of Onias I. we fix in the Year of the World 3682, and his Death in 3702.

As to the Relation between the Jews and Lacedæmonians, we shall offer the principal Conjectures which are brought to give some Colour to this Opinion. It may be proper to remark first, that according to the Greek Text they were the Lacedæmonians who first wrote to the Jews, and certified to them, that they had found in some old Books, that they were Relations, and had the Patriarch Abraham for their common Father. The Jews, who have been always proud of their noble Original, did not reject this Pretension of the Lacedæmonians. Both the one and the other believed very seriously, that they were related. We have Arius's Letter to Onias, but we do not find Onias's Answer to Arius; it appears however by the Sequel of the History, that the Matter was very well received in Judæa, and that both People maintained sincerely their Alliance and Relation.

The High-Priest Jason being obliged to quit Judæa his Countrey, and Arabia whither he had retired, went to Lacedæmon, [v. 9.] and there desired Protection. The High-Priest 2 Macc.[6] Jonathan, Brother to Judas Maccabæus, wrote to the People and Senate of Lacedæmon [2 Macc. xii 6.] , to renew their ancient Alliance; their Relation was an Article not contested. It must be nevertheless confessed, that if this were founded only upon the Monuments remaining with us in the holy Scriptures, or in prophane Authors, their Belief was ill enough grounded. But they might at that Time have Proofs and Monuments in their Possession which are unknown to us.

Let this be as it will, the Conjectures which are offered to give Light to this Relation are such as here follow. Some[7] have advanced, [Gen. x. 28.] that Ebal the Son of Joktan, was the same with Ebalus, the Father of Tyndarus, and Grandfather of Castor, Pollux, and Helena; but Chronology cannot be reconciled with this Opinion; and besides, this would not prove that the Lacedæmonians and Jews had Abraham for their common Father, since Ebal is six or seven Generations older than Abraham.

[D. Thom. seu alius in Libb. Mac.] Others believed, that the Lacedæmonians were sprung from one of the two Wives of Abraham, Hagar, or Keturah; but this is too uncertain, and gives us no Light beyond a Conjecture, which is not supported by the least Proof. Grotius imagines, that the Relation between the Jews and Lacedæmonians is founded upon the Lacedæmonians being descended from the Dorians, and the Dorians from the Pelasgians; and as these last were originally of the Countries adjacent to Syria or Arabia, it has been said at Random, that the Lacedæmonians and Jews were of the same Race; this is one of those agreeable Opinions which will not allow of an accurate and rigid Examination.

Eutychius Patriarch of Alexandria, deduces this Relation from Esau's Side: He believes, that Esau married not only Women of Canaan, but likewise Greek Women; and that from thence proceeded the Alliance betweeen the Jews and Greeks. It were to be wished, that this supposed Marriage between Esau and these Grecian Women were so much as probable.

Some derive it from Cadmus, who being a Phœnician, and coming into Greece with some Arabians, gave Room for this Report of the Lacedæmonians descending from Abraham. The Foundation of the City of Lacedæmon is attributed to Cadmus, and the Etymology of the Name Sparta, which signifies sown, is borrowed from Cadmus's having sown the Serpent's Teeth, out of which sprung Men.[8] Apollodorus adds, that Cadmus being frightened to see Men compleatly [Diodor. Sicul.] armed rising out of the Earth, threw Stones at them: That they gathering up the Stones, began to combat and to kill one another; so that but five of them remained, at the Head of whom was Udæus. Would not any one have taken this Udæus for Judæus, in Order to derive from him the Original of the Jewish Lacedæmonians?

Diodorus Siculus relates, that a Multitude of Strangers settling in Egypt, and beginning to alter the Laws and Customs of it, the Natives of the Country drove them out, and obliged them to retire where they could: Part of them withdrew into Greece under the Conduct of Danaus and Cadmus; the others having Moses at their Head, made themselves Masters of Judæa, which at that Time was intirely desolate. Here again is Matter whereupon to found a Conjecture concerning the common Original of the Lacedæmonians and Jews.

[Tacit. Hist. l. v. initio.] The Foundation of Sparta is by some Authors attributed to a Jew whose Name was Sparton, and who accompanied Bacchus in his Wars and Travels; others attribute it to Spartus the Son of Phoroneus. Some will have it, that this Sparton, Bacchus's Companion, was a Jew; if this were well proved, there would be no other Foundation wanting to affirm, that the Jews and Lacedæmonians were derived from the same Father. But Pausanias remarks, that the Lacedæmonians knew of no [Pausan. Corinth. P. 58.] such Man, and did not acknowledge him to be the Founder of their City.

[Joseph. Antiq. l. xii. c v. 1 Macc. xii. 9.] The Ancients believed, that the Jews were originally of the Isle of Crete. This Opinion was still common in the Time of Tacitus: Judæos Creta insula profugos novissime Lybiæ insedisse, &c. Mount Ida, not very different from that of Juda; the Idæi not much unlike Judæi; the River Jarden having the same Name as Jordan in Palestine; the Laws of the Cretans given by Minos, those of the Lacedæmonians by Lycurgus, those of the Jews by Moses: All this in the most remote Antiquity. The Cretan People sent Colonies into Palestine: The Philistines were originally Cretans. Lycurgus the Lacedæmonian Legislator dwelt a long Time in Crete, and borrowed his Laws from thence; which he established among his Countrymen. All this might have given Room for Belief, that the Jews and Lacedæmonians were of the same Original[9].

Josephus took the Passage of Jonathan's Letter to the Senate of Lacedæmon in a Sense different from what we read in the Books of Maccabees. These Books import, that although the Jews had no Want of the Assistance of the Lacedæmonians, nor of an Alliance with them, did notwithstanding send proper Persons to renew it with them: Albeit we need none of these Things, for that we have the holy Books of Scripture to comfort us. Josephus makes Jonathan say, that for the Jews, they wanted not the Testimony of Strangers to be persuaded, that the Jews and Spartans were Brethren, having the sacred Writings in their Hands which furnished them with Proofs of it, &c. This Explanation of Josephus is followed by many Interpreters, but where are these Passages of Scripture which demonstrate the Relation between these two People? This is what no one hitherto could shew, any otherwise than by supposing what is very uncertain, that the Lacedæmonians came from the Edomites or Ishmaelites.

The Result of all that has been said is this, that the Relation of these two People is a very dubious Point, and that probably the Jews and Spartans were willing in this Particular to be agreeably mistaken. The Scripture does not oblige us to believe what Arius and Jonathan believed; if it be an Error, it is one for which they are responsible. The Books which we believe to be inspired and indubitable, do sometimes relate the Errors and vain Opinions of Men, without approving or authorizing them.

Lake

LAKE. There were three great Lakes in Judæa; the Lake Asphaltites, the Lake of [Isa. xxii. 11.] Tiberias, and the Lake Semechon. There was also in the Borders as you go towards Egypt, the Lake Sirbon. All these Lakes are to be sought for under their proper Articles. Besides these great Lakes, there were some Pools called also by this Name; as the Lake of Cendervia, from whence the little River Beleus flowed, to the East of Ptolemais; the Lake near Cæsarea of Palestine, the Lake Phiala, at the Foot of Libanus; the Lake Jazer, and that of Hesebon beyond Jordan. Isaiah speaks likewise of a Lake which Manasseh caused to be made, between the two Walls of Jerusalem.

There is Mention in the Book of Samuel [1 Sam. xxx. 30.] of the Lake Ashan; there was a Lake probably near the City of Ashan, which belonged to the Tribe of Judah. See Joshua xv. 42. The Hebrew[1] reads Cor Ashan, which is the Town of Ashan just now mentioned. It was given at first to Judah, and afterwards a Cession of it was made to Simeon. Joshua xix. 7. St. Jerom read Bebor-Asan, in Lacu Asan, instead of Becor-Acan.

[1 Macc. ix. 33.] The Lake Asphar, spoken of in the Maccabees, is no other than the Asphaltite, or the Dead Sea. See ASPHALTITE.

[Isai. li. 1. Ps. vii. 16. Ps. xxviii. 1.] Lacus is often used for a Cistern. Consider the Hole of the Lake whence they were taken out, says Isaiah, that is to say, the Covenant of your Fathers and Mothers. And as their Tombs were generally Holes dug in Rocks, or under Ground, wherein the Bodies of the dead were disposed in a Sort of Niches, and lay long concealed, the Scripture likewise often calls Tombs, Lakes; for Example, Lacum aperuit & effodit eum, & incidit in terram, quam fecit. And again, Unto thee will I cry, O Lord, my Rock, be not silent to me, answer me, lest, if thou be silent to me, Assimulabor descendentibus in lacum, who go down into the Grave, the Pit.

[Lacus, Fossa, Cisterna. Zach. ix. 11. Jer. xxxviii. 6, 7, 8. Jer. Thr. iii. 56. Ezek. xxxii. 23.] The Hebrew Word Bor signifies in General, a Pit, a Cistern, a Lake, a Sepulcher, a hollow deep Place, wherein wild Beasts are shut up such as Lions, and Slaves, as is still practiced at this Day in Africk, and other Places. Zachary says, Emisisti vinctos tuos de lacu, out of Prison. Jeremiah was cast into Prison, which Prison was a Well without Water, that had nothing in it besides Mud. Lacus novissimus signifies the deepest, the furthest Part of the Tomb or Prison: Invocavi nomen tuum, Domine, de lacu novissimo. And Ezekiel speaking of the King of Assyria's Sepulcher says, that it is placed in the deepest Part of the Cave: Quorum Sepulcra data sunt in novissimis laci.

And as in Palestine, Wine and Oil were reserved in great Tubs or subtertanean Cisterns, in the Manner almost wherein Water is preserved; these Tubs are likewise called Lakes: For this Reason, when they are talking of a Press, they say, they dig a Lake or subterraneous great Tub, for receiving the [Gen. iv. 18, 19, 20, &c. Mark xii. 1. Antiq. l. i. c. 5. Rev. xiv. 19. 20.] Wine: Vineam plantavit homo, & circumdedit sepem, & fodit lacum. And St. John in the Revelations says, that the Lord had sent his Angel to gather the Grapes, which he cut and put into the Lake of God's Wrath, that he had trodden them; that the Blood came out of them, and overflowed the Length of sixteen hundred Furlongs. Lamb

LAMB. Under the Word Lamb in Scripture the Kid is sometimes comprehended; for Example, the Hebrews at the Passover were left at Liberty to chuse indifferently either the one or the other for a Victim[1]. The original Seb in general signifies the Young either of a Goat or Ewe. Agnus anniculus, which is translated a Lamb of a Year old, may likewise be interpreted a Lamb of the Year, born in the Year, but that does not suck: For to sacrifice the Paschal Lamb while it used the [Exod. xii. 5. Exod. xxiii. 19.] Teat, and seethe it in the Milk of its Dam, was a Thing prohibited. Upon every other Occasion the Law required, that the Young should be left eight Days with its Dam before [Exod. xxii. 30. Lev. xxii. 27.] it was offered in Sacrifice.

The Prophets represent the Messiah to us like a Lamb abounding in Meekness, which [If. liii. 7. Jerem. xi. 19. Joh. i. 29, 36. Rev. v. 6, 8, 12, 13. vi. 1. vii. 9. xii. 11, &c.] is sheered and carried to the Altar without making a Complaint. St. John Baptist describes our Saviour by the Name of the Lamb of God; and in many Places of the Revelations he is pointed out to us under the Idea of a Lamb that has been sacrificed. In Isaiah xii. 6. it is said, that in the Time of the Messiah, the Lamb and the Wolf will feed peaceably together; and in the Gospel the Wicked at the Day of Judgment are compared to Goats, the Righteous to Lambs. Our Saviour sent his Disciples to preach the Gospel to the Gentiles like Lambs amidst Wolves. Luke x. 3.

LAMB OF GOD. This is the Name whereby John the Baptist called Jesus [Joh. i. 29, 36.] Christ, when he saw him coming to him, to signify the Innocence of this divine Saviour, and his Quality as a Victim which was to be offered up for the Sins of all the World. Lastly, he might allude to these Words of the [If. liii. 7.] Prophet: He is brought as a Lamb to the Slaughter, and as a Sheep before his Shearers is dumb, so he openeth not his Mouth.

I. LAMECH, the Son Methuselah, and Father of Noah. He lived a hundred [Gen. v. 25, 31.] fourscore and two Years before the Birth of Noah; and after it he lived five hundred and ninety five Years longer; thus the whole Time of his Life was seven Hundren seventy seven Years, being born in the Year of the World 874, and dying in the Year 1651.

Lamech (II)

II. LAMECH, of the Race of Cain, was the Son of Methusael, and Father of Jabal, Jubal, Tubalcain, and Naamah. Lamech is celebrated in Scripture for his Polygamy, whereof he is thought to be the first Author in the World. He married Adah and Zillah. Adah was the Mother of Jabal and Jubal; and Zillah of Tubalcain and Naamah his Sister. One Day Lamech said to his Wives, " Hear me, ye Wives of Lamech; I " have slain a Man to my wounding, and a " young Man to my Hurt. If Cain shall be " avenged sevenfold, truly Lamech seventy " and seven Fold." These Words are an unintelligible Riddle. The Reader may consult the Commentators. There is a Tradition among the Hebrews, that Lamech growing blind, killed Cain a hunting, ignorantly, and believing that he killed some Beast; and that afterwards he slew his own Son Tubal-Cain, who had been the Cause of this Murder, because he had directed him to shoot at a certain Place in the Thickets where he had seen something stir. Several other Suppositions are produced in Order to explain this Passage concerning Lamech, and all almost equally uncertain and absurd. We have related them for the most Part in our Comment. See likewise Pererius upon Genesis ch. iv. and M. Bayle in the Article Lamech. Josephus says, that Lamech had seventy seven Sons by his two Wives; but the Scripture mentions only three Sons and one Daughter. We have said something concerning each of them under their particular Articles. The Author of a Book intitled, Polygamia Triumphatrix, makes Lamech his Hero, and asserts, that Scripture mentions his Polygamy, in Order to commend it.

Lamentations

LAMENTATIONS. A mournful Poem is so called, composed by Jeremiah, upon the Occasion of the pious King Josiah's Death; it was a long Time in the Mouths of the Singing Men and Singing Women of Israel. [2 Chr. xxxv. 25.] This famous Poem is believed to be lost, but we have another of the same Prophet remaining, composed upon the Destruction of Jerusalem by Nebuchadnezzar. The Proofs of this are to be seen in every Chapter of the Lamentations. The Preface, which is very ancient, expresly shews it; Jeremiah speaks throughout of Jerusalem and the Temple, as Things destroyed, laid waste, and prophaned; the Author of Ecclesiasticus says, that after the taking of Jerusalem, the Enemies made the Ways which lead to it quite desolate, alluding to this Passage in the Lamentations, The Ways of Zion do mourn, because none come to the solemn Feasts.

In the two first Chapters of the Lamentations, Jeremiah is principally taken up in describing the Calamities of the Siege of Jerusalem. In the third he deplores the Persecutions which he himself had suffered. The fourth turns upon the Ruin and Desolation of the City and Temple, and upon the Misfortune of Zedekiah. See how he speaks of this [Lament. iv. 20.] unhappy Prince. The anointed of the Lord whom we love as our Life, who was as dear to us as our selves, was taken for our Iniquities: This Prince, so good, to whom we said, We live under thy Shadow among the Heathen. The fifth Chapter is a kind of Form of Prayer for the Jews in their Dispersion and Captivity. At the End of all he speaks of the Cruelty of the Edomites, who had insulted Jerusalem in her Misery, and contributed to the Demolition of it; he threatens them with the Wrath of God. This last Chapter was written probably after the rest, for it supposes the Temple to be so destroyed as to serve for a Retreat to Foxes, and that the People were already in Captivity.

The four first Chapters of the Lamentations are in acrostick Verse, and Abecedary, every Verse or Couplet beginning with one of the Letters of the Hebrew Alphabet, ranged in alphabetical Order. The first and second Chapters contain two and twenty Verses, according to the Number of Letters in the Alphabet. The third Chapter has three Verses together, which begin with the same Letter; and includes in all sixty six Verses. The fourth Chapter is like the two first, and has only two and twenty Verses; the fifth is not an Acrostick.

There is one Thing particular in the second, third, and fourth Chapters, viz. that the Letter Pe is before Ain; whereas in the first Chapter, and in all the Acrostick and Abecedary Psalms, Ain always goes before Pe. The Reason of this disorderly placing of them is not known to us; the Copists have attempted to repair this supposed Defect, but the Sequel of the Discourse requires, that Things should be left as they are.

The Hebrews call the Book of Lamentations Echa, from the first Word in the Text; or Kinnoth, that is to say, Lamentations[1]. The Greeks call them Threnoi, which signifies the same Thing in their Language. The Style of Jeremiah's Lamentations is lively, tender, pathetick and affecting. It was the particular Talent of this Prophet to write melancholy and moving Things. There never was a Subject more worthy of Tears, nor written with more tender and affecting Sentiments. The Hebrews were used to make Lamentations or mournful Songs upon the Death of great Men, Princes, and Heroes, who had distinguished themselves in Arms, and upon any Occasion of publick Miseries and Calamities. They had Collections of these Sorts of Lamentations, as appears from the Chronicles, 2

Chr. xxxv. 25. Behold they are written in the Lamentations. We have those still which were composed by David upon the Death of Absolom and Jonathan. The Prophets Isaiah, Jeremiah, and Ezekiel, after having foretold the Desolation of Egypt, Tyre, Sidon, and Babylon, made Lamentations on the Fall of these Cities or States. It seems by Jeremiah, that they had Women hired on Purpose to weep. [Is. xiv. 4, 5. and xv. xvi. Jer. vii. 29. ix. 10. xlviii. 32. Ezek. xix. 1. xxviii. 11. xxxii. 2. Jerem. ix. 17.] Call for the mourning Women, that they may come, and send for cunning Women that they may come: And let them make haste and take up a wailing for us, &c.

Lamiæ

LAMIÆ. The Ancients gave the Name of Lamiæ, Lemures, Larvæ, and Empusæ to certain Women, or rather certain Devils, who in the Shape of Women drew young Children after them with their Caresses, and afterwards devoured them. These She-Devils never, in all Probability, had any Existence, but in the Imagination of Nurses, and silly Women; no more than those Witches who are said to have their sabbatical Meetings in the Night, and to be transported through the Air. St. Jerom notwithstanding makes no Scruple of using this Word in two Places of the Vulgate. In the Lamentations of Jeremiah it is said, Sed & Lamiæ nudaverunt mammam, lactaverunt catulos suos: Filia populi mei crudelis, quasi struthio in deserto. The Hebrew Word Thannim signifies a large Fish, a Sea Dragon; and it is very credible, that St. Jerom in this Place by Lamiæ meant Sea-Dogs, or Whales which produce their Young alive, and nourish them with their Milk. This makes good Jeremiah's Comparison with the Daughter of his People.

The Lamia is a Sea-Monster so exorbitantly large, that some have been seen which weighed thirty thousand Pounds, and such as two Horses in a Waggon could scarce draw. Some of them were taken at Nice and Marseilles, and in their Stomachs were found Men intire, and compleatly armed. Rondelet says, that he saw one in Xaintonge, the Mouth whereof was so large, that a large fat Man entered it with great Ease: He adds, that if it were held open with a Gag, the Dogs could get in very easily, in Order to eat what they could find in its Stomach. Gamer confirms this Account, and describes the Creature after the same Manner. It is the greediest Fish that is, and digests in the least Time. Its Teeth are large, sharp and biting, of a triangular Figure, cut like a Saw, disposed in six Rows, the first whereof [Chald alii quidam.] appears out of its Mouth, those of the second are strait, and the third are turned inwards.

The other Passage wherein there is Mention of the Lamia, is in Isaiah[1]. This Prophet, according to the Vulgate, says, that the Land of Edom, or of the Idumeans, shall be reduced to a Desart; Ibi cubavit Lamia & invenit sibi requiem: The Hebrew Word is Lilith, which signifies, as some say, an Owl, or some other Bird of Night. The Rabbins[2] tell us, Lilith was Adam's first Wife, who quarrelling with her Husband, pronounced the Name of Jehovah, which it is not lawful to utter, and immediately was carried away into the Air. Adam complained to God of his Wife's Elopement, and God sent three Angels after her, with Orders for her to return; and upon her Refusal, to threaten her that a Hundred of her Children should dye every Day. Lilith obstinately refused to return to her Husband, and chose rather to consent to the Death of her Children, than to be reconciled with him. The three Angels hereupon attempting to use Compulsion, she desired them to leave her in the Air, and promised them, that she would do no Harm to the Children who should wear the Names of these three Angels inscribed on any Thing about them: Hence it is that the Jews, to defend their Children from the Violence of this ill Woman have a Custom of writing their Names upon a Piece of Parchment, which they hang about their Childrens Necks. The Names are Lexoï, Sanfenoï, Sammangeloph. See hereafter LILITH.

[לחם Lakan, vorare, ex Arab.] The Fable says, that Lamia was a very beautiful Woman, who having had Children by Jupiter, Juno was so enraged at it, that she took Care to make all her Deliveries fatal, so that she brought dead Children always into the World. Lamia was so afflicted at this, that she grew very ugly, and out of Envy devoured the Children of other People. The Name Lamia, in all Probability, is derived from the Hebrew Lakem, which signifies to devour. It has still this Signification in Arabick.

The Arabians tell a thousand Stories of Lamia's Fairies, or Medusa's, whom they believed to be some of those Dæmons or evil Genius's, to whom God gave the Government of the World before he trusted Eblis with it, who afterwards rebelled against God, and was thrown headlong into Hell. They believe that the ancient Genii, or Dives, or Ginns, were Male and Female; the Dives were the Males, the Peri's the Females. [D. Herbelot. Bibl. orient. p. 701, 702.] The Peri's are of an extraordinary Beauty, and do no Harm; on the contrary, the Dives are ugly and mischievous, and are generally at War with the Peri's. These last feed upon the most excellent Odours, their Countrey is called Ginnistan, as much as to say Rainy-Land, the Countrey of the Genii, Fairies or Lamiæ. They say that Solomon having had the Advantage of overcoming one of these Lamiæ, employed her in Abundance of wonderful and extraordinary Things.

Lamnatzeach

LAMNATZEACH. This is an Hebrew Word[1], which we read in the Beginning of many Psalms. In the Septuagint and Vulgate it is translated, In finem, for the End, or for Eternity. Many understand this Word as relating to the coming of Jesus Christ, who appeared in the World at the End of the Times and Ages, preordained for this Purpose. Others interpret it of the calling of the Gentiles and Reprobation of the Jews: Others again of Eternity or the last Judgment; but these Explanations are rather moral and mystical than literal. There are some who construe, In finem, by always. A Psalm which deserves to be eternally in the Mouths and Memories of the faithful.

The Greek Interpreters Aquila, Symmachus and Theodotion, render the Hebrew, Lamnatzeach, victorious, or who giveth Victory, or a Song upon some Victory. But if we examine the Text of the Psalm to which this Title is prefixed, we generally find nothing at all relating to Victory. Wherefore this Translation cannot be maintained as literal. They who suppose these Titles to relate to the Victories of Jesus Christ, and so explain them, open indeed a larger Field for themselves, since our Saviour overcame the World, Death, and the Devil by his Sufferings, Humiliations, and Death, as well as by his Resurrection, Ascension, and glorious Mysteries; but we look for a grammatical and literal Explanation.

The Generality of modern Interpreters maintain with the Rabbins, that the Hebrew, Lamnatzeach, signifies to the Master of the Musick, or to him who presides over the Class of Singers, or Musicians, who sung in the Temple. It is certain, that the Verb Natzach, whence Lamnatzeach is derived, signifies to have the Direction of Workmen[2], to preside over Singers or Musicians. There is no Passage wherein the Word Lamnatzeach is to be met with, which might not easily be explained in this Sense. This therefore is, in all Probability, its true Signification.

There was a great Number of Levites in the Temple, who were employed in singing the Praises of God. Every Company of Singers or Musicians had its particular President or Master. We see a long Enumeration of them in the Chronicles, which concludes [1 Chro. vi. 31.] with these Words: These are they whom David set over the Service of the Song in the House of the Lord. The principal of these Masters were Asaph, Heman, Ethan, and Jeduthan. The Companies of Singers were distinguished not only by their Families, and the Rank they held in the Temple, but likewise by the musical Instruments they used. Every one of these Companies had their particular President or Natzeach. Chenaniah, for Example, was celebrated for the Strength and Sweetness of his Voice; his Care was to preserve the Harmony of their Musick, or to tune and guide the Quire of Singers: And [1 Chro. xv. 22.] Chenaniah chief of the Levites was for Song: He instructed about the Song, because he was skilful. When the Ark was removed to Jerusalem, Nenaiah presided over the Band of young Women who sung in this Ceremony. [1 Chro. xv. 18. 20. Pf. xi.] In the Titles of the Psalms we see some for Example, which are addressed to the President of the Eighth, or of the third Band. Others were set over those who played upon Neginah, that is to say, upon a musical Instrument which was played on with the Fingers.

There were some of these Menatzeachs, or Presidents in the Courts of Princes, directing the Companies of Musicians of both Sexes which were employed there, as well as elsewhere in the religious Ceremonies. Upon Festivals and Rejoycings, and solemn mournful Occasions, there were People who sung and played upon Instruments, and all this was performed with Method. Among the Women who were hired to mourn, as well as those of the same Sex who were Musicians, there was a female President, who directed the Company, and tuned their Lamentations. As soon as David had composed any Pieces of sacred Poetry, he gave them generally to Asaph, to have them set and sung in the Temple. This we are to understand from Scripture, when it says that Asaph prophesied according to the [1 Chr. xxv. 2.] Order of the King; and we find several Psalms entitled to Asaph President of the Musick. David himself did not think it below him sometimes to preside over the Quires of Musicians, and direct a Band of Singers, this is what we may infer from the Psalms with Titles such as these: To David the Servant of God, President of the Musick. Pf. xi. and xxxvi. or to David Head of the Musick.

Lamps

LAMPS. There is frequent Mention made in Scripture of Lamps, and it may be worth observing what the Form of them was anciently. The Ancients did not commonly make Use of Wax or Tallow, but rather burnt Oil in their Lamps. The Lamp or Candlestick with seven Branches which Moses placed in the Holy, and those which Solomon placed afterwards in the Temple of Jerusalem, were Chrystal Glasses filled with Oil, and fixed upon the Branches of the Candlestick. The Lamps or Candlesticks made Use of in Houses were commonly put upon a pretty high Stand on the Ground. The Lamps of Gideon's Soldiers, and those of the foolish and wise Virgins mentioned in the [Matt. xxv. 1, 2, &c.] Gospel were of another Sort. They were a Sort of Torches made of Iron or Potters Earth, wrapped about with old Linnen, which was moistened from Time to Time with Oil. M. Bernier says, that in the Indies [M. de] they still make Use of Lamps of this Kind. They are nothing, says he, but a Piece of Iron let into Sticks, the Ends whereof are wound about with old Rags, which from Time to Time are moistened with Oil. He that carries the Light moistens it out of a Vessel made of Brass or Tin, with a long Neck, which he carries continually in his Hand. Gallonius says, that there are some of the ancient Lamps still to be found in the Ruines of [Martyr.] Rome, whereof I shall here give you a Description. They were Vessels made of Iron or Potter's Earth, large, and with Holes on the Top about four Inches wide, or something more, ending in a Point below, and grafted into a Piece of Wood, which served for an Handle. In these Vessels they put Oil, or some other combustible Matter, to keep up the Fire or Light. In Homer they light up a Fire with a Sort of oily, sweet smelling Wood upon high Candlesticks, placed in the Middle of the Chamber. Notwithstanding what we have been saying, we must acknowledge [Odyss. Σ. v. 106.] likewise, that anciently they made Use of Wax-Candles, Flamboys, and Lights done over with Wax, and other combustible Materials, and even of oily, gummy Woods in particular Ceremonies: For Example, when Jason, High-Priest of the Jews, received King Antiochus at Jerusalem by Torch Light, with great Acclamations. Cum facularum luminibus, & laudibus.

Besides the common Signification of this Word, it signifies likewise in the figurative Sense of it, the Hope, Heir, Resource, and Guide of the People. After the Danger which David had been exposed to, in the Attack made upon him by the Giant Ishbibenob, the Israelites said to him; Thou shalt go no more out to War with us, least thou extinguish the Lamp of Israel. God would not suffer all the Tribes to shake off the Yoke of Rehoboam, that David might have a Lamp always before the Lord in Jerusalem; that there might be always a Prince of his Family. See the same Expression, 1 Kings xv. 4. and 2 Kings viii. 19. and 2 Chr. xxi. 17.

H Quoties lucerna impiorum extinguetur. And Prov. xxiv. 20. and Psalm cxxxi. 17. Paravi lucernam Christo meo, are to be understood in the same Sense.

The Lord is called the Lamp of his Servants, their Hope, their Succour: Lucerna [2 Sam. xxii. 29. Job. xxix. 3.] mea Dominus. And Psalm xvii, 29. Tu illuminas lucernam meam Domine. And Job speaking of his first Prosperity; Oh that I may again see those Days of old, wherein his Lamp shined upon my Head, and by his [Prov. xiii. 9.] Light I walked through Darkness? And Solomon; The Light of the righteous rejoyceth; but the Lamp of the Wicked shall be [Prov. xx. 20.] put out. And in another Passage; Whoso curseth his Father or his Mother, his Lamp shall be put in obscure Darkness: Which may be understood as meaning either the Death of such Sons, or the abandoned State which they will be left in.

Lamps sometimes signify Lightning, and Fire from Heaven. Populus ridebat voces [Exod. xx. 18. Judith iii. 10.] & lampades: The Thunder and Lightning.

The People received Holofernes cum coronis & lampadibus, in Order to do him Honour. They observed the same Custom in their Compliments to new married People, as [Matt. xxv. 1, &c. Ps. cxviii. 105.] appears by the Parable of the ten Virgins.

The Commandments of God are, as it were, a Lamp to guide the righteous: Lucerna pedibus meis verbum tuum. And in Proverbs vi. 23. Mandatum lucerna est. See Light. St. John Baptist is called a burning and a shining Light, John v. 35. And in the Revelations our Saviour is the Lamp of the new Jerusalem. Rev. xxi. 2.

Land

LAND. The Land denotes often the Countrey of the Israelites, or in General, the Countrey or Canton which is spoken of; the Land of Canaan, the Land of Egypt, the Land of Ashur, the Land of Moab. Behold my Land is before thee, Gen. xx. 15. It is in your Power to settle your self, and go where you think proper. The Hebrews who were sent to view the promised Land reported, that it was a Land which devoured its Inhabitants, Numb. xiii. 33. it was filled with warlike People, was encompassed with Enemies, exposed to continual Dangers.

The Land of the Living, signifies the Habitation of the Blessed in the other Life, or even Palestine, in Opposition to the Land of Captivity, where the Jews looked upon themselves to be, as it were, in the Grave. See Psalm xxvi. 13. li. 7. lv. 23. cxli. 6. Isai. xxxviii. 11. liii. 8. &c.

The Land of Forgetfulness, of Obscurity, signifies the Grave. Psalm. lxxxvii. 13. Job. x. 21, 22. Psalm lxii. 10, &c.

Language

LANGUAGE. There are several Questions proposed relating to this Subject, as 1. Whether God is the Author of the first Language, whether Adam received it from him by Infusion, or formed and invented it himself by his own Industry and Labour. 2. Whether this Language is still in Being. 3. Which is it. It is Matter of Dispute with some, whether Mankind have a natural Language, as Birds are said to have a natural Way of singing, and Animals of crying: Dogs bark, Horses neigh, Wolves howl, and Asses naturally bray: Thus in Proportion Ravens croak, Pigeons coo, and other Birds do something much after the same Manner: Some cry, others chirp, every one according to their Nature and Species. Thus likewise should Men have some certain natural Language, which is the Tongue that all should speak, and probably did speak before the Deluge. And as they groan when they are sorrowful, and make a chearful Noise when they are glad, they threaten and cry very loud when they are angry: And all this they do naturally and uniformly: wherefore it is presumed by some, that they would all speak the same Language, that primitive one, which was Adam's, if Education did not change our natural Notions, and the Habits which we are made to contract when we are young, did not stifle the Voice of Nature in us.

The Ancients, who were unacquainted with the true History of the World's Creation, were of Opinion, that under the happy Reign of Saturn, not only all Men, but even all terrestrial Animals, Birds, and even Fishes, spoke the same Language[1]: That Mankind not sufficiently sensible of their Happiness, sent a Deputation to Saturn, desiring Immortality of him, and telling him, that it was not just that they should be without a Prerogative granted by him to Serpents, which are every Year refreshed by shedding their old Skin, and assuming a new one. Saturn in great Rage not only refused to comply with their Request, but punished their Ingratitude, by depriving them of that Unity of Language, which kept them linked so close together. He confounded their Languages, and thereby put them under a Necessity of separating from one another.

Others[2] have believed, that Chance or Nature produced Men and Animals of different Species in different Places, that it gave them certain Sounds and Accents to express their Passions, their Joy, Grief, Astonishment, and Desire: That afterwards Usefulness or Necessity put them upon inventing certain Words and Expressions to signify Things that were without them, and whereof they stood in Need; but that it was folly to imagine any one had named Things, and taught Men to speak. [Lucret. l. v. ver. 10. 40.] Putare aliquem tunc nomina distribuisse Rebus, & inde homines didicisse vocabula prima Despipere est.

Nature produced Sounds, and Necessity taught Men to invent Language.

Ac varios linguæ sonitus natura subegit

Mittere, & utilitas expressit nomina rerum.

[Vitruv. l. ii, de Architectura. c. 1.] Vitruvius says, that the first Men continued for a long Time like Beasts in Caves under Ground, without having any Use of Speech; the only Way they had of making themselves understood by one another, was by repeated Postures, and ill-articulate Voices; that by signifying the same Thing by the same Sounds, they accustomed themselves to speak, and struck out a regular Language.

[Herodot. l. ii. c. 2.] Psammetichus King of Egypt, being persuaded that the Earth had produced Men in different Places, and at different Times, was curious to know who were the first created. He imagined one sure Means of discovering this, might be to have a Sight of those who spoke the most antient Language in the World; and to this End he took two new born Infants, and had them brought up separately, so that no one might speak to them: He believed that the Language which these Children should speak, being the natural and primitive Language of Men, he might from thence infer, that the People who still speak it, might well pass for the oldest that the Earth had produced. When therefore the Children were of Age to talk, the Shepherd who had the Care of them observed, that as often as he saw them, they cried out to him Beccos. He gave the King Notice of it, who experienced the same Thing. All the Question that remained was, to know in what Language Beccos was a significant Term, and it was found, that among the Phrygians it meant Bread: Whereupon it was concluded, that the Phrygians were the most ancient People in the World.

This Way of Reasoning was on many Accounts erroneous: For was it certain that the Phrygians, supposing them to have been the most ancient People in the World, had preserved their primitive Language in its Purity? Again, had they consulted generally all People in the World, to know whether there were none besides the Phrygians with whom Beccos signified any Thing? Lastly, might not Chance have produced Beccos, as it does Abundance of other Words in all Languages? It is very credible that these two Children having been bred up by a Shepherd, and among Sheep, might imitate the Voice of these Animals, and might learn from their Bleatings to say Bêc, for os, which is at the End of the Word, is a Greek Termination, in which Language Herodotus has told this Story.

If there were any Language natural to Man, all Men would speak it, or at least they would have a great Propensity, and great Dispositions to speak it, many Footsteps of it would remain among the different People of the World. Children that were abandoned and exposed, or deaf, would speak this Language; all which is contrary to Experience. Let any one leave a Child without talking to it, and it will never speak any Language, either known or unknown. Melabdin Echebas King of Indostan, or Great Mogul[3], having appointed a certain Child to be brought up at a Distance from the Company of Men, the Child continued without ever speaking. There were two Boys of about nine Years old found in 1661, amidst a Troop of Bears in Poland, one of which was taken, and great Endeavours were used to teach him to speak; but this could never be accomplished: He should, however, have spoken the Language which was natural to Man, there having been no Defect, as the Physicians reported, in his Tongue.

We must conclude therefore, that there is no national Language peculiar to Man. He has indeed certain Sounds, Motions, and natural Signs to express his Passions, his Joy, Pleasure, Grief, and Desires; but he has no Speech or articulate Sound, whereby to signify his other Thoughts. The Induction which some pretend to draw from other Animals, who have, they say, a kind of Language among them, is many Ways false and defective. Animals have certain Cries and Sounds which are natural to them, whereby they declare their Joy, their Appetite, or Pain: In like Manner as Man gives Indications of his Joy by laughing, and of his Grief by sighing; but this is very different from Speech. It is said farther, that Birds have a sort of Language which is understood among them, and which particular Men have pretended likewise to understand. But let any one make the Experiment, let them take a young singing Bird that has not as yet learnt any Note from the old ones, and it will imitate any other Note or chirping that they would have it learn: It will imitate Birds, or even the Sound of Instruments that is heard by it: And if it were possible to breed it up in such a Manner, that it should hear nothing at all, it would produce only uncertain, undeterminate, and chance Sounds.

So that taking the Matter right, neither Men nor Animals have any natural Language; and for the System which supposes Men and Beasts to have been produced by Chance in different Places of the World, and to have formed each to themselves a particular Language after their own Fancy, as Necessity, Conveniency, or any other Cause required, it is not maintainable. Chance is not a Cause capable of producing a living organized Body, and much less a reasonable Animal; to put Matter in Motion there must be a moving Cause different from Matter; and to impress a regular Motion on Bodies, requires a reasonable and intelligent Cause; and although Man may invent Words, and form a certain Language wherein he may agree with those who are like him; yet it does not follow, that the first Men formed their Language after this Manner, nor that any Nation made one in particular for itself: There is sometimes a great Distance between Possibility and Fact.

Moses represents Adam and Eve to us, as the Father and Mother of all Mankind, and as the Stock from whence all Nations in the World spring. He describes them to us as reasonable and intelligent, speaking and imposing Names on Things as soon as they were created. This Legislator's System concerning the Creation of the World, is the only one to be maintained; there is a Necessity for supposing the Almighty Power of God to intervene, not only to derive Beings out of nothing, but likewise to give them Form, Life, and Reason; and if we admit God to be the Creator, there is no more Difficulty to be made in owning him as the Author of that Language wherewith he inspired the first Man. The Scripture does not tell us how it was done, but it relates that Adam conversed with his Wife, and named Things at a Time when he could not have had Leisure to have framed a Language.

But what was this first Language which God himself taught Adam? In discussing this Question several Difficulties arise. The Generality believe, that this primitive Language is the Hebrew; others hold for the Syriac, Chaldee, Æthiopian, or Armenian. There is scarce any Eastern Language which has not pretended to this Honour. Becanus[4] has maintained seriously, that it was the Flemish, and has derived some plausible Etymologies from it, of the Name Adam, Eve, Abel, Cain, Methuselah; Adam he derives from Haasdam, that is to say, who hateth the Heaps; Eve, from Euvat, Vessel of the Age; Abel, from Haas-Belg, who hateth War; Cain, from Quaat-Ende, bad End; Methuselah, from Machtusalig, save your selves, (Supply from the Deluge.) Other learned Men assert, that the first Language is entirely extinct, and is no more to be recovered in any of the Languages which are known to us.

Others believe that it still subsists in the Hebrew Tongue, and others derived from it, but so impaired and changged, that some Remains of it only are to be found there.

[D. Herbelot. Bibl. orient.] If we would refer our selves to the Sabians, the Dispute would be very soon decided; since they shew a Book which they ascribe to Adam; the Character of it is very singular, but the Language is almost entirely Chaldee. Upon this Footing the Language of this Book must carry it, and Chaldee be acknowledged to come nearest to the Language of Adam; but we know how far we may reckon upon the Pretensions of the Sabians, of whom we shall say something in another Article.

Origen[5], Saint Gregory of Nyssa[6], and Theodoret[7] believe, that God among the other Favours which he shewed the Israelites at their Departure out of Egypt, vouchsafed to them immediately the Knowledge of the Hebrew Tongue. To prove this Opinion they cite the Psalmist's Words, lxxxi. 5. When he came out of the Land of Egypt he heard a strange Language. But it is much more probable that this Passage signifies nothing else, but that the Israelites after their Departure out of Egypt, heard at Mount Sinai the Voice of the Lord, which till then had been never heard among them.

If the Hebrew Language is that which God taught Adam, we must conclude from this Passage, that the two Fathers above cited, and they from whom they received this Tradition, believed, that when the Israelites left Egypt, it was entirely forgotten, since it was necessary, that God should by a new Miracle recover it among his People. But it is to no Purpose to insist much on this Opinion, which in Reality deserves no Notice. There can be no Argument deduced from thence for the Antiquity, Preservation, or Loss of the primitive Language.

The Generality of Criticks have declared for the Hebrew Tongue, and given it the Preference before all others. The Conciseness, Simplicity, Energy, and Fertility of it, and the Relation it has to the most ancient oriental Languages, which seem to derive their Origine from it, the Etymology of the Names whereby the first of Mankind were called, which naturally occurs in this Language; the Names of Animals, which are all significant in the Hebrew Tongue, and describe the Nature and Property of these very Animals, Particulars which are not to be observed in any other Language, all these Characters meeting together, raise a Prejudice very much in Favour of its Primacy and Excellency; it has farther another Privilege, which is this, that the most ancient and venerable Books in the World are written in Hebrew.

Nevertheless several very able Criticks[8] are of Opinion, that the Hebrew Tongue, such as we see it at present in the Bible, and as it was in the Time of Moses, is not the primitive Language, pure, and incorrupted; they observe many Words in the Bible, the Originals whereof are not to be found in Hebrew. They are willing to allow, that there are more Footsteps of Adam's Language preserved in the Hebrew, than in any other Tongue; but this they say has undergone diverse Changes and Alterations; and in the Series of so many Ages from Adam down to Moses, many Roots of this Language were lost, and others of a foreign Extraction received. It must be confessed, that if the Hebrew Tongue were more known, and we were informed how copious and extensive it was in Moses's Time, we might be better able to pronounce decisively in this Matter.

Theodoret[9] and the Maronites maintain, that the Syriac or Chaldee, is the true Language of Adam. This Assertion they found upon the Roots and Etymologies of the Names Adam, Eve, Abel, &c. which are to be seen in the Syriac and Chaldee Tongues; and upon Abraham's speaking Chaldee, which was his natural Language, before he spoke Hebrew, this being the Language of the Land of Canaan. But to this it is replied, that as to Etymologies, the Hebrew Tongue has the same Advantage as the Chaldee, and is preferable to it with Respect to the Simplicity and Energy of it, and seems to be rather the Parent than the Child of the Chaldee: And lastly, there is so much Affinity between these two Languages, that it is very credible Abraham spoke both, and that Hebrew, as the most simple and ancient, was preferred by this Patriarch and his Descendants.

I shall not stay to confute the other Opinions which are offered with Relation to this Matter. The Eastern Languages are for the most Part derived from the Hebrew. Noah, in all Probability, spoke the same Language as Adam, and Noah's was preserved among his Descendants till the Confusion of Languages, [Gen. xi. 1, 2.] which happened at Babel. At that Time, says the Scripture, the whole Earth was of one Language, and of one Speech. Erat terra labii unius, & sermonum eorundem.

The Question is, in what Manner this Confusion happened. 1. Some believe that the Words which we have just now cited from Moses, may be understood as signifying only the Agreement and Union of Opinions, which prevailed among Men at that Time, who were resolved by their joint Labours and Endeavours to build a Tower; in Order to make their Names celebrated. Others think, that God by an Effect of his extraordinary Power wrought a sudden Change in their Memory and Imagination, by producing a Forgetfulness of their natural Language, and teaching them immediately a new one; or at least by putting them under a Necessity of learning another, while they were unable to make Use of that which was before current with them.

St. Gregory of Nyssa[10] is of Opinion, that by this Account from Moses, something very simple and natural was intended, which was no more than this; that while Men were dispersed in different Places of the Earth, it happened, as a natural Consequence of their Dispersion, that every one making some Alteration in the Language which he had learned from his Forefathers, in Process of Time it became so distinct, that they were no longer able to understand one another. This System was adopted by M. Simon[11], and M. le Clerc[12], with some little Variation; but the Generality of other Criticks have not approved it; because the whole Miracle which is described to us by Moses, in the History of the Confusion of Babel, is reduced by it to nothing. We need only read his Text to be satisfied, that he intended to describe a miraculous Event. And the Lord came down to see the Tower which the Children of Men builded; and he said, Behold the People is one, and they have all one Language; and this they begin to do: And now nothing will be restrained from them which they have imagined to do. Go to, let us go down, and there confound their Language, that they may not understand one another's Speech. So the Lord scattered them abroad from thence upon the Face of the Earth, and they left off to build the Tower.

[Deut. xxxii. 8.] Another Question is proposed relating to the Number of Languages which were formed at the Confusion of Babel. The Ancients[13], for the most Part, were of Opinion, that the Number of Languages which were then formed, was equal to the Number of those who undertook the Edifice of the Tower; as there were at that Time seventy Heads of Families, there were likewise seventy Languages. But where have they Intelligence of these seventy Heads of Families? In Deuteronomy, where it is said, that when the most High divided to the Nations their Inheritance, when he separated the Sons of Adam, he set the Bounds of the People according to the Number of the Children of Israel: Now the Children of Israel who went down into Egypt with Jacob were seventy [Deut. xlvi. 27.] in Number: Omnes animæ domus Jacob, quæ ingressæ sunt in Ægyptum fuere Septuaginta.

Others take this Number precisely of seventy Languages from the Enumeration which Moses makes of Noah's Descendants. [Gen. x.] Japheth had fourteen Sons, Ham had thirty, and Shem twenty six, in all seventy. Some reckon seventy two, because the Septuagint added two Persons to those enumerated by Moses; namely, Elisa to the Genealogy of Japheth, and Caïnan to that of Ham. Euphorus, who is cited in Clemens Alexandrinus, reckoned seventy five Languages, and Pacianus [Clem. Alex. l. i. Strom. Pacian. Ep. contra Novatianos.] Bishop of Barcelona an Hundred and twenty.

Without entring at present into an Enquiry concerning the Number of Languages, but examining only the Nature of the Proofs on which this Number of seventy is founded; we may say, that nothing herein is solid, besides the Passages of Deuteronomy and Genesis, taken in the Sense which we have shewn. The Septuagint instead of these Words; according to the Number of the Children of Israel, read according to the Number of the Children of God: From whence some have concluded, that they intended to describe seventy Nations under the Government of so many tutelar Angels. The Names Caïnan and Elisa, added by the Septuagint to the Text of Moses, no Way concern those who adhere to the Hebrew; they reject the Number of seventy two Languages, and are content with seventy. They who believe that Arphaxad, Salah, and Eber were not concerned about the Tower of Babel, nor in the Punishment of that Division which was the Consequence of it, lessen the Number seventy by three; Joktan the Son of Eber, and his Sons, to the Number of thirteen, in all Probability were not born at the Time of this Tower of Babel, and consequently here is again a new Diminution.

Some reckon but twenty Sorts of Languages in Scripture, which too were more perhaps than were formed at the Confusion of Babel. Others will have it, that at first there were but three Languages, one for each great Family of Shem, Ham and Japheth. The Number of seventy Languages appears too large, and was not at all necessary for God's Design; three would not have been sufficient to oblige Men to a Separation, but ten or twelve Languages were more than were requisite for such a Purpose.

The Chinese Language we know has no Analogy with any others. The Teutonick or German, from which all those spoken in the North are derived; Biscayan, or the Language of lower Britany, are likewise Mother Tongues, which were spoken formerly in Gaul and Great Britain; as is also the Sclavonian Language, which is used in Illyria and other Countries. But of these last Languages we have no Mention in the Scripture.

[Acts xi. 4, 5, &c. Acts xiv. 11.] Saint Luke in the Acts of the Apostles relates, that the Holy Ghost having descended on the Apostles upon the Day of Pentecost, in the Form of fiery Tongues, they began to speak all Sorts of Languages; so that Strangers, who came to Jerusalem from all Parts of the World, were amazed when they heard them speaking every one in his own Language. They said hereupon among themselves, Are not all these which speak Galileans? And how hear we every Man in our own Tongue, wherein we were born? Parthians and Medes and Elamites, and the Dwellers in Mesopotamia, in Judæa and Cappadocia, in Pontus and Asia, in Phrygia and Pamphylia, in Egypt, and in the Parts of Lybia, about Cyrene, Strangers of Rome, Jews and Proselytes, Cretes and Arabians. Saint Luke speaks also of the Lycaonian Language, The People lift up their Voices, saying in the Speech of Lycaonia, the Gods are come down to us in the Likeness of Men. But these Languages, for the most Part, are either modern, or are but Dialects of the original and Mother Tongues.

[Dan. iii. 4, 7, &c.] In Daniel, the People who were under the Dominion of Nebuchadnezzar were distinguished by Languages, Tribes and Nations; Vobis dicitur, Populis, Tribubus & linguis. [Rev. 5, 9, &c. alibi, &c. Gen. x. 5, 20, 31.] In the Revelations in like Manner the Kingdom of the Messiah is distributed by People, Nations, Tribes and Languages, Thou hast redeemed us out of every Kindred, and Tongue, and People and Nation. Moses relating the Distribution of the several Countries of the World among the Sons of Ham, Shem, and Japheth, says, that they were divided in their Lands every one after his Tongue, after their Families, and after their Nations.

Laodicea

[Col. ii. 1. Coloss. iv. 16. καὶ τὴν ἐκ Λαοδικείας ἵνα καὶ ὑμεῖς ἀναγνῶτε.] LAODICEA. There are several Cities of this Name, but the Scripture speaks only of that in Phrygia, upon the River Lycus, near Colossæ. Its ancient Name was Diospolis. It was afterwards called Rhoas. Lastly, Antiochus the Son of Stratonice rebuilt it, and called it Laodicea, from the Name of his Wife Laodice. Saint Paul never was in this City, and the faithful of Laodicea had never seen his Face in the Flesh. Notwithstanding upon Information from Epaphras their Apostle, that false Teachers had propagated some pernicious Doctrines in Laodicea and Colossæ: He wrote to the Colossians, with Order to arm them against the Influence of these Seducers, and desires them, when they had read his Letter, to send it to the Laodiceans; and writes in the like Manner that the Laodiceans would send their Letter to the Colossians. And when this Epistle is read amongst you, cause it to be read also in the Church of the Laodiceans, and that ye likewise read the Epistle from Laodicea.

Saint

Saint Paul's Expression to the Colossians, And ye likewise read the Epistle from Laodicea, is ambiguous. It may either signify the Letter, which Saint Paul wrote to those of Laodicea, or that which the Laodiceans wrote to Saint Paul. Hereupon Interpreters have been divided; some[1] taking it in the former, others in the latter Sense. We have still at this Day a Letter under the Name of St. Paul to the Laodiceans. Theodoret[2] and Saint Jerom[3] had seen one with this Title. The Fathers of the seventh Council say[4], that their Predecessors had likewise a Knowledge of one. But both rejected it as false and spurious; and all Men of Learning are at present convinced of that's being a Counterfeit, which is cited under St. Paul's Name, and is inserted in some antient Bibles printed in Germany and Antwerp. We find it likewise in some old Manuscripts. There is Reason also to question whether that which the Ancients speak of be the same with this, since we have it not in Greek; that published by Hutter in this Language having been translated by him from a Latin Copy. Besides, Philaster says, that the Hereticks have added something to the Epistle to the Laodiceans; and Timotheus Priest of Constantinople[5] tells us, that it was forged by the Manichees, now there are no Footsteps of Manechism, nor of any other Heresy visible in that which we have in our Hands, whereof you have here a Copy.

Paulus Apostolus non ab hominibus, neque per hominem, sed per Jesum Christum, Fratribus qui sunt Laodicex, gratia vobis & pax a Deo Patre nostro, & Domino Jesu Christo. Gratias ago Christo per omnem orationem meam, quod permanentes estis, & perseverantes in operibus bonis, promissionem expectantes in die Judicii. Neque disturbent vos quorundam vaniloquia insimulantium veritatem, ut vos avertant a veritate Evangelii quod a me præ-dicatur. Et nunc faciet Deus ut qui sunt ex me ad perfectum veritati Evangelii sint deservientes, & benignitatem operum facientes, quæ sunt salutis vitæ æternæ. Et nunc palam sunt vincula mea, quæ patior in Christo, in quibus lætor & gaudeo. Et hoc mihi est ad salutem perpetuam quod factum est orationibus vestris, & administrante spiritu sancto, sive per vitam, sive per mortem. Est enim mihi vivere vita in Christo, & mori gaudium. Et ipse in vobis faciet misericordiam suam, & eandem dilectionem habeatis, & sitis unanimes.

Ergo, dilectissimi, ut audistis præsentiam Domini ita sentite, & facite in timore, & erit vobis vita in æternum. Est enim Deus qui operatur in vobis; & facite sine peccato quæcunque facitis, & quod est optimum. Dilectissimi, gaudete in Domino Jesu Christo, & cavete omnes sordes in omni lucro. Omnes petitiones vestræ sint palam apud Deum: Estote firmi in sensu Christi, & quæ integra, vera, & pudica, & casta, & justa, & amabilia sunt, facite; & quæ audistis & accepistis in corde retinete, & erit vobis pax. Salutant vos omnes sancti. Gratia Domini nostri Jesu Christi, cum spiritu vestro. Amen. Et hanc facite legi Colossensibus, & eam, quæ est Colossensium, vobis.

You have here the same Epistle in English. Paul an Apostle not of Men, nor by Man, but by Jesus Christ, to the Brethren who are in Laodicea, Grace and Peace to you from God our Father, and from our Lord Jesus Christ. I thank God in all my Prayers, that you are firm and persevering in good Works, waiting for the Promise of God at the Day of Judgment. Suffer not your selves to be moved by the vain Talk of those who accuse the Truth, that so they may persuade you to forsake the Gospel which I have preached. I trust that God will so order Things, that my Disciples may continue fixed to the Perfection of the Truth of the Gospel, and in the Practice of good Works, whereby they will deserve eternal Life. The Bonds which I bear for Jesus Christ are known of all the World, I rejoyce at them, and take Pleasure in them; and this will be of Use to me in procuring eternal Salvation, by the Help of your Prayers, and the Assistance of the holy Spirit, whether in Life or Death; for to me to live in Christ is Life, and to die is Joy. He will grant you through his Mercy to be always united with the most perfect Love. Wherefore, dearly beloved Brethren, as ye have learned that the Lord must come, continue in the same Sentiments, and guide your selves in his Fear, and ye shall have eternal Life, for it is God that worketh in you. Do therefore every Thing that you do without Sin, and practise continually that which is most perfect. My dearest Brethren, rejoice in our Lord Jesus Christ, and shun all sordid Gain. Direct all your Petitions to God; remain firm in the Opinion that ye have of Jesus Christ, and practice always that which is most perfect, true, pure, just, and lovely. Retain in your Hearts what ye have learned, and ye shall have Peace. All the Saints salute you. The Grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with your Spirit, Amen. Cause this to be read to the Colossians, and read that which is directed to the Colossians.

But if this Epistle is spurious, as it is agreed it is, what must that be of the Laodiceans, which St. Paul requires the Colossians to read in their Assembly? Marcion[6] pretended that this was the Epistle to the Ephesians; and Grotius is of the same Opinion, as are likewise M. le Clerc and Hammond. They say St. Paul having written an Epistle to the Ephesians and Laodiceans, conceived in the same Terms, he desired that these two should be looked upon as circular Letters throughout all Asia Minor, and should be sent from one Church to another. Now as Laodicea was nearer to Colossæ than Ephesus, Saint Paul chose rather, that the Colossians should address themselves to the Laodiceans, than Ephesians, in Order to have a Communication of this Letter.

Others in great Number[7], both among the Ancients and Moderns, tell us, that this was an Epistle, which they of Laodicea had written to Saint Paul, and which this Apostle was desirous that the Colossians should read for their Edification and Instruction. There is some Probability in this Hypothesis; but we cannot deliver it as a true one. Saint Paul, one would think, should rather have sent from Rome the Letter which he received from the Laodiceans, if he had a Mind, that it should be read to the Colossians, than refer the Colossians to those of Laodicea for a Copy of it, while it was uncertain whether these had preserved one or not.

Others[8] affirm, that Saint Paul wrote a Letter to the Laodiceans at the same Time as he sent one to the Colossians, which Letter is not come to our Hands. But there is an indisputable Proof, that Saint Paul did not then write to those of Laodicea; for in his Epistle to the Colossians he desires them to salute the Brethren of Laodicea in his Name[9]. We had better therefore suppose, that Saint Paul's Design was to speak here of the Letter he received from those of Laodicea, which is lost. It is true this Fact is not certain; but it is the most plausible Supposition of all that are proposed, in Order to explain the Passage here in Question.

LAPIDOTH, the Prophetess Deborah's Husband, Judg. iv. 4. Some are of Opinion, that Lapidoth was the Place of this Prophetess's Birth or Habitation. Others considering the Signification of Lapidoth, which signifies Lamps, have imagined, that Deborah employed her self in making Matches for the Candlestick in the Tabernacle.

Lapwing

[Lev. xi. 19.] LAPWING, in Latin, Upupa, a Bird by Moses declared to be unclean. A Lapwing is about as large as a Thrush; its Beak is long, black, thin, and a little hooked; its Legs are grey and short. Upon its Head it has a Tuft of Feathers of different Colours, which it raises or lowers as it pleases. Its Neck and Stomach are something reddish. Its Wings and Tail black with white Streaks. The Hebrew Name of this Bird is Dukipha. The Septuagint and Saint Jerom translate it Lapwing.

It is very beautiful, but does not sing, it only makes a hoarse Noice, which is heard at some Distance. Its Wings do not terminate in a Point like those of other Birds, but in a Round, which makes it very slow in its Flight. Pliny calls the Lapwing Trimestris, because it is to be seen only three Months. It retires, in all Probability, betimes into warmer Countries. It rarely pearches, and lives generally in old Ruines, or along the high Ways. It is said to feed upon Worms and human Excrements, and to make its Nest of them. Aristotle affirms, that it does not build any Nest, but only retires into the hollow Parts of Trees, and that it lays its Eggs there without any other Preparation. It generally lays three Eggs, which are like a Partridge's. Albertus Magnus relates, that Lapwings when they grow old live with their Young, which feed them during the moulting Season, when they have cast their Feathers; and that when they have lost their Sight, they recover it for them, by the Help of an Herb which is naturally known to them, and with which they touch the Eyes of their old ones. The The Male has a fuller and higher Tuft than the Female, and the Colours of its Feathers is brighter and more lively. There is no such Thing as a Lapwing to be seen in any Part of England, but there are abundance of them in Germany.

Lasha

LASHA. Moses describing the Limits of the Land of Canaan says, that it reaches Southward as far as Lasha. The Chaldee and Saint Jerom think Lasha to be the same as Callirhoe, which lies Northward of the Dead Sea, and discharges itself into it. But it is much more natural to understand it of the City of Lasha, Lusa, or Elusa, which was at pretty near an equal Distance between the Dead Sea, and the Red Sea. Ptolemy mentions this City of Lusa, and so do Josephus, [Joseph. Antiq. l. xiv. c. 2.] and Stephens the Geographer.

Latria

LATRIA, a Term peculiar to Theology and the Language of the Church, denoting that supreme Worship which is due to God [Aug. de Civit. l. x. c. 1. iv. 2] only . Saint Austin, Latreia secundum consuetudinem qua locuti sunt, qui nobis divina eloquia condiderunt, aut semper, aut tam frequenter, ut penè semper, ea dicitur servitus, quæ pertinet ad colendum Deum. But in the Greek Text of Scripture, Latreia is likewise made Use of to signify the external Service of the Priests in the Temple, the Ceremonies, Worship, and the whole Religion of the Jews. For Example, speaking of the Paschal Ceremonies : Keep this Service (Latreian) and when your Children shall say unto you, what mean you by this Service (Latreia.) It answers to the Hebrew Abodah[1], which St. Jerom translates Cæremonia, cultus, religio, mos, servitus. The Author of the first Book of Maccabees[2] speaking of the Idolatry which Antiochus Epiphanes resolved to introduce in Israel, says, that many consented to this Worship, Latria, to this false Religion; and that Mattathias said to his Sons[3], God forbid that we should forsake our Religion, which is a right Way, to follow any other Way. In the New Testament[4] Jesus Christ tells his Disciples, that they who persecute them, shall think that they do God Service, Latreian.

Lavers

LAVERS, of Solomon's Temple. These were Vessels born by four Cherubims, standing upon Bases or Pedestals, mounted upon brazen Wheels, and having Handles belonging to them, with the Help whereof they might be drawn, and conveyed from one Place to another, as they should be wanted in the Temple. These Lavers were double, that is to say, composed of a Basin, which received the Water that fell from another square Vessel above it, from which they drew Water with Cocks. The whole Work was of Brass, the square Vessel was adorned with the Heads of a Lion, an Ox, and a Cherubim; that is to say, of extraordinary and hieroglyphick Creatures. See the Figure. Each of these Lavers contained forty Baths, or four Bushels, one and forty Pints, and forty cubick Inches of Paris Measure. There were ten made in this Form, and of this Capacity; and five of them were placed to the right, and five to the left Hand of the Temple, between the Altar of Burnt-Offerings, and the Steps which lead to the Porch of the Temple. Laughter

LAUGHTER, Risus. Laughter is an Indication of Joy, Insult, Mockery, Assurance, or Admiration. Sarah in the Transport of her [Gen. xxi. 6. Luke vi. 25.] Joy called her Son Isaac, that is to say, Laughter. Wo unto them that laugh now, says our Saviour, for they shall weep. At Destruction and Famine thou shalt laugh; thou shalt not fear it, thou shalt be perfectly secure against these Evils. God laugheth at the wicked; he despises their vain Efforts, he laughs at them in the Day of their Destruction. Ego quoque interitu vestro ridebo. [Prov. i. 26. Gen. xxi. 9. Gal. iv. 30.] Ishmael laughed at Isaac, he insulted him, he treated him ill according to Saint Paul's Explanation. A Fool looks upon it as Matter of Laughter, as Sport, to commit Abomination. Quasi per risum stultus operatur scelus.

Laughter in general is used for Rejoycing. There is a Time to laugh, and a Time to weep, says Solomon; a Time to rejoice, and a Time to be afflicted. Blessed are they who weep now, [Prov. x. 23. Luke vi. 21. 25. Eccles. ii. 2. James iv. 9. Eccles. viii. 8.] for ye shall laugh. I said of Laughter, of Joy, Pleasure, it is mad. Your Laughter shall be turned into Mourning, your Joys shall terminate in Sorrow, in Repentance, in Remorse.

Laughter does not become a wise Man. A Fool lifteth up his Voice with Laughter, but a wise Man doth scarce smile a little. The Laughter of a Fool is as noisy as the crackling of Thorn. Sicut sonitus spinarum ardentium sub illa, sic risus stulti.

[Gen. xvii. 17.] Abraham's Laughter, when God promised him a Son, was a Mark of Admiration and Gratitude, not of Doubt: The Scripture which relates it, does not disapprove of it, as it does of Sarah's.

Laws

LAWS. The Word Law in Scripture, when alone, is taken for the Law of Moses, and sometimes for the whole Religion of the Jews in Opposition to the Christian Religion and the Gospel. The Law of Moses is the most ancient that we know of in the World. For although the Egyptians, for Example, the Assyrians, and several other People were already formed in his Time, and consequently had already some kind of Laws amongst them; nevertheless we do not see any Nation that had a Body of Laws before the Hebrews. Josephus remarks[1], that the Greek Legislators were very modern in Comparison of Moses, and that the ancient Greeks were unacquainted with the very Term Nomos, which signifies Law, and it is not to be met with in Homer, the most ancient Writer, as many think, that the Greeks had.

The Rabbins[2] pretend, that Noah's Sons, received certain Laws which compose the Law of Nature, and have always obliged all People in the World, of whatever Countrey they may be. Maimonides believes, that the six first were given to Adam, and that God added a seventh to Noah and his Sons. These Precepts are such as here follow. The First ordains Submission to Judges and Magistrates; the Second forbids Blasphemy against God; the Third Idolatry and Superstition; the Fourth Incest, Sodomy, Bestiality, and Sins against Nature; the Fifth Murder, and all Sort of Effusion of Blood; the Sixth Theft; the Seventh not to eat the Limb of any Animal while living. There is a Distinction generally made between the Law of Nature, and positive Laws. The Law of Nature is that which is stamped upon our Hearts, such as the Obligation of worshipping the supreme Being, of honouring our Parents, and those who are established in any Dignities, to obey Superiors, to do that to no Man which we would not have any one do to us, &c. Positive Laws are of several Sorts; some are moral, others civil and political, and others again ceremonial. Moral Laws are generally no more than Consequences or Explanations of the Laws of Nature. Judicial, Civil, and Political Laws regard principally the Duties of Men among themselves, the Order and Polity of the State; they restrain the Attempts of wicked Men, defend the weak from the Opposition of the strong, and regulate the Rights and Power of temporal Potentates. Lastly, ceremonial Laws have a Respect to the external Worship which is due to God, the Duties of both Ministers and People towards God, and their reciprocal Obligations to one another, with Relation to the divine Being.

The old Law was given to the Hebrews, by the Intervention of Moses, on Mount Sinai, fifty Days after their Departure out of Egypt, in the Year of the World 2513 before J. C. 1487. before the Vulgar Æra 1491. The principal Laws are these of the Decalogue, which God gave to Moses written [Exod. xx. 1, 2, &c.] upon Tables of Stone; which Laws are these following.

Thou shalt have no other Gods before me.

Thou shalt not make to thy self any graven Images, nor any Representation of any Thing above in the Heavens, nor of any Thing below upon the Earth, nor of any Thing in the Waters under the Earth. Thou shalt not bow down to them, nor worship them; for I am the Lord thy God. 3. Thou shalt not take the Name of the Lord thy God in vain; for the Lord will surely punish him who shall take his Name in vain, or falsly.

Remember that thou keep holy the Sabbath Day. Upon this Day thou shalt do no Work, thou nor thy Son, nor thy Daughter, nor the Stranger which is in thy Gates, nor thy Man Servant, nor thy Maid Servant, nor thy Beasts for Service.

Honour thy Father and thy Mother, that thy Days may be long in the Land, which the Lord thy God giveth thee.

Thou shalt do no Murder.

Thou shalt not commit Adultery.

Thou shalt not steal.

Thou shalt not bear false Witness against thy Neighbour.

Thou shalt not covet thy Neighbour's House, nor his Wife, nor his Slave, nor his Ox, nor his Ass, nor any Thing besides belonging to him.

These are what the Jews call the ten Words; and the Greeks, Decalogoi, from whence we form the Word Decalogue.

Some learned Men ° have been of Opinion, that Moses in the Generality of his Laws intended either to imitate those of the Egyptians, or to set down the Reverse of their Customs and Maxims, or to lay a Restraint upon the Hebrews, and thereby prevent their falling into those Errors, Idolatries and Superstitions, which they had seen in Egypt. Others on the contrary have asserted, that the Egyptians imitated, in Part at least, the Hebrew Laws. In this Diversity of Opinions, we think we ought ingenuously to confess, that the Hebrews in Reality have often imitated the Egyptians, and that reciprocally the Egyptians have likewise sometimes copied after the Hebrews: That the Egyptians having a different Turn of Mind, have upon many Occasions kept at a Distance from the Hebrews, and established religious Practices very different from theirs, with a View only of contradicting them, and gratifying their Animosity and Antipathy. In like Manner we have great Reason to believe, that the Practices of the Mosaick Laws, which are contrary to the Idolatry of the Egyptians, their Superstitions, and religious Observances, were not instituted without Design, and that the Legislator of the Jews intended to cure the Israelites of their Proneness to Idolatry, and set Barriers to the evil Habits which they had contracted in Egypt. As the Hebrew People were, as we may say, formed in Egypt, and Idolatry was very ancient in this Countrey, there can be reasonably no Question made, but that they there took up their violent Passion for Idols; and that Moses, who was no Stranger to their evil Disposition in this Respect, was very careful to provide some powerful Remedies against it. As to other Laws, whether judicial or ceremonial, we may believe that he acted according to his Prudence, in retaining[3] what might be useful in those of the Egyptians, in rectifying such as might be made good, and by enacting contrary Laws, in Order to suppress such as were opposite to Justice, Charity, Reason, or even to the Interest of his People.

The Law of Moses being the Shadow only of [Heb. x. 1. Heb. vii. 19.] Things to come, and bringing nothing to its Perfection, as Saint Paul says, it was necessary that Jesus Christ should complete what was imperfect in it, should reform the Abuses which it tolerated, and should fulfill what that only promised and typified. This is in Reality what he has executed with great Perfection. He declares in the Gospel, that he came not to destroy the Law, but to perfect it. He has explained, [Math. v. 17.] modified, and restrained the Law of Moses, and particularly the Explanations which the Rabbins and Masters in Israel had made of it; Explanations, which were rather Corruptions, than Illustrations of the Law. Saint Paul hath, in some Sort, finished what our Saviour had but begun; or rather he hath set that in its full Light, which his Master only intimated, and gave a Glympse of. As that the Law of Moses is in some Sort abrogated by the Gospel, that since the Death of the Messiah the legal Ceremonies are of no Use or Obligation; that we are no longer under the Yoke of the Law, but under Grace; that Jesus Christ hath procured for us the Liberty of Sons, instead of the Spirit of Bondage, which reigned under the Old Testament: In a Word, that it is neither the Law nor the Works of it, that justify us, but Faith [Rom. vi. 14.] animated by Charity, and accompanied with good moral Works. As to the rest, when we say, that the Gospel hath rescued us from the Yoke of the Law, we understand only the Precepts of the Ceremonial and judicial Law, and not those moral Precepts, the Obligation whereof is indispensable, and the Observation [Rom. iii. 20. Gal. ii. 16.] whereof is still much more perfect, and more extensive in the Law of Grace, than it was under the Old Law.

As to the particular Laws of Moses, they who would see them in their full Extent may consult the Articles of this Dictionary, where they are treated of; for Example, Passover, Sabbath, Blasphemy, Adultery, Sacrifices, Burnt-Offerings, &c. We shall here only give a short Abridgment of the Laws of Moses, such as may be found in our Preface upon Deuteronomy.

God the Creator of Heaven and Earth chooses the Race of Abraham for his peculiar People. He makes a solemn Covenant with them at Sinai, gives them the Law, and declares that he is the only God, that he alone will be adored, loved and served. He requires all the Love and Application, the whole Heart of those who are his, and belong to him. As he is jealous of his Glory, and severe in punishing, as well as merciful towards his Servants, and faithful in his Promises: He threatens to punish the Children for their Fathers to the third and fourth Generation; but then he promises to shew Mercy unto them who fear him to a Thousand Generations. He enjoins Men to swear by his Name, when they are obliged to swear; and forbids to swear ever by strange Gods, and even to pronounce their Names, much more to adore them, and represent them under Figures of Animals, Birds, Fishes, or Stars. Blasphemy against God is punished with Death, and vain Swearing, Lying and Calumny, are condemned as Insults upon Truth, and the sacred Name of God. It is allowable not to make any Vows to [Ex. xxiii.] the Lord; but as soon as they are made, there is to be no Delay in performing them; if any defer paying them, God will revenge it, and impute this Delay to them as a Sin. He condemns those who tempt him, and question his supreme Power, those who consult Magicians, Soothsayers, false Prophets, and Fortune-Tellers; in a Word, he detests all Sorts of Divinations, Witchcraft, Superstitions, Magick, Sorcery, and Omens. He requires a pure and sincere Worship without a Mixture of any strange Worship, that no Notice should be taken of Dreams, that they should not cut their Hair round in Honour of any false Gods, as Idolaters do; that they should make no Marks or Incisions upon their Bodies; that Magicians should be punished with Death, and they who have a Familiar Spirit, and such false Prophets, as would induce the People to be guilty of Idolatry. In general, Idolatry, they who solicit others to it, and the Cities which fall under the Guilt of it, are devoted to the Curse and Death. Prohibitions upon Pain of Death against imitating Idolaters in their Mourning; against making Use at any Time of the anointing Oil or Perfume used in the Temple; an Order to keep themselves always pure and holy, as being the Children, Servants and People of an holy God; to study Night and Day his holy Law, to meditate upon it, to wear it upon their Wrists, and upon their Foreheads, and to write it upon the Door Posts.

In the Wilderness God ordained, that they should set up a Tent for him, as for the Monarch of Israel, who marched amidst his People; that every one should contribute to this Work; that the Priests alone should serve in it, and come near it; that Sacrifices should be offered, and Altars erected to him in this Place only: That all the Beasts which should be killed, either within or without the Camp, should be presented at the Door of the Tabernacle, under Pain, upon the Deut. xii. Contraveners of this Order, of being treated as Murderers: And when the People of Israel should come into the promised Land, they should go three Times every Year to the [Ex. xxiii. 14. xxxi. 20. Deut. xv.] Temple, there to pay their Homage to their Lord in the Place, which should be chosen and appointed by God himself; and withal should not appear there with empty Hands. That they should take Care how they imitated the Canaanites in the Worship which they paid him, of erecting Statues and Altars to him, and of planting consecrated Groves, even about the Altar belonging to his Temple. He requires [Deut. xvi. 21, 22.] his People to bring the First-Fruits and Tenths, which he appointed for the Subsistence and Support of his Priests and Servants; and as a Mark of their Dependance and [Ex. xxii. 29, 30. Deut. xxxi. 1, 2. Deut. xxvi. 4, 5. iv.] Servitude they should present them to the Ministers of the Lord, with this Declaration. I profess this Day unto the Lord thy God, that I am come unto the Countrey which the Lord sware unto our Fathers for to give us. And when the Priest had taken the Basket, wherein were the First-Fruits, the Israelite continued: A Syrian ready to perish was my Father, and he went down into Egypt, and sojourned with a few, and became there a Nation great, mighty and populous. And the Egyptians evil intreated us and afflicted us, and laid upon us hard Bondage: And when we cried out unto the Lord God of our Fathers, the Lord heard our Voice, and looked on our Affliction, and our Labour, and our Oppression. And the Lord brought us forth out of Egypt with a mighty Hand, and with an outstretched Arm, and hath brought us into this Place, and given us a Land flowing with Milk and Honey. And now behold I have brought the first Fruits which thou, O Lord, hast given me.

Besides the Tythes and First-Fruits which were offered him, he required them to come every Year, and make religious Feasts in his [Deut. xiv. 23, 24.] Temples; upon which Occasion they rejoyced before him, and invited the Levite, the Poor, the Widow, and the Orphan. At these Feasts the following Prayer or Declaration was made before the Lord. I have brought away the hallowed [Deut. xxvi. 13, 14.] Things out of mine House, and also have given them unto the Levite, and unto the Stranger, to the Fatherless, and to the Widow, according to all thy Commandments which thou hast commanded me. I have not eat thereof in my Mourning, neither have I taken ought thereof for any unclean Use, nor given ought thereof for the Dead; but have hearkened to the Voice of the Lord my God. Look down therefore from thy holy Habitation, from Heaven, and bless thy People Israel, and the Land which thou hast given us, a Land that floweth with Milk and Honey. Every three Years instead of coming to keep their Feasts in the Temple, they might make them every Man in the Place of his Residence.

The Priests had many Prerogatives, and different Employments, all very honourable. They alone served at the Altar, offered the Blood and Fat, and the other Part of the Sacrifices, which were consumed by the Fire upon the Altar. They alone entred the Holy to burn Incense there, to kindle the Lamps, and place the Shew-Bread every Sabbath Day. They had their Share of all the Peace-Offerings, and of all the Sin-Offerings; and for the Offerings of Bread and Liquors, as soon as a very small Quantity of them was once thrown into the Fire upon the Altar, the rest belonged to the Priest in waiting. The Priest [Lev. ii. 3. Lev. vii. 31, 32, 33. Lev. xxii. 23, &c. Exod. xiii. 1, 2. and xxxiv. 19, 20, 21. Numb. xviii. 16. Lev. vi. 20. vii. 6. V. 30, 31. Lev. vii. 1, 2, 3. Lev. vii. 18.] had the right Shoulder and the Breast of the Peace-Offerings. The Fat of the Sacrifice was burnt upon the Fire; and the Blood of it was poured down at the Foot of the Altar. The rest of the Flesh belonged to him, who gave the Victim. Of the Sin-Offerings, the Kidneys, the Rump, the Fat which covers the Intrails, the Caul above the Liver, and the Blood were offered to the Lord. All the rest belonged to the Priests. The Burnt-Offerings were consumed entirely upon the Fire, and the Priest had no Advantage besides the Skin of the Victim: The Flesh of all Peace-Offerings was eaten in private Houses, or in the Temple: They could use none of it but upon the Day of Sacrifice, or the next Day; if any Thing remained upon the third Day it was burnt. The Priests were not permitted to eat the Flesh of Sin-Offerings any where but in the Temple, they were not allowed to carry any of it out: But as to their Share of the Peace-Offerings, they might eat it in their Houses with their Wives and Children, as well as the First-Fruits, Tenths, First-born, Things devoted, and Offerings made unto the Lord. None but Sin-Offerings were reserved for the Priests alone actually officiating in the Temple, [Lev. x. 14. Numb. xviii. 13, &c.] and exempt from any Uncleanness. If a Priest eat any Thing hallowed during his Impurity, he was punished with Death. Neither the Hireling who was working at the Priest's House, nor any other Stranger, could partake of it; but the Priest's Slave might eat of it. The Priest's Daughter, as soon as she was married to a Man who was not of the sacerdotal Family, no longer partook of any hallowed Meats; but as soon as she was either a Widow or divorced, she might eat of them: Under the Name of Things hallowed were understood the Parts of the Peace-Offerings, or other Offerings made immediately at the Temple, and separated from what was offered upon the Altar: For the Tenths and First-Fruits, which were properly the Revenue of Priests, might be used indifferently like every other common and ordinary Food; otherwise what should the Priests and Levites have subsisted on during their casual or natural Impurities?

All the First-born, both of Men and tame Beasts were the Lord's. The first-born of Men were redeemed with the Sum of five Shekels. The Firstlings likewise of Beasts, by their Nature unclean, such as the Ass and Camel, were redeemed. The Firstling of an Ass was exchanged for a Sheep; it might likewise be redeemed for the Value of five Shekels: If it were not redeemed, [V. 17, 18.] it was to be killed. Clean Beasts, such as the Ox, the Sheep and the Goat, were not redeemed: they were killed, the Fat of them was offered on the Fire, and the Blood poured out at the Foot of the Altar; all the rest remained to the Priests. The Fruits of [Lev. xix. 23, 24, 25.] new planted Trees were esteemed unclean, during the first four Years; after the fourth Year all the Fruit was the Lords; and the fifth, the Proprietor began to taste of it.

[Numb. iii. 41.] The Lord, by the same Right whereby he reserved the First-born of all Israel to himself, chose the Tribe of Levi for his own Service. This Tribe was given him as it were in Exchange, and as a Compensation for the First-born of all the other Tribes; and among [Lev. vi. 10, 12, 13.] the Levites, he chose the Family of Aaron to exercise the Office of the Priesthood. The other Branches of this Tribe were subordinate to the Priests, and imployed according as they were wanted by them in the Exercise of their Ministry. Wherefore the Priests served immediately at the Altar, in the Holy and the Sanctuary: They were to keep up the perpetual Fire upon the Altar of Burnt-Offerings; and the Office of the Levites was to guard the Doors of the Temple, to play upon Instruments, to flea the Victims, to prepare and bring Wood to the Altar.

The High Priest had the particular Privilege of entring into the Sanctuary, which was allowed to no other. He never went into it but one Day in the Year, which was that of [Lev. xvi. Deut. xvii. 12, 13.] the solemn Expiation. By Virtue of his Office he was chief Judge, and Arbitrator of all Things relating to the Worship of God and Religion. He was to spring from a Woman of his own Tribe and Family, married by his Father while she was in the State of her Virginity. [Lev. xxi. 13.] He was to be free from those bodily Defects which excluded Persons from the Dignity of High Priest. God was pleased to [Lev. xxi. 17, 18.] annex the Oracle of Truth to his Person; and when the High Priest was cloathed in the Ornaments belonging to his Dignity, he gave Answers in God's Name, by Means of the Urim and Thummim, which were in his [1 Sam. xxiii. 9. and xxx. 7. Lev. xxi. 10, 11, 12.] Pectoral. He was forbidden to mourn for the Dead, without an Exception even of his own Father. He never went into any Place where there was a dead Person, for fear of contracting some Pollution. The inferior Priests [Lev. x. 6. and xxi. 2, 3, 4.] might be present at the Funerals of their Fathers or Mothers, their Children or their Brothers, but not of other Persons, not even of the Prince of their People. As for the Levites, they are not distinguished from other Israelites with Respect to Funerals. The Priests lived in a State of Continency all the Time they were employed in the Service of the Temple. They then abstained from Wine; and all Pollutions. They were barefoot in the Temple, they lay there, they eat there, and did not wear their Formalities out of it. The Habit of common Priests and Levites was a Linnen Tunick, which reached as low as their Feet, and a Linnen [Lev. x. 9. Vide dicta Ad. Exod. xl. 29, 30. Exod. xxviii. 40, 42.] Bonnet with which they covered their Heads. They wore no Hair or Beard upon the upper Lip. Their Girdle and their Drawers were, as well as the rest, of Linnen.

The High Priest's Habit was more magnificent. He had upon his Loins a pair of Drawers made of fine Linnen, and upon his Flesh a Linnen Tunick of a particular Texture: Over the Tunick he wore a long Robe of azure Colour; it was probably without Sleeves, and all smooth. At the Bottom was a Border of gold Bells, and Pomegranates wrought with Threads of diverse Colours; disposed near one another, first a Pomegranate, then a Bell, and so on. This Robe was tied about with a Girdle of different Colours, wrought artfully by the Embroiderer. This the Scripture calls Ephod. This Ephod consisted of two Ribbons of some precious Substance, and curious Workmanship, which descended from above the Shoulders before and behind, and meeting before upon the Stomach, served as a Girdle to the Robe we have been speaking of. The Ephod was adorned upon the Shoulders with two precious Stones, on each whereof were graven the Names of six Tribes of the Israelites: And upon the Breast, where the two Ribbons cross one another, was the Rational, which was a square Piece, six Inches large, on which twelve precious Stones were fastened, upon each whereof was written the Name of the twelve Sons of Israel, according to the Order of their Birth.

The Priests could not marry a Woman of a wicked Life, nor a Prostitute, nor a Woman divorced by another Man. If a Priest's Daughter was guilty of Incontinency, she was burnt alive, because she violated the Name of her Father. The Priests were not permitted to offer Incense with strange Fire. We know what it cost Nadab and Abibu for attempting it. In all Sacrifices the Priests made Use of Salt, but never offered any Oil or Leaven [Lev. xxi. 8. V. 9. Lev. x. 1, 2. Lev. ii. 13. and Num. xv. Lev. ii. 11. Lev. xxiv. 5, &c. Matth. xii. 4. Ex. xxix. 38. Numb. xxviii. 3, 4. Lev. xxi. 17, 18. Lev. xxii. 18, 19, 20.] with them; They were the Persons who furnished Materials for the Shew-Bread, which they served every Sabbath Day upon the golden Table in the Holy; they kneaded and baked it themselves, and eat the old, when they placed new in the Room of it: It was at their Expence likewise that the perpetual Burnt-offering was offered Morning and Evening, and the Libations which accompanied it. Many Defects likewise are enumerated, which excluded from the Priesthood, and many Defects in the several Victims, which rendered them impure and unfit for Sacrifices. They may be all seen in our Comment.

God

God assigned no Inheritances in Estate and [Numb. xviii. 20, 21.] Lands to the Priests and Levites, but provided for their Subsistence by Tythes, First-Fruits, Offerings, and Parts of the several Victims mentioned by us, which were given to them. These they had in Lieu of Land, and with them were very much at their Ease. He provided also for their Dwelling, by assigning eight and forty Cities for their Habitation. They possessed within the Precincts of these Cities, not above the Length of a Thousand Cubits beyond the [Numb. xxxv. 23.] Walls. The Houses in these Cities, which belonged to the Levites were enjoyed in the same Manner as the Lands of the Israelites: They might be redeemed for ever, and in the Jubilee Year they returned to their first Owners, unless they were redeemed before. Of the eight and forty Cities belonging to the Levites, six were appointed for Sanctuaries to those who had committed any involuntary [Numb. xxxv. 6.] Murder. The Priests had thirteen for their Share, all the rest were the Levites. [Joshua xx. 7, 8. Josh. xxi. 19, &c.] God ordained also, that in all the Cities some Part of the Paste which was kneaded should be presented to the Levites. The Learned fixed this Portion to more than the fortieth, and less than the sixtieth Part of the Lump which was baked. Moreover, as often as any Beasts were killed, a Present was made to them of the Shoulder, the Maw and the two [Deut. xviii. 3.] Cheeks. They had likewise Part of the Wool when the Sheep were sheered. And in [Ib. V. 4.] military Expeditions they had always a good Share of the Spoil given them, though they were not in the Battle. There were generally [Numb. xxix. 30.] some Priests in the Armies of the Hebrews. Their Office was to sound the Trumpets, and [Numb. x. 8, 9.] to pronounce these Words at the Head of the Army. Hear, O Israel, you approach this [Deut. xx. 3, 4.] Day unto Battle against your Enemies; fear not, for the Lord your God is he that goeth with you, to fight for you against your Enemies, to save you. When the Ark of the Covenant was brought to the Camp, the Priests were charged with it, and guarded it. [Sam. iv. 4. and xiv. 18. and 2 Sam. xv. 24, 25.] The High Priest was often in it with his sacred Ornaments, that he might consult the Lord concerning what was to be done.

When private Persons made any Entertainments in the Temple, or in particular Cities, the Levites were generally invited. The Lord in twenty Places charges the Hebrews not to forget the Levites in their Rejoycings. Remember, says he to them, the Levite who is within the Circuit of your Cities, and consider that he has no Inheritance [Deut. xii. 18, 19, & passim. Lev. xxviii. 30, 31, 32.] in the Land. They received the Tythe, not only of Grains and Fruits in the Countrey, but likewise of Cattle. They had the Tythe of the Herd, or of the Flock as it came, be it what it would, without making any Choice. If any one had a Mind to redeem his Tythe, he added the fifth Part [V. 31.] above the Value of the Thing. 38

[Numb. xviii. 26.] After that the Levites had received all the First-Fruits and Tenths, they separated the tenth Part of them for the Priests. The Priests and Levites served quarterly in the Temple. They entred into the sacred Ministry at the Age of five and twenty or thirty, and were excused from performing the Offices of it at fifty. In David's Time their Order was changed, and they were received into the Temple at the Age of twenty. If a Levite thought fit to quit the Place of his Abode, with a Design of giving himself up [Numb. viii. 24. and Num. iv. 3. Chr. xxiii. 24. and Chr. xxvi. 17. and Ezra iii. 8. Deut. xviii. 6. Deut. xvii. 10, 11. Deut. xvii. 18. Deut. xvii. 8, 9, 10.] for ever to the Service of God's House, he was received there, and was supported out of the Revenues, and common and daily Offerings.

One of the principal Functions of the Priests and Levites, next to the Sacrifices and Service of the Temple, was the Instruction of the People. They were obliged to read the Law solemnly in an Assembly of the whole Nation, upon the great Day of Expiation. The King, upon his Elevation to the Throne, received the Volume of the Law from their Hands, which he caused to be transcribed for his Use. In the Decision of perplexed and difficult Affairs Recourse was had to the Priests; it was ordained upon these Occasions, that the High Priest should [Deut. xvii. 12, 13. Lev. xiii. xxiv. Numb. xxi. 5. Numb. v. 14, 15.] be obeyed on Pain of Death. The Distinction of different Sorts of Leprosies, the Expiation of any Murder, the Author whereof was not discovered, the Causes of Divorce, the Waters of Jealousy, every Thing relating to the Vows of the Nazarites came under their Cognizance. They blessed the People solemnly, and called upon the Name of the [Numb. vi. 20, 21. Numb. vi. 23, 24, 25.] Lord for them: The Hebrews had several Sorts of Sacrifices. The Burnt-Offering was the most perfect: In this they burnt the whole Flesh of the Animal, after they had first taken out the Entrails and flead it. The Peace-Offering was either to obtain Favours, or to be thankful for those which were received, or it was made only to acknowledge the Greatness and supreme Dominion of God. The Blood and Fat of the Peace-Offering was offered to God; the Priest had the Shoulder and the Breast, and the Remainder of the Victim was left to the particular Person whom it belonged to. In the Sin -Offering there was nothing left for him who provided the Sacrifice. The Fat which covers the Intestins, the Caul over the Liver, and the Kidneys were burnt, and the Blood was poured out at the Foot of the Altar; the rest belonged to the Priest. None but Bulls, Cows, Calves, Rams, Ewes, Weathers, He and She-Goats, and Kids were offered. There were likewise certain expiatory Sacrifices wherein Birds were offered. Upon these Occasions one was generally killed, and the other suffered to fly away. Sacrifices of this Kind took Place only in the Expiation of a [Lev. xiv. 4.] Leper, who was healed, and in that of a Man; Man, who having sworn rashly to do something, [Lev. v. 6, 7.] had forgot to do it. It would be almost impossible to relate here particularly all the Ceremonies attending the Sacrifices. The first Chapters of Leviticus may be consulted in this Matter. The three principal Festivals of the Israelites, and at which all the Males were to be present, from twelve Years of Age and upwards, were those of the Passover, Pentecost, and Tabernacles or Tents. The first was instituted in Memory of the destroying Angel's Passage who killed the First-born of the Egyptians, and spared those of the Hebrews, the Night in which they departed out of Egypt. That which distinguished this Festival, was a Sheaf of the first Barley, which was presented with Ceremony in the Temple, as the First-Fruits of the Barley-Harvest, which was to begin immediately after the Feast. There was none but unleavened Bread used during the seven Days Solemnity; and in the Evening on which the Feast began, there was a Lamb or Kid of a Year old eaten with bitter Herbs in every Family, or Assembly of ten or fifteen Persons. This was a Sacrifice of a particular Form. The Blood of it only was presented at the Foot of the Altar. It was to be eat roasted, and no otherwise dressed, it was not lawful to break the Bones, in Order to extract the Marrow. It was at the same Time a Sacrifice of Thanksgiving, and recalled to the Remembrance of the Hebrews their Deliverance out of Egypt. There were several Sacrifices peculiar to this Feast which we do not here particularly mention. The Passover with all its Formalities was ordained to be observed, [Numb. xxviii. 19, &c.] under the Penalty of being extirpated from among his People. If any particular Persons were not in a Condition to celebrate the Passover upon the fourteenth Day of the first [Numb. ix. 13. Ex. xii, 19.] Month, by Reason of some Uncleanness, which might hinder them; or because of Absence, and their being upon a Journey, they were permitted to keep it on the fourteenth Day of the second Month; which however was no Obstruction to their abstaining from [Numb. ix. 6.] leavened Bread, at the Time of the first Passover, in what Place soever, and what Condition soever they were in.

The Pentecost was celebrated fifty Days [Ex. xxiii. 16. and xxiv. 22. Lev. xxiii. 17.] after the Feast of Passover. In this Solemnity they offered two Loaves of new Wheat as the First-Fruits of the Harvest, which begun after this Ceremony. It was instituted in Order to preserve the Memory of the solemn Covenant, which the Lord had made with Israel at Sinai, when he gave them his Law. The extraordinary Sacrifices which were then [Vide Numb. xxviii. 26, 27. collatum cum xxviii. 12, 20. Numb. xxix. 12.] offered, were the same as those which were offered in the Passover.

The third solemn Feast of the Hebrews was that of Tents or Tabernacles, which was celebrated at the End of the civil Year [Numb. xxix. 7.] with Thanksgivings for all the Favours obtained from God, during the whole Course of the Year, and particularly in the Times of [Ex. xxiii. 16.] Harvest and Vintage. All the People then lodged under Tents made of Branches of Trees, in Memory of their Journey through the Wilderness, where their Forefathers spent [Lev. xxiii. 40, 43. Lev. xxiii. 10. V. 8, 9, &c. Lev. xxiii. 37. and Numb. xxix. 13, 14, &c. Numb. xxviii. 11. Lev. xvi. 6, 7. Numb. xxix. 1. &c.] forty Years, without having any other Habitations than Tents. There were particular Sacrifices for this Feast which lasted seven Days.

The tenth Day of the seventh Month in the sacred Year, which was the first of the civil Year, was a solemn Day, spent in Fasting, Repentance, and Mortification. It was appointed upon Pain of Death, for every one to afflict his Soul with Fasting on this Day. An Atonement was made for all the People with particular Sacrifices; among the rest, of two Goats, one whereof was set at Liberty, and called Azazel, and the other was sacrificed for the Sins of the People, and burnt without the Camp. Upon this Day the High Priest entred into the Sanctuary, to purify it with the Blood of a young Bullock which he had sacrificed, and afterwards with that of a Goat offered up for the Sins of the People. Some believed, that [Numb. xxix. 16.] on the same Day the red Heifer was sacrificed, in Order to save the Ashes of it, which were made Use of in purifying those who were polluted by Funerals.

Every first Day of the Month was a Feast Day; but they were not obliged to rest upon those Days. Some particular Sacrifices were then offered, and then Festivals were begun with the Sound of Trumpets. The first Day of the first Month in the civil Year, which was the seventh of their Ecclesiastical Year, is called in particular the Feast of Trumpets; because the Beginning of the Year was then published by Sound of Trumpets, with a particular Solemnity.

The Sabbath Day is the most antient of all the Festivals that we know of in Scripture; God sanctified this Day after the Work of the [Gen. ii. 2.] Creation. Moses published the Command relating to it, soon after the Departure out of Egypt, before the Hebrews came to Sinai. [Ex. xvi. 23, 29.] God enjoins Rest upon this Day, upon Pain of Death: He does not allow even of the kindling [Ex. xxxi. 15. Numb. xv. 32. Ex. xxxv. 3.] a Fire, or dressing any Thing to eat; and he extends the Command of Rest to the very Beasts and Slaves. He requires this whole Day to be employed in his Service, in praising him, and studying his holy Law. There were particular Sacrifices for the Sabbath, as well as for [Ex. xx. 6. Numb. xxviii. 9.] other Feasts.

Besides all these Feasts, which were observed in the Course of the Year, and lasted at most but seven Days, there were others of a much longer Duration, which were celebrated at the End of a certain Number of Years.

The first of these Feasts was the Sabbatical cal Year, wherein it was forbidden to cultivate the Earth, and all were enjoined to leave the Fruits of the Field to the Stranger, [Ex. xxiii. 10, 11. and Lev. xxv. 1, 2, &c. Deut. xv. 2. Ex. xxi. 2. Deut. xxxi. 10, 11.] the Poor, the Orphan, and wild Beasts; to set the Hebrew Slaves at Liberty, to remit all Debts, to read the Law in a solemn Manner. This Law seemed to be against good Policy; but God had superior Views in it. He intended hereby to preserve the Equality of Riches and Conditions among the Hebrews, to prevent the Oppression of the Weak, to keep up the Memory of the Creation of the World, which began to be blotted out of the Minds of Men, to make his People sensible of their absolute Dependance upon God. With the same Design he ordained every fiftieth, or rather every forty ninth Year, which is named the Jubilee Year, the Privileges [Lev. v, viii, &c.] whereof were still greater than those of the Sabbatical Year. In the Jubilee Year, not only the Earth was suffered to rest, and no Cultivation of it allowed, Slaves were set at Liberty, and Debts forgiven; but likewise all Lands and Inheritances returned to the respective Tribe, Family and Property of those who were obliged to alienate them. This Year began about the Month of September, and ended in the same. It was proclaimed by Sound of Trumpets in a very solemn Manner. God thereby made it appear, that he was the absolute Lord of the Soil, and of the whole Countrey, of the Persons and Liberties of his People. And that he might not put their Confidence to too great Trials, by forbidding them to cultivate the Earth for the whole Year, and commanding every Thing which it produced of itself to be common to all, even to Beasts, he engages to bless every [Ibid. V. 21.] sixth, and forty eighth Year, in so remarkable a Manner, that it should suffice for three Years Provisions.

The Rules prescribed by Moses to the King, whom the Israelites might at any Time choose, are different from those which [Deut. lvii. 14. 20. 1 Sam. viii. 11.] Samuel calls the King's Right. The King, according to Moses, was to be elected by the People, as the Lord should appoint; he was to be chosen out of the Number of his Brethren, not from among Strangers. The Prince was forbid to multiply the Number of his Horses, and oblige the People to return into Egypt to buy any there, to have too many Wives who might seduce his Heart, and have too great an Ascendant over him, to heap up too much Gold and Silver, and to exalt himself with Pride above his Brethren. Lastly, God commands him to take a Copy of the Law, to read it every Day of his Life, and not to depart from it, either to the right Hand, or the left. Samuel speaking of the King's Right, tells the Israelites. " The King whom you shall " choose, will take your Sons, and appoint " them for himself, for his Chariots, and " to be his Horsemen, and some shall run " before his Chariots. And he will appoint " him Captains over Thousands, and Captains over Fifties, and will set them to " ear his Ground, and to reap his Harvest, " and to make his Instruments of War, and " Instruments of his Chariots. And he will " take your Daughters to be Confectioners, " and to be Cooks and Bakers. And he will " take your Fields, and your Vineyards, " and your Olive-yards, even the best of " them, and give them to his Servants. " And he will take the Tenth of your Seed, " and of your Vineyards and give to his Officers, and to his Servants. And he will " take your Men Servants and your Maid " Servants, and your goodliest young Men " and your Asses, and put them to his " Work. He will take the Tenth of your " Sheep, and ye shall be his Servants."

War was the principal Duty of the King of Israel. There was a great Difference between the Wars commanded against the Canaanites, and those undertaken to make Conquests, or for other Reasons of State against foreign Countries. They first made Offers of Peace to those whom they intended to attack; just and equitable Conditions were proposed to them, according to the Nature of Affairs and Circumstances: If they refused these Conditions, they made War upon them: If they besieged a City, when the Siege was long, and it was necessary to encompass it with Trenches, and take it with the Help of Towers and Terrasses raised against the Walls, as was then the Custom, it was forbidden to cut down Fruit Trees, and to ravage the Countrey, in Order [V. 19, 20.] to make these Machines and Terrasses. If the City was taken by Assault, all the Men were put to the Sword, and the Women and Children, Beasts and Moveables were reserved; they belonged all to the Conquerors, and were divided among the whole Army. But if it were a City of the Canaanites, every living Thing was generally put to Death, Men, Women, and Children.

If they were to fight a set Battle, before the Combat, a Priest at the Head of the Army encouraged those who were to engage, by promising them God's Assistance. Afterwards [Deut. xx. 2.] the General and Officers went about, proclaiming at the Head of each Troop, that they who had built a new House, or planted a new Vineyard, or lately married a Wife, [Deut. xxiv. 5.] should return home, lest if they died in the War another should enjoy the Fruit of their Labours, or take the Wife, whom they had married. After these Declarations published at the Head of every Troop, Proclamation was made to the whole Army, that if any one wanted Courage, and feared Danger, he might return, lest he should spread the Terror which he was seized with among his Brethren.

The Spoil taken by the Enemy was divided equally by the General among all the Soldiers, those who were, as well as those who were not in the Battle, but remained as a Guard to the Camp, and had the Care of [1 Sam. xxx. 24.] the Booty, when taken. Moses resolved upon making a Partition of the Spoil taken from the Midianites among the Soldiers, who were in the Action, and all the People, who were then in the Plains of Moab; because at that Time all Israel was looked upon as one Army only: The Spoil was purified before it was brought to the Camp. This was performed after the following Manner. Metals, and every Thing that could resist Fire passed through the Flames. Habits, and other Things, which could not be exposed to the Flame, were purified with the Water of Atonement. The Women, who were at any Time taken in Wars made against the Canaanites, became Slaves to the Conqueror. If a Soldier had a Mind to marry one of his Captives, he carried her home to his own House, she cut her Hair, and pared her Nails, and quitted the Cloaths she wore when she was taken, and continued a whole Month in Mourning, lamenting the Loss of her Father and Mother, after which the Israelite might marry her. But if he afterwards grew weary of her, he was obliged to send her away free without selling her, or detaining her forcibly as a Slave.

The God of Israel and his Priests had their Share in the Spoils taken from the Enemy. In the War against the Midianites, God ordained that one Animal in five Hundred, both Men and Beasts taken in the Party which engaged, should be set apart and given to the Priests; and that besides this, out of that Part of the Spoil which was given to all the People, the fiftieth of all Animals should be chosen for the Levites. The General had likewise his Share distinct, as we see in the Instance of David and Gideon. In the same War with the Midianites lately mentioned, [1 Sam. xxx. Judg. viii. 24.] the Generals of the Israelites made a Present to the Lord of the Bracelets and Gold Rings, which they had taken, with an Intention probably to acknowledge him as the Head and Conductor of this Enterprize.

[Numb. xxxi. 49, 50.] Great Order and Discipline was observed in the Camp of Israel: We see in what Manner the Tribes were disposed about the Tabernacle in the Wilderness, and the Order [Numb. ii.] which was observed in their Marches. They were particularly careful to keep themselves pure: Women were not allowed to be then in Expeditions, and even they to whom any Thing happened in their Sleep, were obliged to depart out of the Camp, and did not return till Evening, after they were purified and had washed themselves and their [Deut. xxiii. 10, 11, &c.] Cloaths. Every Soldier carried a Stake at his Girdle, to dig a Hole with in the Earth, when he went out of the Camp [Ibid. v. 13, 14.] for his natural Occasions. After the Battle, the Soldiers did not enter again into the Camp till seven Days were passed, because of the Pollutions contracted by touching the [Numb. xxx. 19, 20, 24.] Dead. They purified themselves, and washed their Bodies and their Cloaths, before they enter'd it again. This was practised in the War against the Midianites, and probably upon all the like Occasions. But when the whole Army had been engaged, this Precept could not be observed, since they were all thought impure, and the clean were not to be distinguished from the unclean.

We are not perfectly acquainted with the Polity of the Hebrews; we have discoursed in a particular Dissertation concerning the Manner of their administring Justice, and have mentioned which were their principal Tribunals. The King and the High Priest were the two first Judges of the Nation. Give us a King to judge us, said the Israelites to Samuel. The High Priest is appointed by Moses to be Judge in the last Resort of all the most difficult Affairs. Besides this, there were Judges in all the Cities, or in all the Gates, according to the Expression of Scripture; because Justice was administred at the City Gates. Moses requires [Ex. xxii. 28.] great Respect to be paid to Judges and Magistrates. You shall not speak Evil of the Gods, says the Scripture[4], and you shall do no Violence to the Prince of the People. Princes, Judges and Magistrates were called Elohim, a Name given sometimes to God. Judges were looked upon as God's Vicegerents, with the Lord seated in the midst of them.

It was ordained that Judges should be uncorrupt, and receive no Presents, which are sufficient to bribe the most Upright, and to [Ex. xxiii. 8.] pervert the best Men. That they should not follow a Multitude to do Evil. That they [Ex. xxiii. 2, 3, 7, 9.] should not acquiesce in the Opinion of the Majority to do an Act of Injustice. That Compassion for the Poor should not hinder them from acquitting themselves of their Duty. That they should not wrong the Innocent, nor the Stranger. That they should judge without Respect to Persons. That neither Fear of the Rich, nor Compassion for the [Lev. xix. 15. Vide Deut. xvi. 18,19,20.] Poor, should affect them, when they were to pronounce an equitable Judgment. That the Father should not be punished for the Son, nor the Son for the Father. That in inflicting [Deut. xxiv. 16.] Punishments they should not proceed with the utmost Rigour. That the Bodies of Persons executed should not be left upon the Gibbet after Sun-set. That they who were condemned to be scourged or beaten, should not receive above forty Blows. That false Witnesses and Slanderers should be punished with Severity. That they should undergo the Punishment of that Crime [Deut. xix. 16, 17. Deut. xix. 18, 19. Vide etiam Levit. xix. 16.] which they imputed to their Brethren. That they should be treated without Mercy, Life for Life, Tooth for Tooth, Eye for Eye. That no one should be condemned upon the Testimony of a single Evidence: That two or three Witnesses should always be required before they proceeded to give Sentence against the Person accused.

Till the Time of the Law, Fathers and Mothers were the sole Judges of their Children. Moses limits this Authority, and transfers it to Judges; but he enjoins the latter to put to Death those Children, who should give injurious Language to their Fathers and Mothers, should strike them, should be rebellious, disobedient and debauched. [Lev. xx. 19. Ex. xxi. 15.] They were put to Death upon the bare Complaints of their Parents. The Law has made no Provision against Parricides, as if that had been thought to be a Crime impossible. Fathers are forbidden to make their Children pass through the Fire in Honour of the false God Moloch. Children are ordered to shew a perfect Submission to those who gave them Life. In Case of extreme [Ex. x. 12.] Necessity, a Father may sell his Children for Slaves. When he sold his Daughter, it was always with a Presumption that she would be his or his Son's Wife who bought her. If [See Ex. xxi. 7, 8, 9.] this did not happen, the Master could not keep her, merely as a Slave: If he did not like her, he was to set her at Liberty. In general, Fathers commonly sold their Daughters to those who married them; marrying and buying a Woman was the same Thing.

Voluntary Murder was punished with [Ex. xx. 13. xi. 12, 13. Ex. xx. 14.] Death: But for casual and involuntary Murder, the Law appointed Cities of Refuge, whither they, who had fallen under this Misfortune, might retire. There were three of these Cities of Refuge on this, and three on the other Side of Jordan. He who fled thither gave immediately an Account of what had happened to the Judges of the [Numb. xxxv. 23, 24. Deut. xix. 1, 2, &c. Ibid. v. 15. Ibid. v. 9. Ibid. v. 31.] City, whither he retreated: Afterwards, if the Relations of the deceased Person required it, he was sent back under a Guard to the Place where the Affair happened, and if he were found guilty, and the Murder was declared voluntary, he was delivered to the deceased's Relations, in Order to be punished; if not, he was sent back again to the City of Refuge, where he continued, without going out of it, till the Death of the High Priest. If he were found out of the City by any of the dead Person's Relations, they might kill him with Impunity. These Laws are in Favour of the Israelite and Stranger. A voluntary Murderer was put to Death without Remission: The Relation of the deceased might kill him himself with Impunity, wheresoever he found him. No Money was allowed to be received in Order to the sparing of his Life: He was to be taken by Force even from the Altar, if he had fled thither for Refuge.

If two Men quarrelled, and one wounded his Companion, so that he was obliged to keep his Bed, and he walked afterwards with a Stick, he who struck him, was to be cleared upon paying the Physicians, and giving the wounded Person Satisfaction for [Ex. xxi. 19, 20. Ex. xxi. 26.] his Loss of Time. He who killed his Slave was to be punished as a Murderer: But if he only wounded him, and the Slave lived two or three Days after it, the Master was not punishable, since the Slave was his, and if he lost him, he lost his Money. If in a Quarrel between two Persons, a Woman with Child should happen to be going across, and be wounded, so that she miscarried, though she did not dye; he who caused this Accident was to be fined at the Discretion of the Husband, and of Arbitrators appointed for this Purpose. But if the Mother died, the Murderer was to give Life for Life, Eye for Eye, Tooth for Tooth. If a Master beat out an Eye or Tooth of his Man Servant, or his Maid Servant, he was obliged, in the Way of Reparation, to set them at Liberty. If a Woman, while her Husband was quarrelling with another Man, laid her Hands upon her Husband's Adversary, in that Part, which Modesty obliges to conceal, she was [Ex. xxi. 28, 29, &c. Lev. xviii. 6, 22, and xx. 11, 17. Deut. xxi. 18, 19. Lev. xviii. 21. and xx. 13. Deut. xviii. 10. Ex. xxi. 28. Lev. xx. 10. Deut. v. 18. and xxii. 21, 22, 23, 24.] to have her Hands cut off.

If an Ox kill a Man or Woman with his Horns, he shall be stoned, and his Flesh shall not be eaten. If an Ox had gored any one before with his Horns, and the Owner of him upon Notice did not shut him up, and this Ox kill either Man or Woman, the Owner and the Ox shall both be put to Death. If the Owner has a Mind to redeem his Life, he may, paying whatever shall be demanded of him. If an Ox kill a Slave of either Sex, the Owner of the Beast shall give thirty Shekels to the Master of the Slave, and the Ox shall be stoned. If one Ox kills another, the surviving one shall be killed, and the Price shall be equally divided between the Owners of both; they shall likewise divide the Flesh of the Ox which has been killed. But if the Owner of the Ox which was the Aggressor, knew that he was used to gore with his Horns, and notwithstanding did not keep him in, he was to restore Ox for Ox, and the Beast which was killed was to be his. If a Man dig a Well or a Cistern, and does not cover it, and an Ox or an Ass fall into it, the Owner of the Cistern shall pay for the drowned Ox; but the Flesh shall be his.

Adultery was punished with Death, both in Man and Woman. If a young Woman, who is promised in Marriage, is violated in the Field by any Man, the Man alone shall die; but if this happen in the City, both shall be punished with Death. The Maid has no Excuse; she might have cried out, and desired Help, when this Violence was offered.

Incest was likewise punished with Death, [Ex. xxii. 19. Lev. xviii. 22. xx. 11. Lev. xix. 29. Deut. xxiii. 18. Ex. xxii. 16. Deut. xxii. 1, 18.] as well as Sodomy. And abominable Crimes against Nature. Prostitution of either Sex was severely condemned in Israel; and it was very expressly forbidden to offer the Price of any immodest Intercourses at the Temple of the Lord. Whosoever dishonours a Maiden, shall be obliged to marry her; or if the Father of the Damsel is unwilling to give her, he shall then pay as much as the young Woman could expect for her Dowry. If the Affair is brought before the Judges, and it appear that there was any Violence on his Part who corrupted her, the young Man shall pay a Fine of fifty Shekels to the Damsel's Father, shall marry her, and never have it in his Power to divorce [Lev. xx. 18. cum Lev. xv. 24. Ex. xx. 17. Deut. v. 20.] her. The Husband is forbidden to come near his Wife during her ordinary Indispositions, upon Pain of Death, if the Matter be brought before the Judges.

Although the Law does generally no more than regulate the outward Behaviour, and restrain Mens Hands, nevertheless it forbids evil Desires: It does not permit any one to covet anothers Wealth, his Wife, his Cattle. It tolerates Divorces, and allows the Parties separated to marry, but not to come together again, when the Woman has been once married to another Man. All Acts of [Deut. xxiv. 1. Lev. xix. 19.] abominable Lasciviousness contrary to Nature, are probably described after an obscure Manner in these Words. Thou shalt not let thy Cattle gender with divers Kinds: Thou shalt not sow thy Field with mingled Seed: Neither shall a Garment mingled with Linnen and Woollen come upon thee: Thou shalt not plough with the Ox and with the Ass, and in those which forbid any Man to put on Womens Cloaths, or [Deut. xxii. 5.] Women to dress themselves in Mens.

The Law prohibited all Sort of Theft in general; but the Manner of making Satisfaction [Ex. xx. 15.] for different Sorts of Theft, is very different. To steal a Man who is free, with a Design of making him a Slave, or selling him for such, was a Crime liable to capital [Ex. xxi. 16. and Deut. xxiv. 8.] Punishment. If a Man steal an Ox, he shall pay five Times double, and for a Sheep four Times. But if these Beasts are found alive [Ex. xxii. 1, 2, 3, 4.] in the Possession of the Thief, he shall only pay double for them: Any one might with Impunity kill a Night Robber, surprized in making a Hole through a Wall: But if any one were to kill him in broad Day-Light, the Murderer is to be treated according to the Rigour of the Laws against Murderers. If a Thief have not wherewithal to make Restitution, he may be sold for this Purpose. [Ex. xxii. 4, 5.] He who has done any Man Damage in his Field or Vineyard, shall make good the Wrong, which he has done, out of his [Ex. xxii. 5, &c.] own Field or Vineyard. He shall in like Manner make Satisfaction, if the Harvest, Corn in the Field, or the Sheaves in the Barn are through his Fault set on Fire. If what one has lodged in Trust with another is lost, Restitution shall be made twofold by the Trustee, if he is convicted of Fraud; if not, he shall be cleared and dismissed upon taking his Oath before the Judges. He likewise who is trusted with the keeping of any Cattle, must be answerable for them. If the Thing be lost by his Fault or Negligence, he shall restore it: If it dies in his Hands, or is taken by the Enemy, he shall be obliged to affirm upon Oath, that it is not through his Fault, and shall be discharged from making Restitution: If it be stolen, he shall restore the Value. If it be taken by wild Beasts, let some Part of it be brought to the Owner of the Beast, and he shall be discharged from making Restitution. If the Beast be only borrowed or hired, and it dies in the Presence of the Proprietor, there is nothing due for it. If the Proprietor be absent, the Borrower is to make Restitution.

The Practice of Usury among the Israelites towards one another is severely condemned by the Law; but is tolerated when practised by them with Strangers. If the Creditor had a Mind to take Pledges of his Debtor, he could not enter his House, but was to wait at the Door till the Debtor brought him something. He was not allowed to take at the same Time two Mill-Stones which were made Use of in grinding Corn, nor the Widow's Garment. If he had taken his Neighbour's Raiment or Covering, he was to restore it in the Evening, that his Brother might have wherewithal to cover himself in the Night. The Rich were commanded not to refuse lending to the Poor, upon Pretence that they should receive no Profit from what was so lent. The Hebrews were to assist one another so effectually, that there should be no Poor in Israel. No one was to touch the Limits of his Neighbour's Field. In the Times of their Harvest and Vintage, they were not to be so exact in gathering up the Ears of Corn and the Grapes, as to leave none remaining for the Poor, who came after the Reapers and the Grape-gatherers. No one was to return and look after a Sheaf which he might have forgotten in the Field. In religious Feasts the Poor, the Stranger, the Widow, the Fatherless, and the Levite were not to be neglected.

[Ex. xxii. Lev. xxv. 37. Deut. xxiv. 19. Deut. xxiv. 10. Deut. xxiv. 6. Ex. xxii. 26. Deut. xv. 8. Ib. xv. 4. Deut. xix. 14. Lev. xix. 9, 10. Deut.] The Stranger particularly is very much recommended to the Hebrews. Oppress not a Stranger, says Moses, for ye know the Heart of a Stranger, seeing ye were Strangers in the Land of Egypt. God requires them to love and assist, not their Friends and Brethren only, but their very Enemies; that they should not thirst after Revenge, but leave it to God; that if they saw their Enemy's Beast fallen under the Weight of his Burden, they should help to raise him up again; if they found his Cattle going astray, that they should carry them back to [Ex. xxiii. 4, 5. Lev. xix. 17. Deut. xxi. 1, &c.] his House. They were permitted to exercise their Hatred and Revenge only against the Canaanites; were to have no Friendship, Union, or Alliance with them; were commanded utterly to root them out, and kill them without giving any Quarter. In this Particular the Hebrews were the Assertors of God's Honour, and the Executioners of [Ex. xxii. 32, 33. and xxxiv. 12. and Numb. xxx. 51, 55 and Deut. vii. 2. 16.] his Vengeance. Passengers were permitted to enter into any Man's Vineyard, and eat Grapes in it; to pluck the Ears of Corn in the Fields, and eat them; but not to carry any away with them.

There were two Sorts of Slaves among the [Deut. xxiii. 24, 25.] Israelites; Hebrew Slaves, and Slaves of foreign Nations; the latter continued so for ever; but the Hebrew Slaves were set at [See Ex. xxii. 1, 6. Lev. xxv. 39, 40, &c.] Liberty in the Sabbatical Year. If they did not think fit to take the Advantage of the Law, they went before the Magistrates, made their Declaration, and their Master carried them back to his House, and there at the Door bored their Ears with an Awl. If the Slave entered into Bondage with his Wife and Children, he was to be set at Liberty with them: If his Master married him while he was his Slave, the Wife and Children begotten of her were to be the Masters; but the Slave, if he pleased, might leave him. If an Hebrew was constrained by Poverty to sell himself to any Stranger, who was not an Israelite, his Relations, if they were in a Condition to do so, were to redeem him; if they were not in Circumstances to do so, then any Israelite might buy his Liberty, or he himself might purchase his own Freedom: And whoever did this, was to pay his Master what he cost him, deducting for the Time of his Service, and considering how long it was till the Jubilee: For in the Jubilee Year, Strangers as well as Hebrews, were to set their Israelitish Slaves at Liberty, and restore all Inheritances to the lawful Owners of them: If any Slave were ill used by his Master, and so compelled to fly into the Land of the Hebrews, he was not to be delivered to his Master, but was to be permitted to make Choice of what Town he pleased for his [Deut. xxiii. 15, 16.] Habitation. If a Father sold his Daughter, the Purchaser or his Son might take her as a Wife of the second Rank, or Concubine, and keep her in this Quality. If they did not, they were to set her at Liberty in the Sabbatical Year, and give her, say the Rabbins, the ordinary Present of thirty Shekels. He who is her Master cannot sell her to any other Person, and she cannot prolong her Servitude beyond the Sabbatical Year. If her Master after having married her to his Son, give his said Son another Wife besides, this new Marriage shall no Way prejudice the Rights of the first Wife. Her Husband is obliged to give her Food, Lodging and Maintenance, and to perform the Duties of Marriage with her. If he fails in any one of these Conditions, she shall be released of her Servitude without giving any Thing, or waiting till the Sabbatical Year.

[Ex. xxiii. 12. Lev. xxv. 7.] In Order to inspire them with Humanity towards Mankind, the Law ordained, that they should exercise it even towards Brutes. He enjoins that Beasts should not be worked upon the Sabbath Day, and that in the Sabbatical Year, they should have a free Pasture every where. There seems to be something of Indulgence extended even towards wild Beasts. It forbids any to seeth a [Ex. xxiii. 19. xxxiv. 26. and Deut. xiv. 21. Deut. xxii. 6. Lev. xix. 14. Lev. xxii. 21. Deut. xxv. 1. Lev. xi. 2, &c. xx. 25. Deut. xiv. 4. Lev. xix. 19, and Deut. xxii. 10.] Kid in its Mother's Milk; to take the old one in a Nest together with its Eggs, and young ones; to eat Animals, to muzzle the Ox which trampleth out the Corn, to couple together Beasts of different Species. The Prohibition against speaking Evil of a deaf Person, and putting any Thing before a blind Man to make him fall, must be supposed to be given for the same Reason.

The Israelites did not eat all Sorts of Beasts, Birds, and Fishes indifferently; many were esteemed unclean by them, and never used. Of four-footed Beasts, all those were reckoned unclean which were clovenfooted, and did not chew the Cud. They eat no Fish but what had Fins and Scales. There were likewise several Sorts of Birds and creeping Things which were prohibited. These Creatures while they were alive did not pollute those who touched them; but their Carcasses occasioned an Uncleanness which lasted till the Evening, and was purified only by the unclean Person's washing his Body and Clothes. The Sinew belonging to the Thigh, even of Animals that are clean, was not eaten, by Reason of the Sinew of Jacob's Thigh which the Angel [Gen. xxxii. 32. Ex. xxii. 31. Lev. xvii. 15. Lev. xvii. 11, 12. Gen. xvii. 10. Deut. xii, 23, 24. Lev. vi. 25.] touched; nor any Creature that died of itself, or was torn by any Beast in the Field. The Blood and Fat of Beasts were alike prohibited.

Circumcision of male Children upon the eighth Day was enjoined Abraham. All the Israelites were obliged to it under Pain of being extirpated from among their People. There were several legal Impurities, some whereof made it necessary to separate from the Use of Things holy, and others from the Conversation of Mankind. To have touched a dead Carcase, to have been in the House where it was; and to have been present at a Funeral, made People unclean for seven Days, and they were obliged upon Pain of Death to purify themselves with the Water [Numb. v. 2. xxix. 11, 12, 20. Lev. xiii. 45, 46. Lev. xv. 2. Ib. xv. 19. 3] of Expiation. Leprosies, Gonorrhe-as, and the common Indispositions peculiar to Women, created Uncleanness in those who were in any of these Circumstances, as long as they continued to be so indispposed; and after their Cure they offered an expia tory Sacrifice, as it were to satisfy God for such involuntary Faults, as they might have committed during their Pollution. They who came near Persons thus polluted, or touched any Thing which they had handled, or had sat on, contracted likewise an Uncleanness, which lasted for a Day only. A Woman who [Ib. v. 4. 20.] had lately lain in was likewise reckoned to be unclean forty Days after the Birth of a Boy, and fifty after the Birth of a Girl. During all [Lev. xii. 4, 5, &c.] this Time, she was not permitted to touch holy Things, nor to appear in the Court of the Temple. When this Time was expired, she came and offered a Lamb, a Turtle, or a young Pidgeon for her Expiation; and if she were Poor, two Turtles, or two young Pigeons only.

All People who had been never circumcised, were thought by the Israelites to be unclean. They made Use of the Word Uncircumcised to express something unclean. The Canaanites and Amalekites were devoted to [Ex. xvii. 14. and Deut. xxv. 17.] the Curse. Eunuchs, Bastards, or those born of Prostitutes, were not admitted into God's Church till the tenth Generation; that is to [Deut. xxiii. 1, 2,] say, were excluded from a Participation of the Privileges belonging to Israelites. The Ammonites and Moabites were not admitted, even at the tenth Generation. They were forbidden [Deut. xxiii. 1.] to make Peace, and live in Friendship with these People. The Edomites and Egyptians [V. 6.] might be received among the Israelites after the third Generation; the former in Consideration of Esau, Jacob's Brother; and the latter, because the Israelites had lived among them as Strangers.

Moses forbids all Sort of Frauds and Cheats in Trade. He enjoins his People to have equal Measures for buying and selling, for receiving [Lev. xix. 35.] and delivering; to honour old Men, and stand in their Presence. That all the Israelites [Deut. xxv. 13, 14. Lev. xix. 32.] should wear Tufts at the four Corners of their Vestments, and Fringes on the Borders of their Garments; that by this they might be induced to remember the Law of the Lord. [Numb. xv. 38.] Girls did not inherit but when there were no Boys. Girls who were Heiresses married Husbands [Deut. xxii. 12. Numb. xxvii. 5. and xxxvi. 3, 4, &c.] of their own Tribe; that the Inheritances of one Tribe might not be transferred to another. If a Man died without Children, his Brothers were Heirs to his Estate; if he had no Brothers, his Uncles by the Father's [Numb. xxvii. 8, 9, 10, 11.] Side succeeded to his Fortune, and if he had no such Uncles, his nearest Relations.

When a Man died without Children, his Brother was obliged to marry his Widow, and so revive the Memory of the deceased, whose [Deut. xxv. 5, 6, 7.] Estate he enjoyed. If he refused to do so, the Woman cited him to appear at the City Gate, took his Shoes from off his Feet, spit in his Face, and said, So shall it be done unto that Man that will not build up his Brother's House. If a Man had entertained any Suspicion of his Wife, he might [Numb. vi. 14. Deut. xxii. 14, 15.] make her drink the Waters of Jealousy; and God in Condescension to the Hardness of the Jews, granted them this Trial to prevent greater Evils. He likewise tolerated the Husband to accuse his Wife, as not having discovered the Marks of Virginity in her; but if the Accusation appeared to be false, the Husband was condemned to be scourged or bastinadoed, to pay a Fine of an hundred Shekels for the Service of the Woman's Father, and never to have Power to divorce her. No Husband, who had two Wives, could transfer the Rights of the first born, to any Child of the most beloved Wife of these two: He had no Power to deprive her Son of this Privilege, who had [Deut. xxi. 15, 16.] the least Share in his Affection.

The Land of Canaan was to be divided by Lot among all the Tribes as equally as was possible, with a Regard to the Number of [Numb. xxxiii. 13. xxxiv. 13.] those who composed each Tribe. When the Israelites built an House, they were to carry on a kind of Wall or Canon round about the Top of it, to prevent their falling and killing themselves who went upon it; this was in the [Deut. xxii. 8. Lev. xxvii. 2, &c.] Nature of a Platform.

There were several Sorts of Vows which the Hebrews were at Liberty to make. They might either devote themselves or any other Person to the Lord. Persons thus devoted were redeemed with a Sum of Money. A Man from twenty to sixty Years of Age paid fifty Shekels for his Redemption, and a Woman thirty. A Boy from five Years old to twenty gave twenty Shekels, and a Girl of the same Age, ten. A Man above sixty Years of Age gave fifteen Shekels, a Woman ten. The Poor according to their Abilities paid the Tax which the Priest laid upon them: A Beast fit to be sacrificed, which was devoted, was not to be redeemed, but was sacrificed. An unclean Beast was to be valued by the Priest; and if the Proprietor had a Mind to redeem it, he was to add a fifth Part above the Estimation. If an House were thus devoted, an Estimate was to be made of it, and it was to be sold for the Profit of the Priest. A Field also which was thus consecrated, was to be valued by the Priest, according to the Revenue it produced, and the Time remaining to the Jubilee. The Proprietor was at Liberty to redeem it, adding a fifth Part to the Price at which it was rated. But if the Proprietor did not redeem his Field, and it were sold to another, he who sanctified it, was not to have Possession of it any more, not even in the Jubilee Year. The First-born belonging to the Lord were not the proper Matter of a Vow.

Things and Animals devoted to the Curse, were not redeemable, but were put to Death if Animals; or if Houses or Inheritances, belonged [Lev. xxvii. 28.] to the Priests. Tithes of either Land or Beasts were redeemable, provided a fifth Part were added above their Value.

Every Every one was obliged to perform his Vows [Numb. xxx. 3.] punctually, and without Delay. If a young Woman, who remains still in her Father's House, make a Vow, and her Father has had Knowledge of it, without saying any Thing about it, she shall accomplish her Vow. If on the contrary, her Father shall not be consenting to her Promise, it shall be void, and of no Effect. If a married Woman make a Vow, her Husband by giving or refusing his Consent, shall annul or ratify her Promises. There is but one Day allowed him to declare his Refusal: If he waits till the second Day before he makes known his Resolution, the Woman is obliged by her Vow. A Woman who is divorced from her Husband and a Widow, are bound to the Performance of all the Promises made by them.

The Nazarites were a Sort of People, who consecrated themselves to God, and abstained from Wine, and every Thing that might intoxicate; who during the Time of their being Nazarites, neither had their Hair cut, nor were present at any Funerals. When this Time was over, the Priests were [Numb. vi. 1, 2, &c.] to present them at the Door of the Tabernacle, and offer up a Lamb for a Burnt-Offering, an Ewe for a Sin-Offering, and a Ram for a Peace-Offering. When these Victims were sacrificed, the Nazarite was to have his Hair cut, and this was to be cast into the Fire upon the Altar. Afterwards the Priest was to put the Shoulder of the Ram, and the Offerings of Bread and Cake upon the Nazarite's Hands; and the Nazarite returning them to the Priest, he was to lift them up before the Lord; and then the Nazarite might drink Wine. If during the Time of his Consecration, any Person by Chance were to dye in his Presence, he was obliged to run through all the Ceremonies again, to be performed by Nazarites, and to offer two young Pigeons for the Expiation of his Uncleanness.

The whole Land of Canaan being plunged into Idolatry at the Time when the Hebrews entred into it, God commanded them to destroy all the Marks they met with of this false Religion; their consecrated Groves, Altars, Stones, Pillars and Statues [Lev. xvi. 1. and Deut. xiii. 2, 3. Ex. xx. 24, 25.] erected in Honour of false Gods. He at first appointed an Altar made of Turf to be erected to his Honour at the Foot of Sinai; afterwards he caused one of Wood, covered with Copper Plates, and hollow within, to be made for the Tabernacle. The Fire was kindled upon a Grate of the same Matter, sunk in about half Way the Depth of this Altar. He forbad any to go up this Altar by Steps; [Ex. xxvii. 8. Ex. xx. 26.] lest the Priests as they went up should discover something indecent, and offensive to Modesty. He likewise ordained, that as soon as they should be entred into the Land of Promise, they should go to the Mountains Ebal and Gerizim. One Part of the Tribes [Deut. xi. 29. and xxvii. 23. Josh. viii. 30, 33.] was to be placed upon Gerizim, in Order to pronounce these Blessings upon those who should practise God's Laws; and another Part on Mount Ebal, to pronounce Curses against those who should neglect them: There they were to erect a very large Altar plaistered over, upon which the Words of the Law were to be written. All this was executed by Joshua.

Oral Law

ORAL LAW, or Tradition, is that which the Jews say they have received by Tradition from their Ancestors. They affirm, that Moses received equally the Written, and the Oral Law, upon Mount Sinai; that the first was reduced into Writing, and the other given only by Word of Mouth, and hath been transmitted down from one Generation to another by the Elders. Thus they attribute an equal Authority to both, as having both the same Original, and flowing equally from God. Nay, they give a Preference to the Oral, before the written Law; for this they say is in many Places obscure, imperfect, and defective, and could not be made Use of as a Rule without the Assistance of the Oral Law, which supplies all that is wanting in the written Law, and removes all Difficulties.

Wherefore they do not observe the written Law without the Explanations, Modifications, and Glosses of the Oral Law, and it is a Sort of Maxim among them, that the Covenant which God made with them at Sinai, consists not so much in the Precepts of the written Law, as in those of the Oral Law; to these latter Laws they generally give the Preference. They say, for Example, that the Words of the Levites are more lovely than those of the Law; that the Words of the Law are sometimes weighty and sometimes light; whereas those of the Doctors are always of Weight: That the Words of the Elders were of greater Weight than those of the Prophets. In other Places they compare the sacred Text with Water, and the Mishna or Talmud, which contains their Traditions, with Wine or Hipocras. Besides the written Law is salt, but the Mishna and Talmud are the most exquisite Spices. The Law is only as it were the Body, and the Oral Law or Tradition, as it were the Soul of Religion. Ever since our [Mark vii. 13.] Saviour's Time they have been reproached with making the Word of God of no Effect by their Traditions. See above CABBALA.

Law

LAW. By the Word Law is often understood the whole Scripture of the Old Testament. The Mahometans after their Leader Mahomet, maintain, that the Jews have corrupted the Law, as the Christians, they say, have in like Manner corrupted the Gospel. It is easy to see what is aimed at by this Accusation, viz. to discredit the genuine Scriptures, and so disarm both Jews and Christians of the Weapons necessary to attack and destroy Mahometanism, which is founded properly on this chimerical Supposition only, and the diabolical Calumny of this infamous Impostor. As soon as he had convinced his Followers of this, he put both the Jews and Christians, the only People with whom the sacred Oracles were lodged, under a Necessity of proving that they have authentick Copies, free from Corruption, and written by the inspired Authors; and in the mean while Mahomet impudently advances what he thinks fit, corrupts the Histories of the Old and New Testament, makes the Patriarchs, Moses, and Jesus Christ speak in a Manner suitable to his Interests and System; and when we cry out against Imposture and Corruption, he says, that we our selves have altered the sacred Writings, that we have neither the Law nor Gospel intire and pure.

And wherein have the Jews falsified the Books of the Old Testament? Why, the Mahometans say, by adding Vowels which before they had not. It is true the Vowel Points are of a pretty modern Invention; but this is no Corruption of the Text, it is a Determination of the Manner wherein we are to read certain Words, which without this might admit of diverse Meanings. But these Vowel Points deprive no one of the Liberty of reading otherwise, if in so doing he can find a better Sense. They add farther, that in the Books of Moses there is no one Precept to be met with which obliges the Jews to Praying, Fasting, Almsgiving, or Pilgrimage to Jerusalem, which is manifestly false: But instead of examining the Matter, the Contest may be sooner ended by saying with Mahomet, When they who have Books present them to you, neither believe nor reject them; but say only, we believe in God, in his Books, and in his Messengers. Upon this Principle the Mussulmen think themselves forbidden to translate or cite any Thing out of the Law or Gospel.

Lazarus (I)

I. LAZARUS, or Eleazer, Brother to Martha and Mary, dwelt at Bethany with his Sisters, near Jerusalem; and Jesus Christ did him the Honour sometime to go and lodge with him, when he came into this City. One Day while Jesus was beyond Jordan with his Apostles, Lazarus fell sick;[1] and his Sisters sent Information of this Accident to our Saviour, telling him, that he whom he loved was ill. Jesus upon receiving Notice of it said, This Sickness is not unto Death, but for the Glory of God and his Son. He abode two Days longer in the same Place, and then said to his Disciples, that Lazarus was asleep, but that he would go and awake him. He meant that he was dead, and he would restore him to Life. Jesus upon his Arrival found, that he had been already four Days in the Grave. Martha having got Intelligence that he was coming, went to meet him, and said; Lord, if thou hadst been here, my Brother had not now been dead. Jesus replied to her, Thy Brother shall rise again. Martha answered, I know that he will rise again at the last Day. Hereupon Jesus said unto her, I am the Resurrection and the Life: He that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live.

Within a little Time after Mary likewise went to meet Jesus, who was not as yet come into the Town; and he seeing her weeping, groaned in the Spirit, and was himself troubled. Then he asked, Where have ye laid him? They carried him to his Grave, and Jesus wept. When he was come thither, he said: Take away the Stone, which closes the Mouth of the Sepulchre. Lord, said Martha, by this Time he stinketh, for he hath lain there these four Days. Did I not tell you, said Jesus in Reply, that if you believed you should see the Glory of God? The Stone therefore was removed; and Jesus having returned Thanks unto his Father for that he had always heard him, he cried with a loud Voice, Lazarus, come forth. At that very Instant he who was dead came forth bound Hand and Foot, with Grave-Clothes, and his Face wrapped up with a Napkin. Then Jesus said unto them; loose him, and let him go. This Miracle which was wrought, as we may say, at the very Gates of Jerusalem, made a great Noise; and the Priests resolved upon the Death of Jesus, who knowing their evil Dispositions, retired to Ephraim upon the River Jordan, waiting the Time appointed by the Decrees of his heavenly Father.

Six Days before the Passover[2], Jesus came again to Bethany, where he had raised Lazarus from the Dead. A Supper was provided for him, and Martha waited. Lazarus was one of those who were at Table with him; and Mary anointed our Lord's Feet with a very costly Perfume. The Jews observing, that the Resurrection of Lazarus had made a great Impression upon the Peoples Minds, took a foolish Resolution to procure the Death of both; as if our Saviour, who had restored him to Life, when he was dead, was not able likewise to raise him, when he was killed. That Part of their wicked Design, which related to our Saviour, they executed; but holy Scripture does not tell us what became of Lazarus. Saint Epiphanius says[3], that there was a Tradition of Lazarus's being thirty Years of Age, when Jesus Christ raised him from the Dead, and that he lived still thirty Years longer. So that he died by this Account in the 63 Year of the Vulgar Æra. The Greeks say, that he died at Citium, a Town in Cyprus[4], where his Sepulchre was to be seen near the Walls of the City; and that there were some Churches in the same Island dedicated to his Honour. The Emperor Leo the Wise[5], having built a Church at Constantinople in Honour of S. Lazarus, about the Year 890, sent to Cyprus, when his Body was found near the Town of Citium, in a Marble Tomb, the Inscription whereof imported, that this was Lazarus beloved by Jesus Christ, and raised again by him the fourth Day.

Others will have it, that after our Lord's Death, the Jews took Lazarus, Mary and Martha his Sisters, Joseph of Arimathea, and some others; put them on Board a Vessel without Masts, all over rotten, and ready to sink, and so exposed them to the Mercy of the Waves upon the Mediterranean; but that by the particular Conduct of Providence their Ship came to Harbour at Marseilles, where Lazarus and his Sisters disembarked, and then began to spread the Light of the Gospel: That Lazarus having been made Bishop of Marseilles, ended his Life there by Martyrdom, after having governed this Church fifty Years. But the Learned reject this Story as having been unknown to all the Ancients, and being without any Marks of Truth sufficient to make Way for its Reception.

Lazarus (II)

[Luke xvi. 19. 20, &c.] II. LAZARUS. The Gospel speaks of a poor Man, whose Name was Lazarus, that he lay at a rich Man's Gate all covered with Ulcers, and desired to feed upon the Crumbs which fell from his Table, without finding any one who would give them to him. The rich Man enjoyed great Plenty, was cloathed in Purple and fine Linnen, and fared magnificently every Day. Lazarus being dead, was carried by the Angels into Abraham's Bosom. The rich Man died also, and was buried. While he was in Hell amidst his Torments, he saw Lazarus afar off, who was in Abraham's Bosom, and cried out; Father Abraham have Pity on me, and send Lazarus, that he may dip the End of his Finger in Water to refresh my Tongue. But Abraham answered him; My Son, remember, that thou in thy Life Time receivedst thy good Things, and likewise Lazarus his evil Things. Wherefore he is now comforted and thou art tormented.

The ancient and modern Interpreters are divided concerning the Nature of what we have been relating, viz. Whether it be an History or a Parable. Saint Irenæus[1], Saint Ambrose[2], Saint Gregory the Great[3], Tertullian[4], Euthymius[5], Luke of Bruges, and some others, are of Opinion, that it is an History. The Name of Lazarus, and the several Particulars which Jesus Christ has carefully taken Notice of, intimate something more than a Parable. But Saint Chrysostom[6], Saint Cyril of Alexandria[7], Theophylact, and most of the modern Interpreters[8] maintain, that it is a Parable. Lastly, others observe a Medium, and believe that it is neither a mere Parable, nor a perfect History; but that the Substance is historical, and that our Saviour has embellished it with some Circumstances, which are only parabolical. The Reader may consult the Commentators on Saint Luke xvi. 19, 20, &c. In French, instead of Saint Lazarus, they say Saint Ladre; and this Saint is called upon to assist leprous Persons. There were several Lazerettoes or Hospitals, dedicated to Saint Lazarus for the Relief of Lepers. There were abundance of them in France dedicated to Saint Lazarus, Saint Martha, and Saint Magdalen. Among the French, as formerly among the Hebrews, they who were seized at any Time with a Leprosy, were separated from other People. The Causes of Lepers were committed to the Ecclesiastical Court. The Council of Nougarot in Armagnac, held in 1290, forbids, in the fifth Cannon of it, all Prosecution of Lepers before Lay-Judges for personal Actions, probably because Lepers were not permitted to mix with other Men for Fear of communicating their Disease, or because they were under the Protection of the Church, which separated them from the rest of the People by a Ceremony which we still meet with in the Rituals.

Leah

LEAH, the Wife of Jacob, and Laban's eldest Daughter. Her Father introduced her into Jacob's Chamber, and put her to Bed with him upon the Wedding Night; Jacob took her to be Rachel, whom he had really married[1]. When he complained of this Cheat, Laban answered him, that it was not the Custom of that Countrey to marry the youngest Daughters before the eldest were provided for. Wherefore it was necessary that Jacob should engage to serve Laban seven Years longer, in Order to have Rachel. The Lord observing him to have more Inclination for Rachel than for Leah, gave the latter the Blessing of Fertility, and made her the Mother of six Sons and one Daughter, viz. Reuben, Simeon, Levi, Judah, Issachar, Zebulun, and Dinah; not to mention Gad and Asher,[2] whom Zilpah her Servant produced to Jacob, and Leah adopted. We know not the Year of Leah's Death; but we know that she died in the Land of Canaan, and that she was buried in the Cave where Sarah, Abraham, and Isaac [Gen xlix. 31. Ex. xii. 15, 19. ηµύZשאר. Fermentum. Ex. xii. 15, 19. Lev. ii. 11.] had been buried before her.

Leaven

LEAVEN; in Greek, Zyme; in Latin, Fermentum; in Hebrew, Seor; The Hebrews were forbidden by the Law to eat leavened Bread, or any Thing with Leaven in it during the seven Days of the Passover. They were very careful in purifying their Houses from all Leaven, as soon as the Vigil of this Feast began; and God forbad either Leaven or Honey to be offered to him in his Temple; that is to say, that in the Offerings of Cakes, or any baked Meats, which were presented to the Lord upon his Altar, there should be no Leaven, nor any Mixture of Honey. But upon other Occasions there was nothing which hindered them from offering leavened Bread and Honey[1]. See Numb. xv. 20, 21. where God requires them to give the First-Fruits of the Bread, which was kneaded in all the Cities of Israel, to the Priests and Levites. Saint Paul expresses his Desire, that the Faithful should [1 Cor. v. 7, 8.] celebrate the Christian Passover with unleavened Bread, in Azymis, which, in the mystical Sense of the Word, signifies Sincerity and Truth; wherein he teaches us two Things. First, that the Law which obliged the Jews to a literal Observance of the Passover, is no longer in Force; and secondly, that by unleavened Bread, Truth and Purity of Heart were denoted. The same Apostle alludes to [1 Cor. v. 6.] what was practiced in the Ceremony of the Passover, wherein a great deal of Care was taken to cleanse the House of all unleavened Bread, where he says, watch over your selves; for a little Leaven leaveneth the whole Lump, which is in the Baker's kneading Trough. A Quantity of Leaven no larger than a Nut, was sufficient to make all the Bread, which was then kneaded, impure. Thus Immorality, Impurity of Heart pollutes all our Actions. Jesus Christ terms the Maxims and Doctrine of the Herodians and Pharisees, the Leaven of [Matt. xvi. 6. Mark viii. 15.] these People.

Lechi

LECHI. This Word signifies the Jaw; and the Particular which gave Occasion for this Name was as follows. Samson having some Reason to be dissatisfied with the Philistines, let loose three hundred Foxes upon their Lands, with lighted Torches at their Tails, and so set Fire to all their Corn Fields. He farther beat them afterwards in several Skirmishes: Whereupon they set an Army on Foot, and entred the Territories of Judah. The Inhabitants of Judah desired to know for what Reason they made War against them. The Philistines answered: We have no Design upon any but Samson, in Order to return all the Evil upon him which he has done to us. Hereupon three Thousand Men of Judah went to Samson, and told him, that they came to bind him, and give him up to the Philistines. Promise me said Samson that you will not kill me, and I will suffer myself to be bound and carried to the Philistines. They promised him, and he permitted them to bind him.

When they were come near to the Army of the Philistines, these came against him with great Cries. But the Spirit of God having on a sudden seized on Samson, he broke the Cords, wherewith he was bound; and finding the Jaw-bone of an Ass which was upon the Ground, he took it, and falling upon the Philistines, killed a Thousand of them. He sung therefore this Song upon his Victory, " With the Jaw-bone of an " Ass, Heaps upon Heaps, with the Jaw-" bone of an Ass have I slain a Thousand " Men." After this he threw down his Jaw-bone, and called the Place Ramath-Lechi, the lifting up of the Jaw-bone. Being afterwards very thirsty, he cried unto the Lord and said, *It is thou, Lord, who hast given this great Deliverance into the Hand of thy Servant: And now shall I die for Thirst, and fall into the Hand of the uncir*cumcised. Hereupon God opened one of the large Teeth in the Jaw-bone, and a Fountain sprung out of it, which seemed to allay Samson's Thirst, and retained the Name of Lechi or Jaw-bone.

The Hebrews sometimes called naked [1 Sam. xiv. 4, 5. Job. xxxix. 28.] and steep Rocks, Teeth. God therefore opened a Rock called Machtes, or the Cheek- Tooth, which was situated at the Place where Samson obtained his Victory with the Jaw-bone of an Ass, and which for this Reason he called Lechi, or the Jaw-bone. This Fountain issuing out of a Rock called the Cheek-Tooth, situated at a Place named the Jaw-bone, has persuaded several Persons[1], that the Fountain here spoken of, came immediately out of a Tooth-hole in the Asses Jaw-bone, which would be a very surprizing Miracle. But as we have just now explained the Matter, the Miracle of the Fountain issuing out of the Rock at Samson's Prayer is acknowledged, and Wonders are not to be multiplied without Necessity. The Opinion, which we have proposed, is followed by Josephus[2], by the Paraphrast Jonathan, and a good Number of Commentators[3]. This Fountain subsisted for a long Time, and is still probably in Being in Palestine. Glycas[4], and the Martyr Antoninus, speak of it, and say, that it is to be seen in the Suburbs of Eleutheropolis.

The Egyptians are reproached with swearing by the Leeks and Onions of their Gardens: Allium cepesque inter Deos in jurejurando habet Ægyptus, says Pliny[2]. Juvenal[3] ridicules these superstitious People, who did not dare to eat Leeks, Garlick, or Onions, for Fear of injuring their Gods.

Lent

LENT, in Latin Quadragesima, so called by Reason of the forty Days fast, observed first by Moses on Mount Sinai, when he received [Exod. xxiv. 18. 1 Kings xix. 7, 8. Matth. iv. 2.] the Law of God there; and afterwards by the Prophet Elijah in his Way to Mount Horeb, while he was flying from the Persecution of Jezabel; and lastly by our Saviour, who after his Baptism retired into the Wilderness, and there continued forty Days and forty Nights without eating or drinking. The Apostles in Imitation of them instituted the Fast of Lent, with a Design of honouring principally our Saviour's Fast[1]. We do not see the particular Institution of it in the Scripture, but herein we follow Saint Austin's Rule[2], who declares, that whatever we see generally established in the Church, without perceiving the Institution of it in any Council, should be received as a Matter established by the Apostles.

Now we believe Lent to have been settled in the Church ever since the first Ages of it. Saint Ignatius in his Epistle to the Philippians, Tertullian in his Book of Fasting, the Constitutions attributed to the Apostles, Saint Irenæus cited in Eusebius, l. v. c. 24. of his Ecclesiastical History, the Councils of Nice, Laodicæa, Agde, &c. The Fathers Leo, Saint Basil, Ambrose, and others, speak of Lent as an ancient Establishment in the Church. It is true the Way of observing it has not been always uniform, nor of strict Obligation; People have varied as to the Number of Days they fasted, and the Time of beginning it; but these very Differences prove the Antiquity and Universality of the Thing. In such Observances as relate purely to Discipline, there has been always great Liberty used in the Church, and the Manner of keeping them has been various. The Feast of the Passover, or the Resurrection of our Saviour, has always been the Term or End of Lent; but the Beginning of it has been sometimes sooner, and sometimes later. There has been a Diversity even as to the Quality of the Food People eat, and the Hour of eating. We do not enlarge upon this Matter, which does not properly relate to our Subject; it comes within the Design of this Dictionary, so far only as concerns the Institution of it.

Lentisk

LENTISK, or Mastick-tree; in Latin, Schinus, and in Greek, Schinos; a sort of Tree, the Leaves whereof are always green, the Bark reddish, gummy, and pliable. It produces a kind of Grape; and besides this, it shoots out little Hulls bent like the Shell of a Pea, in these Hulls there is a certain Liquor, which is very clear, and in Process of Time turns to Insects, much such as those which proceed from the little Bladders visible upon Elms and Turpentine-Trees. Mastick is taken from the Lentisk-Tree, by making Incisions in the Bark of it. There is a great deal of it in the Islands of Chio and Candia, in Egypt, and the Indies.

There is Mention made in Daniel of the Lentisk-Tree[1]; one of the Elders, who accused Susanna, said that he saw her talking with a young Man under a Lentisk-Tree, sub Schino. Daniel alluding to the Sound of Schinus, answers him: The Angel of the Lord will cut thee in two, Schisei se Meson. From this Allusion some have imagined, that the Story of Susanna could have been written in no other Language but Greek, and consequently that Daniel was not the Author of it. This is the Objection raised against it by Julius Africanus, and Saint Jerom[2], and several of the Moderns have renewed it. But in Answer to this it is said, that perhaps the Greek Translator changed the Hebrew Name of the Tree, and substituted Schinos in the Room of it, which furnished him with this Allusion; or that there really was an Allusion between the Hebrew Name of the Tree, and the Punishment threatned by Daniel; but as the Original is not now extant, it would be rash to say what this Term was, as it would be likewise to say positively, that there never was any such Original, because it is not now in Being.

Lentulus

LENTULUS. There has been a Letter often printed from Lentulus, the supposed Proconsul of Judæa, to the Roman Senate[1]. You have here the Translation of it. " There has a Man appeared here, who is " still living, named Jesus Christ, whose " Power is extraordinary. He has the Title given him of the great Prophet; his " Disciples call him the Son of God. He " raises the Dead, and heals all Sorts of Diseases. He is a tall, well proportioned " Man; there is an Air of Serenity in his " Countenance, which attracts at once the " Love and Reverence of those who see him. " His Hair is of the Colour of new Wine " from the Root to his Ears, and from " thence to the Shoulders it is curled and " falls down to the lowest Part of them. Upon the Forehead it parts in two, after the " Manner of the Nazarenes. His Forehead " is flat, and fair, his Face without any Defect, and adorned with a very graceful Vermilion: His Air is majestick and agreeable. His Nose and his Mouth are very well proportioned, and his Beard is thick and forked, of the Colour of his Hair; his Eyes are gray, and extremely lively; in his Reproofs he is terrible, but in his Exhortations and Instructions amiable and courteous: There is something wonderfully charming in his Face, with a Mixture of Gravity. He is never seen to laugh, but he has been observed to weep. He is very strait in Stature; his Hands are large and spreading, and his Arms very beautiful; he talks little, but with great Gravity, and is the handsomest Man in the World.

We look upon this Letter as a Piece that is not much to be regarded, but as it is printed in several Places, the Reader perhaps will not be out of Humour to find it here.

Leopard

LEOPARD, Pardus, a fierce and cruel Animal, the Skin whereof is spotted with a Diversity of Colours; it has small white Eyes, wide Jaws, sharp Teeth, round Ears, a large Tail, with five Claws upon its Fore-feet, and but four upon those behind. It is said to be extremely averse to Man. Its Name Leopard, shews that it has something of the Lion and the Pardus, or Male Panther; of which and a Lioness, or a Lion and a female Panther, it is said to be ingendered. The Word Leopard is not to be met with in Latin Authors till after the fourth Age. The Ancients read Pardus in Latin, and Pardalis or Panther in Greek: The Author of the Vulgate uses always Pardus, and never Leopardus.

Saint Ignatius, Bishop of Antioch, in his Epistle to the Romans, mentions the Word Leopard; which was a Reason with Bochart for affirming, that this Epistle was spurious, and not composed till the fourth Century; but Pearson and Vossius acknowledge this Epistle to be genuine, and reject the Remark made by those who maintain, that the Word Leopard was not known before Spartian, who makes Use of it in the Life of Geta.

The Eastern People call the Leopard sometimes Pars; the Arabians, Beber; the Turks, Jos; the Cathaians, Jem; the ancient Greeks, Jos, which the Latins sometimes translated Lynx, or Lupus-Cerviarius. The Persians, Turks, and Indians make Use of Leopards in hunting Antelopes and Hares[1]. Thamurath, King of the first Dynasty of the Persians, is said to have been the first who tamed this Creature, and had it taught to hunt Antelopes. Togrul-Ben-Arslan, Sultan of the Race of the Selgimides, brought up four Hundred of those Animals for Hunting, having all Gold Chains, and Scarlet Coverings.

[Numb. xxxii. 3. 36. Is. xv. 6.] It seems by the Scripture, that this Animal could not be rare in Palestine. We find a Town there called Beth-nemrah, or simply Nemrah, or Nemrin, a Leopard's House, or simply Leopard or Leopards. Isaiah describing the happy Reign of the Messiah says, that [Is. xi. 6. Jer. v. 6.] the Leopard shall lie down with the Kid, and the Calf, and the young Lion, and the Fatling together. Jeremiah says, that the Leopard lyes in Ambuscade near the Cities of the wicked; that all they who go out thence shall be torn in Pieces by this Animal. And Hosea, that the [Hosea xiii. 7.] Lord will be unto them as a Lion, and as a Leopard, lurking in the Way of the Assyrians, to devour all those who should pass by.

The Hebrew, Nemor, which signifies a Leopard, denotes, according to the Letter, something speckled with a Variety of Colours. Jeremiah[2] speaks of the Leopard's Spots. Can the Æthiopian change his Colour, or the Leopard his Spots? The Scripture often joins the Leopard and the Lion, as Animals of [Hab. i. 8.] equal Fierceness. Habakkuk says, that the Chaldean Horses go more swiftly than Leopards. The Spouse in the Canticles speaks of [Cant. iv. 8.] the Mountains of the Leopards, that is to say, of Mountains stocked with wild Beasts; such as Libanus, Shenir, and Mount Hermon. Brocard says, that the Mountain called by the Name of Leopards is two Leagues from Tripoli Northwards, and one League from Libanus. I can scarce believe that Solomon in the Canticles had this particular Mountain in View. See Bochart concerning the Leopard in his de animalib. Sacr. l. iii. c. 7. p. 785.

Leper

LEPER. The Law excluded Lepers from the Conversation of Mankind. It banished them into the Countrey, and Places uninhabited: [Lev. xiii. 45, 46.] Many Persons attacked with this Disease often got together, and composed a kind of Society. We see Examples of it in the four Lepers who were without the City of [2 Kings vii. 3, 8. Luke xvii. 12.] Samaria, while Ben-hadad King of Syria besieged it; and in the ten Lepers who came to Jesus Christ, and desired to be healed by him. This Particular was observed so punctually, that even the Kings themselves were put out of their Palace, shut out of Society, and deprived of the Government, whenever this Disease laid hold of them; as in the Instance of Uzziah, or Azariah, King of Judah, who was afflicted with this Malady, for attempting [2 Kings xv. 5, 2 Chr. xxvi. 27. Lev. xiv. 1, 2, 3, 4 &c.] to offer Incense in the Temple. When a Leper was cured he appeared at the City Gate, and the Priest examined whether he was truly healed or not. After this he went to the Temple, took two pure Birds, made a Whisp with a Branch of Cedar,and another of Hyssop, tied together with a Scarlet Ribbon made of Wool; an earthen Vessel was filled with Water, and one of these Birds fastened alive to the Wisp which we have mentioned. The Leper who was cured killed the other Bird, and let the Blood of it run into the Vessel filled with Water. After this the Priest took the Wisp with the live Bird, dipped both in the Water tinged with the Blood of one of the Birds, and sprinkled the Leper with it. After this the live Bird was let loose, and the Person healed and purified in this Manner, was again admitted to the Society of the healthy, and to the Use of Things sacred.

THE PURIFICATION OF A LEPER.Levit. XIV. 4.

THE LEPER SHEWING HIMSELF TO THE PRIEST THAT HE MIGHT BE EXAMIN'D WHETHER

Lepers were formerly very frequent in Europe. Some are of Opinion, that the Commerce which People carried on with the the Jews, who abounded in this Quarter of the World, contributed to the spreading Leprosies. Others maintain, that they proceeded from the frequent Voyages which were made to Palestine in the Time of the Croisades. These Lepers were called Ladres in French, and abundance of Lazarettoes were built for them, consecrated to Saint Ladre, or Lazarus, Brother to Mary and Martha, or to Saint Job. Matthew Paris says, there were nine Thousand Hospitals in Europe for these People. They were separated from the Conversation of others, and obliged to keep close in their Lazarettoes; they had Marks fixed upon them whereby they might be known. They generally carried Clappers about them, that they might be distinguished and avoided.

For these last two hundred Years Leprosies have almost entirely ceased in Europe, at least this Disease has changed its Name; and as it was before thought incurable, People have found out Remedies for it. The ablest Physicians have believed, that it differed only in Name from the venereal Disease. M. Tournefort, who saw several Lepers in his Voyage to the Levant, makes no Doubt of what we have just now said. There are some incurable, because their Distemper is inveterate, and has corrupted the whole Mass of Blood and Humours; but there are others capable of being healed, by treating them in the same Manner as they do those who have the Pox. Many are of Opinion, that Job's Disease was a Leprosy, but in a Degree of Malignity which rendered it incurable, and so produced a Complication of other Diseases with it.

Manetho the Egyptian[1], Lysimachus, Molon, Appion the Grammarian, Tacitus, and Justin, affirm seriously, that the Jews left Egypt on the Score of the Leprosy. Each of these Historians relates the Matter after his own Manner, and adds some Circumstances to it of his own framing: But they all agree in saying, that the Hebrews, who departed out of Egypt, were attacked with a Leprosy. Tacitus's Account of the Matter is as follows. " Several Authors agree, " that the Distemper of the Leprosy having " spread itself very much in Egypt, King " Bocchoris consulted the Oracle of Ammon, " to learn a Remedy for this Indisposition. " The Oracle told him, that he must purge " the Kingdom of this sort of People, and " remove them out of the Countrey as " hateful to the Gods. Bocchoris thereupon gathered all those together who had " this Disease upon them, and ordered " them to be conducted into a vast Wilderness, there to perish with Want. These " unhappy Wretches being reduced to this " Condition, and not knowing what to " do, were continually weeping and bemoaning themselves; but Moses who was " more resolute and considerate than they, " told them that it was to no Purpose to " implore Assistance from either Gods or " Men, because they were detestable to " one and the other; but if they would " have Confidence in him, and follow him, " as a Guide sent from Heaven, they might " under his Conduct come into a Place of " Rest; they followed him therefore at all " Hazards. And as they were extremely " incommoded with Thirst, and expected " nothing but Death, Moses perceived a " Company of wild Asses, which had just " been feeding, he followed them, and having met them in a Place covered with " green Grass, he conjectured that underneath it there might be a Spring of Water; he ordered them to dig, and found " enough to satisfy the Thirst of all the " Multitude which followed him.

" After seven Days March they came " into Judæa, and made themselves Masters of it. They observed Rest upon the " seventh Day, as the End of their Journey and Calamities. They honoured an " Ass, as that which had saved their Lives " by shewing them the Spring of Water. " They preserved a great Aversion to " Hog's Flesh, in Memory of the Leprosy " with which they had been afflicted, and " to which this Animal is said to be very " subject."

There are almost as many Mistakes as Words in this Recital of Tacitus: Nevertheless other Authors, who have discoursed of the Original of the Jews, speak of it in a still more wretched Manner. The Leprosy wherewith they are said to have been attacked, is what has engaged us here to take Notice of it. But if they had been all Lepers, how came they to have so great an Aversion to those who had this Disease upon them? The Reader may see Josephus against Appion.

Leprosy

LEPROSY. Moses [Lev. xiii. xiv.] mentions three Sorts of Leprosies, in Men, Houses, and Cloaths[1]. A Leprosy in Men, is a Disease which affects the Skin, and sometimes increases in such a Manner, as to produce Scurf, Scabs, and violent Itchings, and corrupts the whole Mass of Blood. At other Times it is only a Deformity, and nothing more, as Hipponetus informs us[2], and as the Fathers call it[3], where they are speaking of the Lepers in the Gospel cured by Jesus Christ. The Jews looked upon a Leprosy as a Disease sent from God, and Moses prescribes no natural Remedy for the Cure of it. He requires no more, than that the diseased Person should shew himself to the Priest, and that the Priest should judge of the Quality of his Leprosy; and if it appeared to be a real Leprosy, capable of being communicated to others, he separated the Leper from the Company of Mankind. He appoints certain Sacrifices and particular Ceremonies for the Purification of a Leper, and for the restoring him to civil Society, the Participation of Things holy, and the Conversation of other Men.

The different Marks which Moses gives for the better distinguishing a Leprosy, are Signs of the Increase of this Disease. An outward Swelling, a Pimple, a white Spot, bright, and somewhat reddish, created just Suspicions of a Man's being attacked with it. When a bright Spot, something reddish or white appeared, and the Hair of that Place was of a pale Red, and the Place itself something deeper than the rest of the Skin; this was a certain Mark of a Leprosy. They who have treated of this Disease, have made the same Remarks, but have distinguished a growing Leprosy, from one already formed and become inveterate. A growing Leprosy may be healed, but an inveterate one is incurable. Travellers who have seen Lepers in the East say, that this Disease attacks principally the Feet. Prosper Alpinus says[4], that it is very common in Egypt. Maundrell[5], who had seen Lepers in Palestine says, that their Feet are swelled like those of Elephants, or Horses Feet eaten up with the Farcy. M. Tournefort, who had observed several in his Travels, believes a Leprosy to be nothing else but an inveterate Pox; and that the Generality recovered, if they were helped in Time.

The common Marks whereby Physicians tell us that an inveterate Leprosy may be discerned are these. It makes the Voice hoarse, like that of a Dog who has been barking a long Time, and the Voice comes through the Nose rather than the Mouth. The diseased Person's Pulse is small and heavy, slow and disordered. His Blood abounds with white and bright Corpuscles, like Millet Seeds. It is all a scurfy Serum, without any of that Mixture which is natural to it; so that the Salt which any one puts into it cannot melt. It is so dry, that the Vinegar which is mixed with it bubbles up; it is so strongly knit together by imperceptible Threads, that calcinated Lead thrown into it will swim easily upon the Surface of it. The Urine of a Leper is undigested, settled, Ash-coloured and thick; the Sediment of it like Meal mixed with Bran. His Face is like a Coal half extinguished, shining, unctuous, bloated, thick set with very hard Pimples, with small Kernels round about the Bottom of them: His Eyes are red and inflamed, and sparkle like those of a Cat, they come forward out of his Head, but cannot be moved either to the right or left. His Ears are swelled and red, eaten up with Ulcers about the Root of them, and encompassed with small Kernels. His Nose sinks, because the Cartilage rots. His Nostrils are open, and the Passages stopped with some Ulcers at the Bottom. His Tongue is dry, black, swelled, ulcerated, shortened, divided by Ridges, and beset with little white Pimples. The Skin of it is uneven, hard and insensible; whether a Hole be made in it, or it is cut, instead of Blood, nothing but a putrified Liquor issues out of it.

The Nature and Causes of a Leprosy have been much argued upon. The Generality are of Opinion, that the Cause of it is inward, in the Blood and Humours; and that it does not appear outwardly, till it has corrupted every Thing within. Others are of Opinion that it is owing to some outward Cause. I think it necessary to distinguish two Sorts of Leprosies, one proceeding from some inward Corruption, the other got by outward Communication with a Leper. Corruption of the Blood may be in different Respects, the Cause, and Effect of a Leprosy. It is the Cause of it, when the Blood being inwardly corrupted, either by bad Diet, or some other Cause, produces such external Effects as are observable in Leprosies. Corruption of the Blood is the Effect of this Disease when it is caught by touching any Person, who is infected with it, or any Thing belonging to him; for a Leprosy is very easily communicipated; for which Reason Moses has taken so much Precaution, to prevent Lepers from having any Communication with Persons in good Health. And his Care extended so far, as even to dead Bodies thus infected, directing that they should not be buried with others.

[2 Chr. xxvi. 23.] We have endeavoured, in a Dissertation written purposely on this Subject, and printed before our Comment on Leviticus, to shew that Leprosies and other Diseases which have any Relation to it, are caused by an infinite Number of small imperceptible Worms, which creep in between the Skin and Flesh, and gnaw the Epidermis and Cuticula, and afterwards the Extremity of the Nerves and Flesh, and there produce at least all the Effects which are to be observed in the Beginning, Progress, and End of a Leprosy. We are of Opinion likewise, that the Venereal Disease is a kind of Leprosy, which the Ancients were but too well acquainted with, though they have not given it the same Name, nor ascribed the same Original to it, as we have to the French Disease. The Reader may see our Remarks upon Job's Distemper.

The Leprosy of Houses, mentioned in Leviticus xiv. 34, and following Verses, must have been known to the Israelites, who had lived in Egypt, and must have been very common in the Land of Canaan, whither they were going, since Moses says to them: When ye come into the Land of Canaan which I give you for a Possession, if there be an House infected with a Leprosy, he to whom the House belongs, shall give Notice of it to the Priest, who shall go thither. If he sees as it were little Holes in the Wall, and Places disfigured with pale or reddish Spots, which in Sight are lower than the Wall, he shall go out of the House, and direct it to be shut up for seven Days. At the End of this Time, if he finds that the Leprosy is increased, he shall command the Stones infected with the Leprosy to be taken away, and thrown without the City into some unclean Place. New Stones shall be put in the Room of those which were plucked out, and the Wall shall be again rough -cast. If the Leprosy does not return, the House shall be thought clean; but if it returns, it is then an inveterate Leprosy; the House shall be declared unclean, and immediately be demolished: All the Wood, Stone, Mortar, and Dust shall be cast out of the City into an unclean Place.

The Rabbins and some others[6] believed, that this Leprosy of Houses was not natural, but that it was a Punishment inflicted by God upon wicked Israelites. But we believe this kind of Leprosy to be caused by Worms which gnaw the Stones[7]: These Worms are black, about two Lines in [55] Length, and three Quarters of a Line broad, inclosed in a grayish Shell, with a very large Head, ten very black and very round Eyes, four kind of Jaws disposed like a Cross, which they are continually stirring, and open and shut like a Pair of Compasses with four Branches. The Mortar is eaten by an infinite Number of little Worms, which are somewhat black, about the Size of Mites in a Cheese, and like Mites, have four pretty long Feet on each Side.

The Leprosy in Clothes is likewise taken Notice of in Moses, as a Thing common in his Time. He speaks of it after this Manner: If any greenish or red Spots be observed upon any Woollen or Linnen Stuffs, or upon any Thing made of Skin, they shall be carried to the Priest, who shall shut them up for seven Days; and if at the End of this Time he takes Notice that these Spots increase, and spread, he shall burn them, as infected with a real Leprosy. If the Priest sees that these Spots are not increased, he shall command the Clothes to be washed; and in Case he afterwards observes nothing extraordinary in them, he shall declare them to be clean. If the greenish or red Spots still remain, he shall order the Garments so spotted to be burnt, as being unclean. If they spread and are increased, he shall likewise order the Garment to be burnt; lastly, if the Place suspected of a Leprosy seem to be in Colour like a singed Garment, and deeper than the rest; this Part of the Garment shall be pulled out, and the rest shall be preserved.

In Order to explain the Nature and Causes of this Leprosy in Clothes, we shall follow the same Hypothesis which we proposed concerning the Leprosy of Men and Houses; we are of Opinion, and Experience is a Confirmation of it, that Wool ill scowered, Stuffs kept too long, and some particular Tapistries in Auvergne, are subject to Worms and Moths which eat them. It is very credible, that the Leprosy in Clothes and Skins mentioned by Moses, was caused by this Sort of Vermin. In the hot Countries, and in Times when Arts and Manufactures were not carried to that Height of Perfection wherein we now see them, Stuffs and Works wrought in Wool were probably more exposed to Vermin, than they are in our Climates which are cooler; and in these Times, when Arts have been brought to so much Perfection by Experience and Industry.

T. 400. We do not know who was the first Inventor of Letters and Writing. All agree that it is an admirable and divine Art[1]. To paint Speech, and speak to the Eyes, and by tracing out Characters in different Forms to give Colour and Body to Thoughts.

Some have been of Opinion, that they always were in Use, and that God when he inspired Man with Reason and the Use of Speech, communicated to him likewise the Secret of expressing his Thoughts in Writing. [Joseph. Antiq.] We know what Josephus says of certain Columns erected before the Deluge by the Sons of Seth, upon which they had written their astronomical Observations and Inventions. Adam and Enoch by some have been reputed Authors of certain Books, they supposed consequently that they had the Use of Writing. The Work attributed by the Sabians to Adam is still in Being at this Day: The Character of it is said to be very extraordinary. As to that of Enoch, we have only some Fragments of it, which are of a Greek Translation, or rather taken from the Original itself: For no one believes that it was ever written in any other Language, or that it is any other than the Work of some Impostor.

Others maintain, that the Use of Letters is much more modern: Some give the Honour of them to Abraham; others to Moses, others to the Phœnicians, others to Saturn, and others again to the Egyptians. Others argue more rationally, and divide the Honour of this Invention among several Persons, and acknowledge that it began among the Eastern People, and much later among those in the West; that some invented, and others only perfected this Invention: That the Use of Letters in the Beginning was uncommon and imperfect, that the Figure of them was irregular and long a forming, that afterwards they were perfected, and the Use of them rendered more easy and common.

Crinitus says, that Moses invented the Hebrew Letters; Abraham the Syriac and Chaldee; the Phœnicians theirs, which they communicated to the Greeks, who carried them into Italy; Nicostratus those of the Latins, Isis the Egyptian, Ulphila those of the Goths.

But all this is probably affirmed at Random by this Author; for it is certain beyond Question, that the Hebrew and Phœnician Letters were anciently the same, or differed very little from one another. The Greek and Latin Letters are no new Invention; the Greek are taken from the Phœnician, and the Latin from the Greek. The Writing made Use of by Ulphila is taken from the Greek or Latin.

As to the Egyptian Writing, we are assured that in the Beginning it was nothing but Hieroglyphicks, or Figures of Animals, and other Things engraven upon Stone, or painted upon Wood, by the Help whereof the Egyptians preserved the Memory of great Events. This Way of Writing is perhaps the most ancient in the World. We still see many Monuments of it upon the Obelisks and Marbles which come from Egypt. Marsham[2] is of Opinion, that this Way of Writing was invented by the second King of Memphis, who is no other than Thautk, whom the Greeks call the first Mercury; another Thauth, or second Mercury, put what the first had written in Hieroglyphick Letters into common Characters. All which was performed in Times of the most remote Antiquity, if it be true that Menes the first King of Memphis, was no other than Ham the Son of Noah.

Lucan affirms, that the Phœnicians invented the common Letters at a Time when the Egyptians were not as yet acquainted with the Use of Paper, and knew nothing of the Art of Writing in Hieroglyphical Characters.

Phœnices primi, famæ si creditur, ausi Mansuram rudibus vocem signare figuris. Nondum flumineas Memphis contexere biblos Noverat, & laxis tantum volucresque feræque Sculptaque servabant magicas animalia linguas.

It was probably therefore in Imitation of the Phœnicians, that the Egyptians began to use Letters in their Writing. We cannot be certain that the Egyptians borrowed them from the Phœnicians or Canaanites their Neighbours; but two Things we know certainly, first that there was a great Resemblance in the ancient Characters of these two People [1]; and secondly, that Moses, who was instructed in all the Learning of the Egyptians, and brought up from his Youth in their Countrey, wrote his Books and Laws in Phœnician Characters. The old Egyptian Letters are at present entirely unknown to us, though there are many Monuments of them remaining. These People lost the Use of their Writing under the Dominion of the Greeks, and the Coptic or modern Egyptian Character is formed from the Greek.

As to the Phœnicians, they spread the Use of their Letters throughout all their Colonies. Cadmus carried them into Greece, and the Greeks perfected them, and added some to them. They communicated them to the Latins, and after the Conquests of Alexander procured them to be received even in Egypt, and over all Syria: So that the Phœnician Writing, which is so ancient, and the Parent of so many others, would at this Day be entirely forgotten, was it not for the Samaritans, who have preserved the Pentateuch of Moses, written in the old Canaanite or Hebrew Character, by the Help whereof Medals, and the small Remains of Phœnician Monuments, have been deciphered.

What I have said of the old Characters of the Samaritan Pentateuch, is not assented to by all the World. Some learned Men, such as Postellus, Buxtorf the Son, and certain Talmudist Doctors maintain, that the square Hebrew Character, which the Jews use at this Day, is the very same with that made Use of by Moses. Others in greater Number, such as Origen, Eusebius of Cesaræa, Saint Jerom, Bede, Genebrard, Bellarmin, many of the Rabbins, and the most learned of the Criticks pretend, that the Jews laid aside their old Characters at their Return from the Captivity of Babylon, and substituted the Chaldee Letters in their Room, which are those used at this Day by them; while the Samaritans preserved their Pentateuch written in old Hebrew, or Phœnician Characters. Lastly, some other Men of Learning, such as Rabbi Azarias, Abdias de Bartenora, Postellus, Buxtorf, Conringhius, and Father Sghambati, distinguished two Sorts of Characters among the old Hebrews, civil and sacred. The civil is that of the Samaritans, the sacred that of the Jews; but this Distinction of two Sorts of Letters is chimerical, and there can be no Proof produced for it.

It is generally said, that the Hebrews have no Vowels, and that to supply the Want of them, they invented the Vowel Points, sometimes made Use of by them in their Books. But it is certain that they have Vowels as well as other People, tho' they do not always express them in their Writing; and that the Sound, Powers, and Quantity of these Vowels are not always the same, as it happens likewise in other Languages. Aleph, Vau, Jod and Hain are Vowels; He is nothing but an Aspiration. The Vowel Points are modern, and the Invention of the Masorets. They were not invented till the Middle of the ninth Age, or about the Beginning of the tenth. The Honour of them is ascribed principally to the Rabbins Asher and Nephtali, who lived at that Time[3]. The Vowel Points are ten in Number, and express the five Vowels according to all their different Changes and Pronunciations. The Reader may see F. Morinus's Exercitations, Walton's Prolegomena, and many other Works which have been written on this Matter.

The Hebrews have certain Acrostick Verses, which begin with Letters ranged in alphabetical Order: They may be called likewise alphabetical, as if they had been composed with a Design of teaching Children their Alphabet, and the Order of their Letters with Respect to one another. The most considerable Work of this Kind is the cxix Psalm, which contains two and twenty Stanzas of eight Verses, all Acrosticks; so that the eight first begin with Aleph, the next eight with Beth, and so on. Other Psalms, as the twenty fifth and thirty third, have but two and twenty Verses, beginning with the two and twenty Letters of the Alphabet. Others, as the Hundred and eleventh, and the Hundred and twelfth, have one half of the Verse only beginning with one Letter, and the other half with another. Thus in Blessed is the Man who feareth the Lord, who delighteth greatly in his Commandments. The first half of the Verse begins with Aleph, and the second with Beth. The Lamentations of Jeremiah are likewise in Acrostick Verse, as well as the xxxi Ch. of Proverbs[4], beginning at the eighth Verse, and so on to the End.

The Jews make Use of their Characters not only for Writing, but likewise for numbring in like Manner as the Greeks, who in their arithmetical Supputations fix a numerical Value on the Letters of their Alphabet. But I do not believe the ancient Hebrews did so, nor that the Letters were among them Numerical. I see no Evidence for this in Scripture. The sacred Authors always write the Numbers intire and without Abbreviation. I know some learned Men have attempted to rectify Dates, or supply Years, upon a Supposition that the Letters served for Cyphers in the Text of Scripture; but it was incumbent on them first, to prove that the ancient Hebrews, as the present Jews now do, observed the same Custom.

Saint John in the Revelations speaks of [Rev. xiii. 17, 18, &c.] the Mark of the Beast, and the Cypher of his Name, which makes the Sum of six hundred sixty six. Many have thought, that the Cypher was to be sought for in the Hebrew Language, and upon this Supposition some have attempted to explain it. But it is much more credible, that as Saint John wrote in Greek, he would have set down the Numerical Value of the Greek Letters, comprizing his Name whom he points out by that of Beast; or that intending to describe some Roman Emperor, who was to be a Persecutor of the Church, he designed that we should look for the Number 666, in the Numerical Letters which compose his Name and Qualities.

The cabalistical Doctors have refined much upon the Letters of the Hebrew Alphabet. Other Rabbins, though more serious than the Cabalists, have likewise found some Mystery in certain Letters of the Hebrew Text, some whereof are turned topsy turvy, others suspended, others closed; all which according to these Doctors is mysterious, and deserves particular Consideration; but whether this is done designedly or by Chance, we may affirm, that the Letters in themselves, taken separately from the Word which they compose, have no Sense, and include no Mystery; and if any have a Mind to refine upon the Order and Form of them, and discover some edifying Morality in them, or, if they please, Mystery, let them, provided they don't pretend to make Use of these Ideas or Reflexions as Proofs of any Thing. At most they can but serve for the Edification of simple People, or to confirm the Minds of those who are convinced already of the Truths which they shall find in these Combinations of Letters. Our Saviour in the Gospel says, That not one Jot or one Tittle of the Matth. v.

Law shall pass away till all be fulfilled:

Hieronym. But this is a proverbial Way of Speaking, that all whatsoever is written shall, without Exception, be accomplished. The same Thing may be said of these Words of Saint Jerom. Quæ minima putantur in lege Domini, plena sunt Sacramentis As to the Extravagancies of the Cabalists, I shall not amuse my self either with reporting them here, or refuting them; they are not worth the Trouble. See M. Basnage Hist. des Juifs. Tom. vi. l. ix. c. 8. and ch. 20, 21, and 23.

[Testam. xii. Patriarch.] Some of the Ancients have spoken of the Book of Heaven, legi in tabulis cæli, and the Letters which were there as it were ingraved, by the Help whereof they who understood it, discovered what was to come, and saw into Mysteries that were ineffable. Picus of Mirandula[5], who had studied the Cabalists very much, said, that as the Astrologers saw certain Images in Heaven, from whence they drew their Consequences, so the Jewish Masters have their Alphabet in Heaven, and maintain, that they find there the Elements and Characters of their Language. Agrippa[6] affirms the same Thing, and Gaffarel[7] adds the Authority of many celebrated Rabbins to their Testimony, such as Maimonides, Nachman, Aben -ezra, Kimchi, Abravanel.

Postellus is more positive, for he says he has made the Experiment. Perhaps, says he, I may pass for an Impostor, if I affirm, that I have read in the Heavens in Hebrew Characters, whereof Ezra left the Key, whatsoever there is in Nature; nevertheless God and his Son are my Witnesses that I do not lye; I will only add that I so read it implicitely only. Now I do not at all question but a prejudiced Person, whose Imagination is struck powerfully, may read what he pleases, and in what Characters he pleases in the Heavens and in the Stars. To support such a whimsical Opinion, these Doctors misapply the following Words of Scripture, Psalm xix. 1, 5. The Heavens declare the Glory of God, and the Firmament sheweth his handy Work: Their Sound is gone out into all Lands, &c. But it is to no Purpose to insist longer on this Matter. See Basnage Hist. des Juifs. T. vi. l. ix. c. 22. The Letter contrary to the Spirit. A Way of Speaking which is to be met with in Saint [Rom. ii. 27, 29. vii. 6. 2. Cor. iii. 6, 7.] Paul's Epistles, and very common in the Ecclesiastical Style. God hath made us Ministers of the new Testament, not by the Letter, but by the Spirit: For the Letter killeth, but the Spirit quickeneth. That is to say, the Law of Moses literally observed, is not capable of giving Life to the Soul, and justifying those before God who continue servilely addicted to the literal Observances of it. To obtain Righteousness we must join the Spirit with it, and Faith, Hope and Charity; or supply what is deficient in these literal Observances, with spiritual Actions of a more sublime, perfect and excellent Nature; for Example, bloody Sacrifices, with the Sacrifice of an humble and contrite Heart, with the Mortification of our Passions, with Death unto Sin and Vice, &c.

Levi

LEVI, the third Son of Jacob and Leah, [Gen. xxix. 34.] was born in Mesopotamia, in the Year of the World 2248, before J. C. 1752. before the Vulgar Æra 1756. After Sichem, the Son of Hamor had violated Dinah, Jacob's Daughter, and Sister by the same Mother to Levi and Simeon; these two Brethren fraudently engaged Sichem to receive Circumcision, and upon the third Day when the Pain was greatest, they entred the Town of [Gen. xxxiv. 25, 26.] Sichem, and slew all the Males, retook their Sister Dinah, and pillaged the Place[1]. This Action was very displeasing to their Father Jacob, who said to them; ye have troubled me and rendred me odious to the Canaanites; we are few in Number, they will fall upon me, and destroy me and my Family. Simeon and Levi replied, Should they have thus abused our Sister? After this Levi went down into Egypt with his Father, having already had three Sons[2] Gershom, Kohath, and Merari. When Jacob saw that he was near his End, he sent for his Sons with a Design [Gen. xlvi. 11.] of blessing them[3]; and said to Simeon and Levi: Ye are Brethren, and too much united to do Mischief; ye are the Instruments of an unjust War. God forbid that I should be a Partaker in their evil Designs, and that my Honour should be concerned in their Combinations; for in their Fury they killed a Man, and in their Resentment they pierced a Wall. Cursed be their Anger for it was fierce, and their Wrath for it was cruel. I will divide them in Jacob, and scatter them in Israel.

Accordingly Levi was scattered over all Israel, having no Share in the Division of the Land of Canaan; but only some Cities which were assigned him in the Portion of the other Tribes. Nevertheless he was not the worse provided for, since God having chosen the Tribe of Levi for the Service of his Temple, and Exercise of the Priesthood, he bestowed many great Privileges on it, which set it far above the other Tribes, both in Dignity, and with a Respect to the Advantages of Life; for all the Tithes, First-Fruits, and Offerings, which were presented at the Temple, and several Parts of all the Victims which were offered to the Lord, belonged to them.

The Testament of the twelve Patriarchs, an ancient, but Apocryphal Book informs us, that Levi was transported as far as the seventh Heaven, where he had many Revelations; among the rest, that the Priesthood should be settled in his Family, and that the Saviour of the World should be born of his Tribe, and that of Judah. It is in Reality the Opinion of many of the Ancients, that the blessed Virgin was of the two Tribes of Levi and Judah; of Judah by her Father, and of Levi by her Mother. This Book farther adds, that the Sons of Levi should crucify the Saviour of Mankind; that the Angel of the Lord ingaged Levi to massacre the Sichemites; that in a Vision which he had at Bethel, the Angel put the sacerdotal Robes on him, and anointed him Priest. After this they revealed to him the coming of the Messiah, the eternal Priest. When he was drawing towards his End, he declared to his Sons all the Evil which they should bring upon the Person of the Messiah; and the Calamities which would attend them, as a Punishment of their Sins. He foretold, that the Veil of the Temple should be rent, in Order to discover their Iniquities. He said that when he was eight and twenty Years of Age, he married a Woman whose Name was Milcah: She was the Mother of Gershom, Kohath and Merari, and of a Daughter named Jochabed, who was born to him in Egypt. Gershom was the Father of Libni and Shimei. The Sons of Kohath were Amram, Izhar, Hebron, and Uzziel. Merari begot Mahli and Mushi. Amram the Son of Kohath merried Jochabed his Aunt, who was born the same Day as he was. Jochabed was the Mother of Aaron, Moses and Miriam. He concluded with foretelling the Sin they should commit in putting to Death the Messiah, the Destruction of their Temple, and their Captivity. Levi, as this Book says, died in Egypt, at an Hundred and Thirty Seven Years of Age; and his Sons, at their Return into the Land of Canaan, buried him in the Cave of Hebron.

In the Year of

Leviathan

LEVIATHAN. This Word is often to be met with in the Scripture, and the Fathers understand it generally in a moral Sense of the Devil, who is the Enemy of Mankind, the Serpent. The Jews maintain, that upon the fifth Day of the Creation, God created [2 Esdras vi. 47, 48, 49, 50, 51.] two Animals; the one called Enoch, the other Leviathan. Enoch was placed upon the Earth in Order to live there, and God gave him the Grass of a Thousand Mountains to feed upon. Leviathan was left in the Water wherein he had been created, and will continue till the Day of Judgment, at which Time he will be killed, and served up at Table, as Part of an Entertainment provided for the Elect. The Word Leviathan, according to the Etymology of it, signifies a large Fish, or Sea Monster. Leviath may signify what is joined, fastened, or tied together; and Than, a great Fish; as if we [לויתן Leviathan.] should say, the great Fish covered with Scales, stuck close one upon another. The [Job xl. 20, 21. xli. 1, 2, &c. כלבית Chalbith.] Crocodile we know is very long and large, and has Scales so strong, and so thick, that the Darts of Huntsmen and the Fishermens Hook cannot penetrate them. In our Opinion therefore Leviathan signifies a Crocodile.

Job gives us an admirable Description of the Leviathan, in xl. and xli. Chapters of his Book, and therein says nothing but what may be very naturally explained of the Crocodile. Others interpret it of the Whale, or what the French call the Mulart, which is a very large Fish to be met with in the Mediterranean: Others by the Name of Leviathan, understand in general all large Fish and Sea Monsters. Many of the Ancients have interpreted it allegorically of the Devil. Bochart[1] shews at large, that it is the Crocodile. He proves it by a Place out of the Talmud, in the Treatise upon the Sabbath, where it is said, that the Calbit, or Sea Dog, is the Terror of the Leviathan: He pretends that this Calbit is the Fish called Ichneumon, which darts itself into the Crocodile's Mouth, gnaws its Intrails, and never goes any other Way out of its Belly, than through the Hole which it makes by gnawing so continually.

Job speaks of the Leviathan in the Manner following, Canst thou draw out Leviathan with an Hook, or his Tongue with a Cord which thou lettest down? Is the Crocodile one of those Fish which is to be caught with an Hook, and fastened by the Tongue, or strung through the Mouth and Gills, in Order to be carried up and down as one pleases? He does not ask this as if there were Danger in doing so, but as if it were a Thing very impossible, which no one could attempt without great Temerity. Herodotus[2] relates a Way of taking the Crocodile with an Hook; but this probably was not invented in the Time of Job. This Historian says, that it was their Way to throw a Piece of Hog's Flesh, together with a large strong Hook, into the Midst of the Nile. The Fishermen stood upon the Shore, where they made a young sucking Pig cry. Hereupon the Crocodile immediately came forward, and swallowed the Hog's Flesh with the Hook; the Fishermen immediately drew it on Shore, threw Mud into its Eyes, which are very small in Proportion to the rest of the Body, and then killed it.

Canst thou put a Hook through his Nose, or bore his Jaws through with a Thorn? As they did Beasts of Service, such as Camels and Buffles, which were guided in this Manner, and trained as they please. Is the Crocodile one of those gentle and tractable Animals? See Isai. xxxvii. 29. where he speaks of piercing in this Manner the Muzzles of Beasts of Burden. I will put my Hook in thy Nose, and my Bridle in thy Mouth. The Hebrew of Job may be otherwise interpreted: Wilt thou put Light into his Nostrils, or pierce his Jaw with a Thorn? As those small Fish which are carried to Market, strung together in this Manner. Shall the Companions make a Banquet of him? Shall they part him among the Merchants? Or as others will have it, Shall the Inchanters cut him up, and the Canaanites divide him in Pieces for Sale? Shall they charm him like a Serpent, and cause him to burst with their Inchantments?

Lay thine Hand upon him, remember the Battle, and talk no more; or according to the Hebrew, Lay thine Hand upon him and never think of the Battle: Behold, the Hope of him is in vain, shall not one be cast down even at the Sight of him? The Crocodile is a very dreadful Creature; the hardiest Warrior will not dare so much as to appear before him. They tell[3] of one Artemidorus, that lighting by Chance upon a Crocodile while he was sleeping on the Sands, he was so scared, that he instantly lost both his Understanding and Memory. Cnemon in Heliodorus[4] was in very great Disorder at the Sight of a Crocodile, which he had only a Glimpse of, and saw rather the Shadow than the Body of it. Job continues, None is so fierce that dare stir him up. It would be very great Rashness to attempt it. None but the Tentyrians are capable of being so hardy; the Inhabitants of Tentyrus destroyed Crocodiles wherever they could find them.

But we have here a more particular Description of this Animal. Who can discover the Face of his Garment, or who can come to him with his double Bridle? The Crocodile sleeps in the Day Time on the Sand, with his Mouth open; but notwithstanding his being asleep, who will dare so much as to approach him? His Body is like Shields of cast Brass: It is covered with Scales press'd close one upon another. The Crocodile is one of the largest River Fish we know of; there have been some seen five and twenty or thirty Foot in Length: The Skin of its Back is so hard, that there is no piercing it with Iron. Under the Belly it is tender, and this is the only Place wherein it is to be wounded. Who shall open the Entrance of his Jaws? Terror dwells about his Teeth. The Head of this Animal is oblong, and the Mouth of it extremely large. It has six and thirty very solid, sharp Teeth belonging to its upper Jaw, and as many to the lower. His Teeth fall in one with another like the Teeth of a Saw. When he opens his Mouth, the Opening is so wide, that he could swallow a Man, or even an Heifer intire. His Head is oblong, and slit almost as far as his Ears. There have been some seen in the Indies of such a Size, that a Man of tall Stature might stand upright between his Jaws. They are said to stir none but the upper Jaw, whereas other Animals move the lower only. But this is not confirmed by any late Observations.

By his Weesings a Light doth shine, and his Eyes are like the Eyelids of the Morning. But of his Mouth go burning Lamps, and Sparks of Fire leap out. Out of his Nostrils goeth Smoak, as out of a seething Pot or Cauldron: His Breath kindleth Coals, and a Flame goeth out of his Mouth. This poetical Description admirably expresses the Vivacity of the Crocodile's Eyes, when he springs out of the Water, and the Rapidity wherewith he pursues his Prey, and the Rapaciousness with which he devours it. Strength is in his Neck, and Famine walketh before him. The Crocodile is in Shape almost like a Lizard. His Strength consists principally in his Neck and Head. He ravages every Thing in the Places where he is found; he kills Animals of all Kinds, and lays waste the Fields; which cannot be expressed better than by saying, that Famine walketh before him.

The Flakes of his Flesh are joined together, they are firm in themselves, they cannot be moved. His Body is all Nerve and Muscle, it is in some Sort impenetrable and invulnerable. His Heart is as firm as a Stone, yea as hard as a Piece of the nether Millstone. These Expressions describe in a lively Manner the Strength, Courage, and Intrepidity of the Crocodile. Nothing frightens him. If any one attacks him, neither Swords, Darts, nor Breast-plates can stand before him. Travellers agree, that the Crocodile's Skin is Proof against Swords, Darts, Arrows, and Fire-arms; if any would pierce him, he must take him under the Belly. He esteemeth Iron as Straw, and Brass as rotten Wood. The Arrows cannot make him flee; Slingers are turned with him into Stubble.

He maketh the Deep to boil like a Pot: He maketh the Sea like a Pot of Ointment.

In the Oriental Style, great Rivers and Lakes are sometimes called Seas. There are Crocodiles not only in the Nile, but in Lakes too. Those of the Lake Mœris were adored in Egypt; they carefully prepared Provision for them to eat, they put rich Pendants in their Ears, and costly Bracelets on their Feet. When the Crocodile stirs himself with Impetuosity, or casts up Water through his Mouth, he makes the Lake or River he is in, boyl like a Cauldron of boiling Oil; the Odour which he leaves behind him is like that of Musk. This is attested by several Authors of good Repute[5]. He scatters this agreeable Scent not only while he is alive, but his Flesh even after his Death retains it: His Eggs likewise smell like Musk; and the like Odour, when they are wounded, issues from their Wound and Entrails.

[Ezek. xxxii. 12.] He beholdeth all high Things, he is a King over all the Children of Pride; which some explain by saying, that the Crocodile is the King of other Fish; but it may be better understood of the Egyptians, who are often called in Scripture Children of Pride, or proud. The Crocodile was their God, their King; they paid divine Honours to him. In the Hebrew Style by the Word King is often [Job xxvi.] meant the God of any Nation; every one knows, that the Egyptians worshipped the Crocodile, and that the Crocodile was the Emblem or Figure of Egypt.

In the third Chapter and eighth Verse he says; Let them curse it that curse the Day, who are ready to raise up a Leviathan. He means, in our Opinion, the Atlantes, and the People of Upper Egypt, who curse the Sun[6], because they are burnt with the excessive Heat of it; and who are so daring, as to wake the Crocodile in Order to attack, kill and eat it[7]. Ezekiel describes the King of Egypt by the Name of great Than, or great Dragon; great Fish. Isaiah[8] threatens Leviathan the piercing Serpent with Death; that is the King of Babylon; and Leviathan, the crooked Serpent, that is the King of Egypt. The Crocodile was esteemed the King of Fresh-Water Fish; and the Hebrews call all Fish Serpents, or Reptils. The [Ps. lxxiii. 14.] Royal Prophet says, that the Lord created the Leviathan to play in the Waters. It is therefore an Animal that liveth in the Water.

Levir

LEVIR, LEVIRATE. We make Use of this Term, as other Authors have done before us, who have written on the Law and Customs of the Jews, to denote particularly the Law of Moses, which obliges one Brother to marry the Widow of another, who died without Children, and to raise up Seed to him. From Levir, which signifies in Latin the Husband's Brother, the Brother-in-Law; the Word Levirate has been formed by some, to express the Law whereof we have been speaking. Moses says as follows on this Subject: If [Ruth iv. 1, 2, 3.] Brethren dwell together, and one of them die and have no Child, the Wife of the dead shall not marry without unto a Stranger: Her Husband's Brother shall go in unto her, and take her to him to Wife, and perform the Duty of an Husband's Brother unto her; and it shall be, that the First-born which she beareth, shall succeed in the Name of his Brother which is dead, that his Name be not put out of Israel. And if the Man like not to take his Brother's Wife, then let his Brother's Wife go up to the Gate unto the Elders, and say, My Husband's Brother refuseth to raise up unto his Brother a Name in Israel, he will not perform the Duty of my Husband's Brother. Then the Elders of his City shall call him and speak unto him, and if he stand to it, and say, I like not to take her, then shall his Brother's Wife come unto him in the Presence of the Elders, and loose his Shoe from off his Foot, and spit in his Face, and shall answer and say, So shall it be done unto that Man that will not build up his Brother's House; and his Name shall be called in Israel the House of him that hath his Shoe loosed.

This Law is an Exception to that which condemns Marriages between Brothers and Sisters, and between Brother's-in-Law and Sister's-in-Law. This Law seems to have been in Use among the Hebrews and Canaanites, before the Time of Moses, since Judah gives his first born Er, and Onan his second Son, successively to Tamar, and obliges himself to give her likewise Selah his third Son.

The Terms made Use of by Moses, If two Brothers dwell together, &c. intimate, that the first Intention of the Law respects only Brethren who live together in their Father's House, or perhaps in the same Place; but Custom extended it even to more remote Relations, who dwelt in Judæa, and in the Division of their Brother's Tribe, so that their Estates and Inheritances lay in the same Place; for the Law had two Objects, first to preserve the Name of the deceased in Israel, by the Means of such Children as should be born of his Wife, and go by his Name; and secondly, to continue Inheritances in the same Tribe, and Family.

The Example of Ruth, who married Boaz her Husband's Relation, is an Evidence of the Practice of the Israelites in the Times of the Judges. Boaz was neither the Father nor nearest Relation to Elimelech, Father-into Law Ruth, the Wife of Mahlon, and yet he married her upon his Refusal, who was the nearest Relation. The Rabbins[1] of their own Accord have produced many Exceptions and Limitations to this Law. They believe, that the Obligation on the Brother of marrying his Sister-in-Law, regards only Brothers born of the same Father and Mother. Besides, it has a Respect only to the eldest Brother of the deceased, and farther supposes that he was not married: For if he were married, he might at his own Choice, either take or leave his Brother's Widow. If the deceased Brother had left a natural or adoptive Son or Daughter, a Grandson or Grand-daughter, the Brother was under no Obligation to marry his Widow. If the dead Person left many Wives[2], the Brother could marry but one of them: If the deceased had many Brothers, the eldest alone had a Right to all his Estate, and enjoyed the Dowry which his Wife had brought him.

They add, that the Marriage of the Widow with her Brother-in-Law was performed without Solemnity; because the Widow of the Brother who died without Children, passed for the Brother-in-Law's Wife, by Virtue of the Law, without there being any Occasion for more Ceremony. Notwithstanding Custom required that this should be done in the Presence of two Witnesses, and that the Brother should give a Piece of Money to the Widow. The Nuptial Blessing was farther added, and a Writing given to secure the Wive's Dower. There are some who believe, that this Law was not observed [Fagius in Deut. xxv.] after the Babylonish Captivity, because since that Time there has been[3] no more any Distinction of the Inheritances of the Tribes. The present Jews[4] do not practice this Law, or at least very rarely, particularly among the Germans and Italians, they chuse rather to set their Women at Liberty, that they may marry again where they please.

F. van Bleyswyck fecit. THE HABIT OF THE LEVITES

But in Leo of Modena's Account of the Matter, it is done after the following Manner. “Three Rabbins and two other Witnesses go the Evening before, and choose a Place where the Ceremony may be performed. The next Day when they come from Morning Prayers, they all follow the Rabbins and Witnesses, who as soon as they come to the appointed Place, sit down, and order the Widow and her Brother-in-Law to appear before them, who declare that they there present themselves, in Order to be free. The principal Rabbin proposes several Questions to the Man, and exhorts him to marry the Widow, then seeing him persist in his Refusal, after some other Interrogatories, the Man puts on one of the Rabbin's Shoes, which is fit for any Foot; and the Woman in the mean Time draws near to him, and assisted by the Rabbin, says to him in Hebrew, My Husband's Brother will not continue the Posterity of his Brother in Israel, and refuses to marry me, as being my Brother-in- Law. The Brother-in-Law answers, I have no Mind to take her. Hereupon the Woman stoops down, loosens and pulls off the Shoe, throws it upon the Ground, spits before him, and says in Hebrew to him, with the Help of the Rabbin. So shall it be done unto that Man who will not build up his Brother's House; and his Name shall be called in Israel the House of him that hath his Shoe loosed. These Words she repeats three Times, and they who are present answer as often, He that hath his Shoe loosed. Hereupon the Rabbin immediately tells her, that she may marry again; and if she requires any Certificate of what is done, the Rabbins deliver one to her.

You have here a Form of the Certificate taken out of the Gemara of Jerusalem, where it is shorter than that which we meet with among the Rabbins. Before us whose Names are so and so, such an one, the Widow of such an one, pulled off such an one's Shoe, the Son of such an one. She brought it before us, and has pulled off the Shoe of his right Foot, and hath spit in our Presence, so that we have seen her Spittle on the Ground, and she hath said unto him, Thus shall the Man be treated who buildeth not up his Brother's House.

From what has been said it appears, that the Rabbins do not understand Moses's Words literally, when he says, that the Woman shall spit in his Face who will not marry his Brother's Widow; and that they explain it thus, She shall spit in his Presence, she shall spit upon the Ground before him; but the Text of the Law is expressly for the former Meaning, and Josephus took it literally in the History of Ruth[5]. To spit in any one's Face is a [Numb. xii. 14. If. i. 6, &c.] Mark of the highest Contempt.

What is said in the Text, of his giving his Brother's Name to the eldest Son which he shall have by her, may be understood two Ways. 1. He shall bear the Name of the deceased; if that was Abraham, the Son shall be called, Abraham. 2. He shall bear the Name of the deceased; he shall go for his Son, he shall support his Name and Family. The Hebrew literally says[6], He shall be raised upon his Brother's Name, he shall be like a young Sucker shooting out of his Father's Name. The Example of Ruth, who called the Son she had by Boaz, Obed, and not Mahlon, the Name of her first Husband[7], proves, that it was not necessary the Child should go by the Name of his Mother's first Husband.

Leo of Modena[8] observes, that the Jews sometimes out of a Principle of Avarice, keep their Sisters-in-Law a long Time in Suspence, without declaring whether they will marry them or no, that so they may tire their Patience, and draw some Money out of them: Wherefore there are some Fathers, who if they marry their Daughters to Men that have several Brothers, stipulate, that in this Case they shall set the Widow at Liberty for nothing. Others oblige the Husband, in Case he falls sick, and is thought by his Physicians to be in Danger, to divorce his Wife upon the Spot, that so she may not come into the Power of her Brother-in-Law. The marrying a Sister-in-Law the Jews call Ibum, and the pulling off the Shoe and setting a Woman at Liberty, Chaliza.

Levites

LEVITES. All the Descendants of Levi may be comprized under the Name of Levites: But they are principally meant by it, who were employed in the lowest Ministries of the Temple, whereby they were distinguished from the Priests, who being descended from Aaron, were likewise of the Race of Levi by Kobath, but were employed in higher Offices. We have spoken of them in the Article Aaron; and shall again speak of them in that of Priests.

The Levites therefore were all the Descendants of Levi by Gershom, Kohath, and Merari, excepting only the Family of Aaron; for the very Children of Moses had no Part in the Priesthood, and were no more than common Levites. God chose them in the Room of the First-born of all [Numb. iii. 6, &c.] Israel, for the Service of his Tabernacle and Temple. They were obedient to the Priests in the Ministrations of the Temple, and brought Wood to them, Water, and other Things necessary for the Sacrifices. They sung and played upon Instruments in the Temple, and in other Ceremonies. They applied themselves to the Study of the Law, and were the ordinary Judges of the Countrey, but always subordinate to the Priests.

God provided for the Subsistence of the Levites, by giving them all the Tythe of Corn, Fruit and Cattle throughout Israel. [Numb. xviii. 21, 22, 23, 24.] But they were to give the Priests the Tenth of their Tythes; and as the Levites possessed no Estates in Land, the Tythes which the Priests received from them, were looked upon as the First-Fruits which they were to offer to the Lord.

God assigned them eight and forty Cities [Numb. xxxv. 1, 2, 3, &c.] for their Habitations, with Fields, Pastures, and Gardens. Of these eight and forty Cities thirteen were given to the Priests, six whereof were chosen to be Cities of Refuge. While the Levites were actually imployed in the Service of the Temple, they were subsisted out of the Provisions in Store there, and out of the daily Offerings which were made there; and if any Levite quitted the Place of his Abode, to go and do Service at the Temple, even out of the Time of his half-yearly or weekly Waiting; he was received there, kept and provided for, in like Manner, as his other Brethren, who were regularly in Waiting. [Deut. xviii 6, 7, 8.] The Consecration of Levites was performed without much Ceremony. They wore no peculiar Habits to distinguish them [2 Chr. xxix. 34.] from other Israelites, and God ordained nothing particularly for their Mourning. The Manner of their Consecration was as [Numb. viii. 5, 6, 7, &c.] follows.

The Lord said to Moses; take the Levites from among the Children of Israel, and cleanse them, sprinkle them with the Water of Expiation; and let them shave all their Flesh, and wash their Clothes. They shall bring two Oxen, or rather two Bullocks before the Door of the Tabernacle. Then all the Children of Israel being assembled, shall put their Hands upon the Levites Head, as an Indication, that they k Joseph. Antiq. l. xx. c. 8. p. 699. offer them unto the Lord. After this the Levites shall put their Hands upon the Heads of the two Bullocks, one whereof shall be offered for a Burnt-Offering, and the other for a Sin-Offering. You shall present the Levites to the High-Priest Aaron and his Sons, who shall offer them unto the Lord, by lifting them up in the Air towards the four Corners of the World, or by obliging them to use particular Motions, which have some Relation to that practiced by the Priests, while they waved certain Offerings towards the four Quarters of the Earth.

Josephus k tells us that in the Reign of Agrippa King of the Jews, about the Year of J. C. 62, and six Years before the Destruction of the Temple by the Romans, the Levites desired Permission from this Prince to wear the Linnen Tunick as the Priests did; which Request was granted. This Innovation was displeasing to the Priests; and the Jewish Historian remarks, that the old Customs of the Countrey never were forsaken with Impunity. He adds, that Agrippa permitted likewise the Families of the Levites, whose common Office it was to guard the Doors, and perform other troublesome Offices, to learn to sing and play on Instruments, that they might be qualified for the Service of the Temple as Musicians.

The Levites were divided into different Classes, namely the Gershomites, Koathites, Merarites, and Aaronites or Priests. Here follows the Enumeration made by Moses, after their Departure out of Egypt, of all the Males from one Month old and upwards, according to the particular Order which he received from God to this Purpose.

The Gershomites were in Number seven Thousand five Hundred. Their Office in the Marches through the Wilderness was to carry the Veils and Curtains of the Tabernacle. Eliasaph, the Son of Lael, was the chief of them.

The Koathites were imployed in carrying the Ark and sacred Vessels of the Tabernacle, their Number was eight Thousand six Hundred. Elizaphan, the Son of Uzziel was at the Head of them.

The Merarites were in Number six Thousand two Hundred. Their Office consisted in carrying the several Pieces of the Tabernacle which they could not place upon the Chariots; Zariel, the Son of Abibail, was their Commander.

The Aaronites were the Priests who served in the Sanctuary; Eleazar, the Son of Aaron, was their General. Their Genealogy may be seen at full Length in the genealogical Tree which we have had engraved here.

As often as the Hebrews incamped in the Wilderness, the Levites were distributed round about the Tabernacle. Moses and Aaron were placed at the East, Gershom at the West; Kohath at the South; and Merari [Numb. iii. 17, 18, &c. Numb. viii. 24. Numb. iv. 3.] at the North. Moses ordained, that the Levites should not do Service at the Tabernacle till they were five and twenty Years of Age, or as he says elsewhere, from thirty to fifty Years old. But David finding that they were imployed no longer in those grosser Offices, of transporting the Vessels of the Tabernacle, obliged them to enter upon Service at the Temple as soon as they were twenty Years of Age. The Priests and Levites waited by Turns, and weekly in the Temple. They began their Weeks upon one Sabbath Day, and upon the same Day in [1 Chr. xxiii. 24. 2 Chr. xxxi. 17. and Ezra iii. 8. Deut. xii. 18, 19.] the following Week they went out of waiting. When any Israelite made a religious Entertainment in the Temple, God required, that the Levites should be invited to it.

Leviticus

LEVITICUS. This is the third Book in the Pentateuch. It is called Leviticus, because it contains principally the Laws and Regulations relating to the Priests, the Levites, and Sacrifices; for which Reason the Hebrews call it the Priest's Law, because it includes many Ordinances concerning Sacrifices. The Jews term it likewise Vajicra, because in Hebrew it begins with this Word, which signifies, and he called. In the seven first Chapters of Leviticus God prescribes those Ceremonies to Moses, which were to be observed in the Offering of burnt Sacrifices, of Meat-Offerings, of Bread and Cakes, Peace-Offerings or Thanksgivings, and Sin-Offerings; and regulates what Parts of these Sacrifices were to be consumed upon the Fire of the Altar, and what were to be given to the Priest, who offer'd them. After this Moses relates in what Manner the Priests were consecrated, and what Sacrifices were offered upon this Occasion; and the fatal Misfortune which happened to Nadab and Abihu, who were consumed with Fire, for attempting to offer Incense to the Lord with strange Fire. Upon this Occasion Moses prescribes some Laws, appointing what the Mourning of the Priests should be, and forbids them to drink Wine, while they were in Waiting at the Temple.

In the xi, xii, xiii, xiv, xv Chapters, Moses gives Rules for distinguishing clean and unclean Beasts, and the Leprosy of Men, Houses and Habits; for the Purification of Men indisposed with a Gonorrhæa, and of Women after Child-birth. After this, God appoints the Ceremonies which were to be observed upon the Day of solemn Expiation: He regulates the Degrees of Relation, wherein any one was either permitted or forbidden to marry. He prohibits Alliances with the Canaanites, Idolatry, Theft, Perjury, Calumny, Hatred, the Superstitions of the Gentiles, Magick, Divinations, Soothsaying, Prostitutions and Adultery. He forbids any one to use the Fruits of a Tree, during the first five Years after it is planted. He requires something to be left in the Fields for the Benefit of the Poor, when the Corn is cut. He mentions the Defects which make Sacrifices unfit to be offered to the Lord. In the xxiii Chapter he takes Notice of the principal Festivals in the Year, which are the Passover, Pentecost, the Feast of Tabernacles, the Great Day of Expiation, the Feast of Trumpets, or beginning of the civil Year. We find the Story in it of a Man who was stoned to Death for having blasphemed the Name of the Lord. He prescribes what was to be observed in the Sabbatical, and in the Jubilee Years. Lastly, he [Lev. xxv. 3, 4, 5, &c.] concludes with Regulations concerning Vows, and Tythes which were too be offered in the Tabernacle.

[Lev. xxvii] All the World agrees, that Leviticus is a Canonical Book, and of divine Authority. It is generally held to be the Work of Moses, as well as the rest of the Pentateuch. It contains the History of what passed during the eight Days of Aaron's and his Sons Consecration, which was performed in the Year of the World 2514, before J. C. 1486 before the Vulgar Æra 1490. The Laws which were prescribed in it upon other Subjects besides Sacrifices, have no other chronological Mark, whereby we may be directed to judge at what Time they were given.

Libanus

LIBANUS, a famous Mountain which separates Syria from Palestine. It forms a kind of Horse-shoe in its Length, beginning at three or four Leagues distance from the Mediterranean above Smyrna; and going from North to South towards Sidon, from thence bending from West to East, from Sidon towards Damascus; and at last returning from the South Northward, from the Streight of Damascus, as far as Laodicea Scabiosa. The western Part of this Chain of Mountains is what we properly call Libanus. The other Part, which is opposite to it Eastward, and extends from South to North, is called by the Greeks, Antilibanus. Between these two Mountains is a long Valley called Cœle-Syria, or hollow Syria; in Joshua the Valley of Lebanon, Josh. xi. 17. at present Bekkab, from the Hebrew, Bekab, which signifies a Plain. We have spoken of the Cedars of Libanus under the Article Cedars. The Name of Libanus comes from the Hebrew, Leban, or Laban, which signifies White. This Name was given it, in all Probability, by Reason of the Snow[1], with which it is always covered in many Places. Jeremiah speaks of the Snow of Libanus; and Tacitus: Mirum dicitur tantos inter ardores opacum, fidumque Nivibus.

[Zech. xi. 1. Ezek. xvii. 3.] Libanus is about an hundred Leagues in Circumference. It has Mesopotamia to the East, Armenia to the North, the Holy Land to the South, and the Mediterranean to the West. There are four Rivers which issue out of Libanus, Jordan, Rocham, Nahar-Rossien, and Nahar-Cadicha. It is composed of four Enclosures of Mountains, which rise one upon the other. The first is very fruitful in Grain and Fruits; the second is very barren, abounding in nothing but Thorns, Rocks and Flints; the third, though higher than this, enjoys a perpetual Spring, the Trees being always green there, and the Orchards filled with Fruit: In a Word, it is so agreeable and fertile, that some have called it a terrestrial Paradise. The fourth is so high, that it is almost always covered with Snow; so as to be uninhabitable by Reason of the great Cold.

The Temple of Jerusalem is also called Libanus. Open thy Doors of Lebanon, that the Fire may devour thy Cedars, says Zachary, speaking of the future Desolation of the Temple by the Romans. And Ezekiel; A great Eagle with large Wings came unto Lebanon, and took the highest Branch of the Cedar. He speaks of Nebuchadnezzar, who took the Temple, burnt it, and carried away all the Treasures belonging to it.

Lastly, the Palace built by Solomon at Jerusalem, was called the House of Libanus, domus saltus Libani, probably by Reason of its Height, or the Whiteness of its Walls; or rather by Reason of the great Quantity of Cedar Wood and Pillars which were in it.

This Palace of Solomon's was lofty and magnificent, it consisted in one large Pile of Buildings, an hundred and seventy Foot and ten Inches in Length, eighty five Foot five Inches wide, and one and fifty Foot three Inches high; the Middle whereof was supported by four Ranges of Columns, or rather three Ranges of Columns, and one of Pilasters, which formed three cover'd Galleries before the Apartments; in [Jer. xviii. 14. Tacit. l. v. Hist. c. 6. Cant. vii. 4.] each Range were fifteen Columns; and in all three five and forty.

Before this Palace, and next to the Portico and Columns which supported it, Solomon made a Court fifty Cubits long, and thirty wide, which was also encompassed with Galleries, the Cielings whereof were supported by a great Number of Pillars; and before this first Court he made another larger and wider, with the same Ornaments, and the same Order of Pillars, which was called the Court of the Throne, because Solomon placed the Throne there, on which he sat to administer Justice to the People. See the Plan.

TOWER OF LIBANUS. Solomon in the Canticles compares his Spouse's Nose to the Tower of Libanus, which looketh towards Damascus. Travellers speak of a Tower to be seen upon Libanus on the Side of Damascus, which seems to have been very high. Benjamin of Judela assures us, that the Stones of this Tower, the Remains whereof he had seen, were twenty Palms long, and twelve wide[1]. Maundrell speaks likewise of the same, but he saw it only at a Distance.

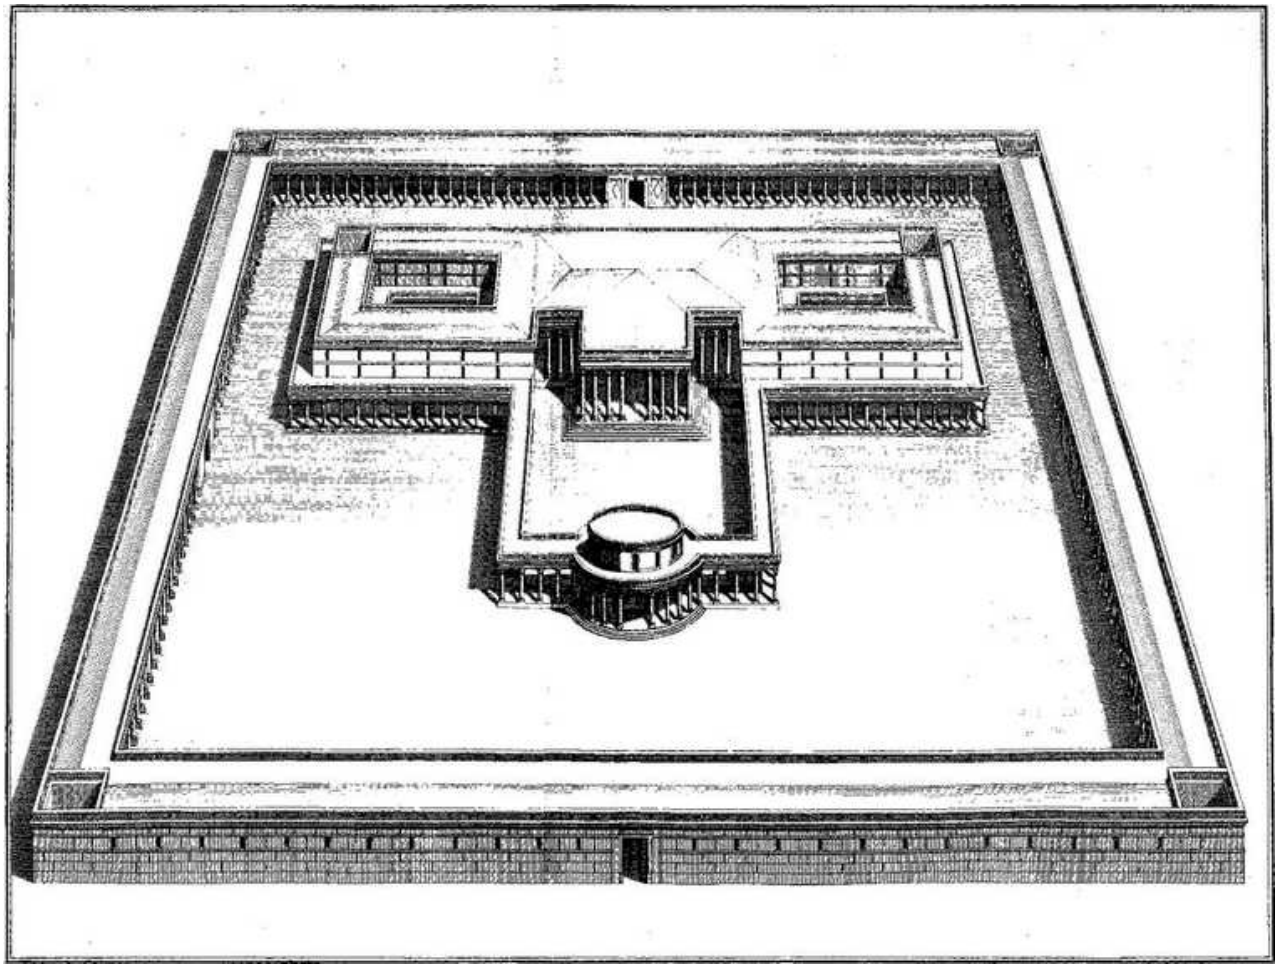
Libation



[Lev. vi. 20. viii. 25, 26. ix. 4. xvi. 12, 20. xxiii. 13.] LIBATION. This Word is particularly made Use of in the Scripture Language, to signify the Effusion of Liquors, poured upon the Victims sacrificed to the Lord. The Measure of Wine for Libations was the fourth Part of an Hin; that is to say, two Pints, and something over.

Libations among the Hebrews were made upon the Victim after it was killed, and the several Pieces of the Sacrifice were laid upon the Altar, ready to be consumed in the Flames. See Leviticus. Moses, after he had sacrificed the Victims, which were to be made Use of at the Consecration of his Brother Aaron, took the Fat and the Rump, and the Fat that was upon the Inwards, and the Caul above the Liver, and the two Kidneys and their Fat, and the right Shoulder. And out of the Basket of unleavened Bread that was before the Lord, he took one unleavened Cake, and a Cake of oiled Bread, and one Wafer, and put them on the Fat, and upon the right Shoulder. And he put all upon Aaron's Hands, and upon his Son's Hands, and vowed them for a Vow-Offering before the Lord. And Moses took them from off their Hands, and burnt them on the Altar, &c.

These Libations consisted in Offerings of Bread, Wine and Salt; the Offerings of Bread were Cakes of several Sorts, some baked in the Oven, others in a Frying or Baking Pan; some kneaded with Oil, others rubbed over with Oil, others fried in Oil; sometimes they were of nothing but Meal, or a Cake moistened with Oil. Part of it, which was to be consumed with the Victim, was offered upon the Altar, the rest was left for the Priest in Waiting, and was divided among the other Priests who were actually in the Temple: For the Offerings were not carried or consumed out of it.

Libations were likewise offered among the Greeks and Latins, together with the Sacrifices, but they were poured upon the Head of the Victim, while it was yet living. This appears from twenty Places of the Ancients. [Æneid ii. V. 130, 131.] For Example, Sinon relating in what Manner he was to be sacrificed, says, that he was in the Priests Hands ready to be slain, that he was loaded with Bands, and Garlands or Festoons, and that they were preparing to pour upon him the Libations of Grain and salted Meal.

Jamque dies infanda aderat, mihi sacra parari, Et salsæ fruges, & circum tempora vittæ.

And Dido, upon the Point of sacrificing, pours Wine between the Horns of the [Æneid.iv.] Victim.

Ipsa tenens dextra pateram pulcherrima Dido, Candentis vaccæ media inter cornua fudit.

Saint Paul says, that he is, as it were, a Victim made to be sacrificed, and that the accustomed Libations of Meal and Wine were already, in some Sort, poured upon [2 Tim. iv. 6.] him: Ego enim jam delibor, & tempus resolutionis meæ instat.

Liber

LIBER[1]. Bacchus. The Scripture never mentions the Name of Bacchus, but we find that of Liber, which is the same Thing in the Maccabees. See 2 Macc. vi. 7. Cum Libri sacra celebrarentur, cogebantur hederâ coronati Libero circuire. And xiv. 33. Istud Dei fanum in planiciem deducam, & Templum hoc Libero patri consecrabo. Lastly, there is Mention of him in the third Book of Maccabees, where it is said, that King Ptolemy Philopater ordered the Leaf of an Ivy, a Tree consecrated to Bacchus, to be impressed on such Jews as refused to renounce their Religion.

Profane Authors speak of several Bacchus's or Dionysius's. Cicero names three; [Cicer. l. i. De Naturâ Deorum.] the first the Son of Jupiter and Proserpine; the second the Son of Nile, who is said to have killed Nysa; the third, the Son of Caprius, who reigned in Asia, and was Author of the Sabæan Laws; the fourth was the Son of Jupiter and the Moon; the fifth, the Son of Nisus and Thione: He might have added another who was the most celebrated of them all, and this was the Son of Jupiter and Semele, who was the Theban Bacchus, There was besides Bacchus the Indian, Son to Ammon and Amalthea: And there is Mention likewise made of Bacchus the Assyrian: But the most famous of them all is Bacchus the Son of Jupiter and Semele. The Poets give the following Account of his Birth: Semele being with Child of Bacchus, desired Jupiter to come and visit her as he did Juno, that is to say with Thunder and Lightning. Jupiter granted her Request; but the Splendor of his Appearance was insupportable to her. She died of the Fright, or was stifled by the Flames. Jupiter took young Bacchus out of Semele's Womb, and enclosed him in a Hole which he had made in his Thigh, wherein the Child continued till the Time was come for his Production; then Jupiter took him out, and gave him to Mercury, who carried him to Nysa in Arabia, where he was brought up by the Muses.

Bacchus is the God of Wine. Some pretend that he planted the Vine, and taught Men to extract the Juice of the Grape. He is said to have made several Conquests, and performed several Journies into Arabia, and to the Indies. The Ivy is consecrated to him as well as the Vine, and several Particulars are observed in his Life; which have persuaded some learned Men, that Part of his History has been confounded with that of Moses. For Example, Bacchus is said to have been the Son of Nile, that he was of an uncommon Beauty, that he was shut up in a Box, and exposed upon the Water; that he had two Mothers, and was born out of his Father's Thigh. Moses, in some Sort, was the Son of Nile, having been exposed and found upon the River in a kind of Box made of Rushes. He was of an extraordinary Beauty, and had for his first Mother the Wife of Amram, and for his second the Daughter of Pharaoh. No one doubted, when he was discovered, but that he was the Son of an Hebrew, and issued out of his Thigh according to the Scripture Expression, Egressi sunt de femore illius; but his Mother was not known.

[Gen. xlv. 26. Ex. i. 5. & passim.] Bacchus was bred up by Nymphs in the Mountains of Nysa in Arabia; Moses was brought up by the Care of Pharaoh's Daughter in the Land of Goshen, which lies between Egypt and Phœnicia, in like Manner as the Mountains of Nysa. The first made great Conquests, and undertook great Voyages. He had Bacchanalians in his Army, advanced as far as the Indies; and while he was in the Light, the Indians were in Darkness. Moses was at the Head of the Men and Women of his People in Arabia, about Mount Sinai, which Countrey is sometimes called the Indies. The Female Bacchanalians who accompanied Bacchus with their Drums and Cymbals, describe very well the female Israelites, who upon their coming out of the Red Sea, fell a dancing and playing with these Instruments. We know that the Egyptians were for three Days in such Darkness as might have been felt, whereas in the Land of Goshen, where the Israelites were, there was the clearest Light.

Bacchus is said to have passed the Rivers Orontes and Hydaspes dry shod, having first struck them with his Thyrsus; that his Ivy Wand crawled along when it was thrown upon the Ground; that the Bacchanals who accompanied this God, produced Water out of a Rock, by striking it with the Thyrsus: It is farther added, that Streams of Wine, Milk and Honey were seen to flow wherever they passed. These are Particulars which suit so well with Moses, that it is impossible not to know him by them. The God Liber was dressed in a magnificent Manner, his Head was bound about with a Ribband. He is sometimes represented with Horns; he granted an Exemption from all Offices to those who applied themselves to Musick; he is called Legislator; his Ass spoke to him. These are so many Marks of Resemblance borrowed from the sacred History, and applied to Bacchus. Moses had Rays upon his Face, which in Scripture are termed Horns: He granted considerable Privileges to the Priests and Levites who were imployed in the Service of God, and in chanting his Praises. The Ass which spoke to Balaam, and the magnificent Ornaments of Aaron, relate no farther to Moses, than as Legislator and sacred Historian. The Reader may see these Matters treated more at large in Vossius, Bochart, Huet, &c.

The Heathens accused the Jews of worshipping Bacchus. Tacitus[2] takes Notice of this Charge against them; it was founded, he said, upon the Hebrew Priests playing on Instruments of Musick, on the Flute and Drum; on their being crowned with Ivy, and the Discovery of a golden Vine in their Temple; upon which Observations it was believed that they adored Bacchus. But then he adds, that the Laws and Manners of the Jews are too different from the Genius of Bacchus. This God is a Friend to Joy and Cheer, and the Jews live in a vile, absurd and sordid Manner. Quippe Liber festos lætosque ritus instituit: Judæorum mos absurdus, sordidusque. What he says of the Jewish Priests being crowned with Ivy, is without Foundation. The golden Vine in the Temple was a Present made to it, and had no Relation to the Religion of the Jews. This supposed Worship of Bacchus is as real as that of an Ass, which some Heathens imputed to the Jews. Bacchus is called Liber, because of the Liberty which Wine inspires. Antiochus Epiphanes having resolved upon compelling the Jews to forsake the Law of God, persecuted them in a very severe Manner, and upon the Day when the Feast of Bacchus was celebrated, they were constrained to go through the Streets covered with Ivy, in Honour of their false God[3]. The Greek literally imports, that they were compelled to follow the March, or Procession, of Dionysius or Bacchus, having Ivy either on their Heads or in their Hands; that is to say, wearing Crowns of Ivy, or carrying Thyrsus's, which were Spears wrapped about with Ivy.

Nicanor, one of Antiochus's Generals, threatened if they did not deliver up Judas Maccabæus, to demolish their Temple, and erect one in the Place of it, consecrated to Bacchus.

Ptolomy Philopater King of Egypt, having taken the cruel Resolution of extirpating the Jews out of his Dominions, who should refuse to renounce the Religion of their Ancestors, first of all divested them of the Privileges they enjoyed as Freemen of Alexandria, then branded them with a hot Iron, and an Ivy Leaf, which is the Sign of any Thing's being consecrated to Bacchus. This Prince is said to have had an Ivy Leaf impressed upon himself, in Imitation of the Priests of the Great Goddess.

Liberty

LIBERTY, as opposite to Servitude and Slavery, denotes the Condition of a Man, who may act without Obstacle or Constraint, and independently on the Will of any other Person. There is frequent Mention of this Sort of Liberty in Scripture. The Hebrews valued themselves mightily upon Liberty; they boasted in our Saviour's Time, that they had never been deprived [Tacit. Hist. l. v. n. 8.] of it: We were never in Bondage to any Man; this from them was a ridiculous Rhodomontade, since we know that they were so often subject to foreign Powers under the Judges, and afterwards in the Time of the Kings of Assyria, Chaldæa and Persia; that Tacitus without Scruple has observed of them, that under the Assyrians, Medes, and Persians, they were the meanest and most abject Slaves: Dum Assyrios penes, Medosque & Persas Oriens fuit, despectissima pars servientium fuere.

It is however true, that the Israelites, according to the first Design of Moses, were never to be reduced intirely to a State of Bondage. They might be sold, or fall into Servitude among their Brethren; but they always had a Power of redeeming themselves, or procuring themselves to be redeemed by some of their Relations, or of being freed from Bondage in the Sabbatical Year, or lastly, in the Jubilee Year, which restored all the Hebrews to their Liberty, and to the Possession of their Inheritances. And it was probably upon this Account they boasted, that they never had been reduced to Slavery. Their whole Nation was equally free and noble; Saul, David, and Jeroboam, who ascended the Throne, were of no better Quality than the meanest Shepherd in Israel. In the Articles Sabbatical Year and Jubilee, we have taken Notice of the Ceremonies which were observed upon setting an Hebrew Slave free. See the Article SLAVES.

Liberty

LIBERTY, Freedom, is likewise applicable to People living according to their own Laws, without Dependance on any other. The Kings of Syria, after they had a long Time persecuted the Jews, at last granted them Liberty, when Simon Maccabæus was [1 Macc. xiv. 26.] High Priest: Statuerunt eis Libertatem, they suffered them to live according to the Law of Moses, and freed them from Tributes and other Services, which before they paid to the Kingdom of Syria: Jerusalem sanctam esse & liberam, 1 Macc. xv. 6.

Domus libera, an House separated from the Commerce of other Men. King Azariah being smitten with a Leprosy, was separated from the rest of Mankind, and reduced to the Condition of a private Person. [1 Reg. xv. 5. Psalm lxxxvii. 6. במתים חפשי כמו חללים שכבי קבר תהלים] Habitavit in domo liberâ seorsum.

The Psalmist says, that he is as one destitute of all Help, free among the dead, Inter mortuos liber. This is explained of Jesus Christ, who descended into Hell, and was all the while perfectly at Liberty to come from thence, and deliver those who were detained there. Or it may be understood of our Saviour shut up in the Grave, and nevertheless having it absolutely in his Power to issue forth from thence when he pleased by his Resurrection. The Hebrew may be translated thus: I am as these dead [John viii. 33.] Men of Liberty, like those who are dead of their Wounds, and sleeping in the Grave; or otherwise, like those Men of Liberty, those ancient Heroes, who boasted of Liberty and Independency, and are nevertheless dead of their Wounds, and asleep in the Grave.

Liberty of the Gospel

LIBERTY of the Gospel, in Opposition to the Servitude of the Law. Saint Paul has often spoken of this Liberty, which Jesus [Gal. iv. 31.] Christ hath procured for us: We are not the Children of the Bond-Woman, but of the Free. We are not derived from Hagar, who and her Descendants are Slaves, meaning the Jews; but we are the Sons of Sarah the free Woman: We enjoy the Liberty of God's Children, by Virtue of the Adoption procured for us by Jesus Christ. Which Liberty delivers us from the Yoke of legal Ceremonies, from the Obligation of observing Purifications and Distinctions of Meats, and many other troublesome and uneasy Practices, to which the Jews were subjected by the Law. See Rom. viii. 21. and 1 Cor. x. 29. and 2. Cor. iii. 17. and Galat. ii, iv, v. and James i. 25. ii, 12.

Liberty to Righteousness

LIBERTY to Righteousness, in Opposition to the Bondage of Sin. This is the Justification which Jesus Christ hath procured for us by his Death, which we acquire by Baptism, preserve by a good Life, and the Practice of Christian Virtues, and recover by Repentance when we have had the Misfortune to forfeit it, by becoming Slaves to Sin and the Devil.

Liberty

[Ecclus. xv. 14, &c.] LIBERTY, and Free-will, in Opposition to Constraint and Necessity: Man is at Liberty to do Good or Evil, God hath made Man from the beginning, and left him in the Hand of his Counsel. If thou wilt, to keep the Commandments, and to perform acceptable Faithfulness. He hath set Fire and Water before thee: Stretch forth thy Hand unto whether thou wilt. There is however a great Difference between the Liberty we have of doing Good and Evil. We have of our selves the unhappy Liberty of doing Evil, we are engaged to it by our Concupiscence, which indeed we are always able to resist, but shall not really and effectually without the Assistance of God's Grace; whereas as to Good, though we always have the Liberty of doing or not doing it, we cannot however perform it as we might, and in a Manner useful to our eternal Salvation, without the Help of a particular Grace, which without hurting our Liberty, and laying any Necessity and Constraint upon us, incites us agreeably, gently, and nevertheless efficaciously, to prefer what is pleasing to God, to what our Self-love and Concupiscence desire.

The Rabbins have an Idea of Liberty and free Will, very different from that which Christian Authors give us of it. They acknowledge, that Man has Liberty, without out which he would not be Man: If he loved what is Good, and followed what is Evil, without Knowledge, or by Instinct, he would cease at the same Time to be reasonable. What would become of the Rewards and Punishments, the Threats and Promises, and all the Precepts of the Law, if it were not in the Power of Men to fulfill or violate them? They admit Liberty of Indifference in its full Extent; they are persuaded that People dissemble their Opinion as often as they take any Thing of its Liberty from free Will.

Maimonides confutes the Fatality of Astrologers, but he makes every Thing to depend on Constitution: As God, says he, has created Man upright in Stature, and with Hands and Feet, so hath he likewise given him a Will to move and act as he pleases; and it is the Goodness of his Constitution which makes Things easy or difficult to him. The Fear of God, he says, is not in the Hand of Heaven; that it is in the Power of Man to observe or not observe the Law, and Precepts. The Fear of God is of this Class; it depends not on God, but on the Will of Man.

Manasseh Ben Israel[1], another famous Rabbin, maintains, that the preventing Grace acknowledged by some Rabbins, is an Opinion that does not agree with Tradition. That if the Will were prevented by Grace, it would cease to be free. He allows but of two Sorts of Aids from God, one whereby he produces favourable Opportunities of executing the good Designs which any one has formed; the other consists in his assisting Man when he has begun to live well. He says farther, that we stand in Need of the Concurrence of Providence in all virtuous Actions; and as a Man, who is going to lay a heavy Burden on his Shoulders, calls somebody to help him up with it: So the just Man first endeavours to fulfill the Law, and God like the Arm of some strange Person, comes to his Assistance, that he may be able to execute his Resolution.

If Man were so wicked as not to be able to do well without Grace, God would be the Author of Sin and Corruption; and although this Corruption be not absolutely to be overcome without Assistance, yet we may begin the Conflict, and open a Way to Victory, notwithstanding that we cannot absolutely obtain it, unless God come to our Aid. Besides, if God vouchsafes to all Men common and efficacious Helps, how comes it that all are not saved? And if he gives particular Assistances to some only, how can it be said, that there is no Respect of Persons with him? How comes he to suffer some to perish, while he saves others? Is it not much more natural to believe, that God imitates Men, who lend their helping Hand to those who they see have formed good Resolutions, and use their best Endeavours to accomplish some laudable Undertaking? See hereafter the Article ORIGINAL SIN. By this System of Grace we see that the Jews either did not believe it, or were but very imperfectly acquainted with the Effects of it.

Libnah

[Josh. xv. 42.] LIBNAH, a City in the Tribe of Judah, in the Southern Part of this Tribe. A Cession was made of it to the Priests, for their Habitation, and it was declared a City of Refuge. [1 Chr. vi. 55, 57.] Eusebius and Saint Jerom say, that it was in the Canton of Eleutheropolis. It is the same as Libna or Lebna, in the Neighbourhood whereof (between Rimmon-Parez and Rissah) the Israelites encamped, when they were upon their Journey through the [Numb. xxxii. 20.] Wilderness.

Libra

LIBRA, a sort of Weight. The Roman Pound is twelve Ounces; the French Pound is sixteen Ounces. The Hebrews, at least in the Old Testament, and before the Empire of the Greeks in the East, never measured by Pounds. The Word Libra is to be met with only in the New Testament. The ancient Hebrews made Use of the Word Siclus, when there was any Mention of common Weights; and of the Word Talent, when they were speaking of large Weights. Now a Shekel weighed an Ounce, or four Roman Drachms. So that two and thirty Shekels went to a Paris Pound; and the Hebrew Talent made ninety two Pound six Ounces of Paris Weight.

Life

LIFE, Future, Eternal Life, or Life Simply, signifies the State of Happiness, whereunto the Righteous and Prædestinated are admitted after Death in Heaven.

[Matth. vii. 14. Matth. xix. 17. Matth. xix. 16.] Narrow is the Way which leadeth unto Life, says our Saviour: If thou wilt enter into Life, keep the Commandments: Master, what good Thing shall I do that I may have eternal Life.

Jesus Christ is sometimes called the Life: [John xiv. 16. John xi. 25. John i. 4.] I am the Way, the Truth, and the Life. And again: I am the Resurrection and the Life. And elsewhere: In him was Life, and the Life was the Light of Men: And, He that hath the Son hath Life, and he that hath not the Son, hath not Life. Jesus Christ is [1 John 5. 12.] the Life of the Soul, he enlightens, comforts it, and fills it with Graces; he leads it to eternal Life: He is himself the Life of it, the Sustenance, Light, and Happiness of it.

The Book of Life, is the Book of Predestination, wherein are written all the Elect, whose Names are in the Book of Life. Philip. iv. 3. And I will blot out his Name out of the Book of Life, Rev. iii. 5. See likewise Rev. xiii. 8. xxi. 27. xxii. 19. And Moses: If not, blot me, I pray thee out of the Book that thou hast written. See above BOOK.

The Tree of Life planted in Paradise to preserve the Life of Adam, if he had continued faithful to God. See TREE.

In the Old Testament God often promises those who observe his Laws, long Life, and temporal Prosperities, which were the Figure and Shadow of eternal Life, and those future Blessings whereof God assures us in a clearer Manner in the New Testament. The carnal Jews confined their Hopes to these transitory Goods; but the holy Patriarchs and Prophets, and the more enlightened Part of the Hebrews, carried their Views and Expectations farther. Moses says [Deut. xxx. 15, 19, 20.] to the Israelites; See I have set before thee this Day Life and Good, and Death and Evil; and a little lower: I have set before you Life and Death, Blessing and Cursing: Therefore choose Life that thou and thy Seed may live; That thou mayest love the Lord thy God; for he is thy Life, and the Length of thy Days. Hence it is that Baruch calls the Law of God, the Commandments of Life: Hear, O Israel, the Commandments of [Ps. xvi. 11.] Life. And the Psalmist, The Path of Life.

Wisdom, and Knowledge of the Truths relating to Salvation, a wise and regular Conduct, are called likewise, the Way of Life, the Truth of Life, the Fountain of Life; Life simply. As Life is the first of all Advantages belonging to the Body, so Wisdom is the supreme Happiness of the Soul; it procures a happy Life for us in this World; it is the Source of Felicity to all Eternity. The principal Wisdom, the most serious Study of the Hebrews consisted in the Knowledge of their Law: Wherefore the holy Spirit terms the Law as well as Wisdom, Life, and the Source of Life, because both the one and the other produce the same Effects for Time, and for Eternity.

Life is sometimes used for Subsistence; Initium vitæ hominis aqua & Panis. And again, Panis egentium pauperum est Vita: In these Passages Vita is synonymous to Victus; it is said in Mark that a poor Widow who put two very small Pieces of Silver, duo minuta, into the Treasury of the Temple, gave more than any of the rest, because it was all she had, omnem victum suum, that which was even necessary to her Support.

In a figurative and hyperbolical Sense, it is said sometimes, that God restores Life, revives those from the dead whom he delivers out of some great Danger. This Expression is frequent in the Psalms; posuit animam meam ad Vitam; and elsewhere, Tu conversus vivificasti me, & vivifica me, & custodiam sermones tuos. And vivificabis nos & nomen tuum invocabimus. He represents Captivity to be as it were Death, and Liberty as Life.

Life is also taken for Conduct. We Fools accountid his Life Madness. His Life is different from that of others. Your Life is [Coloss. iii. 3.] hid in God. We find an Expression in Moses and in Job, which requires some Explanation. Thy Life shall hang in Doubt before thee, and thou shalt fear Day and Night, and shalt have none Assurance of thy Life. Some of the Fathers 9 understood this of Jesus Christ, crucified in the Sight of the incredulous Jews, who rejected the Belief of that Saviour who was their Life and Salvation. Ye shall be under perpetual Fear and Uneasiness, and shall have no Assurance of your own Lives. The following Words of Job must be interpreted in the same Sense. Cum sterit non credet vitæ suæ. When the wicked Man appears most resolute, he shall not be assured of his Life; or according to the Hebrew, when he riseth in the midst of his Guards, he shall not be sure of his Life.

Life

LIFE, to Live: These two Words, as well as those of Death and to die, which have been spoken of in another Place, are equivocal, and understood in a proper and figurative Sense for the Life of the Body, and the Life of the Soul; for the Life of Faith, Grace and Innocency, for temporal Life, and Life eternal. A living Soul signifies a living Animal, a living Person, and my [Gen. xii. 13.] Soul shall live because of thee. My Life will be preserved in Consideration of thee. No Man shall see me and live; that is to say, if a [Ex. xxxiii. 20.] Man has a supernatural Vision, if God appears to him, he is in Danger of losing his Life. No Man will be able to sustain the Splendor of my Majesty. As the Lord liveth, and as thy Soul liveth. I swear by the [1 Sam. xx. 3.] Life of God and by thine. The Lord swears by his own Life; I lift up my Hand to [Deut. xxxii. 40] Heaven and say, I live for ever.

The Lord is called the living God in Opposition to the Gods of the Gentiles, who were but dead Men, or Stars or Animals, whose Lives are of a borrowed Nature, and transitory; whereas the Lord is living, immortal, and the Author of Life, to every Thing that enjoys it; it is in him we live, from him we derive Motion and Existence, [Acts xvii. 28.] In him we live and move, and have our Being.

[Rom. i. 17.] The just Man lives by Faith, says Saint Paul: It is Faith which gives Life to the Soul, but this Faith must be animated by [Gal. v. 6.] Charity, and accompanied with Works; for Faith without Works is dead. Even they [James ii. 20. John xi. 25, 26.] who are dead in Sin rise again, and lead a new Life, if they believe in Jesus Christ; and they who have a lively and entire Faith never dye, or rather after Death enjoy eternal Life. I am the Resurrection and the Life, he that believeth in me, though he was dead; yet shall he live; and whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never dye. The Widow who lives in Delights is dead, though she appear to be alive; vivens mortua [1 Tim. v. 6.] est. Jesus Christ, says Saint Paul, is my [Phil. i. 21.] Life, To me to live is Christ: I desire nothing passionately but his Glory, I live only for him, and if I can lay down my Life for him I shall be happy: To die is Gain. See VIVIFICO.

To Lift Up Ones Hands

TO LIFT UP ONES HANDS, is the Gesture of a Man, who is taking an Oath: I have lift up mine Hand unto the Lord, says [Gen. xiv. 22.] Abraham, that I will not take the least Thing that belongs to you. And: I will bring you into the Land concerning which I [Ex. vi. 8.] lift up my Hand, which I promised with an Oath to give you.

To lift up one's Hand against any one, to attack him, to make War with him. Blessed be the Lord thy God which hath delivered up the Men that lift up their Hand against [2 Sam xviii. 28.] my Lord the King. And; Sheba, the Son of Bichri, hath lift up his Hand against David, rebelled against him: The Scripture speaking of the Revolt of Jeroboam, the Son of Nebat, makes Use of the same Expression.

[1 Kings xi. 26.] To lift up one's Face in the Presence of any one, to appear boldly in his Presence. [2 Sam. ii. 21.] I should not dare to hold up my Face to Joab thy Brother. And Esdras; O Lord my God I am ashamed and blush to lift up my Face to [Ezra ix. 6.] thee. See also Job x. 15. xi. 15.

To lift up one's Hands, Eyes, Soul, or Heart unto the Lord, are Ways of speaking used commonly in Scripture, to describe the Sentiments and Emotion of one who prays earnestly, and beseeches God with all his Heart to give him the Assistance that he stands in Need of. By lifting up the Eyes, no more than barely looking is meant frequently: I lift up mine Eyes and saw.

To lift up one's Soul to any Thing, to desire it with Ardor. But to the Land whereunto they lift up their Mind to return, thither shall they not return. We find this Expression often enough in the Psalms. Lord I lift up my Soul unto thee. I beseech [Ps. xxvi. lxxxvi. 4. cxliii. 8. Ezek. xviii. 6, 12, 15. xxii. 27. xxxiii. 25. John xiii. 18. Zech. i. 21. Ezek. xxviii. 11. Is. xxxvii. 4. Ex. ii. 8. Job xix. 25.] thee with all the Ardor of my Soul.

To lift up one's Eyes towards Idols, to honour, to invoke them, to put one's Trust in them.

To lift up one's Heel against any one, to kick, to rise up against one.

To lift up one's Horn, to be exalted with Pride, to threaten one with Blows, to insult.

To lift or take up a Lamentation, levare planctum; to begin a mournful Song.

To lift up a Prayer, levare orationem, to address one's Prayers to God for the People.

To be lifted up, to rise, surgere: There arose a new King in Egypt, a new King reigned. In the Scripture Men generally rose early in the Morning, and even before Day, like the Heroes in Homer. Surgere, to rise, signifies nothing else frequently but to begin an Action. Arise and go, rise and do this, &c. Surgant pueri & ludant: Surge, & comede panem; Surge fac nobis Deos, &c. Surge, Domine, in requiem tuam.

[Matth. xxviii. 6.] Surgo, is taken likewise for to rise from the dead: De terra surrecturus sum, says Job; Multi qui dormierunt, surrexerunt; surrexit Jesus, non est hic. And; Corpus surget [Matth. xxvii. 52. 1 Cor. xv. 42. John vii. 52. Ps. xxxiv. 11.] in incorruptione.

A great Prophet is risen up among us, Luke vii. 16. And no Prophet ariseth out of Galilee: A Galilæa Propheta non surgit.

To rise against any one, is said of Accusers and false Witnesses; Surgentes testes iniqui; quæ ignorabunt, interrogabunt me. Two false Witnesses arose and accused Jesus.

Light

[Mark xiv. 57. Gen. i. 2, 3, 4.] LIGHT. Moses tells us, that God having created the Matter of Heaven and Earth, and Darkness being spread over the Chaos, God said, let there be Light, and there was Light; and God saw the Light that it was good, and he separated the Light from the Darkness. And this made the first Day. Some demand, what this Light of the first Day Day could be, different from the Sun, which wrs not created till the fourth Day? Certain Rabbins maintain, that it was the Light of the Sun, and that what is said in the seventh Verse of the same Chapter concerning the Creation of the Sun, Moon, and Stars on the fourth Day, is a Recapitulation. Others believe, that God upon the first Day of the World created particularly a luminous Body, much like that which gave Light to the Israelites in the Night Time, when they were in the Wilderness. Something like this must of Necessity be admitted, if we would maintain a successive Creation, and follow the Order pointed out by Moses in the Creation of Things.

To see the Light of Heaven. Lumen cœli non video. I see not the Light of Heaven, said Tobit during his Misfortune, while he was blind. Light is often put for Prosperity, in like Manner as Night for Adversity. The Light shall shine upon thy Ways, God shall favour thy whole Conduct. Signatum est super nos lumen vultus tui. Thou hast heaped thy Favours on us.

Jesus Christ foretels his Disciples, that what he said to them in Darkness should be published in the Light, and spread throughout all the World.

The Light of the Living, in a literal Sense signifies an happy Life, Life attended with great Prosperity; but in a moral and spiritual Sense, it signifies the Felicity of eternal Life; in like Manner as the Misery of the wicked is [Ps. lvi. 13. cxxix. 12. cxlviii. 3. and Job xxxiii. 30. James i. 17. John viii. 12. John i. 8.] described by the Darkness of Death God is styled the Father of Lights, the Author of all Graces; and Jesus Christ is called the Light of the World, a Light to light the Gentiles, the Light of Righteousness, the Light of Life.

The Apostles are the Light of the World, Saint Matth. v. 14. And the Just shall shine in the State of Eternity, as the Stars in the Firmament.

Ligurius

LIGURIUS, a precious Stone; in Hebrew Leschem[1]. Theophrastus and Pliny describe the Ligurius to be a Stone like a Carbuncle, of a Brightness sparkling like Fire: Saint Epiphanius and Saint Jerom took it for a kind of Hyacinth. Some have asserted, that it is the same as Lyncurius, or the Lynx-stone, formed, as is said,[2] of the Lynx's Urine, which is congealed into a shining Stone, as soon as it comes out of this Creature's Body. But this is fabulous, as Pliny himself observes who relates it. The Ligurius was the first Stone in the third Row upon the High Priest's Pectoral, and the Name of God was inscribed upon it.

Lilith

LILITH. This, as the Rabbins say[1]; was Adam's first Wife, who separated from her Husband, and refused to return to him, though God sent two Angels to compel her to it. They believe that she eats new-born Children. For which Reason the Jews, when a Child is born in any House, write with Chalk, or something else; May Adam and Eve be present in this Place, may Lilith keep at a Distance from it[2]. They write down the Names also of the three Angels, who pursued Lilith; Sennoï, Sansennoï, and Samangeloph; because Lilith promised them to do no Harm to any Places, where she should find their Names. We have already spoken of Lilith in the Article Lamia. Isaiah[3] makes Mention of Lilith; Saint Jerom translates it Lamia, and the Septuagint, Onocentauri. We are of Opinion that this Word signifies a Bird of Night, and of bad Omen, such as the Scritch-Owl, Bat and Lapwing. Lilith in Hebrew signifies the Night. Isaiah says, that Edom will be reduced to a frightful Solitude, wherein there will be nothing to be seen but wild and ominous Beasts, Demons, Satyrs, Scritch-Owls, &c.

Lilly

LILLY, in Latin, Lilium, in Hebrew, Susan, or Schuschan, perhaps by Reason of the Number of its Leaves, which are six, in Hebrew, Ses, or Schesch. The Lilly is a very common Flower. There are Lillies of different Colours, white, red, yellow, and Orange Colour. They were very common in Judæa, and grew in the open Fields. Consider the Lillies of the Field, says Jesus Christ in the Gospel; how they grow, they toil not, neither do they spin; yet I say unto you that Solomon in all his Glory is not arrayed like one of these. Wherefore if God so clothe the Grass of the Field, which to Day is, and to Morrow is cast into the Oven, shall he not much more clothe you, O ye little of Faith? We see here, that when the Lillies were withered, they were cut down and thrown into the Fire to burn.

Father Souciet a Jesuit affirms[1], that the Lilly mentioned in the Scripture by the Name of Sousan, is the Crown Imperial, that is to say, that sort of Plant the Flowers whereof are disposed, as it were, like a Crown, with a Bunch of Leaves on the Top; this is the Persian Lilly, the Tusaï of the Persians, the Royal Lilly, or Lilium Basileium of the Greeks. In Reality it appears from the Canticles, that the Lilly spoken of by Solomon was red, and distilled a [Cant. v. 13.] certain Liquor: Labia ejus lilia distillantia Myrrham. There are Crown Imperials with yellow Flowers, others with red, which are the most common. The Stock that bears them is about an Inch thick, watered with a deep Purple, and about three Foot high. The Flowers differ very little from the white Lilly, except in Colour. They are always bent downwards, and disposed in the Manner of a Crown at the Extremity of the Stem, which has a Tuft of Leaves at the Top. Some have a double Row of Flowers, or double Flowers. They do not always grow in an equal Number, nor in the same Order. Sometimes there is but little Flower, and sometimes a great deal. At the Bottom of every Leaf of this Flower there is a certain watry Humour, which forms, as it were, a very white Pearl, which gradually distils very clear and pure Drops of Water. This Water is probably what the Spouse in the Canticles calls Myrrh: Labia ejus lilia distillantia Myrrham.

Judith speaks of an Ornament belonging to the Women, which was called Lilly[2]: Assumpsit dextraliola, & lilia & inaures. What these Lillies were we cannot tell. They might be something in the Judgment of Grotius, which hung about the Neck. Perhaps likewise Lilia in the Text may be a Fault of the Copist, who instead of Monilia Bracelets, which he did not understand, might have inserted Lilia. It is certain that the Greek says Pselia, and the Syriac had the same Reading.

Limits

LIMITS, Bounds. Moses forbids any one's touching the Bounds of his Neighbour's Inheritance. Thou shalt not remove [Deut. xix. 14.] thy Neighbour's Land-Mark which they of old Time have set on thine Inheritance which thou dost inherit, &c. All the People curse the Man who should remove the Bounds planted by their Ancestors. Job reckons those who are guilty of this Crime among Thieves and Robbers, and Oppressors of the Poor. Boundaries are sacred Things, and Matters of publick Right. Siculus Flaccus de conditionib. agrorum says, that when they were settled, they were anointed and crowned, and covered with rich Veils: Unguento velaminibusque & coronis eos coronabant. The Jewish Doctors condemn those who transfer their Neighbour's Bounds to be scourged twice, first because of stealing another's Inheritance, and secondly by Reason of the Violation of the Law, which expresly forbids touching it.

[Joseph. Antiq. l. iv. c. 8.] Josephus has interpreted this Law of Moses in a very particular Sense. " He " says, that it is not lawful to change the " Limits, either of the Land belonging to " the Israelites, or that of their Neighbours, with whom they are at Peace; " but that they ought to be left as they " are, having been so placed by the Order " of God himself: For the Desire which " avaritious Men have to extend their Limits, is the Occasion of War and Division; and whosoever is capable of removing the Boundaries of Lands, is not far " from a Disposition to violate all other " Laws.

Among the Romans[1], if a Slave of his own Head, and with an evil Design, changed any Boundary, he was punished with Death. Men of Condition were sometimes banished, and private Persons were punished according to the Circumstances of the Crime, by pecuniary Fines, or corporal Punishments. The Respect which the Ancients had for Boundaries proceded almost to Adoration. Numa Pompilius, King of the Romans ordained, that Offerings should be made to Boundaries, with thick Milk, Cakes, and First-Fruits. Ovid says, that a Lamb was sacrificed to them, and that they were sprinkled with Blood.

Spargitur & cæso communis terminus agno.

Juvenal speaks of Cake and Pap, which were laid every Year upon the sacred Bounds.

Et sacrum effodit medio de limite Saxum, Quod mea cum patulo coluit puls annua libo.

The Limits of the Sea. The Scripture often reckons it among the Effects of God's Omnipotency, to have fixed Bounds to the Sea: Thou hast set a Bound that they may not pass over, neither turn again to cover the Earth. And Job: He hath compassed the Waters with Bounds until the Day and Night come to an End. And Solomon introduces Wisdom, saying, When he gave to the Sea his Decree, that the Waters should not pass his Commandments; when he appointed the Foundation of the Earth, then I was by him. And in Jeremiah, the Lord says, that he has made the Sands to be a Boundary to the Sea: Posui arenam terminum Mari.

Linum

LINUM, called in Hebrew, Bad, a [בד,Bad Linum.] Plant very well known, the Bark whereof being prepared, serves to make very fine, and very much esteemed Linnen Clothes.

[בוץ,Buz. Byssus. שש, Schesch. Gossypion.] There is another Sort of Linnen which the Scripture calls Schesch, and which we believe to be Cotton. See above the Article COTTON.

Under the Name of Linnen Byssus is included; but this was something very different from both Linnen and Cotton. It was a kind of Silk fastened to a Fish inclosed in the red Naker, which Rondelet calls Pinna magna. See above BYSSUS.

Lastly, the Plant Linum is in Hebrew named[1] Phishtah, as well as that whereof Clothes were made.

Linus

LINUS, mentioned by Saint Paul in his second Epistle to Timothy, Chap. iv. V.21. Linus and Claudia, and all the Brethren greet thee, was, as some say, the Son of Claudia spoken of in the same Verse. Saint Irenæus, Eusebius, Optatus, Epiphanius, Saint Austin, Saint Jerom, and Theodoret, affirm that Linus succeeded immediately Saint Peter in the See of Rome. He governed twelve Years and some Months. The Book of Apostolical Constitutions says[1], that Linus was ordained Bishop of Rome by Saint Paul, long before the Death of Saint Peter. Rufinus asserts[2], that Linus and Anacletus having governed the Church of Rome, while the Apostles Saint Peter and Saint Paul were living, but in their Absence, Saint Peter a little before his Death chose at last Clement to succeed him in the See of Rome: And Epiphanius will [Epiphan. hæres. 27] have it, that Clement out of Modesty refused to exercise this Office, till after the Death of Linus and Cletus. From all which we may easily conclude, that we are but very imperfectly acquainted with the History of Linus. The Destruction of Jerusalem happened during his Pontificate, in the Year of J.C. 70. The Greeks keep his Festival upon the fifth of November, and the Latins upon the twenty third of September. See M. de Tillemont.

Lion

LION, a Beast very well known to every one, and frequently spoken of in Scripture. The Lion is esteemed the King of fourfooted Beasts. His Hair is inclining to red. The forepart of his Head is square, his Nose flat and large, his Eyes terrible, his Mouth wide, his Neck covered with a bushy Mane, his Belly slender, his Legs and Thighs large and nervous, and his Tail long, large and very strong. He has five Claws upon his Fore-feet, and four on those behind. The Hebrews have seven Words whereby to signify the Lion in his different Ages[1]. 1. Gur or Gor, a young Lion, a Lion's Whelp. 2. Chephir, a young Lion. 3. Ari or Arié, a young and vigorous Lion. 4. Schachal, a Lion in the full Strength of his Age. 5. Schachaz, a vigorous Lion. 6. Lebi, an old Lion. 7. Laisch, a decrepit Lion worn out with old Age. But these Distinctions are not always made in speaking of the Lion.

This is the fiercest and most courageous of all Beasts. It was very common in Palestine, and the sacred Authors make frequent Mention of it, and borrow Similitudes and Comparisons from it. Some of the Ancients were of Opinion, that the Lion's Neck was composed but of one Bone, because they observed it to be very stiff: But it is made of many Bones or Vertebræ, like the Necks of other Beasts. Its Tongue is sharp, and stuck thick with Points of a very hard Matter like that of Nails, whereof it has likewise the Figure. These Points are about two Lines in Length. There is no Animal that more resembles a Lion than a Cat. The Paws, Teeth, Eyes, and Tongue of a Lion are of the same Figure with those of a Cat, only larger. He throws his Urine behind him, and copulates with the Lioness like Hares and Camels. His Bladder is small, because he drinks very little. The female differs from the male in that she has no Mane or long Hair upon her Neck. It is a popular Mistake to think, that Lions are afraid of Cocks. There have been tame Lions seen. It is likewise a Fable, that Lions sleep with their Eyes open. Lions were consecrated to the Sun, and the Heathens represent the Chariot of Cybele to be drawn by them.

The Lion of the Tribe of Judah, mentioned [Rev.v. 5.] in the Revelations, is Jesus Christ, who sprung from the Tribe of Judah, and the Race of David, and who overcame Death, the World, and the Devil.

[Jer. l. 44.] The Lion from the swelling of Jordan, is Nebuchadnezzar marching like a Lion against Judæa; contra fortitudinem robustam. This Conqueror is compared to a Lion by Reason of his Strength and Fierceness; to a Lion sallying from the Pride of Jordan, that is to say, which is driven out from the Neighbourhood of Jordan, where it lay amidst the Thickets which cover the Banks of this River, and falls with Fury upon every Thing it meets with in the Fields. The Scripture speaks in several [See Jer. xii. 5. xlix. 19. l. 44. Zach. xi. 3.] Places of this Swelling of Jordan, thereby describing the Inundations of it. Travellers observe, that this River has, as we may say, [Zach. xi.] two Channels, one wherein it commonly flows, and another which it takes up only while the Snows of Libanus are melting, whereby it is much increased. At this Time it is swelled, and out of that other Channel, which extends on both Sides its Banks, it drives the Lions and other Beasts, which have their Retreats there during the Heats of Summer.

Samson being on the Road to Timnath with his Father and Mother, tore a young Lion to Pieces with his Hands. Some Time [Judg. xiv.] after he took Notice as he passed by, that Bees had made their Honey in the Mouth of this Lion, which was then dried up. This supplied him with Matter for the Riddle which he proposed to the young Men, who were of the Company at his Wedding: Out of the Eater came forth Meat, and out of the Strong came forth Sweetness. De comedente exivit cibus, & de forti egressa est dulcedo.

David boasts, that he had killed both a Lion and a Bear: Thy Servant, said he to Saul, kept his Father's Sheep, and there came a Lion and a Bear and took a Lamb out of the Flock, and I went out after him, and smote him, and delivered it out of his Mouth: And when he arose against me, I caught him by his Beard, and smote him and slew him: Thy Servant slew both the [Ecclus. xlvii. 3.] Lion and the Bear. Ecclesiasticus says, that this Prince played with Bears and Lions, as he would with Lambs.

The two Lions of Moab, mentioned in the second Book of Samuel, denote in all [2 Sam. xxiii. 20.] Probability the City of Ar the Capital of the Moabites, described in the Chronicles under the Name of the two Lions of Moab; now Ariel in Hebrew signifies the Lion of God.

[If. xi. 6.] The Prophet Isaiah describing the happy Time of the Messiah says, that then the Calf, the young Lion and the Fatling should lie down together, and a little Child should lead them; and that the Lion should eat Straw like the Ox. Which is all hyperbolical, and signifies the Peace and Happiness which the Church of Jesus Christ should enjoy.

[Amos iii. 8.] The roaring of the Lion is terrible. Leo rugiet, quis non timebit? The Lion shall roar, and who is there that shall not be afraid? The King's Wrath is as the Roaring of a Lion: Whoso provoketh him to Anger [Prov. xix. 12. xx. 2.] sinneth against his own Soul. He seeketh his own Death. The Lion, when angry, beats his Sides with his Tail, bristles up his Mane, and roars in such a Manner as scares those who hear him.

A living Dog is better than a dead Lion, Melior est canis vivens Leone mortuo, [Eccl. ix. 4] says the wise Man. This is a Proverb, shewing that Death renders those contemptible who otherwise are the greatest, most powerful, and most terrible.

There is a great deal of Perplexity about the Way of reading the Text of Psalm xxii. V. 17. The Septuagint and Vulgate read[2]: They pierced my Hands and my Feet. And the Hebrew Text, as it stands in our printed Bibles, and the Generality of Manuscripts, reads; like a Lion my Hands and my Feet, which we can make no Sense of; but in Order to render it intelligible, the Rabbins distribute the Verses of this Psalm after the following Manner, V. 17. The Assembly of the Wicked have enclosed me, like a Lion my Hands and my Feet; V. 18 They tell all my Bones. Kimchi and Abenezra say, that the Lion encompasses the Hands and Feet of the Jews, in the present State to which they are reduced, that their Enemies enclose them on every Side, and hinder them not only from defending themselves, but from flying too.

Kimchi hereupon relates a Fable. The Lion, says he, when he is hunting describes a large Circle with his Tail upon the Ground; all the wild Beasts which are within this Circle continue there shut up, as if they were encompassed with Nets. They roll about with their Feet gathered under their Belly, without daring to fly or to defend themselves; thus the Lion devours them, and eats them without Resistance. Such, adds he, is our Condition since our last Dispersion. We are as it were shut up within a Circle among our Enemies the Ishmaelites on one Side, and the Uncircumcised on the other; there we continue detained by our Fears, without being able to make Use of our Hands for our Defence, or of our Feet for our Escape.

But it is to no Purpose to rack our Brains to fix a literal Sense to a bad Way of Reading. The Septuagint, Aquila, and other old Greek Translations of the Scripture, read in the Hebrew, Caru, they pierced. Origen, Saint Jerom, Justin, and other ancient Fathers read so too, and never made any Difficulty of this Passage. The Rabbins themselves own that in the old Manuscripts of their Time, Caru was still to be seen in the Text, or at least in the Margin. And some we have at this Day, wherein the same Reading is to be observed. Very good Sense is made of it, and it is authorized by all Antiquity. This therefore should be followed, and that of the Jews given up, which is more modern, and no good Sense to be made of it. See our Dissertation on this Passage before our Comment on the Psalms.

Lip

LIP, Labium, is sometimes used for the Bank of a River, and the Border of a Vessel, or Table. Facies illi Labium aureum, & 3 [Ex. xxv. 24.] Reg. vii. 23. speaking of the Brazen Sea, a labio ad labium. Lip signifies likewise Language; they have all but one Language, one Lip, Unum Labium omnibus. I am of uncircumcised [Gen. xi. 6. Ex. vi. 12. Lev. v. 4. Deut. xxiii. 23. Job. i. 22. ii. 10. Job. xii. 20.] Lips; I cannot easily explain my self, I have an Imperfection in my Speech. That which cometh forth out of his Lips, that which he hath promised, the Vow which he pronounced. Job hath not sinned with his Lips. God removeth the Lip of the faithful, does not always give them Eloquence, and a Facility of speaking.

The Fruit of the Lips. Isaiah lvii. 19. Creavi fructum labiorum pacem; God giveth Peace which is the Fruit of his Promises; or otherwise, he giveth Peace which is a new Subject of Praise for him. A Man's Belly shall be satisfied with the Fruit of his Mouth, and with the Increase of his Lips [Prov. xviii. 20. Hosea xiv. 3.] shall he be filled. A Man shall be more or less esteemed, according as he governs his Tongue. We will render thee the Calves of our Lips, says Hosea; that is to say, Sacrifices of Praises, instead of bloody Victims [Ezek. xxxvi. 3.] Ezekiel: Accendistis super Labium linguæ & opprobium populi; you have been exposed to the Raillery and injurious Tongues of your Enemies: Stultus cædetur Labiis, the [Prov. x. 8. 10.] Fool shall be punished because of his defamatory Discourses; or otherwise, he whose Lips are foolish, who cannot govern his Tongue, shall be chastised. Divinatio in [Prov. xvi. 10, 15.] labiis Regis, the Lips of the King pronounce Oracles. And a little after: Voluntas Regum labia justa, Kings love righteous Lips. I do not send thee, says the Lord to [Ezek. iii. 6.] Ezekiel, to a People deep of Lip, of an unknown Language. Labia deosculabitur qui recta verba respondet. He who answers uprightly kisses the Mouth of him he speaks to, Prov. xxiv. 26. The Hebrews were used in Times of Mourning to cover their Lips, or the lower Part of their Face. Liturgy LITURGY[1]. This Word is originally Greek, and is particularly made Use of in the Church, to signify the holy Sacrifice of the Altar , wherein the Body and Blood of Jesus Christ are consecrated. Notwithstanding it is not always to be met with in this Sense in the Books of the new Testament, Saint Luke and Saint Paul sometimes use it to denote the Service of the Priests of [Luke i. 23. Heb. ix. 2.] the Old Testament; for Example, speaking of the Ministry of Zachary, John the Baptist's Father, and the Sacerdotal Ministry of Melchisedech. It is likewise made Use of to express the Service which Saint Paul did the Faithful by preaching the Gospel, and procuring Alms for them. In the Books of the Old Testament it signifies the Service [2 Cor. ix. 12. Phil. ii. 25, 30. 1 Chro. xxvi. 30. Numb. iv. 21. & passim.] performed by the Priests and Levites in the Temple. It answers to the Hebrew, Aboda, which interpreted is Servitus, officium, ministerium.

Lizard

LIZARD. Moses[1] places two Sorts of Lizards among the unclean Creatures, which he forbids his People to eat, Stellio and Lacerta. There are several Sorts of Lizards which are very well known to us. There are some in Arabia, of a Cubit long; but in the Indies there are some, they say, of four and twenty Feet in Length. In America, where Lizards are very good, they eat them. One Lizard is enough to satisfy four Men. It is very probable likewise, that they were eaten sometimes in Arabia and Judæa, since Moses ranks them among the unclean Creatures.

We find several Sorts of Lizards in the Scripture; at least we have three or four Words there for it; Letæa, Chomet, Tinschemeth, and Semamith. The three first Words are to be met with in the Place above cited from Moses: The two former whereof are translated Stellio and Lacerta. The third is translated a Mole; but Bochart maintains it is a Chameleon. The fourth is described in the Proverbs xxx. 28. and there rendred Stellio a Lizard. The same Author, to whom we have a great Regard in these Matters, maintains the Version of the Vulgate and the Septuagint, against those, [Plin. l. vi. c. 28.] who translate an Ape, a Leach, or a Spider. Locman LOCMAN. The Name of Locman ought not to have a Place in this Dictionary, since there is no Mention of it in the Scripture; but as some Oriental Authors[1] make him to be Job's Nephew, or his Aunt's Son, and consequently his Cousin German; and others will have him to be the Son of Beor, the Son of Nahor, and Grandson of Terah, and consequently Abraham's great Nephew, we are of Opinion, that the Reader will not think it superfluous in this Place.

When we compare all that the Eastern Writers have said of this famous Sage, we must, methinks, either allow him to have lived very long, or acknowledge that there were two or three of the same Name; for many affirm, that Locman the Wise lived in the Time of David and Solomon, others as long as to that of Jonah; some make him Contemporary with Æsop, and confound him even with the famous Author of the Fables.

The Generality of Mahometan Authors assert, that Locman was of a servile Condition, a Taylor, or Carpenter, or Shepherd by Profession, and an Æthiopian by Nation; that he was sold into the Territories of Israel, under the Reigns of David and Solomon. They relate, that on a certain Day while he was sleeping about Noon, Angels entring into his Chamber, saluted him without becoming visible to him. Locman seeing no one, made no Answer to their Salutation. The Angels told him, that God intended to make him Monarch, and his Vicegerent upon Earth; he replied, that if God designed him for this Employment, he would not fail to give him those necessary Helps, which might enable him to perform the Duties of it; but if he would leave his Condition of Life to his Choice, he would beg of him to let him continue as he was, and to preserve him from Sin, without which all the Grandeur in the World would be uneasy to him.

This Answer was so agreeable to God, that he immediately gave him the Gift of Wisdom with such Profusion, that he was able to instruct all the World by a Multitude of Sentences, Maxims, and Parables, which amount in Number to ten Thousand.

David having one Day asked him, How did you rise this Morning? He replied, I rose out of the midst of the Dust; which gave David a great Esteem of Locman's Humility.

Being seated on a certain Day amidst a Company of People who were hearing him, a Jew of great Note asked him, whether he was not that Slave, who not long ago kept such an one's Sheep. I am, says Locman: And how, replied the Jew, came you so suddenly to attain to so great a Degree of Wisdom and Virtue? By accomplishing three Things, said Locman, by always speaking Truth, keeping my Word inviolably, and never concerning my self with Matters which did not belong to me.

There is a Book intitled, Giovaher Altassir, which contains an Abridgement of Locman's principal Actions and finest Sentences; and the Author of Tarish Montekeb says, that his Tomb was in his Time still to be seen in Judæa, near the City Remla or Ramah, to the West of Jerusalem; that he was by Birth an Abyssinian or Nubian, and by Religion a Jew; that he was one of the seventy Prophets who perished all in one Day, and were starved to Death by the Jews; that he lived three hundred Years, and is a different Person from another Locman, who lived in the Patriarch Eber's Time. This is the Account given by this Author.

The Wisdom of Locman is become Proverbial among the Eastern People. There is a good deal of Probability that this Man is the same with Æsop, who lived in the Time of Crœsus King of Lydia overcome by Cyrus, and of Solon the Legislator of the Athenians. The Name of Æsop in Greek sometimes signifies Æthiopian. Æsop and Locman were alike Slaves; both wrote Apologues and Fables, many whereof are to be met with in Locman's Collection, which we find likewise among those of Æsop; and many are attributed to Æsop, whereof Locman is reputed to be the Author: For Example, that the Tongue is the best and most dangerous Part of Man; and that Locman being accused by his Companions of eating a particular Fruit, to justify himself, first made himself vomit, and shewed that he had nothing like it in his Stomach, and then obliged the other Slaves to do the same, who threw up Pieces of the Fruit, which he had been accused with eating.

Locusts

LOCUSTS. The Hebrews have many Names for Locusts, and they have discovered several Sorts of them, which are not [Ex. x. 4, 12, &c. Ps. lxxvii. 46. and civ. 34, 35.] known among us. God smote Egypt with the Plague of Locusts, which ravaged every Thing that was left remaining in the [Joel i. 6, 7, &c. ii. 3, 4, 5, &c. Isai. xxxiii. 4, 5.] Fields belonging to that Countrey. The old Historians, and modern Travellers remark, that Locusts are very numerous in Africk, and in many Places of Asia; that sometimes they fall like a Cloud upon the Countrey, and eat up every Thing they meet with; that the Quantity of them is sometimes so large, that they obscure the Sea; and that the People discerning them in the Air, are in a Consternation, being uncertain whether they will fall or not upon their Lands[1]. The Prophet Joel giving an Account of a great Dearth which happened in Judæa, after it had been laid waste by a Multitude of Locusts, speaks of them as of an Enemy's Army, which had committed all Sorts of Devastations there. Isaiah remarks, that when the Locusts were carried away into the Sea, and were afterwards thrown up in Heaps upon the Sands, great Holes were dug in the Earth to bury them; or else they were burnt, to prevent the Infection which might otherwise have been produced by them in the Air. And in Reality it has sometimes happened, that great Plagues have been occasioned by them[2].

Moses[3] declares all Creatures that fly and walk upon four Feet to be impure, but he excepts those which having their Hindfeet larger than the others, skip and do not crawl upon the Earth. Afterwards he describes four Sorts of Locusts[4], called in Hebrew, Arbi, Salab, Chargol, and Hachagab, which Saint Jerom translates Bruchus, Attacus, Ophiomacus, and Locusta. The Reader, if he pleases, may see Bochart upon Locusts, in his large Work De Animal. Sacr. Part ii. l. iv. c. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8.

Since there was a Prohibition made by Moses against using Locusts, it is not to be questioned but that these Creatures were commonly eaten in Palestine, and in the neighbouring Countries; wherefore there is no Difficulty in supposing, that the Word Acrides, made Use of by Saint [Matth. iii. 4.] Matthew, speaking of the Food on which Saint John subsisted, might signify Locusts. The Ancients affirm[5], that in Africk, Syria, Persia, and almost throughout all Asia, the People did commonly eat these Creatures. Nay there are some intire Nations called Acridophagior, Eaters of Locusts, because this is their principal Food. Several modern Authors testify, that the Use of them is still at this Day common in Africk and the East. Clenard, in a Letter written from Fez in the Year 1541 assures us, that he saw Waggon-loads of Locusts brought into that City, which the People bought to feed on. Kirstenius in his Notes upon Saint Matthew, says, he was informed by his Arabick Master, that he had often seen of them upon the River Jordan, that they are of the same Form as ours, but larger; that the Inhabitants pluck off their Wings and their Feet, and hang the rest at their Necks till they grow warm and ferment; and that then they eat them, and think it a very good Sort of Food. A Monk who has travelled into Egypt, assures us, that he had eaten of these Locusts, and that in the Countrey they subsisted upon them four Months in the Year. See the Commentators upon Saint Matthew, Chap. iii. V. 4. And Bochart de Animal. Sacr. p. 2. l. 4.

Ludolphus in his Comment upon the History of Æthiopia pretends to shew, that what the Vulgate and Generality of Interpreters explain of the Quails sent by [Ex. xvi. 1. Numb. x. 11.] God for the Sustenance of his People, should be understood of Locusts. He produces several Arguments to support his Opinion, whereof we shall give a short Abstract under the Word QUAILS.

Longinus

LONGINUS. The Soldier who pierced our Lord's Side with his Spear is called by [John xix. 34.] this Name. We have many Stories of Longinus, but none very authentick. That which the Bollandists have published, in the Acts of the Saints on the 15th of March imports, that Longinus was one of the Soldiers appointed to guard the Cross, and the Persons who were crucified, that he observing the Miracles which happened at the Death of Jesus Christ, was converted, and acknowledged him to be a just Man; that afterwards having been set by Pilate as a Guard over our Saviour's Sepulcher, he refused the Money, offered by the Priests in Order to corrupt him, and thereby induce him to give out, that the Disciples of our Lord had taken away his Body; which so far provoked Pilate, that he resolved upon his Destruction, but was not able to succeed in his Design: That in Order to his devoting himself intirely to Jesus Christ, he renounced a military Life without Pilate's Leave, and retired to his own House in Cappadocia, with two of his Fellow Soldiers, who followed his Example. As soon as he came into Cappadocia, he began to preach the Gospel there, whereupon the Jews sollicited Pilate to write to the Emperor, and desire that these Deserters might be punished. At the same Time they sent Money to Rome, the more effectually to procure what they wished. Tiberius commanded Longinus and his Companions to be executed as Deserters; and Pilate accordingly sent Soldiers into Cappadocia, who cut off their Heads, and brought them to him.

Surius relates the History of him from other Acts, taken from Metaphrastes, which are still more dubious than those which we have cited. Allatius[1] quotes others besides these, which he believes were written by an Eye Witness: But Bollandus who saw them, has not thought fit so much as to take a Copy of them. Saint Chrysostom[2] tells us, that in his Time there were People who maintained, that the Centurion mentioned [Matth. xxvii. 54.] in the Gospel, who gave Glory to God, saying of a Truth this was the Son of God; that this Centurion, I say, was so well confirmed in the Faith, as to suffer Martyrdom, and that the Acts of his Martyrdom were in the Hands of some Persons: But he does not affirm that this was he who pierced our Saviour's Side; and much less still that his Name was Longinus. The Greeks assert, that Longinus suffered Martyrdom at Andrales or Sandrales, near Thyane in Cappadocia, and they honour him upon the sixteenth of October. The Latins believe Longinus not to be the Centurion, but the Soldier who pierced the Son of God's Side. They keep his Festival upon the fifteenth of March: See Bollandus on the fifteenth of this Month, and M. de Tillemont's Ecclesiastical History, Tom. i. Looking-Glasses

LOOKING-GLASSES. Moses says, that the devout Women who sat up all Night at the Door of the Tabernacle in the Wilderness, offered very chearfully their Looking-Glasses to be employed in making a Brazen Bason for the Purifications of the [Exod. xxxviii. 8. Plin. l. xxiii. c. 9.] Priests. These Looking-Glasses were without Doubt of Brass, since the Bason here mentioned, and the Basis of it, were made out of them. Nevertheless some Interpreters are of Opinion, that they were of Glass, with only a Border of Brass. Others will have it, that they were placed about this brazen Vessel, that the Priests might there behold themselves: But it is needless to have Recourse to these Explanations, since we know that Looking-Glasses were formerly made of Brass, Tin, Silver, and a Mixture of Brass and Silver. The last of these were the most valued: Optima apud majores fuerunt Brundusina stanno & æreque mistis. There are some to be seen still at this Day of Metal, which are much esteemed. Saint Cyril of Alexandria[1] says, that when the Ægyptian Women went to the Temple dressed in Linnen, they carried a Looking-Glass in their right Hands, and a Sistrum in their left.

Magicians sometimes used Looking-glasses in their superstitious and diabolical Operations; and there are those who affirm[2], that Solomon and Alexander had some of them, by the Help whereof they knew all Things natural, and sometimes even supernatural Things: The Way of divining by Looking-Glasses was known among the Ancients. They would hoodwink, they say, the Eyes of a Child, and notwithstanding he should see in the Looking-Glass what People had a Mind to be acquainted with. The Sorcerers of Thessaly who boasted that they could draw down the Moon, wrote the Particulars upon which they were consulted on a Looking-Glass, and he who consulted them, read the Answer, not upon the Looking-Glass, but in the Moon, which, as was said, they procured to descend from Heaven, Lunam deducere.[3]

The Looking-Glasses of the Ancients were generally round. Seneca inveighs against the Luxury of the Women in his Time, which was arrived to such a Height, that Looking-Glasses were as large as human Bodies, and cost more than formerly was required to endow the Daughter of a Roman General. Do you believe, adds he, that Scipio's Daughters had Looking-Glasses set in Gold? They to whom the Senate gave a moderate Portion, which now would not be sufficient to purchase a Looking-Glass for the Daughter of a Freed-Man.

Sophocles, according to the Citation in Athenæus[4], represents Venus viewing herself in a Looking-Glass, after having perfumed her whole Body. This shews the Antiquity of Looking-Glasses among the Greeks. Pausanias[5] speaks of another Looking-Glass, made Use of in Order to know whether sick Persons were recoverable or not. It was fastened to a Pack-thread, and let down gently to the Surface of the Water, so that the Circle or Extremity of it, the Edge of it touched the Water; then they presented their Prayers with burning Incense to the Goddess, and in the Looking-Glass they saw the sick Persons in the Condition wherein they were to be after their Sickness, either dead or in Health.

Lord

LORD, Dominus; in Greek, Kyrios; in Hebrew, Adoni, or Adonai; Elohim, or Jehovah; for the Greek and Latin Interpreters often put Dominus Lord for all these Names. The Name of Lord belongs to God in the Way of Eminency, and in this Sense ought never to be given to any Creature. Jesus Christ as God and Son of God, equal to the Father, is likewise oftentimes called Lord in the Scriptures of the Old and New Testament.

II. This Name is sometimes given to Angels; whether they represent the Person of God, as in those Visions of the Old Testament, wherein the Patriarchs and Prophets speak to them in the same Terms as to God himself; or whether they are looked upon as Angels sent by God. For Example, Daniel says to the Angel, or as he calls him, to one who spoke to him under an human Form; O [Dan. x. 16. 17.] my Lord, by the Vision my Sorrows are turned upon me, and I have retained no Strength. For how can the Servant of this my Lord talk with this my Lord?

III. It is made Use of when we speak to Princes, Great Men and Persons, to whom we would shew Respect; and it is to be met with in this Sense at every Turn in Scripture. But generally the Word, my, is joined with it: My Lord; and tho' sometimes the Words Adoni and Elohim are attributed to the Creature, Jehovah never is.

Lot

LOT, the Son of Haran, and Nephew to Abraham. He followed his Uncle when he left the City of Ur; and afterwards when he departed from Haran, in Order to settle in the Land of Canaan[1]. Abraham had always a great Tenderness for him. He carried him with him into Egypt, and brought him back into the Land of Canaan. But [Gen. xiii. 6, 7.] they could not continue longer together: They were obliged to separate, because as they both had large Flocks, their Shepherds sometimes quarrelled. Abraham therefore said to Lot; Let there be no Dispute between us, since we are Brethren, the whole Land is before us, fix upon what Part you please. If you go to the Left, I will go to the Right; and if you choose the Right, I will take the Left. Lot therefore chose Sodom for the Place of his Abode[2], the Countrey round about it being very beautiful and agreeable.

About eight Years after[3], King Clederlaomer and his Allies having attacked the King of Sodom, and the Princes of the neighbouring Cities, routed them, pillaged Sodom, took a great Number of Captives, and carried away Lot in particular, Abraham's Nephew. Abraham being informed [Gen. xiv. 12, 13.] of it, chose out of his Servants three Hundred resolute and well armed Men, with whom he pursued the Confederate Kings, overtook them near the Springs of Jordan, beat them, put them to Flight, recovered the Spoil which they had taken, and brought back the Captives, among the rest, his Nephew Lot. Some Years after the Sins of the Sodomites and Inhabitants of the four neighbouring Cities being at their full Height, God sent three Angels to punish and utterly destroy them[4,5]. The three Angels passed by Abraham's Dwelling; and this Patriarch had the Advantage of receiving them in his Tent. As he conducted them back on the Way to Sodom, one of them discovered to him the Occasion of their Journey: And Abraham full of Apprehensions for his Nephew,[6] asked whether God would involve the Innocent with the Guilty in the Ruins of this City, and if he would destroy it, supposing only twenty or ten righteous Persons were to be found in it. The Angel having told him, that God would spare Sodom if he met with only ten righteous Men in it; Abraham returned, assuring himself, that there would be without doubt at least such a Number of good Men in so large a City, and that Lot would not fail to be one of them.

Towards the Evening, the two Angels, for the third had disappeared, being sent in all Probability only to declare the Birth of Isaac: These two Angels, I say, being come to Sodom, Lot, who was sitting at the City Gate, perceived them, went to meet them, threw himself prostrate on the Earth, and intreated them very earnestly to take Shelter in his House. The Angels at first refused, saying that they would pass the Night in the publick Street; but Lot pressing them to come into his House, they went in, and he provided an Entertainment for them. But before they were retired to lye down and rest, all the Inhabitants of the City besieged Lot's House, and said to him: Where are these Men, who came to you this Evening? Produce them, that we may know them. Do not, I beseech you, my Brethren, said Lot, do not any Thing so wicked. I have two Daughters, both Virgins; I will bring them to you; use them as you please, provided you do no Evil to these Men who are come to my House, as to a Place of Security. But they said to him: Be gone, you came a Stranger hither, and now pretend to be our Judge. We will treat you your self with Violence. And as they were upon the Point of breaking open the Door, the two Angels stretched out their Hands to Lot, drew him back into his House, and shut the Door, and struck all those with Blindness who were round about it; so that they were not able any more to find where it was.

Then the Angels said to Lot, direct all those who belong to you to depart out of this City; for we are going to destroy it, because the Cry of the Inhabitants Sins is gone up even to the Lord; and he has sent us to ruin it effectually. Lot went therefore to his Sons in Law, who had married his Daughters, informed them of what he had heard, and told them that it was advisable for them to depart in all Haste out of Sodom, because the Lord was going to destroy it. But this Intelligence they received as an idle Fancy of his, and took no Notice of it. In the Morning as soon as it was Day the Angels took Lot, his Wife, and Daughters by the Hand, and carried them forcibly as it were out of their House, because they were not very ready to leave it. When this was done, they said, save your selves with all the Haste you can, look not behind you, get as fast as you are able to the Mountain, lest you be involved in the Misfortune of the rest. Lot intreated the Angels to consent, that he might retreat to Zoar, which was one of the five Cities doomed to be destroyed. The Angels therefore in this Particular were condescending to him, and permitted him to fly to Zoar. But Lot's Wife having looked behind her, was caught in the Flame, which fell from Heaven, and consumed Sodom together with the Countrey about it, and was changed into a Pillar of Salt.

[Gen. xix. 30, 31, &c.] Lot having beheld the sad Calamity which attended Sodom and the neighbouring Cities, had not Courage to abide in Zoar; but left it, and retreated with his two Daughters to a Cave in some Mountain near it. They imagining that all Mankind was destroyed, and that the World would have an End, unless they provided new Inhabitants for it, made their Father drink to an Excess, and the eldest lay with him without his perceiving any Thing of it; so that she conceived a Son by him, whom she called Moab: He was the Father of the Moabites. The second Daughter, after having in like Manner intoxicated him, went in to him the next Night, and had Ammon by him, who was the Father of the Ammonites. See the Commentators upon the xix. Chap. of Genesis, in Order to know the better what Judgment we should form of the whole Conduct of Lot, his Wife and Daughters. Saint Peter says, that God delivered [2 Pet. ii. 7.] righteous Lot from the Oppression and Vexation of the Sodomites.

[פעור. בעל] Some have asserted that Baal-peor, who was worshipped among the Moabites, the Descendants of Lot, was no other than Lot himself. Baal-peor they say signifies, the God exposed naked, and without Modesty; which answers pretty nearly to what happened to Lot and his Daughters.

The Mahometans have added many Circumstances to the History of Lot[7]. They assert, that this Patriarch was sent by God to the Inhabitants of Sodom, and the four Cities, in Order to preach the Unity of God, and divert them from the abominable Crime whereof they are said to have been the first Authors, and which from them has taken its Name among us; we call it Sodomy, the Arabians, Louth, or Laouth. Lot acquitted himself of the Duty of a Preacher for twenty Years; he inculcated the Worship of the true God with abundance of Zeal, and endeavoured to raise a great Abhorrence in them of that unnatural Crime, wherewith they polluted themselves, reproaching them with being the first of all Mankind who fell into this Abomination, and perverted thus the Order of Nature; but his Sermons and Remonstrances were all in vain. God resolved therefore to destroy them: The Angel Gabriel was sent with two others to exterminate them. He passed by Abraham's Abode, and discovered God's Resolution to him. Abraham contested for a great while with him, saying, that perhaps there were an Hundred righteous Men in the five Cities, and that God was too just to confound the Innocent with the Guilty. He afterwards descended by Degrees so far as to make the Angel promise, that he would not destroy these Cities if he found but one righteous Person in them. Hereupon Abraham observed to him, that Lot was there with his Family; the Angels replied, we will deliver him; therefore say no more to us of this Matter, for the Sentence of their Condemnation is passed, and is irrevocable.

The Angels upon their Arrival near the City found Lot at work in the Fields; he saluted them, and understanding that they intended to pass that Night in the City, he was much afflicted at it, apprehending least some Insult might be offered them on the Score of their Beauty, and the Agreeableness of their Mien. He could not forbear telling them, that probably they did not know what Sort of People the Inhabitants of Sodom were; that there were not more wicked Men under Heaven; which he repeated to them four Times, Modesty restraining him from explaining himself farther: They did not however submit to his Reasons, but went into the City with him. They were no sooner entred into his House, but the People of Sodom came and besieged them. Lot went out, and offered to sacrifice his Daughters to their Passion, if they would spare his Guests: But their Answer was, Thou knowest that we have nothing to do with thy Daughters, and art not ignorant of what we demand. Lot replied to them, I have not indeed Strength enough to resist you, but God is my Refuge, who will be able to defend me and my Guests from your Outrages.

Then the Angels encouraged him, declared to him who they were, and told him that they were sent to destroy these Wretches. At the same Time they blinded them by only drawing their Hands over their own Faces. This Chastisement dispersed them, and they cried out, that these Hedith. Strangers were Sorcerers. The Angels immediately directed Lot and his Daughters to depart out of the City. But his Wife, who had been debauched by the Conversation which she had had with the Inhabitants of Sodom, chose to stay and perish with them.

The Angel Gabriel going under the Foundations of these Cities, raised them up in the Air to such an Height, that the Inhabitants of Heaven who were nearest to the Earth, heard the Musick of their Horns, and the barking of their Dogs; then he let them fall down upon the Earth, and all who dwelt in them were crushed to Pieces under their Ruins, God intending that their Punishment should have some Proportion to their Crime. After this Overthrow God showered down upon them hot burning Stones baked in the Furnaces of Hell; upon each whereof the Names of the Guilty were written, so that even they who were without the Compass of their City, were burnt and knocked on the Head by them. It is said that one of them being at that Time by Chance in the Temple of Mecca, built by Abraham, continued there secure for forty Days; but that he no sooner set his Foot out of it, but he was struck down and killed like the rest of his Countrymen.

Lotan

LOTAN, the Son of Seir the Horite, Gen. xxxvi. 20.

LOT's WIFE, is called Hedith by the Rabbins[1]. The Word Hedith signifies Witness; as if they would hereby declare this Woman to be a Witness, or Proof of the Punishment, which God inflicts upon the Incredulity and Imprudence of those, [Gen. xix. 26.] who believe not his Word and Threatnings. The Scripture says, that she looked back from behind him, and was changed into a Pillar of Salt. This Way of speaking, to look back behind one, is taken sometimes for delaying, deferring, staying; and it was probably the Angel's Intention to hasten Lot and his Family, and convince them that they had Reason to fear the worst Consequences from their Delays. Several Difficulties are proposed concerning what is said of her being changed into a Pillar of Salt. Some are of Opinion, that no more is signified by the Scripture Phrase, but that she was surprized and suffocated with Fire and Smoak, and that she continued in the same Place as stiff and immovable as a Rock of Salt: Others think that a Column or Monument of Salt Stone was put upon her Grave: Others, that she was stifled in the Flame, and became a Monument of Salt to Posterity, that is to say, a permanent and durable Monument of her own Incredulity and Imprudence. Others assert, that she was was overpowered with the Smell of Sulphur and Flame, and fell down dead upon the Earth, where her Body petrified, and became stiff and dry like Mummies and Egyptian Bodies which have been salted and embalmed: So that a Statue of Salt signifies the same as a Body embalmed, dried and salted.

[Iren. l. 4. c. 51.] But it is the most common and universal Opinion, that this Woman was on a sudden petrified and changed into a Statue of Rock Salt[2]; which not only is not melted by the Rain, but is likewise as hard as the hardest Rocks. The Generality of Travellers who have gone over Palestine relate, that Lot's Wife was shewn to them; that is to say, the Rock into which she was metamorphosed. But that which makes their Testimony very much to be suspected is, that they do not agree about the Place where she is seen; some saying Westward, others Eastward; some Northward, others Southward of the Dead Sea, others in the midst of its Waters, others in Zoar, others at a great Distance from this City. Some of the Ancients, as Irenæus, and the Author of a Poem upon Sodom, ascribed to Tertullian, assure us, that this Pillar remained still in the Form of a Woman, and that by a continual Miracle it so happened, that the Largeness of it was not at all diminished, tho' People were continually plucking off Pieces of it. They farther add something more incredible, viz. that she remained in this Condition subject to all the Infirmities which are natural and common to her Sex. The Reader may, if he pleases, consult our Comment upon Gen. xix. 26. M. le Clerc's Dissertation upon Lot's Wife, Henry Bauman's upon the same Subject, that of M. Hermand Hard, and Christopher Augustus Bauman, and the Commentators upon the Place of Genesis abovecited. Our Lord in the Gospel admonishes his Disciples, to remember Lot's Wife in their Flight, and [Luke xvii. 32.] not to imitate her Tardiness.

Lot

LOT, Sors; in Hebrew, Goral; in Greek Kleros, in Persian, Pur; whence the Feast Purim, or the Feast of Lots is denominated. We see the Use of Lots in very many Places of the Scripture. God commands for Example[1], that Lots should be cast upon the two Goats, which were offered for the Sins of the Multitude, upon the solemn Day of [Numb. xxvi. 55, 56 xxxiii. 54. xxxiv. 13, &c. Joshua xiv, xv, xvi. 1 Chr. vi. 54, 61. 1 Chr. xxiv. xxv. Obad. i. 11. Nahum iii. 10, &c. John xix. 24, 25. Psalm xxii. 18. Acts i. 26.] Expiation, in Order to know which of the two should be sacrificed, and which set at Liberty. He required also that the Land of Promise should be divided by Lot, as soon as it was conquered; which Joshua executed accordingly. The Priests and Levites in like Manner had such Cities given them as fell by Lot to them. Lastly, in the Time of David, the four and twenty Classes of the Priests and Levites were distributed by Lot, to determine in what Order they should wait in the Temple. In the Division of the Spoil after Victory, Lots were cast likewise, in Order to distribute to every one his Portion. In the New Testament the Soldiers drew Lots for Jesus Christ's Garments, as had been foretold by the Prophet. Lastly, after the Death of Judas, Lots were cast to decide which of the three Persons who were chosen, should succeed the Traitor .

As to the Manner of casting Lots, we do not see that it is described clearly in the Scripture, and Interpreters do not agree about it, for several Methods were made Use of. [Prov. xvi. 33.] Solomon in the Proverbs points out one, The Lot is cast into the Lap, but the whole disposing thereof is of the Lord. Lots therefore were cast either into some Person's Lap, into an Helmet, or an earthen Vessel, or a Vessel made of some other Matter; there they were shook together, and afterwards cast or drawn: But all this, it is very probable, might depend upon the Inclination and Will of those who were concerned.

[Prov. xviii. 18. Esther iii. 7, &c.] The Use of Lots in itself is not prohibited by the Law, for God even enjoins it upon some Occasions, and the most holy Persons both in the Old and New Testament in particular Cases have practised it. The wise Man acknowledges the Usefulness of this Custom in these Words. The Lot causeth Contentions to cease, and parteth between the mighty. But it cannot be denied that casting Lots is sometimes forbidden; for Example, when it is practised without Necessity, or with a Spirit of Superstition, or with a Design of tempting God, and in Things wherein there are other natural Means of discovering Truth; lastly, when Reason and Religion furnish us with other Ways to determine us[2]. Haman, for Example, used Lots not only out of Superstition, but likewise in an unjust and criminal Matter, when he undertook to destroy the Jews in the Kingpom of Persia. Nebuchadnezzar likewise did so in a superstitious Manner, when being upon the Way to Jerusalem, and Rabbath of the Ammonites, he cast Lots to determine which of the two Cities he should go to. The Mariners who [Ezek. xxi. 18, 19. Jonah i, 7.] had Jonah in their Vessel tempted God, by drawing Lots to know whence the Tempest came with which they were overtaken. The Storm might be natural, and it was very possible that all of them were culpable. Lastly, God was not obliged to discover to them by Lots who was the guilty Person. See our Dissertation upon Elections by casting Lots, prefixed to the Acts of the Apostles.

Lot, is taken likewise for Inheritance. For Example, Come up with me into my Lot, [Judg. i. 3. Ps. xv. 5. Ps. cxxv. 3.] into my Inheritance: Lord, thou maintainest my Lot: And again, The Rod of the Wicked shall not rest upon the Lot of the Righteous, upon the Inheritance of thy Servants.

Lucifer

LUCIFER. This Word is taken either for the Morning Star, or for Jesus Christ, who is the Light of the World; or lastly for the Devil, who in the Writings of the Fathers is often called Lucifer. Zophar says to Job, If thou art innocent, when thou shalt think thy self lost, thou shalt shine forth as the Morning Star. And God speaking to Job, [Job xi. 17. Boker. Job xxxviii. 32. Chima. Ps. cx. 3. Schachar. Aurora. 2 Pet. i. 19.] says, Canst thou produce the Morning Star at the Time when it should appear? And the eternal Father speaking of the Word; I have begotten thee in my Womb before the Morning[1]. Saint Peter speaking to the Faithful says; We have also a more sure Word of Prophecy, whereunto ye do well that ye take Heed, as unto a Light that shineth in a dark Place, until the Day dawn, and the Day- Star arise in your Hearts. [If. xiv. 12, &c.] He compares the Light of Prophecies with that of a Lamp shining in some obscure Place, and the Light of Faith and of the Gospel to the Dawn of Day, and to the Morning Star[2]. Isaiah speaks of the Fall of Lucifer from the Height of Heaven in this Passage, How art thou fallen from Heaven, O Lucifer; Son of the Morning? Thou that appearest so bright at the Break of Day. In this Sense several of the old Fathers have explained it[3], and many Commentators still at this Day do explain it. But others[4] are of Opinion that it literally refers to the King of Babylon, who fell from his State of Glory and Elevation, and was cast headlong into Hell. Notwithstanding which we may explain it allegorically of the Fall of the rebellious Angel.

[2 Pet. i. 19.] Saint Peter in his second Epistle tells the Faithful, that they have the Word of Prophesy whereunto they do well that they take Heed, as unto a Light that shineth in a dark Place, until the Day dawn, and the Day- Star arise in their Hearts. The Morning-Star, this Sun set in Opposition to the Oracles of the Prophets which they succeed, and of which they have so much the Advantage by their Clearness, denote visibly the Gospel and Doctrine of Jesus Christ. Saint Peter by this Passage would describe to us three Degrees of Light. 1t. The Oracles of the Prophets, which shine in Obscurity; this is the State of the Jews. 2d. The Morning Star, which signifies the Dawn of Day, and those who seriously search for Jesus Christ in the Books of the Old Testament. 3d. The Sun, which is the State of those who have embraced the Faith. Some translate the Greek[5], till the Day appear, and the Sun rises in their Hearts. They pretend, that Phosphoros and Lucifer sometimes signify the Sun. The Arabians call Lucifer, Eblis[6], which is a Diminitive or Corruption of Diabolos. They give him likewise the Name of Azazel, which is the Name of the Scape-Goat that was driven into the Wilderness, loaded with the Sins and Curses of the Jewish People. They relate, that the Angels having God's Order[7] to fall prostrate before Adam immediately after his Creation, all complied, except Eblis, who obstinately refused, alledging, that he and his Companions having been derived from the Element of Fire, which is much purer and more excellent than that of Earth, whereof Adam was formed, it was not just that they should be obliged to pay Submissions to their inferior. Whereupon God said to him, Be gone from hence, for thou shalt be deprived for ever of my Peace, and shalt be cursed to the Day of Judgment. Eblis desired of God that he would grant him Respite till the Time of the general Resurrection; but all the Delay he could obtain was till the Sound of the first Trumpet, which is that at which all Men shall die, in Order to rise again at the second Sound of the Trumpet; that is to say, forty Years after. Eblis therefore died according to the Mahometans, but he will hereafter rise with all Men, in Order to be plunged into the Flames. I relate all these idle Traditions for no other Reason but to shew, that the Theology of the Eastern People is only a Corruption of Christianity, all the Truths whereof have been altered by them.

I. LUCIUS of Cyrene, mentioned in the [Acts xiii. 1.] Acts, was one of the Prophets of the Christian Church at Antioch. While he was imployed in his Ministry with the other Prophets, the Holy Ghost said to them; Separate me Paul and Barnabas for the Work whereunto I have called them; and after they had fasted and prayed, they laid their Hands upon them and let them go. [Gen. x. 13.] LUDIM, the Son of Mizraïm. Josephus affirmed, that the Descendants of Ludim had been a long Time extinct, and that they were destroyed in the Ethiopian Wars. The Jerusalem[1] Paraphrast translates Ludim, the Inhabitants of the Mareotis, Part of Egypt: But Bochart maintains, that we should read, the Land of Meroe, or Meroitis. The Paraphrast Jonathan translates it, those of the Canton of Neut, or Neout, in Egypt; the Arabick, the Inhabitants of Tenezus, near Pelusium. Ezekiel places the Ludim with Cush and Phut, and elsewhere with Phut and Pharas, or perhaps Pathros. These People were in Egypt: But it is not easy to shew exactly where the Ludim dwelt.

Ludo

LUDO, ludere. This Latin Verb generally signifies to play, to divert one self: But it is said sometimes to signify likewise to fight, to ridicule, to laugh at, to grow debauched, irregular, idolatrous. It is said for Example, that Ishmael played with Isaac. [Gen. xxi. 9. 2 Sam. ii. 14.] It is believed that he used him ill, or that he rallied him with Contempt and Insolence. Abner said to Joab, Let the young Men now arise and play before us; that is, let them fight, and give us the Diversion of a single Combat. We are told, that the Hebrews having worshipped the golden Calf in the Wilderness, sat down to eat and drink, and that afterwards they rose up to play, to abandon themselves to Lewdness and Debauchery. Potiphar's Wife complained, that her Husband had brought the Hebrew, Joseph, to play with her, to insult her Honour.

Luke

[Gen. xxxix. 14, 17.] LUKE. Saint Luke the Evangelist is by some ancient Authors called Lucas, Lucius, or Lucanus. He was a Syrian, a Native of Antioch, and by Profession a Physician.[1] They who believe him to be called Lucius, in the Epistle to the Romans, must acknowledge [1 Rom. xvi. 21.] likewise, that he was Saint Paul's Kinsman: Lucius and Jason — my Kinsmen. It is not agreed whether he was by Birth a Jew or Heathen. They who maintain[2] that he was one of the Seventy Disciples, believe that he was also a Jew both by Religion and Extraction, for none but such were chosen by our Saviour. Epiphanius thinks, that he was one of those who left Jesus Christ, upon hearing these Words from him: He who cateth not my Flesh, and drinketh not my Blood, is not worthy of me; but that he returned to the Faith upon hearing Saint Paul's Sermons at Antioch. Gregory the Great[3], and some others in Theophylact, believe Saint Luke was Cleophas's Companion, and went with him to Emmaus, when Jesus Christ joined them. In an Addition which we find at the End of Saint Jerom's Treatise of Eminent Men, we find that Saint Luke lived always a single Life, having had neither Wife nor Children.

He was Saint Paul's Companion in his several Journeys, when he went about [2 Tim. iv. 11. Philemon. V. 23, 24. Coloss. iv. 14.] preaching the Gospel; but in what Place and at what Time they first came together, we cannot tell. They who maintain that he was converted by Saint Paul at Antioch, believe that after that Time, he never forsook him. Others will have it, that they met at Troas; and Saint Luke himself favours this Opinion, when he expresses [Acts xvi. 8, 9, 10.] himself in the Acts: Immediately we endeavoured to go into Macedonia from Troas. He begins in this Place to speak in the first Person, as being then one of Saint Paul's Company. It is commonly believed, that Saint Luke was a Painter, and in some Places there are Pictures of the Virgin shewn of his Drawing, or at least Copies taken from Originals by his Hand. The Ancients knew nothing of Saint Luke's being qualified in this Manner, and Nicephorus is the first Author who made Mention of it. But if he did not paint the Virgin's and her Son's Faces, he has left us many Particulars concerning the Blessed Virgin, and the Infancy of Jesus Christ, from which we may judge, that he had seen and was acquainted with this admirable Person, and that he had even a Share in her Confidence[4].

Epiphanius believes[5], that he preached the Gospel in Dalmatia, Gaul, Italy, and Macedonia. Metaphrastes will have it, that he preached in Egypt, Libya, and Thebaï. Some are of Opinion that he survived Saint Paul many Years, and that he died in Achaia[6], in a good old Age, being eighty, or eighty four Years old. Nicephorus[7] says, that he died at Thebes in Bœotia, where still at this Day there is a Tomb to be seen, which is believed to be Saint Luke's. Hippolytus[8] informs us, that he was crucified at Elea in the Peloponnesus. Dorothæus in his Synopsis, tells us, that he died and was buried at Ephesus. Bede, Usuard, Ado and the Roman Calendar agree, that he died in Bithynia. There are several Opinions concerning what kind of Death he died. Some[9] believe that he suffered Martyrdom; and the modern Greeks affirm, that he was crucified upon an Olive-Tree. Elias of Crete[10], on the contrary, supposes it as a Point very clear, that he did not die a violent Death; and many of the Moderns are of this Opinion.

Besides the Gospel of Saint Luke, and the Acts of the Apostles, some other Works are ascribed to him, such as the Translation, or even the Composition, as to the Style at least, of the Epistle to the Hebrews. Clemens of Alexandria[11] believes him to be the Author of the Disputation between Jason and Papiscus; which is not now in Being. Others[12] inform us, that even the Gospel of Saint Luke was properly Saint Paul's Gospel; that this Apostle dictated it to Saint Luke, and that when Saint Paul speaks of his Gospel[13], he means the Gospel of Saint Luke. But Saint Irenæus[14] says no more than that Saint Luke digested into Writing what Saint Paul preached to the Gentiles; and Gregory Nazianzen, that the Evangelist wrote with the Help of Saint Paul. It is certain that Saint Paul generally quotes the Gospel according to Saint Luke[15]; but Saint Luke no where says that he was assisted by Saint Paul. He addresses the Gospel and the Acts to one Theophilus, of whom we have no Knowledge; and many of the Ancients themselves have taken this Name in an appellative Sense, for one who loves God. The Marcionites received only the Gospel of Saint Luke; and even this they curtailed in many Places, as Tertullian[16] and Epiphanius[17] have observed.

As to the Acts of the Apostles, we have already spoken of them in another Place under the Article Acts. Saint Luke's Style is generally purer than that of the other Evangelists: Notwithstanding several Expressions are remarked in it peculiar to the Hellenistical Jews, several touches which have some Resemblance to the Genius of the Syriac; and, in Grotius's Judgment, even to the Latin Tongue. See M. de Tillemont concerning the Life of Saint Luke, and our Preface to his Gospel, and the Acts of the Apostles.

Lunatick

LUNATICK[1]. Those sick Persons are called by this Name, who are attacked principally in the Changes of the Moon; for Example, epileptical Persons, or they who have the falling Sickness, mad People,or they who are tormented with Fits of dismal Melancholy; and lastly, Persons possessed by the Devil, for they have often been believed to have really been possessed by the Devil, who were tormented only with too great a Degree of Melancholy. Saint Jerom[2] is of Opinion, that the Lunaticks in the Gospel were possessed Persons, whom the People through Mistake called Lunaticks, because they saw them most tormented during the Change of the Moon; the Devil affecting to make them suffer most in these Circumstances, that simple People might impute the Cause of it to the Moon, and from thence take Occasion to blaspheme the Creator. Others maintain, that all the Difference between Epilepticks and Lunaticks was, that the one were more disordered than the others. Persons subject to Epilepsies are not all equally attacked. Some fall more frequently, and others more rarely. Some there are who fall every Day. Lunaticks are affected only upon the Declension of the Moon. See the Commentators upon Saint Matthew iv. 24. and the Authors who have particularly treated of the Diseases mentioned in the Scripture.

Lunula

[If. iii. 18.] LUNULA. God threatens the Daughters of Sion in Isaiah, that He would take away the rich Ornaments which they wore about their Legs, their little Moons or Crescents: Auferet Dominus ornamentum calceamentorum & lunulas. The Roman Senators wore about their Ankle-bone above the Heel, a Sort of Buckle which they called Moon, because it was in the Form of a Crescent: Patricia claufit vestigia Lunâ. Some have believed, that they wore it before, and at the lower Part of the Leg; but this Opinion is singular; the ancient Figures represent it otherwise. Bruduas, Brother to Herod Atticus, wore this little Moon above his Heel upon the Ankle-bone. It was of Ivory, and in the Form of a Crescent[1]. The Hebrew Word[2] which Saint Jerom has translated Lunulas, signifies in Reality Moon; and Menifcos made Use of by the Septuagint may likewise signify the same Thing. The Scripture uses the same Word in the Passage of Judges, where there is Mention made of the Chains of Gold or pretious Stones, hung [Judg. viii. 21, 26.] upon the Necks of the Camels belonging to the Midianites. They were gold Crescents.

Lust

LUST. A Word used by Saint John to signify the irregular Love of Pleasure, Riches, and Honours, which Saint John has comprized [John xi. 10.] in these Words: All that is in the World, the Lust of the Flesh, the Lust of the Eyes, and the Pride of Life. Lust is not a Sin; but it is the Effect and Cause of Sin. It is the Effect of original Sin, and the Cause of all the Evils which are committed in the World: And as in both Testaments Evil Desires, as well as Evil Actions, are equally proscribed; so the first Care of every Man who would please God, is to bridle his Lust

GRAVES OF LUST; in Hebrew, Kiberothavavah[1]; an Incampment of the Hebrews in the Wilderness, whither they arrived, after having decamped from Sinai. This Encampment was called the Graves of Lust, because three and twenty Thousand Israelites died there, who were smitten by God for murmuring, and eating with Excess of those Quails, which God in his Anger caused to fall round about their Camps. See Numb. xi. 34. Deut. ix. 20, 22.

Lustrations

LUSTRATIONS. This Word is set apart in the Style of those Authors who have treated of religious Ceremonies, to signify the Aspersions, Fumigations and other Ceremonies used in purifying polluted Places or Persons. For Example, God commands Moses to take the Levites from among the Children of Israel, and clean them with the Water of purifying; Aspergantur aquâ [Numb. viii. 6, 7. Numb. xix. 20.] lustrationis. In another Place he ordains upon Pain of Death, that whosoever shall pollute himself by touching a dead Carcase, or by being present at the Funeral of any one, should be purified by sprinkling himself with the Water of Separation, which was a kind of Lye made by throwing into clean Water an handful of the Ashes of a red Heifer, sacrificed upon the great Day of Expiation. Persons and Things which had contracted any Uncleanness upon the Account of a dead Body, were sprinkled with this Water. What was practised when a Leper was cured of his Leprosy, or when a Woman came and presented her self at the Temple after her lying in, may be likewise called a [Lev. xiv. 1, 2, 3, 4. Lev. xii. 6, 7, 8.] Lustration.

The Word Lustrare is also frequently used when Mention is made of Parents consecrating their Children in Honour of the false God Moloch. They obliged them to pass either through the Flames, as some will have it, or between two Fires, as others; or lastly, they consumed them in the Flames, which is the most common Opinion. This is what God expresly prohibited[1], and what nevertheless was frequently practised in Israel. See hereafter MOLOCH, and our Dissertation concerning this Deity of the Ammonites, printed before our Comment on Leviticus.

Lute

LUTE, a musical Instrument with Strings, formerly it had but six, at present it has eleven. It is composed of the Table, which is of Fir or Cedar; of the Body made up of nine or ten Splints; of the Handle which has nine Stops; and the Lead where the Pins are, which are of Use in raising the Strings to the Tone which any one would give them. They are fastened to a Bridge at the Bottom of the Table, and at the other Extremity rest upon a Piece of Ivory with little Notches in it at the End of the Handle. The Sound issues through a Rose in the Middle of the Table. The Strings are played upon with the right Hand, and with the left you rest upon the Stops. The Latin Cithara, Testudo or Chelys, is generally translated Lute. But it is certain that the ancient Lute called Kinnor in Hebrew[1] is very different from the Lute. See our Dissertation upon the musical Instruments of the old Hebrews, prefixed to our Comment on the Psalms.

Lycanthropy

LYCANTHROPY. We call this the Disease which a Man falls into, when through the Effect of a disordered Imagination, and heated Brain, he fancies himself to be an Ox, a Wolf, a Dog or a Cat, &c. and assumes all the Inclinations, Manners, and Sentiments of these Creatures. It is generally believed[1] that Nebuchadnezzar was by the Power of God reduced to this kind of Madness; so as to believe firmly that he was converted into an Ox, and consequently began to walk on his Hands and Feet, to graze, to but with his Head, as if he had Horns, to lie in the Fields, to shun the Company of Mankind, and let his Hair, his Beard, and Nails grow like a Beast. His People, as Daniel observes, were surprized extremely at so prodigious an Event, and bound him[2], aligetur vinculo æreo & ferreo; they treated him as mad Men are usually treated to prevent their committing any Violence, or throwing themselves headlong from some Precipice. But at length he made his Escape, and lived in the Fields like a Beast. Diseases of this kind are not unknown to Physicians; and there are few Books of Physick which do not take Notice of them.

Lycaonia

LYCAONIA, a Province of Asia Minor, which makes Part of Cappadocia, having Galatia to the North, Pisidia to the South, Cappadocia to the East, and Phrygia to the West. Saint Paul preached in Lycaonia, in the Cities of Iconium and Lystra[1].

Lycaonian Language. Saint Paul preaching at Lystra, a City of Lycaonia in Asia Minor, by his Command only cured a Man who had been lame from his Mother's Womb, and had never walked; whereupon the Inhabitants of Lystra lift up their Voices, saying in the Speech of Lycaonia, the Gods are come down to us in the Likeness of Men: And they called Barnabas, Jupiter; and Paul, Mercurius, because he was the chief Speaker. The Question is, what this Speech of Lycaonia was It is generally believed to have been a corrupt Greek; and it is certain that Greek was spoken in Asia Minor; but, as is common in Provinces remote from the Center of good Taste and Purity, Languages vary, and are far from the Politeness of large Cities and Places, where Studies flourish.

Paul Ernest Jablonski has written a learned Dissertation on the Lycaonian Tongue; he supposes it to be the same with the Cappadocian, which was Greek mingled with a great deal of Syriac; an Opinion, which has been followed by Grotius, and is very probable, by Reason of the Neighbourhood of Syria, Cappadocia, and Lycaonia; and if there had been no more in it, than the signifying a Difference of Dialect, Saint Luke never would have said, that these People cried in the Speech of Lycaonia; a Dialect is no particular Language.

LYDDA, in Hebrew, Lud or Lod, by the Greeks and Latins called Lydda or Diospolis, in the Way from Jerusalem to Cæsarea Philippi. It seems to have been inhabited by the Benjamites, at the Return of the Jews [Neh. xi. 35.] from the Babylonish Captivity: Lydda is one of the three Toparchies which were dismembred from Samaria, and given to the Jews°. Saint Peter coming to Lydda, cured a Man there sick of the Palsy, whose Name was Æneas.

Lying

LYING, is condemned in many Places both of the Old and New Testament. See Ex. xxiii. i. 7. Lev. xix. 11. Prov. xii. 22. xiii. 5. xix. 22. Wisd. i. 11. Eccl. vii. 13. xx. 10. xxv. 23. Hosea iv. 1. Acts v. 4. Ephes. iv. 25. James v. 12. Our Saviour requires his Disciples to be so plain and sincere, that their Word might be equivalent to the most solemn Oaths; and that in all their Assertions, they should say [Matt. v. 37.] only, it is, or it is not: Let your Communication be yea, yea; nay, nay: For whatsoever is more than these, cometh of Evil. It is in vain therefore to attempt to justify [Jame v. 12.] some particular Persons who have told Lies; which Persons are in other Respects commended in the Scripture. The Scripture never praises their lying, but either their Charity, or other good Actions. That which is in itself evil, never can become good. When Abraham says, that Sarah is his Sister, and not his Wife; and Isaac says the same Thing of his Wife Rebeckah; when Jacob by telling a Lye defrauds his Father of his Blessing, to the Prejudice of Esau; when the Egyptian Midwives declare, that the Hebrew Women are delivered without their Assistance, and the Hebrews before their Departure out of Egypt borrow Things which they had no Thoughts of returning; they are not any of them in this Particular to be commended: But the Evil which they committed might be mitigated by Circumstances, by the Intention, or some other Reasons which were not known to us. Further, when we condemn Lying, we do not condemn Stratagems, Hyperboles, or certain Railleries and Discourses, which Custom and the Consent of People do not rank among Lies. See Saint Austin in his Books of Lying, and against Lyars.

[Kings xxii. 23.] God puts a lying Spirit into the Mouths of all the false Prophets; he permits them to follow the Impression of the Evil Spirit, and that others should hearken to them. Ne desideres de cibis ejus in [Prov. xxiii. 3. If. xxviii. 15.] quo est panis mendacii: Or, keeping more close to the Hebrew, who talks of the Entertainment of which he has been partaker at a Prince's Table: Be not desirous of his good Cheer, for it is the Bread of Lying: It is Food that pleases the Taste, but does not nourish; it is deceitful Bread, good only in Appearance. In another Place he calls that deceitful Bread, or Bread of Lying, which is acquired by Injustice; Suavis est homini panis mendacii, & postea implebitur, os ejus calculo, Prov xx. 17. We have placed our Confidence in Falshood: Posuimus mendacium spem nostram: In deceitful Allies, or in the delusive Promises of false Prophets; or lastly, in the Assistance of Idols, whom they [If. xxviii. 17.] call Vanity and Lying; and afterwards, The Hail shall sweep away the Refuge of Lies; the vain Hopes mentioned by him a little higher. [If. xliv. 20] And in another Passage, A deceived Heart hath turned him aside, that he cannot deliver his Soul, nor say, is there not a Lie in my right Hand? Forte mendacium est in dextrâ meâ. Perhaps I am in the wrong thus to adore Wood. Jeremiah, veré mendacium operatus est [Jerem. viii. 8.] stilus mendax scribarum. The Pen of the Doctors of the Law has written nothing but Falshood. They have promised you Peace, and behold it is War. Their Promises are vain and delusive: And elsewhere. Facta est plaga [Idem. xv. 18.] mea quasi mendacium aquarum infidelium; Waters that are not sure, are those only that flow Part of the Year; they may be said to be false when they flow perpetually. My Grief which should pass away like Waters that dry up in Summer, continues and increases every Day.

[Jer. iii. 24.] Lying Hills, are those which after they have made a fine Appearance to the Eye, produce nothing, Hosea ix. 2. Vinum mentietur eis: The Vine shall lie to them, the Vintage [Habakkuk iii. 17.] shall fail. Habakkuk, Mentietur opus Olivæ. The Olive Trees shall fail. The Latins have the same Way of speaking. Horace Epist. l. i. Spem mentita seges.

To lye is also placed for Rebellion: Filii alieni mentiti sunt mihi. And Psalm lx. 3. [Ps. vii. 46] Mentientur tibi inimici tui. And Psalm lxxx. 16. Inimici Domini mentiti sunt ei: They have not been faithful to him.

Lymbus

LYMBUS, or Limbus. A Term at present set apart in the Language of Divines, to signify the Place, where the Souls of the holy Patriarchs were detained, before the Descent of Jesus Christ thither after his Resurrection, in Order to deliver them, and procure for them the Enjoyment of Beatitude . We do not read the Word Lymbus either in the Scripture or the old Fathers; but only that of Hell, inferi, as we see in the Creed. Descendit ad inferos, he went down into Hell. The good and bad go to Hell, taken in this Sense: But notwithstanding there is a great Chaos, a great Gulf between them. Jesus Christ descending into Hell, or this Lymbus, delivered only the Saints and Patriarchs out of it . See above Hell and Suicer in his Dictionary of the Greek Fathers, under the Word Αδης, T. i. p. 92, 93, 94. and Martinius in his Lexicon Philologicum, under the Word Limbus. and M. Du Cange in his Dictionary of the Latin Tongue, as it was used in the Middle and lower Ages of this Language, under the Word Limbus; and lastly, the Schoolmen upon the Fourth Book of Magister Sententiarum Distinct. 4, and 25. Who he was that first made Use of the Word Limbus, to signify the Place where the Souls of the holy Patriarchs, and those of Children who died without Baptism, were detained, I cannot tell. Lysanias

LYSANIAS, or Lysias, Tetrarch of Abylene, mentioned in Saint Luke iii. 1. This Lysanias was probably the Son or Grandson of another Lysanias known in History[1], and put to Death by Mark Antony, who gave Part of his Kingdom to Cleopatra.

q Lysanias, the Son or Grandson of this first Lysanias, possessed Abylene, when Saint John Baptist began his Mission; for Saint Luke places him among the Princes who governed in Judæa, or the Country round about. But he either must have made no great Figure in the World, or his Government must have been of a very small Extent, since profane Historians make no Mention of him. Abilene was a small Province, situated between Libanus and Antilibanus, the Capital whereof was Abila. Lysias LYSIAS. A Friend and Relation of King Antiochus Epiphanes. This Prince going beyond the Euphrates, in Order to collect Money, left the Regency of Syria to Lysias[1], with Orders to make War upon the Jews, and utterly destroy them: Lysias therefore sent Ptolemy, the Son of Dorymenes, Nicanor, and Gorgias into Judæa, with a powerful[2]Army. But Judas Maccabæus having routed or dispersed them; he came himself the Year following[3] with still greater Forces. But he was overcome, his Army put to Flight, and he himself obliged to retire to Antioch. The same Year Antiochus Epiphanes dying beyond the Euphrates, Lysias took upon himself the Regency of the Kingdom, under the Minority of young Antiochus, though King Antiochus Epiphanes had given the Government of the Kingdom, and the Tuition of his Son, to Philip one of his Friends, who was at that [1 Macc. vi. 14, 15, &c.] Time with him. Notwithstanding the King's last Will, Lysias kept the Government of Syria, and continued by his Generals to make War against the Jews, and observing that they were not able to resist Judas Maccabæus, he came a second Time into the Land of Judah[4]. He advanced as far as Bethsura. But the Jews beat him, and obliged him to fly. He sent Proposals of an Accommodation to Judas Maccabæus, and the Peace was concluded upon Conditions very honourable and advantageous to the Jews.

This Peace was but of a short Duration. Judas Maccabæus having been obliged to take Arms, to quell the particular Enemies of the Jews, who declared against them in several Places of the Country; and to repulse the General of the Syrian Troops, which were continually molesting his Brethren the [2 Macc. xiii. 1, 2, 3, &c. and 1 Macc. vi. 28, 29, &c.] Jews, Lysias returned towards the Close of the Year, and brought the young King Eupator with him, together with the Choice of all his Troops. They laid Siege to Bethsura, and advanced as far as Jerusalem, the Siege whereof was formed by them. The City, or rather the Temple wherein Judas was shut up, was very much straitned; for as this was the seventh Year, there was a great want of Provisions. It happened, as Providence particularly would have it, that at the same Time Philip, who had been left Regent of the Kingdom by Epiphanes, came into Syria, to take upon him the Exercise of his Employment. Lysias upon receiving this Intelligence, made Propositions of Peace to the Jews, which were accepted.

Eupator and Lysias entred Jerusalem, honoured the Temple, and promised the Jews, that they should be permitted to live according to their own Laws. But they falsified their Word by demolishing the Wall which secured the Temple from the Insults of the Citadel, which was in the Possession of the Syrians. They afterwards retired in Haste to Antioch, where they found Philip had fortified himself: But they attacked him, took the City by Force, and killed him[5].

[Esth. xi. 1.] The next Year[6], Demetrius the Son of Seleucus King of Syria, to whom the Kingdom of Right belonged, being returned from Rome, where he had remained an Hostage ever since the Death of the King his Father; and coming into Syria, was received at Tripolis, a City of Phœnicia, and having gathered together some Troops, marched directly to Antioch[7], entred the City, seized young Eupator and Lysias, and killed them both. Such was the End of Lysias, who had governed the Kingdom of Syria about five Years.

The People rose and would have prevented him; but he let three Thousand Men loose upon them, who killed a great Number of them. Hereupon the People arming themselves with every Thing which they could lay Hands on, some taking Stones, others Clubs, and others throwing Handfuls of Dust, which was in the Court of the Temple, at Lysimachus; this sacrilegious Man was himself killed near the Temple Treasury. Maccabees

MACCABEES. This Name may be derived, 1. From the Hebrew Word[1] Caba, extinguish; as much as to say, one that destroys, one that causes the Enemies of the Lord to perish. 2. Others derive it from the Hebrew Macha-bi[2], the Wound is in me; God has struck me, and humbled me. See Isaiah liii. 3, 4, where the Messias is called, (Ish Macoboth) a Man of Sorrows, and (Muccah Elohim) smitten of God. See also 1 Chron. xii. 13. where Machbanai is a proper Name. 3. We may also derive Maccabæus, or Maccabaïbu, according to the Hebrew Pronunciation, from[3] Macchabaïah, one that smites in the Name of the Lord. 4. Others derive it from the Hebrew Word[4] Mechubbeh, or Muchabeh, secret, hidden. The Maccabees at first hid themselves in Caverns, that there they might escape Persecution; but afterwards they came forth, and withstood their Persecutors. They valued themselves upon this Name, which at first was given them in Contempt. 5. We may also take it as a Derivative from Nakab, to pierce. Makkebah is taken for an Hammer, and for a Cavern. 6. Or Makkabei may signifie those that supplant, being derived from Akab, to supplant or undermine. 7. Lastly, the most popular Opinion is, that they caused to be put upon their Ensigns, or upon their Bucklers, these four Hebrew Letters, Mem, Caph, Beth, Jod[5], which begin these Words, Mi camoca, beelohim, Jehovah; Who is like unto thee, O Lord, among the Gods? Which is taken from Exodus xv. 11. After the Manner that the Romans used to put upon their Ensigns, S. P. Q. R. to stand for Senatus, Populusque Romanus.

The Etymology that derives this Name from the four Hebrew Letters, ,מכבי*M, C, B, I*, which were painted upon the Standards or Bucklers of the Jews in the Time of the Maccabees, is certainly the most probable. 'Tis well known the Hebrews were used to compose such artificial Words, by joining together the initial Letters of a Name. For Example, instead of saying Rabbi Levi Ben Gerson, they spoke it, Ralbag, and wrote it R, L, B, G. Also instead of saying Rabbi Moses Ben Maimoni, they pronounced Rambam, and wrote R, M, B, M. Nothing is more frequent among them than this Custom, and without having a Key to these Abbreviations, it would be impossible to understand the Books of the Rabbins. It was in Order to facilitate this Study, that Buxtorf composed a Book on Purpose, with the Title, De abbreviaturis Hebraicis.

What would make one doubt that the Word Maccabee is derived from hence, is this; it appears that Judas Maccabæus bore this Name before the beginning of the War; for at the beginning of the first Book of Maccabees, speaking of Mattathias and his five Sons, the Scripture gives to each the Surname that they then went by. Habebat filios quinque, Joannem qui cognominabatur Gaddis, & Simonem qui cognominabatur Thasi, & Judam qui vocabatur Maccabæus, &c. 1 Macc. ii. 4.

The Tradition of the Orientals, related by Abulfarage, is this; that the Mother of the seven Brethren, who suffered Martyrdom under Antiochus Epiphanes, was called Ashmunah, or Shamunah, a Name borrowed from the Hebrew Word Chashmanim, or Kashmenim, which signifies great Men or Princes, and was given to the Maccabees, being the Princes of their Nation. Hence the Greeks and the Latins formed the Word Asmoneans.

But however it be with the Etymology of the Name, it was given to Judas Son of Mattathias, from whom it passed to his Brothers Simon and Jonathan; and in General to all those, who, under the Persecution of Antiochus Epiphanes, signalized their Zeal and Constancy, in the Defence of the Liberty of their Countrey, and of the Religion of their Forefathers. Thus the seven Brethren are called Maccabees, who suffered Death with their Mother, for the Defence of their Law; and the Name of the Books of the Maccabees is given to those Books which contain the History of those Times. It is also given to the Book which gives an Account of the Persecution of Ptolemy Philopator, against the Jews of Egypt, which was raised several Years before the Persecution of Antiochus Epiphanes King of Syria[6].

Maccabeus is said chiefly of Judas Maccabeus; and always when this Name is alone, it means this General. His Life is already given under the Article JUDAS MACCABEUS.

See the Catalogue of the Maccabean or Asmonean Princes, under the Article of THE KINGS OF THE JEWS.

The seven Brothers of the Maccabees are those who suffered Martyrdom at Antioch, in the Presence of King Antiochus Epiphanes, with their Mother and old Eleazar, in the Year of the World 3837.

The History of the Martyrdom of the seven Brethren is related in short, in the seventh Chapter of the second Book of the Maccabees; and more at large in the Book intituled, Concerning the Government of Reason. The Martyrdom of Eleazar is found in Chap. vi. the 18th and following Verses of the same Book of the Maccabees. We have given his History under the Title ELEAZAR. As to the seven Brethren, they were seized with their Mother, and brought before Antiochus Epiphanes, who omitted nothing that might prevail with them to comply with his Commands, to eat Swines Flesh, which was to be the Token of their having forsaken the Jewish Law.

The ancient Latin Translation of the Book Concerning the Government of Reason, which we shall mention presently under the Name of the fourth Book of the Maccabees, gives to the seven Brethren the Names of (1) Maccabæus, (2) Aber, (3) Machiri, (4) Judas, (5) Achus, (6) Areth, (7) Jacob. They have also other Names given them in some ancient Manuscripts, but the original Greek Text of the second and fourth Books of the Maccabees, makes no Mention of them. Josephus[7] and some others believe it was at Jerusalem that they suffered; but its much more likely to be at Antioch[8]; where their Tombs were shewn in the Time of Saint Jerome[9]; and where there was a Church dedicated under their Name, in the Time of Saint Austin[10].

The first of the seven Brethren having declared to the King, that he would die sooner than violate the Laws of God, was seized by the Executioners, had his Tongue [2 Macc. vii. 2, 7.] cut out, and the Extremities of his Hands and Feet cut off, and the Skin of his Head tore off. While he was yet alive, he was thrown into a burning Pan, which was heating over a great Fire. Thus it is told in the second Book of the Maccabees; but the Author of the fourth of the Maccabees, or of the Government of Reason declares, that the Executioners having stripped off his Clothes, tied his Hands behind his Back, and whipped him to Pieces with Scourges, without his shewing the least Sign of Pain. Afterwards they fixed him upon a Wheel, where having his Limbs broke to Pieces, he expostulated with Antiochus, reproached him with his Barbarity, and insulted him upon the Unsuccessfulness of all his Attempts. Then the Executioners raising the Wheel upon which he was extended, and lighting a Fire under it, consumed him thus by a new Torture. He died exhorting his Brethren to shew the like Constancy.

The second[11] underwent the same Cruelties as the first, and with the same Courage, according to the Author of the second Book of the Maccabees. But the Book of the Government of Reason says, that they put Iron Manacles upon his Hands, armed with very sharp Teeth, and fixed him to a Gibbet. Then seeing he was not to be moved, they tore the Skin from his Head with Hooks of Iron, and made him die under this Torture.

The third had his Hands and Tongue cut off, and died like his two Brethren with an heroick Constancy. The fourth Book of the Maccabees adds, that he was put to the Torture, that his Feet and Hands were put out of Joint, and that then his Fingers, Legs, and Arms were broken. Lastly, his Skin was flaw'd off, and the Ends of his Fingers pulled off, and being put upon the Wheel, he there expired.

The fourth was tormented in like Manner as the former. His Tongue was cut out, and he expired under his Tortures.

The fifth suffered the like Punishment; the second of the Maccabees takes no Notice of any Circumstance of his Martyrdom, but the fourth Book of the same Name says, that he presented himself before the Tyrant, reproaching him with his Cruelty and Injustice, till the Executioners seizing him, bound him and fixed him to the Gibbet, put his Feet in Fetters of Iron, tied his Loins to a Wheel, and tore off his Limbs with the Teeth of the Wheel. He died in the midst of these Torments with a Tranquillity, that amazed even his Enemies themselves.

The sixth suffered in the same Manner, and with the same Resolution. Their Mother exhorted them all one after another, rather to suffer Death bravely, than to forsake the Law of their Fathers. The fourth Book of the Maccabees says, that the sixth of the seven Brethren being very young, King Antiochus exhorted him to have Pity on himself, and to eat the Meat that was set before him. But the young Man answered him, that he would not come short of his Brethren, neither in Courage, nor in Respect for the Law of his Fathers. Immediately he was seized, and stretched upon the Wheel; where having all his Bones put out of Joint, he had red hot Spits thrust into his Back, Sides and Belly. Yet after this he addressed himself to the Tyrant, and spoke to him with a Vivacity that astonished all the Hearers, Lastly, he was thrown into a burning Chaldron, in which he expired.

The seventh Brother, who was the youngest of all, was presented the last. The King conjured him to renounce the Laws of his Forefathers, promising him with an Oath that he would heap great Wealth upon him, and take him into the Number of his Favourites. The King seeing that his Promises had no Effect upon him, he advised the Mother of the Youth to instruct him in more salutary Principles. The Mother undertook it, and coming near to her Son, she spoke to him in the Hebrew Language, encouraging him to be stead-fast, without shrinking at the Torments that were prepared for him, or being amused with the fair Promises that were made him. While she was thus speaking, the young Man cried out; What is it that you expect from me? I shall not obey the King's Commands, but the Precepts of that Law that was given us by Moses. He continued speaking to the King, and threatning him with the impending Vengeance of God. Then Antiochus no longer enduring to be thus reviled, caused him to be tormented as the others had been; when this brave young Champion died under his Tortures, without suffering himself to be defiled by the forbidden Meats.

The fourth Book of the Maccabees affirms, that the King having done his Endeavour to prevail with this seventh Brother to comply with his Commands, and having caused his Mother to come near him and speak to him, to the End that her Presence might excite his Compassion; the Mother on the contrary encouraged him to suffer every Thing bravely, and to imitate his Brothers. Then the Child cried out; Unbind me, for I have something to say to the King in the Presence of his Courtiers. They presently unbound him, thinking that he would yield to the King's Importunities. But running towards the Place where the Chaldron was preparing for him, he addressed himself to the King, upbraided him with his Cruelty, and threatned him with God's severe Judgments upon him. Then leaping into the Chaldron, he put an End to his Life.

The Mother of these holy Martyrs suffered Death also. The second Book of the Maccabees says nothing in particular of [2 Macc. vii. 41.] the Kind of Death she was put to. But the Book of the Government of Reason mentions, that some of Antiochus's Attendants having suggested to this Prince, that he ought to put her to Death also, and to deal with her as he had dealt with her Children; she had no sooner heard these Words, but she cast her self into the Fire, to prevent these Ministers of Cruelty from laying their Hands on her[12]. In some ancient Manuscripts this holy Woman is called by the Name of Salome, or Salamonis: The Tradition of the Orientals, related by Abulfarage, calls her Ashmunah, or Shamunah; but her Name is not to be found in any certain or authentick Monument. The Church [of Rome] celebrates the Feast of these seven Brethren, and of their Mother, on the first of August. They were the first, and for a long Time the only Martyrs of the Old Testament, in Honour of whom Altars and Temples have been set up to God; and even at this Day they are the only Saints of this Kind, for whom there remains an Office or Commemoration in the Roman Breviary.

THE BOOKS OF THE MACCABEES. There are four Books of the Maccabees, of which the two first are Canonical, and the other two Apocryphal, in the Church of Rome . Even these which are acknowledged as Canonical by the Romish Church, are disputed by those who receive not the Decrees of the Council of Trent, and who admit for Canonical in the Old Testament, only those Books which are received as such by the Jews. If we would follow the Order of Time, the third Book of the Maccabees ought to be placed first, and the first in the Place of the third.

THE FIRST BOOK OF THE MACCABEES. It was writ originally in Hebrew, or in Syriac. The Style and Turn of Expression is a sufficient Proof of this, as well as the Title mentioned by Origen in these Terms[13]. Sarbet Sar-bané el, the Scepter of the Prince of the Children of God, or, the Scepter of the Rebels of the Lord. As if it were to insinuate, that the Maccabees have held the Scepter and the Government of the Lord in Israel, against all those that would oppose them. Saint Jerome says also[14], that he had found the first Book of the Maccabees in the Hebrew: Macchabæorum primum librum Hebraïcum reperi. But now for a long Time it has not been seen in that Language, and the Greek is now held for an Original. The Latin Version made from the Greek at the first Establishment of the Church, and which we make Use of at this Day, was declared Authentick by the Council of Trent.

It is highly probable, that this Book was composed from such publick Memoirs, as were kept by the Jews, of all remarkable Occurrences that happened among them. Judas Maccabeus took Care to make an exact [2 Macc. ii. 14.] Collection of them; and the Author of this first Book towards the Conclusion, refers to the Memoirs of Johannes Hircanus [1 Macc. xvi. ult.] ; which has given Occasion to some to believe, that Johannes Hircanus might possibly be the Author of it. This Book contains the History of forty Years, from the Reign of Antiochus Epiphanes, to the Death of Simon the High-Priest; that is, from the Year of the World 3829, to the Year 3869, being 131 Years before Christ, and 135 before the Vulgar Æra. The Author is unknown, and he must necessarily have lived after the Pontificate of Johannes Hircanus, because he quotes the Memoirs of his Government. In his Chronological Computations he accommodates himself to the Hebrew Manner of Reckoning, beginning at the Month Nisàn, which is the first Month of the holy Year; whereas the Syrians, or the Greeks who reigned in Syria, began it six Months later, about the Beginning of October.

The second Book of the Maccabees is an Abridgment of a larger Work, which was composed by one called Jason, and which contained the History of the Persecutions of Epiphanes and of Eupator against the Jews. The Author of this Abridgment is not known, and the intire Work of Jason is no longer to be found. They were both Greeks, and followed the Manner of Reckoning of the Seleucidæ; according to the Custom of the Syrians, who began their Year about the Month of October. The two last Chapters contain Things that happened under the Reign of Demetrius Soter, the Successor of Antiochus Eupator; and there are such Varieties to be observed in the Style, as make it doubtful whether they proceed from the same Author as the rest of the Work. This second Book contains a History of about fifteen Years, from the Execution of Heliodorus's Commission, who was sent by Seleucus to fetch away the Treasures of the Temple, to the Victory obtained by Judas Maccabæus against Nicanor; that is, from the Year of the World 3828, to 3843, before Christ 157 Years, and 161 before the Vulgar Æra.

At the Beginning of this Book are found two Letters; one from the Jews of Jerusalem to those of Alexandria, to advertise them of the Celebration of the Feast of Purification, and of the Dedication of the Temple of Jerusalem, by Judas Maccabeus. The other from the Senate of Jerusalem, and from Judas, to Aristobulus Preceptor of King Ptolomy, on the same Subject. This last Letter being writ but in the Year of the World 3880, there is Reason to believe, that the Book of which we are speaking was composed no longer ago than about the same Time, under the Government and Pontificate of Hircanus. The Elegancy of the Style of this Piece has induced some to ascribe it to Josephus or Philo. Serrarius[15] believed it was the Work of Judas the Essenian, mentioned by Josephus[16]. Leo Allatius[17] conjectures, that Simon Maccabæus, Brother of Judas, might be the Author of it. But all this is very uncertain. We have already spoke of the Canonicalness of this second Book, as well as of the first; each of 'em have been acknowledged, and cited as Canonical, by most of the Ancients, though there were others that would not admit them among the sacred Books of the Old Testament, because they had confined themselves to receive none, but what were comprehended in the Canon of the Hebrews.

THE THIRD BOOK OF THE MACCABEES. This Book contains the History of the Persecution raised by Ptolomy Philopater King of Egypt, against the Jews of his Kingdom. This Prince after his Victory against Antiochus the Great, went to Jerusalem, and there offered Sacrifices of Thanksgiving in the Temple of the Lord. But afterwards thinking to enter into the Sanctuary, he was hindred by the Priests and People. But as he still persisted in his Design, of penetrating into this holy Place, he was struck down to the Ground by a divine Power; so that not being able to stir, they were forced to carry him out of the Temple. After his Return into Egypt, his Resentment broke out against all the Jews in the Kingdom, of which there was a great Number. He endeavoured to make them forsake their Religion, and not being able to succeed in it, he caused them to come to Alexandria, and shut them up in the Hippodrome, that they might be trod to Pieces by the Elephants. But God delivered them from this Danger, by making the King presently to forget the Orders he had given. Afterwards God sent two Angels to their Assistance, which put the King into such a Terror, that he honourably dismissed them. All this happened in the Year of the World 3787, before Christ 213, and before the Vulgar Æra 217 Years.

'Tis improperly enough, that the Name of the third of the Maccabees has been given to this Book, since it has no Relation to Judas Maccabeus, or any of his Brethren, or to the Persecutions of Antiochus Epiphanes King of Syria; the Story here related having happened in Egypt, fifty Years before the Persecution of *Epi*phanes, against the Jews of Judæa[18]. 'Tis probably because of the Conformity of the Subject, and the Zeal that the Jews of Egypt shewed for their Law, and for the Religion of their Fathers; that the Name of the Book of the Maccabees was given to this Work. Josephus in the Body of his History makes no Mention of this Persecution, but he just speaks of it in his first Book against Appion; but what he says of it, agrees but little with what we read in the third Book of the Maccabees.

The Greeks and Latins at this Day reject this Book as an Apocryphal Writing. The ancient Latin Writers no where quote it, as I remember, and they do not seem so much as to have known it. But it was known to the Greeks, who have sometimes quoted it as holy Scripture, putting it on the same Foot as the two other Books of the Maccabees. The twenty-fourth of the Apostolical Canons owns it as a holy Book; Theodoret[19] cites it as a divine Writing. St. Athanasius in his Synopsis, and Nicephorus at the End of his Chronology, put this in the Number of the controverted Books of Scripture, or such as are not received unanimously by the Church, as well as the two first Books of the Maccabees: It may also be seen in some Catalogues of the holy Books, in the same Circumstances as the other Books of the Maccabees. Grotius believes it was writ after the two first Books, and a little while after the Book of Ecclesiasticus; which is the Reason that it had the Name of the third Book of Maccabees. See the Article of Ptolemy Eupator, where you will find the History contained in the third Book of the Maccabees.

THE FOURTH BOOK OF THE MACCABEES is so little known among the Latins, that we do not clearly know what it is. It is not found in any of our Latin Bibles. True it is, that in the ancient Greek Manuscripts of the Bible, and in some Greek Editions, we find the Book concerning the Government of Reason, ascribed to Josephus, after the three first Books of the Maccabees. But the Learned have much doubted, whether this was the Book that the Ancients knew, by the Name of the fourth Book of the Maccabees. However, when we carefully examine what they have said about it, and compare it with the Book of the Government of Reason, we shall be easily persuaded to believe, that they knew no other but this. For in the first Place several Manuscripts, and some printed Greek Bibles, give it the Name of the fourth of the Maccabees. Philostratus[20], Eusebius[21], and Saint Jerome[22], have known the Book of the Government of Reason, and have ascribed it to Josephus, by the Name of the Book of the Maccabees. Saint Gregory Nazianzen[23], Saint Ambrose[24], and Saint Chrysostom[25], in the Characters they have given of the seven Maccabees, and of old Eleazer, have plainly followed what we find written in this Book. Marius Victorinus Africanus, who taught Rhetorick at Rome under the Emperor Constantius, in his Poem of the Maccabees, appears also to have had before him the Books we are now speaking of.

The Author of the fourth Book of the Maccabees has enlarged upon and adorned the History of the holy old Man Eleazar, and of the seven Brothers the Maccabees, who suffered Martyrdom at Antioch with their Mother, as it is related more succinctly in the second Book of the Maccabees, Chap. vi. and vii. One might suspect that this Piece is a Fragment of Jason's Performance, such as it was, before it was abridged, if the Author of the fourth of the Maccabees had not put a long Preface before it, which shews that this is a separate Work, and has no Relation to any other; and if he did not sometimes much wander from the Text, which is, as it were, the Original upon which he enlarges. He supposes all along, that the Scene of the Martyrdom of the seven Brethren was at Jerusalem. He says that Apollonius, Governor of Syria and Phœnicia, was sent with a Deputation to Jerusalem by King Seleucus Nicator, to take away the Treasures from the Temple; which is contrary to the true History which informs us, that it was Heliodorus who was sent for this Purpose by Seleucus Philopater. Besides this, there are other Mistakes against the Truth of History, which we have displayed in our Preface upon the fourth Book of the Maccabees. This Work is found in the Collection of the Works of Josephus the Historian, and it bears his Name in the printed Books, and in several Manuscripts. But I can hardly believe him to be the Author; not only because of the Difference of Style, but also because of the Accounts of some Facts differing from Josephus, in several Passages of his History.

Sixtus Senensis[26] having found a Greek Manuscript, containing the History of the Pontificate of Johannes Hircanus, in the Library of the Dominicans at Lyons, did not doubt but that it was the fourth Book of the Maccabees. He asserted this, and prevailed with several to believe him.

Some Time after this Library being burnt, the M.S. was consumed also, so that there was no longer any Hope of retrieving it. But M. le Jay in his Polyglot having printed an Arabick History of the Maccabees, from King Seleucus, Son of Antiochus the Great; to the Time of Jesus Christ; all the Characters that Sixtus Senensis had observed in his Greek Manuscript, were found in this Arabic History. And this prevailed so far with F. la Haye, as to print it in Latin in his great Bibliotheca, under the Name of the fourth Book of the Maccabees. But as this History was never known to the Ancients by this Name, and as it makes a Part of a great Work, which was never cited by this Name, it is better to suppose, that Sixtus Senensis was mistaken, when he took it for the fourth Book of the Maccabees, which he did only by Conjecture, and without any Proof taken either from the Title of the Work, or from the Testimony of the Ancients. Our Prefaces may be consulted in this Matter, upon the Books of the Maccabees; and particularly that upon the fourth of these Books.

Macedonia

MACEDONIA, a Kingdom of Greece, situated between Thrace to the North, Thessaly to the South, Epirus to the West, and the Ægean Sea to the East, We believe that Macedonia was peopled by Kittim Son of Javan, and that as often as Kittim is mentioned in the Hebrew Text, Macedonia is to be understood. See Kittim before. Alexander the Great, Son of Philip King of Macedonia, having made the Conquest of Asia, and subverted the Empire of the Persians, the Name of the Macedonians became very famous in all the East; and the Name of Macedonians is often given to the Greeks, who were Successors to Alexander in the Monarchy. See Esther xvi. 10, 14. and 2 Mac. viii. 20. And in like Manner the general [Gen. x. 4. See Dan. viii. 21. x. 20. 1 Mac viii. 18. 2 Mac. iv. 36.] Name of Greeks is often put for the Macedonians, from the Time of the Conquest of Alexander the Great. Saint Paul was invited by the Angel of this Province, which appeared to him at Troas, to come to preach the Gospel in Macedonia[1]. After this Vision, Saint Paul no longer doubted that God had called him to preach in Macedonia; and the Success that attended his Preaching confirmed him more in this Opinion. There he laid the Foundations of the Churches of Thessalonica and Philippi, and had the Satisfaction of seeing them flourishing and numerous, and abounding in all spiritual Gifts and Graces.

Macedonian

MACEDONIAN, in the Books of Scripture written in Greek; this Word is sometimes used in an appellative Sense, for an Enemy to the Jews. Thus in the Additions to the Book of Esther, it is said that Haman was a Macedonian by Nation and Inclination; and that he was desirous to transfer the Empire of the Persians to the Macedonians; that is to say, to the greatest Enemies of the State, taking Matters upon the Footing they were when these Additions were written, which was evidently after the Fall of the Empire of the Persians, by the Conquests of Alexander the Great. For before this Time the Macedonians gave but little Umbrage to the Persians; and in the Time of Esther and Mordecai, they were not much feared at Shushan.

But being corrupted by Antigonus, he not only declined to assist Herod, but would also join his Troops to those of his Enemy. Yet Antigonus did not think fit to trust him, but on the contrary set upon him. This so exasperated Machæra, that he retired to Emmaus, and put to the Sword all the Jews that he found in his March. After this he took Party with Herod, and joining his own Troops to those commanded by Joseph, Herod's Brother, they made War together against Antigonus[2].

Machines of War

MACHINES of War. Warlike Machines, such as are proper for besieging of Cities and Fortresses, are of a very modern Invention, in Respect of the earlier Antiquity. There is no Mention of them in Homer; and Diodorus Siculus observes[1], that Sardanapalus, King of Assyria, held out a Siege of seven Years in the City of Niniveh, because at that Time such Machines as were fit for demolishing and taking Cities, were not yet invented. But about the same Time we read, that Uzziah King of Judah, had laid [2 Chron. xxvi. 14, 15.] up in his Magazines, Shields, and Spears, and Helmets, and Harbergeons, and Bows, and Slings to cast Stones. And that he made in Jerusalem Engines invented by cunning Men, to be on the Towers, and upon the Bulwarks, to shoot Arrows and great Stones withal; and his Name spread far abroad, for he was marvellously helped till he was strong. Here we may see perhaps the first Instance of Machines of War.

About seventy Years after[2], in the Sieges that Nebuchadnezzar laid to the Cities of Tyre and Jerusalem, he made Use of battering Rams and Slings. The Hebrew Word Car, which the Scripture uses to express this warlike Machine, signifies a real Ram[3], and by a Metaphor it signifies a Machine, by which they battered down Gates, and beat down the Walls of Cities. The Prophet Ezekiel speaking of the Siege of Tyre by Nebuchadnezzar, insinuates the antient [Ezek. xxvi. 8, 9.] Manner of besieging Places. He shall slay with the Sword thy Daughters in the Field, and he shall make a Fort against thee, and cast a Mount against thee, and lift up the Buckler against thee. And he shall set Ensigns of War against thy Walls, and with his Axes he shall break down thy Towers.

[Diodor. l. xvii.] When the Ancients besieged a Place, they usually surrounded it with Mounds, Towers, and Trenches, that the Besieged might not be able to make any Sallies, or to receive any Succours from without. To lift up the Buckler may intimate what the Romans called facere testudinem, to make a Tortoise; when they caused their Soldiers to approach near to each other to join their Bucklers close to one another, in the Form of a Tortoise, in Order to sap the Walls, or to beat down Gates, or to set Fire to 'em. The Engines of War here mentioned, or Machines of Cords, were the Balistæ or Catapultæ, which were used for hurling Stones or Darts; or else by this Name may be understood those great Hooks which were fastened to Cords, and thrown on the Tops of Walls, to tear them down and demolish them. Of these Iron Hooks or Fangs, may be understood that Passage of the second Book of Samuel. If he be gotten into a [2 Sam. xvii. 13.] City, then shall all Israel bring Ropes to that City, and we will draw it into the River, until there be not one small Stone found there.

Machpelah

MACHPELAH, or Macphela. This Word in Hebrew signifies double; and the Author of the Vulgate has taken it in this Sense, speaking of the Cave that Abraham bought of Ephron, in the Territory of the City Hebron, wherein to bury his Wife Sarah. But others with more Probability are of Opinion, that in this Place Machpelah is the Name of the Plain wherein this Cave was situate, and that therefore we should translate Gen. xxiii. 9. The Cave which is at Machpelah: And Verse 17. The Field of Ephron, which was in Machpelah; [as in the English Translation.] A Person of good Skill in the Arabick Tongue has informed us, that in this Language Machpelah signifies shut up, or walled up. He believes that the Cave called Machpelah, was a Tomb hewn into a Rock, and exactly closed up, or walled up, that no one might enter therein, or that Thieves might not make it a Place of Retreat; or that it might not be violated or prophaned in any Manner. Tombs thus shut or walled up, are still to be seen in the Eastern Countries. This Conjecture is at least very probable; so that it might be translated, the Cave that was shut up, instead of the Cave of Machpelah.

MADAI, the third Son of Japheth, Gen. x. 2. 'Tis commonly thought that he was the Father of the Medes; but Media is too far distant from the other Countries peopled by Japheth and his Descendants; and besides, it cannot be comprehended under the Name of The Isles of the Gentiles, which according to Moses were the Division of the Sons of Japheth. These Reasons have so far prevailed with some learned Men[1], as to make them to be of Opinion, that Madai was the Father of the Macedonians. Macedonia was otherwise called Æmathia, a Name formed from the Hebrew Ei an Island, and Madai; as if it were, the Isle of Madai[2]; or deriving it from the Greek Aia-madai, the Land of Madai. Magi MAGI, or Magians. The Magi of Persia are the Worshippers of Fire, and Disciples of Zoroaster, whom they confound with Abraham. They have three Books, which contain the whole of their Religion[1]. The Names of these Books are Zend, Pazend, and Abesta. They ascribe them to Abraham, and Abesta is a Commentary upon the other two. The Tradition of the Magi is, that Abraham read Books in the Midst of the Furnace, in which Nimrod had ordered him to be thrown. After their Master Zoroaster, the Magi maintain that there are two Principles in the World; one of good, which they call Oromazd, and the other of evil, named Aherman. They worship Fire in Temples called Atesch-kanah, or Ateschkade, that is to say, the House of Fire, where they take great Care to keep in the Fire. There was formerly a great Number of these Buildings upon the Mountain Alborz, in the Province of Adherbigran; which is Media. To Fire they give the Name of Bab, that is to say, Part, because they acknowledge this Element as the Principle of all Things, which System among the Greeks was embraced by Anaxagoras.

The Magi observe a mysterious Silence, when they wash or eat, having first said certain Words[2]. This Silence, which they never break, makes a Part of their Religion. Pythagoras very likely might imitate this Silence of the Magi, as well as the Reverence for Fire, which he inculcated to his Disciples. To every Month of the Year, to every Day, and also to every Star, to the Mountains, Mines, Waters, Trees, they ascribe particular Genii, or some of those Angels who were created before Man, and fell into Infidelity and Disobedience, and therefore were confined to what they call the Countrey of Genii, not unlike to what is meant by the Land of the Fairies. We shall say something more of the Magi under the Article ZOROASTER. It may however be observed here, that the three Books before mentioned, and which the Guebres or Fire-worshippers impute to Abraham, but which really belong to Ibrahim Zerdoust, otherwise called Zoroaster by the Grecians; these Books, I say, are very rare and unknown, because the Guebres keep them religiously secret among themselves, and never communicate them to Strangers. They are written in the antient Persian Language, and have not been yet seen in Europe[3].

'Tis pretended the Word Magi signifies a Man whose Ears are cut off. And indeed in the Language then in Use in Persia, Mige -gusch had that Signification, at the Time that the false Smerdis, who was one of the Magi, usurped the Throne of Cyrus. 'Tis known this Usurper had no Ears, and 'twas by this Token he was discovered by the Daughter of Ozanes, one of the Grandees of Persia. The Magi went by another Name before, and their Reputation was very great in Persia; but it was diminished very much by this Accident of Smerdis.

Tho' these Philosophers maintained two Principles in Nature, one good and the other evil[4]; the first being represented by Light, and the other by Darkness; both owned as Gods, and addressed to by them with Prayers and Adorations; yet they were divided in their Opinions, because some thought both to be from all Eternity, and others maintained that only the good Principle was eternal, and the evil one was created: In like Manner as we believe, that the Devil is a Creature, who is fallen from his original Purity and Perfection.

They also agree, that these two Principles are in continual Opposition to each other, which is to continue to the End of the World, when the good Principle will have the upper Hand. After which each will have his own World; that is, the Good, with all good People about him, will reign in his World; and the bad one, with all the wicked People, will likewise govern in his World. The Magi gave divine Honours to Light, to the Sun, to the consecrated Fire in their Temples, and even to the Fire in their Houses, before which they performed all the Acts of their Religion.

On the contrary they had Darkness in the greatest Horror, which they held as the Symbol of the evil Principle, and which they hated as we do the Devil. In their Writings, when they found the Name Aberman, or that of the evil Principle, they writ it backwards; and when Xerxes heard that the Athenians had banished Themistocles[5], he directed his Prayer to this evil Deity, and not to Oromazdes, or the good God, beseeching him to inspire his Enemies always with that Resolution, of driving out all brave Men from among them.

Such were the antient Magi of the Persians, and such are still the Guebres, or Worshippers of Fire, among the Persians and Indians; which probably are the same as those intended by Saint Matthew, by the Word Magi.

Magi

MAGI, or Wise-men, who came to adore Jesus Christ, being newly born at Bethlehem. Many Questions have been started concerning these Magi. 'Tis asked, who they were? Whence they came? How many there were of 'em? At what Time they arrived at Jerusalem? And what was the Star that appeared to 'em? 'Tis commonly thought that the Magi were Philosophers, had the Knowledge of future Events, and whose chief Study was Astronomy. That those who came to worship Jesus Christ were Disciples and Descendants of Balaam, who had prophecied several Ages before[1], that there shall come a Star out of Jacob, and a Scepter shall rise out of Israel, and shall smite the Corners of Moab, and destroy all the Children of Sheth, or, all the Children of [Numb. xxiv. 17 Numb. xxiii. 7. Matthew ii. 1.] Pride. This Opinion is founded upon Scripture, which expressly says, that the wise Men came from the East, that is to say, from Arabia Deserta, or from Mesopotamia, which the sacred Authors express by the East. Balaam himself says, that he came from Aram, out of the Mountains of the East. But he came from the City of Pethora, situated upon the Euphrates[2]. Isaiah speaking of Abraham's coming into the Land of Promise, says that he came from the East[3]; who has caused the Just to come from the East.

The Arabians, the Eastern Idumæans, the Chaldæans, all Oriental People in Respect of Judæa, valued themselves much upon their Wisdom. The Name of Magus was appropriated in these Countries to signify a Philosopher, a Man that made a Profession of Wisdom. Tertullian[4], Justin Martyr[5], Epiphanius[6], and among the Moderns, Tostat, Mariana, Barradius, Grotius, Cornelius à lapide, and several others, as well as our selves, suppose the Magi to come from beyond the Euphrates, or from Mesopotamia, that is, from the East of Judæa. I shall not here undertake to confute the Opinion of those, who pretend that the Magi came from Persia, or from Armenia, or from Africa, or from Æthiopia, or from the three several Parts of the World, Asia, Africa, and Europe. Those who would see this Matter discussed at large, may consult those Writers who have expressly treated upon this Subject; and particularly the Dissertation I have published before my Commentary on Saint Matthew.

Some of the ancient Fathers seem to have thought, that the Magi were three in Number, and that they were Kings in their several Countries. Tertullian[7] seems zealous to maintain their Royalty, but his Proofs are insufficient. He supposes that the Orientals had commonly Magi for their Kings, which is far from being certain. Saint Ambrose[8], or rather Cæsarius of Arles, gives them the Names of Kings; but it is suspected that this Word has been foisted into the Text. Saint Cyprian[9] is quoted, in a Sermon upon Baptism, who says that they were Kings; but this Sermon belongs to an Abbot of Bonnevalle, named Arnold, who lived in the Time of Saint Bernard. Paschasius Radbertus[10], who lived in the ninth Age in the Abbey of Corbie, affirms, that no Body can be ignorant that the Magi were Kings, who are acquainted with profane History. Lastly, Theophylact[11] among the Greeks has expresly contended that they were Kings. This is all that has been delivered by the Ancients with any Assurance, for as to what has been quoted from others, they are by no Means express; and as to the Moderns, their Authority can be of no Moment, in a Matter of this Nature. What has contributed most to give the Magi the Title of Kings, are these Words of Psalm lxxii. Verse 10. The Kings of Tarshish and of the Isles shall bring Presents, the Kings of Sheba and Seba shall offer Gifts.

The Opinions of Men are as much divided as to the Profession of the Magi. Some[12] have imagined, that they exercised curious and diabolical Arts of Divination, judicial Astrology, and Inchantments. The ancient Gospel of the Infancy of our Saviour affirms, that they were Disciples of Zoroaster. But others[13] have had a more favourable Opinion of them, thinking that their Magick was natural and lawful. Saint Epiphanius believes that they were of the Race of Abraham and Kethura. Abbot Rupert gives them the Name of Prophets and inspired Persons. Origen[14] imagines, that the Magi having perceived by their magical Operations, that the Power of the Devil was much weakened, they were inquisitive to discover the Cause of it; and having observed at the same Time a new Star in the Heavens, they judged it was this of which Balaam had spoke, and which was to mark out the Place of the Birth of a new King of Israel. This is what made them resolve to go in Quest of him, to pay him their Adoration. Saint Basil[15] and Saint Ambrose[16] have pretty nearly the same Thoughts. Saint Jerome upon the xix of Isaiah says, that they had learned from Demons, or rather from the Prophecy of Balaam, that Christ was born; and Tertullian seems to say, that it was by Astrology they found out the Birth of the Messiah, since (as he maintains) this Science was allowed till the Time of Christ, but afterwards was forbidden, that no one henceforward might take upon him to calculate Nativities by the Stars.[17] Scientia ista usque ad Evangelium fuit concessa, ut Christo edito nemo exinde nativitatem alicujus de Cælo interpretetur.

The Number of the Magi has been fixt to three for a very long Time. Leo supposes it in several Places[18], Cæsarius affirms it expresly[19]. The same Thing is to be seen in two Sermons, formerly ascribed to Saint Austin[20], but one of which is Leo's, and the other is elsewhere found under the Name of Eusebius Emesius. Bede, Abbot Rupert[21], and after them a Multitude of Commentators, teach in the same Manner. This Opinion seems chiefly to be founded upon the three Sorts of Presents that are mentioned in the Gospel. They presented him with Gold, Myrrhe, and Frankincense. We commonly give 'em the Names of Gaspar, Melchior, and Balthasar; but these Names were unknown to Antiquity, as well as those other Names given to 'em in some Writings, which are modern enough, and therefore of but little Authority. As likewise these Greek Names, Apellius, Amerus, and Damascus; or these Hebrew, Magalat, Galgalat, Saraim; or lastly these, Ator, Sato, Paratoras[22].

We read at the End of the third Tome of the Works of Bede, in a Book intitled, Extracts from the Fathers; that Melchior, the first of the Magi, was a bald old Man, having a great Beard of long white Hair; his Garment was of the Colour of Hyacinth, or Sky-blue, with a yellow or Orange Cloak, (Sago Mileno, or rather, Melino) his Stockings of a Colour mixed with blue and white, and his Diadem of several Colours. He offered Gold to Jesus Christ, as to a King. The second Magus was called Gaspar. He was young, without a Beard, of a ruddy Countenance, had on an Orange Robe, and a red Cloak. His Stockings were of the Colour of Hyacinth. He offered Incense in Acknowledgment of the Divinity of our Saviour. The third was called Balthasar. He was brown, had a long Beard, was clothed with a red Robe, with a Cloak of several Colours, and his Stockings were yellow. He offered Myrrhe to our Saviour, in Signification of his Mortality. But the Work wherein these Particularities are recorded, is unworthy of the venerable Bede, and without Doubt is much more modern.

Jerome Osorius, Bishop of Algarbe in Portugal relates, that a King of the City of Cranganor in the Kingdom of Calecut, named Cheriperimale, having betaken himself to travel, to expiate an Incest that he had committed with his Sister, came into Carmania, where he found two famous Magi, who were just upon the Point of setting out for Judæa; there to adore a Child just born of a Virgin, and who was to redeem Mankind. Cheriperimale prayed them to let him be of their Company; so they went together, and having paid their Adoration to Jesus Christ, they returned into their own Countrey. The King of Cranganor, at his Return into his City, there built a Church in Honour of the Virgin, and there represented the holy Mother of God holding her Son in her Arms; and gave Orders, that as often as the Name of Mary should be pronounced with a loud Voice, every Body should prostrate themselves to the Ground. This is what Osorius assures us he was informed of, by Persons very well acquainted with the Affairs of India, and who affirm that this is found in the ancient Monuments of the Indians. He adds, that the Indians paint the three Magi in this Manner. First, two walk together of a fair Complexion, clothed in royal Robes, having their Presents with them. Behind them is the third, of a tawny Hue almost like an Ethiopian, carrying also his Presents. F. Maffee in his History makes Mention of this also. He calls the King of Calecut, Perimale.

The Author of the imperfect Work upon Matthew, (Homil ii.) quotes ancient Apochryphal Books, which bear the Name of Seth; these say, that the Magi were twelve in Number, chosen out of all their Nation, and succeeding each other from Father to Son, for several Ages, to observe the Moment of the Appearance of the Star, that had been formerly foretold by Balaam. For this Purpose they used to go up into a Mountain, whence they observed the rising of the Stars. At last the Star appeared to them, having a young Child in the Middle of it, and a Cross over it. The Child spoke to them, and bid them go into Judæa. The Author of the common Gloss contents himself to say there were several Magi, without limiting their Number. The same Writer that composed the imperfect Commentary on Saint Matthew, which I have quoted several Times already, informs us that Saint Thomas went into Persia, and there instructed and baptized the Magi; after which they applied themselves to the preaching the Gospel along with him. 'Tis affirmed, that they suffered Martyrdom in a City of Arabia. The Armenians maintain that they preached and suffered in their Countrey[23]. The Governor of Armenia sent Word to King Saint Lewis, that they came from Tangat in Armenia[24].

The Time which the Magi took up in their Journey to Judæa, is a Point that has much exercised the Chronologers. Those which suppose they came from the remotest Parts of Persia, allow them two Years for their Journey[25]; supposing that the Star appeared to 'em two Years before the Birth of our Saviour. In this the Text of the Gospel is something favourable to 'em, saying that [Matt. ii. 16.] Herod put to Death the Children of Bethlehem, from two Years old and under, according to the Time that the Magi had shewed him. Others believe, that departing from Home at the Time of our Saviour's Birth, they did not arrive at Bethlehem till two Years after. Others again make them set out at the Moment of our Saviour's Birth, and that they may arrive at Bethlehem thirteen Days after, they supply them with Dromedaries for the greater Speed. Some have believed that the Star appeared to 'em from the Time of the Conception of John the Baptist, or from the Time of Christ's Incarnation. But I cannot think that any one has ventured to fix the exact Time of their Departure, tho' most have agreed that the Day of their Arrival at Bethlehem should be on the thirteenth Day from our Lord's Birth. If they came from the Banks of Euphrates, I believe they might arrive at Jerusalem in less than twenty Days, crossing Arabia Deserta upon Camels, which was the common Way of travelling in those Countries. For from Euphrates to Jerusalem, it is not more than two hundred Leagues.

Now let us come to the Star that appeared to the Magi[26]. Some ancient Authors have asserted, that it was a new Star purposely created, to declare to Men the Birth of the Messiah. Origen in his first Book against Celsus. Maldonat, and Grotius, take it for a kind of Comet, which appeared preternaturally in the Air. Lightfoot thinks, that the same Light which appeared to the Shepherds near Bethlehem, might also be visible afar off to the Magi, hanging over Judæa; and so be their Guide to find our Saviour. Others have pretended that it was an Angel clothed with a luminous Body in Form of a Star[27]; which taking his Course towards Judæa, determined the Magi to follow him. The Author of the imperfect Work on Saint Matthew, and Saint Epiphanius[28], have followed the ancient Tradition found in the Apochryphal Book of Seth, which says that this Star appeared, having a young Child in the Middle of it, and above it the Figure of a Cross. The Author of the Treatise de mirabilibus sacræ Scripturæ, published in Saint Austin's Name, assures us, that some Writers believed this Star was the Holy Ghost, which appeared to the Magi under the Form of a Star, as it appeared at the Baptism of Jesus Christ, under the Form of a Dove. Saint Ignatius in his Epistle to the Ephesians, says this Star exceeded all the other Stars in Brightness, and that the Sun and Moon, in some Sense, might be said to be in its Retinue; and that the whole World were in Amazement at the Appearance of this new Light.

Chalcidius[29], a Platonick Philosopher, who has composed a Commentary upon Plato's Timæus, speaks of this Phænomenon in these Terms. We must observe another History much more holy, and more worthy of Veneration; 'tis that which tells us of the Appearance of a Star, which foretold neither Diseases nor Mortality, but the Descent of God upon Earth, to live among Men, and to heap his Favours upon them. Wise Men of Chaldæa having perceived this Star in the Night, as they were skilful in the Science of Astronomy, they betook themselves to find out the new-born God; and having found him, they offered him Presents suitable to so high a Majesty.

'Tis disputed whether this Star was seen by all in general, or by the Magi alone. Some[30] believe it was seen only by the Magi, others[31] that they themselves saw it only twice or thrice, first in their own Countrey, and again at going out of Jerusalem, when they set out for Bethlehem: Saint Chrysostom[32], Saint Ambrose[33], Saint Austin[34], Saint Bernard[35], and the Author of the imperfect Commentary on Saint Matthew, maintain that they saw it all along; from the Time it began to appear to them, till it disappeared on their Arrival at Jerusalem, and so put them under a Necessity of informing themselves about the Place where the Messias was to be born.

Saint Ignatius the Martyr, and the false Gospel of the Infancy of Jesus Christ, suppose it appeared in the Face of the whole World, that all the People saw it, and that it was their own Fault if they did not follow it. The Magi at their Arrival at Jerusalem seem to suppose, that every one had seen it. Where is he that is born King of the Jews? For we have seen his Star in the East, and are come to worship him.

As for our selves, we believe that this Star was an inflamed Meteor, in the Middle Region of the Air, which having been observed by the Magi with miraculous and extraordinary Circumstances, was taken by them for the Star so long foretold by Balaam; and that afterwards they resolved to follow it, and to seek the new-born King, whose coming it declared. 'Twas therefore a Light that moved in the Air before them, something like the Pillar of Clouds in the Desert. Inward Inspiration, the Light of the Holy Ghost, the Solicitation of Grace, were the Motives which engaged them to follow this Phænomenon.

Magicians

MAGICIANS. The Name Magician, Magus, Magi, is pretty often to be met with in Scripture. Generally it signifies a Diviner, a Fortune-teller, &c. Moses for Example forbids to consult such People on Pain of Death, Levit xix. 31. Regard not them that have familiar Spirits, neither seek after Wizards to be defiled by them. xx. 6. The Soul that turneth after such as have familiar Spirits, and after Wizards, to go a Whoring after them; I will even set my Face against that Soul, and will cut him off from among his People. The Hebrew Words Oboth and Jedonim signify literally the first those that are possessed with a Spirit of Python, or a Demon that foretels future Events; the second is Knowers, they that boast of the Knowledge of secret Things. 'Twas such Sort of People that Saul extirpated out of the Land of Israel.

Daniel also speaks of Magicians[1], and the Diviners that were in Chaldæa under King Nebuchadnezzar. He names four Sorts of 'em, Chartumim, Asaphim, Mecasphim, and Casdim. The first, according to Theodotion, signifies Enchanters; according to the Septuagint, Sophists; according to Saint Jerom, Ariolos, Diviners, Fortune-tellers, Casters of Nativities. The second Word Asaphim, has a great Resemblance to the Greek Word Sophos, Wise-men, whether the Greeks took this Word from the Babylonians, or these from them. The Root of Asaphim is not in the Chaldee Tongue, and Grotius thinks it is derived from the Greek. Theodotion and Saint Jerom have rendered it by Magicians, and the Septuagint by Philosophers.

The third Word is Mecasphim, which by Saint Jerom and the Greeks is translated Malefici, Enchanters, such People as make Use of noxious Herbs and Drugs, the Blood of Victims, and the Bones of the dead for their superstitious Operations.

The fourth Word Casdim, or Chaldæans, has two different Significations. The first intimates the Chaldæan People, who had then Nebuchadnezzar for their Monarch. The second expresses a Sort of Philosophers called also Chaldæans, who dwelt in a separate Part of the City, and were exempt from all publick Offices and Employments. Their Study was Physick, Astrology, Divination, the foretelling of future Events by the Observation of the Stars, the Interpretation of Dreams, the Science of Auguries, the Worship of the Gods, &c.[2]

All these inquisitive and superstitious Arts were prohibited among the Israelites; and to prevent any Inclination they might have of imitating the other Eastern People, who all had their Diviners, Enchanters, and Magicians; God sent them Prophets, who discovered future Events to them, and other Secrets, after a sure, clear, and easy Manner: Whereas the Predictions of Diviners were always obscure, enigmatical, doubtful, and dangerous, as well in Respect of those that consulted them, as those that were consulted. For the Law condemned them both to Death. See the Articles JANNES and JAMBRES, Pharaoh's Magicians; and also the Word PYTHON.

Magick

MAGICK. There are several Sorts of Magick. All those that are not natural are strictly forbidden by the Law of God, all wherein any Conjurations or Invocations of the Devil are used; in a Word, all the black Art, and all superstitious Ceremonies made Use of by Magicians, Sorcerers, Inchanters, Witches, Wizards, Necromancers, Exorcists, Astrologers, Soothsayers, Interpreters of Dreams, Fortune-tellers, Casters of Nativities, &c. in practising their diabolical Arts, whether it be to hurt Mankind, or to procure them Health, or any other Advantages. God has forbidden to consult [Levit. xix. 31. Levit. xx. 6.] Magicians on Pain of Death. He threatens to destroy those that shall consult them in Secret. Saul did what he could to drive them out of the Countrey of Israel. But for all this many were still to be found, and the Israelites [1 Sam. xxviii. 3.] were always much addicted to these Sorts of Superstitions. 'Tis known that Pharaoh's Magicians by their Inchantments counterfeited the true Miracles of Moses. See JANNES and JAMBRES, and our Dissertation upon true and false Miracles, before the Commentary upon Exodus.

Magick Rods

MAGICK RODS, or Wands. It is said [Ezek. xxi. 21.] in Ezekiel, The King of Babylon stood at the parting of the Way, at the Head of the two Ways, to use Divination; he made his Arrows bright, he consulted with Images, he looked in the Liver. Saint Jerom, Theodoret, Grotius, and the Generality of modern Interpreters, writing upon this Passage of Ezekiel, tell us that the Chaldæans had a Custom, that when they went upon any Undertaking or Journey, they writ upon Wands or Arrows, which they mingled together in a Quiver, the Names of the Cities they intended to go to, or the Things they were to undertake; that afterwards drawing the Arrows out of the Quiver at all Adventures, they were determined about their Undertaking by the Inscription of the Arrow that first came forth. This Custom of divining by Rods or Arrows is very antient in the East. The Scythians[1] and the Alans[2] divined by the Means of certain Branches of Willows or Myrtle. The modern Arabians[3] at this Day make Use of Arrows inclosed in a Bag. Upon one they write, Lord command me; upon another, Lord prevent me; and upon a third they write nothing. If the first Arrow that is drawn out of the Sack has the Inscription, Lord prevent me, then the Thing in Question is entirely omitted. We find also something like this among the Turks[4], Chinese[5], and antiently among the Medes[6] and Hebrews[7]. Tacitus observes it also among the antient Germans. They cut into several Pieces a Bough of some Fruittree, which they marked with certain Characters, and threw them by Hazard upon a white Cloth. Then the Father of the Family took up these Pieces one after another, and thence took Auguries for future Events, by the Inspection of the [Gen. x. 2. Magog.] Marks that were upon them,

Magog

MAGOG, Son of Japheth, Father of the Scythians[1] or Tartars, 'as is commonly believed. 'Tis well known that the Name of Scythians was heretofore of a great Extent. It comprehended the Getæ, the Goths, the Sarmatians, the Sacæ, the Massagetæ, and several other People. The Tartars and Muscovites at this Day possess the Country of the antient Scythians, and there are still found among them several Footsteps of the Names Gog and Magog. They were formerly called Mogli, and in Tartary are known the Provinces Lug, Mongug, Cangigu, and Gigui; Engui, Corgangui, Caigui, &c. Saint Ambrose[2] was of Opinion, that by Gog and Magog were represented the Goths, who in the fifth and sixth Ages ravaged the Roman Empire. We think that Gog and Magog mentioned by Ezekiel, Ch. xxxviii, xxxix. are put for Cambyses and his Army; and that Gog and Magog in the Revelations, xx. 8. point out the Enemies of the Church in general, and particularly the Emissaries of Antichrist. Gog and Magog have in a Manner passed into a Proverb, to express a Multitude of powerful, cruel, barbarous, and implacable Enemies, particularly to God and his Worship. Mahalaleel

MAHALALEEL, or Malaleel, Son of Canaan of the Race of Seth. Mahaleel begat [Gen. v. 15, 16, &c.] Jared at the Age of sixty five Years. He lived afterwards eight hundred Years, in all eight hundred sixty five Years, and died in the Year of the World 1290, before Christ 2710, before the Vulgar Æra 2714.

The Orientals will have it[1], that this Patriarch was the first of those that undertook to dig Mines in the Earth, for the Discovery of Veins of Metals concealed therein; and that he built Houses. They also impute to him the first founding of the Cities Shuster and Babel. Some confound him with the Giant Dondash, who entered himself into the Service of Seth, whom they acknowledged as the Prophet and universal Monarch of the World before the Flood. They say the Giant Dondash made Use of no Weapons, either offensive or defensive, and that he fought naked from his Head down to his Navel, by the Strength of his Arms only.

III. MAHALATH, Maheleth, or Maleth, is read in the Title of Psalm liii. and lxxxviii[1]. To the chief Musician upon Mahalath. Some ancient Copies read Amalech. 'Tis thought by some, that Mahalath signifies some musical Instrument, but this Conjecture has no Foundation. We rather think it is put for Dancing, which is certainly its proper Signification in the Hebrew. So that we would translate the Title of the 53d Psalm thus, " An " instructive Psalm of David, for the chief " Master of Dancing, or for the Chorus of " Singers and Dancers.

Make

MAKE. To make or do, is taken for fulfilling and observing the Law, labouring at any Work, acquiring any Thing. The Souls that Abraham had gotten [or made] in Haran [Gen. xii. 5.] ; were the Slaves that he had acquired in that Place. To make himself a House, to [Gen. xxx. 30.] think of settling himself and providing for his Family. To make himself Chariots and [1 Kings i. 5. Gen. xviii. 21.] Horsemen, is to set up a royal Equipage. To make a Kid, is to sacrifice it to God, to dress it. Faciam te in gentem magnam, I [Gen. xii. 2.] will make you the Father of a great Nation. Facere salutem magnam, to save his People [Exod. xiv. 7.] by exerting a great Power. Ye have troubled me, to make me to stink among the Inhabitants of the Land: That is, to make [Gen. xxxiv. 30.] odious, to bring to Infamy. He hath wrought [or made] with God this Day: To be assisted or favoured of God, to be made Use of as an Instrument of his Power. Facere alone signifies to succeed. Commit thy Way unto the Lord, trust also in him, and he shall bring it to pass: Et ipse faciet: He shall give good Success to your Undertakings. [Psal. xxxvii. 5.] Hæc faciat mihi Deus, & hæc addat: A Form of Swearing, wherein the Penalty is not expressed, which is wished to our selves or others.

Malachi

[Hag. i. 13.] MALACHI[1], the last of the twelve lesser Prophets, and so much unknown, as it is doubted whether his Name be a proper Name, or only a generical Name signifying the Angel of the Lord, a Messenger, a Prophet. For it appears by Haggai, and by the Prophet whom we cite by the Name of [Mal. iii. 1.] Malachi, that in these Times the Name of Malach-Jehovah, or the Messenger of the Lord, was often given to the Prophets. The Seventy have rendered the Hebrew Word Malachi by his Angel, instead of my Angel, as the Original Word expresses: And several of the Fathers[2] have quoted Malachi under the Name of the Angel of the Lord. The Author of the second Book of Esdras and Tertullian join together the Names of Malachi, and the Angel of the Lord. Origen thought, that Malachi was an Angel incarnate, rather than a Prophet[3]; but this Opinion is insupportable. 'Tis much more probable that Malachi was no other than Esdras, and this is the Opinion of the antient Hebrews, of the Chaldee Paraphrast, of Saint Jerome[4], and of Abbot Rupert.

The Author of the Lives of the Prophets, under the Name of Epiphanius Dorotheus, and the Chronicon Alexandrinum, say that Malachi was of the Tribe of Zebulun, and a Native of Sapha; that the Name of Malachi was given him because of his Angelical Mildness, and because an Angel used to appear visibly to the People, after the Prophet had spoke to 'em, to confirm what he had said. He died very young, as they say, and was buried near the Place of his Ancestors.

It appears certain that Malachi prophesied under Nehemiah, and after Haggai and Zechariah, at a Time when great Disorders reigned among the Priests and People of Judah, which are reproved by Malachi. He inveighs against the Priests, he reproaches the People with having taken strange Wives, he reproves them for their Inhumanity towards their Brethren, their too frequently divorcing their Wives, their Neglect of paying their Tythes and First-Fruits. He seems to allude to the Covenant that Nehemiah renewed with the Lord, assisted by the Priests and the Chief of the Nation. Malachi is the last of the Prophets of the Synagogue, and lived about four hundred Years before Jesus Christ. He prophesied of the coming of John the Baptist, and of the twofold coming of our Saviour [Mal iii. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5. Mal. i. 10, 11, 12, 13.] in very express Terms. He speaks of the Sacrifice of the new Law, and of the Abolition of those of the old, in these Words: I have no Pleasure in you, saith the Lord of Hosts, neither will I accept an Offering at your Hand. For from the rising of the Sun, even unto the going down of the same, my Name shall be great among the Gentiles, and in every Place Incense shall be offered unto my Name, and a pure Offering: For my Name shall be great among the Heathen, saith the Lord of Hosts. The Jews maintain, that in the Time of Darius, Son of Hystaspes, there was held a general Assembly of the Heads of their Nation, to determine the Canon of their Scriptures: That Daniel, Haggai, Zechariah, and Malachi presided in this Council, and that Esdras was their Secretary. But it is very dubious whether there ever was such an Assembly, and certainly Daniel could not have lived to this Time. The Death of Malachi is put in the Roman Martyrology on the 14th of January.

III. MALCHUS, a Servant of the High -priest Caiaphas, who being in the Garden [John xviii. 10.] of Olives with those that were sent to apprehend Jesus, was smote by Saint Peter, and had his right Ear cut off. Tho' it is not certain whether it was so entirely separated from his Head as to fall to the Ground, or was only cut off in Part. The latter is most probable, because Jesus only touched it to [Luke xxii. 51, 52.] heal it. Some believe that Peter struck this Servant only in his own Defence, and to prevent him from securing him also. There is a great Probability, that Saint Peter intended to have cut off his Head, and not his Ear. Cornelius à Lapide thinks that Malchus became a Convert; but others are of Opinion, that it was he that struck our Saviour in the Face, and asked him, Dost thou answer the High-priest thus? But the Scripture does not favour this Opinion at all. For Saint John says, he that [John xviii. 22.] struck our Saviour was one of the Officers belonging to the High-priest Annas, without insinuating that it was Malchus, of whom he had spoke a little before.

Malice

MALICE, Malitia. This Latin Word is not only used for that evil Disposition of the Mind and Heart, which we call Malice, but it is also put for Punishment and Correction. For Example, Scito quia completa est malitia [1 Sam. xx. 7.] ejus. Be sure that evil (or Punishment) is determined by him. Thus David speaks to Jonathan: You may know that Saul has resolved upon my Destruction. The Hebrew says literally, know that Evil is compleated by him, that he has resolved that I shall perish. And in another Place, the Servants of Nabal tell their Mistress Abigail, that David had resolved upon the Destruction of her Husband. Quoniam completa est malitia adversus virum tuum. See also Isaiah xl. 2.

[Eccles. xi. 10.] Solomon in Ecclesiastes says, Amove malitiam à carne tua, put away Evil from thy Flesh. The wise Man in this Place, by the Term Evil, or Malitia, according to Saint Jerom, means all shameful Pleasures. In carnis [Hieron. in Eccles.] malitia universas intelligit corporis voluptates. The same Ecclesiastes has it, Per tristitiam [Eccles. vii. 3.] vultûs corrigitur animus delinquentis. The Hebrew has, Malitia vultûs lætificat cor. By the Sadness of the Countenance the Heart is made better. That is, Severity of the Countenance, with which we behold any one that departs from his Duty, brings him to be sensible of his Fault, and makes his Heart better. Our Saviour says in the Gospel, Sufficit diei malitia sua; Sufficient for the Day is the Evil thereof, or the Penalty and Calamity thereof. Saint Paul requires, that the Faithful should be Children in Malice, but Men in Prudence and Wisdom. Malitia parvuli estote, sensibus autem perfecti estote.

[1 Cor. xiv. 20. Ecclus. xi. 29.] In some Passages of Ecclesiasticus, Malitia is taken in the same Sence as Pœna. Malitia horæ oblivionem facit luxuriæ magnæ. The Evil of a Moment makes us forget the [Ecclus. xii. 9.] greatest Pleasures. And again, In malitia viri amicus agnitus est. A Friend is known in Adversity. And elsewhere, Melior est [Ecclus. xxx. 14.] pauper sanus, quam dives flagellatus malitiâ. A poor Man in Health is preferable to a rich Man afflicted with Diseases.

Malichus

MALICHUS, a Jew of an illustrious Birth, and of considerable Power in his Nation. He adhered to the Romans against Alexander, Son of Aristobulus, who made War against Hyrcanus[1].

Under the weak Government of Hyrcanus, Prince and High-priest of the Jews, he shared with Antipater, Father of Herod the great, almost the whole Authority in Judœa; he was for a long Time one of the strongest Supports of this Prince against the Attempts of Aristobulus. He was a crafty intrieguing Man, who not being satisfied with being the second Favourite, would needs be the first[2]. Antipater being the only one that could dispute this with him, Malichus resolved to take him out of the Way. Antipater was aware of it, and thought to avoid it. But when Malichus found himself discovered, he applied to Antipater, and by the Dint of Oaths and Protestations, he had the Art to persuade him and his Sons, that he was intirely innocent. They were reconciled, and Antipater had so much Confidence in him, that he even saved his Life with Marcus, who intended to put him to Death, upon some Intelligence he had received, that he was contriving some Mischief.

But notwithstanding this new Obligation, Malichus did not quit his Undertaking, which he accomplished in this Manner. He corrupted Hyrcanus's Cupbearer, who one Day as Antipater was eating with this Prince, gave him a Dose of Poison. Immediately by Violence he seized the Government of Jerusalem. But he omitted nothing to persuade Herod and Phasael, the Sons of Antipater, that he had no Hand in this Piece of Wickedness. Herod would not believe him, and even resolved to come to open Force, to revenge the Death of his Father. But Phasael something moderated his Eagerness, rather than to bring on a civil War. However they both concurred in a Resolution of revenging their Father's Death, but to bring it about without making too great a Noise[3]. Herod privately sent Notice to Cassius of Malichus's Wickedness, and procured Leave from him to revenge it. Cassius gave Orders to the Governor of Tyre to support him, and to give him Assistance in this Enterprize.

Some Time after, when Cassius had made himself Master of Laodicea, all the Princes and chief Men of Syria and Palestine repaired to this, to make their Compliments and Presents to Cassius upon this Occasion. Hyrcanus, Malichus, and *He*rod set out also, to be there as well as others. And when they came near Tyre, where they were to lie, Herod invited the whole Company to Supper. And sending his People before, on Pretence to make Preparation, he gave Notice to the Officers of the Roman Garrison, of the Orders he had for them from Cassius, as to what related to Malichus. They immediately therefore detached a Party from the City, who fell upon Malichus, and put him to Death[4]. His Plot was, if he could have entered into the City without Interruption, to have caused his Son to escape, whom he had sent thither as an Hostage, and then to return back to Judœa, and to have raised the whole Countrey against the Romans. Then by the Favour of that Confusion, into which a civil War would have involved them, to have caused himself to be acknowledged as King of Judæa.

Malta

MALTA, or Melita, a famous Island in the African Sea. 'Tis thought its Name Melita was occasioned by the great Quantity of Honey that was found there formerly. Its Length is from East to West, and its Breadth from North to South. Its Circumference is about sixty Miles, or twenty Leagues. This Island is ascribed to Africa by the Geographers, because if we draw a Line from East to West, it will be found to be included in the African Sea. Its Soil is stony and barren, yet it bears excellent Fruits, Melons and Cotton. Saint Paul suffered Shipwreck upon the Coast of Malta, and with his Companions was very well used by the People of the Island, who gave them Shelter, and lighted a Fire for them, to dry them by. But Saint Paul taking up a Faggot of Twiggs to throw into the Fire[1], a Viper that lurked therein feeling the Heat of the Fire, seized Saint Paul by the Hand, who without any Fear presently shook it into the Fire. The People that were by observing this, said to one another, “Surely “this Man must be a Murderer, and the “divine Vengeance still pursues him, tho' he “has escaped Shipwreck.” They expected every Moment to see him fall down dead; but finding that nothing of this happened to him, they changed their Sentiments of him, and began to take him for some Deity.

Publius the Governor of the Island received them very courteously, and treated them handsomely for three Days. His Father being sick of a Fever, and of a bloody Flux, Saint Paul went to see him, and laying his Hands on him healed him. Then all the People of the Island, who had any Sick belonging to 'em, brought them to Saint Paul, who restored them to Health. When Saint Paul and his Company sailed from thence, the People abundantly supplied them with every Thing necessary for their Voyage. We are assured[2], that since the landing of Saint Paul at Malta, there is no longer found any Vipers, or other venomous Animals; and that if any are brought thither from other Places, they die presently, especially in the Place where Saint Paul was bit, which is a Cave there. From hence are carried every Day Earth and Stones, to drive away venomous Creatures, and to serve as Preservatives and Remedies against the Biting of Scorpions and Serpents. It cannot be said that this is any natural Property of the Countrey, because when Saint Paul landed there, there were Vipers, and the Inhabitants seeing him to be bit, expected he would have fallen down dead: So that this cannot but proceed from that particular Blessing that Saint Paul left behind him in this Island. A Traveller assures us, that it is customary for little Children there to handle Scorpions without any Danger. Several of the Maltese were converted at the preaching of Saint Paul[3], and the House of Publius, the first Bishop of Malta, was changed into a Church. Saint Paul continued there three whole Months.

A Native of this Island being a Religious belonging to la Charité, has sent me Information, that Malta was an antient Colony of the Carthaginians, and had always spoke the Language of Africa, as it continues to do to this Day. That for this Reason those of Saint Paul's Company, who were all Greeks or Latins, called the Maltese, Barbarians. That the Romans never introduced their Language among this People; that still the ordinary People speak Arabick; that at Vallette they speak Italian, because of the Knights who have their Abode there, but that the Countrey People understand not this Tongue; that indeed at Vallette there are two Greek Parishes, but they are for the Grecians who quitted Rhodes along with the Knights, and followed their Fortune to Malta; that notwithstanding all the Revolutions to which this Island has been exposed, it has always preserved the Catholick Religion in its Purity, from Saint Paul's Time down to the present Age.

Besides which he acquaints me, that the Place where Saint Paul came ashore, is a Neck of Land washed by the Sea on all Sides, lying to the North of the Island, and extending towards the West, and has ever since been called Saint Paul's Road: That there is a Tradition in the Island, that Saint Paul was really bit by a Viper, and that when he shook it off into the Fire, he cursed all the Vipers of the Island, and all that have been seen there since are without Poison; for some are still found there, but not dangerous. Some of 'em out of Curiosity have been sometimes transported into Sicily, and immediately upon their Arrival have become as venomous as others; and being then carried back to Malta, have presently lost their venomous Quality.

To this he adds, that Multitudes of petrified Vipers, and other Serpents, are found daily at Malta, as also the Tongues, Eyes, and Bowels of Serpents, all of which have the Faculty of preserving such from the biting of poisonous Animals, as carry any Pieces of these about them. And as for those that have none, if they should happen to be bit by a Serpent, they may be certainly cured if they do but take a little of the Powder of one of these Petrifactions, mingled in a little Water. Or else they need but take a little of the Scrapings of the Stones of the Cave, where Saint Paul lodged. And this cannot be owing to the Climate of the Countrey, because before Saint Paul arrived at Malta, their Vipers and other venomous Creatures were of as poisonous a Nature, and as dangerous as in other Places. As to the Situation of the Island, see the Plan which we have caused to be made of it.

Mammon

MAMMON. This Name is properly Syriac, and signifies Riches. Our Saviour says, that we cannot at the same Time serve [Matth. vi. 24. Luke xvi. 13.] God and Riches; and that we ought not to make our selves Friends of Mammon, or of the Riches of Unrighteousness, that is to say, of worldly Riches, which are commonly the Instruments of Iniquity, and are acquired but too often by Ways of Unrighteousness and Iniquity. Some have asserted[1], that Mammon signified the God of Riches, but there is no Proof of this Opinion. Matmon in Hebrew signifies concealed[2], and Mammona Riches. Saint Austin observes[3], that in the Punick or African Tongue, Mammona signifies *Gain. Mammona apud Hebræos divitiæ appellari dicuntur. Congruit & Punicum nomen; nam lucrum Punic*è Mammon dicitur.

Mamzer

MAMZER. This Word is Hebrew, and signifies a Bastard. God forbids the Admittance of Mamzers, or Bastards, into the Congregation of his People, as far as the tenth Generation[1]. The Rabbins[2] distinguish Mamzers into three Kinds. 1. Those that are born in Marriage, from Parents contracted in Cases prohibited by the Law. 2. Those that proceed from a criminal Conjunction, and punishable by the Judges with the severest Punishment; as are the Children of Adulterers. 3. Those who are born in Incest, and condemned by the Law, under the Penalty of being cut off. They also distinguish between Mamzers that are certain and uncertain. The first are those whose Birth is notoriously corrupted, and who without any Difficulty are excluded from the Congregation of the Lord. The doubtful Mamzers are those whose Birth is uncertain. These could not be excluded in Strictness, yet the Scribes would not admit them, for Fear that any certain Mamzers should slip in among them.

But the Vulgate, the Seventy, and the Authors of the Canon Law, take Mamzer for the Child of a Prostitute. These three Verses shew the Distinction between the different Sorts of Bastards, as acknowledged by the Law.

Mamzeribus scortum, sed mœcha nothis dedit ortum. Ut seges à spica, sic spurius est ab amica. Dant naturales, quæ nobis sunt speciales.

Some Interpreters take Mamzer for a generical Term, which signifies any Kind of illegitimate Children, whose Birth is impure in any Manner whatsoever. Others[3] believe the Hebrew Word Mamzer rather signifies a Stranger or Foreigner, than a Bastard. Jephthah, who was the Son of a publick Woman[4], was Head and Judge in Israel. Pharez and Zerah, the Sons of Tamar, conceived from a Kind of Incest, are reckoned among the Ancestors of David. Among the Hebrews the Children followed the Condition of the Mother. How then could a Bastard-Son, born of a Mother that was an Israelite, be excluded the Congregation of Israel to the tenth Generation, since the Egyptians and Idumæans might be admitted after the third Generation? So that there is great Probability Mamzer means something more than barely a Bastard, perhaps expresses a Bastard that is born of a Woman that is a Stranger and an Idolater. The Seventy render the Word Mamzer in Zechary ix. 6. by a Stranger or Alien; and Deut. xxiii. 2. by the Son of a Prostitute. The Hebrew Word occurs only in these two Places, and its Signification can by no Means be certain. The Author of the Traditions concerning the Books of Samuel, Kings and Chronicles, believes that Solomon was of the Number of the Mamzers; and that when Bathsheba says to David, 1 Kings i. 21. I and my Son Soloman shall be counted Offenders, or Sinners; she means, my Son shall be treated as a Mamzer, and my self as a Prostitute. And that David, being desirous to secure them from this, declared his Son Solomon to be his Successor in the Kingdom.

As to the Words, They shall not enter into the Congregation of the Lord, even to the tenth Generation, it cannot be meant that this Sort of Children may not be converted, or be admitted into Judaism, till after ten Generations; but that they shall have no Share in the Imployments, in the Dignities and Privileges of the true Hebrews, till after a long Time, and till the Blemish of their Birth is entirely obliterated.

Man

MAN. Concerning the Creation and Fall of the first Man, there are many Questions proposed, which may be found discussed in the Articles ADAM and EVE. [Gen. i. 27.] It is said in Genesis for Example, that Man was created Male and Female; that is to say, according to some, that he was created an Hermaphrodite; or that the Man and Woman were created growing together at their Sides; but the most simple and most natural Meaning, that this Text of Moses will admit of, is this, that God created Man and Woman as he created other Animals, by Pairs or Couples, the Male and Female of every Species. But whereas other Animals were created altogether, and by one fiat alone, God created Man and Woman separately, and at some Distance of Time from one another. The Woman was created in Paradise, and taken out of Adam's Side while he was asleep, and the other Creatures, [Gen. ii. 20, 21, 22, &c.] both Male and Female, were made immediately from the Mass of inanimate Matter.

The Man was created after the Image and Likeness of his Creator. This Resemblance consists chiefly in the Qualities of his Soul. He was created free, intelligent, immortal, capable of Virtue, Justice, Wisdom and Happiness. By his Sin he lost a great Part of this Resemblance; at least it was much weakened, diminished, and altered. We may also say that he has some Resemblance to God, by the Dominion that God has given him over the other Creatures. He has appointed him, as it were, a Vice-God upon Earth. Lastly, this Resemblance may also have Regard to that Likeness, that was found between Jesus Christ incarnate, and Man in the State of Innocence. When Jesus Christ took our Nature upon him, he made in some Respect Man like himself, by his becoming like to Man.

When Man received from God the Breath [Gen. ii. 7.] of Life, he became a living Soul. Inspiravit in faciem ejus spiraculum vitæ, & factus est homo in animam viventem. He received from God Life and Respiration, and became a living, rational, and immortal Creature. Some understand this of the Life of Grace, of the holy sanctifying Spirit, which God gave to Adam.

Man is sometimes taken for Mankind in general, for all human Nature, and sometimes particularly for Adam.

[Deut. xxxiii. 1. Josh. xiv. 6.] A Man of God generally signifies a Prophet, a Man devoted to God and his Service. Moses is called in a peculiar Manner the Man of God. David, Shemaiah, and the other Prophets, are also called in this Manner. Son of Man denotes Man in General. Quid est homo quod memor es ejus, aut filius hominis, [Psal. vii. 5.] quoniam visitas eum? The Sons of Men are taken in the same Sense. The Lord or the Angels speaking to Men, often gives them the Name of Son of Man. Thus the [Ezek. ii. 1. & passim. Dan. viii. 17.] Lord calls Ezekiel; Fili hominis, sta super pedes tuos. And the Angel Gabriel speaks in the same Manner to Daniel. Jesus Christ frequently calls himself Son of Man.

MANAEN, or Manahem, a Christian Prophet, and Foster-brother of Herod Antipas[1]. He was at Antioch with other Prophets, that is, Simon surnamed Niger, Lucius of Cyrene, Barnabas and Saul: when the Holy Ghost said to 'em, Separate me Barnabas and Saul for the Work whereunto I have called them. Then after having fasted and prayed, they laid their Hands on them, and let them go. 'Tis thought that Manaen was of the Number of the LXX Disciples. The Authors of the Latin Martyrologies[2] put his Feast upon the 24th of May, and say that he died at Antioch. None of the Particulars of his Life are come to our Knowledge.

Manahen (I)

I. MANAHEN, or Manahem, the sixteenth King of Israel. He was Son of Gadi, and revenged the Death of his Master Zachariah, by that of Shallum, Son of Jabesh, who had usurped the Crown of Israel[1]. Manahem, General of the Army of Zachariah, was at Tirzah, when he had the News of his Master's Death. He immediately marched against Shallum, who had shut himself up in Samaria; he killed him, and reigned in his Stead[2]. From thence he returned to Tirzah; but this City being not willing to acknowledge him, and shutting their Gates against him, he was so provoked at it, that he vented his Passion upon Tiphsah, a Town in the Neighbourhood of Tirzah, and probably Sharers in their Resolution. Afterwards he took Tirzah, ruined it intirely, and exercised many Barbarities in it. For he killed all the Women with Child in it, ript up their Bellies, and dashed the Children against the Ground. After this, he reigned in Samaria for ten Years[3], and did Evil in the Sight of the Lord, walking in the Ways of Jeroboam the Son of Nebat, who made Israel to sin.

Pul King of Assyria, probably the Father of Sardanapalus, having invaded the Land of Israel during the Reign of Manahem; this Prince was obliged to pay him a thousand Talents, that he might be assisted by him, and fixed upon the Throne. To raise this Sum, Manahem was forced to tax all the Persons in the Countrey that were able to pay at fifty Shekels a Head; after which Pul returned into his own Countrey. Hosea confirms what we have said, when he says, V. 13. Ephraim saw his Sickness, and Judah saw his Wound, then went Ephraim to the Assyrian, and sent to King Jareb: Misit ad Regem ultorem. Vulg. But the Scripture seems to insinuate elsewhere, that the King [1 Chron. v. 26. Jos. Antiq. l. ix. c. 11.] of Assyria came into the Countrey as an Enemy. And the God of Israel stirred up the Spirit of Pul King of Assyria, &c. Josephus thinks, that Pul came to act offensively against Manahem, who not finding himself in a Capacity to withstand so great a Force, bought his Peace for the thousand Talents he gave him. All this may be easily reconciled by supposing, that at first Pul invaded Israel as an Enemy, but that Manahem brought him over to his Interest by this great Sum that he gave him. Manahem slept with his Fathers, and his Son Pekahiah reigned in his Stead.

Manahem (II)

[2 Kings xv. 22.] II. MANAHEM, of the Sect of the Essenians. He was Vicegerent to Hillel mentioned before. Manahem was a learned Man for that Age, and of great Consideration among his Sect. He foretold Herod the Great, being then a young Scholar, that he should reign one Day[1]. At the same Time he recommended to him the Virtues of Justice and Moderation, and yet foretold him he should tread these under Foot, and all the Duties of Religion and Humanity; though nevertheless he would live in great Glory and Prosperity. But, added he, " You cannot conceal your self " from the Eyes of God, who will chastise " you at the End of your Life, for all the " Evils you shall have committed. Herod at first slighted these Promises, but when he saw himself raised to the Regal Dignity, he sent for Manahem, and enquired of him how long he should reign. Manahem not answering directly, the King asked him, Shall I reign ten Years? To which Manahem replied, not ten only, but twenty, yea thirty; without explaining himself any farther. Then Herod sent him away, giving him his Hand as a Token of Friendship, and always shewed much Esteem for the Sect of the Essenians. Afterwards Herod out of a Principle of Gratitude, and as a Token of the Esteem that he had for him, took him into his own Service, from the Post he had in the Sanhedrim. Upon which Occasion the Jews gave the Office of Vicegerent to Shammai, which had been filled by Manahem. The Jews[2] speak of one Manahem, who was Vicegerent of the Sanhedrim under Hillel. I believe it to be the same here mentioned by Josephus.

Manahem (III)

III. MANAHEM, or Manaim, Son of Judas the Galilean, or the Gaulonite, mentioned before. He drew to his Party some Persons of Quality; several Robbers, and other People that had nothing to lose[1]; and having taken by Force the Castle of Massada, he pillaged the Magazines of the late King Herod the Great, armed his People, and went strait to Jerusalem; of which making himself Master, he drove out the Romans, and caused himself to be proclaimed King[2]. He put to Death the High-priest Ananias, and soon became insupportable by his Cruelties and Excesses. This was the Occasion that two Men of the Party of Elcazar rose up against him, and encouraged the People to free themselves from the Yoke of his Tyranny, so that Manahem was set upon, and after some Resistance he was forsaken by his People, and forced to hide himself in a Place called Ophlas. From hence he was taken the Day following, and led away to his Punishment.

Manasseh (I)

I. MANASSEH. The eldest Son of [Gen. xli. 50, 51.] Joseph, and Grandson of the Patriarch Jacob. Manasseh was born in the Year of the World 2290, before Jesus Christ 1710, before the Vulgar Æra 1714. The Name Manasseh signifies Forgetfulness, because Joseph said; God has made me forget all my Toil, and all my Father's House. When Jacob was going to die[1], Joseph brought his two Sons to him, that his Father might give [Gen. xlviii. 1, 2, 3, &c.] them his last Blessing. Jacob having seen them, tells Joseph; thy two Sons, which were born to thee in Egypt, shall be my Sons: I adopt them, and they shall be to me as Reuben and Simeon. Then he made them come to his Bed-side, kissed them, and embracing them, said to his Son: God has not only been favourable to me, in making me see thy Face, but thy Children also. At the same Time Joseph taking his two Sons away, prostrated himself to the Ground before his Father, and having placed Ephraim at Jacob's left Hand, and Manasseh at his right, he desired him to bless them. Then Jacob put his right Hand upon Ephraim, and his left on Manasseh, and began to bless them. But Joseph observing that his Father had put his right Hand upon Ephraim; and his left on Manasseh, would have him alter this Disposition, and change his right Hand to Manasseh, and his left to Ephraim. But Jacob would not agree to this Change, and told him; " I know what I am doing, my " Son, the eldest shall be Father of a great " People, but his younger Brother shall be " greater than he." His Posterity shall be multiplied, and grow into a great Nation. He continued to bless them, and said; in thee shall Israel be blessed, and it shall be said, God make thee as Ephraim and as Manasseh.

The Tribe of Manasseh came out of Egypt[2], in Number thirty two Thousand and two hundred Men, fit for Battle; upwards of twenty Years old, under the Conduct [Numb. ii. 20, 21.] of Gamaliel Son of Pedahzur. This Tribe was divided at their Entrance into the Land of Promise. One half had its Portion beyond the River Jordan, and the other half on this Side the River. The half Tribe of Manasseh which settled beyond the River, possessed the Countrey of Bashan, from the River Jabbok, to Mount Libanus, [Numb. xxxii. 33, 34, &c.] and the half Tribe of Manasseh on this Side Jordan obtained for its Inheritance the Countrey between the Tribe of Ephraim to the South, and the Tribe of Issachar to the North, having the River Jordan to the East, and the Mediterranean Sea to the [Josh. xvi. xvii.] West.

Manasseh (II)

II. MANASSEH. The fifteenth King of Judah, being the Son and Successor of Hezekiah[1]. He was twelve Years old when he began to reign, and reigned fifty five [2 Kings xx. 21. xxi. 1, 2. 2 Chron. xxxiii. 1, 2, 3, 4.] Years; wherefore he lived in all sixty seven Years. His Mother's Name was Hephzibah. He did that which was Evil in the Sight of the Lord, and worshipped the Idols of those Nations, that the Lord had destroyed when the Children of Israel took Possession of the Land of Canaan. He rebuilt the high Places that his Father Hezekiah had destroyed. He set up Altars to Baal, and planted Groves in Honour of false Gods, as Ahab King of Israel had done. He worshipped the Host of Heaven, and sacrificed to 'em. He also built profane Altars in the Temple of the Lord. He raised Altars to the whole Host of Heaven; in the two Courts of God's House. He made his Son pass through the Fire in Honour to Moloch. He was addicted to Magick, Divinations, Auguries, and other Sort of Superstitions and magical Curiosities. He set up the Idol of Astarta in the House of God. Finally, he involved his People in all the Abomination of the idolatrous and strange Nations, and perverted them to that Degree, that Israel committed more Wickedness than all the Canaanites had done, which the Lord had drove out before them. To all these Crimes Manasseh added that of Cruelty also. He shed Rivers of innocent Blood in Jerusalem, to fill up the Measure of his other Iniquities.

Therefore the Lord being provoked by so many Crimes of Manasseh, sent this threatning Message to him, by the Mouth of his Prophets: " I am going to pour out " upon Jerusalem and Judah such Calamities, that the Ears of those shall tingle, " that shall but hear them mentioned. I " will stretch out upon Jerusalem the Line " of Samaria, and of the House of Ahab; " I will deal with it as I have dealt with " Samaria, and I will reject Manasseh as I " have rejected Ahab and his House. I " will blot out Jerusalem as a Writing is " blotted out of a Writing-table, and I shall " often draw the Pen over and over, that " nothing may remain of it. I shall forsake the Remains of my Inheritance, I " shall deliver my People into the Hand " of their Enemies, and all those that hate " them shall ravage and pillage them.

'Tis believed that the Prophet Isaiah was one of those, that raised his Voice loudest against all these Enormities. This Prophet had the Honour of being Father-in-Law to the King[2]. He had been in great Credit at Court, in the Reign of Hezekiah the King's Father. He was a Man of high Birth, being of the Blood Royal. He thought it more incumbent upon him than any other, to endeavour to reclaim the King from his wicked Courses, and to denounce

God's Judgments against him. But this so exasperated him against Isaiah, that instead of hearkening to these Remonstrances, he caused him to be apprehended, and put him to Death, by sawing him in two with a wooden Saw[3]. The Calamities with which God had threatned this [2 Chron. xxxiii. 11, 12, &c.] impious Prince began to appear towards the twenty second Year of his Reign[4]. The King of Assyria sent the Princes of his Army against him, who seizing him among the Briars and Brambles where he was hid, and taking him Prisoner, put Fetters on his Hands and Feet, and carried him to Babylon. We think it was Sargon or Esar-haddon King of Assyria, who sent Tartan into Palestine, and who taking Azoth, attacked Manasseh, and having put him in Irons, led him away, not to Nineve, but to Babylon, of which Esar-haddon had made himself Master, and had thus reunited the two Empires of the Assyrians and the Chaldæans.

[Homil. i. 2 Chron. xxxiii. 15, 16. Deut. iv. 29, 30.] Manasseh being in Bonds at Babylon, confessed his Sins, and humbled himself before God, who heard his Prayers and Lamentations. He brought him back to Jerusalem, and Manasseh acknowledged the powerful Hand of the Lord. He redressed as much as he could the Evils he had caused at Jerusalem and in Judah. We have a Prayer which, 'tis pretended, he made in Prison. The Church does not receive it as Canonical, but it has a Place among the Apochryphal Pieces. However it is to be found in the Euchologium, or the Book of Prayers of the Greeks. The Rabbins[5] relate, that Manasseh was cast into a great brazen Vessel full of Holes, and exposed to a great Fire. That in this Extremity he had Recourse to all his false Deities, to whom he had been used to sacrifice. But receiving no Assistance from any of them, he then soon found the Vanity of his Hopes. Then he remembered what he had heard his Father King Hezekiah say, " When you shall invoke me in your Misfortunes, and convert your selves to me, " I will hear you." He therefore was converted to the Lord, and was presently delivered, and carried in a Moment into his Kingdom; after the Manner that Habbakkuk afterwards was transported from Judæa to Babylon, and then back again from Babylon to Judæa. The Author of the Homil. imperfect Comment upon Saint Matthew relates his Deliverance in another Manner. He says that Manasseh being in Bonds, had only every Day a little Barley-bread, and some Water mixed with Vinegar, and this by Measure, just enough to keep him alive. In the Midst of his Affliction he had Recourse to the Lord, when a miraculous Flame encompassed him on a sudden, and melting his Chains, set him at Liberty. But these are Fables.

Manasseh was very probably delivered out of Prison by Saosduchin the Successor of Esar-haddon. Being returned to Jerusalem he restored the Worship of the Lord in his Temple, broke down the Altars [2 Chron. xxxiii. 13, 14, &c.] of the false Gods, and abolished all the Foot-steps of that idolatrous Worship, that had been given to strange Gods. But he did not destroy the high Places, where the People went to worship the Lord; whether it was that he had not Power enough to suppress so ancient and inveterate a Custom, or that out of Weakness he made this Con-descension to the Humours of the People. 'Tis the only Thing that the Scripture reproaches him with, after his Return from Babylon. He caused Jerusalem to be fortified, and repaired its Walls. He also inclosed with a Wall another City, which in his Time was erected to the West of Jerusalem, and which goes by the Name of the second City ever since his Reign. See 2 Chron. xxxiii. 14. He put Garrisons into all the strong Places of Judah, and gave Orders to all his People to worship and serve the Lord.

The rest of the Actions of Manasseh, the Prayer that he made to God, and the Remonstrances that had been made to him by the Prophets in the Name of God, were related at large in the publick Registers of the Kings of Judah; and also the Prayer that he made in Prison, the Manner in which God was pleased to answer his Prayer, the Crimes he had committed, the Statues he had set up, and the profane Groves he had planted; in a Word, his Sin and his Prevarication were related in Full in the Book of the Prophet Hozaï, which is the same as Isaiah according to some. The Seventy take this in a general Sense; in the Writings of the Seers. The Syriack calls him Hanan, and the Arabic Saphan. Manasseh died at Jerusalem, and was buried in the Garden of his House, in the Garden of [2 Kings xxi. 18.] Uzza. His Son Amon succeeded him, in the Year of the World 3361, before Christ 639, and before the Vulgar Æra 643.

Many believe that the History of Judith and Holofernes happened under the Reign of Manasseh, and after his Return from Babylon. This Prince does not at all appear in this History, whether out of Reasons of State he did not think proper to declare himself on this Occasion, or that upon a Principle of Penitence he concerned himself little or nothing with the Affairs of Government. See the Preface to Judith.

Manasseh (III)

[Judith viii. 2, 3.] III. MANASSEH. The Husband of Judith, who lived but a little while with her. He had been dead three Years, when Holofernes's War began. Manasseh was of the Tribe of Simeon, and died in the Time of Barley-harvest, of a Disease caused by the too great Heat of the Sun, which had shined upon his Head. He left all his Estate to his Wife Judith, and was buried in his own Countrey in Bethulia.

Manasseh (IV)

IV. MANASSEH. High-priest of the Jews, Son of John, and Brother of Jaddus. He succeeded Eleazar his great Uncle, and had for his Successor Onias II. his Nephew. Manasseh came to the chief Priesthood in this Manner. He had married Nicaso, Daughter of Sanballat[1] Governor of Samaria. The Jews and Priests were much displeased at this Marriage of Manasseh, she being a Woman of another Religion. They declare that he must either quit his Wife, or renounce his Priesthood. The High-priest his Brother joined himself to them, and Manasseh seeing himself become so obnoxious in his own Countrey, withdrew himself to his Father-in-Law, and told him, that though he had a great Affection for Nicaso his Wife, yet it troubled him much that on her Account he saw himself excluded from the Prerogatives of the Priesthood, to which by his Birth he had a Right. Sanballat promised him, that not only he would secure him the Priesthood, but that he would also procure him the chief Priesthood, and the first Place of the whole Province; that he would build him a Temple upon Mount Gerizim, like to that of Jerusalem, and that he should be the first High-priest in it.

Manasseh flattered by these Hopes, settled himself with his Father-in-Law Sanballat; and there being several other Israelites that were engaged in like Marriages, they betook themselves to him, and Sanballat gave them Houses and Lands to secure their Continuance with him. When Alexander the Great came into Syria, and had formed the Siege of Tyre, Sanballat went to meet him with eight Thousand Men, all good Troops, and submitted to his Obedience with the whole Province of Samaria, of which he was Governor. He obtained a Permission from this Prince, to build a Temple upon Mount Gerizim, and gave the chief Priesthood of it to his Son-in -Law Manasseh. The same God was worshipped in this Temple, as in that of Jerusalem, and a great Number of those that frequented it were Jews as well as Manasseh. But this Temple was held in great Detestation by the Priests and Jews of Jerusalem, who looked upon those as Schismaticks that worshipped here. Therefore it must needs be, that Manasseh must renounce his Schism, when after the Death of his great Uncle Eleazar, he succeeded in the high Priesthood[2]. Josephus does not acquaint us how this Change and Succession was brought about, and what he does relate upon this Matter appears very hard to believe, and includes a Contradiction not easy to reconcile.

The Book of Nehemiah mentions Sanballat [Nehem. xiii. 28.] the Heronite, who had given his Daughter in Marriage to a Son of the High-priest Joiada, Son of Eliashib; and acquaints us, that Nehemiah was obliged to drive away from Jerusalem this Son-in- Law of Sanballat, because he had taken a strange Woman to Wife. It says not what was his Name, or what became of him; but Josephus calls him Manasses[3], and assures us, that he withdrew to his Father-in-Law at Samaria, under the Reign of Darius Codomannus, the last King of Persia. Here is a manifest Anachronism. Nehemiah could not live under Darius Codomannus; he came the second Time into Judæa in the Year of the World 3555, under Artaxerxes Longimanus, and died in the Year 3580. And Darius Codomannus did not come to the Throne till about the Year 3670.

Some learned Men have been of Opinion, that we must admit of two Sanballats and of two Manassehs, of which the first lived under Nehemiah, and the others under Darius Codomannus. Others have thought, that Josephus has perplexed this History, by confounding the Years, and referring Facts to the Time of Alexander the Great, and the latter Darius, which happened a long Time before under Nehemiah. Doctor Prideaux[4] is of this last Opinion. He maintains that Josephus has confounded the High-priest Joiada with his Grandson Jaddus, and that what this Author has said about this Matter, ought to be corrected by what we find in Nehemiah. Upon this Footing also it must be allowed, that Manasseh the High-priest, who succeeded Eleazar, was a very different Person from the Son-in-Law of Sanballat, whose Name Nehemiah does not inform us of.

Manasseh is allowed a Pontificate of twenty six Years, from the Year of the World 3745 to 3771, before Jesus Christ 229, before the Vulgar Æra 233.

Mandrakes

MANDRAKES. A kind of Plant that stupifies, and sometimes causes Phrenzy. 'Tis said to be a Provocative, and is therefore used in Philters. There are two Sorts of it, one is black, and called the female Mandrake, having Leaves not unlike Lettice, tho' less and narrower, which spread upon the Ground, and are of a very disagreeable Scent. It bears Berries something like Services, being pale and of a strong Smell, which have Kernels within like those of Pears. It has two or three very large Roots, twisted together, black without, and white within, and covered with a thick Rind. The other Kind, or the male Mandrake, is called Morion, or Folly, because it takes away the Use of the Senses. It produces Berries as big again as those of the Female, of a good Scent, and of a Colour approaching towards Saffron. Its Leaves are large, white, broad, and smooth, like the Leaves of the Beach-tree. Its Root resembles that of the Female, but is thicker and bigger. This Plant stupifies those that make Use of it, sometimes depriving them of Understanding; and often causes such Vertigoes and Lethargies, that if those that have taken it have not some present Assistance, they die in Convulsions.

Matthiolus tells us, that what is reported of Mandrakes having their Roots of the Form of a human Body, is all a Fable. What has given Occasion to Mandrakes having the Name of Anthropomorphos, or the human Shape, is only because most of the Roots of this Plant are forked from the Middle downwards, which makes a kind of Thighs and Legs: So that being gathered when the Mandrake sheds its Berries, they have something of the Appearance of a Man without Arms. This Author adds, that the Roots made in the Fashion of a Man's Body, and called Mandrakes, or Hands of Glory, which your Quacks pretend to be of singular Virtue to procure Children to barren Women, are only artificial, and made of the Roots of the Reed, white Briony, and such like. He tells us also, that he had learned from one of these Impostors, that they put Grains of Barley or Millet into the Figures when cut, in such Places as Hair should grow, and then burying them in the Ground, they let them continue till the Barley or Millet begins to shoot, which happens in about three Weeks; then digging them up, and adjusting the small Roots or Fibres in the Form of Hair, they appear then to have a Beard, and Hair on their Heads.

ARTIFICIAL MANDRAKES NAKED AND DRESSED.

THE DUDAIMS OR ARABIAN MAIZ.Vol. II. M.

Moses informs us[1], that Reuben the Son of Leah, being in the Field, happened to find Mandrakes, which he brought home to his Mother. Rachel had a Mind to 'em, and obtained them from Leah on this Condition, that she should consent that Jacob should be her Bedfellow the Night following. The Term Dudaim here made Use of by Moses, is one of those Words, of which the Jews at this Day do not understand the true Signification. Some translate it by Violets, others Lillies, or Jessamin; Junius calls it agreeable Flowers, Codurquus makes it Truffle or Mushroom. We have proposed our Conjectures in the Commentary upon Genesis, Chap. xxx. V. 14. shewing that it might be Citrons. It appears by Scripture, that the Dudaim are a Sort of Fruit, known in Mesopotamia and Judæa, which are ripe about Wheat-harvest, have an agreeable Scent, may be preserved, and are placed with Pomgranates[2].

Those that [Cant. vii. 13.] would support the Translation of this Word by Mandrakes, rely upon this Reason. Rachel having a very great Desire to have Children, it may be presumed that she coveted Leah's Mandrakes with that View. The Ancients have given to Mandrakes the Name of the Apple of Love, and to Venus the Name of Mandragoritis. The Emperor Julian in his Epistle to Calixenes says, that he drinks the Juice of Mandrakes to excite amorous Inclinations. The Hebrew Word Dod, whence comes Dodaïm or Dudaïm, signifies Love, or Nipples. See Baubin. Hist. of Plants, Tom. iii. p. 614, &c. Matthiolus upon Dioscorides, and Brodeus upon Theophrast.

Ludolff[3] in his History of Ethiopia has confuted that Opinion, which would have the Hebrew Word Dudaïm to signify Mandrakes. He maintains it stands for a certain Fruit which the Syrians call Mauz[4], of which the Figure and Taste has a great Resemblance to the Ficus Indica, or Indian Fig. This Fruit is as big as a small Cucumber, and there are found sometimes upwards of forty hanging upon the same Stalk. Travellers give an Account, that in the Island of Hainan in China, there grows a little Shrub, that in fifteen Days puts out a Stalk surrounded with six or seven large Leaves, and loaded with Fruit not unlike large Figs. They add, that these Leaves are so large as to be able to encompass a Man's Body. Hence it may be conjectured, that the Leaves of the Fig-tree with which Adam and Eve covered themselves after their Disobedience, might belong to this Tree. There are even some Authors of Opinion[5], that it was the Fruit of this Tree with which Eve was tempted, which they pretend also to be the Dudaïm or Mandrakes of Reuben. As to the Mandrake, the Persians call it Abronzanam, that is to say, the human Figure, because the Orientals, and in particular the Jews, so artificially dress up the Root of the Mandrake with Hairs and Filaments, that it appears to have the Figure of a Man or Woman. The Reader may observe the Figure of it. Lusfallah says, that there is Danger in digging up or cutting this Plant; to avoid which, when they intend to pluck one up, they tie a Dog to the Stalk, which they then beat, that by endeavouring to run away he may tear up the Plant.

Josephus improves much upon all this[6]. He calls this Plant Baaras, a Name not very remote from the Abron of the Persians, or the Jabron of the Arabians. He says it is found in a Valley, to the North of the Castle of Macheron, which was built by Herod the Great. That towards Evening it appeared glittering like the Sun; that when any one came near it in Order to pull it up, it withdrew itself and seemed to fly, unless there were thrown upon it any menstruous Blood, or the Urine of a Woman. That even then it was not safe to pluck it up, unless he that undertook it had a Root of the same Plant hanging upon his Arm; without which Precaution he exposed himself to certain Danger of dying.

There is however a Way of taking it up without Danger. They dig all round the Root, so that it sticks to the Earth only by its Extremities. Then they fasten a Dog to the Root by a String, and the Dog striving to follow his Master who calls him away, easily tears up the Plant, but then he dies upon the Spot, and the Master can take this wonderful Root in his Hand without any Danger. Now the Use that is made of this Root deserves well that they should take all this Trouble to obtain it. For those Devils or evil Spirits that had animated the greatest Profligates, if they enter into the Body of a Man, and seem ready to choak him if he be not presently assisted; these Demons, I say, cannot bear with the Smell, nor the Presence of this Plant. They fly immediately if it be applied to the Body of the possessed. This is what Josephus relates of the Plant called Baaras. I have also read a Traveller[7] who confirms the greatest Part of this Relation of Josephus.

The Arabians sometimes call Mandrake by the Name of Serag-al-coshrob, or the Devil's Candle, because in the Night Time it appears all over luminous. But the Cause of this Brightness is nothing but Glowworms, who are fond of this Plant, and love to be about it. And Lutfalla-al-balimi[8], who was a Physician, assures us, that all the wonderful Things that have been written of this Plant, are nothing but meer Fictions. That he has often gathered them without any Danger, that the Cry they make when gathered is none at all; and lastly, that all the Uses to which they are applied are vain and superstitious.

Algedi a Persian Poet says, that in China the Asterenk or Mandrake grows in a human Form; and we are informed that in the Province of Peking in China there is a kind of Mandrake so valuable, that a Pound of this Root is worth thrice its Weight in Silver. For they say it so wonderfully restores the sinking Spirits of dying Persons, that there is often Time for the Use of other Means, and thereby of recovering them to Life and Health. The Chinese call it Ginseng. F. Tachard says, that this Root has sometimes something of the human Shape; and others assure us, that they give it the Name of Ginseng, because it has the Figure of a Man that puts his Legs in a stradling Posture, which the Chinese call Gin. Another Author derives the Name Genseng from the Chinese Word Gin, signifying a Man, and Sem which stands for a Plant; as much as to say, the human Plant, or the Plant with a human Shape.

Here is a Description of this Plant. Its Root is white and something rough, being two or three Times as big again as the Stem, and always grows taper. Generally at some Distance from its upper Part it divides into two Branches, which is the Reason that this Root has something of the Figure of a Man, whose two Thighs are represented by the two Branches. From the Sides of this Root proceed a great Number of small Fibres in several Places, which serve to imbibe the Juice of the Earth, for the Nourishment of the Plant. From the Root there rises a round and smooth Stem, of a pretty deep red, and at the Top of the Stem grow four Branches, which spread at equal Distances from each other. Every Branch has five Leaves, which are indented, of an obscure Green, and terminate in a Point. From the Center of these Branches proceeds another very strait and smooth Stem, at the Extremity of which grows a Knob of about twenty four Fruits, round, and of a beautiful Red. Within the Fruit is a kind of Nut, pretty near of the Figure of a Lentil. This Nut includes the Seed of the Plant. It dies and grows again every Year. We know not what Flower it bears; nothing is valuable but its Root, the Virtues of which are wonderful, as has been related. This whole Description sufficiently shews, that this Plant is a kind of Mandrake. See the Universal Dictionary of Trevoux, under the Word GENSENG.

Manetho

MANETHO: This Author was an Egyptian, and Priest of Heliopolis in Egypt. As his History is often quoted by Josephus, it will be necessary to give some Account of it here. He had written in Greek the History of the several Dynasties, from the Foundation of the Egyptian Monarchy to the Time of Nectanebus, the last King of the Egyptian Race, and to the Time that Darius Ochus invaded this Countrey, and made himself Master of it, fifteen Years before the Expedition of Alexander the Great against the Persians. Manetho had the Office of Secretary or Writer to the Temples of Egypt; he lived under Ptolemy Philadelphus, to whom he dedicated his Work: Therefore he was far from being Cotemporary with the Things he treats of. He admits thirty Dynasties of one hundred and thirty Generations which have reigned in Egypt, from the Beginning of the Egyptian Government down to Nectanebus. He places in this Succession of Kings, Gods, Demigods, and Men, and assigns to each a certain Number of Years, the Amount or Sum of which far exceeds the Number of Years, which are acknowledged by the Books of the Hebrews.

'Tis to Syncellus that we are obliged for the Abstract of this antient Historian, which he has preserved for us. His History was divided into five Parts. The first contained the History of the Gods; the second that of the Demigods, or Kings of Egypt. The third that of the Kings of this Country. In the Abridgment which yet remains, we only find the Names of the Princes, and the Years of their Reigns. Nor must we imagine that they all reigned successively, for they were Princes of different Parts of Egypt, and have sometimes reigned together in the several Provinces of this Countrey. Josephus[1] in his first Book against Appion makes large Extracts out of this Author, in which he distinguishes what Manetho had taken out of the antient Records of the Temples of Egypt, from what he says of his own, or what he borrows from the fabulous Reports of the Egyptians. He found in the sacred Monuments of the Kingdom, that the Hebrews had penetrated into Egypt with a great Army, and had subdued this Countrey; that being afterwards driven out again, they had made a Conquest of Judæa, where they built Jerusalem, and its Temple. So far is agreeable to Truth. But what he then adds, that under the Reign of a pretended King called Amenophis, they went out of Egypt with a Multitude of Lepers among them, and other diseased Persons, with other fabulous Stories; all this deserves no Credit, as having no other Foundation but common Fame and popular Tradition.

Manna

MANNA. It was the Food of the Children of Israel, which God gave them in the Desarts of Arabia, during their Continuance there for forty Years, from their eighth Encampment in the Wilderness of [Exod. xvi. 14, 14, &c.] Sin. Manna began to fall on Friday Morning, the sixteenth Day of the second Month, which from thence was called Jiar, which according to Usher was on Friday the fifth of June. It continued to fall every Day in the Morning, except on the Sabbath Day, till after the Passage over Jordan, and to the Passover of the fortieth Year from the coming out of Egypt. Therefore Manna fell from Friday the fifth of June, in the Year of the World 2513, to the second Day of the Passover, which was on Wednesday the fifth of May, in the Year of the World 2553, before Jesus Christ 1447 Years, and before the Vulgar Æra 1451 Years.

The Manna mentioned by Moses was a little Grain, white like Hoarfrost, round, [Exod. xvi. 14. Numb. xi. 7.] and of the Bigness of Coriander-Seed. It fell every Morning upon the Dew, and when the Dew was exhaled by the Heat of the Sun, the Manna appeared alone, lying [Ex. xvi. 5.] upon the Rocks or the Sand. It fell every Day, except on the Sabbath, and this only [Exod. xvi. 5. Numb. xi. 5] about the Camp of the Israelites. It fell in so great Quantities during the whole forty Years of their Journey in the Wilderness, that it was sufficient to feed the whole Multitude, of above a Million of Souls; every one of whom gathered the Quantity of an Omer, for his Share every Day, which is about three Quarts of our Measure. It maintained all this Multitude, and yet none of them found any Inconvenience from the constant eating of it. Every Friday there fell a double Quantity of it, and though it putrified and bred Maggots when it was kept any other Day, yet on the Sabbath it suffered no such Alteration. And the same Manna that was melted by the Heat of the Sun, when it was left in the Field, was of so hard a Consistence when it was brought into the House, that it was used to be beaten in Mortars, and would even endure the Fire, was baked in Pans, made into Paste, and so into Cakes. The Scripture gives to Manna the Name of the Bread of Heaven, and the Food of [Wisdom xvi. 20. Psalm lxxviii. 25.] Angels, whether it would insinuate to us, that the Angels sent and prepared this Food, or that Angels themselves, if they had Need of any Food, could not have any that was more agreeable than Manna was. [Wisd. xvi. 20, 21.] The Author of the Book of Wisdom says, that Manna so accommodated itself to every one's Taste, that every one found it pleasing to him; and that it included every Thing that was agreeable to the Palate, and fit for good Nourishment; which Expressions some have taken in the literal Sense[1], tho' others understand them figuratively. There are some who think, that it even took the Form of such Things as a Man liked best. Josephus[2] understood it in a more simple Manner, saying that those that eat of it found it so delicious, that they desired nothing else; and Saint Austin observes[3] very discretely, that the sacred Author only says, Manna had this Quality, to conform itself to the Taste of those that eat it, in Favour of the Children of God: Ut dulcedinem tuam in filios demonstrares. And how could the Israelites complain, that Manna was nauseous to 'em, if it was always accommodated to their Taste at their own Will?

And still at this Day there falls Manna in several Places of the World: In Arabia, in Poland, in Calabria, in Mount Libanus, in Dauphine, and elsewhere. The most common and the most famous is that of Arabia, which is a kind of condensed Honey, to be found in the Summer Time upon the Leaves of the Trees, the Herbs, the Rocks, or the Sand of Arabia Petrea. It is of the same Figure as Moses describes. That which is gathered about Mount Sinai is of a very strong Smell, which is communicated to it by the Herbs upon which it falls. It very easily evaporates, insomuch that if thirty Pounds of it were to be kept in an open Vessel, there would hardly ten of it remain at the End of fifteen Days. This Arabian Manna is sold in the Apothecaries Shops, at Grand Cairo in Egypt. Salmasius thinks, that the Manna wherewith the Israelites were fed in the Wilderness, is the same now to be found in Arabia. Several Moderns are of the same Sentiment. 'Tis true that the Arabian Manna has a medicinal Quality, which is rather purgative and weakening, than that it affords any Nourishment, or has any strengthening Faculty. But they pretend, that if one makes it habitual, the Stomach might be accustomed to it, as we see People may be brought to such a Diet, as naturally is but little convenient for maintaining of Health. But we ought also to acknowledge, that the Manna spoke of by Moses had miraculous Qualities, not to be found in the common Manna, and which probably subsisted no longer than while the Israelites were fed with it. Upon this Subject of Manna may be consulted the Dissertations of M. Saumaise, Buxtorf, and Bochart, and our Commentary upon Exodus, Chap. xvi. Verse 14, and the following. See also Altomare's Treatise of Manna.

The Criticks are divided about the Original of the Word Manna. Some think that Man is put instead of the Hebrew Word Mah, which signifies, What is this? And that the Hebrews then first seeing that new Food which God had sent them, cried to one another, Man-hu, instead of Mah-hu, What is this? Others maintain, that the Hebrews very well knew before what Manna was, and that seeing it in great Abundance about their Camp; they said to one another, Man-hu, This is Manna. Mr. Saumaise, and some other Moderns, are of this last Opinion. They imagine that the Manna which God sent the Israelites was nothing else but that Fat and thick Dew, which still falls in Arabia, which presently condensed, and served for Food to the People. That this is the same Thing as the wild Honey, mentioned Matth. iii. 4. wherewith John the Baptist was fed; and that the Miracle of Moses did not consist in the Production of any new Substance, but in the exact and uniform Manner in which the Manna was dispensed by Providence, and in the Quantity of it that fell daily, so as to suffice for the Maintenance of so great a Multitude.

On the contrary the Hebrews and Orientals believe, that the Fall of the Manna was wholly miraculous. The Arabians call it The Sugar Plumbs of the Almighty[4], and the Jews are so jealous of this Miracle[5], that they pronounce a Curse against all such as presume to deny the Interposition of a miraculous Power. Akiba contends[6], that Manna was produced by the Condensation of the heavenly Light, which became material, and proper for the Nourishment of Man. But Rabbi Ishmael rejected this Opinion, and opposed it upon this Principle, that the Scripture calls Manna the Bread of Angels. But the Angels, says he, are not nourished by Light become material, but by the Light of God himself. These are some Examples of the Notions that have been formed about Manna.

That which is sold in Apothecaries Shops, and which is commonly called Manna of Calabria, is a white and sweet Liquor, which distils of itself, or by Incision made in the Branches and Leaves or Keys of the Ash-Tree, both common and wild. In the Dog-Days, or a little before, it is only found upon the Ash-Trees, and that only in Calabria, and about Briançon. 'Tis gathered in the open Sun-shine, which hardens and dries it. In July it comes of its own Accord out of the Tree; in August they make an Incision in the Tree, which then affords a certain Quantity. And in the same Month, when this has left off to run, there comes out a third Sort, which exsudes out of the nervous Part of the Leaves of the Ash. Manna purges moderately taken in Broth. Fuschius says, that the Countrey People about Mount Libanus eat the Manna that is found there, as others would eat Honey.

Manoah

MANOAH, or Manue, Father of Samson, of the Tribe of Dan, and of the City of Zorah. Upon a Time an Angel of the Lord appearing to the Wife of Manoah, and having promised her a Son; Manoah, whether [Judg. xiii. 1, 2, 3, &c.] moved by a Fit of Jealousy, or influenced by Sentiments of Gratitude towards this Angel[1], desired of the Lord that he might see him that had appeared to his Wife, that he might know from him what he should do with this Son when born. The Lord heard his Prayer, and the Angel appeared again to his Wife, being then in the Fields. She ran presently to her Husband to acquaint him, that the Man she had seen before was come again. Manoah went to him and asked him, Is it you that spake to my Wife? When that shall be accomplished that you have foretold us, what must we do with the Child? He answered, let your Wife abstain from every Thing that I have commanded her; let her eat nothing that is unclean, and refrain from Wine and strong Drink. Manoah said to the Angel; My Lord, I pray you be pleased to let us prepare you a Kid. To which the Angel replied, However urgent you may be, I must not eat any Food; but you may offer it for a Burnt-Sacrifice to the Lord. Manoah said to him, not knowing him to be an Angel, What is your Name, that we may pay you Honour and Acknowledgment, if that shall happen that you have foretold? He answered, Why ask you my Name, which is a Secret[2]? the Wine for the Libations; and having put them upon the Fire which he had lighted on a Stone, he observed with his Wife what would come to pass. Josephus[3], who is followed by the greatest Part of Commentators, believes that the Angel touched the Flesh with a Rod that he had in his Hand, upon which there came forth a Flame that consumed the Burnt-Sacrifice: Which is a Circumstance not expressly mentioned in Scripture. As the Smoke began to ascend, the Angel also rose up in the midst of the Flame, and ascended towards Heaven. Then Manoah perceived that it was an Angel, and said to his Wife, we shall certainly die since we have seen the Lord. But his Wife answered him, If the Lord would have killed us, he would not have conferred so many Favours upon us; he would not have received our Burnt-Offering; nor would have declared to us the Birth of a Son. This happened in the Year of the World 2848, and Samson was born in 2849, before Christ 1151, and before the Vulgar Æra 1155.

MAON, a City of the Tribe of Judah, in the most southerly Parts belonging to this Tribe. Nabal the Carmelite had great [Josh. xv. 55. See also 1 Sam. xxiii. 24, xxv.] Possessions in the Desert of Maon, and David dwelt for a good while in these Quarters, during the Time of Saul's Persecution. We think Maon to be the Capital of the Meonians, of whom Mention is made in the Hebrew of 1 Chron. iv. 40, 41. and 2 Chron. xx. 1. The Vulgate in this last Place reads Ammonites instead of Maonim; and in the other Passage it has Habitatores, and the Seventy Minæos. The City of Maon, which gave Name to the Desart of Maon, is probably the same as Mænois, or Mæonis[1], which Eusebius places in the Neighbourhood of Gaza; and as Menœum in the Codex Theodosianus, which is near Beersheba, or Versabinum Castrum. Marah (I)

I. MARAH, or Mara. This Word fignifies[1] Bitterness. When the Israelites came out of Egypt, being arrived at the Desart of Etham, they there found the [Exod. xv. 23.] Waters so bitter, that neither themselves nor their Cattle could drink of it. Therefore they gave the Name of Mara or Bitterness, to this Encampment. Then they began to murmur against Moses, saying, What shall we drink? And Moses praying to the Lord, he shewed him a kind of Wood, which being thrown into the Water, presently made it potable. This Wood was called Alnah, according to the Orientals. They believe that it came from Noah to Moses by Succession; and that Noah had preserved it in the Ark.

Maran-Atha

MARAN-ATHA. These Words are Syriac, and signify, The Lord comes, or The Lord is come. 'Twas a Form of Threatning, Cursing, or Anathematizing among the Jews. Saint Paul pronounces Anathema Maran-atha against all those who love not Jesus Christ[1]. Si quis non amat Dominum nostrum Jesum Christum, sit Anathema, Maran-atha. The greatest Part of the Commentators[2] inform us, that Maran-atha is the greatest of all Anathema's among the Jews, and equivalent to Shamatha, or Shem-atha, the Name comes, or the Lord comes: Which is as much as to say, " Mayest thou be devoted to the greatest of Evils, and to the utmost Severity " of God's Judgments; may the Lord come " quickly to take Vengeance of thy Crimes. But Selden[3] and Lightfoot[4] maintain, that Maran-atha is not to be found in this Sense among the Rabbins. Maran-atha may well enough be understood in an absolute Sense, Let him that does not love our Lord Jesus Christ be Anathema. The Lord is come, the Messiah has appeared; Evil to whomsoever receives him not. He particularly applies himself to the unbelieving Jews. Upon this Head may be consulted, besides the ordinary Commentators, Selden de Synedriis, l. i. c. 8. Lightfoot in a particular Dissertation upon Maran-atha, printed in the first Volume of his Works, Ultrajecti, 1699. and in the Dissertations of Elias Weihemajerus, de Paulino anathematismo, ad 1 Cor. xvi. 22. and of Johannes Rennerus, Maranatha, in the Collection of Dissertations called Thesaurus Theologicophilologicus, Part ii. p. 578, 582, &c.

March of the Army of Israel about Jericho

MARCH of the Army of Israel about Jericho. The taking and Destruction of Jericho was not a Conquest, upon the which Joshua could assume to himself any great Glory or Reputation. If a General could make an hundred Conquests of this Kind, it would hardly make him be [Observations upon the Overthrow of the Walls of Jericho, after the seven Days March of the Israelites about this City, Josh. vi.] taken for a great Soldier. And if he had done nothing else but this, we might safely affirm, that he only made a Triumph of six Processions, and that at the seventh God was pleased by an Effect of his Omnipotence to give this General and all his People a miraculous Spectacle of a City whose impregnable Walls were overturned by an invisible Hand, in Sight of a whole Army which surrounded its Walls only to be the Spectators of this great Wonder, and afterwards to enter it on all Sides, to exterminate its Inhabitants, and to burn to Ashes the devoted City.

It cannot be doubted but that the Army of Israel, led by a Captain of such Experience, marched about Jericho in very great Order, in two or three surrounding or circular Columns, with some Space between them, because of the great Number of Troops, and to be sure out of Reach of the Enemies Arrows. Joshua follows, accompanied by the Elders; afterwards came the Ark carried by the Levites, and preceded by the Priests, who sounded the seven Trumpets. The Ark was guarded by the Levites, who encompassed it under Arms. The Residue of the People brought up the Rear, and closed the March.

Masius maintains[1], that in this March the the Army was ranged in the same Order as when it marched in the Wilderness, and with all the Parts of the Tabernacle. I am apt to think it marched in the same Order as was observed in the Desert, but to say that it was accompanied by the Tabernacle and all its Utensils, is what the Scripture says nothing of, and what is not at all probable. For the Army returned every Day after its March into the Camp, where no doubt a Detachment was left, to guard the Tabernacle, &c.

The Command given by Joshua to all the People, not to make any Noise or Cry, but to observe a profound Silence for the first six Days, is a Thing not very difficult to account for. Yet the Commentators have said nothing of it, which I wonder at, that they should not think it deserved to be taken Notice of, though it seems to me to be well worth the Trouble. This then is the Reason of it, and Joshua was sensible of it. Had the People been accustomed to make Shouts and Cries, and to turn themselves towards the City, the greatest Part of 'em might have been less attentive to turn their Eyes towards the City when the general Cry was made, to observe the miraculous and surprizing Fall of the Walls of the City. Joshua knew well, that the seventh Day was to determine the Fate of the City, but it does not appear that the People were informed of it. From whence I make this Conjecture, that the Cry or Shouting which the Israelites had Orders to make, after a Silence of six Days, when the Trumpets were to sound with a longer and stronger Blast, was appointed to make them turn their Faces at that Moment towards the Walls, that they might behold the Downfall of that unhappy City.

The Scripture does not inform us what were the particular Crimes, that drew down this Vengeance upon the Heads of the miserable Inhabitants. But they must necessarily have been very great, since we are told, that [Josh. vi. 17.] the City shall be accursed, even it and all that are therein, to the Lord; only Rahab the Harlot shall live, she and all that are with her in the House, because she hid the Messengers that we sent. This proves that the People of this City had made themselves obnoxious to a greater Degree of Punishment than the other Inhabitants of the Land of Canaan, [Deut. vii. 1, 2.] since it was entirely devoted and anathematized by the Lord, who commanded the utter Destruction of Jericho, and that every Thing therein should be put to the Sword; to kill every living Thing thereof, even the very Animals, to burn up every Thing else, and preserve nothing of the Booty, but only

Vol. II. such valuable Metals as were to be consecrated to the Lord: Whereas at other Times they were used to preserve the Plunder and the Cities of the Land of Canaan.

[Observations upon the Marches and Encampments of the Israelites in the Desert, Numb. x.] □ MARCHES and Encampments of the Israelites in the Wilderness. When Moses relates the several Marches and the different Encampments of the Children of Israel in the Desert, we are not to imagine it was always in dry barren Places, without Water, without Pasture, without Trees or Culture, and lastly that they were Places intirely uninhabited, and utterly abandoned. 'Tis true indeed that such sometimes they found, and were constrained to abide in them; but God there exerted his infinite Power, in the Miracles that he performed in their Favour, in Order to retain them in Submission and Duty. However it appears, that always almost Moses took Care to encamp in inhabited Places, which were not very far from Cities or Villages, whose Territory was cultivated, and might furnish Subsistence for his People. I make this Observation, that no one should imagine from the Word Desart or Wilderness, if literally understood, that this vast Multitude of People always marched through such Sort of Places, and that they were always fed by a perpetual Miracle, such as the Manna, and afterwards the Quails, which grew uneasy to those who were cloyed with always eating the same Food. How many other Prodigies were required to provide for so great a Multitude what was necessary for their Support, for their Carriages and other Things, which an Army cannot subsist without, but must be exposed to the utmost Danger? Moses acquaints us with nothing of all this: But when I observe that a People, who came almost naked and without Arms out of Egypt, that after their Passage through the Red-Sea, they should want nothing in the Wilderness, I find Reason to be surprized. If they lived upon Plunder and Pillage, they must have passed through Countries that were able to furnish them abundantly with such Things as were necessary for the Maintenance and Support of such a Multitude. But what I am most surprized at is, that Moses was able to discipline his People in such Manner, that he made them excellent Soldiers, taught them to march, encamp, and to fight with so much Skill, that I can see nothing that is more to be admired.

The Partizans of Antiquity, I mean those who admire none but the Greeks and Romans in the Art of War, think that none can go beyond them in military Discipline; I should be ready to admit what they contend for, if by Discipline they mean only Kk what belongs to the Art of forming and training up good Soldiers; but to believe that they were the first that marched, encamped, and fought in the strictest Order and Method, this would be to impose on themselves very grossly. Yet for all this the greatest Part of learned Men, not to say all of them, are ready to assure us, that except the Greeks and Romans, all other Nations were without Discipline, without Science, and very ignorant in the Art of War.

We have no Books more antient than those of Moses; yet this does not prove, that in Relation to the Motions and Encampments of Armies, and the Art of marshalling them, and leading them to Battle, that the Hebrews were the first Authors and Inventors of so sublime and difficult a Science, as is that of War. I am thoroughly persuaded, that we must not expect to find its Original in Moses, but that it must be presumed that he had learned it from the Egyptians, whom he had seen put it in Practice; and of this I make no Doubt, whatever Mr. Basnage may say to the contrary. If we attend never so little, says he, to the Laws of Moses, and consider without Prejudice what it contains, it cannot be denied that Policy and the Art of Government derive their Original from this divine Law. But further, says he, I believe the Art Military also proceeds nearly from the same Source. This would be easily proved if the Time would allow me, &c. With all the Respect that is due to so learned a Man, I must take the Liberty to affirm, that were he now alive he would find it a hard Task to prove what he has ventured to assert, and what the Scripture does not once mention. Are we not assured that Egypt was then a great and flourishing Kingdom, where Politicks and the Art of Government, to keep the People in good Order, and to secure them from any Enterprizes of their Neighbours, were studied and well understood by their Governours?

Does not the Scripture tell us expressly, that [Exod. xiv. 6, 9.] Pharaoh marched against the Israelites at the Head of a powerful Army, composed of Infantry, Cavalry, and a great Number of Chariots of War? These formidable Preparations shew plainly enough, that we must not by any Means place the Origine of this Art in the great Lawgiver, that it was well known by the Egyptians, and that we must not even seek for the Invention of Chariots of War from them, since the Scripture speaks of it as a Thing then well known. Besides, did not Moses meet with Enemies upon his Rout, which gave Opposition to his Passage, and even attacked him with all the Art and Method which were practised in those Times? And on several Occasions he found himself in such perplexing Circumstances by their Means, that Miracles became needful to extricate him, and to prevent the intire Rout and Overthrow of his whole Army.

This great Legislator is very succinct in the Description of his Marches. He has not confined himself to set down all of 'em, much less his Encampments, except those only which were observable for producing some notable Events. And to say the Truth, he could never have finished his History, if he had obliged himself to take Notice of every Thing, since it took up thirty nine Years in passing through but a small Space of Ground, by infinite Turnings and Windings, which much lengthened his Marches, and multiplied his Encampments, and by the long Abode he made in some of his Camps, where sometimes he spent whole Years. To this we may add those Obstacles he met with on his Way, which contributed not a little to make his People warlike, and by making Conquests, prepared them for waging Wars by War itself, to settle them in the Land of Promise, and to secure the Possession of it to them and their Children, especially by what his Successor also contributed to it. For this Favourite of the Lord did not himself see this wished-for Land, except at a Distance; the Conquest of it was reserved for Joshua, who was a great, skilful, wise, and courageous General. For this Reason God made Choice of him to be Moses's Successor; and this may be a useful Lesson to Princes, and to such who have the Province of governing a Nation, that the Strength, Power, and Prosperity of a State consists in the Choice of brave and able Ministers, who are to have the Execution and Management of Affairs, whether Civil or Military.

We see every where in Scripture, and this is a Thing too remarkable not to give our Attention to it, that God has always chosen Men of great Courage and great Virtue, to humble the Pride of Princes, when too long a Course of Prosperity has tempted them to undertake unjust Enterprizes, and plunged them into enormous Vices; or to correct the Vices of their People, or lastly to raise up one on the Ruine of another. Moses was not chosen of God for the Conquest of the Land of Promise, and for the Punishment of the Crimes of its Inhabitants; he was only appointed to be the Conductor of his People, and the Dispenser of his Laws, without giving him the Qualities that were necessary for a great Commander, as may be judged from his Conduct. For God's Design was not to make him a Man of Blood; he intended to take him into his Bosom with pure Hands and without Blemish.

But to return to our present Subject. The Antients so closely adhered to their Maxime, not to relate any Thing but the Substance and Gross of Things, that they give us but little Light into some Practices and Usages, which would be very satisfactory to know. Not one of 'em have given us a compleat and circumstantial Account of the Marching and Encampment of Armies, by which we may know their Order and Method. Are the Moderns without this Defect? We must not therefore wonder, that the sacred Authors have neglected this Kind of Things; yet however in several Passages of Scripture I seem to collect the Order of the Hebrew Marches, and their Discipline in their Encampments and Decampments; they made Use of Trumpets, to the different Sounds of which they were accustomed, and which intimated the Times of preparing themselves, of packing up their Baggage, of attending at their Standards, and of marching. If they made Use of this Method for their Decampments, they did the same also for their several military Functions, when to fight and when to retreat. See the fourth Chapter of Numbers, where it may be seen how they took down the Tabernacle, and in what Order the Levites marched who carried it.

It can by no Means be doubted, but that the Hebrews marched with a great deal of Order. They had the Pillar of Clouds in their Front, which served them for many Purposes. For besides its being a sensible Signal of the Presence of the Lord, it was bright and luminous in the Night-Time, to give them Light during the Season of Darkness, and by Day it was dark and thick, to defend them from the excessive Heats of the Desarts of Arabia, through which they were to march. Also by its Motions it gave them Notice when to encamp or to decamp. For [Numb. ix. 15, 16, 17. x. 34, 35. Exod. xl. 34, 35.] when it stopped they encamped, they set up the Tabernacle; when it moved on, they took it down, and packed it up, they put it upon its Carriages, and marched in Order. Their Marches were not much different from ours, and indeed the Thing cannot be otherwise. It is the Opinion of the Rabbins, that they marched in the same Order that they encamped; and this perhaps is the only Opinion in which they seem to me to have Reason on their Side. They marched in several Columns, according to the Nature of the Places, they opened Ways a-cross the Plains, that they might march in a greater Number of Columns, each Tribe to the Post that was assigned it; so that their Army arrived at their Camp without any Confusion.

The heavy and light Baggage marched separately, that it might not encumber the March. The Tribes of Dan, Asher, and Naphthali, brought up the Rear, and covered the March of one Body of the People, that is, the Stragglers, the Sick, the Feeble, the old Men, Women, and Children. This was their Post, because of the slow March that the Rear-Band is forced to make, more or less according as the Way is in Length, and according to the Number of Columns, in which an Army is obliged to march.

Mr. Bashage pretends, that this great Army commonly made but a March of a League in a Day and an half. He takes an Estimate from what the Scripture says, that the Israelites parted from Sinai, and came in three Days to Kibrothavah, to the Graves of Lust, the Distance of which places it not above two Leagues. This learned Man must allow me to answer, that this does not prove that the Army always marched so slowly as he affirms; perhaps it was obliged to go through some Passes in the Mountains, where they could only march in File. For in an open Countrey, an Army of six hundred thousand Men may march three or four Leagues a-day, and even a good deal more.

The Order of the March given us by the same Author, is very apposite to convince us, that an Army of six hundred thousand Men may very well march four Leagues in one Day. To speak the Truth, I think his Notion to be pretty imaginary; for the Scripture does not say that this Army marched with several Bodies in Front, by double Lines, with Intervals between these Bodies; and those that followed over against the Intervals of those which preceded them, as he supposes to have been the Case. They marched in Columns, as may be very probably concluded, and in the most open Plains they always marched in Columns to a great Number, except they were approaching towards an Enemy. And when it was perceived they approached near an Enemy, they marched in Order of Battle, when the Ground would allow them. Such was the March of Cyrus against Crœsus in the Plain of Tymbraia.

As to their Marches in hilly Countries, they opened several Routs upon the Eminencies; and in the Valleys, which let into other Valleys, and into Plains. They practised the same Thing in close Countries, marching always in great Order, and with all the Caution imaginable.

I know nothing more to be admired than their Method in their Encampments; and in the Form of their Camps I observe a wonderful Art. It seems probable that the Greeks have imitated them as to their Encampments, and the Romans have followed the Greeks. But the Camps of the Romans were still nearer those of the Jews, for I can perceive no Difference. Both of 'em used to fortify their Camps with an Intrenchment, with a Ditch, and a Palisade. Mareshah (II)

II. MARESHAH, or Marissa, a City of the Tribe of Judah t. 'Tis also called Moresheth and Morasthi. The Prophet Micah was a Native of this City; and in the Time of Eusebius it was forsaken, being two Miles from Eleutheropolis. 'Twas near Mareshah, in the Vale of Zephathah, that the famous Battle was fought between Asa King of Judah, and Zerah King of Chus,[1] in which Asa obtained the Victory against an Army of a Million of Men, which he put to Flight, and pursued as far as Gerar[2]. In 1 Macc. v. 66. is read Samaria instead of Marissa. In the latter Times of the Jewish Commonwealth, Maresbah was given to Idumæa[3], as also several others of the southerly Cities of Judah. It was peopled by the Jews, and their Allies, in the Time of John Hyrcanus[4]. King Alexander Jannæus took it from the Arabians[5]. Pompey restored it to its first Inhabitants[6]. Gabinius rebuilt it[7], and lastly the Parthians destroyed it in the War of Antigonus against Herod[8].

Mariamne (I)

I. MARIAMNE. Daughter of Alexander, Son of King Aristobulus, and of Alexandra, Daughter of Hyrcanus High-Priest of the Jews, was the finest Princess of her Age. She married Herod the Great[1], by whom she had two Sons Alexander and Aristobulus, and two Daughters, Salampso and Cypros; and besides these a Son called Herod, that died young, during his Studies at Rome. We have already given the History of Mariamne, under the Articles of Herod the Great, Alexander her Son, and Alexandra her Mother. We shall but just touch upon it here, by Way of Abridgment. Herod had an excessive Fondness for Mariamne, but she made but small Returns to his Passion. Nay, she began to hate him, after he had put to Death Aristobulus her Brother, to whom he had given the High-Priesthood but a Year before[2]. Mariamne shewed her Aversion to him openly enough, but overcome by his Passion for her, he could never resolve upon parting with her.

After the Victory that Augustus obtained over Marc Anthony[3], Herod who had always been of Antony's Party, and who had sent Succours to him against Augustus, was forced to have Recourse to Augustus's Clemency. When he left Jerusalem, he gave secret Orders to Josephus and Sohemus, whom he left to govern in his Absence, that if they should hear of any Misfortune to befal him in his Journey, they should put Mariamne to Death, and her Mother Alexandra[4]. Mariamne having cunningly got this Secret out of Sohemus, conceived an implacable Hatred against Herod; and at his Return, instead of answering his Caresses, she repelled him from her, and reproached him with his Inhumanity. At length she became so importunate, that Herod could no longer bear with her Contempt; being otherwise exasperated by the ill Reports that were made continually of Mariamne, and by the Accusations of Salome, Herod's Sister, and sworn Enemy of Mariamne, who suborned a Cupbearer of the Kings to depose, that Mariamne had solicited him to give a Potion to the King, on Pretence to make her be more beloved by him.

Herod having put one of Mariamne's Eunuchs to the Torture, whom he knew to be very faithful to her; could get nothing out of him as to the Potion or Poison; but overcome by the Force of the Torture he confessed, that his Mistress's Hatred for the King proceeded only from what she had learned from Sohemus. Then Herod being in a Rage, and believing that Mariamne could never have got this Secret out of Sohemus, if there had not been other Correspondence between them, immediately caused Sohemus to be seized, and led away to Punishment. After this he called his Friends together, and accused the Queen to them in such bitter Terms, that they easily perceived he desired to have her condemned to Death. This therefore they did unanimously, and Mariamne[5] walked to her Execution with such an Air of Grandeur and Intrepidity, as astonished all that saw her[6]. After her Death Herod's Affection for her renewed again, and became stronger than ever. Often he called her by her Name, as if she was still living. He bewailed her in a Manner little agreeing to his high Station, and whatever he did to endeavour to divert himself, he could never get her out of his Mind. He was even compelled to relinquish the Care of his Affairs, and delivered himself up so to his Grief, that sometimes he ordered his Attendants to call Mariamne, as if she had been still alive. Josephus[7] mentions a Tower that Herod built in Jerusalem, to which he gave the Name of Mariamne. 'Twas the finest and best adorned of all that he built. It was fifty five Cubits high, and had a square Base of twenty Cubits wide.

Mariamne (II)

II. MARIAMNE. Daughter of the High-Priest Simon, and Wife of Herod the Great[1]. There are several other Persons mentioned by Josephus by the Name of Mariamne, who not being known to Scripture, do not belong to our Design. Mark (I)

I. MARK. Saint Mark the Evangelist, according to Papias[1], Saint Irenæus[2], and the greatest Part of both Ancients and Moderns, was the Disciple and Interpreter of Saint Peter; and several Ancients[3] believe, that 'tis him of whom Saint Peter speaks in his first Epistle[4], and whom he calls his Son in the Spirit, probably because he had converted him. 'Tis thought he was of the Number of the Seventy Disciples, before he put himself in the Retinue of the chief of the Apostles. But some of the Fathers[5] add this Particular, that Saint Mark was one of those who forsook our Saviour, when he had heard him say those Words, John vi. 55. Verily verily I say unto you, except ye eat the Flesh of the Son of Man, and drink his Blood, ye have no Life in you. But after Saint Peter had brought him back again to the Faith, he continued stedfast in it, always joining himself to this Apostle, and went to Rome with him, where he writ his Gospel.

Some have not distinguished him from John Mark, mentioned in the Acts of the Apostles, and in the Epistles of Saint Paul; but this Notion is now almost intirely given up. Others maintain, that Saint Mark was of the Race of the Priests, and wore their Bonnet. This is affirmed by the anonymous Author of his Acts. 'Tis also said that he was Nephew to Saint Peter, being the Son of one of his Sisters[6]. This Apostle going to Rome about the Year of Christ 44, Saint Mark accompanied him thither, where he writ his Gospel[7]; at the Request of the Brethren, who desired that he would give them in Writing what he had learned from Saint Peter by Word of Mouth. When this Apostle was acquainted with what his Disciple had done, he commended and approved his Undertaking, and gave out his Gospel to be read in Churches as an authentick Work. Tertullian[8] ascribes this Gospel to Saint Peter, and the Author of the Synopsis imputed to Saint Athanasius will have this Gospel to be dictated to Saint Mark by Saint Peter. Eutychius, Patriarch of Alexandria asserts, that Saint Peter writ it himself; and some mentioned by Saint Chrysostom[9] were of Opinion, that Saint Mark writ it in Egypt. Others affirm that he writ it after Saint Peter's Death. All these different Sentiments are enough to prove, that the Circumstances of Time and Place are uncertain, when and where Saint Mark composed his Gospel.

Men are as much divided as to the Language in which it was writ, some saying it was composed in Greek, and others in Latin. The Ancients, and most of the Moderns, stand up for the Greek, which still at this Day passes for the Original of Saint Mark. But some Manuscript Greek Copies of this Gospel insinuate, that it was writ in Latin. The Syriac and Arabic concur in this also. It should seem probable, that writing it at Rome, and for the Use of the Romans, he might write it in their Language. Baronius[10] and Selden[11] have declared themselves of this Opinion, which however has but few Followers. They shew at Venice some loose Sheets, which they pretend to be the Original in Saint Mark's own Hand. If this were certain, and the Manuscript could be read, it would be an infallible Argument for deciding this Dispute: But it is doubted whether this be Saint Mark's Original Writing, and it is so worn out by its Antiquity, that scarce one Letter can be made out. The last Author that has mentioned it, as I know of, is F. Montfaucon[12]. He affirms that it is writ in Latin, and owns that he never saw so ancient a Manuscript. It is written upon Egyptian Paper, much thinner and finer than what is to be seen in several Places. Father Montfaucon thinks[13], that it may be fairly supposed to be at least of the fourth Century. In 1564 it was put into a Cave, in Marsh-ground, the Roof of which was lower than the neighbouring Sea. So that the Water perpetually drops upon those, who have the Curiosity to go thither. It was legible when it was deposited there, in 1564. An Author that had seen it before him, believed that he had observed Greek Characters in it. Our Preface to Saint Mark's Gospel may be consulted.

Several of the Moderns[14] think, that Saint Mark was sent by Saint Peter from Rome to Aquileia, where he continued two Years and a half, and founded a Church; but this Fact has no Proofs from Antiquity. 'Tis thought[15], that it was in the Year of Christ 49, which was the ninth of the Emperor Claudius, that the Jews being driven out of Rome, Saint Peter and Saint Mark were obliged to retire from thence also. Saint Peter sent Saint Mark into Egypt, there to preach the Gospel. He first went down to Cyrene in Pentapolis, where he made many Converts. From thence he went to Alexandria, where he converted Anienus, whom he ordained first Bishop of this City. The Number of Christians there increased exceedingly, and they lived in so exemplary a Manner, that in the Judgment of several[16], Philo the Jew[17] was willing to give the Honour of it to his own Nation, by describing the Manner of Life of the primitive Christians, under the Name of Therapeutes. See THERAPEUTES.

The Number of Christians increasing every Day, the Pagans opposed themselves to Saint Mark, who was come to overthrow the Worship of their Gods. He thought it prudent to withdraw, and let the Tempest blow over. He returned to Cyrene, where he continued two Years longer; after which he came back to Alexandria. There he beheld with Joy, that the Faithful were increased in Faith and Grace, as well as in Number, and then he departed again. Probably he went to Rome, if it be true as is affirmed by the Chronicon Alexandrinum, that there he was present at the Death of Saint Peter and Saint Paul, in the Year of Christ 66. Thence he returned to Alexandria, where the Pagans provoked by the great Number of Miracles performed by him, and by the Reproaches made them by the Christians on Account of their Idols, sought after him to put him to Death. God concealed him for some Time, but afterwards they found him celebrating the Holy Communion. 'Twas on the Lord's Day, the 24th of April, in the Year of Christ 68. They put a Rope about his Neck, and drew him along the whole Day, saying, they must lead this Ox to Bucoles, which was a Place near the Sea, full of Rocks and Precipices. At Evening they put him into Prison, where in the Night he had two Visions. One of an Angel, assuring him that his Name was written in the Book of Life; and another of our Saviour, to give him Peace and Tranquillity of Mind. The Day following the Infidels began again to drag him through the Streets, till he gave up his Soul to God, April the 25th, in the Year of Christ 68. Several[18] have said, that he ended his Life by Fire, probably they burnt his Body after his Death.

Several antient Hereticks, as Saint Irenæus[19] reports, received only the Gospel of Saint Mark. Others among the Catholicks rejected the twelve last Verses of this Gospel[20], beginning at Verse 9. Now when Jesus was risen early, &c. Probably because it appeared, that in one Place Saint Mark was too opposite to Saint Matthew, and related Circumstances in this latter Part contrary to the other Evangelists. The ancient Fathers, the old oriental Versions, and almost all the old Copies, whether printed or Manuscript, Greek or Latin, read these twelve last Verses, and acknowledge them as genuine, as well as all the rest of Saint Mark's Gospel.

As far as may be judged by comparing the Gospels of Saint Mark and Saint Matthew, the first is an Abridgment of the second. Saint Mark very often uses the same Terms, relates the same Facts, and takes Notice of the same Circumstances. Saint Mark sometimes adds new Particulars, which give great Light to Saint Matthew's Text. There are also two or three Miracles in Saint Mark, which are not to be found in Saint Matthew. See Mark[21]. 23. and Chap. i. v. ix. xvi. What is most remarkable in our Evangelist is this, that tho' he follows Saint Matthew in almost every Thing else, yet he forsakes him in the Order of his Narration, from Chap. iv. V. 12. to Chap. xiv. V. 13. of Saint Matthew. In these Places, instead of following Saint Matthew, he pursues the Order of Time as expressed by Saint Luke and Saint John. This has prevailed with the Chronologers to follow Saint Luke, Saint Mark, and Saint John, rather than Saint Matthew. He begins his Gospel with an Account of the preaching of John the Baptist, and omits several Parables related by Saint Matthew, Chap. xx, xxi, and xxv, and several Discourses of our Saviour to his Disciples and to the Pharisees, Chap. v, vi, vii, xvi, xxiii.

Marriage

MARRIAGE, Wedding, and the Festivity on that Occasion. The Hebrews commonly made Use of the Word Mishtheb[1] which comes from the Verb Shathab, to drink, to signify a Feast in general, and a Marriage-Feast, or a Marriage in particular. The Greeks made Use of the Word Gamos in the same Sense, which signifies Marriage, a Wedding, and the Feasting that usually accompanies it. Sometimes this Word seems to be put for a Feast in General. See Luke xii. 36. xiv. 3.

Marriage passes among the Hebrews for a Matter of strict Obligation. They understand litterally, and as a Precept, those [Gen. i. 28. Gen. i. 23.] Words uttered to our first Parents, Be fruitful, and multiply, and replenish the Earth. They believe that he that does not marry his Children, deprives God of the Glory that is due to him, becomes in some Sort a Homicide, destroys the Image of the first Man, and is a Reason that the Holy Ghost withdraws himself from Israel. This Question is moved in the Thalmud. Who is he that prostitutes his Daughter? To which it is answered, The Father that keeps her too long in his House, or that marries her to an old Man. The Age at which Wedlock becomes an Obligation upon them, is the Age of twenty Years. But generally the Jews marry their Children before this Age. However, if a Father marries his Daughter before the Age of Puberty, which is at twelve Years and an half, she may be separated from her Husband for any slight Disgust she may conceive against him.

The Marriage of Adam and Eve was the grandest and most august that ever was solemnized, whether we consider the Person officiating, the Witness, the Brideman, who was God; or whether we regard the Merit and Dignity of the contracting Persons, who were the Stem of all Mankind that ever have been, or that ever shall be.

In the first Ages, Marriage, between Brothers and Sisters were not only allowable, but even necessary, because of the small Number of Persons then in the World. After Mankind were become numerous, they were unlawful, and even prohibited under great Penalties. However the Patriarchs for a good while took the Liberty of espousing their near Relations, even after the World was sufficiently peopled, so that they might have been supplied elsewhere: But this was done with a good View. For they would avoid any Alliance with Families that were corrupted by the Worship of false Gods, or to preserve in their own Families the Worship of the true God, and the Use of the true Religion, of which they were the Depositaries. 'Twas for this Reason that Abraham married his Sister or Niece Sarah, and that this Patriarch gave such strict Orders to his Steward Eliezer, to fetch a Wife for his Son from among the Daughters of his Nephews; and that Jacob espoused two Sisters, who were the Daughters of his Uncle.

As we have appointed this Place to treat of the Solemnity of a Jewish Wedding, we shall describe it in its due Length. We shall not speak of this Affair in Qual'ty of a Lawyer, nor altogether as a Divine. In this Matter Selden may be consulted in his Uxor Hebraica, as to what concerns the Jews; and as to what relates to theological Questions concerning the Marriage of Christians, the Christian Authors may be consulted who have expresly treated of Marriage. We have already said something of Repudiation under the Article DIVORCE, and we have treated of it at Length in our Dissertation printed before our Commentary upon Numbers. So that nothing properly remains to be treated of here, but what has Relation to the Marriage -Ceremonies of the antient Hebrews. We have already discussed this Matter at full Length in a Dissertation made on Purpose, and printed before our Commentary on the Song of Songs; of which we shall content our selves here to give an Abstract.

The Hebrews generally married young. According to the Rabbins, Men should marry at eighteen[2]. Whoever is not married at this Age, offends against the Commandment by God given to the first Men; where he bids 'em increase and multiply. They may anticipate this Age, but they are not allowed to go beyond it. As soon as they have compleated thirteen Years, they may marry; and they think a Man cannot live in Celebacy without Sin, or at least without great Danger of Sin. As to the Virgins, they are contracted very early; but generally they are not married till they arrive at what is called the Age of Puberty, that is, at twelve Years compleat. From whence comes these Expressions, the Spouse of one's Youth, or, one espoused in [Joel i. 8. Mal. ii. 14, &c. Prov. ii. 17.] our Youth, and the Guide of one's Youth, expressing a Husband married young,

From these Principles 'tis easy to give an Account, why Celebacy and Barrenness was a Reproach in Israel; and why the Daughter of Jephthah went to bewail her Virginity, [Judges xi. 37.] that is to say, to deplore her Condition because she was to die before she was married, and before she should leave Heirs to her Father, who might make his Name to survive in Israel. From thence proceeds their Exactness, in causing the Brother of a Husband who died without Issue, to marry the Widow he had left behind; and the Disgrace that attended him who should refuse this Offer, nor would build up the House of his Brother by giving him Heirs. From hence those Threatnings of the Lord [Gen. xxxviii. 3. Ruth iv. 5. Isai. iv. 1.] by Isaiah: And in that Day seven Women shall take hold of one Man, saying, We will eat our own Bread, and wear our own Apparel; only let us be called by thy Name, to take away our Reproach. That we may have it to say, we have such an one for our Husband, and that we may no longer be looked on with Contempt. See also Jeremiah xxxi. 22. A Woman shall compass a Man, or Women shall apply themselves to Men for Husbands. And Cant. viii. 1. I should not be despised, or I should be delivered from the Disgrace of living single. Maids before their Marriage seldom appeared in publick. They were called Alma, Virgin, secret, shut up. Oftentimes they were sought in Marriage, without having seen the Persons that desired them. Jesus the Son of Sirach says, Ecclesiasticus xlii. 2. The Father waketh for the Daughter when no Man knoweth, and the Care for her taketh away Sleep; when she is young, lest she pass away the Flower of her Age; and being married, lest she should be hated. See also Saint Paul, 1 Cor. vii. 36. If any Man think that he behaveth himself uncomely toward his Virgin, if she pass the Flower of her Age. 'Tis a kind of Shame to a Father, if he does not marry his Daughter in due Time.

One may see the Manner in which they demanded a Daughter in Marriage, in what was done by Hamor, the Father of Shechem, and by Shechem himself, when he [Gen. xxxiv. 8, 9, &c.] demanded Dinah of Jacob. " The Soul " of my Son Shechem longeth for your " Daughter; I pray you give her him to " Wife. Let me find Grace in your Eyes, " and what ye shall say unto me I will " give. Ask me never so much Dowry " and Gift, and I will give according as ye " shall say unto me; but give me the Damsel to Wife. See also Genesis xxiv. 33. the Manner in which Eliezar makes a Demand of Rebekah for his young Master Isaac; and Tobit vii. 10, 11. the Demand that Tobias made of Sara the Daughter of Raguel for his Wife. And lastly, Cant. viii. 8. What shall we do for our Sister in the Day when she shall be spoken for? In that Day when she shall be spoken to, in Order to have her Consent for her Marriage.

The Husband used to give a Dowry to his Wife; 'twas a kind of Purchase that the Man made, of the Person that he desired to marry. Before the Contract they agreed on the Portion that the Husband should give his Bride, and the Presents he should make to her Father and Brethren. We have just now seen, that Hamor, Father of Shechem, tells Jacob and his Sons, that they might ask what Portion and what Presents they pleased, and they would gladly give them, provided they might but have Dinah. Jacob undertakes to serve seven Years for Rachel, and seven Years more for Leah; and the two Sisters complain some Years after, that their Father Laban had applied [Gen. xxxi. 15.] their Portion to his own Use. Saul did not give his Daughter Michal to David, till after he had received one hundred Foreskins of the Philistines. When it was insinuated to David, that he might be the King's Son-in-Law, he answered that he was not rich enough to pretend to this Honour. But it was told him, the King did not require any other Dowry for his Daughter, but only an hundred Foreskins of the Philistines, that he might be avenged of his Enemies. Hosea bought his Wife at the Price of fifteen Pieces of Silver, and a Measure and half of [Hos. iii. 2.] Barley. Yet however the Rabbins assure us, that the Father was used to give his Daughter certain Presents for her Cloaths, and other Necessaries[3]. This was fixed at fifty Zuzims, which was a Piece of Money of one fourth Part of a Shekel.

The Betrothing was performed, either by a Writing, or by a Piece of Silver that was given to the Bride, or by Cohabitation and Consummation[4]. This is the Form of the Writing that was prepared on these Occasions. On such a Day, of such a Month, in such a Year, N. the Son of N. has said to N. the Daughter of N. be thou my Spouse according to the Law of Moses and the Israelites, and I will give thee for the Portion of thy Virginity the Sum of two hundred Zuzims, as is ordained by the Law. And the said N. has consented to become his Spouse upon these Conditions, which the said N. has promised to perform upon the Day of Marriage. To this the said N. obliges himself, and for this he engages all his Goods, even as far as the Cloak that he wears upon his Shoulder. Moreover he promises to perform all that is generally intended in Contracts of Marriage, in Favour of the Israelitish Women. Witnesses N. N. N.

[Deut. xxiv. 1.] The Promise by a Piece of Silver, and without Writing, was made before Witnesses, when the young Man said to his Mistress; Receive this Piece of Silver as a Pledge that you shall become my Spouse. Lastly, the Engagement by Cohabitation, according to the Rabbins, was allowed by the Law; but it had been wisely forbid by the Antients, because of the Abuses that might happen, and to prevent the Inconveniencies of clandestine Marriages. After the Marriage was contracted, the young People had the Liberty of seeing each other, which was not allowed them before[5]. If during this Time the Bride should commit any Fault against that Fidelity that she owed to her Bridegroom, she was treated as an Adulteress P. Thus the holy Virgin, after she was betrothed to Joseph, and having conceived our Saviour Jesus Christ, according to the Rigour of the Law might have been punished as an Adulteress, if the Angel of the Lord had not acquainted Joseph with the Mystery in which she was concerned. The Jewish Doctors teach, that if those that are bethrothed should make an ill Use of the Liberty of seeing each other, they are condemned to the Punishment of the Whip. Often between the Time of being espoused and married, there passed a considerable Time, whether because of the Under-age of the Persons espoused, or for other Reasons of Necessity or Decency.

When the Parties were agreed upon the Terms of Marriage, and upon the Time on which it was to be celebrated, they drew up the Contract in the Form following.

The Form of the Contracts of Marriage

among the Hebrews.

Upon such a Day of such a Month, in such a Year, and upon the Banks of such a River, (for they commonly married in the open Air, and by the Side of some River) N. Son of N. said to N. Daughter of N. be thou my Wife according to the Rites of Moses and the Israelites. And with the Help of God I will honour thee, maintain thee, cloath thee, and feed thee, according to the Custom of other Husbands of our Nation, who honour, maintain, cloath, and feed their Wives, as they ought to do. I give thee for a Portion, and for the Price of thy Virginity, two hundred Zuzims of Silver[6], which are due to thee according to the Law. Besides which, I engage my self to provide thee with Cloaths, and convenient Food, as also to discharge that conjugal Duty which is due to thee, according to the Custom of all Nations.

And the said N. has consented to become his Spouse. Moreover, the said Bridegroom has promised by Way of Augmentation of Dowry, that besides the principal Sum he will give ——. And what the said Bride has brought with her is estimated at the Value of ——, which the said Bridegroom acknowledges to have received and to charge himself with, and has made us the Declaration following. I accept and receive under my Care and Keeping all that is abovementioned. as well for Dowry, as upon any other Account; and oblige my self and my Heirs, under the Security of all my Goods, whether moveable or not, present or to come, even to the Cloak that I wear upon my Shoulders, to give a true and faithful Account to my said Spouse, of all that she has brought me as a Dowry, or upon any other Account, during my Life, or at my Death. All which I promise to put in Execution, according to the Form and Tenour of the usual Contracts of Marriage, in Use among the Children of Israel, and according to the Rules of our Rabbins of pious Memory. In Testimony of which we have signed these Presents, &c.

Leo of Modena says, that the Custom of the Jews is to make Choice of a Wednesday or Friday for the Celebration of a Marriage, if it is a Maid that is to be married, or of a Thursday if it is a Widow. The Evening before the Solemnity, the Bride goes to a Bath, and plunges her self into the Water. She is accompanied with several Women, who lead her to the Bath by the Sound of several kitchen Instruments, to give Notice to the Neighbourhood that she is going to be married. There is some Disagreement between Selden, Buxtorf, and Leo of Modena, upon the Subject of Marriage-Ceremonies; which shews that the Customs vary according to the Difference of Places and Persons. The Bride is set out with every Thing that can be had that is fine and rich, and then she is led into the open Air, either upon the Banks of a River, into a Court, or a Garden. Sometimes this is performed in a Hall, dressed and adorned on Purpose. The Bridegroom and Bride are placed under a Canopy, each of em' covered with a black Veil. On their Heads is put another square Veil, having four Tufts hanging at the four Corners. This Veil is what the Hebrews call Taled, of which see the Figure.

THE CEREMONIES OF A JEWISH WEDDING.Vol. II. P.

Then the Rabbin of the Place, or the Chanter of the Synagogue, or the nearest Relation of the Husband, takes a Cup full of Wine, and having pronounced this Benediction, Blessed be thou, O Lord, who hast created Man and Woman, and ordained Marriage, &c. he presents the Cup to the Bridegroom, and then to the Bride, that they may just taste it. Afterwards the Bridegroom puts a Ring upon the Finger of his Bride, in Presence of two Witnesses, saying, By this Ring thou art my Spouse, according to the Custom of Moses and the Children of Israel. Buxtorf says, that this Ring ought to be of massy Gold, and not set with any Stones; and that the Bridegroom takes the Company to Witness, that it is good Gold, and of a due Value. After this they read the Contract of Marriage, which the Bridegroom puts into the Hands of the Bride's Relations. Then they bring Wine again in some brittle Vessel, they rehearse six Blessings, they make the married Couple drink, and they throw the rest on the Ground in Token of Chearfulness. The Bridegroom takes the Vessel, and throws it with Violence against the Ground, or against the Wall, and breaks it in Pieces in Memory, as they say, of the Destruction of the Temple.

The Rabbins inform us, that before the Temple of Jerusalem was laid in Ruines, the Bridegroom and Bride wore Crowns in the Ceremony of Marriage; but since that Time they have ceased to wear any. In the Scripture we see plainly the Crown of the Bridegroom, but not that of the Bride: And indeed, the Head-dress of the Women was by no Means convenient for the wearing of a Crown. Isai. lxi. 10. Vulg. Quasi sponsum decoratum coronâ. And Cant. iii. 11. Go forth, O ye Daughters of Zion, and behold King Solomon with the Crown wherewith his Mother crowned him in the Day of his Espousals, and in the Day of the Gladness of his Heart. The modern Jews in some Places have a Custom, to throw Handfuls of Wheat upon the married Couple, and particularly upon the Bride, saying, Increase and multiply. In other Places they mingle Pieces of Money with the Wheat, which are to be gathered up by the Poor.

[Judg. xiv. Cant. v. 1. viii. 1. John iii. 29.] We see by the Gospel, that the Bridegroom had a Paranymphus or Brideman, called by our Saviour the Friend of the Bridegroom. A Number of young People kept him Company during the Days of the Wedding, to do him Credit; as also young Women kept Company with the Bride all this Time. The Companions of the Bridegroom are expressly mentioned in the History of Samson, and in the Canticles; and the Companions of the Bride in the same Canticles, i. 4. ii. 7. iii. 5. viii. 4. and in Psalm xlv. 9, 14, 15. The Office of the Brideman was to perform the Ceremonies of the Wedding instead of the Bridegroom, and to obey [John iii. 29.] his Orders. He that has the Bride is the Bridegroom, says John the Baptist, speaking of Jesus Christ; but the Friend of the Bridegroom, which standeth and heareth him, rejoyceth greatly, because of the Bridegroom's [John ii. 9.] Voice. Some think that the Archi-triclinus, or Governor of the Feast, of whom Mention is made in the Marriage of Cana, at which Jesus Christ and his Mother Mary were present, was the Brideman, Paranymphus, or Friend of the Bridegroom; who presided at the Feast, and had the Care of providing for the Guests. The Friends and Companions of the Bride sang the Epithalamium, or Wedding-Song, at the Door of the Bride the Evening before the Wedding. Psalm xlv. is an Epithalamium, intitled, A Song of Rejoycing of the well-beloved. The Ceremony of the Wedding was performed with a great deal of Decency, the young People of both Sexes not being promiscuously together. They were in distinct Apartments, and ate at different Tables, diverting themselves, young Women with young Women, and young Men with young Men. The Reservedness of the Eastern People towards their Women required this. We see Proofs of this in the Story of the Marriage of Samson, in that of Esther, and in the Canticles. The young Men diverted themselves sometimes in proposing Riddles to each other, and the Bridegroom appointed the Prize to those that could explain them.

The Story of Samson is well known, and the Riddle that he proposed to the young Philistines, who accompanied him at his Wedding.

The Wedding Ceremonies commonly held seven Days for a Maid, and three Days for a Widow. When Jacob espoused Rachel, and Laban put Leah in her Room; Jacob complaining of it, Laban told him, that it was not the Fashion in that Countrey to marry the younger Daughters before the Elder; and that he did not refuse to give him Rachel also, after he had passed with Leah the seven Days of her Marriage. Fulfil her [Gen. xix. 27. Judg. xiv. 17, 18. Tob. xi. 19.] Week, and we will give thee this also. The Ceremonies of Samson's Wedding continued also seven whole Days, as also that of Tobias. The Rabbins acquaint us that the Term of seven Days was of indispensable Obligation to all married Men; and that they were to allow seven Days for the Marriage of every Wife they took, though they should marry several the same Day. In this Case they made made so many wedding Weeks successively as they married Wives. These seven Days of Rejoycing were commonly spent in the House of the Woman's Father, after which they conducted the Bride home to her Husband's House with great Solemnity.

This Part of the Ceremony was generally performed with great Pomp, according to the Condition and Circumstances of the married Couple; and for this they often chose the Night. And from hence it comes, that in the Parable of the ten Virgins that went to meet the Bride and Bridegroom, it is said that the Virgins were asleep; and at [Matth. xv. 1, &c.] Midnight being awaked at the Cry of the Bridegrooms coming, the foolish Virgins found that they had no Oil to supply their Lamps; which while they went to the Shops to buy, the Bridegroom and his Attendants passed by, and at their Return they found themselves shut out from the Marriage Feast. We read in the Book of 1 Macc. ix. 37. Maccabees, that the Children of Jambri having made a magnificent Wedding at Medaba or Nadabatha, a City beyond Jordan, as they were bringing the Bride along with great Solemnity to the Dwelling of the Bridegroom, and as the Relations and Friends of the Husband went before her with Instruments of Musick and with Arms, the Maccabees fell upon them and dispersed them.

In the Ceremonies of Marriage, the Hebrews pretend that they chiefly imitate what was done at Tobias's Wedding, which they justly look upon as a Model of a regular and happy Marriage. However the Ceremonies we have described are different enough from what was then practised. First Raguel consents that Tobias shall have his Daughter, and at the same Time puts Tobias's Hands into those of his Daughter Sara, and gives them his Blessing. This is the essential Ceremony of the Marriage. After this Raguel calls for Paper, writes the Contract, and has it signed by the Witnesses. Then the Feast begins, which is kept for a [Tob x. 7.] whole Fortnight; though according to the Rules mentioned by the Rabbins, they ought to have held but three Days, because Sara was the Widow of several Husbands.

When the married Couple and their Relations are come into the House, they sit down at Table, and the Bridegroom begins to sing, as musically as he can[7], a long Blessing in Hebrew. After Supper the most honourable Person in the Company takes the Bridegroom by the Hand, and the rest all round, and begin to dance together. The Women likewise do the same, but separately from the Men. This Dancing is of a very antient Tradition among them; they call it the Dance of the Commandment, pretending that God himself commanded it, in the Ceremony of Marriage.

The leading the Bride into the Marriage Chamber, is, in the Opinion of the Rabbins[8], what compleats the Marrirge. For neither the Blessing, nor the other Ceremonies before it, are thought to give to this Rite its whole Perfection. The Woman has then the Name of a compleat Bride, as soon as she is entered into this Chamber, even though the Marriage had not been yet consummated. As it happens when the Woman is under the Inconveniencies attending her Sex, at which Time it is unlawful for the Man to come near her, under Pain of [Lev. xx. 18.] Death. Before the leading of the Bride into the Marriage-Chamber, they rehearse this Blessing, in the Presence of ten Persons of Age sufficient and free. Be thou blessed, O Lord our God, King of the World, who hast created all Things for thy Glory. Be thou blessed, O Lord our God, Creator of Man. Be thou blessed, O Lord our God, who hast created Man in thy own Image and Likeness, and hast provided him a Companion for ever. Be thou blessed, O Lord our God, Creator of Man. She that was barren shall rejoice, in gathering her Children into her Bosom. Be thou blessed, O Lord our God, who makest Sion rejoice in the Multitude of its Children. Replenish with Joy these two Spouses, as thou didst replenish Man and Woman in the Garden of Eden. Be thou blessed, O Lord our God, who heapest Pleasure upon the Bridegroom and Bride, and hast prepared for them Joy, Songs, Gladness, Dancing, Love, Friendship, Peace, and brotherly Kindness. Grant, O Lord, as soon as may be, that in the Cities of Judah and in the Places of Jerusalem may be heard Songs of Joy, the Voice of the Bridegroom and the Voice of the Bride, the Voice of the mutual Love of Spouses, and the Voice of singing Children. Be thou blessed, O Lord our God, who replenishest with Joy the Bridegroom and the Bride.

[Mat. v. 32. Luke xvi. 18.] As to the Marriage of Christians, Christ has restored it to its first Perfection, by banishing Polygamy intirely, and not suffering Divorce but in the Case of Adultery; nor leaving to the Parties so separated, the Liberty of marrying again. And this is very different from what the Law allowed. Our [John ii. 1, 2.] Saviour has blessed and sanctified Marriage, by being present himself at the Wedding of Cana. Saint Paul declares the Excellence of [Eph. v. 33.] a Christian Marriage, when he says, Let every one of you in Particular so love his Wife, even as himself, and the Wife see that she Reverence her Husband. And a little above, So ought Men to love their Wives, as their own Bodies; he that loveth his Wife, loveth himself. For this Cause shall a Man leave his Father and Mother, and shall be joined unto his Wife, and they two shall be one Flesh. This is a great Mystery; but I speak concerning Christ and the Church. The Union of Husband and Wife is a Mystery, which represents the Union, the sacred and spiritual Marriage of Christ with his Church. The same Apostle, assures us, that Marriage is honourable in all, and the [Heb. xiii. 4.] Bed undefiled; but Whoremongers and Adulterers God will judge. The sacred Books of the New Testament prescribe no particular Ceremony for the solemnizing of Matrimony; but it is certain that in the Church a Blessing has always been given to the married Couple[9], and that to raise Marriage to the Dignity of one of the Sacraments of the Church , it ought to be celebrated in the Name of Jesus Christ, and with religious Ceremonies, which have varied according to Circumstances of Time and Place. We may see by Tertullian[10], that they put a Veil over the married Couple, and that in Imitation of Tobias and Sara, they gave each other their Hands. Saint Ambrose says[11], that Marriage ought to be sanctified by the Veil, and by the Blessing of the Priest. Saint Ignatius the Martyr[12] would have Marriages be contracted by the Advice of the Bishop, that they may be according to God, and not according to the Flesh. And Tertullian[13] commends those Marriages that the Church unites, the Offering of the Sacrifice confirms, of which the Angels declare the Accomplishment to God, and God himself ratifies. Unde sufficiam ad enarrandam felicitatem ejus Matrimonii, quod Ecclesia conciliat, & confirmat oblatio, & obsignatum Angeli renunciant, Pater ratum habet. The Ceremony of Espousals is very antient, as may be seen by several Councils[14], and by Saint Austin[15]; Institutum est ut jam pactæ sponsæ non tradantur statim ne vilem habeat maritus datam, quam non suspiravit sponsus dilatam. Heretofore in several Churches the married People communicated the Day of their Marriage, and abstained that Night from the Use of the Marriage-Bed[16]. Sponsus & sponsa cùm benedicendi sunt à Sacerdote, à parentibus suis, vel paranymphis offerantur; qui cùm benedictionem acceperint, eadem nocte, pro reverentia ipsius benedictionis, in virginitate permaneant. This Practice is still in Use in some Places, as I am informed.

Martha

MARTHA, Sister of Lazarus and Mary, and Mistress of the House where our Saviour was used to be entertained, in the Village of Bethany. We have already spoke of her under the Article LAZARUS, and shall speak of her again under the Article MARY. Martha is always named before Mary, which makes it probable that she was the elder Sister. Once as our Saviour came to lodge with Martha and Mary, Martha was very busy in preparing Supper, whilst Mary sat at our Saviour's Feet, hearing his Doctrine with great Assiduity and [Luke x. 38, 42.] Attention. Martha complained of this to our Saviour, desiring him to bid Mary rise and assist her. But Jesus made Answer, Martha, Martha, you are very busy and in much Trouble to provide indifferent or unnecessary Things; there is but one Thing necessary, and Mary has chosen the better Part, which shall not be taken from her.

Some Time after Lazarus falling sick[1], the two Sisters sent Word of it to Jesus, [John xi. 11, 45.] who was then beyond Jordan. He made no Hast to go to heal him, nor departed from thence till he knew Lazarus was dead. Being come almost to Bethany, Martha knowing of his coming, went out to meet him. As soon as she saw him, she said to him, Lord, if thou hadst been here, my Brother had not died. Jesus answered, thy Brother shall rise again. To this Martha replied, I know that he shall rise again at the last Day. But Jesus told her, I am the Resurrection and the Life, he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live; and whoever liveth and believeth in me, shall never die. Believest thou this? Yea, Lord, answered she, I believe that thou art the Christ, the Son of God, which should come into the World. Having said this, she went away, and gave her Sister private Notice that Jesus was come. Mary, without saying any Thing to those about her, rose, and went to Jesus. She said to him as Martha had done before, that if he had been here, Lazarus had not died. Jesus bid them bring him to Lazarus's Tomb, where he raised him from the dead, as has been said already.

Six Days before his Passion, Jesus being come to Bethany for the Feast of the Passover, was invited to eat by a certain [John xii. 1, 2, 3, &c. Matth. xxvi. 6, &c. Mark. xiv. 3, &c.] Pharisee, called Simon the Leper. Martha waited, Lazarus was one of the Guests, and Mary poured a Box of precious Perfumes upon the Head and Feet of Jesus. And this is all that the Scripture informs us of concerning Martha. The ancient Latins and Modern Greeks maintain, that she died at Jerusalem, as also Mary and Lazarus, and that they were all buried there. Several ancient Martyrologies put their Feast on the 19th of January. Others put it on the 17th of December[2]. The Latins now place it on July 29. Some very uncertain Writings pretend, that Martha, Lazarus, Mary, and Marcella their Servant, being put Aboard a very leaky and shattered Vessel, arrived safely at Marseilles[3], from whence Martha retired to Tarascon in Provence, where her Body (they say) was found, in 1187.

Mary (I)

I. MARY, the Mother of our Saviour Christ, and a Virgin at the same Time, Daughter of Joachim, and of Anna, of the Tribe of Judah, married to Joseph of the same Tribe. The Scripture tells us nothing of her Parents, not so much as their Names, unless Heli mentioned by Saint Luke be the [Luke iii. 23.] same as Joachim. All that is said concerning the Birth of Mary, and of her Parents, is only to be found in some apocryphal Writings, but which however are very ancient, as we have shewn before under the Article JOACHIM, and still more at large in our Dissertation, where we endeavour to reconcile Saint Matthew with Saint Luke, in the Business of our Saviour's Genealogy. Mary was of the Royal Race of David, as also Joseph her Husband; and she was also a-kin to the Race of Aaron, since Elizabeth, the [Luke i. 5, 36.] Wife of Zacharias was her Cousin.

Mary very early made a Vow of Chastity, and engaged her self to a perpetual Virginity. The Apocryphal Books[1] tell us, that she was consecrated to the Lord, and offered in the Temple, from her [Luke i. 34.] earliest Youth, and that the Priests gave her Joseph for a Spouse, who was an holy and venerable old Man, whom Providence appointed for this Purpose by a Miracle, the Rod which he commonly carried having grown green and flourished, as Aaron's did formerly. He espoused Mary, not to live with her in the ordinary Use of Marriage, and to have Children by her, but only that he might be the Guardian of her Virginity. Though these Circumstances are not to be relied on as certain, yet however Mary's Resolution of Continency, even in a married State, cannot be called in Question, since her Virginity is attested by the Gospel, and that her self, speaking to the Angel, who declared to her that she should become the Mother of a Son, told him that she knew not a Man; or that she lived in Continency with her Husband. For which Reason when Joseph perceived her Pregnancy, he was extremely surprized and scandalized at it, and resolved to put her away, yet without Noise, and without observing the common Formalities. For he knew the mutual Resolution they had agreed to, of living in Continence though in a State of Marriage.

[Luke i. 26, 27, &c.] The Virgin Mary then being espoused[2], or, if you will, married to Joseph, the Angel Gabriel appeared to her to acquaint her, that she should become the Mother of the Messias. Mary asked him how this could be, since she knew no Man? To which the Angel replied, that the Holy Ghost should come upon her, and the Power of the highest should overshadow her, so that she should conceive without the Concurrence of any Man. And to confirm what he had said to her, and to shew that nothing is impossible to God, he added, that her Cousin Elizabeth, who was both old and barren, was then in the the sixth Month of her Pregnancy. Mary answered him, Behold the Hand-maid of the Lord, be it unto me according to thy Word. And presently she conceived, by the miraculous Operation of the Holy Ghost, the Son of God, the true Emmanuel, that is to say, God with us. A little while after she set out for Hebron, a City in the Mountains of Judah, to visit her Cousin Elizabeth. As soon as ever Elizabeth had heard the Voice of Mary saluting her, her Child, young John the Baptist, leaped in her Womb, she was filled with the Holy Ghost, and cried out: Blessed art thou among Women, and blessed is the Fruit of thy Womb. And whence is this to me, that the Mother of my Lord should come to me? For lo, as soon as the Voice of thy Salutation sounded in mine Ears, the Babe leaped in my Womb for Joy. And blessed is she that believed, for there shall be a Performance of those Things which were told her from the Lord. Then Mary filled with Acknowledgment and supernatural Light, praised God saying. My Soul doth magnifie the Lord, and my Spirit hath rejoyced in God my Saviour. And the rest, as it is in the Hymn called Magnificat.

Mary continued with Elizabeth about three Months, and then returned to her own House. When she was ready to lie in, an Edict was published by Cæsar Augustus[3], which decreed, that all the Subjects of the Empire should go to their own Cities, there to have their Names registered according to their Families. Thus Joseph and Mary, who were both of the Lineage of David, betook themselves to the City of Bethlehem, from whence was the Original of their Family. But while they were in this Place, the Time being fulfilled in which Mary was to be delivered, she brought forth her First-born Son. She wrapped him in Swadling-Cloths, and laid him in the Manger of the Stable or Cavern whither they had retired; for they could find no Place in the publick Inn, because of the great Concourse of People that were then at Bethlehem on the same Occasion. Or they were forced to withdraw into the Stable of the Inn, not being able to get a more convenient Lodging, because of the Multitude of People then at Bethlehem. The Greek Fathers[4] generally agree, that the Place of Jesus Christ's Birth was a Cavern. Justin[5] and Eusebius[6] place it out of the City, but in the Neighbourhood; and Saint Jerom[7] says it was at the Extremity of the City towards the South. 'Tis commonly believed, that the Virgin brought forth Jesus the Night after their Arrival at Bethlehem, or on the 25th of December. Such is the ancient Tradition of the Church. I shall not here mention the pretended Miracles related in the false Gospel of our Saviour's Infancy, otherwise called the Gospel of Saint Thomas. Such Sort of Books deserve nothing but the utmost Contempt. The Fathers inform us, that Jesus Christ came out of his Mother's Womb, without so much as breaking the Seal of her Virginity, that she brought him forth without Pain, and without the Assistance of any Midwife; because she had conceived him without Concupiscence, and that neither she, nor the Fruit she brought forth, had any Share in the Curse pronounced against Adam and Eve.

At the same Time the Angels made it known to the Shepherds, who were in the Fields near Bethlehem, and who came in the Night to see Mary and Joseph, and the Child lying in the Manger, and to pay him their Tribute of Adoration. Mary took Notice of all these Things, and laid them up in [Luke ii. 19. Matth. ii. 8, 9, 10; 11, &c.] her Heart. A few Days after the Magi or Wise-Men came from the East, and brought to Jesus the mysterious Presents of Gold, Frankincense, and Myrrhe; after which being warned by an Angel that appeared to 'em in a Dream, they returned into their own Countrey, by a Way different from that by which they came. But the Time of Mary's Purification being come, that is, forty Days after the Birth of Jesus, Mary [Luke ii. 21.] went to Jerusalem, there to present her Son in the Temple, and there to offer the Sacrifice appointed by the Law, for the Purification of Women after Child-birth. There was then at Jerusalem an old Man named Simeon, who was full of the Holy Ghost, and who had received a secret Assurance that he should not die, before he had seen Christ the Lord. He came then into the Temple by the Influence of the Spirit of God, and taking the little Jesus within his Arms, he blessed the Lord; and then addressing himself to Mary, he said to her, " That this Child should be " for the Rising, and Falling of many in " Israel, and for a Sign which shall be " spoken against. Even so far as that thy " own Soul shall be pierced as with a " Sword, that the secret Thoughts in the " Hearts of many may be discovered.

Afterwards when Joseph and Mary were preparing to return to their own Countrey [Matth. ii. 13. 14.] of Nazareth, the Angel of the Lord appeared to Joseph in a Dream, bidding him retire into Egypt with Mary and the Child, because Herod had a Design to destroy Jesus. Joseph obeys the Admonition, and continued in Egypt till after the Death of Herod. The ancient Tradition of the Orientals is, that Joseph and the Virgin made their Abode at Hermopolis; and between Cairo and Heliopolis they still shew a Fountain and a Garden of Balm, in a Place called Matara, where they pretend that the holy Virgin made a Stop, and washed her Sons Linnen in the Fountain. This Place is even now in great Veneration in Egypt. After the Death of Herod, Joseph and Mary returned to Nazareth, not daring to go to Bethlehem, because it was in the Jurisdiction of *Archela*üs, the Son and Successor of Herod the Great.

Mary and Joseph went every Year to [Luke ii. 41, 42, &c.] Jerusalem to the Feast of the Passover; and when Jesus was twelve Years of Age, they brought him along with them. When the Days of the Festival were ended, they were upon their Return, but the Child Jesus continued at Jerusalem, without their perceiving it; and thinking he might be with some of the Company, they went on a Day's Journey. Then not finding him among their Acquaintance, they returned to Jerusalem to seek after him. Three Days after they found him in the Temple, sitting among the Doctors, hearing them and asking them Questions. When they saw him they were filled with Astonishment; and Mary said to him, my Son why have you served us thus? See here your Father and my self, who have sought you in much Affliction. Jesus answered them, Why did you seek me? Did not you know that I must be employed about my Father's Business? Afterwards he returned with them to Nazareth, and lived in filial Submission to 'em. But his Mother laid up all these Things in her Heart. The Gospel speaks [John ii. 1, 2, 3, &c.] nothing more of the Virgin Mary, till the Marriage of Cana of Galilee, at which she was present with her Son Jesus.

'Twas in the thirty third of Jesus Christ, and the thirtieth of the Vulgar Æra, that our Saviour resolving to manifest himself to the World, went to the Baptism of Saint John, from thence into the Wilderness, and then to the Wedding at Cana of Galilee, where he had been invited with his Mother and his Disciples. The Wine beginning to fail, Mary said to Jesus, they have no Wine; to which Jesus answered; " Woman, what have I to do with thee? " Mine Hour is not yet come." Saint Chrysostome[8], and those that have been used to follow him in his Explications, believe that on this Occasion the holy Virgin had some Motive of Vanity, and was tempted with a Desire of seeing her own Credit raised by the Miracles of her Son. And this is what made our Saviour give her this Answer, which seems indeed something harsh. But the other Fathers and Commentators impute what was said by the holy Virgin, to her Charity, and her Compassion towards these poor People; and the Answer of our Saviour they impute, not to Jesus as Man, but to Jesus as God[9]. In this Respect he says to Mary, What have I to do with thee? I know when I ought to shew forth my Power, nor does it belong to you to appoint me the Time of working Miracles.

But there were in the Room six great Stone Pitchers. Jesus ordered them to be filled brim full of Water, and afterwards bid the Servants fill out, and carry to the Master of the House. The Master tasted of it, and found it was excellent Wine: And this is the first publick Miracle that he did, at the Beginning of his Preaching. After this he went to Capernaum with his Mother and his Brethren, that is, with his Parents and his Disciples; and this seems to be the Place where the holy Virgin afterwards chiefly resided[10]. However Saint Epiphanius[11] thinks, that she followed him every where, during the whole Time of his Preaching; though we do not find that the Evangelists make any Mention of her, when they speak of the holy Women that followed him, and ministered to his Necessities. One Day as Jesus Christ was in the House at Capernaum, there was so great a Crowd of People about him, that neither he nor his Disciples had so much Time as to eat[12]. This caused a Report that he had fainted away. The Words in Greek[13] might insinuate, that he was become mad, or had lost his Understanding. And the Vulgate reads it, Dicebant enim quoniam in furorem versus est. The Mother of Jesus and his Brethren were at Hand, to take him out of the Crowd. 'Twas not they, without doubt, that made so wrong a Judgment of Jesus, but the ignorant People, or the Pharisees, who said in the same Place, that he was possessed of the Devil. The Virgin, the Brethren, or the Parents of Jesus came then to see what had given Occasion to the spreading of this Report. Jesus being informed of their coming, and that they wanted to speak with him, made this Reply; Who is my Mother, and who are my Brethren? And looking upon those that were round about him, he said; These are my Mother, and my Brethren. For whoever does the Will of God, he is my Mother, my Sister, and my Brother.

The Virgin was at Jerusalem, at the last Passover that our Saviour celebrated[14] [Acts i. 14.] there[15]. There she saw all that was transacted against him, she followed him to Calvary, she staid at the Foot of his Cross, with a Constancy and Courage worthy of the Mother of God. There Jesus seeing his Mother, and his beloved Disciple near her, he said to his Mother, Woman behold thy Son, and to the Disciple, Behold thy Mother. And from that Hour the Disciple took her home to his own House. It is not to be doubted but that our Saviour appeared to his holy Mother immediately after his Resurrection, and that she was the first, or at least one of the first, to whom he vouchsafed this great Consolation. She was with the Apostles at his Ascension, and continued with 'em at Jerusalem, expecting the coming of the Holy Ghost. After this she dwelt in the House of Saint John the Evangelist, who took Care of her as of his own Mother z. 'Tis thought that he took her along with him to Ephesus, where she died in an extream old Age[16]. There is a Letter of the Oecumenical Council of Ephesus[17], importing, that in the fifth Century it was believed she was buried there.

Yet this Opinion was not so universal, but that there are Authors of the same Age, who think the Virgin Mary died and was buried at Jerusalem. The Emperor Marcian and Pulcheria being anxious to find the Body of the holy Virgin, to put it in the Church called Blachernus at Constantinople[18], applied themselves to Juvenal, then Bishop of Jerusalem, who told them that her Sepulcher was at Gethsemani near to Jerusalem; which Sepulcher Marcian ordered to be transported to Constantinople. 'Tis added, that the Figure of the Body of the Virgin was engraved upon the Stone, and that this was not the Work of any Man's Hand. From this Time they have continued to shew the Virgin's Tomb at Gethsemani, in a magnificent Church dedicated to her Name[19]; and there it is shewn still to this Day. 'Tis said[20], that the Apostles being dispersed in different Parts of the World, to labour in the preaching of the Gospel, all on a sudden they were miraculously transported to Jerusalem, that they might be present at the Decease of the blessed Virgin. After her Death, they buried her Body in the Valley of Gethsemani, where for three whole Days were heard Concerts of heavenly Singers. At the End of three Days, when this Concert ceased, and when Saint Thomas arrived at Jerusalem, who had not assisted at the Virgin's Burial, and yet was desirous to see the holy Corpse, the Apostles opened her Tomb again: But not finding the Body there, they judged that God was pleased to honour it with Immortality by an anticipated Resurrection, which should go before that of all other Men. But it must not be dissembled, that these Sorts of Traditions are very uncertain, to say no worse of 'em.

[Luke ii. 35.] Some[21] have believed, that the holy Virgin finished her Life by Martyrdom, grounding themselves upon those Words of old Simeon, A Sword shall pierce through thy own Soul also. But this is generally explained by the Affliction she should undergo, at the Sight of her Son's Crucifixion, there being no History that mentions any Thing of her Martyrdom. Saint Epiphanius[22] declares, that he could not affirm whether she died or continued immortal, whether she was buried or not. That in a Word, no one knew what was her End, but he doubted not if she died, she had had a happy Death. The Sentiments of the Church at this Day are, that she is dead; but they are divided as to her rising again, or whether she stays for the general Resurrection, either at Ephesus, or at Jerusalem, or in any other Place. Upon this Subject may be seen Florentius in his Notes upon the ancient Martyrology of Saint Jerome, Baronius upon the 48th Year of Christ, F. Thomassin in his Treatise of the Feasts, M. Joli, Chanter and Canon of Notre-dame at Paris, in his Dissertations upon Usuard, M. de Tillemont Hist. Eccles. T. i. Notes 13, 14, 15, 16, 17. on the holy Virgin.

As to the Age at which she died; and the precise Year of her Death, 'tis needless to trouble our selves with this Enquiry, since nothing can be said on these Matters but what is very doubtful; and they cannot be fixed but at Random. Nicephorus Calistus, and those that have followed him, give no Proof of what they advance on this Subject, and deserve no Credit as to their own Parts. Nor shall I speak of the Description of the holy Virgin, given us by the same Author[23], saying that she was of a moderate Stature, or according to some, a little below the ordinary Stature of Women: That her Complexion was of the Colour of Wheat, her Hair fair, her Eyes lively, the Eyeball yellowish, or Olive-Colour, her Eyebrows black and Semicircular;[24] her Nose pretty long, her Lips red, her Hands and Fingers large, her Air grave, simple, and modest, her Clothes neat, without any Pride or Ostentation, and of the natural Colour of the Wool. It has been pretended, that Saint Luke had drawn her Picture, and in several Places they shew Pictures of her, which they affirm to be Copies from Saint Luke's Original. But the Antients have no where informed us, that Saint Luke was a Painter, or that he had painted the holy Virgin. Nicephorus Callistus[25], an Author of the fourteenth Century, is the first that has spoke of this in a positive Manner. But Theodorus[26], Lecturer of the Church of Constantinople, who lived in the sixth Century, says that Eudotia sent from Jerusalem to Constantinople, to the Empress Pulcheria, a Picture of the holy Virgin painted by Saint Luke. Certain it is that this holy Evangelist has acquainted us with some Particulars of the Life of the holy Virgin, that could hardly be learned from any one but her self; which may incline us to believe, that he had the Happiness of her Acquaintance, and a good Share of her Confidence.

There are shewn some Letters of the Virgin Mary to Saint Ignatius the Martyr, and from Saint Ignatius to the Virgin Mary. Saint Bernard[27] believed them to be genuine, but now there is no one doubts but that they are spurious. The same Judgment is made of the pretended Letters of the Virgin to the People of Messina, and to those of Florence, which they pretend she writ from Jerusalem in Hebrew, but were translated by Saint Paul into Greek, at least that to the Messenians, and which Constantine Lascaris turned into Latin. I shall not here enter into any Discussion of the Worship, or of the Feasts of the Virgin, of the Times in which they were instituted, or of the Design proposed by the (Roman) Church herein. This Matter does not properly belong to my Subject, but rather to those that compile the Lives of the Saints.

The Jews, the professed Enemies of our Saviour, have vented many Falsities against her, in their Book called Toledos Jesu[28], or the Life of Jesus Christ.

They pretend that Mary was a Milliner, and married to one named Johanan; that she suffered her self to be corrupted by one called Panderus, who had a Son by her called Joshua, or Jesus; that Panderus, or Pantherus, withdrawing to Babylon, Mary was forced to keep her Son. Akiba took a Journey to Nazareth, on Purpose to inform himself concerning the Birth of Jesus, who from his Childhood distinguished himself at School. He found from Mary her self, that she had been guilty of Adultery. At his Return Jesus was seized, was shaved, and his Head was washed with a Water, which prevented the Hair from growing again. Hence it is that his Disciples shave their Heads. He would insinuate by this, the Custom that has obtained among Priests and other religious Persons, of receiving the Tonsure. They add, that at Mary's Death they set up a stately Monument for her at Jerusalem, with an Inscription upon it, which cost the Lives of an hundred Christians of Jesus's Relations, who had distinguished themselves on this Occasion. These are the Fables which the Jews have propagated concerning the Virgin Mary.

The Mahometans[29] on the contrary entertain great Sentiments of Respect and Esteem for her, which one would hardly believe of People so far out of the Way of Truth and Salvation. But they do not confine themselves within the Limits of Truth and Sobriety; for they add many fabulous Stories to what we otherwise know concerning Mary. They say, for Example, that Ann the Mother of Mary, and Wife of Amram, being with Child of her, made a Vow to the Lord of whatever Child should be born, whether it should be Male or Female. That God gave the Name of Mary to the Child; that Ann gave the Child to keep to Zacharias the Priest, who shut her up in one of the Chambers of the Temple, the Door of which was so high, that they went up to it by a Ladder, and he always carried the Key about him.

Zacharias made her frequent Visits, and whenever he came he always found about her all the most exquisite Fruits of Palestine, and such as were most out of Season. This put him upon enquiring how she came by such fine Fruits. To which Mary answered; Whatever you see here comes from God, who provides for those that please him all good Things, without Measure or Number.

As to the Purity of the holy Virgin, in her Birth, and in the Conception of the Word, and as to her Virginity both before and after her bringing-forth, they speak in such a Manner as might well be a Shame to many Christians. They say that the Angel Gabriel was sent to Mary, to declare to her the Birth of Jesus Christ. He said to her, O Mary, thou art elected, purified, and in a most particular Manner chosen from among all the Women of the World. O Mary, submit your self to the Lord, prostrate your self, and adore him, with all the Creatures that worship him. I am come to tell you a great Secret. God declares his Word to you, whose Name shall be Christ, or Jesus the Messiah, who shall be your Son, most worthy of Respect both in this and the other World.

Abulfarage writes in his Dynasties, that it was a Tradition among the Oriental Christians, that the holy Virgin was but thirteen Years of Age when she brought forth Jesus Christ, and that she lived but to be fifty one. Some Mussulmen falsly impute to the Christians, that they acknowledge the Virgin Mary as the third Person of the Holy Trinity; which Mistake proceeds from hence, that the Christians of the East give her the Name of Al-seidai, which signifies the Lady; and among the Greek Fathers Saint Cyril has called her, The Supplement or Completion of the most holy Trinity; but others among the Mahometans vindicate us from this Calumny.

Mary (II)

II. MARY, whose Relicks are preserved at Veroli in Campania di Roma, was the Mother of James and John. She was not called Mary, but Salome; though they commonly give her also the Name of Mary, the Mother of James and John. But Saint Matthew only calls her the Mother of the Sons of Zebedee; and Saint Mark xv. 40. calls her Salome. She was therefore Wife to Zebedee, and Mother to Saint James and Saint John. This M. Tillemont hath observed before me, and has been confirmed to me by Mr. Nicholas Aloysius, by a Letter wrote to me from Rome, in the Month of January 1726, wherein he says he had examined into the Bottom of this Affair, having perused all the Monuments of the Church of Veroli.

Mary (III)

III. MARY, Mother of John Mark, a Disciple of the Apostles. She had a House in Jerusalem, whither it is thought the Apostles retired, after the Ascension of our Lord[1], and where they received the Holy Ghost. This House was upon Mount Sion. Saint Epiphanius[2] says, that it escaped the intire Destruction of Jerusalem by Titus, and that it was changed into a very famous Church, which endured for several Ages[3]. After the Imprisonment of Saint Peter, the [Acts xii. 5, 6.] Faithful assembled in this House, there praying instantly; when Peter delivered by the Ministry of an Angel, knocked at the Door of the House. There is nothing particular known of the Life of Mary, the Mother of John Mark. See JOHN MARK before.

Mary of Cleophas (IV)

IV. MARY of Cleophas. Saint Jerome[1] says, she bore the Name of Cleophas, either [Matth. xxvii. 56. Mark xv. 40, 41. Luke xxiv. 10. John xix. 25.] because of her Father, or because of her Family, or for some other Reason not known[2]. Others believe with greater Probability, that she was Wife of Cleophas, and Mother of Saint James the Lesser, and of Saint Simon, Brethren of our Lord. These latter Authors take Mary, Mother of James, and Mary, Wife of Cleophas, to be the same Person. Saint John gives her the Name of Mary, Wife of Cleophas, and the other Evangelists the Name of Mary, Mother of James. Cleophas and Alpheus are the same Person, as James Son of Mary, Wife of Cleophas, is the same as James Son of Alpheus[3]. In the Hebrew Tongue Alpheus and Cleophas differ only in the Manner in which the Greeks have written and pronounced these two Names. Cleophas may be derived from the Hebrew Cheleph, which signifies to change; as much as to say, inconstant, or given to change: Or from the City of Cheleph or Heleph, mentioned in Joshua xix. 31. and which was a frontier Town of Naphtali in Galilee. Cleophas or Alpheus, may be originally of this City.

[Matth. xiii. 55. and xxvii. 56. Mark vi. 3. John xix. 25. Luke xxiii. 56. Luke xxiv. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5. Matth. xxviii. 9.] But to return to Mary Wife of Cleophas, we know but very few of the Particulars of her Life. 'Tis thought she was the Sister of the holy Virgin, and that she was the Mother of James the Less, of Joses, of Simeon, and of Judas, which in the Gospel are named the Brethren of Jesus Christ, that is, his Cousin-Germans. She believed early on Jesus Christ, and kept him Company in his Journeys, to minister to him. She was present at the last Passover, and at the Death of our Saviour she followed him to Calvary, and during his Passion she was with the Virgin at the Foot of his Cross. She was also present at his Burial, and on the Friday before had prepared the Perfumes to embalm him. But going to his Tomb on Sunday very early in the Morning, with some other Women, they there learned from the Mouth of an Angel that he was risen, of which they carried the News to the Apostles. By the Way Jesus appeared to them, and they embraced his Feet, worshipping him. The Year of the Death of Mary the Wife of Cleophas is not known, but the Greeks keep the eighth of April in Memory of the holy Women, that brought Perfumes to embalm the Body of Christ[4], and pretend to have their Bodies at Constantinople in a Church of the holy Virgin, built by Justin II. The Roman Martyrology marks the Festival of St. Mary the Wife of Cleophas the ninth of April, and it puts the Translation of her Body into the City of Veroli near Rome, on the twenty fifth of May. Others pretend she is in a little City of Provence called The three Marys, on the Banks of the Rhone and of the Sea.

Mary Salome (V)

V. MARY SALOME, Daughter of Mary the Wife of Cleophas, of whom we spoke just now, and Sister of James the Less, and of the others which in Scripture are called the Brethren of our Lord. She was Cousin-German to Jesus Christ according to the Flesh, and Niece to the holy Virgin. She was properly called Salome, and 'tis without any Reason that she has obtained the Name of Mary, which belongs to her Mother.

Others pretend that Salome was the Daughter of Joseph, the Husband of the Virgin Mary; and this is the Opinion of the modern Greeks, founded upon the Testimony of Epiphanius[1]. See SALOME.

The Roman Martyrology gives the Name of Mary Salome to the Mother of St. James the Less. 'Tis not known what Grounds they had for this, for it cannot be found in Scripture, or in any good Author, that she was called Mary, but was certainly called Salome. Compare Matth. xxvii. 56. with Mark xv. 40. And see Origen upon St. Matthew, p. 206. c. and the other Interpreters. See the Article of SALOME afterwards.

Mary (VI)

VI. MARY, a Christian Woman mentioned by St. Paul, in his Epistle to the Romans, Ch. xvi. □ 6. and of whom he says, that she laboured much for the Faith, and for the Church at Rome. Mary (VII)

VII. MARY, Sister of Lazarus, who has been so preposterously confounded with that She-sinner, mentioned by St. Luke, vii. 37, 39. whose Name is not taken Notice of, but was probably Mary Magdalen, of whom we shall speak presently. Mary the Sister of Martha and of Lazarus, lived with her Brother and Sister at Bethany, a Village near to Jerusalem[1]. Jesus Christ had a particular Affection for this Family, and 'tis plain by the Gospel, that he often retired to their House with his Disciples. One Day, and perhaps the first Time that Jesus went thither[2], Martha having received him with much Affection, and thinking to make very much of him, Mary her Sister remained at our Saviour's Feet, hearing his Words with great Attention. Wherefore Martha said to Jesus, Do you not observe, Lord, that my Sister leaves me [John xi. 45.] to minister alone? Bid her come to help me; from whence Jesus took Occasion to justify Mary, saying, that Mary had chosen the better Part, which should not be taken from her.

[John xii. 1, 2, 3, &c.] Some Time after[3] their Brother Lazarus fell sick, and his Sisters acquainted Jesus with it; but he did not come till after Lazarus was dead. He arrived at Bethany, and presently Martha came to him, and told him, that if he had not been absent, Lazarus would not have died. Jesus promised her that he should rise again. Then he sent to acquaint Mary with his being there, who immediately came to him, making the same Complaint as Martha had done. He asked them where they had buried him, they conducted him to the Place; he groaned, he wept, he prayed to his Father, then crying out with a loud Voice, Lazarus come forth. Immediately the dead Man came forth alive, and Jesus restored him to his Sisters. After this he withdrew himself from the Neighbourhood of Jerusalem, and did not return thither till some Days before the Passover. Six Days before this Festival, Jesus came to Bethany with his Disciples, and was invited to Supper at Simon's the Leper. Martha attended, and [Matth. xxvi. 6, &c. Mark xiv. 3 &c.] Lazarus was one of the Guests. Mary taking a Pound of Spikenard, which is the most precious Perfume of any of this Kind, (see SPIKENARD hereafter) she poured it upon the Head and Feet of Jesus. She wiped his Feet with her Hair, and the whole House was filled with the Scent of the Perfume. Judas Iscariot murmured at this, but Jesus undertook Mary's Defence, saying, that by this Action she had prevented his Embalmment, and in some Manner had declared his Death and Burial which were at Hand. From this Time forth the Scripture no longer mentions Martha and Mary, but those who distinguish not between Mary Sister of Martha, and Mary Magdalen, say, that she was present at the Death and Crucifixion of our Saviour, and went to his Sepulchre to embalm him. The Roman Ordinal[4], and one Nicephorus, quoted by M. Cotelier[5], affirm, that Martha and Mary went to our Saviour's Tomb to embalm him; but we find nothing of this in any of the sacred Authors.

The ancient Latins and modern Greeks[6] believe, that Mary and Martha remained at Jerusalem, and died there. Several ancient Martyrologies put their Feast the nineteenth of January. Flodoard[7], who lived in 920, says, that in his Time was to be seen the Body of Magdalen, whom he confounds with Mary the Sister of Lazarus. The Greeks put her Feast on the eighteenth of March, because of the Perfumes that she poured this Day on Jesus Christ. Bardilon, Abbot of Leuze, brought (as it is said) the Body of Mary Magdalen from Jerusalem to Vezelay, about the Year 920, and in the twelfth and thirteenth Centuries they came from all Parts to Vezelay, to pay Honour to her Relicks. But the general Belief at this Day is, and which began as soon as the Year 1254[8], that the Body of Magdalen, so long confounded with Mary the Sister of Lazarus, is in the Church of the Jacobins of St. Maximin, in the Diocese of Aix in Provence; a Tradition whose Original is very uncertain. In this Affair may be consulted F. Alexander a Dominican, in his Dissertation upon Magdalen, Hist. Eccles. T. ii. M. de Tillemont in the second Tome of his Memoirs, p. 30, &c. and in his Notes upon Magdalen, p. 520, &c. Mary Magdalen (VIII)

VIII. MARY MAGDALEN, who has been generally confounded with Mary the Sister of Martha and Lazarus, but very improperly, was probably that Sinner mentioned by St. Luke, Chap. vii. 36, 37, &c. whose Name he does not tell us. But here are some Circumstances sufficient to make one believe, that she is the same whom he calls Mary Magdalen in Chap. viii. □ 2. and from whom he says that Jesus drove out seven Devils. Jesus having healed the Widow's Son of Nain, entered into the City, and there was invited to eat by a Pharisee named Simon. While he was at Table, a Woman of a scandalous Life came into the House, having an Alabaster Box full of perfumed Oil; and standing upright behind Jesus, and at his Feet, for he was lying at Table on a Couch after the Manner of the Ancients, she poured her Perfume on his Feet, kissed them, watered them with her Tears, and wiped them with her Hair. The Pharisee observing this, said within himself; if this Man were a Prophet, he would know who this Woman is that touches him, that she is one of a wicked Life. Then Jesus who knew the Bottom of his Heart, said to him: A Creditor had two Debtors, one of which owed him five hundred Pence, and the other fifty. But they not having wherewith to pay him, he forgave them both their Debts. Which of these two will love him most? Simon answered, I suppose him to whom he had forgiven the greater Sum.

After this Jesus commending all that this Woman had done to him, he adds; Her Sins which are many are forgiven her, because she has loved much[1]; but he to whom little is forgiven will love but little. Then he says to the Woman, Thy Sins are forgiven thee. In the following Chapter Saint Luke tells us, that Jesus in Company with his Apostles, preached the Gospel from City to City; and that there were several Women also, whom he had delivered from evil Spirits, and had cured of their Infirmities, among which was Mary called Magdalene, out of whom went seven Devils. I own that this is no demonstrative Proof, that the Sinner mentioned before was Mary Magdalene; but this is all we can have for the Support of this Opinion. Therefore without venturing to assert that these are one and the same Person, after having mentioned what belongs to this Sinner, I shall proceed to what belongs to Mary Magdalene.

Mary Magdalene took her Surname, either from the Town of Magdala in Galalee, beyond Jordan, and not far from Gamala[2], probably the same mentioned Matth. xv. 39. or from Magdolos[3], a Town situated on this Side Jordan, at the Foot of Mount Carmel, which is the same as Megiddo spoken of Joshua xvii. 11. 2 Kings ix. 27. xxiii. 29. The Rabbins[4] speak of a Mary Magdalene, Wife of Rabbi Papus, Son of Judah, and of another Mary Magdalene, Wife of Hamchuna, the Father of Nazareen[5], who was surnamed Magdala, not because of her Countrey, but because by Profession she was a Tire-Woman or Seamstress; as if it were insinuated by the Term Magdala, which signifies a Tower, that Magdalene in preparing Head-dresses for the Women, built as it were Towers upon their Heads.

Lightfoot[7] believes, that 'tis this Mary Magdalene that St. Luke and the other Evangelists speak of, and whom this Author does not distinguish from Mary the Sister of Lazarus. Magdalene is mentioned by the Evangelists among the Women that followed our Saviour, to minister to him according to the Custom of the Jews. St. Luke viii. 2. and St. Mark xvi. 9. observe, that this Woman had been delivered by Jesus Christ from seven Devils. This some[8] understand in the literal Sence, but[9] others take it figuratively, for the Crimes and Wickedness of her past Life, from which Christ had rescued her. Others[10] maintain, that she had always lived in Virginity, and consequently they make her a different Person from the Sinner mentioned by St. Luke, and by the seven Devils of which she was possessed, they understand no other than a real Possession, which is not inconsistent with a holy Life. She followed Christ in the last Journey that he made from Galilee to Jerusalem, and was at the Foot of the Cross with the holy Virgin. She continued upon Mount Calvary till our [John xix. 25. Mark xv. 47.] Saviour's Death, and saw him put into his Tomb. After which she returned to Jerusalem, to buy and prepare the Perfumes, that she might embalm him after the Sabbath was over, which was then going to begin.

All the Sabbath Day she remained in the City, and the next Day early in the Morning she went to the Sepulchre, along with Mary the Mother of James and Salome. On the Way, they enquired of one another, who should take away the Stone from the Mouth of the Sepulchre, and were sensible of a great Earthquake. This was the Token of our Saviour's Resurrection. Being come to his Tomb, they saw two Angels, who informed them that Jesus was risen. Upon this Mary Magdalene runs immediately to Jerusalem, and acquaints the Apostles with this good News, returning her self to the Sepulchre. Peter and John came also, and were Witnesses that the Body was no longer there. They returned, but Mary stayed, and stooping forward to examine the inside of the Tomb, she there saw two Angels sitting, one at the Head, and the other at the Bottom of the Tomb. They asked her why she wept, to which she replied, They have taken away my Lord, and I know not where they have laid him. At the same Time turning about, she saw Jesus Christ in the Form of a Gardener, who asked her what she looked for. She answered, Sir, if 'tis you that have taken away my Master, let me know [See Matth. xxviii. 5, &c. Mark xvi. 5, &c. John xx. 11, 17.] it, that I may take him away. Jesus says to her, Mary, and immediately she knew him, and cast her self at his Feet, to kiss them. But Jesus said to her, touch me not, for I am not yet ascended to my Father. As if he had said; you shall have Leisure to see me hereafter, go now to my Brethren, my Apostles, and tell 'em, I am going to ascend to my God, and to their God; to my Father, and to their Father. Thus had Mary the Happiness of first seeing our Saviour after his Resurrection.

She returned then to Jerusalem, and told the Apostles that she had seen the Lord, that she had spoke to him, and told them what he had said to her. But at first they did not believe her, till her Report was confirmed by many other Testimonies. This is what the Gospel informs us concerning Mary Magdalene, different from Mary the Sister of Martha, though she has been often called by this Name. For as to the pretended History of Mary Magdalene, which is said to have been written in Hebrew by Marcella, Servant of Martha; this can only relate to Mary Sister of Martha, and besides, is a meer Piece of Forgery. Modestus[11], Archbishop of Constantinople, in the seventh Age says, that Mary Magdalene, from whom Jesus had cast out seven Devils, went to Ephesus after the Death of the Virgin Mary, and abode always with St. John, as long as she lived. This Author says, that there she ended her Life by Martyrdom. Her Acts were then in Being, but now they are no longer to be found. The Commentary upon St. Mark, ascribed to St. Jerom[12], says, that Mary Magdalene was a Widow. Gregory of Tours, as also Modestus, whose Testimony we just now cited, says, that her Tomb was at Ephesus, and had not then been opened. They had still her Relicks in great Reverence there, in 745, when Villebeaud passed that Way. The Greek Annals would insinuate, that she died and was buried there. The Emperor Leo the Wise, who began to reign in 886, caused her Relicks to be brought from Ephesus to Constantinople.a Codinus, who speaks of this Translation, understands it of Mary Sister to Lazarus; but Cedrenus understands it of Magdalene.

Mary (IX)

IX. MARY, Daughter of Eleazar, of a very considerable Family, having retired to Jerusalem with her Husband and Son, as yet an Infant, at the Beginning of the Wars of the Jews with the Romans[1], was there shut up when the Siege of that City was formed. Her Husband having been killed in a Salley, and the Zealots, who committed all Sorts of Outrages in the City with Impunity, having robbed her of all she had, she lived several Days without taking any Sustenance. But at last being overcome by Famine, and transported by Despair, she killed her Son, dressed him, and eat a Part of him. Quickly after the Zealots being drawn that Way by the Savour of this Food, they entered her House, and asked her where the Meat was that she had dressed. She shewed them some of the Limbs of her Child, inviting them to eat, and telling them in an insulting Manner, that they could not be more delicate than a Woman, or more tender than a Mother[2].

Maschil

MASCHIL. This Term is often found in the Titles of the Psalms, and signifies[1] he that instructs, or makes to understand. Some Interpreters think, but without Reason, that it signifies an Instrument of Musick. There is much more Likelihood that it signifies an instructive Song. Some antient Rabbins believe, that in repeating the Psalms which have this Inscription, they always added an Explication to it. Some Fathers[2] think, that the Word intellectus, in Hebrew Maschil, expresses the profound Meaning of the Psalm. But others[3] on the contrary say, that it shews the Clearness and Perspicuity of the Psalm, and that it has no Need of any particular Explication.

Mass

MASS, Missa, this Word is used at this Day in the Church [of Rome] to signifie [what they call] the unbloody Sacrifice of the Body and Blood of our Saviour Jesus Christ, which is offered upon the Altar, under the Species of Bread and Wine. The Word Mass taken in this Sence is not to be found in any Place of Scripture; but it has been used ever since the End of the third Century by the Latin Fathers, and other Ecclesiastical Authors 'Tis in vain to seek its Etymology either in Greek or Hebrew i, as some have done. Missa is derived from Mitto to send. Missa has been used for Missio, and this Word is found in this Sence even in Suetonius, Caligul. c. 25. And as at the Conclusion of the Mass of the Catecumens, that is to say, after the Gospel was read, and after the Sermon; as also after the Sacrifice and the Prayers were ended, the Priest or the Deacon sent the People away, by pronouncing with a loud Voice. Ite, missa est, or Missio est: You may all return home. From thence it came to pass, that the Name of Missa or Missio was given to the whole Action and Ceremony of the Sacrifice. On this Head may be seen Cardinal Baronius, Annal. Eccl. ad An. 34. Massada

MASSADA, a Castle or Fortress in the Tribe of Judah, to the West of the Dead Sea, or the Lake Asphaltites, not far from Engiddi, situated upon a steep Rock, and of very difficult Access. But as soon as one is come to the Top of the Rock, there is found a Plain of a sufficient Extent, which may be even cultivated, and afford Subsistence in a Time of Necessity. Jonathan the Asmonean, Brother of Judas Maccabæus, and High-Priest of the Jews, fortified this Place, to put himself in a Condition of withstanding the Kings of Syria[1]. Herod the Great, observing the Importance of this Fort, fortified it a new, and made the Place impregnable. And as there was no Water in this Place, he caused several Cisterns to be made, and brought thither a vast Quantity of Provisions, that if any Misfotune should happen to him, or if the Countrey should revolt from him, he might there find a secure Place of Retreat.

After the last War of the Jews against the Romans, Eleazar Son of Jair, and Grandson of the famous Judas the Gaulonite, at the Head of the Sicarii, or Assassins, so called from the horrible Cruelties and Impieties they committed, seized the Fort of Massada[2]. Flavius Sylva, whom Titus had left in Judæa, in Order to reduce what yet held out in the Province, there besieged Eleazar. He began by putting Garrisons into all the neighbouring Places, to secure the Countrey, and surrounded the Place with a Wall of Circumvallation, with Bodies of Guards at convenient Distances, that no one might make their Escape. Then he carried on the Siege with great Vigour, and Works that were almost incredible. Eleazar on his Part defended himself very courageously, and seeing that he could hold out no longer against the Roman Army, but that he must be taken in this Place, which he thought to be impregnable; he perceived the Finger of God in this Matter, but too late. For the Hardness of his Heart urged him to Despair, so that he persuaded all the Jews that were with him to kill one another, and the last that survived was to put Fire to the Castle. This Counsel they put in Execution, and voluntarily slew one another. Two Women, who with five young Children had hid themselves in the Aquæducts, the Day following informed the Romans of what had been done. This happened in the Year of Christ, or the common Æra 71. To this may be added the following Observations upon this famous Siege.

[Observations upon the Siege of Massada, and the Works of the Romans before this Place.] The Siege of Massada by the Romans is one of the most remarkable, of which we have any Account in History[3]. The Strength and advantageous Situation of the Place, the Courage and vigorous Defence of the Besieged, the Valour and Capacity of the Roman General, all these together produced surprising Effects, and which have few Examples among the Antients. The Moderns in their most memorable Sieges, that is to say, since the fourteenth Century, have never produced, nor so much as conceived the like. Josephus, who has given us a Description of this famous Siege, furnishes us with Examples of Valour, Stratagems, Surprizes, Patience, and Obstinacy, that are yet more surprizing than any in this; the Defence of Jotapata, and that of Jerusalem, were vastly more to be admired. But as to the Works and other Operations peculiar to War, I cannot find any that surpass them, or even are equal to 'em. It was a Master-piece of Roman Skill and Perseverance. The Jews themselves did not shew less Skill or Courage. They were desperate, 'tis true, but desperate in such a Manner, as to put in Practice all the Subtleties of Art and Ingenuity, in Order to sell their Lives as dear, and to purchase as much Glory with them as was possible. If it can be said that there are any Desperadoes that are wise and prudent, 'tis when they choose rather to die with Freedom, than to fall into a shameful Slavery.

After Sylva had compleated his Wall of Circumvallation, he took Possession of a Rock that was larger than that upon which the Castle was built, but lower by three Hundred Cubits, and besieged the Place on this Side. Upon this Rock he caused to be raised, as Josephus tells us[4], a Mass of Earth of one hundred Cubits; but because the Platform did not seem to be solid and substantial enough to support the Machines, Sylva built upon it a kind of Cavalier with great Stones, that was fifty Cubits high, and of the same Breadth. Besides the usual Engines, there were others that had been contrived by Vespasian and Titus; and besides this, they raised upon this Cavalier a Tower of sixty Cubits, all covered with Iron, from whence the Romans threw so many Stones and Darts at the besieged, that they durst not any longer appear upon their Walls.

This Passage obliges me to a Digression that I cannot avoid; it has something in it that seems very absurd. The French Translator says º, that the Platform (as he very improperly calls it) did not seem to be solid and substantial enough to support the Machines. If the Earth could not support this great Weight, it could much less support a Cavalier of great Stones, and above that a Tower of sixty Cubits, all faced with Iron. The Text in this Place must have been altered and corrupted, which would be no great Wonder; it might be one indeed, if Josephus should be guilty of such bad Reasoning.

To restore this Passage, or at least to make it intelligible, I would suppose that Sylva raised a Terrass, and caused it to be supported by a Wall, built with great Stones, in Order to raise thereon another Cavalier of fifty Cubits, upon the Top of which he built a Tower of sixty Cubits high. By such a Description the Reader may comprehend the whole Matter, and has no Need to puzzle himself any farther. 'Twas by the Means of these Terrasses, and with the Help of Machines of all Kinds, that they brought forward their Rams to batter in Breach.

Sylva could not demolish the Wall, because it had its Foundation upon the Rock, and because they could not batter, but from a very high Situation. He therefore raised this prodigious Work of an hundred Cubits, that he might batter the Wall within Reach of a Ram of a great Length; but as this Terrass was only of the same Level with the Rock, and as the Ram could only batter the Bottom of the Wall; Sylva, to maintain this Attack, still raised a second Cavalier, as we have said before. However here is a Difficulty that offers itself; the Jewish Author says, that the Rock upon which he prepared his Attack was lower than the Castle by three hundred Cubits. There wanted therefore ninety Cubits, that the Works of the Besiegers might equal the Height of the great Cavalier, and of the Tower. There must be a Fault in the Text in this Place, as is very visible, or we must suppose, that the Rock on this Side was much lower, and consequently that the Wall was much higher; without this no Use could be made of the Ram.

Since we are so far advanced in a Matter of this Curiosity, let us produce the Remainder of this Passage of Josephus. Then Sylva caused a very great Ram to be made, with which he battered the Walls without ceasing; but hardly could he make any Breach in it. And the Besieged with incredible Diligence made another Wall within, which was Proof against the Effect of the Machines, because it was not made of resisting Matter, but deadned the Blows by yielding to their Violence. This Wall was built after the following Manner. They placed two Rows of thick Beams let into each other, which with the Space contained between the two Rows made the same Thickness as the Wall, which Space they filled up with Earth. And that this might not break out, they supported it with other Beams. So that this Work might have been taken for some great Building; and the Blows of the Machines were not only deadned by it, but it squeesed the Earth closer, and made it more firm and compact, being of the Nature of Clay. When Sylva had well considered this Work, he thought he could not demolish it any Way so readily as by Fire, and made his Soldiers throw so great a Quantity of burning Wood into it, that as this Wall was composed of the same Matter, and had many Interstices between, it took Fire and burned even to the Turf, and a great Conflagration presently began to appear.

Josephus is very obscure in his Description of the outward Wall, nor must we be surprized at it. 'Tis the Fault of almost all the antient Writers, to become obscure, and not to be understood when they undertake to describe any extraordinary Works. Cæsar is the only one that has eminently excelled in this Piece of Mechanism. I am well assured, that the second Wall of Massada was of a Structure very like to the Walls of Bourges, the Description of which is given us by this Author in his Commentaries[5]. The Jewish Author says that this Wall was only composed of Wood, that is, of massy Timber. Many have imagined that it was a kind of Chest made of Timber, and filled with Earth or Clay. If it had been so, the Fire could never have been so great as this Author represents it. This Intrenchment must rather have been composed of great Beams laid their whole Length upon the Ground, ranged at a certain Distance from one another, and crossing Chequer-wise, the void Spaces being filled up with this Clay. And this is the Way wherein I conceive this Wall to have been built.

As to its Form or Figure, it appears not to have been parallel to the Stone Wall that they battered in Breach, but that it represented a circular or angular Cavity. For the Historian says afterwards, that when Sylva considered this Work, and perceived it would be very difficult to demolish it with his Machines, he resolved to set Fire to it, and made his Soldiers throw so great a Quantity of burning Wood into it, that this Retrenchment took Fire, because there were many Interstices between; that is to say, many Intervals between the Breach made in the Wall, and the second Wall of Timber. For it would be absurd to refer these Words, many Interstices between, to the Intervals of the Beams, because they were all filled with Clay. Such concave Works were no new Things to the Antients; they made them that they might have Flancks. It will be asked, perhaps, if it were an easy Thing to throw such inflamed Wood between the Breach and the inward Retrenchment. This could not be difficult, since it was likely that the Besiegers had made a Lodgment on the Breach, and might deliver from Hand to Hand these burning Faggots, to throw them into the Cavities of the Retrenchment: We could say much more to clear up this Passage, which is one of the most curious of the Jewish History, but then we should go beyond our prescribed Limits. The Reader may consult the Commentary of Mr. le Chevalier de Follard upon Polybius, Tom. ii. p. 501, &c.

Massora

MASSORA. This Hebrew Word Massorah signifies Tradition. It is derived from the Verb[1] Masar, which signifies to give, present, or offer. Those Hebrew Doctors are called Massorites, who have fixed the reading of the sacred Text, by adding pointed Vowels to it, and who made the marginal Notes that are seen in the Margins of the printed Hebrew Bibles; who have counted with a most scrupulous Exactness all the Words, Verses, and even Letters of every Book: That in following Ages no further Change may be made, and that the Reading of the Bible may be fixed for ever. As the Hebrews often write their Words without any Vowel to determine their Sound, there is only a Tradition handed down from Father to Son, which is their Rule for reading certain Consonants, which may have a Variety of Significations, according to the Nature of the Vowel to be supplied. For Example, these three Letters d b r may be pronounced dabar, a Word, or he spoke; daber, Death, or, the Plague; dabir, a Court; dabber, speak; daber, he that speaks; and so of others. 'Tis therefore Tradition only which teaches the Jews how they must pronounce this Word, in the several Places in which it is found; and 'tis in Consequence of this Tradition, that the Massorites have invented pointed Vowels, to fix the Reading, and make it invariable. 'Tis for this Reason they are called Massorites, and their Work Massora, or Tradition.

These pointed Vowels are instead of the real Vowels where they are wanting, and they shew what Sound is to be given them, when they are found in the Text; and whether they are to be pronounced or not, whether they are long or short, whether they are to be pronounced with a full Sound, or only slightly. These pointed Vowels are commonly put under the Letters, but sometimes above. They are thirteen in all, five long, five short, and three very short. For the rest we refer to the Hebrew Grammars. 'Tis an Error to think, that the Hebrew Tongue has no Vowels; for it has its Vowels as well as other Languages, but it does not always put them down in Writing. See the Article of Letters aforegoing.

The Massorites have also marked the Accents and the Points. The Accents serve for Pronunciation, for singing and reading of the Words. The Points serve for the Distinction of Sentences and Verses, as with us the Comma, Colon, &c. distinguish the Verses and Periods.

As to the Letters, the Massorites have been exact in marking those that are either deficient or redundant in the Text; whether a Word is writ in a regular Manner, if one Letter is put for another; if it is larger, or shorter, or inverted, or suspended. For the Hebrews have such a vast Respect for the sacred Books, that they make a Scruple only to change the Situation of a Letter, that is plainly out of its Place. They are more inclined to suppose there is some Mystery that has occasioned the Alteration. Their Ancestors 'tis very plain were not so scrupulous, since we find so many Mistakes in the Text, that could not proceed but from the Negligence or Ignorance of the Transcribers.

Lastly, when there are various Readings in the Text, or any palpable Fault, they put the true Reading in the Margin, without daring to alter the Text. That which is found in the Text is what they call Chetib, that is to say, written; and what they put in the Margin they call Keri, which is as much as to say, read or Reading. The Meaning of which is, write in this Manner, but read in that Manner. For Example, when they find certain Words, they substitute others in their Stead. Thus instead of the sacred Name Jehovah, they substitute Adonaï, or Elohim; and instead of certain Terms not very decent, they pronounce others more inoffensive, or more agreeable to good Manners.

As to the Massorites, or Authors of the Massora, and the Age they lived in, and as to the Judgment that ought to be made of their Performance, there is a great Variety of Sentiments among the Criticks. Some have very much commended this Undertaking, and have looked upon the Work of the Massorites as an admirable Invention, to deliver the Text from a Multitude of Equivocations and Perplexities to which it was liable, to put a Stop to the unbounded Licentiousness and Rashness of Transcribers and Criticks, who often made Alterations in the Text by their own private Authority, according to their own Understanding or Humour. Others have blamed the Design, suspecting the Massorites to have corrupted the Purity of the Text, substituting instead of the ancient and true Reading of their Fathers, another Reading more favourable to their Prejudices, and more opposite to Christianity, whose Testimonies and Proofs they would weaken as much as they can. This is very certain, that they often follow and authorize Readings, that are very different from those followed by the ancient Greek Interpreters, that lived before Jesus Christ. Sometimes they even depart from the Reading of the Chaldee, which is the most ancient Author of any that have interpreted the original Text, in a Language of near Affinity to the Hebrew. Lastly, it may be shewn, that the ancient Rabbins do not always agree with the Massorites. Whence it is easy to infer, that their Tradition has not always been intirely uniform, as to the Manner of reading and interpreting the Text, or that they have not been very faithful in representing it to us in their Massora.

There are some among the Jews who pretend, that the Massora is derived even from from Moses; that 'twas he that communicated to the Elders of Israel the Manner of reading and explaining the sacred Text. Others refer the Beginning of it to Esdras, and to the Members of the great Synagogue that lived in his Time. Lastly, there are others, that go no higher for the Rise of it, than to the Beginning of the fifth Age of the Church, and think they were the Masters of the School at Tiberias, who were the first Authors of it. But it cannot be said with any Reason, that Moses was the Author of the Massora of all the Books of the Old Testament, since some of 'em were composed long after his Time. Nor can it be said that under Esdras the Manner of reading and dividing the Bible was fixed, since there have been so many Varieties in the reading of the Text, and in the Manner of explaining it, for several Ages after his Time; in the Seventy, for Example, in Aquila, in Symmachus, and in Theodotion, who often differ from each other, only because the Manner of reading the Text was unsettled in their Time. Nor was it settled in the Time of Origen, or St. Jerome[2], as may be gathered from several Passages of this Father.

But this Father, who lived in the fourth Century, and who died in the fifth about the Year 420, and who affirms so expressly, that the Manner of reading the Hebrew Text was unfixed in his Time, makes that very suspicious which the Rabbins[3] would persuade us, concerning the Invention of the Points by the Doctors of Tiberias. The Talmud not being finished according to some[4] but in the Year of Christ 500, or according to others[5] not till 645, furnishes more Proofs that then the pointed Vowels were not in Use. It never speaks a Word of 'em, though there were so many Occasions in its Way. It relates several Histories, that give Reason to conclude, that then the Manner of reading the Text had not been determined. For Example, Joab, General of the Armies of David, returning from an Expedition against the Amalekites, the King asked him why he had not entirely exterminated this People. Joab answered, that he had fulfilled all that the Lord had commanded against Amalek, saying, destroy all the Males of Amalek; in Hebrew Sacar[6]. David insisted that it ought to be read Secher, exterminate the Memory of Amalek. But Joab replied, that his Master had always taught him to read Sacar. This Narrative is a mere Fable, but it sufficiently proves, that then the Reading of the Hebrew was unascertained.

They produce the Book called Cozri, which contains a Conference between King Cozar and some Jews, and in which the Use of the pointed Vowels is supposed as known. And 'tis said there, that Words composed of Consonants without Vowels are like Women undressed, who ought not to appear in publick. 'Tis pretended this Conference was held in 740, but the most able Criticks take both the Book and the Conference for a Fable; and maintain this Work called Cozri was composed at least four hundred Years after the seventh Century. But no Body denies that then the Points were in Use.

The Jews have also Commentaries upon Scripture, which they call Midraschim, which have been composed since the Talmud, and which contain a Multitude of grammatical Observations, and Niceties about Letters and Words, and the Manner of Reading and Writing. But in these Commentaries there is not a Word of the pointed Vowels, or of any of the Labours of the Massorites. The Book of the Scribes, or Sopherim, which is also since the Talmud, for the Talmud is there quoted as a Work of Antiquity, and universally approved; this Book, I say, contains a vast Number of Particulars about the Text and Writing of the sacred Books. In this are shewn the Nature, the Qualities, the Measure of the Parchment, upon which these Books ought to be writ; what Space should be left between each Line, how many Words every Line should have, and how many Lines should be in every Page; how many Rasures will make a Volume Prophane, which Letters should be Capitals; and such like. In a Word, in this Work are to be found even the most inconsiderable Niceties relating to the Text, and yet there is not a Word about the Points, or the other Observations of the Massorites.

Besides, among the Jews are to be found two other Works, which are later than these now mentioned, and are the various Lections of the Hebrew Text, collected by the Eastern and Western Jews. The Western Jews were the first who began to collate the Text from Manuscripts, to count the Letters, to take Notice of Words, either defective or redundant. This Work having been communicated to the oriental Jews that lived at Babylon, and beyond the Euphrates; they examined it, and in their Turn compared the Text with the Manuscripts. They observed two Hundred and sixteen Passages, in which their Manuscripts were different from those of Jerusalem. This Difference produced two Parties among them, the Jews of Jerusalem, and those of Babylon, each maintaining the Fidelity of their Manuscripts and Text. These Disputes fell out about the End of the eighth Century, or at the beginning of the ninth. Neither Side appealed to the Authority of the Massorites, or their Remarks, which they would hardly have failed to have done, had they been then extant: So that there is great Probability they were not then known.

But a little while afterwards, in the Dispute which arose between the Rabbins Aaron-Ben-Aser, Chief of the Western School, and Moses-Ben-Naphtali, Chief of the Eastern School; much Mention is made of Points, Accents, and other Observations about the Manner of reading the Terms of Scripture: Which gives Room to conclude, that in this Interval of an hundred Years, between the Years 840, in which the various Readings of the Western Jews appeared, and 940, or perhaps 1030, in which flourished the Rabbins Ben-Aser, and Ben Naphtali, that the Massorites began their Work. But it was not presently finished: It required a considerable Time to bring it to Perfection. As Aaron-Ben-Aser presided at the School of Tiberias, this gave Occasion to say that the Massora took its Origin from this City. All these Reasons discussed at their full Length, may be seen in the Exercitations of P. Morin, in Walton's Prolegomena, in Capellus's Work intitled, Arcanum punctuationis revelatum, in Buxtorf, and in several other Authors who have treated on this Subject.

Isaac Vossius[7] affirms, that he has had in his Hands more than two Thousand Hebrew Manuscripts, and that he saw none of 'em pointed, that were more than six hundred Years old. He challenges all the Partisans of the pointed Vowels, to produce any Mannscripts older than this, with the Points of the Massorites. That if any of 'em are found pointed, it is easily discoverable, that the Pointing is more Modern, and has been since added to the Manuscript. Lastly, a convincing Proof of the Novelty of this Invention is, that the Copies of the Bible that are kept in Rolls in the Synagogues, are still to this Day without any Points. Therefore there is great Probability, that this Invention has been in Use, only since the Jews began to have Grammars of their Language, which was but in the ninth Age. Then to make the Reading of Hebrew easy to Beginners, they invented the pointed Vowels, in Order to ascertain the Reading.

Massorites

MASSORITES, or Massorethites; they imagined that they performed a very cony If. Voss. de LXX Interpret. siderable Service to their Nation, and to their Religion, by counting even the very Letters of their sacred Books. In the Book of Genesis, for Example, they found twelve great Sections, or Paraschoth; forty three Sedarim, or Orders; fifteen Hundred and thirty four Verses, and seventy eight Thousand one hundred Letters. They distinguished the Degrees of Certainty, which they attributed to their Corrections, by these three Words. Keri, read; Cetib, write; and Sbhir, conjecture. When there was a Reading in the Text that was manifestly vicious and corrupt, they substituted another instead of it. This was Chetib. If the Word was one of those, from the Pronunciation of which they used to forbear out of Respect, for Example, Jehovah, they made Use of another whose Pronunciation was allowable, as Elohi, or Adonai. In like Manner, if it was a Word which Modesty forbad to use, they put one instead of it which might be read. This is Keri, read. Lastly, if the Reading found in the Text was doubtful, they marked it Sbhir, or Conjecture.

Heretofore all these critical Remarks were put at the End of the Bibles; but now for the Ease of Readers they are placed in the Margin, or at the Bottom of the Page; and what cannot be thus disposed of is thrown to the End of the Book. 'Tis pretended that the Invention of the Vowel Points is as antient as Moses, or at least as Esdras. People have been conceited enough to affirm, that the original Bible, as reformed by Esdras, is yet to be seen at Boulogne, in the Convent of the Dominicans. And for Fear that the Roman Catholicks should make any Advantage by this Correction of the Massorites, in Favour of Traditions, which they make a Point of their Creed; the Protestants have thought it to be their Interest to maintain the Antiquity of the Vowel Points; in this going contrary to the Sentiments of Calvin and Luther, who were their chief Reformers. But we have endeavoured to shew the Novelty of these pointed Vowels under the Article MASSORA before; and under the Article POINTED VOWELS we endeavour to confute those, who have stood up for their Antiquity.

Matharea

MATHAREA, a Village six Miles from Cairo in Egypt, where they shew a Garden planted with Balm, and a Fountain, wherein 'tis thought that the Virgin Mary washed the Linnen of the Child Jesus, all the Time that she and Joseph staid in Egypt, to avoid the Cruelty of Herod the Great.

Entering into Matharea there is to be seen a Makad, or a Turkish Oratory, built upon the Ruines of an antient Church belonging to the Egyptian Christians. In the Makad there is a little Reservoir made of Marble of several Colours, which is always full of Water that comes from a Well believed to be miraculous, which is on one Side of the Makad. It is vastly large and very deep; its Water is always clear, and excellent because of its Sweetness and Lightness. The Bachas prefer that of the Nile. From the Makad you go on to a great Garden full of beautiful Trees, Oranges, Citrons, and among others, an old Sycamore, which bears Fruit all the Year round. This Garden was heretofore quite full of the Shrub which bears the Balm, of which we have spoken elsewhere. Near the Garden there is an Obelisk standing upright, and some Remains of Building which shew, that this Place has formerly been considerable. 'Twas here that Selim encamped, when he took Cairo, in 1518.

The Christians of the Countrey believe, that the holy Virgin dwelt sometime at Matharea with her Son Jesus; that she made Use of the Reservoir that is in the Makad, and that she put the Infant Jesus to sleep in a Nich, which is there cut into the Wall. 'Tis for this Reason that religious Persons, who repair to this Place out of Devotion, sometimes say Mass there on a portable Altar. 'Tis further said, that the old Sycamore in the Garden mentioned before, miraculously opened it self to receive the holy Virgin, and the Child Jesus within it, and presently closed up again to conceal them from the Pursuit made by Herod's Soldiers after them. 'Tis easily perceived, that this is one of those popular Traditions which deserve not any sober Enquiry or Belief. 'Tis certain that the Tree is very old, that heretofore it has been open, and that it is only since the Year 1656, that the Part separated from its Trunk was broken off. Several of the Antients have pretended, that at the Moment that Jesus Christ entred into Egypt, all the Idols of the Countrey were overthrown[1]. To this Entrance of his they apply that [Isai. xix. 1.] Passage of Isaiah, Behold the Lord rideth upon a swift Cloud, and shall come into Egypt, and the Idols of Egypt shall be moved at his Presence.

Mattathias (I)

I. MATTATHIAS, Son of John, of the Family of Joarib, and of the Race of the Priests made himself very famous during the Persecution of Antiochus Epiphanes. He [1 Mac. ii. 1, 2, &c.] was at Jerusalem when Apollonius arrived there, with the wicked Orders of Antiochus. Mattathias retired to Modin, his own Countrey, to let this Tempest blow over, or to expect there till God should give him some Occasion of signalizing his Zeal for his Religion and his Countrey[1]. Mattathias was not there long, before they that were sent by King Antiochus came thither, to compel the People of Modin to sacrifice, and renounce the Law of God. Several of the People complied, and joined themselves to the King's Officers; but Mattathias and his Sons continued stedfast, and when they came to him to urge him to sacrifice, because he was the chief Man of the City, he lifted up his Voice and declared, that though all the Nations of the World, and the whole People of Judah should obey Antiochus, he alone would never obey him in a Thing of this Nature. And when he had left off speaking, a certain Jew advancing to sacrifice to Idols before the whole Assembly, Mattathias was so exasperated with Grief and Indignation, and transported with Zeal, that he fell upon the Man and killed him, even upon the Altar on which he was going to offer Incense. At the same Time he slew the Officer sent by the King, to compel the People to sacrifice; and having overthrown the Altar, he cried out; Whoever is zealous for the Law, and will continue firm in the Covenant of the Lord, let him follow me.

Mattathias had five Sons, Joannan called Caddis, or Gaddis, Simon surnamed Thassi, Judas called Maccabeus, Eleazar called Avaran, Avaron, or Aharon, and Jonathan surnamed Apphus. He retired into the Mountains with his five Sons, and was followed thither by several good Israelites, who withdrew themselves from the Persecution, chusing rather to leave all their Substance, than to forsake the Law of their God. The Officers and the King's Troops that were at Jerusalem having heard of the Opposition of Mattathias, and the other Jews of Modin, marched immediately against 'em, with a Design to attack them on the Sabbath Day. This Design they executed on the poor Israelites, who suffered themselves to be massacred without any Resistance, because they would not violate the Repose of the Sabbath. But Mattathias being informed of this, made a great Mourning for it, and calling his Sons and Friends together, they deliberated upon this Matter, how they ought to behave themselves if their Enemies should set upon them on the Sabbath Day. And they came to a Resolution of defending themselves, and fighting the Enemy, that they might not take any Advantage from their Religion, or from their Veneration for the Sabbath, which otherwise might prove to their utter Destruction.

Then were Mattathias and his Sons joined by the Assideans, who were the most religious as well as the most valiant Men of Israel, and most affectionate to the Law. They formed themselves into one Body, and fell upon the Apostates of Israel, who had deserted the Law of their Fathers. They killed a great Number of them, and obliged the rest to take Shelter among the Infidel Nations. After this Mattathias marched through all the Countrey, destroying all the Altars dedicated to false Gods, circumcised all the Children that had not yet received Circumcision, humbled the Children of Pride, and delivered the Law from its Subjection to Strangers, and from the Power of the King.

Mattathias apprehending that the Time of his Death drew near[2], he called his Sons together, and observed to 'em, that the Kingdom of Pride was strengthened, that this was a Time of Correction and Ruin, of Wrath and Indignation. “There- “fore, my Children, continued he, be “truly zealous for the Law, and sacrifice “your Lives for the Covenant of your Fa- “thers. Remember the Zeal of your An- “cestors, and the great Actions that they “done. Fear neither the Authority nor “Words of wicked Men. Fortifie your “selves, and act bravely for the Defence “of the Law. This will be the Means of “obtaining a true and solid Glory. I know “your Brother Simon to be a Man of “Council and Prudence; hearken always “to him, and he will be to you instead of “a Father. Judas Maccabœus has shewn “Proofs of his Valour and Bravery from “his earliest Youth; let him be the Ge- “neral of your Troops, and lead you out “to Battle. Keep a strict Union with all “those that are faithful to the Law, and “revenge your People upon their Enemies.” After this he blessed them, and was gathered to his Fathers. He was buried at Modin in the Sepulchre of his Ancestors, and all Israel bewailed him, and made a great Mourning for him. He had not been above one Year at the Head of the People. Some[3] have pretended, that Mattathias had been High-priest of the Jews, and found their Opinion upon the Decision he made, that in Case of Necessity they might fight upon the Sabbath Day, to defend themselves. But this Decision is not sufficient to prove this; and it does not appear that he ever performed any Function belonging to the High-priesthood in the Temple, which was then profaned and abandoned to the Gentiles. Besides, Menelaus and Alcimus were then alive, and though they were Intruders and very wicked Men, yet they passed for High-priests.

Matthew

MATTHEW. St. Matthew Apostle [Mark ii. 14. Luke v. 27.] and Evangelist, was Son of Alpheus, a Galilean by Birth, a Jew by Religion, and a Publican by Profession. What a Publican was I shall examine hereafter, under its proper Article. The other Evangelists call him only Levi, which was his Hebrew Name; but as to himself, he calls himself always Matthew, which probably was the Name by which he was known as a Publican, or Officer for gathering the Taxes. He does not dissemble his former Profession, that he might the more exalt the Grace of Jesus Christ, who had raised him to the Apostleship. His ordinary Abode was at Capernaum, and he had his Office out of the Town, at the Sea of Tiberias, which was near. There he was when he was called by Jesus Christ [Matt. ix. 9. Mark ii. 14. Luke v. 27.] to follow him. Matthew having heard him, followed him immediately, without troubling himself to put his Affairs in Order, or without staying to settle his Accounts[1].

Porphyry and Julian the Emperor accuse St. Matthew of Inconsiderateness for having rashly followed a Man that he knew nothing of. But St. Jerome[2] answers to this, that it is very probable that before this St. Matthew had a Knowledge of the Miracles and of the Doctrine of Jesus Christ, whom he might have heard preach several Times. Lastly, the Brightness of the Divinity of our Saviour, which was concealed under his Humanity, was alone capable of drawing all those to him at the first Glimpse, who had but a Sight of it. St. Austin[3] says, that on this Occasion St. Matthew found himself livelily touched by an inward Attraction, which determined him gently and agreeably, but powerfully and irresistibly, to follow Jesus Christ.

St. Matthew having thus quitted his Profession, with all his Goods and all his Pretensions, invited our Saviour to eat at his House. Jesus came with his Disciples, when several Publicans, with other Persons of St. [Matth. ix. 10, 11, &c.] Matthew's Acquaintance, sat down to eat along with him. The Pharisees observing this, said to our Saviour's Disciples, Why does your Master eat with Publicans and Sinners? Jesus hearing them, made Answer; 'Tis not the Sound, but the Sick that have Need of Physicians; therefore go and learn the Meaning of these Words, "I love Mercy rather than Sacrifice, for I am not come to call the Righteous, but Sinners to Repentance." This is all that the Gospel acquaints us with concerning St. Matthew. What the Scripture says, that he was Son of Alpheus, has given Occasion to some Ancients[4], and all the modern Greeks, to say, that he was Brother of James Son of Alpheus, or James the Less, otherwise named the Brother of our Lord; but there is nothing probable in this. See before under CLEOPHAS and ALPHEUS. He was an Apostle the same Year he was converted, and consequently he was called to the Apostleship in the first Year of the preaching of Jesus Christ. He is sometimes named the Seventh among the Apostles, and sometimes the Eighth.

Clemens Alexandrinus[5] says, he abstained from the eating of Flesh, and that his Diet was Fruits, Roots, and Herbs. The most general Opinion of both Ancients and Moderns is[6], that he preached and suffered Martyrdom in Persia, or among the Parthians, or in Carmania, which then was subject to the Parthians. Rufinus[7], Socrates[8], the counterfeit Obadiah, and several others, affirm that he preached and died in Ethiopia. Clemens Alexandrinus[9] quotes Heracleon, a Disciple of Valentine, saying that St. Matthew departed out of this World, not by Martyrdom, but by a natural Death; and this the Menology of Basil, and some Greek Authors, seem to follow. But other Greek Authors say sometimes, that he ended his Life by Fire. Nicephorus[10] says, that having by his Prayers extinguished the Fire that was lighted round about him, he gave up the Ghost in Tranquillity. Adon and the other Latin Writers say, that he died by Martyrdom; and Obadiah, an Author of little Credit, describes it thus. He says that Hyrtacus King of Ethiopia, Brother and Successor of Ægliippus, earnestly desired to marry Iphigenia, the Daughter of the King his Brother, who had already been consecrated to God; and the Apostle having represented to him, that he could not do it without being guilty of a great Crime, the Prince in Wrath sent one of his Officers, who presently cut off his Head. Afterwards he endeavoured to burn Iphigenia in her own House, but the Flames were driven by a violent Wind against Hyrtacus's own House, and intirely consumed it.

The Latin Church at this Day celebrates the Feast of St. Matthew on the 21st of September, on which Day it is marked in Bede, and in the Sacramentary of St. Gregory. The Martyrologies of St. Jerome, which put it on the same Day, make it also the seventh of October, and the sixth of May, on which the Roman Martyrology now celebrates the Translation of his Body. We are assured[11] that it was transported from Ethiopia to Bretany, or to Bithynia, that from thence it was carried to Salernum in the Kingdom of Naples, in the Year 954, where it was found in 1080; Duke Robert there built a large Church bearing his Name, where his Body was put in the Time of Gregory VII.

Some of the Ancients, as Clemens Alexandrinus[12], and Origen[13], and some of the Moderns, as Grotius[14], distinguish St. Matthew from Levi Son of Alpheus, mentioned by St. [Mark ii. 14. Luke v. 27.] Mark and St. Luke. These are the Reasons of this Conjecture, 1. St. Matthew is never named Levi, nor Levi Matthew, in the Books of the New Testament. 2. Heracleon, cited by Clemens Alexandrinus, speaks of St. Matthew and Levi as of two different Persons, and Clemens not refuting this Opinion, does as good as concur with it. 3. Origen writing against Celsus, says that Levi the Publican, who followed Jesus Christ, is not of the Number of the Apostles, but only according to some Copies of the Gospel of St. Mark. And indeed some Copies of St. Mark, and among others the antient Cambridge Manuscript, read in St. Mark ii. 14. Jesus saw James Son of Alpheus. Others read, he saw Matthew the Publican, instead of Levi the Publican, as it is read in the Vulgate, and in most of the Greek Manuscripts, and in all the printed Books. Grotius says, that Levi might be the Head of the Office, and Matthew one of the Clerks, or subordinate Officers; and that the Feast at which our Lord was present might be in Levi's House, and not in St. Matthew's.

But can these Reasons be sufficient to invalidate so antient an Opinion, so well grounded, and so universally received by the Church? The particular Opinion of Heracleon, the Doubt of Origen, the Silence of Clemens, the reading of a few Manuscripts, ought this to carry it against the Authority of all the other Copies, whether printed or Manuscript, against the Consent of all the other Fathers, and of all the Ecclesiastical Writers down from the Apostles to our Time? Add that Origen himself, in the Preface to his Commentary on the Epistle to the Romans, and in a Fragment of his quoted in the Catena upon St. Matthew, confirms the Opinion generally received. Add also, that M. Cotelier[15], and Dodwell[16] believe, that Levi distinguished from St. Matthew by Heracleon, is not Levi the Publican, but Lebbeus, who is the same as St. Thaddeus the Apostle.

St. Matthew wrote his Gospel before he departed from Judæa, to go to preach in the Province that had been assigned him; the Believers in Palestine having desired him to leave in Writing what he had taught them while present[17]: Some Fathers[18] tell us, that he was also desired to do this by the Apostles. He wrote it at Jerusalem in the Hebrew or Syriack Language, which was then common in Judæa. 'Tis thought he began this Work about the Year 41, according to the Vulgar Æra, and the eighth Year after our Saviour's Resurrection. Almost all the old Greek Manuscripts have it thus, at the End of his Gospel. The Author of the unfinished Commentary on St. Matthew, followed by Baronius and Cornelius à lapide, pretends that he wrote it on the Occasion of the first Dispersion of the Apostles, after the Death of St. Stephen, about the third or fourth Year after the Resurrection of Jesus Christ. Irenæus thinks, that he composed it while St. Peter and St. Paul were preaching at Rome, and were there laying the Foundation of the Church of Christ. And this comes to the Year 61 of the Vulgar Æra. But if it is true, as is commonly believed, that St. Matthew was the first that committed the Gospel to Writing, and that St. Mark made his Abridgment of it about the 43d Year of Jesus Christ, it follows plainly, that it must be placed before the Year 61 of our Vulgar Æra, and that it will be enough to place it towards the Year 41.

The Hebrew or rather Syriack Gospel of St. Matthew, Chaldaico Syroque sermone, sed Hebraicis literis scriptum, as St. Jerome speaks[19], was in Use for a long Time among the Jews, who had been converted to Christianity. And when they retired to Pella, sometime before the Romans laid Siege to Jerusalem, they carried it thither along with 'em. From thence this Gospel was diffused into Decapolis, and into all the Countries on the other Side Jordan, where the Judaizing Christians still made Use of it, in the Time of Epiphanius[20], and of Eusebius of Cæsarea[21]. But these Christians did not preserve this sacred Trust with the Fidelity they ought, but added to it several Particulars, which perhaps they might have heard from the Mouths of the Apostles, or from their first Disciples; which at first made it suspected by the other Believers. Afterwards the Ebionites corrupted it by Additions or Omissions that were favourable to their own Errors, so that it was given up by the other Churches, which persevered in the Form of sound Doctrine, and who adhered to the antient Greek Version, which had been made from the Hebrew or Syriack, a little after St. Matthew's Time.

In Origen's[22] Time the Hebrew Gospel of the Judaizing Christians no longer passed for Authentick; Eusebius puts it among the spurious Writings, and the Passages to be found of it among the antient Fathers, very different from the Greek that we now have, sufficiently prove, that it was but too much corrupted. Here are some Examples. It was there mentioned, that the Man to whom Christ said, Go, sell all that thou hast, give it to the Poor, and follow me; that this Man, I say, went his Ways scratching his Head[23]. Clemens Alexandrinus[24] quotes from the same Gospel, He that will admire, shall reign, and he that shall reign shall be at rest. And this[25], My Secret belongs to me, and to those of my House. Origen[26] makes Jesus Christ say, according to this Hebrew Gospel. My Mother the Holy Ghost has taken me by one of my Hairs, and has set me upon the high Mountain of Tabor. In the Hebrew, Ruach, which signifies Ghost or Spirit, is of the Feminine Gender; from whence he says, My Mother the Holy Ghost. Elsewhere it was read, that the Holy Ghost speaking to Jesus Christ, after he was come from the Baptism of John, said thus to him; My Son, I expected thy coming in all the Prophets; thou art my well-beloved Son, who reignest eternally. And again, The Mother of Jesus and his Brethren said to him, there is John who baptizes for the Remission of Sins, let us go and be baptized by him. But he answered them, what Evil have I committed, that I have Occasion to be baptized by him? If even this that I have now said be not perhaps a Sin of Ignorance.

The Hebrew Gospel of St. Matthew, which had been corrupted by the Ebionites, who separated from the Christians, and fell into several Errors about the Divinity of Jesus Christ, and about the Virginity of Mary; this Gospel, I say, continued a long Time in its primitive Purity in the Hands of the Nazarenes, or the first Believers of Palestine. There were still of these Nazarenes remaining to the Time of St. Jerome[27], and he does not reproach them with any Error like that of the Ebionites. They made no Defalcations from the Gospel, and rejected with Contempt the Traditions of the Pharisees, though they were otherwise very zealous for the Observation of the Law. As to the true Hebrew Gospel of St. Matthew, it is no longer in Being any where, as far as can be discovered; for those printed by Sebastian Munster, and du Tillet, are of no Authority, being only Modern, and translated into Hebrew from the Latin or Greek[28]. Others have maintained, that the Syriack Gospel of St. Matthew, which is printed by it self; and in the Polyglottes, was the original Text of St. Matthew. But they that have carefully examined into this Matter observe, that this Translation is made from the Greek. See Mill's Prolegomena, and our general Preface to the New Testament.

Our Greek Version of St. Matthew's Gospel, and which at this Day passes for the Original, was made even in the Apostolical Times. The Author is unknown, and it is imputed at Random, to whosoever seemed proper for this Work. Some ascribe it to St. Matthew himself, others to St. James the Less, Bishop of Jerusalem[29]; others to St. John the Evangelist[30], or to St. Paul, or to St. Luke[31], or to St. Barnabas. Papias in Eusebius[32] says, that every one joined to translate it into Greek as they could. As to the Latin Translation 'tis agreed that it was made from the Greek, and that it is almost as antient as the Greek itself.But the Author of it is as much unknown, and it is impossible to trace out either the Time or Occasion of this Translation.

Some Moderns[33] have thought fit to call in Doubt what we have proved and advanced hitherto, according to the Testimony of all the Ancients, that St. Matthew wrote his Gospel in Hebrew Characters, and in the Hebrew Language; that is, in the Language then commonly us'd by the Jews of Palestine, which was the Syriack, with a Mixture of Hebrew and Chaldee. They maintain, that St. Matthew wrote it in Greek, and that what is said of the pretended Original Hebrew is all a Fiction, or ill understood. The Fathers, as Origen, Epiphanius, and Jerome, do not directly assert it; they quote it indeed, but as a Book of no Authority, which they would not have done had they been convinced, that this was the genuine Original of St. Matthew's Gospel. If the Church had ever entertained this Notion of it, would they have suffered it to have been lost? If St. Matthew had wrote in Hebrew, should we have seen in this Work the Hebrew Names interpreted into Greek? Would he have cited the Old Testament according to the Translation of the Seventy, as he has always done? The Greek Language was then very common in Palestine, in all the East, through the whole Roman Empire, and even in Rome itself. St. Paul writes to the Romans in Greek; St. Peter and St. James write in the same Language to the Jews dispersed through the Eastern Provinces, and St. Paul to the Hebrews of Palestine. Lastly, since all the other Authors of the New Testament have wrote in Greek, why must St. Matthew alone write his Gospel in Hebrew? These Arguments are what are used to be brought, to support this Opinion.

But it is not difficult to answer all these Reasons. 1. The uniform Testimony of all the Antients, who tell us that St. Matthew wrote his Gospel in Hebrew, is certainly of a very great Weight. They did not speak at Random; they had seen and had consulted this Gospel, as it was written in this Language. 'Tis true, they have not always spoke of it in a simple and uniform Manner, but that was because there were two of 'em; the one pure and uncorrupted, of which they have spoke with Esteem; and the other depraved by the Hereticks, which they have contemned, and looked upon as Apocryphal.

However common the Greek Tongue might be in Palestine, and though it might [Acts xxi. 40. xxii. 2.] be the vulgar Tongue of some Cities in this Countrey, that were chiefly inhabited by Grecians; yet still it is certain, that the Generality of the Jews spoke commonly what they called Hebrew, but which was rather Syriack and Chaldee, mixed with some Hebrew Words. This may be seen even by the Gospel it self, which has preserved to us some Hebrew Words pronounced by Jesus Christ, and which is not taken Notice of as any Singularity, so that it can be concluded it was not familiar to him. On the contrary it appears, that it was his ordinary Language. And when St. Paul was seized in the Temple, and desired to speak to the Jewish Populace, he caused Silence to be made, and made a Speech to 'em in Hebrew, which gained him the Attention he desired.

The Hebrew Names interpreted in Greek, in this Gospel of St. Matthew, prove the direct contrary to what they would infer from 'em. For this demonstrates that the Translation was Greek, and that the Original was in Hebrew.

It is not true, that St. Matthew quotes the Scripture according to the Translation of the Seventy Interpreters. Of ten Passages of the Old Testament that he has cited, there are seven of 'em in which he speaks in a Manner that approaches nearer to the Hebrew than to the Septuagint; and only three which he quotes agreeably to them: But in these Passages the Seventy and the Hebrew themselves agree. St. Jerome[45] maintains in general, that this Evangelist follows the Hebrew in his Quotations. But it is plain that commonly he quotes by Memory, and relates not so much the Words as the Sense of the Passages.

Lastly, though St. Paul, St. Peter, and St. James have wrote in Greek to the Jews of Palestine, and to the Jews dispersed in the East, it cannot follow but that St. Matthew may have wrote in Hebrew. We do not pretend that he was obliged to write in this Language, we only inquire into the Fact, whether he really did or no. But this Fact is attested by all the Ancients, many of which have seen his Original, and were very capable of making a Judgment of it; particularly Origen, Eusebius, and St. Jerome. To give an Account how this ancient Gospel has been lost, is what cannot be expected from us. But it is easy to conceive, that having been grossly corrupted by the Ebionites, it might first fall into Contempt, and then by Degrees into Neglect and Oblivion. The Greek Translation was valued and preserved, because it retained its primitive Integrity, and is now become as authentick as the Original it self.

St. Matthew in his Gospel had this chiefly in View, according to St. Austin[34], to shew us the royal Descent of Jesus Christ; and to represent to us the Life of his Humanity, in the Manner of his Conversation among Men. St. Ambrose[35] observes, that no one of the Evangelists enters so far into the Particulars of the Actions of Jesus Christ, as St. Matthew does, or has given us so many Rules for the Conduct of Life, so many Lessons of Morality suitable to our Necessities, and to the Design of Christ. Petrus Damianus[36] says, that St. Matthew holds the same Place among the Evangelists, as Moses does among the Authors of the Old Testament; having been the first Writer of the new Law, as Moses was of the old. When he began to write, the great Question among the Jews was, whether Jesus Christ was the Messiah, or no. St. Matthew undertakes to give Proofs of it. He shews by his Miracles that he was the Christ, that Mary his Mother was a Virgin, that Jesus was not come to destroy the Law but to accomplish it, that his Miracles were no magical Operations, nor the Effects of any human Power, but incontestable Proofs of the Power of God, and of the Mission of Jesus Christ.

If we compare St. Matthew with the three other Evangelists, we may observe a pretty remarkable Difference in the Order and Succession of the Actions of the Life of our Saviour, from Chapter iv. 22. to Chapter xiv. 13. This Diversity has perplexed the Chronologers and Interpreters. Some have pretended that St. Matthew has followed the Order of Time, and that in this Particular we ought to abide by his Narration. Others have submitted to the Authority of the three other Evangelists; and in Truth it is more natural to assent to the Testimony of three Witnesses, than to that of one; and especially since St. Mark forsakes him in this, who is used to follow him in every Thing else. Some have imputed to mere Chance this want of Order in St. Matthew, others ascribe it to Choice and Design. However this Matter be, it can be no Prejudice to the Truth of the Facts, which are the essential Part of the Gospel; and as to the Order of Time, the sacred Authors are not always solicitous to follow it exactly.

There are certain Apochryphal Works imputed to St. Matthew, as the Book of the Infancy of Jesus Christ, condemned by Pope Gelasius[37], The Ebionites had also fathered some Writings on this Apostle[38]. We have seen before, that they had mangled his Hebrew Gospel. They ascribe to him also an Ethiopick Liturgy. The Ebionites, the Cerinthians, and other Hereticks, quoted the Gospel of St. Matthew under the Name of, The Gospel according to the Hebrews[39]. 'Tis also probable that it was the same Gospel that was known by the Name of The Gospel of the Twelve Apostles, the Gospel of the Nazarenes, and the Gospel according to St. Peter. Eusebius[40] relates, that Pantenus a Christian Philosopher, who lived at Alexandria about the Year of Christ 184, found in the Indies a Gospel of St. Matthew, which was said to have been carried thither by St. Bartholomew. St. Jerome[41] and Rufinus say, that he brought it to Alexandria. The same St. Jerome[42] says, that there was a Copy of the Hebrew Text of St. Matthew in the Library of Cæsarea in Palestine. In the Year 488 there was found in the Isle of Cyprus, under the Breast of the Body of St. Barnabas[43], a Copy of St. Matthew's Gospel written by St. Barnabas's own Hand, upon a sort of Wood very hard and precious. This Book was probably in Greek, seeing it was read every Year at Constantinople on Holy Thursday. In the third Age Count Joseph found at Tiberias an Hebrew Copy of St. Matthew, in a private Place; where the Jews kept also the Gospel of St. John, and the Acts of the Apostles, translated from Greek into Hebrew[44].

The Mahometans maintain, that St. Matthew wrote his Gospel at Alexandria; but the Oriental Christians say only, that St. Bartholomew carried the Gospel of St. Matthew into Egypt, and thence into Ethiopia. Eutychius, Patriarch of Alexandria says, that St. John the Evangelist, besides his own Gospel that he wrote, translated also that of St. Matthew out of Hebrew into Greek.

Matthias (I)

[Acts i. 21, 22.] I. MATTHIAS. St. Matthias the Apostle was first in the Rank of our Saviour's Disciples, and he is one of those that continued with him from the Baptism of St. John Baptist, to his Ascension. 'Tis very probable he was of the Number of the Seventy Disciples, as Clemens Alexandrinus, and some other Ancients[1] inform us. We have no Particulars of his Youth or Education, for we may reckon as nothing what is read in Abdias (or Obadiah) concerning this Matter. After the Ascension of our Lord, the Apostles retiring to Jerusalem in Expectation of the Effusion of the Holy Ghost, as had been promised, Peter stood up in the Midst of the [Acts i. 15, 16, &c.] Brethren, being in Number about an Hundred and twenty, and spoke to this Effect. "What had been foretold by the Holy Ghost in Scripture, by the Mouth of the Prophet David, concerning this Judas, who was the Leader of those that took Jesus, ought necessarily to have been fulfilled. He was in the same Condition as we are, and had a Share in the same Ministry. But having betrayed his Lord and Master, he has obtained a Possession with the Recompence of his Iniquity, that is, he has supplied the Priests with the Money they had given him, as the Reward of his Treachery, wherewith to buy a Field. The Sence of his Crime has driven him to Despair, he has been his own Executioner, and has hanged himself, his Belly is burst, and his Bowels have tumbled out.

"'Twas of him that the Psalmist spoke, when he said, let his Habitation become a Desart, let there be none to inhabit it, and let another take his Place in the Episcopate[2], or in the Superintendance, the Inspection, the Employment that has been committed to him. Therefore of the Number of those who have been in our Company, during the whole Time that the Lord Jesus has lived among us, from the Beginning of John's Baptism to the Time of our Lord's being received into Heaven, let one be chosen that may be with us a Witness of the Resurrection." Then they presented two, Joseph called Barsabas and surnamed Justus, and Matthias. And betaking themselves to Prayers, they said: "Thou, O Lord, that knowest the Hearts of all Men, shew us which of these two thou hast chosen, that he may enter into this Ministry, and into the Apostleship from whence Judas by his Wickedness has fallen." Then they drew Lots, and the Lot falling upon Matthias, he was from that Time associated to the eleven Apostles. We have discoursed on the Question concerning Elections by Lot, in a Dissertation printed before our Comment on the Acts of the Apostles.

The Greeks believe that St. Matthias preached and died at Colchis[3]. His Life was published by a Monk of St. Matthias of Treves, who says he had the original Hebrew from a Jew, who explained it to him in the vulgar Tongue, in the twelfth Century.

[4] This Life expresses, that St. Matthias was of Bethlehem, of the Tribe of Judah, of an illustrious Family; that in his Youth he was very well instructed by an excellent Man called Simeon, that after Pentecost he had Palestine for his District, where he preached with great Success, and did many Miracles. That thirty three Years after our Lord's Passion, Ananus the Younger having put to Death James the Lesser at Jerusalem, St. Matthias at the same Time was apprehended in Galilee, and brought before Ananus, who seeing him persist to confess Christ, he condemned him to be stoned. This was presently executed upon him, and afterwards his Head was cut off. But this History is not regarded as very authentick, and there are several of the Learned that look upon it as no better than a pious Fable. They think they have his Relicks at Rome; but the famous Abbey of St. Matthias near Treves, boasts of the same Advantage, and perhaps with something more Reason. The Greeks place his Feast on August the 9th, and the Latins on February the 24th.

The ancient Hereticks have trumpt up a false Gospel of St. Matthias, and the Fathers[5] have mentioned it only to reject it, and to testify that the Church does not receive it. Clemens Alexandrinus[6] quotes something of the Traditions of St. Matthias. There is great Probability that the Basilidœans, the Marcionites, and the Valentinians were the Hereticks, that were the Contrivers of these Forgeries; they always boasting that they followed the Sentiments of St. Matthias[7]. Here is something that has been quoted from this Apostle. "If the Neighbour of the Elect sins, the Elect himself sins; for if he had behaved himself as Reason (or as the Word) prescribes, his Neighbour would have had such Respect for his Life, that he would not have sinned." And elsewhere[8], "A Man must so subdue his Flesh, and use it in such a Manner, as to make no Concessions to it for Sensuality or Pleasure; but must improve his Soul by Faith and Knowledge." And again[9], "Admire present Things: This is a Step to arrive at more exalted Knowledge." The same Clemens tells us, that some confounded St. Matthias with Zaccheus the Publican[10]. But this Opinion can by no Means be supported, since Zacheus was converted but a [Luke xix 2, 3. Acts ii. 21, 22.] few Days before our Saviour's Passion, and St. Matthias, as we have seen already, was one of the first Disciples of Jesus Christ.

II. MATTHIAS, Son of Theophilus High-priest of the Jews, succeeded Simon Son of Boëthus, in the Year of the World 3999, one Year before the Birth of our Saviour Jesus Christ, and four Years before the Vulgar Æra. He was High-priest but one Year. He had for his Successor Joazar, Son of his Predecessor Simon. Herod the Great deposed Matthias, because he thought him engaged in the Confederacy with Matthias, Son of Margaloth, and Judas Son of Saripheus, who had pulled down from over the Gate of the Temple the golden Eagle that this Prince had set up[1]. Josephus relates[2], that during the Pontificate of Matthias, this High-priest happening to have a Pollution the Night before the Day of the solemn Expiation, and so finding himself incapacitated to perform the Functions of his Ministry, he commissioned Joseph the Son of Ellem his Kinsman in his Place, to exercise the Office of High-priest for that Day only.

He had for Successor Ælioneus, Son of Citheus, in the Year of the World 4045, having held this Dignity but one Year. Josephus relates, that King Agrippa having offered the High-priesthood to Jonathan, Son of Ananus, he excused himself, and said he thought himself unworthy of that Honour, and that it was sufficient for him to have possessed it once already; for he had been High-priest before. But at the same Time he recommended Matthias his Brother[1] to the King, as a Person better qualified for this Employment; to which Agrippa gave his Consent.

'Twas under Matthias that the War broke out, between the Jews and the Romans[1]. Matthias persuaded the People to let Simon Gioras come into Jerusalem, to set him up against John, and by that Means to balance his too great Authority[2]. But Simon seeing himself Master of the City, soon forgot the Obligations he had to Matthias, and put him to Death with three of his Sons, without so much as giving them a Hearing[3]: For they were accused of being in the Interest of the Romans.

Mausoleum

MAUSOLEUM. This Word is used for those magnificent Tombs that are erected for Kings, and other great Men. See 2 Chron. xxxv. 24. Vulgat. where it is said that Josiah was buried in the Mausoleum [or Sepulchre] of his Fathers. Mausolus King of Caria, who died in the second Year of the hundredth Olympiad, for whom his Wife erected a most magnificent Tomb, gave Occasion for all such Monuments to be called Mausolea.

His Queen Artemisia was so much concerned at his Death, that having gathered up his Ashes, and beating his Bones to Powder, she put some of it every Day into a Mess of Broth, till she had eat it all up; making, as it were, her own Body the Sepulchre of her Husband. Her Affliction did not allow her to live above two Years after him. But before she died she took Care to eternize the Memory of her Husband by that famous Monument she made for him at Halicarnassus, the Beauty of which caused it to be reckoned as one of the seven Wonders of the World, and has given the Name of Mausoleum to all Structures of this Kind, that are very grand and magnificent.

Scopas, Bryaxis, Timotheus, and Leochares, were the Architects that built it[1]. Towards the South and the North its Extent was sixty three Feet, but the other two Sides were narrower. The whole Circumference of the Edifice was four Hundred and eleven Feet. Its Height was t wenty five Cubits, and it was surrounded by thirty six Columns. Scopas made the Eastern Side, Bryaxis that to the North, Timotheus that towards the South, and Leochares the Western End. Artemisia died before the Work was compleated, but the Artists made it a Point of Honour not to quit the Work; they went on with it, and brought it to Perfection. 'Tis still disputed to this Day, says Pliny, which of the four succeeded best. A fifth Artist put his helping Hand to it, and made upon the Pinacle a Pyramid of the same Height as the Building below. It had four and twenty Steps, and diminished gradually to a Point. At the Top of the Pyramid was a Quadriga, or a Chariot drawn by four Horses, made by Sythis. All together made a Pile, the Height of which was an Hundred and forty Foot. This is what Pliny tells us of the famous Mausoleum, of which there remains now no Footsteps, either at Halycarnassus, or upon Medals, or any other antient Monuments.

Mauzzim

[Dan. xi. 38, 39.] MAUZZIM, or Maozim. Daniel says, that the Tyrant Antiochus Epiphanes, who is the Type and Forerunner of Antichrist, shall honour the God of Forces, [or Mauzzim] and a God whom his Fathers knew not shall he honour with Gold and Silver, &c. Interpreters are much divided about this God Mauzzim. Some take it to be Jupiter Olympius, to whom Antiochus offered Incense in a Place unknown to his Fathers, that is, in the Temple of Jerusalem. Others understand the God Mars, whom Daniel insinuates by the Term Mauzzim, or the God of the Strong. But can Mars be said to be a strange God in Respect of Antiochus Epiphanes? Porphyrius quoted by St. Jerome[1] says, that Mauzzim was the God adored in the little City of Modin, the Countrey of the Maccabees. Others think that the Hebrew of Daniel ought to be thus translated, □ 37. He shall magnifie himself above all Things, □ 38. and against the God Mauzzim. (the most strong God, the God of Fortresses, the God of Hosts). He shall honour in his Stead a strange God unknown to his Fathers. Antiochus Epiphanes exalted himself against the Lord, the most strong God, the God of Israel, and caused to be set up in his Place, in the Temple of Jerusalem, the false God Jupiter Olympius, unknown to his Fathers the ancient Kings of Syria, who reigned in this Countrey before Alexander the Great, Daniel in more Places [Dan. viii. 10, 11. xi. 31.] than one points out the God of Israel, by the Name Mauz, strong, or God of Hosts.

MEARAH, or *Maara, of the Sidonians*b. Some understand it of a City, others of a Cave, or a Meadow, in the Countrey of the Sidonians. But it is better to understand it, with Junius, of the River Magoras, which falls into the Mediterranean Sea, between Sidon and Berythus[1]. The Hebrew Word Mearah, or Maara, may very easily be pronounced Magora.

Measure

MEASURE. We shall give by it self a general Table of the Weights and Measures, and also of the Money, of the antient Hebrews. Besides which we have shewn the Value of their Money, and the Contents of their Measures of Length and Capacity, under the particular Names of each. For Example, the Value of the Shekel and Talent under their Names, the Capacity of the Bath or Ephah under their Names; and so of the rest.

Men of Measure, of extraordinary Stature, procerae staturae, as St. Jerome translates it[1]; Thou feedest them with the Bread of Tears, and givest them Tears to drink in great Measure[2]. The Hebrew says in three Measures. Thou shalt drink also Water [Mic. vi. 10.] by Measure[3]. You shall not drink so much as you would desire to drink. And Micah, The scant Measure is abominable. The Hebrew says, An Ephah. 'Tis known that the Ephah was a Measure of Capacity among the Hebrews.

[John iii. 34. Rom. xii. 3. Ephes. iv. 7. 2 Cor. x. 13. Ephes. iv. 13.] Our Saviour says in St. John, that God giveth not the Spirit by Measure. He gives it without Measure to his Son, but to others he gives it by Measure, as St. Paul tells us. According as God hath dealt to every Man the Measure of Faith. And elsewhere, But unto every one of us is given Grace, according to the Measure of the Gift of Christ. And again, speaking to the Corinthians, But we will not boast of Things without our Measure, but according to the Measure of the Rule, which God hath distributed us, a Measure to reach even unto you. And to the Ephesians, Till we all come — unto the Measure of the Stature of the Fullness of Christ. Till we all arrive at the Measure of the Age of the Fullness of Jesus Christ. Many have thought that the Age of the Fullness of Jesus Christ was the Age at which he died, and that we all shall arise at that Age. St. Jerome says[4], that this is[5] the Tradition of the Churches. Others understand it of that Perfection, at which we ought to endeavour, to form in our selves Jesus Christ in a perfect Age.

And elsewhere; In Measure when it shooteth forth thou wilt debate with it. God has rejected the Enemies of his People, and has judged and punished them with a full and superabundant Measure.

Meats

MEATS. The Hebrews had several Kinds of Animals which they refused to eat. We have mentioned these under the Article ANIMALS. Among domestick Animals they only eat such as were produced from the Cow, the Sheep, or the Goat. They used also the Hen and the Pigeon, which are domestick Birds, and several other Kinds of wild Animals. It was forbidden them to eat the Flesh with the Blood, and much more to eat the Blood without the Flesh. We may form a Judgment of their Taste for Meat and good Eating, by what the Scripture informs us of [1 Kings iv. 22, 23.] Solomon's Table. Thirty Measures of the finest Wheat-Flower were provided for it every Day, and twice as much of the ordinary Sort; twenty Stall-fed Oxen, twenty Pasture-Oxen, an hundred Sheep, besides the Venison of Deer, Roebucks, Does, and Wild-Fowl. The Lamb and Kid were esteemed as delicious Food. Rebekah prepared some for Isaac, to incline him to give his Blessing to Jacob. Moses appointed it for the Feast of the Passover. Manoah offered a boiled Kid to the Angel, who gave him Notice of the Birth of Samson. Samson carried one to his Wife to make a Reconciliation between them.

The Fat of the Animals that was offered in Sacrifice was reserved to the Lord: It was burnt upon the Fire of the Altar. They offered to him the Fat which covers the [Levit. iii. 16, &c.] Kidneys and Bowels; and the Rump of the Sheep, which in those Countries were very large and fat. God complains sometimes by [Levit. iii 10.] his Prophets, that his People only offered him Victims of lean Animals.

It does not appear that the ancient Hebrews [Mal. i. 13. 14.] were very nice about the Seasoning and Dressing of their Food. We find among them Roast-Meat, Boiled-Meat, and Ragouts. They roasted the Paschal Lamb; Meats that were offered were boiled in a Pot; for the Sons of Eli the High-priest took Flesh out of the Pots of those that offered Sacrifices, saying they would [1 Sam. ii. 15.] have it raw, that they might dress it to their own Palates. Rebekkah made a Ragout, or stewed Meat, for Isaac, and served it up to him in the Manner that she knew he loved [Gen. xxvii. 4. 14.] it. Salt was the only Seasoning that I can find made Use of, in the Meat that was prepared in the Temple. The greatest Part of our Spices we now use, were unknown to the ancient Hebrews. They say that at this Day in Palestine they use Honey in the greatest Part of their Ragouts: Oil, and perhaps some aromatick Herbs were also an Ingredient. The Paschal Lamb was eaten with bitter Herbs, or perhaps with Mustard.

[Exod. xxiii. 19. xxxiv. 26.] Moses forbids to seeth the Kid in its Mother's Milk, which may be understood that it was not to be sacrificed as long as it sucked, or else literally, that it should not be boiled in the Milk of its Dam. The Hebrews explain it in this latter Sense. They never mingle Milk in any Ragout or hashed Meat, and eat not at the same Time first Meat, then Milk, or Butter, or Cheese[1], for Fear that any Remains of the Meat should stick in their Teeth, and so mix with the Cheese. But they may eat Cheese some Time before, and then Meat afterwards. And they are so cautious of dressing Meat with any Thing made of Milk, either raw or otherwise, that they do not make Use of the same Implements for Meat, and for Butter, Milk, or Cheese. They have different Knives, Spoons, and Plates for each of these Things; and if it happens by Mistake, that one or the other of these Foods have been prepared or dressed by the Utensils belonging to the other; they not only refuse to eat of it, but if the Vessel be an earthen one, they make no farther Use of it.

They eat no Cheese of which they have not seen the making of the Curd, for Fear that the Milk of any unclean or forbidden Animal may have been mixed with it; or that some Part of the Skin may be mixed with the Curd, which may be taken for Flesh or Cheese; or that it may have been warmed in a Kettle, wherein any forbidden Meat has been boiled. They put a Mark upon that Cheese, of which they have seen the Curd made. In the Mountains of Vosge I have seen Jews, who came themselves to make their own Cheeses in the Houses of Christians, where Cows were kept.

They might not kill a Cow and its Calf in the same Day, nor a Sheep or Goat and their Young at the same Time. They might not cut off a Part of a living Animal to eat it, either raw or dressed. If any Beast Beast or Bird, of the Number of those that might be eaten, should happen to die of themselves, or should be strangled, and the Blood not run away, they were not allowed to taste of it. Also if in the Birds were found any Thorn, Pin, or Needle, that had gored them, or any Impostume in four-footed Beasts, or that their Entrails were affected, or that they were bit by any Beast, they were not to eat of them by the express Command of the Law. Carnem quæ à bestiis prægustata fuerit, non comedetis, sed projicietis canibus. See also Levit. v. 2. vii. 24. xvii. 15. He that by Inadvertence should eat of an Animal that died of it-self, or that was killed by any Beast, was to be unclean till the Evening, and was not purified till he had washed his Cloaths.

If an Animal, though alive, yet should have a Bone broken in one of the Limbs mentioned by the Rabbins, or was wounded and in Danger of dying; it was not to be eaten, for Fear of eating at unawares the Flesh of some impure Animal. They eat of nothing dressed by any other than a Jew, nor dressed their Victuals with the Kitchen Implements of any other but one of their own Nation; nor did they make Use of another Man's Knife.

The Rabbins had appointed, that at the same Meal they were not to eat of Fish and Flesh, under Pretence of its not being wholesome; but now this is not observed. And as to Fish, they eat indifferently all that are allowed to be eaten according to the Law, without any Scruple as to the Blood, or the Fat, or to reject such as are dead or imperfect; because the Law is silent in these Matters.

The Prohibition of eating Blood, or Animals that are strangled, has been always rigidly observed by the Jews. They do not so much as eat an Egg, if there appears the least Streak of Blood in it. When an Animal is to be killed, it must be performed by a Person skilled in it, because of the Circumstances that are to be observed. For a Time must be pitched on proper for the Action, the Knife must be very sharp, and without Notches, that the Blood may run away glibly and without Interruption. They let it run out upon the Ground, or upon Ashes, and take it up again afterwards. And the better to perform this, they put the Meat into Salt for an Hour, before they put it into the Pot, that the Blood may quite run out; otherwise they must not eat the Meat, except they roast it. And as the Liver abounds with Blood, they must broil it upon the Coals before they boil it.

They take great Care to cut away the [Exod. xxii. 31. Levit. xxii. 8.] Sinew of the Thigh of such Animals as they intend to eat, according to what is said, Gen. xxxii. 32. Therefore the Children of Israel eat not of the Sinew which shrank, which is upon the hollow of the Thigh, unto this Day: Because he touched the Hollow of Jacob's Thigh, in the Sinew that shrank. And in several Places of Germany and Italy, the Jews will not so much as eat any of the hinder Quarter, because great Niceness is required in taking away this Sinew as it should be, and very few know how to do it as it ought to be.

As to the Fat, they forbear eating any Fat of Oxen, Sheep, Goats, and Animals of this Kind, according to the express Text of Moses, Levit, vii. 23. Ye shall eat no Manner of Fat, of Ox, or of Sheep, or of Goat. But as for any other kind of Fat, they think it is allowed them, even that of Animals that die of themselves. Adipem cadaveris morticini habebitis in varios usus, &c. But it was not allowed them to eat it; that is to say the Fat, or rather the Animal that thus died of it self. See the Hebrew of this whole Passage. Omnem adipem bovis & agni & caprae non comedetis, & adeps cadaveris & adeps rapti à bestia fiet in omnem usum, sed comedendo non comedetis illum. They thought therefore that it was not permitted them to eat the Fat of the Animals now mentioned[2]; but that it was allowed them to eat the Fat of all other clean Animals. As to the Fat of Animals that died of themselves, they might not eat of it, but they might apply it to any other Uses.

Yet there are very good Commentators that maintain, that the Fat of clean Animals was not forbidden the Jews, only when they were offered in Sacrifice; and that the Fat that is intermixed with the Flesh was not forbidden in any Case, but only in that where the Flesh it self is forbidden. See the Commentators upon Levit. vii. 23, 24. iii. 26, 27.

In the Christian Church, the Custom of refraining from Things strangled, and from Blood continued a long Time. In the Council of the Apostles held at Jerusalem some Years after the Ascension of our Saviour[3], it was declared, that the new Converts from Paganism should not be subject to any of the legal Ceremonies, but that it would be sufficient to require from them, that they should refrain from Idolatry, from Fornication, from the eating of Blood, and from such Animals as were strangled, and therefore the Blood not let out of their Bodies; which Decree was observed for many Ages by the Church. Tertullian[4], Athe- nagoras, Minutius Fœlix[5], Justin Martyr[6], in their Apologies for the Christian Religion, the holy Martyr Biblis, who suffered about the Year seventy nine, in Answer to the Pagans, who accused the Christians of killing Children and drinking their Blood in their Assemblies, made this Defence, that the Christian Religion would not so much as allow them to drink the Blood of any Animal whatever.

The Council of Gangre held in the Year 324[7], the Council of Trullo in the Year 692[8], the second Council of Arles in the Year 533[9], that of Wormes in the Year 868[10], the fifty eighth Constitution of the Emperor Leo; Pope Zachary[11], writing to Boniface in 751, unanimously relate, that the Prohibition of eating Blood and Things strangled, was still observed in their Time. St. Jerome takes Notice, that in his Time also they religiously observed the Custom of abstaining from Things strangled and Blood in all the Oriental and Roman Churches. Under Pope Leo the ninth in the eleventh Century, Cardinal Humbert Legate from the holy See to Constantinople[12], making his Reply to the Grecians, declares, that in the Church they refrained from Creatures that were strangled by the Negligence of Men, dead of themselves, or drowned; and that they imposed a severe Pennance on such, who without any pressing Necessity went counter to any of these Rules.

But at the same Time he acknowledges, that they made no Scruple of eating Birds taken in Hunting, and wild Fowls catched with Dogs. That in all this they only followed the Precepts of the Apostles, who appointed that Men should eat indifferently of all Things sold in the Shambles, and of every Thing fit to eat, without asking any Questions for Conscience Sake. St. Austin[13], who was much more ancient than Cardinal Humbert, affirms, that in the Church they observed the Distinction of certain Foods, so long as the Wall of Separation was kept up between the Jews and the converted Gentiles, and that the Christian Church made up of these two Sorts of People, was not yet intirely formed. But after that there were no longer any Israelites according to the Flesh, there were no longer any Persons that made any Scruple of eating Animals that were killed without letting the Blood run out; and those that have still any Superstition in this Matter, are exposed to the Raillery of others.

This shews what were the Sentiments of this Father, and what was the Practice of the Church of Africa in his Time. In many other Places they did not leave off to observe the Canon of the Apostles, even down to the tenth and eleventh Century. The Greeks even to this Day will not eat the Blood after it is parted from the Flesh[14]; and more learned Men than one in the last Age have contended, that this Prohibition ought still to subsist and be in Force. Of this Opinion were Salmasius, Blondell, de Courcelles, Gerard Vossius, and Grotius.

Many of the Ancients[15], speaking of the Prohibition made by the Apostles at the Council of Jerusalem, take Notice only of what is forbid as to the eating of Blood, without mentioning any Thing of suffocated Animals. St. Austin[16], and Gaudentius of Bress[17], look upon the Words à suffocato as a Gloss that has been added to the Text, for the explaining what was meant by forbidding the eating of Blood. But the Greek and Latin Copies, both printed and Manuscript, almost all of 'em, as well as the Fathers, take them to be two different Prohibitions, that of eating Things that have been strangled, and that of the eating of Blood. Some Ancients, by the Words à Sanguine, would have Murder to be forbidden, or the Effusion of Blood; but such a Prohibition by the Council of Jerusalem must have been needless. There are several Greek Manuscripts, and some in Latin, which after these Words, à suffocato & Sanguine, add, do not to another what you would not have done to your self: Which is a Gloss added without any Manner of Necessity.

Meats offered to Idols, called in Greek, Idolothyta[18]: At the first setling of the Church there were great Disputes concerning the Use of such Meats as had been offered to Idols. Some newly converted Christians, being convinced that an Idol was nothing, and that the Distinction of clean and unclean Creatures was quite abolished, after our Saviour had procured for us the Liberty of being the Children of God; they eat indifferently of whatever was served up to 'em, even among Pagans, without troubling themselves to enquire whether these Meats had been offered to Idols or no. They took the same Liberty in buying Meat sold in the Markets, not regarding whether they were pure or impure, according to the Notion of the Jews, or whether they had been offered to Idols. For among the Heathen, as well as among the Jews, there were several Sacrifices, in which only a Part of the Victim was offered upon the Altar, all the rest belonging to him that offered it, which he disposed of at his Pleasure, or eat it with his Friends.

[1 Cor. x. 23, 24.] But other Christians being more weak, or not so well instructed, were offended at this Liberty, and thought that to eat of Meat that had been offered to Idols, was a kind of partaking of that wicked and sacrilegious Sacrifice. This Diversity in Opinions and Practice produced some Scandal, and some Diminution of Christian Charity, to which St. Paul thought it behoved him [Rom. iv. 20. Tit. i. 15.] to provide some Remedy. He determined therefore, that all Things were clean to such as were clean, and that an Idol was [1 Cor. viii. 4.] nothing at all. That a Man might safely eat of whatever was sold in the Shambles, [1 Cor. x. 25, 26, 27, &c.] and need not scrupulously enquire from whence it came. That if an Unbeliever should invite a Believer to eat with him, the Believer might eat of all that was set before him, without any Scruple of Conscience to know from whence it came.

But at the same Time he enjoins, that the Law of Charity and Prudence should be observed; that Men should be cautious in scandalizing or offending weak Minds; and that though all Things may be lawful, yet all Things are not always expedient. That no one ought to seek his own Accommodation or Satisfaction, but that of his Neighbour. That if any one should say to us, This has been offered to Idols, we may not then eat of it, for the Sake of him that gives the Information, not so much for Fear of wounding our own Consciences, but his: In a Word, that he that is weak, and thinks he may not indifferently make Use of all Sorts [Rom. xvi. 1, 2.] of Food, should forbear, and eat Herbs.

And yet it is certain, that generally Christians abstained from eating Meat that had been offered to Idols. See Revelations ii. 20. where the Holy Ghost reproves the Bishop of Thyatira for suffering a Jezebel in his Church, who called her self a Prophetess, seduced the Servants of God, prevailed with them to commit Impurity, and to eat of Meat that had been consecrated to Idols. Tertullian says[19], that St. Paul has put the Key of the Flesh-Market into our own Hands, by allowing us the Use of all Sorts of Meat, except that which has been offered to Idols. Ad constituendam Idolothytorum exceptionem. We know that in the Persecutions of the Roman Emperors[20], they often polluted the Flesh sold in the Shambles, by consecrating it to Idols, that they might prevent the Christians from buying of it.

[2 Macc. vi. 23.] As to the Jews, it is needless to mention with what Resolution they refrained from Meat consecrated to Idols. We know with what Constancy old Eleazar rather suffered Martyrdom than even to pretend to touch Meat that had been offered in Sacrifice to false Gods. Rogabant afferri carnes quibus vesci ei licebat, ut simularetur manducasse de sacrificii carnibus.

When the Israelites offered Peace-Offerings in the Temple, which were Sacrifices of Thanksgiving to God for Benefits, or to obtain others from him; they might eat a Part of their Flesh, after they had given to the Priests what was due to them, and after they had burned upon the Altar what was appointed by the Law. They might eat of the Flesh of these Victims the first or second Day after; but if any Thing remained to the third Day, they were obliged to burn it in the Fire. And if any unclean Person eat of it, his Fault was punished [Levit. vii. 18, 19, 20.] very severely.

But in Holocausts, there was no Part that belonged to him that offered the Sacrifice; it was intirely consumed in the Fire of the Altar. As to the Sacrifices for the Expiation of Sin, the Flesh of the Victim belonged to the officiating Priest; none but the Males of the House of Aaron had a Right to eat of them, nor could they eat them but within the Precincts of the Temple. [Levit. vii. 1, 7, 8, 10.]

Medad

MEDAD and Eldad: These two Men were of the Number of those, whom God had inspired with his holy Spirit, to assist Moses in the Government of his People. [Numb. xi. 29, 30.] They happening to continue in the Camp, and not to go to the Tabernacle with the rest, in Order to receive the Spirit of God; did however receive it in the Camp, where they prophesied. Presently a young Man ran to Moses, whom the Jews believe to be his Son Gershon, and informed him that Eldad and Medad prophesied in the Camp. Upon which Joshua immediately addressed himself to Moses, desiring him to restrain them. But Moses answered him, Enviest thou for my Sake? Would God that all the Lord's People were Prophets, and that the Lord would put his Spirit upon them. The Jews pretend, that Eldad and Medad were Brothers by the Mother's Side to Moses, and Sons of Jochebed and Elizaphan. Others will have it[1], that Amram the Father of Moses, having divorced his Wife Jochebed, married another Wife, by whom he had Eldad and Medad. St. Jerome[2] says they continued in the Camp out of a Spirit of Humility, as thinking themselves not worthy of the Honour that was intended them. Some ancient Impostor had composed a Book under the Name of Eldad and Medad, of which a Fragment is preserved in Hermas[3]. The Lord is near to those who are converted, as it is written in Heldam and Modal, who prophesied to the People in the Wilderness. The Rabbins are divided about the Subject of their Prophesies. Some say they prophesied concerning Gog and Magog; others about the Quails that the Israelites were quickly to receive; others that they foretold the Death of Moses, and that Joshua would become the Head of all Israel.

Medan (I)

I. MEDAN. Some write[1] that Medan is the same as Magedan, mentioned in St. Matthew, xv. 39. and that this Word signifies the Waters of Dan, or the Fountain that that gives its Rise to the River Jordan. Josephus[2] says, this River takes its Original from a kind of Pool which is at the Foot of the Mountain of Panium, at six Score Furlongs from Cesarea Philippi, and that the Waters of this Lake pass by subterranean Channels near the City of Cesarea, where they form the River Jordan. King Agrippa desirous to know how this Lake discharged it self, called by the Greeks Phiala, that is a Plate or Dish, caused great Quantities of Straw to be thrown into it, which was found five Leagues off in the Canal of the Jordan.

Others[3] think that Medan in Arabick signifies a Fair, and that this Name is given to the Lake Phiala, and the Countrey round about, because during the Summer Season there is a Conflux of the neighbouring People, who keep there a perpetual Fair; remaining here because of the Agreeableness of the Place, and its Commodiousness for Merchandize.

Medan (II)

II. MEDAN, or Madan, the third Son of Abraham and Keturah, Gen. xxv. 2. There is a good deal of Probability, that Medan and Midian his Brother, peopled the Countrey of Midian or Madian, which is to the East of the Dead Sea[1]; very different from another Countrey of Midian to the East of the Red-Sea, which will be spoken of afterwards.

Medeba

MEDEBA, or Medaba, Madaba, Medava, a City beyond Jordan, and in the Southern Parts of the Tribe of Reuben, Josh. xiii. 16. The Moabites took Possession of it, Isai. xvi. 2. Eusebius says, that Medeba was not far from Hesbbon or Chesbon. Isaiah attributes [Isai. xvi. 2.] it to Moab, because the Moabites took it from the Israelites. Josephus[1] and some others ascribe it to the Arabians, because the Arabians had indeed made themselves Masters of it towards the Conclusion of the Jewish Monarchy. The The Inhabitants of Medaba having killed John Gaddis, Brother of Judas Maccabæus, as he was passing to the Countrey of the Nabatheans[2]: Quickly afterwards Simon and Jonathan his Brethren revenged his Death upon the Children of Jambri, as they were conducting a new married Bride to the House of a Man of Quality that had married her.

After the Affront that Hanan King of the Ammonites had offered to David's Ambassadors, [2 Sam. x. 4. 1 Chron. xix. 4.] he easily perceived, that this Prince would not long sit down under it, but would soon endeavour to revenge such an Insult, and that therefore he ought to prepare for the War that was coming upon him. He therefore sent a Thousand Talents to raise Troops among his Neighbours, and procured twenty Thousand Men from Rehob and Zoba, a Thousand from Maachah, and twelve Thousand from Ish-tob. He likewise obtained from Mesopotamia a great Number of Chariots of War. The Chronicles mention [1 Chron. xx. 7.] thirty two Thousand, but this is such a prodigious Number, that it is plain there must be some Mistake.

When David had Intelligence of these Preparations, he sent Joab against them at the Head of all his best Troops. The Ammonites did not think fit to suffer themselves to be besieged, nor yet to venture themselves in the open Countrey; they set their Army in Battle-array under the Walls of the City Medeba, and their auxiliary Troops were encamped by themselves in the Plain. Joab divided his Army into two Bodies, one of which under the Command of his Brother Abishai was to make Head against the Ammonites, and the other commanded by himself was to attack the Camp of the Syrians, and the rest of the Foreigners. He says to his Brother, If the Syrians be too strong for me, then thou shalt help me; but if the Children of Ammon be too strong for thee, then will I come and help thee. Joab began the Attack, and fell upon the Syrians with so much Fury, that he routed them and put them to Flight. The Ammonites seeing the Syrians defeated, betook themselves to Flight also, and retired with Precipitation into Medeba.

[Observations upon the Battle of Medeba.] The sacred History, ever fruitful in extraordinary Events, especially under the Reign of King David, here gives us an Account [2 Sam. x. 6, &c. 1 Chron. xix. 6, &c.] of an Action very singular and surprizing. An Army here advances of its own Accord, and interposes between two other Armies of Enemies, much stronger and more numerous than themselves; and not only makes Head against them both at the same Time, but also obtains a compleat Victory over them. This is what we cannot find an Instance of any where else, either in ancient or modern History; and I think we never have heard of any Action more rare or wonderful than this was. And the sacred Authors themselves judged it so worthy of being transmitted to Posterity, that it is inserted not only in the second Book of Samuel, but also in the first of the Chronicles, on Occasion of the War of the Israelites against the Ammonites, and the Kings their Allies.

It appears that the Armies of these Confederates were very considerable, though the Scripture only mentions thirty three Thousand Men of auxiliary Troops, and a great Number of Chariots of War. It says, [1 Chron. xix. 7.] They hired thirty and two Thousand Chariots, and the King of Maachab and his People, who came and pitched before Medeba. And the Children of Ammon gathered themselves together from their Cities, and came to Battle.

When David had Notice of all these Preparations, he gave Orders to Joab to march against them, with the Choice of all his Troops.

The Children of Ammon came out, and put the Battle in Array at the entering in of the Gate, [of Medeba] And the Syrians of Zoba and of Rebob, and Ish-tob and [2 Sam. x. 8.] Maachab were by themselves in the Field.

Joab was a very gallant Man, and very [1 Chron. xix. 9.] well knew how to extricate himself out of any Difficulties of this Nature; and therefore resolved to attack both these formidable Armies at the same Time. He easily foresaw that he should be hemmed in on all Sides; but his own Valour, and the Bravery of his Troops, seemed to him sufficiently to answer for the Success of this bold Enterprize.

The Scripture is not particular in the Order and Distribution of these three Armies: But as we are now upon the Hebrew Xenoph. Cyro-paid. l. vi. Tacticks, it will be impossible to be mistaken in it, if we have but a little Experience in the Art of War. We need but read with Attention the Description of the Actions, and we may be assured of the Conclusions to be drawn from them. To which may be added, that in many Places the sacred Authors explain to us the Manner of ranging their Armies, which was the same as that of the other People of Asia, and which they have always preserved, except in the Depth of their Files, which makes no considerable Alteration. So that we cannot be much mistaken in the Order that we conceive they observed.

The Jews ranged their Infantry in great Bodies, in the same right Line, with small Spaces between the Battalions, to leave Room for the Retreat of such as were wounded, or for those that were to carry Orders. That is, they generally fought in a perfect Phalanx, having a great Extent of Front. Xenophon says°, in his History of Cyrus, that the Infantry of Crœsus had the Depth of thirty Men. I am persuaded that the Jews ranged themselves according to the same Principles that obtained among their Neighbours, when they found themselves to be strong enough; but when their Weakness would not allow them to range themselves in this Manner, they fought in several great and separate Bodies, after the Manner of Columns, in Order to penetrate into the Enemies Lines in different Places, in which they almost always succeeded.

Joab easily perceiving that he could not fight the Ammonites, without having the Syrians at the same Time at his Back, who were then posted at the Foot of a Mountain, and who would infallibly turn their Army, as really they did, to hemm him in; formed himself into two Lines, or Phalanxes; the Foot in the Center, and the Horse at the two Wings. In Samuel there is no Mention of Horse, but the Chronicles supply this Defect. Currus & Equites. And though they had not been mentioned, yet I should have been the more strongly persuaded of it, that there was Cavalry in the three Armies, because there appears to have been a very great Number in the last Battle, which decided the Fate of the Ammonites, and of the Kings their Allies, a Campaign or two after, where David at [2 Sam. x. 18.] the Head of his Army slew the Men of seven Hundred Chariots of the Syrians, and forty Thousand Horsemen, and smote Shobach the Captain of their Host, who died there. The Vulgate says, Occidit David de Syris septingentos currus, & quadringenta millia equitum. I think 'tis better to translate it, that David made himself Master ster of all these Chariots, and that he cut in Pieces the Men that drove them. For otherwise Readers might imagine, that David broke the Chariots to Pieces, whereas they were always preserved as Trophies of Victory, as also that they might afterwards be used for the same Purpose.

But now let us return to the first Battle. The Chronicles assign to the Ammonites thirty two Thousand Chariots of War. Father Calmet thinks this Number to be very excessive, and believes there is some Error in the Number. I am of his Opinion, and even doubt, literally speaking, that there could be seven Thousand in the second Battle, which put an End to this War. Much more does the Number of thirty two Thousand seem to be incredible. For though each Chariot should have had no more than two Men in it, and were drawn by two Horses, this would make sixty four Thousand Men, and as many Horses. But what Extent of Countrey must these Chariots have taken up, when ranged in a Line? The Calculation of this would not be difficult; it would be much more so to believe, that the Front of one or two Armies should possess such a Quantity of Ground. For it would require more than a Million of Men, with six in File. Chariots of War have been long in Use among the People of Asia; but do we ever find that the Kings of Assyria, the Medes, or the Persians have ever took the Field with so large a Number? Xenophon assures us[3], that Cyrus had three hundred Chariots of War in the Battle which he fought against Crœsus King of Lydia. It does not appear that this Prince had a greater Number, tho' he was more potent by half than his Enemy. We find much fewer in the Battle of Cyrus the younger against his Brother Artaxerxes[4], and even in the Army of Darius, and in that of Alexander the Great[5]. We may conclude from hence, that it was not possible the Ammonites should have so many Chariots of War, there must be some Mistake in the Number, or that the Hebrew Word which we translate by Chariots must signifie something else.

Lastly Joab committed to his Brother Abishai the Command of half the Army, to lead them against the Ammonites, and himself marched at the Head of the other half, to attack the Syrians; after he had confirmed his Courage, and required of him, that if either of them should happen to be worsted, that the other should come to his Assistance. All these Things being thus concerted between them, Joab, who was brave as well as prudent, began this great Action by the Attack of the Syrians; being well assured, that if he should happen to beat them, before Abishai should fall in with the Ammonites, that these would soon betake themselves to Flight, for Fear of having the two Brothers at once to pour upon them. It happened just as he had foreseen. The Syrians were routed and began to fly. The Ammonites disheartened at such a sudden Rout, gave Ground, and retired into the Town in great Disorder.

Medes

MEDES, Inhabitants of the Countrey of Media. 'Tis commonly thought, that Media was peopled by the Descendants of Madai, [Genes. x. 2. מדי Madai. Esther i. 3, 14, 18, 19, x. 2. Dan. v. 28. vi. 3, 12, 15. viii. 20. Strabo, l. i. & l. xi.] Son of Japheth. Esther and Daniel commonly put Madai for the Medes, and so generally all the Interpreters understand it. The Greeks maintain, that this Countrey takes its Name from Medus the Son of Medea; and truly if what has been said before under the Article of MADAI is to be relied on, or if this Son of Japheth peopled Macedonia, we must then seek another Original for the People of Media. And indeed it is pretty difficult to comprehend, that Japheth, who, as the Scripture says, is [Gen. x. 5,] the Father of those People who have peopled the Islands of the Nations, should send Madai very far into Asia, beyond the Euphrates, to a Countrey so distant from those that were peopled by his other Sons. But if Madai and his immediate Descendants have not peopled Media, yet at least we cannot but allow, that some of his Posterity may have carried his Name thither, since we find it so often given to Media, from the Time of the Prophets Isaiah and Jeremiah, and from the Transportation of the ten Tribes, and the Destruction of Samaria, which happened under Salmanasser, in the Year of the World 3283, before Christ 717, before the Vulgar Æra 721. The Expedition of the Argonauts, in which was the Rape of Medea, happened in the Year of the World 2760, about 40 Years before the taking of Troy; so that there is nothing impossible in this Conjecture of the Greeks, that Media has taken its Name from Medus the Son of Jason and Medea; nor nothing contrary to Scripture, which speaks of the Medes from the Time of Salmanasser, in 3283, and often since that Time, in the Times of Isaiah, Jeremiah, Daniel, Judith, Esther and Tobit. From the Expedition of the Argonauts, to the taking of Samaria, are five Hundred and twenty three Years.

The Borders of Media have not always been the same, but it has taken in sometimes a larger, and sometimes a narrower, Extent. Ptolemy makes the Limits to the North to be a Part of the Caspian Sea, and the Mountains of the same Name, and[1] [Judith i. 1.] the Cadusians; to the West the greater Armenia; to the East the Countries of the Parthians and Hyrcania; and to the South Persia, Susiana, and a Part of Assyria. The capital City of Media was Ecbatane, of which Mention is made in the Book of Judith. The Author of this Book makes King Arphaxad, whom we take to be the same as Phraortes, to have at least improved and adorned this City, if not to have been the first Founder of it. Yet Herodotus[2] says expressly, that it was Dejoces that first undertook this Work. But as the Undertaking was very great, it is probable he left enough to his Successor Phraortes to compleat, so as to make him be called the Builder of it, and so to verify what is said in Scripture. See ECBATANE before. Rages was also in [Tob. i. 14. iii. 7, &c. 2 Kings xvii. 6. xviii. 11. Isai. xiii. 17, 18.] Media; and Salmanasser made the ten Tribes of Israel, which he carried beyond Euphrates, to inhabit the Cities of Media.

Isaiah describes the Medes to us, as the Instruments and Executioners of God's Decrees against Babylon. Behold I will stir up the Medes against them, which shall not regard Silver, and as for Gold they shall not delight in it. Their Bows also shall dash the young Men to Pieces, and they shall have no Pity on the Fruit of the Womb; their Eye shall not spare Children. And Babylon the Glory of Kingdoms, the Beauty of the Chaldees Excellency, shall be as when God overthrew Sodom and Gomorrah. See also [Jerem. xxv. 25.] Chap. xxi. 2, 3, &c. of the same Prophet. Jeremiah speaks of the Misfortunes which were also to happen to the Medes. He foretels to them, that they also in their Turn were to drink of the Cup of the Wrath of God; and 'tis likely it was Cyrus, who made them suffer the Evils they were here threatned with. But Darius the Mede succeeded to the Kingdom of Belshazzar King of Chaldæa, and Cyrus succeeded Darius. [Dan. v. 31. Dan. xiii. 65.] But Daniel, who informs us of this Succession, tells us no Particulars of it; though the other Prophets, who speak of the Affairs of the Medes and of Babylon, sufficiently shew that these Revolutions were not effected without War. However this be, since Darius the Successor of Belshazzar, all the Kings of Babylon assume the Title of Kings of the Persians and Medes, or Kings of the Medes and Persians.

Mediator

MEDIATOR. In the Covenants between Man and Man, wherein the holy Name of God is made Use of, God is the Witness and Mediator of the reciprocal Promises and Engagements that Men make to one another. Thus Laban and Jacob made a Covenant upon Mount Gilead or Galead; and when the Elders of Gilead [Gen. xxxi. 49—54.] made a Covenant with Jephthah, and engaged themselves to acknowledge him for their Head, they called upon the Name of the Lord, and mutually bound themselves [Judg. xi. 10.] by Oath to keep their Promises.

When God thought fit to give his Law to the Hebrews, and to make a Covenant with them at Sinai, there was Need of a Mediator, who should relate the Words of God to the Hebrews, and their Answer to God; to the End that the Articles of the Covenant being agreed on by each Party, they might be ratified and confirmed by the Blood of Beasts, and by Oath. Moses therefore upon this Occasion was the Mediator between God and Man, as St. Paul says, Galat. iii. 19. The Law was added because of Transgressions ——, and ordained by Angels in the Hand of a Mediator. Lastly, in the new Covenant that God has been pleased to make with the Christian Church, Jesus Christ was the Mediator of Redemption between God and Man. He was the Surety, the Sacrifice, the Priest, and the Intercessor of this Covenant[1]. He has sealed it with his Blood, has proposed the Terms and Conditions of it in his Gospel, has instituted the Form of it in Baptism, and the continual Ratification of it in the Sacrament of his Body and Blood. St. Paul in the Epistle to the Hebrews very much magnifies this Quality or Office of Mediator of the New Testament, which was assumed by Jesus Christ.

[Heb. viii. 6. ix. 25. xii. 24.] Lastly, we acknowledge as Mediators of Intercession between God and us, the Priests and Ministers of the Lord, who offer up the publick Sacrifices of Prayer in the Name of the whole Church of Jesus Christ. We ascribe the same Quality to holy Persons yet alive, to whose Prayers we recommend our selves; to the Angels, who offer up our [1 Thess. v. 25. 2 Thess. iii. 1. Hebr. xiii. 18. Medicine MEDICINE or Physick, Jesus the Son of Sirach ascribes the Invention of Physick to God himself. Honour a Physician with the Honour due unto him, for the Uses which you may have of him; for the Lord hath created him. For of the most High cometh [Genes. l. 2. Act. vii. 22.] Healing, and he shall receive Honour of the King. The Skill of the Physician shall lift up his Head, and in the Sight of great Men he shall be in Admiration. The Lord hath created Medicines out of the Earth, and he that is wise will not abhor them. The Scripture makes no Mention of Physicians before the Time of the Patriarch Joseph. It says that he had commanded his Servants the Physicians of Egypt, to embalm the Body of his Father Jacob. The Business of these Physicians was to embalm the Bodies of the Dead, and to cure the Living. The Art of Medicine was very ancient in Egypt. They ascribed the Invention of it to Thaut, or to Hermes, or to Osiris or Isis; and some of the Learned have thought[1], that Moses having been instructed in all the Learning of the Egyptians, he must also have known all the chief Secrets of Medicine. They pretend also to prove it, by what he ordered in the Law concerning the Leprosy, concerning the ordinary Infirmities of Women, concerning Animals clean and unclean, concerning the sweetning of the Waters of Mara, &c. It does not appear that Physicians were very common among the Hebrews, especially for internal Maladies. But for Wounds, Fractures, Bruises, and all external Injuries, they had Physicians who understood the dressing and binding up of Wounds, and the Application of certain Medicaments, as Rosin, Balm, Fat, Oils, &c. For the Hurt of the Daughter of my People, says the Prophet Jeremiah, am I hurt, I am black, Astonishment hath taken [Jerem. viii. 22.] hold on me. Is there no Balm in Gilead? Is there no Physician there? Why then is not the Health of the Daughter of my People recovered? And elsewhere, Go up into [Jerem. xlvi. 11.] Gilead and take Balm, O Virgin, the Daughter of Egypt; in vain shalt thou use many Medicines, for thou shalt not be cured. And Ezekiel, Son of Man, I have broken the [Ezek. xxx. 21.] Arm of Pharaoh King of Egypt, and lo, it shall not be bound up to be healed, to put a Roller to bind it, to make it strong to hold the Sword.

But in Distempers that did not appear outwardly, as Fevers, the Gout, Pains of the Bowels or of the Head, the Plague, &c. we hear neither of Remedies or Physicians. [1 Kings xv. 23. 2 Chron. xvi. 12. 2 Kings xx. 7. Isai. xxxviii. 21.] Asa being diseased in his Feet, and having applied himself to the Physicians, he was upbraided with it, as an Action contrary to that Confidence which he ought to have had in the Lord. Hezekiah having a Boyl, of which he was ready to die, was cured by Isaiah, only by the Application of a Cataplasm of Figs. There was no Remedy known for the Leprosy, or for those Distempers which are the Conse quences of Incontinence, and which we meet with often in Scripture. When Job was struck with a very terrible Distemper, we hear no Mention of any Recourse that he had to Physick or Physicians; his Malady was looked on as an immediate Stroke from the Hand of God, his Friends reason about it according to their Prejudices, and undertake to prove, that it was sent him as a just Punishment for his past Sins.

The little Use that was made of the Art of Medicine, and the Persuasion they had imbibed, that Distempers were the Effects of God's Anger, and caused by evil Spirits, the Executioners of his Vengeance, was the Reason that in extraordinary Maladies they applied themselves to Diviners, Magicians, Enchanters, or to the false Gods of the Pagans, who had the Reputation of giving Oracles, and foretelling future Events. Or sometimes they applied to the Prophets of the Lord, to receive a Cure from them, or at least to know whether they should recover or no. When Abaziah King of Israel, by a Fall from the Roof of his House, had got a great Hurt, he sent to consult the false God Baal-zebub [2 Kings i. 2, &c. Jerem. viii. 17.] at Ekron, a City of the Philistines. Jeremiah speaks of Enchantments, that were used against the biting of Serpents, and other venomous Animals. Hazael King of Syria sent to consult Elisha the Prophet [2 Kings viii. 7. 2 Kings v. 5, 6.] about his Distemper. Naaman the Syrian came into the Land of Israel, to obtain from Elisha a Cure for his Leprosy. At the same Time that our Saviour appeared in Palestine, no doubt but there were Physicians in the Countrey; but it appears that the People made little Use of 'em, and placed but little Confidence in them. They brought to our Saviour and his Apostles a great Multitude of diseased People from all Parts.

The Jewish Authors speak of Physicians in a Manner that is not at all favourable to 'em[2]. " The best of the Physicians, say " they, deserve Hell, and the justest of " Butchers is the Companion of Amalek. " The Physician kills many Persons by his " Ignorance, whom he might cure by his " Art; he lets many of the Poor perish, " whom he might comfort by his Medicines. He indulges many in a Diet too " high for 'em, which is the Cause of their " Death. He alienates others from that " Confidence which they ought to place in " God alone, and makes them place it in " his Art." They speak thus by Way of Imprecation, " He that sins against his " Creator, let him fall into the Hands of " the Physician." Lastly, they say, " Oh " that the ablest of the Physicians may go " to Hell, for he lives splendidly, he fears " no Distemper, he bruises not his Heart " before God, and kills the Poor by refusing him his Assistance.

Though the Scripture does not make express Mention of Physicians or of Medicine before the Time of the Patriarch Joseph, who ordered his Physicians to embalm the Body of his Father Jacob, we are not to conclude from thence that the Art of Medicine was a Novelty in the World. Adam had received a perfect and extensive Knowledge of natural Things, of the Power of Simples, of the Virtues of Juices, Liquors, and Minerals; and therefore without doubt could not fail to cultivate and improve this Knowledge, since he found himself condemned to Diseases and Death it self, by an irrevocable Decree. The Occasion he found himself under, of recruiting his Strength, and of preserving his Health, put him under a Necessity of having Recourse to natural Remedies, and consequently of studying the Nature of them, their Effects and Properties.

A Science so useful as this could not afterwards fall into Oblivion; it may be supposed that Adam taught it his Children, that they cultivated it farther, and transmitted it to their Posterity. The Ancients speak with great Advantage of the Knowledge that the Egyptians had acquired in Physick. Homer tells us, that the Egyptians were the most skilful Physicians in the World, and that every one of 'em understood Physick[3]. But this without doubt must be an Hyperbole. Indeed Herodotus owns[4], that that Countrey abounded with Physicians, because each Part of the human Body, and every Distemper, had its particular Physician. Some confined themselves to the Eyes, others to the Teeth, and others to Diseases of the Head. Diodorus Siculus observes[5], that these People had certain sacred Books, which contained the Principles of Medicine used in their Countrey. In the Management of their Patients, it was not allowed them to depart from the Rules prescribed by these Books; if they succeeded in the Cure, well and good; if not, the Physician could lie under no Reproach, because he had only followed the Rules of his Art. But if he did not conform himself to them, even though he should cure his Patient, he was to suffer Death for Male-practice.

[Acts vii. 22.] Moses had studied all the Sciences of Egypt. Eruditus est in omni sapientia Egyptiorum: And without all doubt he had learned their Physick as well as the rest of their Learning. What he says of the Leprosie, of the Way of knowing it, of distinguishing its several Stages, of curing it, and of determining whether it was recent, inveterate, and incurable, or whether there might be Hopes of curing it; all this shews a great Degree of Skill in this Distemper. 'Tis thought that the Wood which he threw into the Waters of Marah, to sweeten a Spring or [Ecclus. xxxviii. 4, 5. Numb. xxi. 8, 9] a Well of bitter Water, and the brazen Serpent that he set up in the Wilderness to cure those that had been bit by Serpents, were the Arcana of a secret and mysterious kind of Physick. The Distinction he makes between clean and unclean Animals, and of the Defects of the Priests which disqualified them for the sacred Ministry, and many other Remarks upon the Infirmities both of Men and Women, which are to be found in his Books, prove sufficiently that he was not ignorant of the Secrets of Physick. St. Clement of Alexandria says expressly, that Moses had learned the Art of Medicine under some of the most skilful Masters of Egypt[6].

But I would not however be understood to affirm that the ancient Physicians of Egypt applied themselves to the Cure of internal Diseases, such as the Fever, and many other Distempers, which are owing to an ill State of the Blood, or of the other Fluids of the Body. 'Tis plain that the most famous Physicians of Greece, as Chiron, Machaon, Podalirius, Pæan, and Esculapius himself, were no other than good Chirurgeons. Their Art did not go beyond the curing of a green Wound, as Pliny himself observes. Celsus takes Notice, that Podalirius and Machaon, the Sons of Esculapius, who accompanied King Agamemnon to the Wars of Troy, were never made Use of to cure the Plague, nor internal Maladies, but only Wounds and external Injuries.

The Physick of the Hebrews was hardly in any greater Degree of Perfection. Solomon who knew so well the Secrets of Nature, and the Virtues of Simples; who had wrote Treatises upon Beasts, Birds, Fishes, and had composed natural Histories of Trees and Plants, from the Cedar of Libanus to the [1 Kings iv. 33.] Hyssop on the Wall: This Prince, I say, so illuminated as he was, might have given us great Light into these Matters, if God had been so pleased as to have permitted his Works to have come down to our Hands. Josephus says, that Solomon had obtained a Power of driving away Devils, and of curing those Evils that they cause to Mankind[7]: That he had composed Charms against Distempers, and Forms of Exorcisms to drive out evil Spirits from the Bodies of possessed People, and to prevent their returning again. He adds, that the Jews in his Time made great Use of these Remedies. A Jew called Eleazar cured several possessed Persons in the Presence of Vespasian, of his two Sons, and of many Officers and Soldiers.

He put a Ring under the Nostrils of the possessed, in which a Root was concealed, as prescribed by Solomon. At the same Time he pronounced the Name of this Prince, and the Words directed by him. The Demoniack presently fell upon the Ground, and the Devil returned no more into his Body. And as a Proof of the Power and Efficacy of his Art, the same Jew ordered a Basin of Water to be set at some Distance from the possessed, and commanding the Devil to come out, he bid him also to overturn the Basin as he passed; the Basin was accordingly overturned, and the possessed was found to be perfectly cured.

The same Josephus[8] speaks of a wonderful Root called Baaras, which produced the Effect here mentioned, and perhaps was the same as that included in Eleazar's Ring. These are not the only Instances of Cures by superstitious Methods, which we find to have been in Use among the ancient Hebrews. The Scripture often speaks of Charms used in the Bitings of Serpents, and Enchantments made Use of to lay asleep or enchant these Animals, and to prevent their being noxious. See Jeremiah viii 17. Job xl. 25. Psalm lvii. 5. Ecclesiasticus xii. 13. See also our Dissertation upon the Enchantment of Serpents, before the Psalms.

The ancient Greeks had the same Customs. Pindar tells us[9], that Esculapius cured all Sorts of Fevers, Ulcers, Wounds, and Pains, by soothing Enchantments, sweetning Potions, topical and external Remedies, or lastly, by Incision. Homer relates[10], that by Enchantments the Blood was stopped that issued out of Ulysses's Wound. Cato[11] has preserved certain Verses, which were used in the reducing a dislocated Member. Plato tells us[12], that the Midwives of Athens had a Secret by Means of certain Drugs and certain Charms, to cause Women in Travail easily to bring forth Children.

The Hebrews were neither less curious, nor less superstitious than other People. Among them Charms, Enchantments, curious Arts, Talismans, Phylacteries, the Sound of Instruments, and such like, were used to cure or relieve sick Persons, or to secure them against the Bitings of Serpents, and Fascinations. Saul's Servants provided a Musician to relieve their Master, when under the Influence of an evil Spirit. The Jews ascribed to Beelzebub those Miracles they saw performed by Jesus Christ. We have given just now the Story of Eleazar the Jew, who recovered a Man that was possessed by the Scent of a Root, and certain Words. The Angel Raphael drove away the Devil by the Fume of the broiled Liver of a Fish. God forbid I should confound this last Example with those before going, relating to the vain Curiosity or Superstition of the Jews. I acknowledge this to be miraculous, or at least that the Manner by which it operated upon the Devil, is to us unknown. The Reader for his further Satisfaction may consult our Dissertation upon the Physick of the Hebrews, prefixed to our Commentary upon Ecclesiasticus, and the Article DISEASES.

Meditation

MEDITATION; the chief Employment of the just Man is to meditate upon the Law of God Day and Night. This is the principal and most usual Acceptation of the Verb to meditate; to think closely and seriously upon any Thing. We also say, to meditate, when we speak indeed, but low and indistinctly, as when a Man learns any Thing by Heart, or rehearses in a low Voice any Thing in which his Thoughts are deeply engaged. Job says, My Lips shall not speak Wickedness, nor my Tongue utter (or meditate) Deceit. The Psalmist says, My Tongue shall speak (or meditate) of thy Righteousness. [Psal. xxxv. 28.] And elsewhere, The Mouth of the Righteous speaketh (or meditate) Wisdom. And Solomon says, My Mouth shall speak (or meditate) Truth.

Isaiah compares the Groanings of an [Isai. xxxviii. 14.] afflicted Man to those of a Dove; and he makes Use of the Word to meditate, to express them both. Sicut pullus hirundinis sic clamabo, meditabor ut columba. And elsewhere, [Isai. lix. 11.] Sicut columba meditantes gememus. 'Tis pretty near in the same Sense that Virgil says, Silvestrem tenui Musam meditaris avenâ.

Megasthenes

MEGASTHENES. This Author ought to be admitted into this Dictionary, because he is often quoted by Josephus the Historian, by Eusebius, and also by Strabo, Athenæus, Pliny, and some other Ancients, as having wrote upon the Antiquities of the Indies, and relating many Things therein, which concern the Empire of Babylon, and the Power of Nebuchadnezzar, which have a great Relation to what we learn from Scripture. Now Megasthenes was a Grecian[1], and had the Honour of having the Confidence of Seleucus King of Syria, who made Use of him in the Negotiations he had with Sandrorotenus King of the Indies. He had Opportunity, while he was at the Court of this Prince, to study the History and Manners of the Countrey, and to see several Provinces of it, which enabled him afterwards to write the History of it. This Work is entirely lost, and there only now remain some Fragments, as they are quoted by Joseph. Antiq. l. x. c. 11. And against Appion, l. i. In Eusebius's præparat. Evang. l. ix. In Strabo, l. xv. p. 687, &c. Annius Viterbensis, a famous Impostor born in 1437, published several Authors that he had forged, and Megasthenes among others, whom he calls Metasthenes, because he had so found it in the Latin Version of Josephus, made by Rufinus. But the Books he then published, with Commentaries after his Manner, are every where fallen into so great Contempt, that no one is now rash enough to make Use of their Testimony.

Melchisedec

MELCHISEDEC, King of Salem, and Priest of the most High. The Scripture tells us nothing, either of his Father, or of [Heb. vii. 1, 2, 3.] his Mother, or of his Genealogy, or of his Birth, or of his Death. And in this Sense he was a Figure of Jesus Christ, as St. Paul affirms, who is a Priest for ever, according to the Order of Melchisedec, and not according to the Order of Aaron, whose Original, Life, and Death are known. When Abraham returned from pursuing the four confederate Kings, who had defeated the Kings of Sodom and Gomorrah, and had taken away Lot, Abraham's [Genes. xiv. 17, 18, 19, &c.] Nephew, along with them; Melchisedec comes to meet Abraham as far as the Valley of Shaveh, which was afterwards named the King's Valley, and presents him with the Refreshments of Bread and Wine, or he offered º Bread and Wine in Sacrifice to the Lord, for he was a Priest of the most High God. And he blessed Abraham, saying, " Blessed " be Abraham of the most High God, possessor of Heaven and Earth; and blessed " be the most High God, who hath delivered thine Enemies into thy Hand." Abraham being desirous to acknowledge in him the Quality of Priest of the Lord, offered him the Tythes of all he had taken from the Enemy. After this Time there is no more Mention made of [Psalm cx. 4.] the Person of Melchisedec; only the Psalmist speaking of the Messiah, says, " Thou art a Priest " for ever after the Order of Melchisedec.

St. Paul in his Epistle to the Hebrews [Heb. v. 6, 10.] unfolds the Mystery, which is concealed in what is said of Melchisedec in the Old Testament. First he exalts the Priesthood of Christ, who is a Priest for ever after the Order of Melchisedec, and who in this Quality, in the Days of his Flesh offered up Prayers and Supplications, with strong Crying [Heb. vi. 20. Hebr. vii. 1, 2, 3, &c.] and Tears, unto him that was able to save him from Death, and was heard in that he feared, Heb. v. 7. He also says, that our Saviour as a Forerunner is entered for us within the Veil, or into Heaven, being made an High-priest for ever after the Order of Melchisedec. " For, as he adds, this " Melchisedec King of Salem, and Priest of " the most High God, who came to meet " Abraham when he returned from his " Victory over the Kings, and who blessed " him, and to whom Abraham gave the " Tythe of all he had taken, who is called " according to the Interpretation of his " Name, first King of Justice, and secondly King of Salem, or King of Peace; " who is without Father, without Mother, " without Genealogy, who has neither Beginning nor End of his Life; this Melchisedec, I say, became thus the Image " of the Son of God, who remains a Priest " for ever. Consider therefore how great " he is, since Abraham himself gives him " the Tythe of the best that he had. But " without doubt he that receives the Blessing is inferior to him that gives it. And " indeed under the Law, those that receive Tythe are mortal Men, whereas " he that receives it here is represented as " living always. And moreover Levi, who " receives Tythes from others, has paid it " himself, as one may say, in the Person of " Abraham, since he was still in the Person " of Abraham his Ancestor, when Melchisedec met this Patriarch.

An infinite Number of Difficulties and Scruples have been started upon the Subject of Melchisedec. St. Jerome[1] thought that Salem, of which Melchisedec was King, was not Jerusalem, but the City of Salem near Scythopolis, where they still pretended to shew the Ruines of the Palace of this Prince. The Greatness and Extent of these Ruines are a sufficient Proof of the Magnificence of this ancient Building. He thinks it was at this City of Salem or Shalem that Jacob arrived after his Passage over Jordan, at his Return from Mesopotamia, Genesis xxxiii. 18; where the Vulgate mentions, that Jacob came safe and found to Sichem; the Hebrew reads, he came to Salem near Sechem, or Shechem. Some believe that Salem, where Melchisedec reigned, is the same as Salim, spoke of in the Gospel of St. John, Chap. iii. 23. Vid Reland. Palæst.

From the Time of Epiphanius[2] there were Names invented for the Father and Mother of Melchisedec. To his Father was given the Name of Heraclas, or Heracles, and to his Mother that of Astaroth, or Astaria.

The Arabic Catena upon the ninth Chapter of Genesis makes him to be descended from Shem by his Father, and from Japheth by his Mother. Heraclas or Heraclim, the Father of Melchisedec was, as they say, Son or Grandson of Phaleg, and Son of Heber; and his Mother named Salathiel, was Daughter of Gomer Son of Japheth. Joseph Son of Gorion, an Hebrew Historian[3], who wrote about the eleventh Century, pretends that Melchisedec was otherwise called Joram; that the Star that ruled at his Nativity had the Name of Sedec, or the Planet Jupiter; that the City in which he reigned was first named Jebus, then Sedec, and lastly Salem or Jerusalem.

Michael Glycas[4], Georgius Cedrenus[5], and Simon Logothetes[6], derive Melchisedec from an Egyptian Race. They say his Father was called Sidon or Sida, and was the Founder of the City of Sidon, the Capital of Phœnicia. As for Melchisedec, he founded Salem upon Mount Sion, ruled there thirty Years, and died without Children. Suidas[7] says he reigned there an hundred and thirty Years, and died unmarried; that he was of the cursed Race of Canaan, whence it comes to pass, that the Scripture does not mention his Genealogy. Another Greek Author[8], who has borrowed the Name of Athanasius, says that Melchisedec was the Son of an idolatrous King, called Melchi, and of a Queen named Salem. Melchi having resolved to offer a Sacrifice to his Gods, sent his Son Melchisedec to fetch him seven Calves, that he might sacrifice them. As the young Prince was going, he was enlightened of God, and immediately returned to his Father, to remonstrate to him the Vanity of his Idols. Melchi in Wrath sent him back to fetch the Victims. While he was absent, the King offered up to his Gods his own Son, being the elder Brother of Melchisedec, with a great Number of other Children. Melchisedec returning, and conceiving a great Horror at this Butchery, retired to Mount Tabor, where he lived for seven Years, without Cloths, and without any other Food but wild Fruits, and having no other Drink but the Dew, that he sucked up from the Plants.

At the End of seven Years God appeared to Abraham, and bid him go upon Mount Tabor, where he should find Melchisedec. He bid him cloath him, and ask him his Blessing; to which Abraham complied. He found Melchisedec, and having asked his Blessing, Melchisedec anointed him with Oil, blessed him, and changed his Name from Abram into that of Abraham. They came down together from the Mountain, and Abraham returned to his own Habitation. Sometime afterwards, as he returned from pursuing Chedorlaomer, and his Allies, Melchisedec met him, and presented a Cup of Wine to him, having first privately put a Piece of Bread into it, to signify that holy Oblation that is made upon our Altars. But we bring this Relation only as a Romance, and very injudiciously put together; which therefore we need not be at the Trouble to confute.

The Author of the Questions upon the Old and New Testament, printed among the Works of St. Austin[9], had written, that Melchisedec was not a Man, but the Holy Ghost, who appeared to Abraham in a human Form. Evangelus (or Evangelius) sent this Writing to St. Jerome[10], desiring him to tell him his Thoughts of it. St. Jerome having examined the ancient Doctors of the Church, found that Origen and Didymus took Melchisedec for an Angel; but that Hippolitus, Irenœus, Eusebius of Cæsarea, Eusebius of Emesus, Apollinarius, and Eustathius of Antioch, all agreed to declare, though in different Terms, and by different Ways of Reasoning, that this Prince was a Canaanite by Birth, and King of Salem, otherwise called Jebus, or Jerusalem. This holy Doctor shews, that Melchisedec was an express Figure of Jesus Christ, as King of Salem, or King of Peace, being Priest and King both together, a Priest for ever according to the Order of Melchisedec. And when it is said by St. Paul, that he was without Father, without Mother, and without Descent; this is not intended to acquaint us that he descended from Heaven, or that he was formed immediately by the Hands of God, but merely that he is introduced into the History of Abraham, without informing us who he was, or from whence he came, or at what Time he was born, or when he died.

At the Beginning of the third Century, a Heresy was formed by Theodorus the Banker, a Disciple of Theodorus the Currier, called the Heresy of the Melchisedecians[11]. These Hereticks affirmed, that Melchisedec was not a Man, but a heavenly Power even superior to Jesus Christ, since Melchisedec was the Intercessor and Mediator of the Angels, and Jesus Christ was so only for Men. That Jesus Christ was but the Copy of Melchisedec, and his Priesthood was formed only on the Model of that of Melchisedec, according to that of the Psalmist; Thou art a Priest for ever according to the Order of Melchisedec. They answered literally what St. Paul says, that Melchisedec had neither Father, Mother, or Descent. These Hereticks to vindicate their Errors, made Use of certain Books composed by themselves, and which they imputed to Persons not mentioned in the Scripture. This Heresy was revived in Egypt by one Hierax, who maintained, that Melchisedec was the Holy Ghost. Cedrenus and Zonaras[12] speak of another Sort of Melchisedecians, otherwise called Autingani, as not daring to touch others, for Fear of being defiled. They lived chiefly in Phrygia, and neither received Circumcision, nor observed the Sabbath. They gave nothing to any one with their Hands, nor received any Thing from any one, but they set it upon the Ground when they offered any Thing, and took it from thence when they received it. They had a profound Veneration for Melchisedec, but it is not known upon what this Veneration was founded. The Jews, according to the Report of St. Jerome[13], and the Samaritans according to Epiphanius, maintained that Melchisedec was the same with the Patriarch Shem, the Son of Noah, which Opinion has been followed by a great Number of modern Writers[14]. M. Jurieu[15] has undertook to prove, that Melchisedec was the same as Cham, or Ham. A French Author mentioned by F. Salien[16] will have Melchisedec to be Enoch. Another confuted by F. Petau[17], said that the Magi who came to Bethlehem to adore Jesus Christ, were Enoch, Melchisedec, and Elias. Some Jewish Authors h have inferred, that Melchisedec was a Bastard, because the Scripture says nothing of his Parents or Descent. Damian the Heretick[18], of the Number of the Melchisedecians, affirmed that Melchisedec who appeared to Abraham, was the Son of God, and that the Patriarch worshipped him, and acknowledged him for the Messiah. Peter Cunæus[19] has revived this Opinion, and supported it with much Earnestness. Peter du Moulin has also asserted it, and besides in the Year 1686[20], one called James Gaillard undertook the Defence of it. The Reader may see our Dissertation, which we have expressly composed on the Subject of Melchisedec, which is printed in the second Tome of the Epistles of St. Paul before the Epistle to the Hebrews: And the Dissertation of Christopher Schlegel, printed at the End of the Commentary of Lewis Tena, upon the Epistle to the Hebrews.

The Word Melota is derived from Melon, a Sheep. It is also sometimes taken for all Sorts of Clothing of Skins with the Hair on, and particularly for clothing of Goat-skins, such as the Monks of Egypt used to wear, according to the Relation of Cassian[2].

Memphis

MEMPHIS, in Hebrew, Noph, or Moph, a very famous City of Egypt, situate at about fifteen Thousand Paces above the parting of the Nile, or where the Delta begins[1]. Above Memphis, towards the South, were the famous Pyramids, two of which were esteemed the Wonders of the World. Memphis for a long Time was the Place of Residence of the ancient Kings of Egypt, till the Times of the Ptolemies, who commonly resided at Alexandria. The City of Memphis is now entirely destroyed. The Prophets often speak of Memphis. [See Isai. xix. 13. Jerem. xliv. 1. xlvi. 14, 19. Hosea ix. 6. Ezek. xxx. 13, 16.] They foretel the Miseries it was to suffer from the Kings of Chaldæa and Persia, and they threaten the Israelites that should retire into Egypt, or should have Recourse to the Egyptians, that they should perish in this Countrey. Ezekiel says, that the Lord will destroy the Idols of Memphis. 'Twas in this City that they fed the Ox Apis, that King Cambyses put to Death.

This City is called Mesr, or Misr, by the Orientals, as being the Capital of Egypt, otherwise Mezer or Mizraim. They also call it Monf, a Name nearly approaching to the Hebrew Word Noph, or Moph, from whence the Greeks have formed their Memphis. The ancient Kings of Egypt took much Pleasure in adorning it. It continued in its Beauty till the Arabians made a Conquest of Egypt, under the Calif Omar, in the eighteenth or nineteenth Year of the Hegira, or 640 of Jesus Christ. Amron Ben-as, who took it, built another City just by it, which was called Fustbat[2], because of the Tent of this General, which was for a long Time set up in this Place. The Califs Fatimites, who became Masters of Egypt, added another to it which they called Caherah, that is, the Victorious, which is still known to us at this Day by the Name of Grand Cairo.

The Mammeluck Sultans, of the Dynasty of the Circassians, having afterward built a very high and fortified Castle; on the Eastern Shore of the Nile, brought it about by little and little, that the City of Cairo changed its Place; so that what the Fatimites had built is still to this Day called the old Cairo. But it must be observed, that the ancient Mesr, or Memphis, stood on the Western Shore of the Nile, and that whatever the Arabians have built there from Time to Time, is on the Eastern Shore of this River.

[Isai. xix. 11, 12, 13, &c.] So that at length, after a Succession of Ages, is fulfilled what the Prophets had predicted against Memphis. "These wise Counsellors of Pharaoh have given him foolish Advice: How do you say to Pharaoh, I am the Son of the wise, the Son of ancient Kings? Let these wise Men now tell you, what the Lord has resolved upon concerning Egypt. They are Fools, these wise Men of Egypt; they are without Wisdom, these Princes of Memphis; they have deceived Egypt and all its People. The Lord has scattered amongst them a Spirit of Infatuation. They have made Egypt to wander, as a Man drunk with Wine. Egypt shall be then uncertain what she shall do. Great and Small, those that command, and those that obey, shall all be in Trouble and Confusion. They shall be astonished, they shall tremble like Women. In that Time the Land of Judah shall become the Terror of Egypt, &c." We imagine all this relates to the Time of the War of Sennacherib against Egypt, and the Divisions that followed the Death of Sethon King of Egypt. See the Commentary upon the xix Chapter of Isaiah.

Jeremiah describes the Calamities that [Jerem. xlii, xliv, xlv, xlvi.] Nebuchadnezzar was to bring upon the same Countrey in a plainer Manner than this. "I shall send Nebuchadnezzar King of Babylon, my Servant, who shall set up his Throne in the City of Taphantes it self. He shall come and destroy the whole Countrey of Egypt. He shall put to Death him that is appointed for Death, and shall carry into Captivity him that is designed for Captivity, and shall put to the Sword him that is to die by the Sword. He shall set on Fire the Temples of Egypt, and shall carry away the Gods of Egypt into Captivity. He shall break down the Statues, the Pillars, or Obelisques, which are in the Temple of the Sun; probably at Memphis." All this came to pass under the Reign of Pharaohhophra King of Egypt, whom Nebuchadnezzar overcame and put to Death. Oh thou Daughter dwelling in Egypt, furnish thy self to go into Captivity; for Noph shall be waste and desolatewithout an Inhabitant.

[Jer. xlvi. 19.] Ezekiel also relates at large the Misfortunes which Nebuchadnezzar brought upon Egypt. He says that the Lord had delivered this Countrey into Nebuchadnezzar's Hands, as a Recompence of those Services he had performed for him at the Siege of Tyre[3]. He speaks in Particular of the City of Memphis. Thus says the Lord God, I will also destroy the Idols, and will cause their Images to cease out of Noph, and there shall be no more a Prince of the Land of Egypt, and I will put a Fear in the Land of Egypt. And I will make Pathros desolate, and will execute Judgments in No.

A long while after[4] Cambyses King of Persia, and Son of Cyrus, made himself Master of Egypt, having first taken Pelusium, which is as it were the Key of Egypt[5], when Psammenites King of Egypt marched out to meet him, at the Head of a powerful Army. Cambyses defeated him, and those that could escape took Refuge in Memphis; whither Cambyses pursued them, and sent to the City by Means of the Nile, a Ship of Mitylene, with a Summons to 'em to surrender. But the Egyptians in a great Rage fell upon the Herald, and upon the rest of those in the Ship, cutting them all to Pieces. When Cambyses in a short Time had made himself Master of the Place, he ordered as many Egyptians to be publickly executed, as there were Persons in the Ship of Mitylene, and those of the Chief of the Nobility. The eldest Son of King Psammenites was one of this Number. As for the King himself, Cambyses saved his Life, and even appointed him a sufficient Maintenance, but he did not enjoy it long. For it was found that he endeavoured to raise Commotions in the Kingdom, so they made him drink Bulls Blood, which killed him upon the Spot.

Egypt continued under the Government of the Persians till the Reign of Artaxerxes[6]. Then they shook off the Yoke, and chose Inarus Prince of the Libyans for their King. They called in the Athenians to their Assistance; Charitimis was intrusted with the Conduct of this Enterprize; and Artaxerxes sent Achemenides, one of his Brothers, against the Rebels, at the Head of an Army of 300000 Men. The Persians were beaten, and lost in one Battle 100000 Men. Those that escaped retired to Memphis, whither the Conquerors pursued them, and immediately made themselves Masters of two Parts of the City. But the Persians having fortified themselves in the third Part, called the white Wall, which was the largest and strongest of the three; they held out a Siege there of near three Years, till they were relieved by others sent to their Assistance.

Alexander the Great having conquered Egypt from the Persians, and having there built Alexandria, the Kings of Egypt his Successors thought of nothing else so much as of enlarging and beautifying Alexandria, till it became the capital City of Egypt. Memphis was then of small Consideration, and after several Revolutions in its Fortune it was finally destroyed by the Arabians, as we have said before.

Memra

MEMRA. This Word is often found in the Chaldee Paraphrases of the Books of Moses. It signifies the Word, and it is pretended, that under this Term the Authors of those Paraphrases would intimate the Son of God, the second Person of the Trinity. Now their Testimony is so much the more considerable, as having lived before Jesus Christ, or at the Time of Jesus Christ, they are irrefragable Witnesses of the Sentiments of their Nation concerning this Article, since their Targum or Explication has always been, and still is, in universal Esteem among the Jews. In the greatest Part of the Passages where the sacred Name of Jehovah is to be found, the Paraphrasts have there substituted the Word Memra, which signifies the Word, and which differs from Pitgama, which in Chaldee signifies Discourse. And as they ascribe to Memra all the Attributes of the Deity, 'tis concluded from thence, that they believed the Divinity of the Word.

In Effect, 'twas Memra that created the World. 'Twas the same that appeared to Abraham in the Plain of Mamre, and to Jacob on the Top of Bethel. 'Twas the same whom Jacob appealed to as a Witness of the Covenant made between him and Laban. Let the Word see between thee and me. 'Twas the same Word that appeared to Moses at the Foot of Sinai, and that gave the Law to the Israelites, that spoke Face to Face with this Lawgiver, that marched at the Head of this People, and made them conquer Nations, and was a revenging and consuming Fire for all those that violated the Law of the Lord. All these Characters, where the Paraphrast makes Use of the Word Memra, clearly mark out the Almighty God. This Word therefore was God, and the Hebrews were of this Opinion, at the Time that the Targum was composed.

This Memra answers to the Cachema, or to the Wisdom mentioned by Solomon, in the Book of Proverbs, and by Jesus the Son of Sirach in his Book called Ecclesiasticus. And [Prov. iii. 9, 20. viii. 11, 12, &c. Eccl. i, ii, iii, &c.] to the Almighty Word, omnipotens sermo[1] [Wisd. xviii. 15. Wisd. xvi. 26.] tuus, of the Book of Wisdom ; and again, That thy Children, O Lord, whom thou lovest might know, that it is not the growing of Fruits that nourisheth Man, but that it is thy Word which preserveth them that put their Trust in thee. And the Logos, the Word of which Philo speaks in so many Places[2], and the same Logos, the Mystery of which St. John the Evangelist has so divinely discovered in the Beginning of his Gospel.

All this has perplexed those who deny the Divinity of the Word. In Order to elude the Authority of the Targum, Grotius has pretended, that according to the Jews God created a subaltern Being, or secondary Deity, whose Ministry he made Use of in the Creation of the World. But this Being that creates, whoever he be, must of Necessity be God, since nothing can have this Power but God alone, and this the Targum ascribes to the Memra.

M. le Clerc says almost the same Thing, writing upon the first Chapter of St. John. He maintains, that in all that Philo says of the Logos, he does not look upon the Word as a distinct Person, but that he makes an Angel of it, and a Principle inferior to the Deity. But tho' Philo might have come short of due Accuracy, in some Passage wherein he discourses of the Word, treating of a Matter so sublime and abstruse as this was to him, we are not much to wonder at it; this Inaccuracy ought not to be imputed to the Word it self. But we should enquire whether St. John has not more fully explained it in his Gospel, who was much better informed than Philo in the Nature of the Memra. We may securely rely upon the Authority of this divine Writer, who had his Instructions from the Mouth of Jesus Christ himself, and by the Inspiration of his Spirit.

Mene

MENE, or Mane; this Chaldæan Word signifies, he has numbered or counted. At a sacrilegious Feast which Belshazzar gave to his Courtiers and Concubines, he caused to be brought the sacred Vessels of the Temple of Jerusalem, which Nebuchadnezzar had carried to Babylon[1]. Then there appeared on the Wall like a Hand Writing these Words, Mene mene, tekel, upharsin. That is to say, God has numbered, has weighed, and divided. Nobody being able to explain the Meaning of these Words, Daniel was sent for, and told the King that God had numbered his Days, and that his Hour was come: That he had weighed his Actions, and found them too light; and lastly, that he had divided his Kingdom between the Medes and Persians. That Night Belshazzar was put to Death. See his Article[2].

Meni

MENI. The Goddess Meni is the [Jerem. vii. 18. xliv. 17, 18. Isai. lxv. 11. Heb.] Moon. Jeremiah speaks of her by the Title of Queen of Heaven, and Isaiah by the Name of Meni. Each of 'em shew, that her Worship was very frequent in Palestine, and that the Hebrews were much addicted to it. Meni is probably the same as Astarta, and Venus Cælestis, in Honour among the Phœnicians and Carthaginians. 'Twas from the Phœnicians or Canaanites, that the Israelites had learned the Worship of this false Deity. Isaiah reproaches them with setting up a Table to Gad, which is the Sun, and with making Libations to Meni. Qui ponitis Fortunæ (Heb. Gad.) Mensam, & libatis super eam: (Heb. & libatis Meni) Vulg. Jeremiah says, that in Honour of the Queen of Heaven, the Fathers light the Fire, the Mothers knead the Cakes, and the Children gather the Wood to bake them. Filii colligunt ligna, & patres succendunt ignem, & mulieres conspergunt adipem, ut faciant placentas Reginæ Cæli. Elsewhere the Israelites declare to the same Jeremiah, that notwithstanding his Remonstrances, they would continue to honour the Queen of Heaven, by offering Oblations to her, as their Fathers had done before them; and that ever since they had left off to sacrifice to the Queen of Heaven, they have been consumed by the Sword and by Famine. We may see by Strabo[1], that Men, the Month or Moon, had several Temples dedicated to her Worship in Asia Minor, and in Persia, and that they often swore by the Men of the King, that is, by his Fortune. Mephibosheth (II)

II. MEPHIBOSHETH, Son of Jonathan, otherwise named Meribbaal, as may be seen under that Article. Mephibosheth was very young, when his Father Jonathan was killed in the Battle of Gilboa[1]. His Nurse was in such Consternation at this News, that she let the Child fall, who from this Accident continued lame all his Life after. When David found himself in peaceable Possession of the Kingdom[2], he sent to make a Search for all that remained of the House of Saul, that he might be kind to 'em in Consideration of the Friendship between him and Jonathan. 'Twas told him there was a Son of Jonathan's, called Mephibosheth, in the House of Ziba, a Servant of Saul's. The King sent for him, and told him, that for the Sake of Jonathan his Father he would shew Kindness to him, that he should have his Grandfathers Estate, and eat always at his Table. At the same Time he told Ziba, that he had given Mephibosheth all that belonged to Saul, bidding him make the best of the Lands for the Maintenance of Mephibosheth's Son Micha; for as to himself, he should always be maintained at the King's Table. So he dwelt at Jerusalem, and eat every Day with King David.

Some Years after this[3], when Absalom rebelled against his Father, and forced him to leave Jerusalem, Mephibosheth ordered his Servant Ziba to saddle him an Ass, that he might go along with David; for being lame, he could not go on Foot. But Ziba not only refused him this, but went after David himself with two Asses loaden with Provisions, and told him that Mephibosheth, instead of coming to wait on the King, staid at Jerusalem, in Hopes that the People of Israel would restore him to the Throne of his Ancestors. Then says David to Ziba, I give to you every Thing that belonged to Mephibosheth. But after that Absalom's Party was defeated, and David returned to Jerusalem in Peace, Mephibosheth came forth to meet the King. He appeared before him as one in deep Mourning, having neither washed his Feet, nor shaved his Beard, since the King went. When David saw him he asked him, Why did you go along with me, Mephibosheth? He answered, My Lord and my King, my Servant Ziba betrayed me in not obeying my Commands. For being lame as I am, I ordered him to prepare me an Ass that I might attend the King; instead of doing this, he went himself, to accuse me falsly to my Lord the King. But you, my Lord, are as an Angel of God, do with me as you please. For all the House of my Father have deserved nothing but Death at your Hands. instead of which you have been graciously pleased to give me a Place at your Table. What Occasion then have I to complain, and why should I be troublesome any longer? The King said to him, 'Tis enough, what I have once ordered shall stand good; therefore do you and Ziba divide the Lands between you. To this Mephibosheth replied, I am very willing that he should have all, since I have seen my Lord the King return safely to his own House. Mephibosheth left a Son named Micha. The Time of his Death is not known.

Merab

[1 Chron. viii. 34. 1 Sam. xiv. 49. xviii. 17, 19.] MERAB, or Merob, the eldest Daughter of King Saul. She was promised to David in Marriage, as a Reward for that Victory which he obtained over the Giant Goliah; but Saul went from his Word, and gave her to Adriel the Son of Barzillai the Meholathite. Merab had six Sons by him, who were delivered over to the Gibeonites, and crucified upon the Mountain before the Lord, as a Reparation for that Injustice that Saul had done the Gibeonites[1]. The Text of Scripture insinuates, that the six Men that were delivered to 'em, were the Sons of Michal the Daughter of Saul, and Wife of Adriel. But there is great Room for Suspicion, that the Name of Michal is slipt into the Text instead of Merob[2]. For 1. Michal did not marry Adriel, but Phaltiel; and 2. We no where read that Michal had six Sons. Others[3] think that these six Children were Sons of Merob by Birth, but Michal's by Adoption.

Mercury

[Acts xiv. 11.] MERCURY, Son of Jupiter and Maia, one of the fabulous Gods of the ancient Pagans, and the Messenger of the other Gods. He was worshipped as the Deity that presided over Learning, Eloquence, and Traffick. The Greeks gave him the Name of Hermes, which signifies an Interpreter, because they looked upon him as the Interpreter of the Will of the Gods. 'Twas probably for this Reason that the People of Lystra having heard St. Paul preach, and having seen him heal a sick Man, would have offered Sacrifices to him, as if he had been Mercury, and to St. Barnabas as if he had been Jupiter, probably because of his venerable Aspect. They called Barnabas Jupiter, and Paul, Mercurius, because he was the chief Speaker. The Pagans seem to have confounded some Characters of the Life of Mercury, with that of Aaron the High-priest, the Brother of Moses. Mercury was the Messenger and Interpreter of the Gods, as Aaron was the Prophet and Interpreter of the Lord, and the Tongue of Moses. Mercury is represented with a miraculous Wand or Rod; Aaron also had a miraculous Rod, that budded, and was laid up near the Ark. Mercury was the God of Thieves; Aaron and the other Jews rifled the Egyptians of their Treasures. Mercury was the Inventer of the Harp; the Children of Aaron and the Levites were employed in playing upon Instruments of Musick in the Lord's Temple. Mercury is the God of Travellers, Aaron, together with Moses, conducted the Children of Israel in their Journey through the Desert, &c.

The wise Author of the Book of Proverbs[1] says, He that raises a Fool to Honour, is like him that throws a Stone to the Heap of Mercury. 'Tis as absurd or superfluous to exalt a Fool to Honour and Dignity, as it is to cast a Stone at the Foot of a Statue of Mercury, set up in a Crossway: For this is, as we may say, to add one useless Thing to another. This Piece of Superstition, of laying a Heap of Stones at a Term or Limit, or at a half Statue of Mercury set up in a High-way, was in Practice among the Ancients[2]. But it may well be doubted, whether in this Place Solomon had any Intention to speak of Mercury, or of the Heap of Stones that was used to be cast at the Feet of his Statue. The Hebrew Text[3] makes no Mention of Mercury. Some translate it thus, To give Honours to a Fool, is to bind a Stone in a Sling. The Stone thus bound will continue immovable, and cannot be discharged from the Sling. So a Fool can make no Use of the Honour that shall be conferred upon him. Otherwise thus. As a Stone cast upon a Heap of other common Stones is useless, so is the Honour that is conferred upon a Fool. 'Tis only adding another Stone to a Heap of Stones. Ragam, which is the Root of Margemah, signifies to stone, or to overwhelm with Stones[4]. The Rabbins commonly understand it of a Heap of Stones amassed together in Honour of Mercury, as the Author of the Vulgate has rendered it in his Translation. But the Seventy translate it by a Sling[5]. I could easily come into the Chaldee Explication. Like as a Plate, or Lingot of Gold or Silver, put in a Sling, is a Thing very ill placed, so is the Honour that is given to a Fool. The Hebrew Wordu Zeror-eben, an Heap of Stones, may signify a Bundle of Bars of Gold or Silver, tried by the Touch-Stone, or weighed with a Stone-Weight. The Jews made Use of Stones instead of Weights. Prov. xx. 10, 23, according to the Hebrew, is Stone and Stone, instead of Weight and Weight. See also Deut. xxv. 13.

Mercy

MERCY, Misericordia. This is a Virtue that inspires us with Compassion for our Brethren, and which inclines us to give 'em Assistance in their Necessities: That the Works of Mercy may be acceptable to God, and may purchase eternal Life for us, as Christ has promised us, it is not enough that they proceed from a natural Principle of Humanity, but they must be performed for the Sake of God, and upon supernatural Motives. In Scripture Mercy and Truth are commonly joined together[1], to shew the Goodness that precedes, and the Faithfulness that accompanies the Promises; or else a Goodness, a Clemency, a Mercy that is constant and faithful, that does not deceive, and which is followed by Works. Mercy is also taken for those Favours and Benefits that we receive either from God or Man. It is taken for Probity, Justice, Goodness. Merciful Men, in Hebrew, Charidim, are Men of Piety and Goodness[2]. Finally, Mercy is often taken for giving of Alms.

Mercy-Seat

[Prov. xiv. 34. xvi. 6. Zach. vii. 9.] MERCY-SEAT, Propitiatorium, otherwise Oraculum; in Hebrew, Capporeth, in Greek, Hilasterion[1]. We shall speak of it afterwards, under the Word ORACLE. The Mercy-Seat was the Covering of the Ark of the Covenant, or of the holy Chest in which the Tables of the Law were deposited. This Cover was of Gold, and at its two Ends were fixed the two Cherubims of the same Metal, which by their Wings extended forwards, seemed to form a Throne for the Majesty of God, who in Scripture is represented to us, as sitting between the Cherubims; and the Ark it self was as it were his Footstool. 'Twas from hence that God gave his Oracles to Moses, or to the High-priest that consulted him; and 'tis probable for this Reason, that St. Jerome in some Places has translated Capporeth by Oracle. In the Ecclesiastical Style of the Christian Church, they have given the Name of Propitiatorium to the Crownwork, or kind of Canopy, which was over the Altar, and which was otherwise called Ciborium, or Confessio.

Merodach

MERODACH, was an ancient King of Babylon, who was placed among the Gods, and worshipped by the Babylonians. Jeremiah, speaking of the Ruine of Babylon says, Babylon is taken, Bel, is confounded, Merodach is broken in Pieces, her Idols are confounded, her Images are broken in Pieces. We find certain Kings of Babylon, in whose Names that of Merodach is contained. For Example, Evilmerodach, and Merodach-baladan. Evilmerodach was the Son of Nebuchadnezzar the Great, and had for his Successor the wicked Belshazzar. Merodach-Baladan, Son of Baladan King of Babylon, having heard that Hezekiah had been cured miraculously, and that the Sun had gone backwards to give him an Assurance of his Recovery, sent him Presents, and made him Compliments upon the Recovery of his Health. Ptolemy calls him Mardocempadus, and says that he began to reign at Babylon twenty six Years after the Beginning of the Æra of Nabonassar, that is, in the Year of the World 3283, before Christ 717, and before the Vulgar Æra 721.

Meroe

MEROE, an Island, or rather a Peninsula, in the higher Egypt. It lies between two Arms of the Nile. Its ancient Name was Saba, and 'tis believed[1] that from hence was the Queen of Sheba, who came so far to [1 Kings x. 1.] prove the Wisdom of Solomon. Josephus[2] says, that Cambyses changed its ancient Name Saba into that of Meroe, having there built the City of Meroe in Honour of his Sister. This Countrey was usually governed by Queens[3]: But these Reasons have not prevailed with others, who were of Opinion that the Queen of Sheba came from Arabia Fœlix.

Merom

[Josh. xi. 5.] MEROM, or Marom; the Waters of Merom mentioned in Joshua xi. 5. are the Waters of Semechon, as 'tis believed; since Hazor, where Jabin reigned, was upon this Lake, as is affirmed by Josephus[1]; and Joshua says, that Jabin, and the other confederate Kings, met together to fight Joshua upon the Waters of Merom. It should seem then that Merom and Semechon are the same; but this Consequence does not necessarily follow. We agree with Josephus, that the City of Hazor was upon the Lake Semechon; but where is it said that it was upon the Waters of Merom? Where is it said that the Kings in Alliance encamped at the Waters of Semechon, and near Hazor, to fight with Joshua? It is much more probable that they advanced as far as the Brook Kishon, and to the Pass that led into their Countrey, to hinder Joshua from entering into it, or even to attack him in a Countrey that he was already in Possession of; than to imagine that they waited for him in the midst of their own Countrey, leaving all Galilee at his Mercy, and the whole Countrey from the Brook Kishon, to the Lake Semechon.

But here are the Proofs which make us think that Merom and Merome, and the Waters of Merom, were near Kishon, Carmel, Taanach, and Megiddo. 1. Eusebius places the City of Merom or Merus, at twelve Miles from Sebasta, towards Dothaim. 2. The Tribes of Zebulun and Naphthali exposed themselves to great Danger, in the Battle against Sisera, in the Plains of Merome, Judges v. 18. 3. This Battle was certainly fought upon the Kishon, at Tanaach and Megiddo, Judges v. 19. Wherefore we must place the Waters of Merom near these Places. But Taanach, Merom and Megiddo are situate on this Side Kishon, and at the Foot of Carmel. 'Twas there therefore, that not only the Battle between Joshua and Jabin was fought, but also that between Barak and Sisera. This Pass was of great Importance, and it was very difficult to march an Army any other Way, either to go from Judæa into Phœnicia or Galilee, or on the contrary from Phœnicia into Judæa.

Merome

MEROME. Mention is made of the Countrey, or, according to the Hebrew, of the Fields of Merome, in the Book of [Jud. v. 13. Heb. & Vulg.] Judges. 'Tis there said that Zebulun and Naphtali exposed their Lives to great Danger in the Fields of Merome. [in the high Places of the Field, in our English Translation.] 'Tis thought that Merome is the same as Merom mentioned by Joshua, when he says that Jabin, and the Kings of the Canaanites in Confederacy with him, were overcome at the Waters of Merom. The greatest Part of the Commentators believe, that these Waters of Merom are no other than the Lake of Semechon in the higher Galilee. Josephus has given Occasion to this Opinion, when he says that the City of Hazor, where Jabin reigned, was upon the Lake Semechon. But he says not that the Canaanites were overcome near Hazor, or near the Lake Semechon; for he says on the contrary, that this Battle was fought at the Foot of Mount Tabor, agreeably to the Text of Scripture. But Tabor is very far from the Lake Semechon. So we rather chuse to believe that the Waters of Merom were at the Foot of Mount Carmel, near to Taanach, Legio, and Megiddo. See the Commentary upon Judges v. 18, and the foregoing of Merom.

MEROZ, Judg. v. 23. It was a Place in the Neighbourhood of the Brook Kishon, whose Inhabitants refusing to come to the Assistance of their Brethren when they fought with Sisera, were put under an Anathema. Curse ye Meroz, says the Angel of the Lord; curse ye bitterly the Inhabitants thereof: Because they came not to the Help of the Lord, to the Help of the Lord against the Mighty. Some have thought that Meroz is the same as Merrus or Merom, which we have just now mentioned; and this perhaps is the most probable Opinion concerning this Matter.

Others[1] will have it, that Meroz was a mighty Man, who dwelt near the Kishon, who not caring to come to the Assistance of Barak and Deborah, was excommunicated by the Angel of the Lord, by the Sound of four hundred Trumpets. The Angel of the Lord, according to some, was Barak, the General of the Lord's Army: But according to others he was the High-priest for the Time being, or a Prophet, or the Angel Michael, or some other Angel. Some believe that Meroz was the Angel of the Canaanites, who was cursed by Michael, the Guardian Angel of the Israelites.

After the Death of Ahab, he revolted against Jehoram King of Israel[1], who therefore declared War against him. He called to his Assistance Jehoshaphat King of Judah, who brought with him also the King of Idumea, then in Subjection to him. These three Kings marched against Mesha, beat him, and forced him to retire to his Capital, which was Areopolis. Here they besieged him, and shut him up so close, that not being able to escape through the Camp of the Idumæans, which he thought the weakest; he took his own Son, the presumptive Heir to his Crown, brought him upon the Wall of the City, and was going to sacrifice him. But the Kings of Judah, Israel and Edom, seeing this, retired without taking the Town, and contented themselves with making a great Spoil in the Land of Moab. See JEHORAM and JEHOSHAPHAT.

Mesopotamia

MESOPOTAMIA, a famous Province, situate between the Rivers Tigris and Euphrates. phrates. The Hebrews call it Aram Naharaim[1], or Aram of the two Rivers, because it was first peopled by Aram, Father of the Syrians, and is situate between two great Rivers, as we said before: This Countrey is much celebrated in Scripture, as being the first Dwelling of Men, both before and after the Deluge; and because it gave Birth to Phaleg, Heber, Terah, Abraham, Nabor, Sarah, Rebekah, Rachel, Leah, and to the Sons of Jacob. Babylon was in the ancient Mesopotamia, till by vast Labour and Industry the two Rivers of Tigris and Euphrates were reunited in one Channel. The Plains of Shinar were in the same Countrey. Often they gave it the Name of *Mesopotamia Syriæ*1, because it was inhabited by the Arameans or Syrians; sometimes that of Padan-aram, the Plains of Aram, or Sede-aram, the Fields of Aram; to distinguish them from the barren and uncultivated [Gen. xxviii. 7. xxxi. 18. xxxiii. 18. xxxv. 9. Hosea xii 12.] Mountains of the same Countrey. Balaam Son of Beor, was of Mesopotamia. Deut. xxiii. 4. Chushanrishathaim, King of Mesopotamia, kept the Hebrews in Subjection some Time after the Death of Joshua, Judg. iii. 8.

Besides the Countrey commonly called Mesopotamia in Greek, and Aram Naharaim in Hebrew, or Syria of the two Rivers; some mention another[2], which was in Syria between the Rivers Marsyas and Orontes. This Opinion is founded upon what follows. First the Term Mesopotamia signifies simply a Countrey lying between two Rivers; so that this Name may be given to any Countrey that has such a Situation, whatever the Rivers may be that inclose it. Secondly the Title of Psalm lx intimates, that David burnt Mesopotamia of Syria, and Syria of Zobal. But it is known that David did not make War with the King of Zoba, but to enlarge his Conquests as far as the Euphrates, and that Syria of Zoba was beyond this River. Thirdly, the Book of Judith says, that Holofernes went over Euphrates, [Judith. ii. 24.] and went through Mesopotamia; and destroyed all the high Cities. Certain it is that this General came out of Assyria. Mesopotamia, properly so called, was in Obedience to Nebuchadnezzar his Master. He therefore passed over the Euphrates, to come into the Mesopotamia of Syria of which we are speaking, very different from that known to the Greeks and Latins, which was between the Tigris and Euphrates.

To chuse which Side we will take in this Difficulty, we must see whether these Objections are strong enough, to make us forsake the general Opinion of Geographers; who till now have acknowledged but one Province, called Mesopotamia in Greek and Latin, and Aram-Naharaim in Hebrew. For if the Texts upon which the Objection is founded can be explained in a probable Manner, without the Expedient of a second Mesopotamia, it is plain that we ought not to have Recourse to it. But as to the Title of Psalm lx, it is but of little Authority, since the greatest Part of these Titles of the Psalms have been placed there at Adventures, and a long Time after the Authors composed them. Besides, it may be explained by saying, that David fought with Mesopotamia of Syria; that is to say, that he conquered the auxiliary Troops which came from Mesopotamia beyond the Euphrates, to the Assistance of Hadarezor and the Ammonites, as is expresly said in the second Book of Samuel x. 16, 19. And Hadarezer sent, and brought out the Syrians that were beyond the River. And when all the Kings that were Servants to Hadarezer saw that they were smitten before Israel, they made Peace with Israel, and served them.

As to the Passage of Judith, it may be said, that Holofernes passed the Euphrates twice, by himself in Person, or by the Person of his Captains. The first Time when he came into Syria and Cilicia, and reduced these Provinces. The second Time when he had conquered them, and when he repassed the Euphrates to reduce some other People, who would not yet acknowledge his Master Nebuchadnezzar. We do not affirm that he passed through in his own Person all the Countreys that are mentioned in Judith. It is sufficient if this was performed by his Orders, and by his Lieutenants. Therefore nothing in the two Texts objected to us, can oblige us to acknowledge any other Mesopotamia, than that so well known to all Geographers.

Messiah

MESSIAH, or Messias. This Word comes from the Hebrew[1] Mashach to anoint. 'Tis given principally, and by Way of Eminence, to that sovereign Deliverer that was expected by the Jews, and whom they vainly expect even to this Day, since he is already come at the appointed Time, in the Person of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. They were used to anoint Kings, High-priests, and sometimes Prophets. Saul, David, Solomon, and Joash, Kings of Judah, received the Royal Unction. Aaron and his Sons received the Sacerdotal, and Elisha, the Disciple of Elijah, received the prophetick Unction; at least God ordered Elijah to give it. And Elisha, the Son of Shaphat of Abel-meholah, shalt thou anoint to be Prophet in thy Room. But we do not read that this was actually done,[2] and sometimes the Phrase, to anoint one for an Employment, signifies no more than a particular Designation or Choice for such an Employment[3]. It is said for Example, Judges ix. 8, 15. That the Trees assembled themselves together, to anoint a King over [2 Sam. xix. 10.] them. It is elsewhere said, that the Israelites had anointed Absalom to be their King, yet it does not appear that he ever received the Royal Unction. The Lord command-ed Elijah to anoint Hazael to be King over Syria; [1 Kings xix. 15.] but we do not find that the Prophet performed these Orders. But his Successor Elisha foretold to Hazael that he should reign, yet he gave him not the Royal Unction, at least the Scripture mentions nothing of it; and [2 Kings viii. 11, 12, 13, 14.] probably it was not the Custom to give the Unction to the Kings of Damascus. King Cyrus, who founded the Empire of the Persians, and who set the Jews at Liberty, is called in Scripture, the anointed of the Lord; Thus saith the Lord to his Anointed, to Cyrus. We read in Ezekiel, xxviii. 14. the Name of Messiah given to the King of Tyr, Thou art the anointed Cherub that covereth. And in Ecclesiasticus xlviii. 8. that Elisha anointed Kings for Vengeance, Who anointedst Kings to take Revenge. He anointed Jehu King of Israel by the Hands of a Prophet whom he [2 Kings ix. 2, 3.] sent, and he acquainted Hazael by Word of Mouth, that he should reign over Damascus and Syria. These two Princes were sent of God, to revenge the Iniquities of the House of Ahab.

St. Peter and the other Believers being assembled together, Acts iv. 27. say to God from Psalm ii, Why did the Heathen rage, and the People imagine vain Things? The Kings of the Earth stood up, and the Rulers were gathered together against the Lord, and against his Christ. For of a Truth against thy holy Child Jesus, whom thou hast anoint-ed, both Herod and Pontius Pilate, with the Gentiles and the People of Israel, were gathered together.

[Luke iv. 18.] St. Luke says, that our Saviour entering into a Synagogue at Nazareth, there opened the Book of the Prophet Isaiah, where he read, The Spirit of the Lord is upon me, because he hath anointed me to preach the Gospel to the Poor. After which he shewed them, that this Prophecy was accomplish-ed in his Person. St. Peter speaking to Cornelius the Centurion, and to those that were with him, tells them that the Lord had sent [Acts x. 36, 37.] Peace to Men by Jesus Christ, whom God had anointed with the Holy Ghost, and with Power. Lastly, St. Paul says to the [2 Cor. i. 21, 22.] Corinthians, Now he which stablisheth us with you, in Christ, and hath anointed us, is God. Who hath also sealed us, and given the Earnest of the Spirit in our Heart.

[Isai. xlv. 1.] It is not found any where, that Jesus Christ ever received any sensible Unction, or that the Apostles anointed the Faithful with any particular and external Oil or Ointment. The Unction that the Prophets and the Apostles speak of, when Jesus Christ or his Disciples are understood, is the spi-ritual and internal Unction of Grace and of the Holy Ghost, of which the outward and sensible Unction, with which they anciently anointed Kings, Priests, and Prophets, was but the Figure and Symbol. Jesus Christ has united in his own Person the Offices of King, Prophet, and Priest, and has eminently included in himself whatever the Law and the Prophets had promised or figured, that was most excel-lent or most perfect. The Christians, his Disciples and his Children, enjoy in some Sense the same Prerogatives; they have received [1 Peter ii. 9.] the Royal and Priestly Unction in Baptism; But ye are a chosen Generation, a Royal Priesthood, an holy Nation, a peculiar People; that ye should shew forth the Praises of him that hath called you out of Darkness into his marvellous Light. But all this must be understood in a spiritual Sense, of the Graces of the Holy Ghost, that his holy Unction has poured into our Hearts.

The Name Messiah, Anointed, or Christ, was given to the Kings, and to the [1 Sam. xii. 3, 5.] High-Priests of the Hebrews. The Lord is Witness against you, and his Anointed; that is, the Lord and the King whom he has established. And David in several Places, God forbid that I should lay my Hand, upon the Lord's Anointed. The Patriarchs and Prophets are also represented by the Name of Messiah's, or the Lord's Anointed. Touch [1 Chron. xvi. 22. Psal. cv. 15.] not mine Anointed, and do my Prophets no Harm. But this Name chiefly belongs to the Messiah by Way of Excellence, who was the Object of the Desire and of the Expectation of the Saints. Hannah the Mother of [1 Sam. ii. 10. Psal. ii. 2. Psal. xliv. 7.] Samuel plainly alludes to him, when at the End of her Hymn, and in a Time that there was no King in Israel, she says, The Lord shall judge the Ends of the Earth; and he shall give Strength unto his King, and exalt the Horn of his anointed; that is, the Glory, the Strength, the Power of his Christ, or his Messiah. And the Psalmist, The Kings of the Earth set themselves against the Lord, and against his Messiah or Anointed. And elsewhere, Therefore God thy God hath anointed thee with the Oil of Gladness above thy Fellows. [Lam. iv. 20.] And Jeremiah, The Breath of our Nostrils, the anointed of the Lord, was taken in their Pits. Daniel foretels the [Dan. ix. 26.] Death of Jesus Christ under the Name of Messiah the Lord. And after three Score and two Weeks shall Messiah be cut off, but not for himself. Lastly, Habakkuk says, [Hab. iii. 13.] Thou wentest forth for the Salvation of thy People, even for Salvation with thine Anointed. It would be needless to bring any Testimonies from the New Testament, to prove Jesus Christ to be the Messiah, since these are to be had in almost every Line. As to the Books of the Old Testament, we have confined our selves to those only, where the Word Messiah is to be found; for such only are proper to our Design.

The Greek Word Christos, from whence comes Christ and Christian, exactly answers to the Hebrew Messiah, which signifies him that has received Unction, a King, a Priest. The Greeks also make Use of the Term Eleimmenos, which has the same Signification as Christos.

The ancient Hebrews, being instructed by the Prophets, had very clear Notions of the Messiah. They were changed by little and little, so that when Jesus Christ appeared in Judæa, they had entertained a very wrong Conception of the Messias, expecting a temporal Monarch and Conqueror, that should bring the whole World under Subjection. From whence it came to pass, that they were much scandalized at the outward Appearance, the Humility, and seeming Weakness of our Saviour, which hindered them from acknowledging him as the Christ that they expected. And all the modern Jews since his Time, being delivered up to a reprobate Sense, fall into still greater Mistakes, and form to themselves chimerical Ideas of the Messiah, utterly known to their Forefathers.

The ancient Prophets had foretold, that the Messias should be God and Man, exalted and abased, Master and Servant, Priest and Victim, King and Subject, Mortal and a Conqueror of Death, Rich and Poor, a King, a Conqueror, glorious, a Man of Griefs, involved in our Infirmities, unknown, in a State of Abjection and Humiliation. All these seeming Contrarieties were to be reconciled in the Person of the Messiah, as without Dispute they did really meet in the Person of Jesus Christ. It was known that the Messiah was to be born of a Virgin, of the Tribe of Judah, of the Race of David, in the Village of Bethlehem. That he was to continue for ever, that his coming was to be concealed, that he was the great Prophet promised in the Law, that he was both the Son and Lord of David, that he was to perform great Miracles, that he should restore all Things, that he should die and rise again, that Elias should be the Fore-runner of his Appearance, that a Proof of his coming should be, the Cure of the Lepers, Life restored to the Dead, and the Gospel preached to the Poor. That he should not destroy the Law, but should perfect and fulfil it, that he should be a Stone of Offence, and a Stumbling-block, against which many should bruise themselves; that he should suffer infinite Oppositions and Contradictions, that from his Time Idolatry and Impiety should be banished, and that a strange People should come and submit themselves to his Discipline.

When Jesus Christ appeared, these Notions of him were still common among the Jews. Our Saviour herein appeals even to themselves, and asks them if these are not the Characters of the Messiah, and if they do not see the Completion of them in himself. The Evangelists take Care to put them in Mind of them, to prove thereby, that Jesus is the Christ whom they expected. They quote the Prophecies to them, which then were acknowledged to belong to the Messias, tho' they have been controverted by them since. It may be seen in the first Fathers of the Church, and in the most ancient Jewish Authors, that in the Beginning of Christianity, they did not think fit to call in Doubt several Prophecies, which in the Judgment of their Forefathers were to be understood of the Messiah. 'Twas but in after Ages that they began to deny, that the Passages we quote against them are to be understood of the Messiah, endeavouring to defend themselves from those Arguments that were brought against 'em from their own Scriptures. After this they fell into new Schemes, and new Notions concerning the coming of Christ.

Some of 'em, as the famous Hillel, who lived, according to the Jews, before Christ, maintain that 'tis in vain now to expect the coming of the Messiah, since he is already come in the Person of King Hezekiah. Others of 'em think, that the Belief of the coming of the Messiah is no Article of Faith, and he that denies this Doctrine makes but a small Breach in the Law; he only lops off a Branch from the Tree, without hurting the Root. Thus it was affirmed by Joseph Albo the Jew, in a Conference held in Spain, in the Presence of Pope Benedict XIII. Buxtorf says[4], that the greatest Part of the modern Rabbins believe, that the Messiah has been come a good while, but that he keeps himself concealed in some Part of the World or other, and will not manifest himself, because of the Sins of the Jews. Jarchi affirms, that the ancient Hebrews believed the Messiah was born on the Day of the last Destruction of Jerusa lem by the Romans. Some of 'em assign him the Terrestrial Paradise for his Habitation, others the City of Rome, where according to the Talmudists he keeps himself concealed among the Leprous and infirm, at the Gate of the City, expecting Elias to come to manifest him to Men.

A great Number of others believe he is not yet come, but they are strangely divided among themselves about the Time and other Circumstances of his coming. Some expect him at the End of six Thousand Years. They make Jesus Christ to be born in the Year 3761. Add to this Number 1717, and there will arise 5478, and consequently they will have 522 Years to expect still. Kimchi, who lived in the twelfth Century, was of Opinion, that the coming of the Messiah was very near. David the Grandson of Maimonides was advised with in this Matter, who himself had been consulted about it; but neither of them could say any Thing to the Purpose about it. Maimonides pretended to have received certain Prophecies from his Ancestors, which gave him to understand, that the Gift of Prophecy should be restored to Israel after the same Number of Years from the Time of Baalam, as had passed from the Beginning of the World to Baalam's Time. But according to him Baalam prophecied in 2488. If we double this Number, we shall find the Restoration of the Gift of Prophecy to be in 4976, or in the Year of Christ 1316. But this has been found to be a false Conclusion. Lastly, some of 'em have fixed the End of their Misfortunes to be in 1492, others in 1598, others in 1600, others yet later. Last of all, being tired out with these Uncertainties, they have pronounced[5] an Anathema against all those, that shall pretend to calculate the Time of the coming of the Messias.

To reconcile those Prophecies that seemed to oppose each other, some have had Recourse to an Hypothesis of two Messiah's who are to succeed each other. One in a State of Humiliation, in Poverty and Sufferings; and the other in Splendor, Glory, and Magnificence; but each of 'em to be mere Men. The first is to proceed from the Tribe of Joseph, and the Family of Ephraim. His Father is to be called Huziel, and himself Nehemiah. He is to appear at the Head of an Army, composed of the Tribes of Ephraim and Manasseh, of Benjamin and one Part of the Tribe of Gad, and shall make War with the Idumæans. 'Tis thus they call the Christians and the Romans, whose Empire they are to destroy, and so bring back the Jews in Triumph to Jerusalem. The second Messias is to be born of the Race of David, is to bring the first Messiah to Life again, to assemble all Israel together, to raise those that are dead, to rebuild the Temple of Jerusalem, and to rule over the whole World. He is to marry several Wives, and to have many Children, which are to succeed him after his Death; for he is to die like other Men. On this Subject may be read the two Dissertations of F. Charles Joseph Imbonatus, printed at the End of the fifth Tome of the Bibliotheca Rabbinica, concerning the coming of the Messias; and also what Bartolocci has gathered together upon the same Subject, in the first Tome of his Bibliotheca Rabbinica; and what is to be found in the fourth Tome of M. Basnage's History of the Jews, the Paris Edition; and lastly, our own Dissertation concerning the Characters of the Messias according to the Jews, printed at the Beginning of our Commentary upon Jeremiah.

Jesus Christ in his Gospel gives Warning to his Disciples, that false Prophets and false Messiahs should arise; Surgent Pseudochristi & Pseudo-prophetæ. That they should perform Signs and Wonders, by which even the Elect themselves would be in Danger of being deceived. The Event has but too much verified this Prediction. Every Age among the Jews has produced false Prophets, and false Christs, who have succeeded in deceiving many of that Nation. One appeared even in the Age of Christ himself; Simon Magus I mean, who gave out at Samaria that he was the great Power of God. In the following Age Barchochebas by his Impostures drew the most terrible Persecution upon the Jews that they had ever suffered. See his Article, and what we have related under the Name of this Impostor.

In the fifth Century, about the Year 434, there appeared in the Isle of Candy a false Messiah called Moses, who pretended to be the ancient Legislator of the Jews, descended from Heaven to procure a glorious Deliverance for the Jews of that Island, by making them pass over the Sea, and return again into the Land of Promise[6]. The Jews of Candy were Fools enough to be persuaded by him; many of them jumped into the Sea, in Expectation that it would open to give them a safe Passage. A great Number of them were drowned, and the rest got out again as well as they could; the Impostor was sought for in Order to be punished, but he disappeared. This made it suspected that he might be some Demon, who had assumed a human Shape to abuse the Jews.

In the following Age there appeared in Palestine a false Messiah called Julian; he gave himself out to be a Conqueror, and undertook to his Followers, that he would deliver them from the Oppression of the Christians by Force of Arms. Misled by such Promises, the Jews took up Arms, and cut the Throats of many Christians. But the Emperor Justinian sending some Troops to their Assistance, Julian was taken and executed, and his Party dispersed.

In 714[7], a Jew called Serenus, pretended to the Spanish Jews, that he would conduct them to Palestine, and set up his Empire there. Several believed in this new Messiah, forsook their Countrey and their Business, and began to follow him. But they soon found him out to be a Cheat, and had Time enough to repent of their Folly and Credulity.

The twelfth Century was very fruitful in this Kind of Impostures[8]. One appeared in France, who brought upon his Followers a severe Rebuke from King Louis le Jeune; he was taken and put to Death, but his Name and Countrey are not known. He appeared about the Year 1137. The Year following another started up in Persia; the Army he had got together was numerous, and hardy enough to offer Battle to the King of Persia. But this Prince chose rather to compel the Jews in his Dominions, to oblige this Man to lay down his Arms; the false Messiah answered, that the present Succes of his Undertaking was a Warrant to him of the future, and that they had nothing to fear. However at last he promised to quit his Arms, if he might be reimbursed the Charges he had been at in preparing for War. The King complied with this Proposal, but no sooner was the Army disarmed, but the King forced the Jews to pay him again what had been paid to the Impostor.

In the same Century were seen no fewer than seven or eight false Messiah's, not only in Spain, but in Arabia, in Persia, in Moravia. He that appeared in Moravia was said to have the Secret of making himself invisible when he pleased, and to charm the Eyes of those that followed him. Another called David Al-roi was a Conjurer, who by the Assistance of some false Miracles deceived a great Number of Jews, whom he had persuaded to take up Arms. The King being amazed at the Rapidity of his Conquests, and at the Multitude of his Followers, ordered him to appear at Court, with a Promise of submitting to him, if he could prove himself to be the true Messiah. David attended upon the King, was put in Prison, but he came out again, was pursued, he disappeared. His Voice was heard, but nothing was seen of him. The King set himself at the Head of his Army in Hopes to catch him, and arrived at the Banks of the River Goran, where he heard him cry out, O Fools, but he was not seen. A Moment afterwards he was observed dividing the Waters of the River with his Cloak, when he passed over. The Army followed him, but he was no more to be found. The King then wrote to the Jews in his Dominions, to deliver up David to him, on Penalty of all being massacred without any Quarter. Zaccheus the Head of the Captivity, wrote to the Impostor to deliver himself up and save the Nation, but he made a Jest of this. However at last the Father-in-Law of David, gained over by a great Sum of Money, tempted him to him, made him drunk, and then cut off his Head.

At the Beginning of the sixteenth Century, the Jews of Media and Persia, being puffed up by the Valour, the hasty Conquests, and Succes of the Sophi Ismael, Head of the House that lately governed in Persia; they imagined that he might be the Messias. But this Prince proving a steddy Mussulman, despised all their Honours, and kept them at a Distance. He died in 1523.

James Zieglern, who died in 1559, loudly proclaimed the coming of the Messias. He maintained that he had been born for fourteen Years, and that he had seen him at Strasburg. He kept a Sword and a Scepter to put into his Hands, as soon as he should arrive at an Age that was proper for fighting. Then he was to pull down Anti-Christ, and the Turkish Empire; was to extend his Monarchy to the utmost Limits of the World, should assemble a Council at Constance, which would hold for twelve Years, and in which all Disputes about Religion should be finally determined. But the Messiah did not appear, and this Imposture was manifest. Another Visionary called Philip Zieglern arose in Holland, in 1624, and promised a Messiah whom he had seen, and who only waited for the Conversion of the Hearts of the Jews, in Order to manifest himself.

All these Impostures, with the ill Succes that has attended them, have not yet been able to cure the Jews of their whimsical Notions, concerning the pretended Messiah that they expect. One of their Nation born at Aleppo[9], in the last Century, called Zabatai Tzevi, attempted about the Year 1666 to make himself received as the Messiah. He had concerted this Design very early, and learned whatever might be necessary for him, for the better acting of this Part. He preached in the Fields before the Turks, who only derided him, but [Isai. xiv. 14.] his Disciples were in great Admiration of him. He bragged that he could raise himself above the Clouds, as Isaiah had foretold. And having asked his Disciples if they had not seen him do it, he reproached the Blindness of those who had Sincerity enough not to affirm it. He was summoned before the Heads of the Synagogue at Smyrna, where he then resided, and was condemned to Death; but no one would execute this Sentence, so that they were contented to banish him.

Tzevi was three Times married, but did not consummate his Marriages. Having gone through Greece, he came to Alexandria, and thence to Gaza, where he found a Jew called Nathan-Levi, or Benjamin, whom he persuaded to act the Part of the Prophet Elias, who was to go before the Messiah. They came to Jerusalem, Nathan declared Tzevi to be him whom they expected. Part of the Jews of the Countrey were inveigled into the Cheat, but the wiser Sort opposed him, and excommunicated him. He withdrew to Constantinople, and thence to Smyrna, whither Nathan-Levi sent four Ambassadors to him, who acknowledged him for the Messiah. This Embassy imposed upon the People, and even upon some of the Doctors; they owned him as a King, and every one brought him Presents, that he might support his royal Dignity. Those of a better Understanding opposed these Innovations, but in vain. They even pronounced two Sentences of Death against him, but he was not concerned at it, because he knew they durst not put them in Execution. He waited on the Cadi of Smyrna, and put himself under his Protection. The whole Discourse was of Tzevi; he had a Throne set up for himself, and another for his Spouse. He called himself The King of the Kings of Israel, and Joseph Tzevi his Brother was The King of the Kings of Judah. He caused the Name of the Ottoman Emperor to be erased out of the Liturgy, and had his own put in the Place. Before he began the Conquest of this Empire, he distributed the Offices and Employments to all his Favourites.

He departed for Constantinople. The Grand Seignior being informed of it, gave Orders to his Vizier to seize him, to put him in Prison, and make him undergo the Bastonade. They laid hold of him, and asked him why he assumed the Title of a King: He answered, because the Jews had compelled him to do so. The Vizier ordered him to be kept in Prison at the Dardanelles. The Jews thought it was for want of Power to hurt him that Tzevi was spared. They corrupted the Governor by great Presents, and even in his Prison the Impostor was entertained with all possible Honours. In the mean Time the Grand Seignior caused Tzevi to be brought to Adrianople, and ordered him to be run thro' with a Sword, to try if he was invulnerable. But Tzevi chose rather to turn Mahometan, than thus to suffer Death. And such was the Conclusion of this famous Transaction[10].

Metatron

[Exod. xxiii. 20.] METATRON. The Hebrews give this Name to the first of those Angels, who conducted them in the Desart, and of whom it is said by Moses, Behold I send an Angel before thee, to keep thee in the Way, and to bring thee into the Place which I have prepared. Beware of him, and obey his Voice. In Respect of the Israelites he performed the Duty of that Officer among the Romans, whom they called Metator. He marked out their Encampments, drew out the Form of them, their Dimensions and Extent. Metatron is plainly formed from the Latin Word Metator. 'Tis supposed to be Michael the Arch-angel, who was at the Head of the People in the Wilderness; that it was he who wrestled with Jacob, and who is called the Face of God in Exodus; [Exod. xxxiv. 14.] My Face shall go before you; and that he is the Mediator between God and Man, that he writes down their good Actions, and preserves them in a Register.

Metempsychosis

[Psal. lxxviii. 39. Eccles. xii. 7.] METEMPSYCHOSIS. The Notion of a Metempsychosis, or the Transmigration of Souls from one Body to another, whatever the modern Jews may say of it, is not taught in any Place, either of the Old or New Testament. On the contrary, it appears by the Law, by the Prophets, and by the inspired Writers of the New Testament, that the Souls of Men after their Death are in a fixed State, and have no longer any Concern with this present Life. He remembered that they were but Flesh, a Wind that passeth away and cometh not again. And, Then shall the Dust return to the Earth as it was, and the Spirit shall return unto God who gave it. The Jews quote these Words of Job, to support their [Job xxxiii. 29, 30.] Opinion concerning the Metempsychosis. Lo all these Things worketh God oftentimes (Heb. twice and thrice) with Man. To bring back his Soul from the Pit, to be enlightened with the Light of the Living. As if he intended to speak of a threefold Revolution, or of a threefold Return of the Soul to the Body. But the true Sense of this Passage is, that God preserves from Danger the Man that puts his Confidence in him, as far as three Times, that is many Times. There is great Probability that the Jews imbibed this Notion in Chaldæa, during their long Captivity at Babylon, or from that Intercourse they had with the Greeks, who themselves had borrowed it from the Orientals.

This is certain, that at the Time of Jesus Christ this Opinion was very common among the Jews. They shew it enough in the Gospel, when they say, that some thought Jesus Christ to be John the Baptist, others Elias, others Jeremiah, or some one [Matth. xvi. 14.] of the old Prophets. And when Herod the Tetrarch heard speak of the Miracles of Jesus Christ, he said, that John the Baptist, whom he had beheaded, was risen again. Josephus and Philo, who are the most ancient and the most knowing of all the Jews, next to the sacred Authors now extant, speak of the Metempsychosis as an Opinion that was very common in their Nation. The Pharisees held, according to Josephus[1], that the Souls of good Men might easily return into another Body, after the Death of that which they had forsaken. He says elsewhere[2], that the Souls of wicked Men sometimes enter into the Bodies of living Men, which they possess and torment. Philo says[3], that the Souls which descended out of the Air into the Bodies which they animate, return again into the Air after the Death of those Bodies; that some of 'em retain always a great Abhorrence for Matter, and dread to be again plunged into Bodies; but that others return with Inclination, and follow the natural Desire by which they are influenced.

The Jewish Doctors that treat of the Transmigration, do not speak of it after so plain and simple a Manner. They wrap it up in obscure and mysterious Terms[4]. They believe that God has determined for all Souls a certain Degree of Perfection, to which they cannot attain in the Course of one Life only. They are therefore obliged to return several Times upon the Earth, and to animate several Bodies successively, that they may fulfil all Righteousness, and practice the Commandments both Negative and Affirmative, without which they cannot arrive at the State, to which God intends they shall come. Whence is it, say they, that we see some People die in the most vigorous Time of their Youth? 'Tis because they have already acquired their Degree of Perfection, and have nothing remaining to be done in a frail and mortal Body. Others, like Moses, die with Reluctance, because they have not yet accomplished all their Duties. Others on the contrary, like Daniel, die with Satisfaction, and even desire Death, because nothing [Vid. Dan. xii. 23.] more remains for 'em to do in this World.

The Metempsychosis, or Revolution of Souls, is performed after two Manners. The first was when a Soul came into a Body already animated. Thus it was that Herod the Tetrarch imagined, that the Soul of John the Baptist, whom he had caused to be beheaded a little before, was entered into the Body of Jesus Christ, in Order to work Miracles. At other Times Souls enter into Bodies already animated, there to acquire some new Degree of Perfection which they wanted, or to assist that Soul that is already in the Body, in the Works that God requires of it. They say, for Example, that the Soul of Moses is to be united to that of the Messiah, &c.

The second Manner of Transmigration is, when a Soul enters into a Body newly formed, either to expiate some Crime it had committed in another Body, or to acquire a greater Degree of Sanctity. Some Souls of a more exalted Nature have a great Contempt for Matter, and do not return to animate Bodies but with great Reluctance. Others that are more gross and carnal, always preserve an Inclination towards Body, and return thither often without any other Reason but to gratifie this Desire. The Jews think this Revolution is performed at least three or four Times. They even extend this Transmigration to brute Beasts, and to inanimate Things; and the Number is not small of those that maintain this Opinion. The most famous of the Jewish Doctors hold it, and pretend that Pythagoras, Plato, Virgil, and the ancient Philosophers that espoused it, had derived it from the Writings of their Prophets.

This Notion is very ancient in the East. The Chinese teach, that Xekiah an Indian Philosopher, who was born about a Thousand Years before Jesus Christ[5], was the first Broacher of this Doctrine in the Indies. That from thence it spread into China, in the sixty fifth Year after Jesus Christ. The Chinese pretend, that Xekiah was born eight thousand Times, and that at his last Birth he appeared in the Form of a white Elephant. 'Tis upon this Principle that the Indians and Chinese are so little scrupulous of putting themselves to Death, and that they so often kill their Children, when they find themselves under any Difficulty to maintain them. It is related that a King of this Countrey having had the Small-pox, and seeing his Face to be much disfigured, could not endure any longer to live under such a frightful Figure, but ordered his Brother's Son to cut his Throat, who was afterwards burned. The Story of the Indian Philosopher Calanus is well known, who burned himself in the Time of Alexander the Great.

The Indians look upon Death with much Indifference, being persuaded of the Metempsychosis, which passes among them as a Thing not to be doubted of. This Opinion has produced in the East a great Number of Impostors and false Messiah's, who pretended to be animated by the Souls of Adam, or of Moses. For Example; Akem-Ben-Asha, a famous Impostor, who appeared in the Year 162 of the Hegira, and affirmed, that after the Death of Adam God appeared to Men under the Shape of several Prophets, and other great Men; till he took a human Figure in the Person of Abu-Moslem, Prince of Korasan; that after his Death the Deity had passed and descended into his Person. 'Tis from the same Source that those Fanaticks proceeded, who would give divine Honours to Abon-Giasar-Almansor, the second Calif of the Race of the Abassides; into whom they pretended that the Soul of Mahomet, or of some ancient Prophet, had passed. Lastly, from hence it is that they abstain from killing any living Creature, for Fear of violating the Souls of their Fathers, or of some near Relation, inhabiting those Animals. They do not so much as defend themselves against wild Beasts, and charitably redeem Animals out of the Hands of Strangers, who are about to kill them. See the Article SOUL, and also RESURRECTION.

Methusael

METHUSAEL, or Matthusael, Son of Mehujael; Son of Enoch, and Father of Lamech, the Father of Noah, of the Race of Seth, Gen. v. 21, 22, &c. Methuselah was born in the Year of the World 687. He begat Lamech in the Year 874, and died in the Year of the World 1656, aged nine Hundred sixty nine Years, which is the greatest Age that has been attained by any mortal Man upon Earth. This same Year 1656, before Christ 2344, before the Vulgar Æra 2348, was the Year of the universal Deluge.

St. Jerome[1] in his Hebraical Questions upon Genesis tells us, there is a famous Question that used to be debated in all the Churches, which is, that Methuselah, according to the Text of the Septuagint, must have lived fourteen Years after the Deluge; and according to other Copies, he died six Years before the Deluge: In which they both must recede from the Truth of the Hebrew Text, which assures us that he died in the very Year of the Deluge. Thus the Seventy read it. Methuselah being an hundred and sixty seven Years old begat Lamech, after which he lived yet eight hundred and two Years, (or according to other Copies, seven hundred fourscore and two Years; and the whole Number of his Years was nine hundred sixty nine Years. But if Lamech was born in the Year of Methuselah 167, and if he begat Noah at the Age of 188 Years, which was the 55th Year of Methuselah, the Deluge happening in the 600th Year of Noah, as the Scripture affirms, that is, in the Year of Methujaleb 955, it must follow that the Year of the Deluge will be 14 Years before the Death of Methuselah.

But we must admit, that the Copies of the Septuagint were corrupted in this Place, and must therefore recur to the Hebrew Text, which tells us that Methuselah begat Lamech at the Age of one Hundred fourscore and seven Years. After this Time he lived on for seven Hundred fourscore and two Years; in all nine Hundred sixty nine Years. Lamech begat Noah at the Age of one Hundred fourscore and two Years, six Hundred Years before the Deluge. Add together the six Hundred Years of Noah, one Hundred and eighty two of Lamech, one Hundred and eighty seven of Methuselah, which will amount to the Sum of nine Hundred and sixty nine Years, which will be the Year of the Death of Methuselah, and also the Year of the Deluge.

The Rabbins pretend that Methuselah was a very learned Man, that he was an Hundred Years at the School of his Father Enoch, that he wrote several Works, and pronounced to the Number of three Hundred and thirty Proverbs or Parables[2]. Eupolemus quoted in Eusebius[3] acquaints us, that Methuselah, by the Ministry of Angels, learned all the Kinds of Knowledge that are derived down to us. Solomon Jarchi thinks he died seven Days before the Deluge, that his Son Noah might have Time to lament him; and the Book of Jalkut says, that then a Voice was heard from Heaven, as if the Angels themselves bewailed the Death of Methuselah.

Eupol. apud Euseb. Præparat. l. ix. c. 17. † 60 French Pounds make 78¾ English Pounds Troy, which allowing a Pint for a Pound, comes to 9²□/□□ Gallons. This differs but little from the Capacity of the Metreta, as assigned by Dr. Arbuthnot in his Tables, which is 10¼ Gallons of English Wine-Measure. But the Jewish Bath is determined by him to be only 7½ Gallons.

Metreta

METRETA; this Word comes from the Greek Metretes, a Sort of Measure. The Author of the Vulgate uses the Word Metreta in two Passages of his Translation of the Old Testament, viz. 1 Chron. ii. 10. and iv. 5. but in both Places the Hebrew Word is Bath, which was a large Measure of Capacity, containing something above [John ii. 6.] fifty nine French Chopins, [or English Pints.]

The Metreta of the Greeks contained, according to some, one Hundred Pounds, according to others, fourscore and ten Pounds of Liquor. But as the Attick Pound was something less than the Paris Pound, the fourscore and ten Pounds may be reduced to sixty French Pounds .

Thus the Metreta of the Greeks comes very near to the Bath of the Hebrews. St. John says, that at the Marriage of Cana, there were six large Urns, or Stone Waterpots, containing about two or three Firkins (μετρητὰς) a piece; which Christ causing to be filled with Water, changed the same into excellent Wine.

Meuzal

[Ezek. xxvii. 19.] MEUZAL, or Mosel, a City mentioned by Ezekiel, whose Situation is unknown. The Hebrew of Ezekiel may be translated as the Vulgate has done, Dan & Græcia & Mosel; or Dan and Javan of Ozel or Usal. Bochart[1] thinks that by Javan of Ozel or Uzal, are meant the Descendants of Javan, whose Habitation was at Usal, a City of Arabia. Instead of Javan the Seventy have read Jain, Wine; they read Asel or Asael, and not Mosel. The Syriack has Dan and Javan of Uzel; the Arabick, They brought to your Fairs Wine of Ail. The Chaldee, Dan and Javan brought you Merchandizes in Troops, &c. I suspect that some Alteration has been made in this Passage. Dan and Javan are too far distant from each other, to be thus brought together.

Mezuzoth

MEZUZOTH. This is the Name given by the Jews to certain Pieces of Parchment, that they fix in the Door-posts of their Houses; taking that literally, that Moses orders them, Deut. vi. 9. xi. 13. saying, Thou shalt never forget the Laws of thy God, but thou shalt write them upon the Posts of thy House, and on thy Gates. This Expression means nothing else, but that thou shalt always remember them, whether thou comest into thy House, or goest out. But the Hebrew Doctors imagined, that the Lawgiver meant something more than this. They pretended, that to avoid making themselves ridiculous, by writing the Commandments of God without their Doors, or rather to avoid exposing them to the Prophanation of the wicked, they ought at least to write them on a Parchment, and to enclose it in something. Therefore they wrote these Words upon a square Piece of Parchment prepared on Purpose, with a particular Ink, and a square kind of Character, Deut. vi. 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9. Hear, O Israel, the Lord our God is one Lord, &c. Then they left a little Space, and afterwards went on, Deut. xi. 13. And it shall come to pass, if thou shalt hearken diligently to my Commandments, &c. as far as, Thou shalt write them upon the Door-posts of thy House, &c. After this they rolled up the Parchment, they put it into a Case of Reeds, or other Matter; they wrote on the End of the Case the Word Shadai, which is one of the Names of God; they put it at the Doors of their Houses, Chambers, and all Places most frequented; they fixed it to the Knockers of the Door on the right Side, and as often as they entered in or went out, they touched it in this Place with the End of their Finger, which they afterwards kissed out of Devotion. The Hebrew Word Mezuza properly signifies the Door-posts of an House; but it is also given to this Roll of Parchment now mentioned. Leo of Modena may be consulted upon the Ceremonies of the Jews, Part i. c. 2.

Micah (VI)

VI. MICAH, or Michas, of the Tribe of Ephraim, Son of a rich and superstitious Widow, who became an Occasion of falling to Israel, in the Manner as here follows. [Judges xvii, xv] The Mother of Micah had laid by a Reserve of eleven Hundred Shekels, which make about an Hundred twenty five Pounds nine Shillings and four Pence Half-penny of our Money, taking the Shekel at two Shillings and three Pence Half-penny. This Money being missing, Micah's Mother was in a great Passion about it, and even uttered heavy Imprecations against him that had stole it. Whether Micah had taken it himself, or whether he recovered it from somebody else that had taken it, he comes and tells his Mother that it was found, and was in his Custody. The Mother soon recovered her Temper, and blessing her Son for his Diligence in this Affair, she told him it should be dedicated to the Service of God, that she would have an Ephod made, and that this Ephod should be kept at their House, for the Use of a domestick Chapel that she would have erected there. She immediately goes about it, causes an Ephod or priestly Habit to be prepared with this Money, and some other Images of Metal, which she set up in Micah's House. He to comply with the superstitious Humour of his Mother, made one of his own Sons Priest; and afterwards providing a young Levite[1], he appointed him Priest of this Domestick Chapel, in the Room of his Son.

A JEW WITH THE MEZUZOTH IN HIS HANDVol. II. R.

Now in those Days there was no King in Israel, and every one acted as he saw convenient. 'Tis believed that this happened in that Interval of Time, that followed the Death of Joshua, and the Elders that succeeded him, till Othniel judged Israel[2]. During this Space of Time the Tribe of Dan being streightened in their Inheritance, sent six Hundred Men to look out for a more convenient Settlement. As they marched they passed by Micah's House, which was on the Mountains of Ephraim, and desired the Levite that resided there, to enquire of the Lord about the Success of their Expedition. He answered them, that they might go in Peace, for the Lord would prosper their Undertaking. At their Return they gave Intelligence to their Tribe, that they had found a City called Laish, of which it was easy to make a Conquest, and prevailed with their Brethren to join with them in this Enterprize.

They set out, and came a second Time to the House of Micah; and having got over the Priest to their Party, they took away the Ephod, and the graven Images, and went their Way. Micah runs after them, and crying out, they threaten to use him ill, and oblige him to retire.

Having made themselves Masters of Laish, they there set up the Idol they had taken from Micah, and appoint Jonathan, the Son of Gershom, the Son of Moses, their Priest. And this Idol continued in this Place all the Time that the House of God was at Shilo, and to the Time of the Captivity of the Countrey; or, according to another Version of the Hebrew, to the Time of the Deliverance of the Countrey. Some understand it of the Deliverance of the Countrey procured by Samuel, and others of the Captivity of the ten Tribes carried beyond the Euphrates, by the Kings of Assyria, Salmanasar, and Tiglath-pilesser. During all this Time the City of Laish, otherwise called Dan, was always a Place of Idolatry and Superstition. There were to be seen, either the Teraphims of Micah, or the golden Calves of Jeroboam.

Micah (VII)

VII. MICAH, the Morasthite, or of Moresa, a Village near the City Eleutheropolis, in the Southern Part of Judah, is the seventh in Order of the twelve lesser Prophets. He prophesied under Jotham, Ahaz, and Hezekiah, Kings of Judah, for about fifty Years[1]. Some[2] have confounded him with Micaiah Son of Imlah, but very improperly, who lived in the Kingdom of the ten Tribes, under the Reign of Ahab. The spurious Dorotheus says, that Micah was buried in the burying Place of of the Anakim, whose Habitation had been at Hebron, and round about it. This Prophet appeared almost at the same Time as Isaiah, and has even borrowed some Expressions from him; as may appear by comparing Isaiah ii. 2. with Micah iv. 1. and Isaiah xli. 15, with Micah iv. 13.

The Prophecy of Micah contains but seven Chapters. He first foretels the Calamities of Samaria, which was taken by Salmanassar, and reduced to a Heap of [Mic. i. 6, 7. Mic. i. 9,] Stones. Afterwards he prophesies against Judah, and declares the Troubles that Sennacherib should bring upon it, under the Reign of Hezekiah. Then he exclaims against the Iniquities of Samaria, he foretels the Captivity of the ten Tribes, and their Return again into their Countrey. The [Mic. ii. 1, 2, &c. 15.] third Chapter contains a pathetic Invective against the Princes of the House of Jacob, and the Judges of the House of Israel; which in my Opinion is levelled against the Chief of the Kingdom of Judah, the Judges, the Magistrates, the Priests, the false Prophets, &c. He upbraids them with their Avarice, their Injustice and Falshood, and tells them they will be the Occasion that Jerusalem shall be reduced to a Heap of Rubbish, and the Mountain of the Temple shall be as a Forest. We are informed by Jeremiah [Jerem. xxvi. 18, 19, &c.] , that this Prophecy was pronounced in the Time of Hezekiah, and that in the Days of Joachim it protected Jeremiah from Death, as was intended, for having prophesied much the same Things as Micah against Jerusalem.

After these terrible Denunciations, Micah speaks of the Reign of the Messiah, and of the Establishment of the Christian [Mic. iv. 1, &c.] Church. And as the peaceable Times which succeeded the Return from the Babylonish Captivity, and which was a Figure of the Reign of the Messiah, were disturbed by a Tempest of a short Continuance; Micah foretold it in such a Manner, as agrees very well with what Ezekiel says, of the War of [Exek. xxxviii. xxxix.] Gog against the Saints; and which we think to have Relation to the Reign of Cambyses, or the War of Holofernes. Micah speaks in Particular of the Birth of the Messiah, that he was to be born at Bethlehem, and that his [Mic. v. 2, 3, &c.] Dominion was to extend to the utmost Parts of the Earth. He says that God should raise seven Shepherds, who should reign by the Sword over Assyria, and in the Land of Nimrod, which we explain of Darius, Son of Hystaspes, and of the seven Confederates that killed the Magian, and who possessed the Empire of the Persians, after the Extinction of the Family of Cyrus. The fifth Chapter, from Verse 7 to the End, describes the flourishing Estate of the Jews in their own Countrey, from the Reign of Darius, and after the Maccabees: Yet in such a Manner, as that he mingles several Touches in it, that can agree only to the Church of Jesus Christ.

The two last Chapters of Micah contain first a long Invective against the Iniquities of Samaria; then he foretels the Fall of Babylon, the Re-establishment of the Cities of Israel, the Greatness of the Countrey possessed by the Israelites, their Happiness, the Graces wherewith God will favour them; and all this in such lofty Terms, that they chiefly agree with the State of the Christian Church. St. Jerome[3] says, that Micah was buried at Morasthi; and Sozomenes[4] says, that his Tomb was revealed to Zebennus Bishop of Eleutheropolis, under the Reign of Theodosius the Great. He calls the Place of his Burial Beretsate, which is probably the same as Morasthi, ten Furlongs from Eleutheropolis. The Author of the Life and Death of the Prophets, printed under the Name of Epiphanius, pretends that Micah was thrown headlong, and put to Death by Jehoram, Son of Ahab, because he could not bear that Freedom he made Use of, in reproaching him with his Vices. But we have already observed, that this Author, as also several others, has confounded Micah the Morasthite, with Micaiah Son of Imlah.

Micaiah (II)

II. MICAIAH, or Michaia, Son of Imlah, of the Tribe of Ephraim, and a Prophet of the Lord. Once it happened, that Micaiah spoke to one of his Associates, in the Name of the Lord[1]; at least it is generally thought that it was Micaiah, though the Scripture does not mention his Name. He ordered him to strike him, and to wound him, which the other refusing to do, Micaiah told him, that as soon as he went away, a Lion should meet him and kill him, which happened accordingly. Micaiah meeting with another, he desired the same Thing of him, which he performed to his Satisfaction. Thus the Prophet being disfigured, and not easy to be known, he threw Dust in his Face, and went to meet King Ahab.

As the King passed by, Micaiah cried out to him, saying, Lord, thy Servant being in the Battle, one put into my Hands a Prisoner of War, and ordered me to keep him, threatning that if I let him go, my Life should pay for him, or that I should pay him a Talent of Silver. And as I was in a Hurry, looking about here and there, the Prisoner on a sudden was gone, and was no where to be found. Then says Ahab to him, Thy own Mouth has pronounced thy Sentence. At which the Prophet wiping the Dust off his Face, and discovering himself to Ahab, he says to the King; Just so says the Lord to thee. Because thou hast let go a Man that was worthy of Death, thy Life shall answer for his Life, and thy People for his People. He spoke of Ben-hadad King of Syria, whom Ahab had suffered to escape when he was in his Power. But the King of Israel had no Regard to what Micaiah had said to him, and returned full of Anger to Samaria.

About three Years after[2], when Ahab had resolved to make War with Ben-hadad King of Syria, whom he had set at Liberty three Years before, he invited Jehoshaphat King of Judah to partake with him in this Expedition. Jehoshaphat, who happened to be then at Samaria, gave his Consent to it, but he desired that a Prophet of the Lord might be sent for, in Order to consult[3] him about the Success of this Undertaking. For he would not rely upon the Answers of the Prophets of Baal, who had assured Ahab of a glorious Victory. Then they caused Micaiah the Son of Imlah to come before the Kings, and desired him by the Way, that his Words might be agreeable to the Words of the other Prophets that had been consulted, who all had promised the King good Success. Micaiah answered, that as the Lord lived he would say no other Thing than what the Lord should put into his Mouth. He came then before the Kings, and Ahab having enquired of him, whether they should march against Ramoth-Gilead or no? Micaiah answered, March on and prosper, the Lord shall deliver it into thy Hands. To which the King replied, I adjure thee in the Name of the Lord to answer only according to the Truth. Then Micaiah says to him with a more serious Countenance; I saw all Israel dispersed upon the Mountains, like Sheep that have no Shepherd: And the Lord said, they have no Captain, let every one return in Peace to his own House.

Then says Ahab to King Jehoshaphat, Did not I tell you that this Man would never prophesy any Good to me, but always Evil? And Micaiah added, Hear the Word of the Lord. I saw the Lord upon his Throne, and all the heavenly Host on his Right and on his Left. And the Lord said, Who shall prevail with Ahab King of Israel to march against Ramoth-Gilead, that he may die there? And one answered one Thing, and another another. Then an evil Spirit stept forth and said, I will prevail with Ahab, by putting a Lie into the Mouth of all his Prophets. The Lord said to him, Go, and thou shalt succeed as thou hast said. To which Micaiah added, Now has the Lord put a lying Spirit in the Mouth of all thy Prophets, and has passed Sentence against thee. At the same Time Zedekiah Son of Chenaanah stepped up to Micaiah, and gave him a Blow on the Face, saying, Which Way went the Spirit of the Lord from me to speak unto thee? To whom Micaiah replied, This thou shalt see, when thou shalt pass from Chamber to Chamber to hide thy self. Then Ahab King of Israel says to his People, Take Micaiah and carry him to Amon the Governor of Samaria, and let him be fed with the Bread of Grief, and Water of Affliction1, till I return in Peace. Micaiah answered him, If thou return at all in Peace, the Lord has not spoken by me. Let all the People here present be Witnesses. The Event justified the Prediction of Micaiah; for in the Fight Ahab was shot through by an Arrow, that was shot at Random by a Syrian. After this Time we hear no more what became of Micaiah the Son of Imlah.

Michael (I)

[Jude, v. 9, 10. 2 Peter ii. 10, 11.] I. MICHAEL, that is[1], Who is like to God? 'Tis believed that Michael is the Head of the heavenly Host, in the same Manner as Lucifer is the Head of the Infernal; and that God had constituted him the Protector of the People of Israel, as also the Christian Church now flatters her self, to have him for her Guardian and Defender. This is what the Scriptures inform us concerning St. Michael. St. Jude in his Epistle says, Yet Michael the Archangel, when contending with the Devil, he disputed about the Body of Moses, durst not bring against him a railing Accusation, but said, The Lord rebuke thee. St. Jude concludes from thence, that the Faithful ought not to make Use of ill Words or Execrations, as Hereticks and false Prophets are used to do. But these speak Evil of those Things which they know not, but what they know naturally as brute Beasts, in those Things they corrupt themselves. St. Peter in a parallel Passage speaks much after the same Manner of Hereticks and false Prophets. Presumptuous are they, selfwilled, they are not afraid to speak Evil of Dignities: Whereas Angels which are greater in Power, and Might, bring not railing Accusations against them before the Lord. But these, as natural brute Beasts, made to be taken and destroyed, speak Evil of the Things that they understand not, and shall utterly perish in their own Corruption.

It may be asked, what Story St. Jude here makes Allusion to, when he says, that there was a Contention between the Archangel and the Devil about the Body of Moses? 'Tis believed that he alludes to an History related in the Apochryphal Book of the Assumption of Moses[2], where it was told, that the Archangel St. Michael after the Death of Moses, was urgent to have the Body of this Legislator buried and concealed from Men, for Fear that the Hebrews, or any other Nations, should think fit to idolize or worship him. But the Devil on the contrary pretended, that the Body ought to be left to the Hebrews, that it might be a Trial of their Fidelity, or rather a Snare and Occasion of Scandal to 'em[3]. Œcumenius[4] from another Tradition advances, that St. Michael used all his Power to procure an honourable Funeral for Moses, but the Devil on the other Hand was as importunate, pretending that the Body belonged to him, and that he was unworthy of the Honour of Burial, as being guilty of the Death of an Egyptian that was slain by him. Philo[5] and Epiphanius[6] believe, that the Body of [Exod. ii. 11, 12.] Moses was buried by the Hands of Angels. We have at this Day two Books intituled, Petii-ath Moshe, or the Assumption of Moses; but we find nothing in them of the Contest between Michael and the Devil about the Body of Moses.

Another Place in which Mention is made of St. Michael is St. John's Revelation, [Rev. xii. 6, 7, &c.] where it is said that the Woman, representing the Church, fled into the Desert, where God had prepared a Retreat for her, And there was War in Heaven, Michael and his Angels fought against the Dragon, and the Dragon fought and his Angels, and prevailed not, neither was their Place found any more in Heaven. And the great Dragon was cast out, that old Serpent, called the Devil and Satan, which deceiveth the whole World. He was cast out into the Earth, and his Angels were cast out with him. 'Tis from this Place that it has been concluded, that St. Michael the Archangel was the tutelar Angel and Guardian of the Christian Church. He exerted his Power chiefly at the Time of the Persecutions of the Pagans against the Believers. He restrained the Power of Satan, he supported the Faith of the Christians, he defeated the Designs of the Persecutors.

Daniel also speaks of St. Michael in two Places. He says, that the Angel Gabriel having appeared to him, said thus to him. Fear [Dan. x. 5, —13.] not, Daniel, for from the first Day that thou didst set thine Heart to understand, and to chasten thy self before thy God, thy Words were heard, and I am come for thy Words. But the Prince of the Kingdom of Persia withstood me one and twenty Days; but lo, Michael one of the chief Princes came to help me, and I remained there with the Kings of Persia. 'Tis commonly believed[7], that this Angel of the Kingdom of Persia was he, to whom God had committed the Care and Superintendance of this Kingdom, and that he opposed Gabriel and Michael, because he was desirous to keep the Jews as long as he could in Persia, where they did much Good among the People, and made many Proselytes to their Religion; and consequently he opposed with all his Power their Return into Palestine, whither they were going to be sent back by the Favour of Cyrus. Others not readily assenting to this voluntary Opposition of three good Angels, have imagined that the Angel of the Persians was a bad Angel[8], who being jealous of the Prosperity of the Jews, did his utmost to prevent Cyrus from coming to the Empire of Persia, that he might not set the Jews at Liberty.

The last Passage of Scripture, where we find Mention made of the Name Michael, is that of Daniel xii. 1, 2. where speaking of the Persecutions of Antiochus Epiphanes against the Jews, and of the unfortunate Death of that wicked Prince, he says, And at that Time shall Michael stand up, the great Prince which standeth for the Children of thy People, and there shall be a Time of Trouble, such as never was since there was a Nation, even to that same Time; and at that Time thy People shall be delivered, every one that shall be found written in the Book. And many of them that sleep in the Dust of the Earth shall awake, some to everlasting Life, and some to Shame and everlasting Contempt. And they that be wise shall shine as the Brightness of the Firmament, and they that turn many to Righteousness, as the Stars for ever and ever. Michael therefore was sent of God to succour his People, during these Times of Persecution; he inspired the Maccabees with invincible Courage, he struck the wicked Antiochus, and delivered the Jewish Church from the most terrible Persecution, to which it had ever been exposed.

'Tis believed that it was Michael the Archangel that conducted the Israelites in their Journey through the Desert, and of [Ex. xxiii. 20, 23. xxxiii. 2.] whom it is said, Behold, I send an Angel before thee to keep thee in the Way, and to bring thee into the Place which I have prepared. Beware of him, and obey his Voice, provoke him not, for he will not pardon your Transgressions, for my Name is in him. That is, he is my Envoy, my Ambassador, and he acts in my Name. 'Tis believed also, that 'twas he that appeared to Moses in the burning Bush, who spoke to him in the Name of the Lord, who was the Guide of the People in the Wilderness, and who gave the Tokens of his Presence in the Pillar of a Cloud. 'Tis thought also, that he appeared to Joshua in the Fields of Jericho, and to Gideon, and to Manoah the Father of Sampson. In a Word, to him are imputed the greatest Part of the most remarkable Appearances, either in the Old Testament or the New.

The Romish Church celebrates three Appearances of St. Michael, of which no Mention is made in Scripture, and which have happened (as they say) a long Time since the Age of the Apostles. The first is that of Chones, or Colossus in Phrygia, of which the Time is not certainly known. The Feast of this Appearance was fixed on the sixth of September, in the whole Eastern Church. The second is the Appearance of St. Michael on Mount Garganus in Italy, in the Kingdom of Naples. This Appearance happened, as they say, towards the End of the fifth Century. The Church celebrates the Feast of this Appearance on the eighth of May, and that of the Dedication of the Cavern in which he appeared, on the twenty ninth of September. Lastly, the third Appearance of St. Michael, which is honoured by a particular Festival of the Church, is that which was made to Aubert Bishop of Avranches, upon a Rock called the Tomb, where at this Day is the Abby of St. Michael exposed to the Sea, in the Bay between Normandy and Bretany. This Appearance was about the Year 706, and the Festival has ever since been celebrated in France on the sixteenth of October. See M. Baillet in his Lives of the Saints, on September twenty nine.

Michal

MICHAL, or Michol, Daughter of King Saul. The Hebrews think, that she had also the Name of Eglah[1], and that she was Mother of Ithream, 2 Sam. iii. 5. But this Opinion has no Foundation. Michal falling in Love with David, and her Father Saul being informed of it, was not a little glad of it[2], saying, I will give her to David for a Wife, that he may fall into the Hands of the Philistines, and so she may be the Cause of his Ruine. Saul therefore bid his Confidents to move it to David as from their selves, and to say to him; You see that the King and all his Officers have an Affection for you, endeavour therefore to become the King's Son-in-Law. David made Answer, that he was unworthy of that Honour, and that he had not an Estate to support such high Pretensions. This was told Saul, who replied, Let David know that I have no Need of a Dowry for my Daughter; for then it was the Custom for the Husband to give a Dowry for his Wife, and in some Manner to buy her of her Parents. David was given to understand, that all the Dowry required of him was, an hundred Foreskins of the Philistines, that by his Means Saul might be revenged of his Enemies. A little while after David marches out against the Philistines, and having killed two Hundred of them, he brought their Foreskins to King Saul, being double the Number that was required of him. And thus Saul gave him his Daughter Michal in Marriage.

Some Time after[3] the evil Spirit taking Possession of Saul, and David playing on the Harp before him for his Relief; he threw a Javelin at David, thinking to kill him, but David avoided the Blow, and escaped out of Saul's House. Saul sent his Guards after him, to secure him in his own House during the Night Season, and to bring him with them on the Morrow. But Michal let him down through a Window, and by this Means he made his Escape. Michal then took a Statue[4], and laid it in David's Bed, and put about its Head the Skin of a Goat[5] with the Hair on, and covered it with a Cloath. Saul sent next Morning to take David, but was told he was sick. He sent again, and gave Orders that he should be brought in his Bed; but going to take him, they found nothing but a Statue, and Michal excused her self to her Father by saying, that David threatened to kill her if she did not assist him in his Escape. Some Time after[6] Saul gave Michal to Phalti, (or Phaltiel) Son of Laish of Gallim.

But David, when he came to the Crown, caused Michal to be restored to him again[7], and this was one of the Conditions that he stipulated with Abner, when this General came to offer his Services to him, and undertook to reduce all Israel to his Obedience. Then David sent Messengers to Ish-bosheth, who reigned at Mahanaim beyond Jordan, to demand Michal. Ish-bosheth therefore sent her back to David, and Phaltiel followed her weeping as far as Baburim. The Hebrews pretend, that Phaltiel never came near Michal, who in Strictness could not be his Wife, since she never had been divorced from David. Others believe that Michal had five Sons by Phaltiel, which were given up to the Gibeonites to be executed, as is related 2 Sam. xxi. 8, 9. But in this Place there appears to be a Fault somehow crept into the Text, which ought to be read Merob, instead of Michal. For Michal was not given to Adriel the Son of Barzillai the Meholathite, as this Text would insinuate, but to Phaltiel the Son of Laish. Therefore instead of Adriel Son of Barzillai, we must read here Phaltiel Son of Laish, or we must seek some other Solution of this Difficulty, which may be seen before under the Article MEROB. David from the very Beginning of his Reign[8] had formed a Design of translating the Ark of the Covenant from Shilo, where it then was, to Jerusalem, where he had fixed his Habitation. This pious Design he executed with all the Pomp and Ceremony that his Zeal and Devotion could inspire him with; he himself leaping and dancing for Joy in this great Solemnity. Michal observing this at a Window, where she had placed herself to see the Procession, took great Offence at it, and conceived no small Contempt for King David; which she could not forbear shewing, when he returned to his Palace. She upbraided him with descending to such Meannesses, below the Majesty of a King, as to dance and play among his Servants, discovering his Nakedness, and acting rather like a Buffoon than a King. But David vindicated himself by telling her, that he would dance and appear vile before the Lord, who had made Choice of him to be King of Israel, preferring him before her Father and all his Family; and that being contemptible in his own Eyes, he should be the more honourable for that in the Eyes of all his Servants. Michal had no Children to the Day of her Death, which the Scripture seems to impute to the Reproaches she made to David on this Occasion. From this Time no more Mention is made of Michal in Scripture, and the Time of her Death is unknown.

Midian (I)

I. MIDIAN, or Madian, the fourth Son of Abraham and of Keturah, Gen. xxv. 2. See MADAN. The Midianites mentioned in Numbers xxii. 4, 7. xxv. 15. and xxxi. 2, &c. whose Daughters seduced the Israelites to the Commission of criminal Practices, and to the worshipping of Baal-peor, were the Descendants of Midian the Son of Abraham. Their capital City was called Midian, and its Remains were still to be seen in the Time of St Jerome and Eusebius. Midian (II)

[Numb. xii. 1. Heb. Hab. iii. 7. Heb. Exod. ii. 15, &c.] II. MIDIAN; he was probably the Son of Cush, since Zipporah the Wife of Moses, who was a Midianite, was nevertheless called a Cushite; and since Habakkuk puts the Midianites with the Cushites as if they were synonomous, or at least Neighbours to each other. This Midian peopled the Countrey which bore his Name, to the East of the Red -Sea e. 'Twas into this Countrey that Moses withdrew himself, and there married Zipporah the Daughter of Jethro. 'Twas these Midianites that trembled for Fear, when they heard that the Hebrews had passed through the Red-Sea on dry Ground, Hab. iii. 7. See here what Abulfeda says of the City of Midian[1]. Madyan is a City, in Ruines, upon the[2] Shore of the Red-Sea, on the Side opposite to Tabuc, from which it is distant about six Days Journey. 'Tis at Midian that may be seen the famous Well, where Moses watered the Flocks of Schoaib. (For thus the Mahometans call Jethro) This City was the Capital of the Tribe of Midian among the Israelites. According to Ibusaid, the Bay of the Red-Sea in this Place, is about one hundred Thousand Paces wide. It should seem as if the Orientals knew no other Midianites but those that dwelt upon the Shore of the Red-Sea, near Mount Sinai, among whom Moses took Refuge, and where he married his Wife Zipporah. The Arabian Authors affirm, that the Midianites are a strange People, who came to settle in Arabia, and that they are not of the Number of the ancient People who inhabited this Countrey, and of whom the Authors now mentioned[3] have given an exact Account in their Histories and Genealogies; which gives Countenance to the Opinion of those, who will have Midian to have been the Son of Cush. 'Tis also affirmed, that the Midianites worshipped the Idols Abda and Hinda; and that the Prophet Jethro being sent by God to reclaim them from their Idolatry, they continued hardened and obstinate, and that God extirpated them, as we have seen under the Article JETHRO.

Midianites

MIDIANITES, the Descendants of Midian, the Son of Abraham.

The Lord intending to punish the Midianites, because their Daughters had enticed the Israelites to the Commission of heinous Crimes, and had seduced them to the Worship of Peor, says to Moses; Take a Thousand [Numb. xxxi. 1, &c.] Men out of each Tribe, and send them under the Command of Phinehas, Son of the High-Priest Eleazar, to execute my Vengeance against the Midianites. Phinehas marched therefore at the Head of twelve Thousand Men, having with him the Ark of the Covenant, according to some Commentators[1], and the Trumpets of the Tabernacle. He gave Battle to the Midianites, defeated them, and put to Death five of their Kings, Evi, Rekem, Zur, Hur, and Reba, who reigned over several Cities of the Countrey of Midian, lying to the East of the Dead-Sea. And God permitted also, that the wicked Prophet Balaam should be involved in their Misfortune, and should there lose his Life. They took the Women, the Children, the Flocks, and whatever belonged to the Midianites; they burnt their Cities, Villages, and Forts, and the Israelites brought into their Camp all the Booty they had got in this Expedition.

[Observations upon the intire Defeat of the Midianites by the Israelites. Numb. xxxi.] The sacred Author is much shorter in [Josh. vi. 1. 1 Sam. iv, v, &c.] his Description of this great Battle, than in any other. He says but a Word of it; therefore it will be allowed me to make some Conjectures about it, which I think are very probable: The Lord himself gives Orders for this War against the Midianites. He says to Moses, Avenge the Children of Israel of the Midianites. These Words were a sufficient Assurance of the Victory to the Israelites. When the Lord fights for us, there is Need but of small Force to conquer an Enemy. Of every Tribe a Thousand, throughout all the Tribes of Israel, shall ye send to the War. And Moses sent them to the War, a Thousand of every Tribe, them and Phinehas the Son of Eleazar the Priest, to the War, with the holy Instruments, and the Trumpets to blow in his Hand. These holy Instruments have perplexed not a few Commentators, however they are plainly distinguished from the Trumpets. We cannot therefore imagine, that it was the Trumpets that are here called holy Instruments. Therefore it seems probable, that the Ark was carried by the Levites in this Expedition, as in some others. Observe farther, that Moses ran no Risk by sending the Ark on this Occasion, since God had assured his People, that they should obtain a compleat Revenge of the Midianites.

The chief Office of the Priest was, to sound the Charge in the Battle, and to defend the Ark when it was present. The Scripture gives no Account of the Order of Battle of the two Armies; by all Appearance, they were disposed according to the Method of the ancient People of Asia; therefore I range the Israelites upon one Line formed by twelve Corps, each of a Thousand Men. The Ark of the Covenant was surrounded by the Priests and Levites, having the Trumpets at their Head. The Midianites are also to be ranged in a Phalanx upon one Line; and as the Israelites were doubtless much inferior in Number to their Enemies, they made much larger Intervals between the Corps of a Thousand Men each, in Order to pierce into the Enemies Front in different Places. This Method was the constant Practice of the Jews, when they were fewer than their Enemies, and particularly at the Time of the Maccabees.

No Mention is here made of any Horse; they were very rare in that Age. Was it because they saw more clearly than we do? And did they think like Xenophon, who was used to say, that ten Thousand Horse make but ten Thousand Men, since the Horses themselves don't fight at all? Without Doubt this was their Opinion in former Ages, but afterwards the Cavalry became very numerous in their Armies. The People of the West, as the Greeks and Romans, when their Discipline began to decay, had great Numbers of Horse in their Armies, and still in greater Number as that Decay grew more and more visible.

But to return to the Israelites. And they warred against the Midianites, as the Lord commanded Moses. And they slew all the Males. And they slew the Kings of Midian, besides the rest of them that were slain. Namely, Evi and Rekem, and Zur, and Hur, and Reba, five Kings of Midian. Balaam also the Son of Beor, they slew with the Sword. This wicked Prophet, who was the first Author of this War, by the pernicious Counsel he gave the Moabites and [Numb. xxiv. 14. xxxi. 16.] Midianites, was involved in this dreadful Slaughter. The Consequences of this Defeat were very dismal, Ruin and Desolation spread themselves all round the Countrey, and all their Cities, Villages, and Forts were sacked, demolished, pillaged, and burnt. The whole Prey was brought to the Camp, in the Plain of Moab, on the Side of Jordan, over against Jericho, to be distributed among the Israelites. This War was very bloody and terrible, and if God had not commanded it, Moses could not easily be acquitted of the Imputation of Injustice and Plundering.

Mile

MILE, Milliare, a Measure of Length, containing a Thousand Paces, and three Miles make a League. The French League is two Thousand and five hundred geometrical Paces [which is something more than two and half English Miles.] Eight Stadia or Furlongs make a Mile. Our Saviour tells us, that if we are constrained to go a Mile, we should go [Matth. v. 41.] two. The Romans commonly measured by Miles, and the Greeks by Furlongs. The Furlong was an hundred and twenty five Paces, and the Pace five Feet. The ancient Hebrews had neither Miles, Furlongs, nor Feet, but only the Cubit, the Reed, and the Line. The Rabbins make Use of Miles; they make a Mile to consist of two Thousand Cubits, and four Miles make a Parasang. See M. Reland Palest. l. ii. c. 1. p. 396, 397. Milk

MILK. A Land flowing with Milk and Honey[1], is a Countrey of extraordinary Fertility. Moses forbids to seeth the Kid in its [Exod. xxiii. 19. xxxiv. 16. Deut. xiv. 21.] Mother's Milk; which the Hebrews understand literally, and do not allow themselves to eat Meat and Cheese at the same Meal, one immediately after the other. See what we have observed upon the Article MEATS. Some understand this Prohibition in a metaphorical Sense, as if it was only to [Deut. xxii. 6.] forbid Cruelty; as in another Place it does not allow to take the old Bird sitting upon her Nest along with the young ones.

The Writers of the Old Testament speak of the Conception of Man in his Mother's Womb, as of Milk that curdles, and takes the human Form. See Job x. 10, 11. Nonne sicut lac mulsisti me, & sicut caseum me coagulasti. And Wisdom vii. 1, 2. In ventre ventris figuratus sum caro, decem mensium tempore coagulatus sum in sanguine. The Heart of the Wicked is coagulated, or hardened, [Psal. cxix. 70. Joel. iii. 18. Isai. lx. 16. 1 Cor. iii. 2. Heb. v. 12.] like Milk; but the Hebrew may be translated, Their Heart is as fat as Grease.

In the Prophets the Kingdom of Messiah is represented as a Season of great Abundance, when the Mountains should run down with Milk and Honey. In die illa stillabunt montes dulcedinem, & colles fluent lacte. And Isaiah says; Thou shalt also suck the Milk of the Gentiles, and shalt suck the Breast of Kings. St. Paul compares his Converts to little Children, who are to be fed with Milk, and not with solid Food; and [1 Pet. ii. 2.] St. Peter thus exhorts the Faithful; As new -born Babes desire the sincere Milk of the Word, that ye may grow thereby.

To milk is often said in a figurative Sense, to denote the dangerous Caresses and Enticements [Prov. i. 10.] of Sinners. My Son, if Sinners entice thee, consent thou not, Heb. Milk thee, or deceive thee, flatter thee, tempt thee by their vain Allurements. The Text reads the same Word in other Passages, where St. Jerome uses the Word Lactare, instead of Seducere, Fallere. In the Song of Songs, iv. 11. Mel & lac sub linguâ tuâ, signifies, Your Words are softer or sweeter than Milk and Honey.

Mill

MILL, Mola, to grind. Our Saviour in the Gospel says, that it would be better for a Man to be thrown into the Sea, with a Mill-stone about his Neck, than that he should be a Scandal to one of his little ones. Expedit ei ut suspendatur mola asinaria in collo ejus, &c. This Asses Mill-stone, according to [Matth. xviii, 6.] some[1], was a large Stone turned round by an Ass, to distinguish it from the smaller Stones which were turned by the Arm. Others believe[2], that the Mola asinaria was the lower Mill-stone, which was sluggish and immovable.

To express the highest and meanest Conditions [Exod. xi. 5.] of Life, Moses says, From the first-born of Pharaoh, that sitteth upon his Throne, even unto the first-born of the Maidservant that is behind the Mill. Because before the Invention of Wind-mills and Water-mills, they commonly made Use of Hand-mills to grind their Corn. Samson was condemned by the Philistines to this kind of Labour in his [Judg. xvii. 21.] Prison; But the Philistines took him, and put out his Eyes, and brought him down to Gaza, and bound him with Fetters of Brass, and he did grind in the Prison-house. Allusion is often made to this Custom. See Isai. xlvii. 2. Matth. xxiv. 41. Luke xvii. 35.

Moses forbids his People to take from a poor Man as a Pledge or Pawn, the upper or the nether Mill-stone. Or according to the [Deut. xxiv. 6.] Hebrew, Thou shalt not take the two Stones of a Mill, and the Carriage. Very probably he speaks of those Mills, which the Hebrews made Use of in the Wilderness, which were mounted upon Carriages, because of their frequent Decampments. The two Chaldee Paraphrasts explain this in a figurative Sense; Thou shalt not use any Artifice to hinder the Consummation of Marriage. Some Rabbins explain what is said of Samson in a Sense pretty near this; that he was made to grind in his Prison, say they, that they might have some of his Race. In profane Authors Molere is sometimes taken in an obscene Sense; and in Job xxxi. 10. Scortum alterius sit uxor mea, & super illam incurventur alii. The Hebrew says, Molat alteri uxor mea, &c.

Millet

MILLET, a kind of Grain, called in Latin Milium. 'Tis mentioned in Isaiah and Ezekiel. Isaiah[1] says, that the Husbandman sows in his Land, Wheat, Barley, Millet, and Fitches, each in its Place. And Ezekiel[2] receives an Order from the Lord, to make himself Bread with a Mixture of Wheat, Barley, Beans, Lentils, and Millet. The Word made Use of by Isaiah, is Nisman; and that used by Ezekiel, is Dochan. The Septuagint render both of 'em by Kenchron, which signifies Millet. But the Signification of Nisman is doubtful. Some render it by Spelt, or Fitches, [or Vetches.] Others join it to the Barley, so as to read Hordeum signatum vel insigne. The Word Nisman is found no where else but in this Place; nor is Dochan to be read any where else but in the Passage of Ezekiel above cited.

Millo (I)

I. MILLO, or Mello; this Hebrew Word signifies filled up. Thus they called a very deep Valley, which was between the old City of Jebus, or Jerusalem, and the [1 Kings ix. 15. 2 Kings v. 9. 1 Chron. xi. 8.] City of David built upon Mount Sion. David and Solomon caused this Valley to be filled up, and made there a Place for the People to assemble. Solomon also took a Part of it, to build a Palace for his Queen, [1 Kings ix. 24.] the Daughter of Pharaoh. 'Twas upon the Account of these vast and chargeable Works that Solomon undertook, in Order to fill up Millo, that Jeroboam the Son of [1 Kings xi. 27, 28, &c.] Nebat revolted, and infused the Spirit of Sedition into his Brethren of the Tribe of Ephraim, which broke out after the Death of Solomon.

Millo (II)

[Ezek. xlv. 12. Judg. ix. 6.] II. MILLO, a City near to Shechem. 'Tis said in the Book of Judges, that the Inhabitants of Shechem, and those of the City of Millo, made Abimelech Son of Gideon King. The Hebrew Text reads, The House of Millo, instead of the City of Millo. Some believe that Millo was a Citizen of Shechem, or else some Part of this City; for in Palestine there is no City known by the Name of Millo.

Mina

MINA, or Mna; a Species of Money, called in Hebrew Min, or Mina, or Maneh, which properly signifies one Part or Ounce. I observe this Word only in the Books of Kings, Chronicles, Ezra and Ezekiel. This Prophet tells us, that the Mina or Maneh was valued at sixty Shekels, which in Gold make of our English Money about 54¾ Pounds, and in Silver almost seven Pounds. Thus for the Hebrew Maneh. But the Greek or Attick Mina, which is probably that mentioned in the Books of the Maccabees, and in the New Testament, is valued at an hundred Drachmæ, or about two Pound seventeen Shillings Sterling. There was also a lesser Mina, which was valued at seventy five Drachmæ.

Mincha

MINCHA. This is a pure Hebrew Word, and signifies Offerings of Meal, Cakes, or Biscuits, that were offered in the Temple of the Lord[1]. The Seventy have sometimes preserved this Hebrew Word in their Translation[2]; but instead of Mincha, they read Manaa, which doubtless was the received Pronunciation in their Time. We find Manna in the same Sence in Baruch i. 10. Prepare ye Manna, and offer upon the Altar of the Lord our God. The Scripture makes Use of the Word Mincha, to express the Offerings that Cain and Abel [Gen. iv. 3, 4.] made to the Lord, of their First-Fruits; and for the Presents that Jacob made to his Brother Esau, at his Return from [Gen. xxxii. 13, 16, 18, 20, 21. Mint

MINT, a Garden-Herb, or Pot-Herb, sufficiently known. The Law did not oblige the Jews to give the Tythe of these Sorts of Herbs; it only submitted to the Payment of Tythes what could be comprehended under the Name Income or Revenue, proventus; especially what was produced in the Countrey. But the Pharisees desiring to distinguish themselves, by a more scrupulous and literal Observation of the Law than others, gave the Tythes of [Matth. xxiii. 23.] Mint, Anise, and Cummin. Our Saviour does not discommend this Exactness, but he complains, that while they are so precise in these lesser Matters, they neglect the more essential Commandments of the Law.

Miracle

MIRACLE, Sign, Wonder, Prodigy; these Terms are commonly used in Scripture, to denote some Action, Event, or Effect, which is superior to the general and known Laws of Nature. This Name is given, not only to the true Miracles wrought by Saints or Prophets sent from God, by good Angels, by the Finger of God, or by the Son of God; but also to the false Miracles of Impostors, and to Wonders wrought by the Wicked, by false Prophets, or Devils. Moses, for Example, speaks of the Miracles of Pharaoh's Magicians, in the Manner he speaks of those that he wrought himself, in the Name and by the Power of God. And our Saviour foretels in the Gospel, that false Christs and false Prophets should perform Wonders, capable of deceiving, if possible, the elect themselves. And St. John in the [Matth. xxiv. 24. Rev. xiii. 13, 14.] Revelations speaks of a Beast that came out of the Earth, which is understood of a Persecutor of the Church, which performed such Prodigies, as even to make Fire come down from Heaven upon the Earth, in the Presence of many Men, and which seduced a great Number of Persons, because of the Miracles that God permitted to be wrought in their Presence. And in the same Book he speaks of Demons, which shew Wonders to [Rev. xvi. 14.] prevail with the Kings of the Earth to make War with the Saints; and of a false Prophet, who works Miracles to seduce those who [Rev. xix. 20.] have received the Mark of the Beast.

Therefore Miracles and Prodigies are not always sure Signs, of the Sanctity of those that perform them; nor are they Proofs of the Truth of the Doctrine they deliver, nor certain Testimonies of their divine Mission. The Son of God not only allows us, but even commands us to examine Miracles, and those that perform them. Then if any Man shall say unto you, Lo here is Christ, or there, believe it not. For there shall arise false Christs, and false Prophets, and shall shew great Signs and Wonders, insomuch that (if it were possible) they shall deceive the very [Matth. xxiv. 23, 24. Deut. xiii. 1.] Elect. And Moses says, If there arise among you a Prophet, or a Dreamer of Dreams, and giveth thee a Sign or a Wonder, and the Sign or the Wonder cometh to Pass, whereof he speak unto thee saying, Let us go after other Gods, (which thou hast not known) and let us serve them; thou shalt not hearken unto the Words of that Prophet, or that Dreamer of Dreams; for the Lord your God proveth you, to know whether you love the Lord your God with all your Heart, and with all your Soul. It may therefore be affirmed, that the Proof of Miracles is not always certain, but sometimes equivocal. To the Mission of him that works Miracles must be joined the Truth of the Doctrine he would advance, the Innocence of his Life, his Submission to the Heads of the Church, his good Understanding, and his Concurrence with the Saints, and with those whose Life, Mission, and Doctrine have been already acknowledged and approved. His Miracles must be strictly examined, to see if they are true ones, and not juggling Tricks, or magical Operations. Whether they lead us to God, to Peace, to Righteousness, and to Salvation. If all these Marks and Characters now mentioned are to be found in him that works Miracles, we may without Danger allow such an one to be a Messenger sent from God.

Our Saviour in the Gospel complains, that the Jews would not believe but by [John iv. 48.] Dint of Miracles. Except ye see Signs and Wonders, ye will not believe. The same Jews applying themselves to Jesus Christ, asked a Sign from him: Master, we would [Matth. xii. 38.] see a Sign from thee. To which he replied, that they should see no other Sign but that of the Prophet Jonas, and that as Jonas was three Days and three Nights in the Belly of the Whale, so the Son of Man should be three Days in the Bosom of the Earth. He [John xv. 24.] says elsewhere, that if he had not performed among them such Miracles as were never before performed by Man, they would have no Sin. But after what he had already done among them, and after the Doctrine that he had preached, they were without any Excuse. Also Nicodemus owns, No Man can [John iii. 2.] do these Miracles that thou doest, except God be with him. Such a Train of Miracles, accompanied with so much Innocence and Righteousness, together with a Doctrine so pure and divine, could not be the Work of Falsity and Delusion. The Finger of God manifestly appears therein. When Jesus Christ sent forth his Apostles to preach the Gospel among the Jews, and among infidel Nations, he gave them an ample Power of working all Sorts of Miracles in his Name. We may be assured, that nothing so much [Matth. xvi. 17.] contributed to the Propagation of the Christian Faith, as the Multitude of Miracles that were worked by the Apostles and their Disciples; to which was joined the sublimest Doctrine, and the purest Morality, together with a most righteous and disinterested Life and Conversation.

The Prejudices, Obstinacy, and Incredulity of the Jews must have been very extraordinary, not to surrender themselves to the Miracles of Jesus Christ and his Apostles. St. Paul says, that the Jews must have Miracles [1 Cor. i. 22.] to convince them. The Jews require a Sign, and the Greeks seek after Wisdom. But who ever performed greater Signs, or worked more frequent and more incontestable Miracles than Jesus Christ? The common People did not labour under so great Prepossessions and Prejudices as the Doctors, the Priests, and the Pharisees; and were ready to allow, that the Messiah could not do a greater Number of Miracles. When Christ cometh, will he do more Miracles than these which this Man hath done? The Doctors themselves could not give the Lye to their own Eyes, or oppose themselves to what was publick and notorious; they could not directly deny the Miracles, but chose rather to ascribe them to Beelzebub. The modern Jews pretend, that Jesus Christ had stole the Name Jehovah out of the Temple, which he made Use of to perform his Miracles. If this were true, could it be conceived, that God would favour an Impostor with the Gift of working Miracles, and such a long Train of Miracles, and in so high a Degree, one who attempted the Subversion of the Law and the Jewish Religion? And would he permit him to transfer this Power to his Disciples and Apostles, to those that believed in him, and this for so long a Time together? What is it to be hardened in Error, if this may not be said to be such?

Miraculum in the Latin Text of the Vulgate does not always signifie a Miracle; for it often has the Signification of something that is singular and extraordinary, that surprizes and astonishes. For Example, in Job, Miraculum meum non te terreat. The Hebrew says [Job. xxxiii. 7.] literally, My Terror shall not make thee afraid. 'Tis Elihu that speaks, My Eloquence shall not impose upon you, my Authority shall not bear you down. And in the [1 Sam. xiv. 15.] first Book of Samuel, Factum est miraculum in castris; Fear spread in the Camp of the Philistines, and on a sudden an extraordinary Change was perceived therein. And in Jeremiah, Erunt in jusjurandum & in miraculum. [Jerem. xliv. 12.] The Jews who took Refuge in Egypt shall be an Occasion of Astonishment. And when any one would wish the greatest Misfortunes to another, he shall say to him, May you be as miserable as the Jews! &c.

Miriam

MIRIAM, Sister of Moses and Aaron, and Daughter of Amram and Jochebed, was born about ten or twelve Years before her Brother Moses, about the Year of the World 2424, before Christ 1576, and before the Vulgar Æra 1580. She might be about ten or twelve Years old when her Brother Moses was exposed upon the Banks [Exod. ii. 4, 5, &c.] of the Nile, since Miriam was watching there, and offered her self to Pharaoh's Daughter, to fetch her a Nurse for the Child, who was indeed her own Brother. The Princess accepting of the Offer, Miriam went and fetched her own Mother, to whom the young Moses was given to nurse. 'Tis thought that Miriam[1] married Hur, of the Tribe of Judah; but it does not appear that she had any Children by him. This Hur is he that went up to the Mountain with Moses and Aaron, and who supported Moses's Hands, while Joshua fought with the Amalekites[2].

Miriam was enlightened with the supernatural [Exod. xvii. 10, 11. Numb. xii. 2. Exod. xv. 21. Numb. xii. 1, 2, 3, &c.] Gift of Prophecy, as she her self insinuates when she says, Hath the Lord indeed spoken only by Moses? Hath he not spoken also by us? After the Passage of the Red- Sea, Miriam put her self at the Head of the Choirs and Dances of the Women, and sung with them the Canticle, Sing ye to the Lord, &c. while Moses sung it in another Choir of Men. When Zipporah the Wife of Moses arrived in the Camp of Israel, Miriam and Aaron had a Dispute with her, speaking against Moses on this Account. Which the Lord hearing, he said to Moses, Aaron, and to Miriam, Come out you three to the Tabernacle of the Congregation. When they were there, the Lord came down in a Pillar of Cloud, and standing at the Door of the Tabernacle, he spoke to Aaron and Miriam, If there be a Prophet among you, I the Lord will make my self known to him in a Vision, and will speak to him in a Dream. But it shall not be so with Moses my Servant, for I have spoke to him Face to Face, and he sees the Lord manifestly, and not under Shadows and Figures. Wherefore then have ye not been afraid to speak against him? Then the Lord withdrew, and Miriam all of a sudden was covered with a Leprosy as white as Snow. Aaron seeing her in this Condition, says to Moses, My Lord, I beseech you, let not this Punishment fall upon us, and let her not be as a Carcass, or as an Abortion, the half of whose Flesh is consumed before it comes out of its Mother's Womb. You see that the Leprosie has already devoured one half of her Body.

Then Moses cried to the Lord, and the Lord answered him; If her Father had spit in her Face, ought she not to have continued at least seven Days covered with Confusion? Let her remain then seven Days out of the Camp, and after that she may return. Thus was Miriam obliged to continue seven Days out of the Camp, and the People remained in the same Place till she was admitted again. We are made acquainted with no Particulars of the Life of Miriam, till her Death, which happened in the first Month of the fortieth Year after the coming out of Egypt[3]. She died at the Encampment of Cades in the Wilderness of [Numb. xx. 1.] Sin. The People mourned for her, and she was buried in the same Place. Josephus[4] says, that she was buried with great Solemnity at the Charge of the Publick, and that they mourned for her a whole Month. St. Gregory of Nyssa[5], and[6] St. Ambrose were of Opinion, that she observed a perpetual Virginity, but we have observed before, that Josephus has given her Hur for a Husband. Several ancient, and many modern Commentators, explain that of Miriam, Moses and Aaron, which is said in Zechary, c. xi. □ 8. Three Shepherds also I cut off in one Month, and my Soul loathed them, and their Soul also abhorred me. Eusebius assures us, that even in his Time the Sepulchre of Miriam was to be seen at Cades.

Misna

MISNA; this is properly the Code of the Jewish Civil Law. The Word Misna in Hebrew signifies Repetition, as if it were a second Law[1]. The Greeks call it Deuterosis, which has the same Signification; as much as to say, a second Explication of the Law of Moses, or a second Law. For the Jews believe, that when God gave the written Law to Moses, he gave him also another not written, which was preserved by Tradition among the Doctors of the Synagogue, to the Time of the famous Rabbi, Judas the Holy, who wrote the Misna about the Year of Christ 180, being then about forty Years old, and born in the Year of our Lord 136. This Doctor was the Prince or Head of the Captivity, that is, the Chief of the Jews after their Disgrace, and after the Destruction of Jerusalem and the Temple. He was born at Sephoris a City of Galilee, and having acquired a great Reputation, and being long employed in composing of Differences and deciding Disputes, that happened among those of his Nation concerning the Sense of the Law; and likewise seeing the Danger they were in, lest the Jews dispersed through so many Provinces, might at last recede from the Traditions of their Fathers, or forget some Part of the Rites of their Nation; he judged it better to reduce them to Writing, than to trust to their Memories. This produced the Misna, which is the Codex of the Civil and Canon Law of the Jews, and which contains a Collection of their Ceremonies and Oral Laws.

This Work is divided into six Parts. The first is conversant about the Distinction of Seeds in a Field[2], the Trees, Fruits, Tythes, &c. The second regulates the Manner of observing the Festivals[3]. The third treats of Women, and matrimonial Cases[4]. The fourth, whose Title is Losses[5], takes Cognizance of such Suits which arise from Trade, and shews the Way of proceeding therein. Mention is also made of strange Worship[6], or Idolatry, because it afforded much Matter for judicial Proceedings. The fifth was concerning Obligations[7], Sacrifices, and every Thing that had any Relation thereto. The sixth had for its Subject the several Sorts of Purifications[8]. Those that desire a more exact Knowledge of the Misna, may consult the new Edition that has lately been made of it, by G. Surenhusius at Amsterdam in 1703, in six Tomes in Folio, with the Notes of Maimonides, Bartenora, and Guisius. See also the third Tome of the Bibliotheca Rabbinica of Bartolucci, and the Continuation of the History of the Jews by M. Basnage.

Every one knows that Judah the Holy is acknowledged as the Author or Compiler of the Misna. He is the chief and principal of those Doctors, whom the Jews call Tanaites, or Preservers of the Tradition. They succeeded the Heads of the great Synagogue, the chief of which were Zerubbabel, or Malachi. The famous Ezra or Esdras, who returned from the Captivity of Babylon, is esteemed to be the Head of the Tanaites. It is maintained that they had the peculiar Favour of God, and have often heard what was called Bath-col, or the Daughter of the Voice. This is a Voice that came from Heaven, and was as it were the Echo of that Voice that was heard by Moses on Mount Sinai. This Daughter of the Voice came in the Place of Prophecy, and procured great Authority and Respect to these Doctors. On their Account the Jews are very lavish of their Encomiums, and impute to 'em the most pompous Titles. 'Twas therefore from these Tanaites, who were the Depositaries of the Traditions, that Judah the Holy learned what he has given us in the Misna.

The Tanaites were succeeded by the Gemarists, or Commentators; for no sooner did the Misna appear, but it was received with profound Veneration by all the Jews, in whatever Place they were dispersed. For they thought it to contain nothing, but what had been dictated by God himself from Mount Sinai, as well as the written Law. So that all their learned Men made it their chief Study, and the Principal among them both in Judæa and Babylon, applied themselves to the making of Comments upon it. 'Tis these Commentaries, together with the Text of the Misna it self, that make up the two Talmuds, that of Jerusalem, and that of Babylon. These Comments they call the Gemara, or Supplement, because with these the Misna makes a compleat Work, and has no need of any farther Improvement.

Mithcah

MITHCAH, or Methca, an Encampment of the Israelites in the Wilderness, between Tarah and Hashmonah, Numb. xxxiii. 28, 29. Mithcah is probably the same as Metheg-ammah, mentioned 2 Sam. viii. 1. Compare 1 Chron. xviii, 1. where it is said that David took Gath and her Daughters. [So Hebr. Vulgat. The English Translation has, Gath and her Towns.] And in Samuel, that he took Metheg the Mother, or Metheg and its Mother; that is, Metheg and Gath. Gath and Metheg were in the Neighbourhood of Hashmonah, pretty far to the South of the Land of Promise. Instead of Metheg the Mother, the Hebrew reads Metheg-ammah, which St. Jerome has translated by Frænum tributi. But I rather think he wrote Frænum cubiti, and that the Transcribers have substituted Frænum tributi in its Room. But it is better to take Metheg for the Name of a Place, which is probably the same as Mithcah.

Mizpah (II)

II. MIZPAH, or Masphath, in the Tribe of Gad, and in the Mountains of Galeed. 'Twas in this Place that Laban and Jacob [Gen. xxxi. 49.] made a Covenant together. Jephthah dwelt at Mizpah, and there made a Covenant with the Israelites on the other Side of Jordan, who chose him for their Captain; and there he assembled the Troops with which he [Judg. xi. 11, 29, 34.] fought the Ammonites. This City is sometimes ascribed to the Countrey of Moab[1], because the Moabites conquered it, and kept Possession of it.

[Josh. xi. 3, 8.] III. MIZPAH. Joshua speaks of the Hivites, who inhabited the Countrey of Mizpeh or Mizpah, at the Foot of Mount Hermon, and consequently towards the Head of the River Jordan. Mizraim

MIZRAIM, or Mesraim, Son of Ham, and Father of Ludim, Anamim, Lehabim, Naphtuhim, Pathrusim, and Casluhim. Meser or Misor was the Father of the Mizraim, or the Egyptians, and he himself is commonly called Mizraim, although there is a very strong Probability that Mizraim being of the Plural Number, signifies rather the Egyptians themselves, than the Father of this People. The Name Mizraim is also put for the Countrey: Thus it has three Significations, which are perpetually confounded and used promiscuously, being sometimes put for the Land of Egypt, sometimes for him that first peopled Egypt, and sometimes for the Inhabitants themselves. The Word Mizraim is of the Dual Number, and may express both Egypts, the superior and inferior, or the two Parts of this Countrey, as it is divided by the Nile. The City of Cairo the Capital of Egypt, and even Egypt it self, is still to this Day called Mezer by the Arabians. But the Natives [Ps. lxxviii. 12. cv. 23. cvi. 22. Mic. vii. 12. Heb.] call it Chemi, which is as much as to say, the Land of Cham, or Ham, as it is also sometimes called by the Hebrews. The Prophet Micah gives to Egypt the Name of Mezor; [or Matzor] and the Rabbi Kimchi, followed herein by several learned Commentators, explains by Egypt what is said of the Rivers of Mezor, in the second Book of Kings xix. 24. Isai. xix. 6. Heb.

The City of Memphis, called in Hebrew Moph or Noph, and which for a long Time was the capital City of Egypt, had also the Name of Meser. The Oriental Geographers say, that from the Time of the Conquests of Alexander, it had the Name of Bablion or Babylon, in Memory of the ancient Babylon of Chaldæa; and that at last it had the Name of Cairo. But the Cities of Memphis, Babylon, and Cairo, tho' not far from one another, and built from the Ruines of each other, are not situate in the same Place. Cairo is to the East of the Nile, and old Memphis to the West. But the Arabians however do not decline to give the Name of Mezer to Cairo.

Egypt, according to the Oriental Geographers[1], is divided into three Parts; South-Egypt, or Said, which is the Thebais, whose Capital was formerly the City of Thebes, now uninhabited. At present it is Asouan, which is the Syene of the Ancients.

The second Part begins at Cairo, and extends towards the North. The Arabians call it Ref, and the ancient Hebrews Rahab. Memor ero Rahab & Babylonis scientium me, Psal. lxxxvi.

The third Part, which the Arabians call Giouf, is properly that which the Ancients call the Delta, which contains all the Countrey inclosed by the Nile, till it empties it self into the Mediterranean Sea.

Some have comprehended under the Name of Egypt, all the Countrey which the Arabians call Belad-al-Tor, the Countrey of Tor, or from the Mountain of Sinai. And it is from thence that in some Oriental Geographers, we find that the Wilderness of the Children of Israel is comprehended within Egypt, though in Strictness it is inclosed within Arabia Petræa.

The ancient Greek Geographers have comprised the Eastern Part of Egypt under the Name of Arabia, which they extend on this Side as far as the Banks of the Nile. It is also manifest, that the Arabians even to this Day make Inroads into, and take Possession of, that whole Part of Egypt which is almost deserted and uncultivated. But this should not hinder us from fixing the Eastern Limits of Egypt at the Red- Sea. See what we have said under the Article EGYPT.

Mizrehoth-Maim

MIZREHOTH-MAIM, Josh. xi. 8. xiii. 6. We think this may be the City of Sarepta. The Root of this Name is the same as of Mizrephoth. Others think the Waters of Mizrephoth were Hot-Waters; others that they were the Salt Waters of the Sea, received into Canals, and being exhaled by the Heat of the Sun, produced Salt, as is still the Method in some Places near the Sea-Shore.

Moab

MOAB, Son of Lot, and of his eldest Daughter. The Circumstances of his Conception and Birth may be seen, Gen. xix. 31, &c. This happened about the same Time as the Birth of Isaac, Son of Abraham and Sarah, that is, in the Year of the World 2108, before Christ 1892, before the common Æra 1896. Moab was Father of the Moabites, who dwelt to the East of Jordan and of the Dead-Sea, upon the River Arnon.

Moabites

MOABITES, a People descended from Moab, Son of Lot. Their Habitation was beyond Jordan, and the Dead-Sea, on each Side the River Arnon. Their Capital City was situated upon this River, and was called Ar, or Areopolis, or Ariel of Moab, or Rabbah-Moab, that is the Capital of Moab, or Kir-haresh, that is, a City with Brick-Walls. This Countrey was at first possessed [Deut. ii. 11, 12.] by a Race of Giants called Emims. The Moabites made a Conquest of them, and afterwards the Amorites took it in Part from [Judg. xi. 13. Deut. ii. 9.] the Moabites. Moses conquered that Part that belonged to the Amorites, and gave it to the Tribe of Reuben. The Moabites were spared by Moses, for God had forbidden him to molest them. But there always was a great Antipathy between the Moabites and Israelites, which gave Occasion to great Wars between them. Balaam the Wizard seduced the Hebrews to Idolatry and Uncleanness, by Means of the Daughters of [Numb. xxv. 1, 2.] Moab; and Balak King of this People did what he could to prevail with Balaam to curse the People of the Lord. God ordained, [Numb. xxii. 2, &c.] that the Moabites should not enter into the Congregation of his People, even to the tenth Generation[1], because they had the Inhumanity to refuse the Israelites a Passage through their Countrey, nor would supply them with Bread and Water in their extreme Necessity.

Eglon King of the Moabites, was one of the first that oppressed Israel after the Death of Joshua. Ebud killed Eglon, and the Israelites drove the Moabites out of their Countrey[2]. Hanun King of the Ammonites having insulted the Persons of David's Ambassadors, this Prince made War against him, and subdued Moab and Ammon to his Obedience[3], under which they continued till the Separation of the ten Tribes. Then the Ammonites and Moabites submitted themselves to the Kings of Israel, and continued in Subjection to them to the Death of Ahab[4].

[2 Kings iii. 4, 5. 2 Kings iii. 16, &c.] Presently after the Death of Ahab, the Moabites, who till then had been subject to the Kings of Israel, began to revolt, and to shake off their Yoke. Mesha King of Moab, would no longer pay the Tribute of an hundred Thousand Lambs, and as many Rams, which till then he had been accustomed to pay, either yearly, or at the Beginning of every Reign, which of these two is not clearly expressed in Scripture. The Reign of Abaziah afterwards was so short, that he had not Time enough to make War with them; but Jehoram, Son of Ahab, and Brother to Abaziah, having ascended the Throne, began to think of reducing them to Obedience. He made a Review of the Army of Israel in the Plain near to Samaria, and then sent to Jehoshaphat King of Judah, informing him that the King of Moab had revolted against him, and desired him to come to his Assistance in Order to reduce them. Jehoshaphat returned for Answer, that he would join him, and that himself and all his Forces should be at his Devotion. They joined their Armies thereupon, and agreed to march against the Moabites, by the Way of the Desart of Idumæa or Edom. The King of this Countrey joined them also, as being a Vassal of Jehoshaphat's, and their Army marched for seven Days together, through Desarts, where they were without Water, and in great Danger of seeing both Man and Beast perish with Thirst. Then the King of Israel cried out to the Lord, Hast thou brought hither three Kings, to deliver them into the Hands of Moab? Jehoshaphat asked if there were no Prophet of the Lord there? One of the Servants of the King of Israel acquainted him, that Elisha the Son of Shaphat was there, who had served the Prophet Elijah. The three Kings presently ordered him to be inquired for. The Prophet made some Difficulty to appear before Jehoram, but in Conside-ration of King Jehoshaphat he returned this Answer. Thus saith the Lord, dig in the Vale, and make many Ditches therein; there shall be neither Rain, nor Wind, and yet you shall see the Vale filled with Water, and you shall drink, and your Servants, and your Cattle. But this is nothing in Comparison of what the Lord will do for you; for he will deliver the Moabites into your Hands, you shall destroy all their strong Cities, and shall ravage all their Countries. The Event was answerable to the Prediction of the Prophet, for on the Morrow the Vale was full of Water; and the Moabites having Intelligence that the Kings of Israel, of Judah, and of Edom, were come out to fight against them, they took the Field, and gave them the Meeting upon their Frontiers. And when they arose next Morning at Break of Day, the Sun beginning to shine upon the Waters, they appeared to them as tinged with Blood; which made them conclude among themselves, that it was Blood shed by the Sword, and that the Kings had quarrelled with one another, and were there slain. They therefore marched on boldly, expecting to plunder, and in Hopes of finding a good Booty; but they were received by the Israelites with great Vigour, were defeated, and put to Flight, and their Countrey was at the Mercy of the Enemy. Jehoram besieged their Capital; but when he saw that the King of Moab, in a Fit of Despair, was going to sacrifice his own Son upon the Walls; the three Kings presently raised the Siege and withdrew.

[Observations on the Victory obtained by the Israelites over the revolted Moabites, 2 Kings iii.] We see every where in Scripture, that the Lord, the God of Armies, has always been favourable to Men of Virtue and Resolution. He holds Victory in his own Hands, which he always gives to that Side that is most faithful and most agreeable to him. Elisha declares himself very expresly on this Matter, in the Presence of the three Kings who went to him, in Order to consult him in their Extremity. He says to Jehoram, Were [2 Kings iii. 14.] it not that I regard the Presence of Jehoshaphat the King of Judah, I would not look toward thee, nor see thee. But in Consideration of this Prince, who did that which [1 Kings xxii. 43.] was right in the Eyes of the Lord, he promises them the Victory, and confirms it to them by a Miracle. He tells them, Ye shall [Ibid. 17.] not see Wind, neither shall ye see Rain; yet that Valley shall be filled with Water, that ye may drink, both ye and your Cattle and your Beasts. The Effects of this Prophecy they saw the next Morning. The Prophet, not to keep them in Uncertainty, proceeds to speak yet more clearly to them, and assures them; This is but a light Thing in the Sight of the Lord, he will deliver the Moabites also into your Hand.

Although Elisha had thus plainly declared to these three Kings, that they should triumph over their Enemies, yet they did not omit taking all the Precautions necessary, that they might succeed in their Enterprize; and they remained quietly in their Camp upon their Guard. The Stratagem they made Use of against their Enemy was common among the Greeks and Romans, and there are more than an hundred Examples of it in their History; but what is very surprising is, that their Enemies would suffer themselves to be so often caught by it. Such Pieces of Policy were put in Practice by small Armies, against those that overpowered them in Number. They have almost always succeeded, as also general Sallies made by Places besieged, so common in ancient History, and so rarely practised by the Moderns, who are not aware of the End it answers, and its Advantages in Cases of great Extremity.

[2 Kings iii. 21.] When the Moabites, as the sacred Author tells us, heard that the Kings were come up to fight against them, they gathered all that were able to put on Armour, and upwards, and stood in the Border. They gathered together not only all their able Soldiers, but also their old Men and Veterans, and such as might expect to be excused by the Privilege of their Offices. These all came to guard their Frontiers.

And they rose up early in the Morning and the Sun shone upon the Water, and the Moabites saw the Water on each Side as red as Blood. The Scripture does not tell us this Circumstance as a Prodigy, nor have we any Need to take it in this Sense; this kind of Things may be put in the Number of those that happen naturally every Day. The Waters did not appear red, as the learned Commentator observes, because of the Soil over which they had passed, or because of the Sand, and the Bottom of the Valley, which possibly might be reddish; for the Moabites would have been accustomed to this, and consequently not surprized at it: But, as he says very well afterwards, because the Sun, which at its rising or setting often appears red, communicates this Colour to the Clouds, and by Reflexion to the Waters as in a Looking-glass. Thus it is that the Sea appears sometimes as it were all on Fire, or of the Colour of Blood, when this happens. Besides, the Valley being dry the Evening before, and no Rain having fallen that Night, they easily fell into this Mistake. This is Blood, say they, the Kings are surely slain, and they have smitten one another; now therefore, Moab, to the Spoil. They marched on therefore towards the Israelites, as to a sure Victory, without any Distrust of the Event, and were so much the less upon their Guard, as they saw no Body to appear. For it is very likely that the Jews concealed themselves in their Camp, or else lay down upon their Bellies that they might not be perceived, and thereby make the Moabites less circumspect, who had no Thoughts but of a sure Booty. Then they might attack them at unawares, at a Time that they would least expect it. For thus it always happens to an Army that is too confident of its own Strength; and which is under the Command of imprudent Generals, who march on with a Presumption that no Body dares oppose them. So when they came to the Camp of Israel, says the Scripture, the [Ibid, 24.] Israelites rose up and smote the Moabites, so that they fled before them.

The Custom of the Jews was, to retrench themselves in their Camp; but it does not appear they did so on this Occasion. I am apt to think they went out to Battle at the Head of their Camp, stooping upon their Bellies, as I said before, that they might not be perceived by their Enemies. This was not difficult for them to do, since there was no Cavalry in either Army. As these two Nations practised the same Sort of Tacticks, I range the Jews in several large Bodies, and consequently the Moabites in the same Manner. As to the Slingers, tho' there is no Mention of them here, and though they are only taken Notice of at the [Ibid. 25.] Siege of the capital City of the Moabites, it is plain there were some in the Army; they were often placed behind the Lines, where I suppose them ranged. Some Interpreters will have it, that in the Siege that followed this Victory, the Slingers were those that played the Catapultæ; but they were mistaken, as D. Calmet has well observed. But what is remarkable is, that the Israelites battered down a Part of the Walls of the City, by Stones that were cast at them by the Help of Machines. A Thousand Examples of this may be seen in profane Historians, especially in Cæsar, and in the Commentary upon Polybius by the Chevalier de Follard, Tom. II. where he treats of the Machines of War of the Ancients.

[Am. i. 13, &c.] It is not easy to perceive what were the Circumstances of the Moabites from that Time; but Isaiah, at the Beginning of the Reign of King Hezekiah, threatens them with a Calamity, which was to happen three Years after his Prediction[5], and which probably has a Relation to the War that Shalmaneser King of Assyria made with the ten Tribes, and the other People beyond Jordan.

Amos also foretold great Miseries that were to come upon them, which probably are those that they suffered under Uzziah [2 Chron. xxvi. 7, 8. xxvii. 5.] and Jotham, Kings of Judah, or those that Shalmaneser brought upon them; or [Jerem. ix. 26. xii. 14, 15. xxv. 11, 12. xlviii. Jerem. xlviii. 47. xlix. 3, 6, 39. l. 16.] lastly the War of Nebuchadnezzar, five Years after the Destruction of Jerusalem[6]: We believe this Prince carried them away Captive beyond the Euphrates, as the Prophets had threatened them; and that Cyrus sent them home again, as he did the rest of the Captives. After their Return from Captivity, we see that they multiplied, and fortified themselves, as the Jews did, and other neighbouring People; still in Subjection to the Kings of Persia, afterwards conquered by Alexander the Great, and in Obedience to the Kings of Syria and Egypt successively, and finally to the Romans. There is a Probability also, that in the latter Times of the Jewish Republick, they obeyed the Asmonean Kings, and afterwards Herod the Great.

The principal Deities of the Moabites were Chemosh and Baal-peor. These we have already spoken of under their respective Titles, and have endeavoured to shew, that Chemosh was the Sun, and that Baal-peor was the God Adonis. Also the Scripture speaks in some Places of Nebo, of Baal-meon, and of Baal-dibon, as of Gods of the Moabites. But it is very likely that these are rather Names of Places where Chemosh and Peor were worshipped, and that Baal-dibon, Baal-meon, and Nebo, are no other than Chemosh adored at Dibon, Meon, and upon Mount Nebo.

Mocking

MOCKING, Mocker, Illusor. This Word answers to the Hebrew Word Lez, which signifies a Railer, a Mocker, a Man that makes Sport with Religion, and turns holy Things into Ridicule[1]. The Author of the Vulgate often translates the Hebrew Word Lez by Pestilent[2], a pestilent and dangerous Fellow, whose Manners and Conversation are only fit to infuse a Spirit of Licentiousness. With us such Persons are generally called Libertines or Free-thinkers.

[Psal. ii. 4. Psal. xxxvi. 13. Wisd. iv. 18.] It is said in some Places of Scripture, that God will mock at such wicked People as despise his Mercy. He that sitteth in the Heavens shall laugh, the Lord shall have them in Derision. And elsewhere, The Lord shall laugh at him, [the Wicked] for he seeth that his Day is coming. And in the Book of Wisdom, God shall laugh them to scorn. These are figurative and humane Ways of speaking. God treats them as a provoked Father would do, who insults the Folly of a [1 Macc. ii. 1, 15. ix. 19.] wicked and insolent Son.

Modin

MODIN, a celebrated City or Town in the Tribe of Dan, from whence arose Mattathias and his Sons, so well known by the Name of Maccabees. This Place could not be far from the Sea, since the Mariners from their Ships might see the Mausoleum, that was there erected in Honour of Mattathias. [1 Macc. xiii. 29, 30.] Eusebius says, that Modin was not far from Diospolis, and that in his Time was still to be seen the Tomb of the Maccabees. St. Jerome upon Isai. xxx, insinuates that it was but a small Place, since he calls it viculus, or a little Village. See the Article of MATTATHIAS. But Modin is not only famous for the Tomb of the Maccabees, but also for that Battle that was there succesfully fought by an handful of Men, under the Conduct of Judas Maccabæus, against Antiochus Eupator. Thus was this Matter performed.

Judas Maccabæus being informed, that Antiochus Eupator was coming into *Judæa*e, in Order to reduce it to his Obedience, and to treat the Jews still worse than had been done by his Father Antiochus [2 Macc. xiii. 9, &c.] Epiphanes: He held a Council with the Elders of the People, and resolved to be beforehand with him. Referring all Things therefore to the Power of God, the Creator of the Universe, he exhorted his People to behave themselves valiantly, and to sacrifice their Lives to the Defence of their Laws, their Temple, their City, their Nation and Countreymen. He marched out with his Army, and encamped near Modin. When he had given out the Watch-word to his Soldiers, which was, The Victory of God, he took with him the bravest Part of his Army, attacked the King's Quarters by Night, and slew four Thousand Men in his Camp, together with one of the largest of the Elephants, and all those that were upon him. Thus having filled the Enemies whole Camp with Rout and Confusion, he retired safely by the Lord's Assistance, crowned with Victory and Success.

 Judas Maccabæus was an excellent [Observations upon the Battle of Judas Maccabæus against Antiochus, near Modin. 2 Macc. xiii. 15, &c.] General of an Army. His Actions and Conduct, in all the Wars that he maintained against so many formidable Enemies, have something in them very great and surprizing. A Sertorius, a Scanderberg, have done nothing that can come up to the Actions of this Hero. I can perceive nothing in all History more skilful and profound, than the Method of the Jews in the Art of fighting and setting themselves in Array. They are always fewest in Number, and yet always superior to their Enemies, by their Bravery in Undertaking, by the Prudence of their Conduct, and by their Skill in the Art of War.

It is indeed surprizing, that Polybius an Historian, otherwise so punctual, and so well acquainted with the Affairs of Asia, should make no Mention of the Maccabees, nor of the Wars they maintained with so much Glory against Antiochus and his Successor: Since he describes the Wars of the same Antiochus with all the Care and Exactness that could be desired, and with the same Accuracy as the Wars of the Romans. This is a Circumstance that I do not pretend to understand.

'Tis given out as a Maxim, that Force should never be made Use of, when we may attain our Ends by Stratagem. But this Maxim has only the Appearance of Truth, and is not always true, as will appear upon a little Attention. All the Stratagems of the Maccabees are very common ones, they are but few in Number, and they have but seldom made Use of them. They generally fought by broad Day-light, and Skill had a greater Share in their Victories, than Craft or Artifice. As their whole Art consisted only in the judicious Disposition of their Troops, so that Art contributed mostly to the Success of so many bold and brave Undertakings. But when Stratagem, which is no Part of this Art, goes along with a prudent and ingenious Distribution of an Army, then the Ability of the General displays it self, who discovers that he is capable of whatever is grand and noble in the most profound Parts of the Art of War.

[2 Macc. xiii. 15.] The Enterprize of Judas Maccabæus upon the Camp of Antiochus Eupator, may be placed in the Number of those, in which Science had not less Share than Cunning. He conceals from Antiochus a whole Night's March; this indeed was not difficult for a small Army to do, but it was a great Advantage gained. For a General surprized in his Camp, though even he had Time to prepare for Battle, is a General already half conquered. This Maxim is without Dispute, and so Antiochus found it. For no sooner did he arrive at the Frontiers of Judæa, but Judas committing to the Lord the Success of his Enterprize, marched boldly to meet him, and gave him such a terrible Shock, that he spread Confusion and Dismay through his whole Camp, having killed him four Thousand Men, and the finest of his Elephants.

The sacred Author says nothing concerning the Order in which Judas fought; but we cannot be ignorant of his Method. Being infinitely inferior to his Enemies, he must fight in separate Corps of a very great Depth; and it was sufficient to him to penetrate into the Enemy, in Order to be assured of the Victory. We see clearly enough by this Passage, With the most valiant and choice young Men; that he formed a Body of the Flower of his Troops, to fall upon the King's Quarters. Thus I range his Army in three Bodies: The Body[12] where Judas himself commanded, must be in the Center, because the General of the Army usually incamped in the midst of his Camp. It is likely that Judas found Resistance, and that the Enemies had Time to oppose him with a Body of Troops, which was broken and routed. Otherwise he must have routed and put to Flight the whole Army of Antiochus. But fearing he should be born down with Numbers, he chose to retire, after having succeeded in this Expedition.

There is a seeming Contradiction in the sacred Author. He says, □ 15, that Judas went into the King's Tent by Night; and □ 17, that this was done in the Break of the Day. To reconcile these two Passages, I imagine the Attack to be begun in the Night, but the Action not to be compleated till the Break of Day.

MOLE, an Animal declared impure by Moses[1]. The Hebrew Word Tinshamet is understood by the Syriack for an Animal with several Feet; perhaps the Scolopendra. Castellio translates the Hebrew by a Toad, others by a Weasel. Bochart thinks it signifies a Camelion, but the Chaldee and the Rabbins understand it of a Mole. The same Bochart believes, that the true Word for a Mole is Choled[2], which the Vulgate has translated by Weasel.

We again find the Word Mole in the Vulgate, [and in the English Translation] Isai. ii, 20. But the Hebrew reads Chaporperoth[3], derived from a Root signifying to dig; and by Consent of Interpreters, it signifies in this Place Moles. By this Passage of Isaiah, we see to what Excess the Blindness of the Jews proceeded, who gave divine Honours to such abject Creatures.

Moloch

MOLOCH, Molech, Milcom, or Melchom, a God of the Ammonites. The Word Moloch signifies King, and Melchom signifies their King, Moses in several Places forbids the [Lev. xviii. 21. xx. 2, 3, 4, 5.] Israelites to dedicate their Children to Moloch, by making them pass through the Fire in Honour of that God. He ordered those to be put to Death, who should offend against this Command; and God himself threatens to pour out his Wrath against such a Man, and to root him out from among his People. There is great Probability that the Hebrews were much addicted to the Worship of this Deity, even from before their coming out of Egypt, [Am. v. 26. Acts vii. 43. 1 Kings xi. 7. 2 Kings xxi. 3, 4. Jerem. xix. 5, 6.] since Amos, and after him St. Stephen, reproaches them with having carried along with them into the Wilderness, the Tabernacle of their God Moloch. Portâstis Tabernaculum Moloch vestro. Solomon built a Temple to Moloch upon the Mount of Olives, and Menasseh a long Time after imitated his Impiety, by making his Son pass through the Fire in Honour of Moloch. 'Twas chiefly in the Valley of Tophet and Hinnom, to the East of Jerusalem, that this idolatrous Worship was paid to Moloch by the Jews, by consecrating their Children to him, and by making them to pass thro' the Fire in Honour of him.

Some are of Opinion, that they contented themselves with making these Children leap over a Fire sacred to Moloch, in Order by this to consecrate them to this false Deity; and by this Lustration to purify them, being an usual Ceremony on other Occasions among the Pagans. Others believe that they made them pass between two Fires opposite to each other, for the same Intention. But others maintain that they really burnt their Children, by Way of Sacrifice to Moloch. The Scriptures will furnish several Proofs of this. See Psalm cvi. 37. Isaiah lvii. 5. Ezek. xvi. 20, 21. xxiii. 37, 39. where it is positively asserted, that the Hebrews sometimes sacrificed their Children to Devils, to Moloch, and to strange Gods. And in the second Book of Kings it is directly said, that the Inhabitants of Sepharvaim burnt [2 Kings xvii. 31.] their Children in the Fire to Anammelech and Adrammelech their Gods, which without Doubt are the same as Moloch of the Ammonites. However I would not be understood to assert, that they always really burnt their Children in Honour of this Idol; and perhaps when it is only expressed that they made 'em pass through the Fire, lustrare per ignem, or, transferre per ignem, this means in some Places, the leaping over the Flames, or passing nimbly between two Fires. But we are persuaded, that generally speaking the Worshippers of Moloch immolated or sacrificed their Children, and put them to Death in Honour of this false Deity.

The Rabbins assure us, that the Idol Moloch was of Brass, sitting upon a Throne of the same Metal, adorned with a royal Crown, having the Head of a Calf, and his Arms extended as if to embrace any one. When they would offer any Children to him, they heated the Statue within by a great Fire, and when it was burning hot, they put the miserable Victim within his Arms, which was soon consumed by the Violence of the Heat. And that the Cries of the Children might not be heard, they made a great Noise with Drums and other Instruments about the Idol. Others say that his Arms were extended, and reaching toward the Ground; so that when they put a Child within his Arms, it immediately fell into a great Fire which was lighted at the Foot of the Statue. Others relate that it was hollow, and that within it were contrived seven Partitions, one of which was appointed for Meal or Flower; in the second there were Turtles, in the third an Ewe, in the fourth a Ram, in the fifth a Calf, in the sixth an Ox, and in the seventh a Child. All these were burned together, by heating the Statue on the inside.

When David conquered the Ammonites[1], he took the Crown of their God Milcom, or more simply, he took the Crown of their King, which weighed a Talent of Gold, and made a Crown of it for himself. The Hebrew Talent weighed three Thousand Shekels, or one Hundred and twenty five Roman Pounds. This is an excessive Weight for a Crown Royal. Therefore 'tis thought that this Prince did not wear it upon his Head, but caused it to be hung up upon his Throne, over his Head. Or lastly, that the Talent of Gold mentioned in Scripture, does not express the Weight but Value of the Crown. 'Twas of Gold, and set with precious Stones, as is insinuated in the Book of Chronicles. Invenit in eâ auri pondo talentum, & pretiosissimas gemmas. These pretious Stones were a very considerable Addition to the Price; but its Weight might be that of an ordinary Royal Crown. This is the Opinion of some Commentators upon 2 Sam. xii. 30.

There are various Sentiments about the Relation that Moloch had to the other Pagan Divinities. Some believe that Moloch was the same as Saturn, to whom it is well known that human Sacrifices were offered. Others think it was the same as Mercury, others Venus, others Mars or Mithra. We have endeavoured to prove, that Moloch signified the Sun, or the King of Heaven. Our Dissertation upon Moloch may be consulted, printed before the Commentary upon Leviticus. See also Selden de Diis Syris, and Spencer, de legibus Hebræorum Ritualib.. ii. c. 10. And Vossius, de Origine & progressu Idolatriæ, l. ii. c. 5.

1 Chron. xx. 2. מלכם*Milcom* or Melchom may signifie the God Melchom, or their King. St. Jerome translates it, Regis eorum, 2 Sam. xii. 30. and Melchom, 1 Chron. xx. 2.

Money

MONEY. The Scripture often speaks of Gold, of Silver, of Brass, of certain Sums of Money, of Purchases made with Money, of current Money, of Money of a certain Weight; but I do not observe there any Thing of coined or stamped Money till very late, which induces me to believe, that the ancient Hebrews took Gold and Silver only by Weight. That they only considered in it the Purity of the Metal, and the Degree of Allay, and not the Stamp. This is what we have endeavoured to prove, in a Dissertation upon this Subject, printed before our Commentary upon Genesis, of which we shall here give an Abstract.

The most ancient Manner of Commerce among Men, was by Way of Barter, or exchanging one Sort of Merchandize for another. One Man parted with what was needless or superfluous to himself, to accommodate another, who gave him in Return what he did not want himself, to receive for it what was more useful to him. Afterwards the more precious Sorts of Metals were used in Traffick, as Things whose Values were more generally known and stated. Lastly, they contrived to give this Metal a certain Mark, a certain Weight, and a certain Degree of Allay, to fix its Value, and to save the Buyers and Sellers the Trouble of weighing and examining the Metal.

At the Siege of Troy they make no Mention of Gold or Silver coined; there the Values of Things are rated by the Number of Oxen they were worth[1]. They bought Wine, for Example, by giving Oxen, Slaves, Skins, Iron, &c. in Lieu of it[2]. When the Greeks began to use Money, it was only little Pieces of Iron or Copper, called Oboli, Spits, of which an Handful was a Drachma[3]. Herodotus thinks[4], that the Lydians were the first that stamped Money of Gold or Silver, and introduced it into Commerce. Others say, that it was Ishon King of Thessaly, and Son of Deucalion[5]. But others ascribe this Honour to Erichthonius, who had been educated by the Daughters of Cecrops King of Athens[6]: Others again to Phidon King of Argos.

Among the Persians it is said, that it was Darius Son of Hystaspes, who first coined Golden Money[7]. Lycurgus banished Gold and Silver from his Commonwealth of Lacedæmon, and only allowed a sort of rude Money, made of Iron steeped in Vinegar. Janus, or rather the Kings of Rome, made a kind of gross Money of Copper, whereon was seen on one Side the double Face of Janus, and on the other the Stern of a Ship.

I find nothing concerning the Money of the Egyptians, the Phœnicians, the Arabians, or the Syrians, before the Conquests of Alexander the Great. 'Tis needless to speak of the Scythians, the Germans, the Gauls, or the Spaniards. They did not begin till long after, to coin Money proper to their own Countries or Nations. In China to this Day they stamp no Money of Gold or Silver, but only of Copper. Gold and Silver pass only as Goods and Merchandizes, and are not current in Trade. If any one offers Gold or Silver to buy any Thing with, they take it and pay it by Weight, as other Goods. So that they are obliged to cut it into Pieces with Sheers for that Purpose, and they carry a Stillyard at their Girdles to weigh it. As to Copper, they coin it into Money with a certain Mixture of other Matter. One of its Faces is marked with Chinese Characters, declaring the Value of it. Through the Middle they bore a little square hole, by which they string it upon Strings[8].

The People of Albania, and those upon the Banks of the Araxes, had neither Money, nor Weights, nor Measures, and did not reckon beyond an Hundred[9]. Mr. Tournefort says[10], that to this Day the Georgians, who succeeded the People now mentioned, despise Money, and would not sell their Provisions, but would truck for them. All the Trade of Mingrelia is carried on by Bartering[11]. In Ethiopia and Bengal there is no Money, but they make Use of Sea-Shells of the Maldivia Islands, instead of the smaller Money. They also make Use of them in the Maldivies, and several Places of the Indies, as also on the Coasts of Guinea, and in the Kingdoms of Congo and Siam.

Let us now return to the Hebrews. Abraham weighs out four hundred Shekels of Silver, as a Purchase for Sarah's Tomb: And the Scripture observes, that he paid this in current Money with the Merchant. Argenti probatæ monetæ publicæ. Joseph was sold by his Brethren to the Midianites [Gen. xxiii. 15, 16. Gen. xxxvii. 28.] for the Sum of twenty Pieces of Silver, Viginti argenteis; the Hebrew says, for twenty Shekels of Silver. The Brethren of Jo- [Gen. xliii. 21. Gen. xxiv. 22. Ex. xxx. 24. Exod. xxxviii. 29. 2 Sam. xvi. 26. Isai. xlvi. 6. Jerem. xxxviii. 10. Isai. lv. 1, 2. Amos vii. 5.] Joseph bring back with them into Egypt the Money they had found in their Sacks, in the same Weight they had given before; Argentum in pondere suo. The Bracelets that Eliezer gave to Rebecca weighed ten Shekels, and the Ear-rings two Shekels. Moses gave Orders, that they should take the Weight of five hundred Shekels of Myrrh, and two hundred and fifty Shekels of Cinnamon, of the Weight of the Sanctuary, to make the Perfume which was to be burnt to the Lord upon the golden Altar. He acquaints us in another Place, that they offered for the Works of the Tabernacle, seventy two Thousand Talents of Brass. We read in the Books of Samuel, that the Weight of Absalom's Hair was two hundred Shekels of the ordinary Weight, or of the King's Weight, when he cut it off every Year. Isaiah describes the wicked weighing Silver in a Balance, to make an Idol thereof; and Jeremiah weighs seventeen Pieces of Silver in a pair of Scales, to pay for a Field that he had bought. Isaiah says, Come buy Wine and Milk without Money, and without Price. Wherefore do ye weigh Money for that which is not Bread? Amos represents the Merchants encouraging one another, to make the Ephah small, wherewith to sell, and the Shekel great, wherewith to buy, and to falsify the Balances by Deceit. Imminuamus mensuram, augeamus siclum, supponamus stateras dolosas.

In all these Passages there is only Mention made of these three Things. 1. Of the Metal, Gold or Silver, and never of Copper, for it was never then made Use of in Traffick as Money. 2. Of the Weight, a Talent, a Shekel, a Gerah or Obolus, of the Weight of the Sanctuary, and of the King's Weight. And 3. Of the Alloy, of pure or fine Gold and Silver, and of good Alloy, as received by the Merchant. It is spoken no where of the Impression, or of the Coin; but it is often said that they weighed the Silver, or that they weighed all Sorts of Commodities by the Weight of the Shekel and of the Talent. This Shekel therefore, or this Talent, were not fixed and determined Pieces of Money, but Weights that were indifferently made Use of for all Sorts of Things used in Commerce. Hence those deceitful Balances of the Merchants, who would increase the Shekel, that is, would augment the Weight by which they weighed the Gold and Silver they were to receive, that they might have a greater Quantity than was their Due; hence in the Weight of the Sanctuary, the Standard of which was laid up in the Temple, to prevent Cheating and Fraud; hence were those Prohibitions in the [Deut. xxv. 13.] Law, Thou shalt not have in thy Bag diverse Weights; a Great and a Small. Hence were those Scales that the Hebrews wore always at their Girdles, and the Canaanites [Hosea xii. 7.] in their Hands; as the Chinese still wear them at their Girdles, to weigh the Gold and Silver which they receive in Payment, they having as yet no coined Money among them, as we have said before.

And it is to be observed, that in the original Text there is never any Mention made of Money, or of any Thing like it. The Gold and Silver that is offered to Moses in the Desert, for the Use of the Tabernacle, and that which was given to Aaron to make a golden Calf, and that of which Gideon made an Ephod, and that which tempted Achan, and that which David left Solomon, and that which Gehazi received from Naaman, was only Gold or Silver made up into Rings, Bracelets, Pendants, Vessels, or Lingots. Not a Word of coined Money, of a Mark or Impression, nothing to shew the Form of the Money, or the Figure represented upon it. For generally coined Money has the Name of some Prince, or has some Animal or Flower represented upon it. Among the Greeks they say, a Philip, an Archer, an Ox, an Owl, &c. because of the Impressions upon them, which represented King Philip, an Archer, or a Man drawing a Bow, and so of the rest. But nothing of this Kind was to be found among the Hebrews.

It is true that in the Hebrew Text of Genesis we find, that Jacob bought a Field for the [Gen. xxxiii. 19. Job. xlii. 11.] Sum of an Hundred Kesitah's; and that the Friends of Job, after his Recovery, gave to this Model of Patience each a Kesitah, and a golden Pendant for the Ears. We also find there Daricks, called in Hebrew Darcmonim, or Adarcmonim. And Mention is made of Minæ, Stateræ, Oboli; but this last kind of Money was Foreign, and are put for other Terms, which in the Hebrew only signifie the Weight of the Metal. The Kesitah is not well known to us; some take it for a Sheep or a Lamb; others for a kind of Money, having the Print of a Lamb or a Sheep. But we rather think it to be a Purse of Money of a certain Weight. See KESITAH.

[Ezek. xlv. 12.] The Darcmonims or Daricks, are Money of the Kings of Persia; and it is agreed, that under Darius Son of Hystaspes, they first began to see Money stamped or coined. Ezekiel tells us, that the Mina makes sixty Shekels; he reduces this Foreign Money to the Weight of the Hebrews. The Mina may probably be a Persian Money originally, and adopted by the Greeks and by the Hebrews. But under the Dominion of the Persians, the Hebrews were hardly at Liberty to coin Money of their own, being under the Obedience of these Princes, and making then but a small Figure in their own Countrey. They were still less able to do it under the Chaldæans, during the Babylonish Captivity, nor afterwards under the Government of the Grecians, to whom they were in Subjection till [1 Macc. xv. 6.] the Time of Simon Maccabæus, to whom Antiochus Sidetes King of Syria granted the Privilege of coining Money of his own in Judæa[12]. Permittimus tibi facere percussuram proprii numismatis in regione tua. And this is the first Hebrew Money properly so called, that we know of. There were Shekels and Demi-shekels of Silver. We have caused a good Number of them to be engraved, with the Explication of their Legends, before this Dictionary of the Bible.

I. MONOBAZUS, King of the Province of Adiabena, Husband and Brother of Helena, who was a Proselyte to Judaism, and whom we have mentioned under her Article. Monobazus had two Sons, Monobazus and Izates. Month

MONTH, in Latin Mensis, in Greek Meen, in Hebrew Chodesch or Jerach The ancient Hebrews had no particular Names to express their Months. They said, the first, second, third, and so on. In Moses a we find Mention made of the Month Abib, or the Month of the young Ears of Corn, or of the new Fruits, which is probably the Name that the Egyptians gave to the Month, which the Hebrews afterwards called Nisan, and which was the first of the holy Year. Every where else this Lawgiver marks out the Months only by their Order of Succession. In the Books of Joshua, Judges and Samuel, we see the same Method continued. Under Solomon[1] we read of the Month Sio or Zif, which is the second Month of the holy Year, and which answers to that which afterwards had the Name Jiar. In the same Chapter we read of the Month Bul[2], which is the eighth of the holy Year, and answers to Marschevan, or October. Lastly, in Chap. viii. of the same Bookd we read of the Month Ethanim, or the Month of the Valiant, which answers to Tizri, or the seventh of the holy Year.

The Criticks are not agreed about the Origin of these Names of the Months. Scaliger[3] thought that Solomon had borrowed them from the Phœnicians, with whom he had much Intercourse. Grotius[4] believes they came from the Chaldæans, and F. Hardouin[5] fetches 'em from the Egyptians. However this be, we see nothing of 'em, neither before nor after Solomon. But after the Captivity of Babylon, they took the Names of the Months as they found 'em among the Chaldæans and Persians, among whom they had lived so long a Time. Here follow the Names of these Months, and the Order in which they follow one another, both in the Holy and Civil Year[6].

Jiar, — — April. 9. Sivan, — — May. 10. Thammuz, —— June. 11. Ab, — — July. 12. Elul, — — August.

At the Beginning, the Hebrews followed the same Distribution of their Year and Months, as they had found in Egypt. Their Year consisted of three Hundred and sixty five Days, and of twelve Months each of thirty Days. This appears by the Enumeration of the Days, of which the Year of the [Gen. ch. vii.] Deluge consisted. The twelfth Month was to have thirty five Days, and they had no intercalary Month, but at the End of one Hundred and twenty Years, when the beginning of the Year following was out of its Place thirty whole Days.

After the coming out of Egypt, which happened in the Month of March[7], God ordained that the holy Year, that is the Calendar of Feasts and Ceremonies of Religion, should begin at the Month Nisan, which is the seventh Month of the Civil Year, which he did not meddle with, and which the Hebrews have always continued to begin at the Month Tizri, answering to our September. After the Babylonish Captivity, the Jews being but an Handful of People in the midst of other People surrounding them, were obliged to comply with the different Customs, and with those Manners of dividing Times and Seasons, as were in Use with the People that ruled over them. First of the Chaldæans, afterwards of the Persians, and lastly of the Græcians. They took the Name of the Months from the Chaldæans and Persians, and perhaps their Manner of dividing the Year and Months. However we cannot be sure of this, not knowing exactly what was the Form of the Chaldæan Months. But we see plainly by Ecclesiasticus [Ecclus. xliii. 6.] , by the Maccabees, by Josephus[8], and by Philo[9], that in their Time they followed the Custom of the Grecians: That is, that their Months were Lunar, and their Years Solar[10]. Universi Græci annos juxta solem, menses verò & dies juxta lunam agebant.

These Lunar Months were each of twenty nine Days and an half, or, to speak more intelligibly, the first was of thirty Days, the next of twenty nine, and so on alternately: That which had thirty Days was called a full or compleat

Month, and that which had but twenty nine Days was called incompleat. The new Moon was always the Beginning of the Month, and this Day they called Neomenia, New-Moon or new Month. They did not make it to commence from that Point of Time, in which the Moon is in Conjunction with the Sun, but from the Time at which she first appears. And to determine this Moment, 'tis said they had People posted on[11] elevated Places, to give Notice to the Sanhedrim as soon as possible. And as soon as Notice was given, Proclamation was made, The Feast of the new Moon, the Feast of the new Moon; and the Beginning of the Month was proclaimed by the Sound of Trumpets. And for Fear of making any Failure in the Observation of that Command, that obliges them to certain Ceremonies at the Beginning of every Month, they made the Neomenia to last two Days, the first of which was called the Day of the Moon's Appearance, the other of the Moon's Disappearance. This is what the Rabbins say. But there is great Probability, that if this was ever put in Practice, 'twas only in Provinces distant from Jerusalem. For in the Temple, and in the capital City, there was always a fixed Calendar, or at least a fixed Decision for the Festival Days, determined by the House of Judgment.

When we said above, that the Months of the Jews answered to ours, so that Nisan, for Example, answered to March, Jiar to April, &c. This must not be understood without some Latitude; for the Lunar Months can never be reduced exactly to Solar ones. The Vernal Equinox falls between the twentieth and twenty first of March, according to the Course of the Solar Year. But in the Lunar Year, the new Moon will fall in the Month of March, and the full Moon in the Month of April. So that the Hebrew Months will commonly answer to two of our Months, and partake of both.

The twelve Lunar Months making but three Hundred fifty four Days and six Hours, the Jewish Year was short of the Roman by twelve Days. But to recover the equinoctial Points again, from which this Difference of the Solar and Lunar Year would separate the new Moon of the first Month, the Jews took Care every three Years to intercalate a thirteenth Month into their Year, which they called Ve-adar, or the second Adar. And by this Means their Lunar Year equalled the Solar; because in thirty six Months, according to the Sun, there would be thirty seven according to the Moon. 'Twas the Sanhedrim that regulated this Intercalation, and this thirteenth Month was put between Adar and Nisan; so that the Passover was always celebrated the first full Moon after the Equinox. Upon this Subject may be consulted F. Lami's Introduction to the Scripture, and our Dissertation on Chronology, printed at the Beginning of our Commentary upon Genesis; and those that desire to see this Matter discussed to the Bottom, may see Scaliger de emendatione temporum, and Calvisius's Introduction to Chronology.

Moon

MOON, Luna. The Lord created the Sun and the Moon on the fourth Day of the World, that they might preside over the [Gen. i. 15, 16.] Day and the Night, and that they might serve to distinguish Times and Seasons. As the Sun presides over the Day, so the Moon presides over the Night; the Sun regulates the Course of the Year, and the Moon that of the Month; the Sun is as it were the King of the Host of Heaven, and the Moon is the Queen. Moses speaks of the Moon as of a luminous Body, not very much inferior to the Sun. Fecit Deus duo luminaria magna; luminare majus, ut præesset diei, & luminare minus, ut præesset nocti. Yet it is certain, that the Moon, when compared to the Sun, is but a very small Body. Astronomers are of Opinion, that it is about fifty two Times smaller than the Earth, and four Thousand one Hundred and fifty Times smaller than the Sun[1]. But the sacred Authors often speak in a popular and inaccurate Manner. They call that a great Light which appears so to us, and which indeed is so as to us, without Regard had to the real Magnitude of other Bodies, which the common People are not in a Capacity of measuring, and of which they judge only by the Report of their Senses.

[Gen. i. 14.] The sacred Authors tell us likewise, that the Moon was appointed of God for the Distinction of Seasons, of Festival Days, and Days of assembling. Sint in signa, & tempora, [Psal ciii. 19.] & dies & annos. And the Psalmist says; Fecit lunam ut tempora. And the Author of Ecclesiasticus; He made the Moon also to [Ecclus. xliii. 6, 7, 8, 9.] serve in her Season, for a Declaration of Times, and a Sign of the World. From the Moon is the Sign of Feasts, a Light that decreaseth in her Perfection. The Month is called after her Name, increasing wonderfully in her Changing, being an Instrument of the Armies above, shining in the Firmament of Heaven. The Beauty of Heaven, the Glory of the Stars, an Ornament giving Light in the highest Places of the Lord. The Hebrews have varied in their Manner of reckoning their Months and their Years. We think that in the Time of Moses, and for a long Time after, they kept to the Solar Year; but after their Return from the Captivity of Babylon, they had only Lunar Years. This is what the Author of Ecclesiasticus insinuates in the Passage now quoted. It is true, however, that whether we keep to the Solar or Lunar Year, that the Moon marks out the Revolutions of Seasons, and that Men divided the Year into twelve Months, by following the twelve Revolutions that they observed in the Moon, in the Course of one Year.

I do not know whether the Hebrews knew the Cause of the Lunar Eclipses; but they always speak of them in such Terms, as intimate that they considered them as miraculous, and as Effects of the Power and Wrath of God. When the Prophets speak of the Destruction of Empires, they seldom fail to say, that the Sun shall be covered with Darkness, and the Moon withdraw her Light; and that the Stars shall fall from Heaven. Thus Isaiah speaking of the Fall of Babylon; Ecce dies [Isai. xiii. 10.] Domini venit crudelis, & indignatione plenus. —— Obtenebratus est Sol in ortu suo, & Luna non splendebit in lumine suo. And elsewhere; Then the Moon shall be confounded, and the [Isai. xxiv. 23.] Sun ashamed, when the Lord of Hosts shall reign in Zion and in Jerusalem, and before his Antients gloriously. And Ezekiel speaking of the Destruction of the King of Babylon; And when I shall put thee out; I will cover the Heaven, and make the Stars thereof dark; I will cover the Sun with a Cloud, and the Moon shall not give her Light. All the bright Lights of Heaven will I make dark over thee, and set Darkness upon thy Land, saith the Lord God. And Joel, The Sun and the Moon shall be dark, and the Stars shall withdraw their Shining. These Expressions are very common in Scripture, and I cannot perceive that there is any direct Mention of an Eclipse any where. So that the Hebrews, who did not conceive that the Sun turned round about the Earth, could not explain the Eclipses of the Moon or Sun in a physical Manner,

The Orientals in General, and the Hebrews in particular, paid more Respect to the Moon than the Sun. The Worship of the Moon among them was more extensive, and more famous, than that of the Sun. Moses [Deut. iv. 19. xvii. 3.] bids the Israelites take Care, that when they see the Sun, the Moon, the Stars, and the Host of Heaven, not to pay them any superstitious Worship, because they were only Creatures appointed for the Service of all Nations that are under Heaven. Job also speaks of the Worship of the Sun and Moon. If I beheld [Job. xxxi. 26, 27.] the Sun when it shined, or the Moon walking in Brightness; and my Heart has been secretly enticed, or my Mouth hath kissed my Hand, as a Token of Adoration. Particularly the Hebrews worshipped the Moon by the Name of Meni, of Astarte, of the Goddess of the Groves, of the Queen of Heaven, &c. The Syrians paid her their Adoration by the Name of Astarte, of Urania, or Cælestis; the Arabians by the Name of Alilat; the Egyptians by that of Isis; the Greeks by the Names of Diana, Venus, Juno, Hecate, Bellona, Minerva, &c.

Macrobius[2], and Julius Firmicus acquaint us, that Men dressed like Women, and Women in the Habit of Men, used to do Sacrifice to the Moon. And the Rabbin Maimonides thinks[3], that this is what Moses intended to forbid, when he prohibited such an Exchange of Habits. The Moon was worshipped by the Name of a a God, and not of a Goddess, among the People of Syria, of Mesopotamia, and Armenia. The Sepharvites called her Anamelech, the gracious King. Strabo calls her Men. Isaiah gives her the same Name, lxv. 11. She was represented clothed like a Man; and there are Medals still to be seen, on which she is represented in the Habit and Form of a Man armed, having a Cock at his Feet, covered with a Phrygian or Armenian Bonnet. Spartian assures us[4], that the People of Charri in Mesopotamia believed, that all such as held the Moon for a Goddess, would be always in Subjection to their Wives. He adds, that though the Greeks and Egyptians sometimes give her the Appellation of Goddess, yet they always give her the Name of a God in their Mysteries. In the Scriptures we have no Name for denoting a Goddess, and Astarte, which is the Moon, is called a God, as well as Baal, who is the Sun.

They offered several Sorts of Sacrifices to [Isai. lxv. 11. Jerem. vii. 18.] the Moon. We see in Isaiah and Jeremiah, that they offered to her in the high Ways, and upon the Roofs of their Houses, Sacrifices of Cakes, and such like Offerings. 'Twas thus the Greeks paid Honour to Hecate, or Trivia, which is the same as the Moon. But elsewhere they offered to her human Sacrifices. Strabo relates[5], that in the Countries bordering upon the Araxes, they chiefly worshipped the Moon, who has there a famous Temple. The Goddess has there several Slaves, and every Year they offer one of 'em in Sacrifice to her, after having fed him very daintily for a whole Year before. Lucian speaks of the like Sacrifices[6], which were offered to the Goddess of Syria, who was no other than the Dea cælestis, or the Moon.

Fathers carried their Children, tied up in Sacks, to the Top of the Porch of the Temple, from whence they threw them down upon the Pavement; and when these unfortunate and innocent Victims cried and lamented, the Fathers would answer, that they were not their Children, but young Calves.

The Jews ascribed different Effects to the Moon. For Example, Moses speaks of [Deut. xxxiii. 14.] the Fruits of the Sun and the Moon. De pomis fructuum Solis & Lunæ. The Sun and Moon are considered as the two Principles of the Production of the Fruits of the Earth. The Moon furnishes them with the Moisture and the Juices that nourish them; the Sun concocts this Moisture, and exhales what is superfluous[7]. Lunæ fœmineum ac molle sidus atque nocturnum, solvere humorem & trahere, non auferre. Some Commentators think[8], that the Fruits of the Sun are those that come but once a Year, as Wheat, Grapes, &c. and that the Fruits of the Moon are those that may be gathered at different Months of the Year; as Cucumbers, Figs, &c.

Mordecai

MORDECAI, Son of Jair, of the Race of Saul, and one of the Chief of the Tribe of Benjamin. He was carried Captive to Babylon by Nebuchadnezzar, with Jehoiachin [Esther ii. 5, 6.] (or Jeconiah) King of Judah, in the Year of the World 3405, before Christ 595, and before the Vulgar Æra 599. He settled at Shushan, and there lived to the first Year of Cyrus[1], when 'tis thought he returned to Jerusalem with several other Captives[2]. But afterwards he returned to Shushan, seeing that the Temple remained unfinished, and that his Nation was without any Support in Judæa. There is great Probability that Mordecai was very young, when he was taken into Captivity. For from the Transportation of Jeconiah by Nebuchadnezzar, to the third Year of Darius Son of Hystaspes, or Abasuerus, who this Year took Esther to Wife, is above fourscore Years[3].

Some believe that Mordecai came[4] to Babylon or Shushan, only in the Person of his Father, and that as to himself, he was born in this Country; but there is no need of recurring to this Solution. For if we suppose Mordecai to be twelve Years old, for Example, at the Transportation of Jeconiah, then at the Time of Abasuerus's Marriage with Esther he might be fourscore and twelve. At this Age he might well enough discharge the Duty of those Employments that the King gave him, and live still a long Time, supposing, as the Jews pretend, that he lived in all to be an Hundred fourscore and eighteen Years old; or even if he lived to be only an Hundred and ten, or an Hundred and twenty Years old. However this be as to his Age, Mordecai had with him a Niece called Edessa, or Esther, the Daughter of his Brother, whom he had adopted and brought up as his own Daughter, after the Death of his Brother.

Esther became the Spouse of Abasuerus[5], in the Manner already related under the Article of ESTHER; and Mordecai not being willing to make known who he was, used to be very constant at the Gate of the Palace, that he might learn News of Queen Esther. One Day two of the King's Eunuchs, having taken some Discontent against their Master, were conspiring to assassinate the King. Mordecai overhearing their Design, gave Notice of it to Queen Esther, who informed the King of it in the Name of Mordecai. Presently Enquiry was made into it, and the Information proving true, the two Eunuchs were hanged, and the Matter was registered in the Annals by Order of the King. After this Abasuerus took Occasion to raise one Haman (or Aman) to the Dignity of his chief Favourite, and to the highest Pitch of Fortune. He made him take Place above all the Princes that were about his Person[6], and all the King's Servants were forced to bend the Knee to this Courtier. Mordecai could never prevail with himself to pay him this Honour, because Haman pretended to the same Respects in Proportion, as Subjects pay to the Kings of Persia, that is, even to divine Honours[7].

[Esther vi. 1, 2, &c.] Haman was so provoked at this Refusal, that he vowed the Destruction of all the Jews. He obtained a Decree from the King, that condemned them all to perish, and all their Goods to be confiscated to the King's Use. As soon as this Decree was published, Mordecai acquainted Esther with it, and urged her to prevail with the King to revoke it. But in the mean Time there happened a Thing, that had like to have drove Haman to Despair. For the King not being able to sleep one Night, for Amusement he caused the Annals of the preceding Years to be read to him. There was read the Conspiracy of the two Eunuchs against the Life of the King, discovered by Mordecai. The King asked, if this Man had been rewarded for his Discovery, according to his Merits. And being told he was not, he asked who was in the Antichamber? To which he was answered, Haman. He was then coming to the King, to beg of him that Mordecai might be hanged on a Gallows that he had provided for him. Abasuerus caused him to come in, and presently asked him, What should be done to the Man that the King delighted to honour? Haman believing it to be himself that the King was desirous to pay this Distinction to, answered immediately, that he ought to be clothed in a Royal Habit, be set upon the King's Horse, having a royal Diadem on his Head; that the Chief of the Nobles of the Court should lead the Horse by the Bridle, and walking before him through the publick Places of the City, should cry out, Thus shall it be done to the Man whom the King delighteth to honour. The King replied, Make haste then, take a Robe and a Horse, and do to Mordecai in the Manner you have spoken.

[Esther vii. 1, 2, 3, &c. viii. 1, 2, 3, &c.] Haman was forc'd then to find out Mordecai, and having cloathed him in a royal Garment, he sat him upon the King's Horse, and conducted him through the City, in the Manner that he himself had suggested to Abasuerus. After this Haman return'd to his own House, full of Grief and Disappointment, and Mordecai comes again to the Gate of the Palace, as was his Custom. In the mean while Esther having prepared herself by Fasting and Prayer, presented herself before the King, in Hopes of diverting that Danger from her People; to which Haman had exposed them. She contented herself at first to beg the Favour of the King, that he and Haman would regale themselves with her in her Apartment. At the first Repast she made no Discovery of her Intentions to the King, but only pray'd him to do her the same Favour a second Time. Then she discovered to him the wicked Design of Haman, that Mordecai was her Uncle, that she was a Jewess by Birth, and that all her People were condemned to the Slaughter. Then Abasuerus revoked the Decree that he had made against the Jews, condemned Haman to be hanged on the Gallows that he had set up for Mordecai, gave the Confiscation of his Goods to the Queen, and raised Mordecai to the same Honours that Haman had enjoy'd. He suffer'd the Jews to revenge themselves on their Enemies throughout his whole Dominions, and to exercise this Revenge on the same Day that was appointed for their Destruction. This was the fourteenth Day of the Month Nisan, and this Day was a solemn Festival to the whole Nation for Ages afterwards. See ESTHER and PURIM.

The greatest part of Criticks and Commentators[8] believe, that Mordecai was the Author of the Book of Esther. It was certainly he that in Conjunction with Esther writ the Letter, which ordains the Celebration of the Feast of Lots, or of Purim[9]. But this Letter is no other than the very Book of Esther, to which some slight Alterations have been made, to give it the Form of an History rather than of a Letter. The Reader may consider the ninth Chapter of this Book, and our Preface to it, p. 504, and the Article Esther.

MORIAH, A Mountain upon which the Temple of Jerusalem was built by King [2 Chron. iii. 1. Gen. xxii. 2, 14.] Solomon. 'Tis thought that this was the same Place where Abraham was going to offer up his Son Isaac, though this Supposition is attended with great Difficulties. Morning MORNING, This is sometimes put for quickly. Thou shalt hear me in the Morning, or quickly. The Evening and the Morning make the Day, according to Moses; because the antient Hebrews began their Day in the [Gen. i. 5. Jer. vii. 13. xi. 7. Psal. lix. 16. xcii. 2. Ezek. xlvi. 14, 15. Vulgat.] Evening, à Vesperâ in Vesperàm. The Morning expresses the Diligence with which any Thing is done. The Lord says, that he arose early to invite his People to return to him. The Psalmist says the same, that he praised God in the Morning, that he was in hast to pay his Devotion to him.

Ezekiel says, faciet sacrificium super eo cata manè, manè. The Priest of the Week shall offer every Morning to the Lord the ordinary Sacrifice of a Lamb. Cata manè, manè, is an Expression taken from the Greek, where the Preposition cata being joined to a Noun signifying a Year, a Day, or the Hour of the Day, denotes the Action to be repeated every Time at that Hour, cata manè, every Morning.

[Zeph. iii. 5. Vulgat.] Zephaniah says, manè, manè judicium dabit in lucem. Every Morning doth he bring his Judgment to Light. Manè, manè, being repeated, expresses very early in the Morning. Amos v. 3. Convertens in manè tenebras. God changes the Darkness into Morning, the Night into Day. Joel ii. 2. Quasi manè expansum super Montes, &c. As at the Break of Day the Light appears upon the Mountains, so shall the Locusts shew themselves in the Country.

From Morning to Evening expresses a very short Time. De manè usque ad vesperam succidentur. Job iv. 20. And the Psalmist comparing the Life of Man to a Flower, says, that in the Morning it lifts up his Head, it flourisheth, that afterwards it withereth, and in the Evening is [Psal. cx. 6.] dry'd up and decay'd. Mane sicut herba transeat, mane floreat & transeat, vespere decidat, induret, & arescat. The Rain of the Evening and of the Morning, or rather of the Spring and Autumn. See the Article RAIN.

The Psalmist speaking of the Birth, or [Psal. xc. 3.] of the eternal Generation of the Messiah says, that he was begot before the Morning, or according to the Hebrew, that " His Posterity is as the Dew, which is " produced from the Bosom of the Morning[1] ". This Posterity are the faithful Believers in Jesus Christ. Their Multitude may be well compared to a plentiful Dew that falls in the Morning, and which seems even to come out of the Bosom of the Morning.

The same Psalmist, to express the Rapidity of his Flight, expresses himself [Ps. cxxxix. 9, 10.] thus: If I take the Wings of the Morning, and dwell in the uttermost Parts of the Sea; even there shall thy Hand lead me, and thy right Hand shall hold me. We know no Motion so rapid as the Diffusion of the Beams of the Sun, at the breaking of the Day.

[If. viii. 20.] Isaiah says, that those who do not keep the Law and the Ordinances of God, shall have no Morning, Non erit eis matutina lux. They shall perish without seeing the Light, they shall not abide 'till Morning.

[Job xli. 9.] Job compares the Eyes of the Behemoth to the Brightness of the Morning. Oculi ejus ut palpebræ diluculi, they are as splendid as the Morning. The Behemoth is the Elephant.

Moseroth

[Numb. xxxiii. 30.] MOSEROTH, or Moserah, is probably the same as Hazeroth, or Hazerah, one of the Encampments of the Israelites in the Wilderness. It was in the Neighbourhood of Kadesh, and near Mount Hor, where Aaron died.

Moses

MOSES, Son of Amram and Jocabed, was born in Egypt in the Year of the World 2433, before Christ 1567 Years; before the vulgar Æra 1571 Years. His Father and Mother were of the Tribe of Levi. He had a Brother called Aaron, and a Sister named Miriam, of both which we have spoke already, but shall be obliged to mention them again in the Life of Moses. Miriam was elder than Aaron and Moses, and Aaron was three Years older [Exod. ii. 3, 4, 5, &c.] than Moses, and Miriam might be about five or six Years older than Aaron. Some Time before the Birth of Moses,[1] the King of Egypt had made a Decree, that all the male Children of the Hebrews should be put to Death as soon as born, and that only the Females should be preserved. The Parents of Moses could not comply with this severe Law, and therefore conceal'd the Child in their House for three Months. But seeing they could no longer hope to hide him, they resolved upon exposing him to the wide World, and to commit to Providence the Care of his Preservation. They put him into a kind of little Vessel made of Rushes, and laid him down upon the Banks of the Nile, while his Sister Miriam stood as a Spy at a Distance, to observe what [Exod. ii. 5. חרד לרחץ] would become of him. But the Daughter of Pharaoh, King of Egypt, happening to come that Way, to bathe herself in the River, or to wash her Linen, and having perceived the Basket upon the Shore among the Reeds, she order'd it to be fetch'd to her, and open'd it. And being moved with the Beauty and Innocence of the Infant, she had Compassion on it, not doubting but that it was one of the Hebrew's Children.

Then Miriam the Sister of little Moses came near, and asked her if she would please to have her fetch an Hebrew Nurse for the Child, to which the Princess consented. She went then, and brought Jocabed, her own and Moses's Mother, to whom the Child was committed. The Princess bid her nurse it for her, and she would pay her for her Pains. She gave to the Infant the Name of Moses, which in the Egyptian Language signifies one that has been saved out of the Water[2]. Mò or Moï signifies Water, and Uses one that is drawn out; so say Josephus, and Clemens Alexandrinus. But the Abbot Renaudot, who has particularly apply'd himself to the Egyptian Language, says that in this Tongue Mooou signifies Water, and Si to draw or take. According to Josephus[3], the Name of Pharaoh's Daughter, by whom Moses was preserved, was Thermutis. She adopted him for her Son, and took care to have him instructed in all the Learning that was then in Vogue in [Acts vii. 22.] Egypt. But Amram and Jocabed, who brought him up in his Infancy, took care betimes to inform him in such Things, as belong'd to the Religion and History of his Forefathers. They taught him the Hebrew Tongue, and inculcated into his [Heb. xi. 24,25,26] Mind whatever might give him a Dis-relish for those Honours and Advantages, that he might have expected at Pharaoh's Court. So that when he grew up, he would not so much as own for his Mother the Princess that had adopted him, chusing rather to partake with his own People in their Afflictions, than to share in the Pleasures of a Court, which he could not enjoy without losing his Innocency. He had in View the eternal Recompence he should obtain, and preferr'd the Participation of his Saviour's Sufferings, before the Possession of all the Treasures of Egypt.

Clemens Alexandrinus[4] says, that Moses's Parents had at first given him the Name of Joachim, when he received Circumcision. Pharaoh's Daughter gave him the Name of Moses, in Memory of his being taken out of the Water; and lastly, 'twas thought that in Heaven he had the Name [Deut. xxxiv. 5, 6.] of Melchi. For though the Scripture tells us expressly that Moses is dead, yet the Jews believed he was still living in Heaven; as we shall see afterwards. Clemens Alexandrinus adds, that as he grew up, he had the ablest Masters in all Egypt, to teach him Arithmetick, Geometry, Musick, Physic, and the whole Science of Sounds and Harmony, as well vocal as instrumental. And besides all this, he learn'd the symbolic Philosophy, which was taught by Means of Hieroglyphick Characters. He was also instructed in all that belongs to the Language and Manner of Writing of the Egyptians. Philo[5] says pretty much the same Thing. He adds, that Grecians were sent for to instruct him in all the liberal Sciences, that the Assyrians taught him their Learning, and the Egyptians the Mathematicks. Eupolemus[6] quoted by Clemens Alexandrinus and by Eusebius, says that Moses is the first of Sages, that he first gave to the Hebrews the Art of Grammar, from whom the Phenicians received it, and from them the Grecians.

Josephus[7] has much adorn'd the History of Moses, and 'tis thought very probable, that he has deliver'd nothing but what was then believed among the Jews. This is in short what he relates. The King of Egypt had a Daughter named Thermutis, who going to divert herself upon the Banks of the River Nile, saw in the Water a little Box floating; she order'd some Swimmers to fetch it, and having found in it a Child of extraordinary Beauty, she sent for some Women to give it suck. But the Child refusing the Breast from any of the Women that were present, Miriam the Child's Sister approach'd as if by Accident, and told the Princess it would be in vain to send for other Nurses, for the Child would not suck any other but a Hebrew Nurse. At the same Time she offer'd herself to fetch one. She went, and brought Jocabed the Child's Mother, who having presented the Nipple to young Moses, he presently took it. The Princess then desired the Mother to take care of it, and to nurse it. The Beauty of young Moses was so great, and he shew'd so much Wit and Address in whatever he did, that every Body was charm'd with him, and were never satisfied with looking on him. The Princess Thermutis adopted him, not having any Children of her own, and when he was three Years of Age, she presented him to the King her Father; telling him that she had chose him for her Son for the Sake of his rare Qualities, and could wish that he might succeed to the Crown of Egypt. And at the same Time she put the Child into the Hands of her Father. The King receiv'd him into his Arms, and to oblige his Daughter in a Way of Mirth he put his Diadem upon the Child's Head. But Moses presently snatch'd it off, and letting it fall upon the Ground, he trod it under Foot. This was look'd upon as no good Omen, and the Priest that had foretold the Birth of this Child should be fatal to Egypt, was very urgent to have him put to Death, saying that Egypt could not be in Safety if he was suffer'd to live. Presently Thermutis took him away, without any Opposition from the King; and without regarding the Predictions of the Fortune-teller, she caus'd Moses to be brought up in a Manner befitting that Dignity to which she had a Design to promote him.

When he was grown up, Providence threw into his Way an Opportunity of shewing his Valour and Capacity. The Ethiopians that inhabited towards the South of Egypt, made great Ravages in the Country of the Egyptians; who took the Field with a great Army, marched against the Ethiopians, and gave them Battle, but were defeated. Great part of them fell by the Edge of the Sword, and the rest fled. The Ethiopians proud of their Success, penetrated into Egypt, as far as Memphis, and even to the Sea, laying all Waste before them, and taking away a great Booty. The Egyptians not finding themselves in a Condition to oppose them by humane Means, immediately had Recourse to the Oracle, which told them they must apply themselves to an Hebrew for Assistance. The King then desired Moses of Thermutis, that he might be at the Head of his Army. Thermuthis would not consent to it, 'till her Father had promised with an Oath, that no Injury should be done to his Person. As soon as he found himself at the Head of the Army, he set himself to contrive Means of cutting off the Enemy's Retreat, and of attacking them before they could know any Thing of his March. He took up a Resolution of leading his Army, not along the Nile, which was the direct Way, but within the Country, where it was very dangerous to pass, because of the Multitude of Serpents, and other venomous Beasts, that infest those Quarters.

This is the Way he thought of, to succeed in this Undertaking. He had Cages made of Twigs, which he fill'd with a sort of Birds call'd Ibis, very common in Egypt, and great Enemies to Serpents, and other venomous Insects, upon which the Ibis preys. So that when he came into those Places, which most abounded with these Creatures, he let go the Ibis, which destroyed the Serpents, and preserved the Army from their Bitings. By this Means he came upon the Ethiopians before they were aware, or had the least Knowledge of his Coming. He cut them in Pieces, made a Descent into their Country, took several of their Cities, and forc'd them to shut themselves up in the City of Saba, to which afterwards Cambyses gave the Name of Meroe. Here he besieged them, and lying a good while before the Town, because it was in an Island, and otherwise well fortify'd, he could not carry the Place so soon as he expected. But in this Interval there happen'd an Accident, that much facilitated the taking of the Town, and that without any Danger.

For Tharbis Daughter to the King of Ethiopia, having from the Walls seen Moses as he was fighting bravely at the Head of the Egyptian Army, conceived a great Affection for him for his Valour and Conduct, which had restored the Affairs of Egypt, and repelled the Ethiopians before victorious. She sent secretly to him, and made Proposals of Marriage. Moses consented to this, on Condition that she should deliver up the City to him. This she performed, and Moses took Possession of Meroe, married Tharbis, and with his victorious Army returned into Egypt. But there instead of finding the Repose he expected, and the Acknowledgments he deserved, he found himself exposed to the Envy of the Courtiers, and accused to Pharaoh of having murdered an Egyptian. The King himself taking Umbrage at the Bravery and Reputation of Moses, was resolved to make Use of this Pretence to put him to Death. But Moses having discovered these Designs against him, thought fit to retire through the Desart into the Country of Midian, not finding it safe to go the ordinary Road, for Fear of being apprehended by the Officers that were sent to secure him.

But Moses himself acquaints us with none of these Particulars; for he tells his own Story thus[8]. At that Time Moses being grown up, went to visit his Brethren, and was a Witness of those Hardships that the Egyptian Task-masters made them undergo. He saw an Egyptian oppressing an Hebrew, and observing no one to be near, he vindicated his Cause, slew the Egyptian, and hid his Body in the Sand. The next Day he found two Hebrews at Variance, and being willing to reconcile them, he took Part with him that suffered the Injury, asking the other why he struck his Brother? He answered him with another Question, Who has made you a Ruler and Judge over us? Will you kill me as you did the Egyptian yesterday? Moses hearing this, was afraid, and wondered how it came to be discovered: And Pharaoh being informed of it, sought for Moses to put him to Death. But he fled into the Country of Midian, beyond the Red-Sea, in Arabia Petræa, towards Mount Sinai. Being come hither, he sat down near a Well; and whilst he was there, the seven Daughters of Jethro Priest of Midian came thither, according to their Custom, to draw Water for the watering of their Flocks. But no sooner had they filled the Troughs with Water, but Shepherds coming with the same Intention, drove them away. Moses observing this, took the Part of the Damsels, drove away the Shepherds, and himself watered Jethro's Flocks.

When they came home to their Father, they told him what had happened; and Jethro asked them, where is the Man, why did you let him go? Fetch him hither, that we may entertain him according to the Laws of Hospitality, in Return for his Kindness. Moses being come, and living for some Time with Jethro, he engaged himself with an Oath to continue with him. For this Jethro gave him his Daughter Zipporah in Marriage, who became the Mother of a Son whom Moses called Gershom; for he said, I have been a Stranger in a Foreign Country. Afterwards she had another Son, to whom Moses gave the Name of Eleazar; for he said, The God of my Fathers has helped me, and has delivered me from the Hand of Pharaoh. A good while after this[9], the King of Egypt dies, and the Children of Israel groaning under the Weight of their Oppressions, send their Cries to Heaven, and the Lord heard them.

But Moses was employed in feeding the Sheep of Jethro his Father-in-Law; and having one Day drove his Flock a good Way into the Desart, he came as far as the Mountain of Horeb[10], where the Lord appeared to him in a Bush that burned without being consumed. Moses being astonished at this Miracle, says within himself, I must go and examine how it comes to pass, that the Bush is not consumed. But the Lord seeing him come nearer, speaks to him out of the Bush, saying; Moses approach no nearer, but put off your Shoes, for the Place whereon you stand is holy Ground. To which he adds, " I " am the God of your Fathers, the God " of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the " God of Jacob. I have seen the Affliction of my People in Egypt, and have " heard their Cries and Groans, which are " caused by those that have the Oversight " of their Labours. I am come down to " deliver them from the Bondage under " which they groan, and to bring them " unto a Land that flows with Milk and " Honey, into the Land of the Canaanites, " the Hittites, the Amorites, the Perizzites, the Hivites and the Jebusites. I " have cast my Eyes upon you, to send " you into Egypt to Pharaoh, that you " may bring the Children of Israel out of " Egypt.

Moses put off his Shoes, and covered his Face, as soon as he heard the Voice of the Lord; but when he heard that he was to be sent to Pharaoh, he began to excuse himself, and was willing to decline the Employment. But the Lord said to him; I will be with you, and for a Token that it is I that send you, when you have brought my People out of Egypt, you shall come upon this Mountain to offer Sacrifices to me. Therefore doubt not, either of your own Calling to this Office, or of the Success of your Undertaking. To which Moses replied, If I should go and say to the Children of Israel, the God of your Fathers has sent me to you, to bring you out of Egypt, and they should ask me, what is his Name, what must I then say to 'em? You shall say, I am that I am. You shall say, you are sent by him who is Existence it self, and the Cause of it in all created Beings. You shall tell your Brethren that I have sent you to 'em, and that I will bring them into the Land that I promised to their Fathers. They shall hearken to your Words, and believe them. You shall also present your self before Pharaoh, and shall say to him; the God of the Hebrews has commanded us to go three Days Journey into the Wilderness, there to sacrifice to the Lord. I know that he will not hearken to you, and that he will not let you go, till he is compelled by a mighty Hand. I shall stretch out my Hand, and shall smite Egypt with several Plagues, and I shall force the Egyptians to let you go.

But Moses still intreating to have himself excused, the Lord commanded him to throw his Rod upon the Ground, which he had no sooner done, but it was immediately changed into a Serpent. God bid him take it up again, and then it became a Rod again as before. Then he bid him put his Hand into his Bosom, and when he drew it out again, it was all over leprous. He bid him put it in again, and when he took it out it was clean as before. These two Miracles, says he, you shall perform before the Children of Israel. If after this they shall not believe you, take Water out of the Nile, and pour it out upon the Land, and it shall be presently changed into Blood. Then Moses replied; Lord, I beseech thee to hear me. I am not eloquent nor powerful in Speech, and therefore very unfit for this great Undertaking. I never had a Faculty of speaking well, and even now, since thou hast honoured me with thy Conversation, I find my Tongue but more heavy and unfit to discharge its Office. The Lord said to him, Who was it that made the Mouth of Man? Was it not I? Go on then, I shall be with thy Mouth, and shall teach you what you shall say. But Moses not yet intirely acquiescing, the Lord said to him. I know that your Brother Aaron is a Man of a ready Utterance; he is coming to meet you. Tell him what I have ordered you to do, I shall be with your Mouth, and with his. He shall speak for you, and shall be a Tongue to you, and you shall be as a God to him q. Take also this Rod with you, which shall be the Instrument you shall make Use of, to perform all your Miracles.

Moses then returning to Jethro, told him that he must go to see his Brethren in Egypt, without explaining any further to him the Occasion of his Journey. He took his Wife and Children with him, and set forward. But when he was arrived at his Inn, the Angel of the Lord sought to kill his second Son Eleazar[11], the Occasion of which was (as some think) because he was not circumcised. Therefore Zipporah immediately took a sharp Stone, and circumcised her Son; and throwing her self at Moses's Feet, she said to him, You are a bloody Husband to me. After this they parted from each other, and she returned to her Father Jethro, and took her Sons along with her. At the same Time Aaron received Orders from God, to come to meet his Brother Moses. They met at the Mountain Horeb, and Moses acquainted him with every Thing the Lord had ordered him to do, for the Deliverance of his People out of Egypt. Being come back thither, they called together the Heads of the People, and Aaron declared to 'em what the Lord had said to Moses, and convinced them that the Lord had visited his People.

After this, Moses and Aaron went to Pharaoh, and told him, that the God of the Hebrews had ordered him, to suffer them to go three Days Journey into the Desart of Arabia, there to offer Sacrifices to him. Pharaoh answered, that he knew not the God of the Hebrews, neither would he let them stir out of his Dominions. At the same Time he gave Orders, that the Children of Israel should no longer be allowed Straw, as before, for the making of Bricks; saying, they were too numerous, and too idle, and therefore must be brought low by hard labour. The People upon this made their Complaint to Moses, and he to the Lord, who told him[12], you shall see the Plagues with which I am going to smite the Egyptians. I will harden the Heart of Pharaoh, and he shall not let my People go, till he is forced by a powerful Hand. Moses and Aaron coming then to Pharaoh, and having again declared to him the Orders of the Lord, Aaron threw down his miraculous Rod before him, which immediately was changed into a Serpent. Pharaoh then sent for his Magicians, the Chief of which were Jannes and Jambres[13], who by their Enchantments changed also their Rods into Serpents; but Moses's Rod that was changed into a Serpent, devoured those of the Magicians.

After this the Lord smote Egypt with ten different Sorts of Plagues, in the Compass of a few Days[14]. The first Plague was that of Blood, Moses changing the Waters of the Nile into Blood, which happened on the eighteenth Day of the sixth Month, which afterwards was called Adar, and which answers to our February. This Plague continued about seven Days.

The second Plague, being that of Frogs, happened about the twenty fifth of the [Exod. viii. 2, 3, &c.] same Month, and continued but one Day.

The third Plague was that of Lice[15], and happened on the twenty seventh of the same Month. The Day following Moses threatened Pharaoh with the fourth Plague, or that of Flies[16]; which happened the twenty ninth, and which at the earnest Intreaty of Pharaoh was taken away on the thirtieth of the Month Adar.

The fifth Plague was the Pestilence, or the Mortality among the Cattle[17], and happened about the second Day of the seventh Month, which afterwards was the first Month of the holy Year, and was called Nisan. It ceased on the third Day.

The sixth Plague was that of Boyls and [Exod. ix. 10, 11, 12. Exod. ix. 17, 18.] Ulcers, which seized upon all the Egyptians, and even hindered the Magicians themselves from appearing before Pharaoh, and from counterfeiting the Miracles of Moses by their Sorceries, as they had done before. This Plague continued two Days, that is, the third and fourth Days of the Month Nisan, called Abib by Moses.

The seventh Plague was that of Thunder and Lightning, Rain and Hail, and happened on the fifth Day of the same Month, and continued but one Day.

The eighth Plague was that of Locusts or Grasshoppers, which devoured every Thing that had escaped the Hail. It was threatned by Moses on the seventh of the same Month Nisan, and happened on the eighth.

[Exod. x. 4, — 13.] The ninth Plague was that of Darkness, which covered all the Land of Egypt for three Days, while the Land of Goshen, where the Israelites lived, was enlightened as usual. This Plague happened on the tenth Day of the Month Nisan, and the same Day Moses ordered the Hebrews to [Exod. x. 22, 23. Exod. xi. Exod. xii. 23, 29, 30, &c.] prepare a Lamb for the Passover, which was to be instituted and celebrated four Days after.

The tenth and last Plague was that of the Death of the First-born of the Egyptians, who were put to Death by the destroying Angel on the Night between the fourteenth and fifteenth of the Month Nisan, which was the same Night on which the Hebrews came out of Egypt.

While the Plague of Darkness continued, Pharaoh sent for Moses and Aaron, and [Exod. x. 24, 25, &c.] told them, they might go to sacrifice to their God, provided they left behind them their Flocks and their Herds; but Moses answered him, that since God had not acquainted them what Sorts of Cattle they must sacrifice to him, they could not leave any behind, but must take all their Cattle along with them. But God suffered Pharaoh still to harden his Heart, and he drove away Moses, saying, Begon and see my Face no more, for the first Time you appear before me again, I will surely put you to Death. Moses then departed from him, and told him; I will see your Face no more. And indeed he returned no more to Court after that, but Pharaoh sent to him, to bid him begone out of Egypt with all possible Speed.

The fourteenth Day of the Month Abib or Nisan, at Evening, the Hebrews killed the Lamb of the Passover, or of the Passage of the Lord, and with the Blood they sprinkled the two Posts and upper Part of their Doors; that the destroying Angel passing over their Houses, might not enter to kill their First-born. About the middle of the [Exod. xii. 29, &c.] Night the Lord smote to Death all the First -born of the Egyptians, from the First-born of Pharaoh, to the First-born of the meanest of his Slaves; and there was a great Outcry throughout all Egypt. So that Pharaoh sent to call Moses and Aaron in great Haste, and bid them go quickly and sacrifice to their God, and take their Wives and Children along with them, their Cattle, and all that they had; and when they went, to pray for him also. The Egyptians also urged them to be gone, so that they had not Time so much as to prepare their Bread, and to mix Leaven with it. They carried with them the Paste or Dough, raw as it was, and made unleaven'd Bread by the Way, as well as they could. From whence it comes to pass, that for ever after, during the whole eight Days of the Passover, they made Use of none but unleavened Bread.

[Exod. xiii. 19. Gen. l. 25.] Thus the Children of Israel set out from Rameses to the Number of six hundred Thousand Footmen, without reckoning Women and Children, or the Strangers that joined themselves with 'em. Moses took with him the Bones of the Patriarch Joseph, who had laid this Injunction upon the Israelites a little before his Death. The Hebrews departing from Rameses, came first to Succoth, and thence to Etham. From Etham they returned towards Pi-hahiroth, which is between the Sea and Migdol [Exod. xiv. 2.] , over against Baal-zephon. No sooner were they arrived there, but Pharaoh came upon them with a powerful Army, thinking to force them back into Egypt. But the Lord put between the Camp of Israel and that of the Egyptians, a miraculous Cloud, which was luminous on the Side towards the Israelites, and dark towards the Egyptians. The Hebrews terrified at the Danger in which they thought themselves, began to murmur against Moses; but he encouraged them with the Assurance of Protection from the Lord. At the same Time the Lord commanded Moses to stretch out his Rod towards the Red-Sea, to separate its Waters, and to prepare a Passage for 'em through the midst of it. Moses obeyed, the Sea parted, and a strong Wind that blew all the Night dried up the Bottom, and converted it into dry Land. The Hebrews entered therein, and passed thro' it without Harm or Danger. What will be said concerning the Red- Sea, may be consulted on this Occasion. The Place at which they passed over is two or three Leagues below its Point or Extremity, at a Place named Colsum or Clysma, at which they pretended to shew for a long while after, the Marks and Remains of the Wheels of the Chariots belonging to the Egyptians[18].

Towards Day-break the Egyptians perceiving that the Hebrews had fled through the separated Waters, they had a Mind to pursue them, and entered after them into the Bottom of the Sea. But the Lord caused a Wind to arise, which brought back the Waters, which till then had remained suspended on each Side of the Passage; so that of the whole Army of the Egyptians not [Exod. xiv. 28, 29, &c.] one escaped drowning. The Tide cast their Bodies on the Shore, and the Israelites took the Advantage of seizing their Arms and Spoils. Then Moses and the Israelites sang a Song of Thanksgiving to the Lord. From [Exod. xv. 1, 2, &c.] hence they went on towards Sinai, and were three Days in the Wilderness of Shur, where they found no Water. The fourth Encampment was at Marah, where they found Plenty of Water indeed, but very bitter, which caused the People to murmur and complain. But Moses crying to the Lord, he shewed him a certain kind of Wood, which being thrown into the Waters took away the Bitterness, and made them very potable. From thence they came to Elim, where were twelve Fountains of sweet Water, and threescore and ten Palm-Trees.

[Exod. xvi. 1, 2, 3, &c.] On the fifteenth Day of the second Month, that is a whole Month after they came out of Egypt, the Hebrews departed from Elim, and came into the Wilderness of Sin or Zin, which is between Elim and Sinai. Here the Multitude being tired out with the Length of their Journey, began to murmur against Moses saying, Would to God that we had died in Egypt, where we sat at the Flesh-pots, and where we eat Bread in Abundance! So the Lord spake to Moses, and promised him to make it rain Food from Heaven to satisfie the People. Moses gave Warning of it to the People, and told them that on the Sabbath Day it would not rain Food, but that the Day before they might gather a double Portion of it. That very Evening all the Camp of the Israelites was covered over with Quails, which were brought thither by the Wind; and the next Morning they saw all round the Camp a kind of Hoarfrost, or like little Grains, of the Colour of Bdellium, and of the Shape of Coriander-Seeds. The People viewing it, said to one another, Man-hu, or, What is this? Which occasioned this Sort of Food to receive the Name of Manna. They took a great Quantity of Quails, and gathered up the Manna. But Moses bid them gather no more than an Omer for every one's Share. Thus were they abundantly supplied with Food for their whole Journey; for the Manna never failed to fall, save only on the Sabbath Day, during the whole forty Years of their Pilgrimage, till they entered into the Land of Promise. See the Article of MANNA before. Then Moses bid Aaron to fill an Omer with Manna, and to lay it up before the Lord, to remain as a Monument to future Generations.

From the Desart of Sin, the Hebrews arrived at Dophkah, thence they proceeded to Alush, and afterwards to Rephidim; where the People being in want of Water, began to murmur against Moses. But the Lord, by the Ministry [Exod. xvii. 1, 2, 3.] of Moses, drew them Water out of the Rock of Horeb; and the Water from this Rock served them through their whole March. At this Time the Amalekites coming to attack the Israelites, Moses sent Joshua out against them, with the Choice of his Troops; he himself at the same Time, with Aaron and Hur, being upon an Eminence, from whence they could see the Engagement. While Moses held up his Hands elevated towards Heaven, Joshua had the Advantage over the Enemy; but no sooner did he hold them down when weary, but the Amalekites prevailed. Wherefore Aaron and Hur put Stones under him, that he might sit down, while each of them supported his Arms, that he might not be tired. So that the Amalekites were intirely defeated. And the Lord said to Moses, write an Account of this Action in a Book, and instruct Joshua in it; for I will utterly destroy the Memory of Amalek from under Heaven.

The third Day of the third Month from [Exod. xix. 1, 2, 3, &c. Exod. xx. 1, 2, 3, &c. Exod. xxiv. 1, 2, 3, &c.] their coming out of Egypt, they arrived at the Foot of Mount Sinai, where they continued one whole Year. 'Twas there that God intended to give them his Law, and to regulate the Form of their civil Government. 'Twas there that God had told Moses, that they should offer Sacrifices to him after they came forth out of Egypt. Moses therefore ascended up into the Mountain, and God told him he intended to make a Covenant with Israel, and to give them his constant Protection, on Condition that the People would engage themselves to be obedient to him, and to continue faithful to him. Moses made a Report to the People of what the Lord had proposed to 'em, and the People answered, We will do every Thing that the Lord shall please to require of us. Moses ascended again into the Mountain, and carried the Peoples Answer to the Lord. Then the Lord bid Moses go down, and order the People to purify themselves, and to be in Readiness against the third Day; for that in three Days the Lord would descend upon the Mountain, to make a Covenant with them. On the third Day therefore God gave sensible Marks of his Presence upon Sinai, by the Fire that appeared there, and by Claps of Thunder and Flashes of Lightning, and by the Sound of the Trumpet that was heard there. God ordered Moses to set up Barriers at the Foot of the Mountain, that no one might approach it. Afterwards going up again into the Mountain, God gave him the Law of the Decalogue, or Ten Commandments, which contains an Abstract of the whole Jewish Religion. See before under the Article LAW.

After this God gave to Moses several Ceremonial and Political Laws, contained in Chap. xxi, xxii, and xxiii. of Exodus. Then coming down from the Mountain, Moses declared to the People the Laws he had received, and the Articles of the Covenant that the Lord would make them. And the People answering, that they would perform whatever the Lord should please to enjoin them, Moses erected an Altar [Exod. xx. 25.] of unhewn Stone, at the Foot of the Mountain, and twelve Monuments, or twelve other Altars, in the Name of the twelve Tribes of Israel. He offered burnt Sacrifices, and Peace-Offerings to the Lord; and taking the Blood of the Victims, he poured half upon the Altar, and the other half into Cups; and having read to the People the Ordinances he had received from the Lord, and which he had wrote into a Book, he sprinkled all the People with the Blood that was in the Cups. Thus was concluded this so solemn and celebrated a Covenant, between the Lord and the Children of Israel.

Then the Lord bid Moses come up again into the Mountain, and bring with him

Nnn Joshua

MOS [

[Exod. xxiv. 12, —— 18.] Joshua his Servant, that he might instruct him in all the Particulars of those Laws and Regulations, that he would have observed by the Priests or People, in the publick Exercise of Religion. He ordered a Tabernacle [Exod xxv. 1, 2, 3, &c. xxvi xxvii.] or Tent to be erected, in which he would receive the Homages, the Sacrifices, and the Adorations of the Israelites. He gave to Moses the Description of this Tabernacle, of the Ark, of the Altars, of the Veils or Curtains, of the Candlestick, and of all the Utensils that were to be made Use of there. Of the Habits of the Priests, and particularly of the Ornaments of the High-Priest. He [Exod. xxviii.] prescribed the Manner in which the Priests were to be consecrated, the Order, Manner, and Quality of the burnt Offerings, and of the Incense and Perfumes to be offered. He [Exod. xxix. xxx.] particularly appointed Bezaleel and Aholiab to perform all the Work of the Tabernacle. [Exod. xxxi.] Lastly, God gave him the Tables of the Law, which contained the Decalogue written by the Finger of the Lord: And at the [Exod. xxxi. 18.] same Time he informed him, that the People whom he had brought out of Egypt, had soon forgot all their Promises and Engagements; for at that very Time they had made them a molten Image, and were worshiping a golden Calf. To this he added, that he had [Exod. xxxii. 7, 8, 9, &c.] a Mind utterly to exterminate this headstrong and untractable People; but as for Moses, he would make him the Father and Chief of a great Nation. Moses then threw [Exod. xxxii. 1, 2, 3, &c.] himself at the Feet of the Lord, and interceded for the People. God hearkened to him, and sent him back into the Camp, after he had been upon the Mountain forty Days and forty Nights without receiving any Sustenance.

As he came down, Joshua heard the Noise of the People, who were then making great Shouts and Rejoycings. He said to Moses, that he heard a Noise in the Camp, as if there were some Engagement with the Enemy. But Moses knowing what had happened, told him, that it was not the Sound of an Alarm, but Cries of Joy. And when they came nearer the Camp, and saw the golden Calf, and the People singing and dancing about it, Moses for Indignation threw down the Tables of Stone he held in his Hands, and so broke them to Pieces. Then taking the Calf they had made, he melted it, and reduced it to Powder, and scattered the Powder into the Water, and made all the Congregation drink of it. See the Article of the GOLDEN CALF. Then Moses severely rebuked Aaron, for being so weak as to comply with the People in their Request, of having sensible Gods and molten Images. Aaron excused himself as well as he could, and Moses setting himself at the Entrance of the 230]

Camp, proclaimed, Whoever is for the Lord, let him join himself to me. Then all the Children of Levi assembling about him, he said; Thus says the Lord, let every one of you take his Sword, and let him go from Gate to Gate a-cross the Camp, and let every one slay his Brother, his Friend, or his Kinsman. The Children of Levi performed what was enjoined them, and that Day there were slain about three Thousand of the People.

The next Day Moses spoke to the People, and remonstrated to 'em the Heinousness of their Sin, and told them, that he would go up again into the Mountain, and endeavour to obtain Forgiveness for them. He went up, and intreated the Lord to pardon them; or otherwise he begged that himself might be blotted out of the Book of the Lord. The Lord answered him, That only he that offended should be blotted out of his Book; that he did not intend to forsake his People, that he would give them his Angel to conduct them into the Land he had promised them; but that the Crime they had committed should not always go unpunished, for that he would chastise them in the Day of his Vengeance. And that as to himself, he would not go along with them, but would send his Angel before them. Moses having declared these Words to the [Exod. xxxiii. 1, 2, 3, &c.] Israelites, they were much afflicted at them, and humbled themselves before the Lord, and laid aside all their Ornaments at the Foot of Mount Horeb. And farther to shew the Displeasure of the Lord, Moses carried the Tabernacle out of the Camp, where the Lord was used to speak to him Face to Face, and to give him his Orders. But Moses not desisting to importune the Lord, and to pray him to continue his Conduct of his People to the Land of Promise, he was prevailed with at length, and promised not to forsake them. Then Moses desired another Favour from the Lord, which was, that he might see his Glory. The Lord answered him, that he could not let him see his Face, for no Man could support that Sight and live; but that he would pass before the Opening of the Rock, where Moses might place himself, and so might see his hinder Parts as he passed along.

Afterwards Moses went up into the Mountain, and carried with him new Tables [Exod. xxxiv. 1, 2, 3, &c.] of Stone which he had prepared. There God manifested his Glory to him, as he had promised. He gave him the Decalogue anew, and several other Commandments; and after forty Days and forty Nights he came down from the Mountain, bringing the two Tables of Testimony along with him. He was not aware that his Face cast forth Rays of Light[19], which remained upon him after the Communication he had with the Lord. Aaron and the Children of Israel seeing him thus illuminated, durst not come near him; but Moses encouraged them to come and speak to him, and having finished his Discourse, put a Veil over his Face, that they might converse with him with greater Liberty. Then he began to put in Execution what the Lord had commanded him, concerning the Tabernacle of Testimony. He caused it to be proclaimed all over the Camp, that whoever had any valuable Metals, or precious Stones, Thread, Wool, Furrs, or fine Wood fit for the Work of the Tabernacle, might make an Offering of them to the Lord. The [Exod. xxxv, xxxvi, xxxvii, &c.] Israelites inflamed by a holy Zeal, brought with great Alacrity whatever they had that was fit for this Design; insomuch that Bezaleel and Aholiab were obliged to tell Moses, that the People offered more than [Exod. xxxvi. 5, 6, 7.] was necessary; upon which Proclamation was made thro' the Camp, that they need not make any more Offerings.

Besides what every one offered voluntarily, the Lord commanded that each Israelite should contribute half a Shekel, or about thirteen Pence Half-penny of our Money. And that this Contribution might be regularly raised, he caused an Account to [Exod. xxx. 11, 12. xxxviii. 25, 26.] be taken of all the People, from twenty Years old and upwards; and there were found six hundred three Thousand five hundred and fifty, each of which having paid a Bekah or half Shekel, the Sum amounted to one hundred Talents of Silver, and one Thousand seven Hundred and seventy five Shekels. The hundred Talents of Silver make about thirty four Thousand two hundred and nineteen Pounds Sterling; and one Thousand seven hundred seventy five Shekels make about two Hundred and two Pounds and nine Shillings. For six whole Months they worked upon the Tabernacle, that is, from the sixth Month of the holy Year, after their coming out of Egypt, of the Year of the World 2513, to the first Day of the first Month of the following Year 2514, before Christ 1486, before the Vulgar Æra 1490. On the first Day of the Month Nisan, which answered to the 21st of April, according to Ussher, the Tabernacle of the Covenant was set up, and filled with the Glory of the Lord. The [Exod. xl. 2, 17, 34. Numb. ix. 1,—14. Numb. xii. 1, 2, 3, &c.] fourteenth of the same Month the Israelites celebrated the second Passover from their coming out of Egypt; and about the same Time Moses published the Laws that are contained in the seven first Chapters of Leviticus. He consecrated Aaron and his Sons, and anointed and dedicated the Tabernacle, all the Vessels, and every Thing else that belonged to it.

[Numb. i. 1, 2, &c. iii. 3, 34, 51. viii. 5,—26. Numb. ii. 1, 2, 3, 4, &c.] The first Day of the second Month of the same Year, Moses took a second Account of the People, in which the Levites were reckoned apart, and appointed to the Service of the Tabernacle. Moses regulated their Functions, and the Offices each was to sustain, in their Marches in the Wilderness. Also the Order was settled, which every Tribe was to observe in their Marches and Encampments, that in so great a Multitude no Confusion might arise. The Princes of [Numb. vii. 1, 2,—83.] the Tribes made their Offerings to the Tabernacle, each according to his Rank, and upon his Day, during the twelve Days of the Dedication and Consecration of this holy Place. Lastly, about the same Time Moses made several Ordinances, relating to the Purity that was to be observed in holy Things, the several Uncleannesses that were to be avoided, and the Manner in which they were to approach the Tabernacle.

About the End of that Year in which the People made their Abode at Mount Sinai, Jethro the Father-in-Law of Moses brought him his Wife Zipporah, and his two Sons Gershom and Eliezer[20]. Moses received him with all possible Respect, and by his Persuasion changed the Method he had established for judicial Proceedings. He commissioned Judges to assist him in accommodating Differences, and in deciding Causes of lesser Consequence, reserving the Determination of greater Matters to himself. Soon after the Pillar of Clouds raising itself, by which the Israelites were conducted, they decamped from Sinai to go towards Paran. Moses tells the Names of but two Encampments between Sinai and Kadesh, which are Taberah, that is, burning, and Kibroth-hattaavah, that is, the Graves of Lust. We speak to each of these under their proper Articles.

'Twas on the Account of the Arrival of Zipporah in the Camp, that Aaron and Miriam his Sister spoke against Moses, because his Wife was an Ethiopian[21]; saying, Has the Lord indeed spoken only by Moses? Hath he not also spoken by us? We cannot know the Particulars of this Dispute, nor upon what Account it arose; but the Scripture tells us, that the Lord interposed in the Defence of Moses, who was the meekest Man upon Earth. The Lord therefore coming down in the Pillar of Clouds, spoke to Miriam and Aaron at the Door of the Tabernacle, telling them, If there be a Prophet among you, I the Lord will make my self known to him in a Vision, and will speak unto him in a Dream. My Servant Moses is not so, who is faithful in all mine House. With him will I speak Mouth to Mouth, even apparently, and not in dark Speeches, and the Similitude of the Lord shall he behold: Wherefore then were ye not afraid to speak, against my Servant Moses? At the same Time the Pillar of Clouds withdrew, and Miriam appeared to be all covered over with Leprosie. Aaron seeing her in this Condition, presently applied himself to the Clemency of Moses, who intreated the Lord for her. But the Lord said to him, If her Father had but spit in her Face, should she not be ashamed seven Days? Let her be shut out from the Camp seven Days, and after that let her be received in again. See MIRIAM.

It is not easy to determine, whether the Sedition of Korah, Dathan, and Abiram happened after the Arrival of the Hebrews [Numb. xvi. 1, 2, 3, &c.] at Kadesh-barnea, or before: However we shall mention it here, that we may relate what happened after the Encampment at Kadesh-barnea without Interruption. Korah was of the Tribe of Levi, as well as Moses and Aaron; Dathan, Abiram, and On, were of the Tribe of Reuben. Being disgusted at Moses and Aaron, because they shared between themselves all the chief Honours of the Republick, they raised a Mutiny against them, supported by two Hundred and fifty others of the chief of the People. They expostulated with Moses and Aaron, saying, Ye take too much upon you, seeing all the Congregation are holy every one of 'em, and the Lord is among them: Wherefore then lift ye up your selves above the Congregation of the Lord? When Moses heard this, he fell upon his Face, and told them; that the next Morning the Lord would make known who were those that belonged to him. Let every one of you take his Censer, and present himself to Morrow before the Lord; and the Lord will then cause it to be known whom he hath chosen. Moses in the mean Time having sent for Dathan and Abiram, they sent him Word they would not come to him. Is it a small Thing, say they, that thou hast brought us up out of a Land that floweth with Milk and Honey, to kill us in the Wilderness, except thou make thy self altogether a Prince over us? Morcover thou hast not brought us into a Land that floweth with Milk and Honey, or given us an Inheritance of Fields and Vineyards. Wilt thou put out the Eyes of these Men? We will not come up.

The Day following Moses having assembled all the People at the Door of the Tabernacle, the Glory of the Lord appeared; and the Lord said to Moses and Aaron, Separate your selves from among this Congregation, that I may consume them in a Moment. But Moses and Aaron threw themselves upon their Faces before the Lord, saying, O Lord God, shall one Man sin, and wilt thou be wroth with all the Congregation? And the Lord commanded that all the People should separate themselves from the Tents of Korah, Dathan, and Abiram; which being done, Moses said to 'em, If these Men die the common Death of all Men, then the Lord hath not sent me: But if the Earth open her Mouth and swallow them up, then ye shall understand that these Men have provoked the Lord. No sooner had he spoke these Words, but immediately the Earth opened under their Feet, and they were swallowed up with their Tents, and all that they had. And at the same Time a Fire went forth from the Lord, which consumed the two Hundred and fifty Men of Korah's Party, who were there present with their Censers. Moses then took all these Censers, which were of Brass, and beat them out into broad Plates, and made a Covering of them for the Altar of burnt Offerings, that they might serve as a Monument of what had happened. Yet the very next Day the People began again to murmur against Moses and Aaron on the same Occasion, saying, Ye have killed the People of the Lord. But the Lord caused a sudden Fire or Plague to go forth, which took hold of the Camp, and had entirely consumed it, if Moses had not presently sent Aaron with his Censer. He placing himself between the Living and the Dead, offered his Incense, and intreated the Lord for them, upon which the Plague ceased. Upon this Occasion no less than fourteen Thousand and seven hundred Men perished, without reckoning those that died on the Account of Korah's Mutiny. After this the Lord confirmed again the Priesthood to Aaron and his Family, by the Miracle of the Rod that budded and flourished, as may [Numb. xvii.] be farther seen in the Article of AARON.

From the Encampment call'd the Graves of Lust, the People went to Hazeroth, and thence to Kadesh-barnea, where they continued [Numb. xxxii. 7, 9. xiii. 1, 2. Deut. i. 22, 23.] a good while. Then by the Order of God, and for the Satisfaction of the People, Moses sent twelve chosen Men to take a View of the Land of Canaan. These Messengers or Spies were forty Days upon their Search, and at their Return they brought back some of the Fruits of the Country, which were of an extraordinary Largeness and Fairness; among other Things they brought a Bunch of Grapes, so large as to be carry'd between two of them. Being come into the Camp, they very much commended the Land for its Beauty and Fertility, but added withal, that the Inhabitants were of a gigantic Stature, and had many strong and populous Cities; so that there were but little Hopes that this Country could be conquer'd by them. This Report put all the Camp into a Mutiny. Joshua and Caleb, who were two of the Spies, strove in vain to appease the Multitude. Nothing would satisfy them, but they would presently return into Egypt. Then the Lord in his Anger threatned to destroy all the People, but Moses interposed by his Prayers. However Sentence was pass'd against these Murmurers, that from the Age of twenty Years and upwards they should all die in the Desart. The ten Spies, who were at the Head of the Faction, were punish'd by a sudden Death. Only Joshua and Caleb were preserved, and God declared that they alone of the whole Multitude should enter into the Land of Promise.

But for all this the People being resolute, against the positive Orders of Moses would needs force the Passages, to take Possession of the Land of Canaan; but they were repuls'd [Num. xiv. 40,—45. Deut. i. 40,—45.] by the Amalekites and Canaanites with considerable Loss. When they had continued for a good while at Kadesh, they decamped from thence, and turned back towards the Red-Sea, to Ezion-gaber. Moses reckons these eighteen Encampments between Kadesh and Ezion-gaber. 1. [Numb. xx. 18, 19, &c.] Rithmah. 2. Rimmon-parez. 3. Libnah. 4. Rissah. 5. Kehelathah. 6. Mount Shapher. 7. Haradah. 8. Makheloth. 9. Tahath. 10. Tarah. 11. Mithcah. 12. Hathmonah. 13. Moseroth. 14. Benejaakan. 15. Horhagidgad. 16. Jotbathah. 17. Ebronah. 18. Ezion-gaber. Each of these Encampments may be seen under their proper Articles. From Ezion-gaber they returned to Kadesh, perhaps by the same Way. They were thirty eight Years performing this Journey. Being come to Kadesh, Miriam the Sister of Moses died there[22]. In this Encampment the People murmur'd for want of Water, which Moses and Aaron supplied them with, by causing it to gush out of a Rock. But as they shew'd some Distrust in the Lord, he condemned them to die in the Wilderness, without the Satisfaction of coming into the Land of Promise. This made them give this Encampment the Name of Meribah, or the Waters of Contradiction.

Then Moses sent Ambassadors to the [Numb. xxv. 4, 5, 6. Numb. xx. 14, &c. Deut. ii. 4, 5, 6, &c. Judg. xi. 17, &c.] Kings of Edom and Moab, to obtain leave for a free Passage for his People through their Dominions; which they not only refused, but threatned to hinder them by [Numb. xxxiii. 41. Num. xxi. 21,—31. Deut. ii. 24,—36, &c.] Force of Arms if they should attempt it. This obliged the Israelites to take a Circuit in the Wilderness, that they might avoid the Territories of these People, whom the Lord would not suffer them to injure. They went then to Mount Hor, where Aaron died at the Age of one hundred and twenty three[23]. From hence they went to Zalmonah, where it is thought that Moses erected the brazen Serpent, to heal those that had been bit by the winged Serpents, which came to assault them in their Camp. Numb. xxi. 6. See SERPENT. From Zalmonah they went to Punon, thence to Oboth, thence to Ijeabarim; then to the Valley of Zared, thence to the Hills of the Brook Arnon, to Mattanah, to Nahaliel, to Bamoth, to Dibongad, to Almondiblathaim, to Mount Pisgah in the Desart of Kedemoth. From hence they dispatch'd Ambassadors to Sihon

King of the Amorites, to demand a Passage through his Country, which being refused, Moses gave him Battle, overcame him, and took Possession of all his Territories. Sometime afterwards Og King of Bashan marched against Moses, and fought with him; but Moses conquer'd him, and made himself Master of all his Country.

[Deut. iii. 1,—11. Num. xxi. 33,34,35. Numb. xxxiii. 48, 49.] After this Moses came and encamped in the Plains of Moab, at Shittim, where the Israelites continued 'till they left it to pass over Jordan, under the Conduct of Joshua. While they abode in this Encampment, Balak King of Moab sent to invite Balaam the Socerer or Wizard, to come and curse the Israelites. But the Sorcerer, contrary to his Expectation, having rather bless'd than curs'd them, he took up another Resolution, which was much more pernicious. He sent the Daughters of Moab into the Camp, to tempt the Israelites to Idolatry and Fornication. This wicked Counsel had the desired Effect; but Moses soon put a Stop to the Progress of it, by putting to Death all those that had given themselves to the Worship of [1 Cor. x. 8.] Baal-peor. And the Lord cut off that Day to the Number of three and twenty Thousand, besides a Thousand others that were executed by the Sentence of the Judges. 'Twas upon this Occasion that Phinehas Son of Eleazar the High-Priest signalized his Zeal for the Lord, as may be seen under his Article.

After this the Lord commanded Moses to make War against the Midianites, who had sent their Daughters, along with those of Moab to debauch the Israelites. Phinehas was appointed Captain of this Expedition, for which Purpose Moses gave him twelve thousand chosen Men. He routed the Midianites, kill'd all the Males that he found in their Country, put five of their Princes to Death, with the wicked Wizard Balaam, who was the first Occasion of all the [Numb. xxxi. 8.] Misfortune. See BALAAM. The Tribes of Reuben, Gad, and the half Tribe of Manasseh having asked of Moses for their Inheritance the Country that they had conquer'd from the Amorites, Moses gave his Consent, [Numb. xxxii. Deut. iii. 12. xxxi. 1—8.] but upon Condition that they would go along with their Brethren over Jordan, to assist them in the Conquest of the Country possess'd by the Canaanites.

The first Day of the eleventh Month of the fortieth Year after the coming out of Egypt, Moses being in the Fields of Moab, and knowing that he was not to pass over Jordan, and that his last Hour was not far off; he made a long Discourse to the People, which is a sort of Recapitulation of all he had done, and of all that had happen'd from the coming forth out of Egypt. He there repeated certain Laws, renewed with the Elders of Israel, the Covenant they had made with the Lord, set before them the Happiness that would attend their Constancy and Fidelity, and the Calamities with which they would be visited, if they should be found to prevaricate; put into the Hands of the Priests and Elders a Copy of the Law, with an Injunction to have it read solemnly every seventh Year in a general Assembly of the Nation. Lastly, he composed an excellent Canticle or Poem, which is a kind of Prophecy of what was after to happen to Israel. He there exclaims against their future [Deut. xxxii.] Infidelities, and threatens them with all the Evils that in after Ages came upon them. Lastly, a little before his Death he gives to [Deut. xxxiii.] each of the Tribes a particular Blessing, in which he mingles several Prophecies and Predictions. The Tribe of Simeon is there not mentioned, for Reasons that to us are unknown.

Lastly, the Lord commanded Moses, at the beginning of the twelfth Month, to ascend [Deut. xxxiv. 1, 2, 3.] up to Mount Nebo, where he gave him a View of the whole Country, both on this Side and beyond Jordan; saying to him, This is the Land which I sware unto Abraham, and unto Isaac, and unto Jacob, saying, I will give it unto thy Seed, I have caused thee to see it with thine Eyes, but thou shalt not go over thither. So Moses the Servant of the Lord died there in the Land of Moab, according to the Word of the Lord. And he buried him in a Valley in the Land of Moab, over against Beth-peor; but no Man knoweth of his Sepulchre, unto this Day. And Moses was an hundred and twenty Years old when he died: His Eye was not dim, nor his natural Force abated. And the Children of Israel wept for Moses in the Plain of Moab thirty Days. This is what the Scripture informs us, concerning the Death of Moses: To which it is added, There arose not a Prophet since like unto Moses, whom the Lord knew Face to Face: In all the Signs and the Wonders which the Lord sent him to do in the Land of Egypt, to Pharaoh, and to all his Servants, and to all his Land: And in all that mighty Hand, and in all the great Terror which Moses shew'd in the Sight of all Israel.

[Ecclus. xlv. 1, 2, 3, &c.] The whole Scripture is full of the Praises of this great Man, and see here how Jesus Son of Sirach, Author of Ecclesiasticus, speaks of him. " Moses was beloved of God and Men, and his Memorial is blessed. The Lord gave him "a Glory equal to that of the Saints; he "made him great and terrible to his Enemies, and he made the Wonders to cease "by his Words, (when in Egypt he held " the Arm of God, as we may say, and "stopp'd the Course of the ten Plagues, " as he judg'd convenient,) God exalted " him in Honour before Kings, he prescribed him Ordinances before his People, and has made him see his Glory. " He has given him the Gifts of Faith and " Meekness, and has chosen him from among Men. God has heard him, and " has caused him to enter into the Cloud; " he has given him his Commandments " before all his People, and the Law of Life " and Knowledge, to teach his Covenant " to Jacob, and his Ordinances to Israel.

Moses is the most antient Writer, of whom there remains any authentic Works. He has left us the Pentateuch, that is to say, the five first Books of the Old Testament, which are Genesis, Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers and Deuteronomy, of each of which we have spoken under their several Titles. Probably these Books were not separate Works at the beginning as we find them now. Moses compos'd but one single Work, of which the Law was as it were the Body, and Genesis was the Preface. Afterwards they were divided for the greater Convenience in Reading. These Books are acknowledg'd as authentic and inspired, by the general Consent both of Jews and Christians of all Persuasions. Some Difficulties have been started about the Author of these Books, because some Passages have been observed therein, that seem not to agree to Moses. And indeed it must be own'd, that some small Additions have been made. But these Additions make no Alteration in the Sense, they are only put there by Way of Illustration; so that it would carry the Matter too far, to conclude[24] from hence that Moses was not the Author of them.

Besides the Pentateuch, the Jews also ascribe to Moses these eleven Psalms following. 1. Ps. XC. Domine refugium factus es nobis, &c. 2. XCI. Qui habitat in adjutorio altissimi, &c. 3. XCII. Bonum est confiteri Domino, &c. 4. XCIII. Dominus regnavit, &c. 5. XCIV. Deus ultionum, &c. 6. XCV. Venite exultemus Domino, &c. 7. XCVI. Cantate Domino canticum novum, &c. 8. XCVII. Dominus regnavit, &c. 9. XCVIII. Cantate Domino canticum novum, &c. 10. XCIX. Dominus regnavit, &c. 11. C. Jubilate Deo omnis terra, &c.

But there is no sufficient Proof that these Psalms had Moses for their Author. For the Proof taken from the Title of the ninetieth Psalm, which is, a Prayer of Moses the Man of God, which they pretend must be applied also to the ten following Psalms, is not sufficient to ascertain them to this Lawgiver. 'Tis well known that the greatest part of the Titles of the Psalms are not original, nor indeed very antient; and that some of them are wrong placed. Besides in these Psalms we find the Names of Persons, and other Marks, that by no Means can agree with Moses. We are of the Opinion of some learned Interpreters, that the Name of Moses only insinuates, that the Psalms might be composed by some Levites who lineally descended from Moses; or that having been written by some Prophet, they were appointed to be sung by the Choir of Musicians of the Race of Moses. See our Dissertation upon the 90 Psalm.

Some Antients thought[25] that Moses was the Author of the Book of Job. Origen[26] pretends, that he did but barely translate it out of Syriack into Hebrew. But this Opinion is rejected both by Jews and Christians; and if this Book had truly belong'd to Moses, would the Jews have separated it from the Pentateuch? There is also quoted an Apocalypse or Revelation of Moses, a lesser Genesis, the Ascension of Moses, the Assumption of Moses, the Testament of Moses, the mysterious Books of Moses. These are cited by some antient Writers, and Passages are found quoted from hence in their Works. 'Tis thought that from the Apocalypse of Moses St. Paul quoted these Words, Gal. v. 6. For in Jesus Christ, neither Circumcision availeth any thing, nor Uncircumcision, but Faith which worketh by Love. And. vi. 15. For in Christ Jesus, neither Circumcision availeth any Thing, nor Uncircumcision, but a new Creature. 'Tis imagin'd also, that what is said in the Epistle of St. Jude, □ 9. concerning the Contention of Michael the Archangel with the Devil, about the Body of Moses, is taken from the Assumption of Moses. The Reader may peruse the Collection of M. Fabricius, concerning the Apocryphal Books of the Old Testament.

As to the Death and Burial of Moses, [Deut. ult. 5, 6.] many Difficulties have been raised. The Scripture tells us expressly, that Moses died, according to the Word of the Lord. But as the Hebrew Words literally import upon the Mouth of the Lord, the Rabbins have imagin'd, that the Lord took away his Soul by a Kiss that he gave him. This Opinion may be seen discuss'd at length in the Books publish'd by M. Gaulmin in Hebrew and in Latin, under the Title Petirath Mose. Others have maintain'd that he did not die, and others have not denied his Death, but however have pretended that he was transported into Heaven[27]. Our Masters have assured us, says Maimonides, that our Master Moses is not dead, but ascended into Heaven, where he serves God to all Eternity. Josephus says[28] that he disappear'd; but that it was he himself that gave an Account of his own Death, for Fear that the Jews astonish'd at his exalted Virtue, should imagine that he had made Approaches to the Deity itself. And since no Body could tell where his Place of Burial was, and since he appear'd with Elias in the Transfiguration of Jesus Christ; and lastly since St. Jude says, that there was a Dispute between Michael and the Devil about his Body, it has been concluded that he did not really die, but that he ascended Body and Soul into Heaven. For farther Satisfaction about the Death of Moses, the Reader may have Recourse to the Dissertation we have prefix'd before our last Tome upon the New Testament. And as to his Tomb, which was pretended to be found in the Year 1655, the same Dissertation may be consulted, p. LXXX, LXXXI. and Hornius's Ecclesiastical History, N°. 74. and M. Basnages Continuation of Josephus, Tom. IV. L. vi. c. 17. Art. 13. Edit. Par. and lastly, Bartolucci's Bibliotb. Rabbin. T. 3. p. 513 and 928.

The Rabbins[29] in the Account they give us of the Life of Moses, do not content themselves with the Miracles that the Scripture relates of him, but very much improve upon them. They say, for Example, that he was born circumcised; that the Daughter of Pharaoh, who found him upon the Banks of the Nile, was leprous, and that as soon as she touch'd the Ark in which the Infant lay, she was immediately cured of her Leprosy. Bathia, for so they call this Princess, having brought Moses to Pharaoh, at the Age of three Years, Moses took his Crown, and put it upon his own Head. Balaam, the famous Wizard mention'd in Scripture, being then at Pharaoh's Court, advised him to put the Child to Death. But Pharaoh's Magicians desiring to try if Moses had done this out of Knowledge and Design, or by mere Chance, put Diamonds and Coals of Fire before him. Moses was reaching out his Hand to the Diamonds, but the Angel Gabriel pull'd it back, and put it to the Coals of Fire. He put them upon his Tongue, and burn'd himself, which made him hesitate in his Speech for ever after. This Action was the saving of his Life: When it was known to Pharaoh that he had kill'd an Egyptian, he condemned him to lose his Head; but God permitted that his Neck should become as hard as a Pillar of Marble, and the Rebound of the Sword kill'd the Executioner. Moses fled away, and no Body could stop him; for Pharaoh became dumb that Minute, and all the rest either deaf, dumb, or blind.

Moses withdrew to Korkon King of Ethiopia, who was then in Armenia. Balaam being also then in Ethiopia, excited the People to an Insurrection against their Prince; but Moses stood up in the Defence of Korkon. He put himself at the Head of the Army, and besieged Balaam in the Capital City of Ethiopia. To make the Approach to the City more difficult, he brought an infinite Multitude of Serpents round about. But Moses charm'd the Serpents, and made himself Master of the Town. He married the Queen, then Widow to the King, who died during the War, and reigned forty Years over Ethiopia: The Queen complain'd that Moses did not use her as his Wife; at which the People mutined, and Moses was constrain'd to retire to Jethro, where he found a famous Rod or Twig, that God had at first created for Adam. It pass'd afterwards to Abraham, then to the Kings of Egypt, from whom Jethro took it, when he left that Court. He planted it in his Garden, and promised his Daughter to any one that would pluck it up. The Name of God was engraven upon this Twig, which was the Cause of its being so miraculous. He married Zipporah, who soon brought him a Son. But Jethro having covenanted that his first-born Son should not be circumcised, God immediately sent two Angels, who so far swallow'd up Moses, as that there only remain'd his Feet. But no sooner had Zipporah circumcised her Son, than that Moses was deliver'd from this Danger. The Jews relate a thousand Miracles about the Manner of Moses's receiving the Law. According to them it is not enough to say, that Moses ascended into Mount Sinai; they will have it that he ascended into Heaven; that being come to the Top of Sinai, a Cloud took him up, and carry'd him into Heaven. Upon his Way he met the Angel Remuel, chief of twelve thousand Angels, who was desirous to accompany him. But pronouncing the Name of God, compos'd of twelve Letters, he made him fly away to the Distance of twelve thousand Furlongs. Pursuing his Way, he found the Angel Adarniel, who put him into a great Fright. For this Angiel had a terrible Voice, which he caused to be heard in the two hundred thousand Spheres encompass'd with a white Fire. Moses being dismay'd would have fled away, but the Lord encourag'd him; and pronouncing the Name of God compos'd of seventy two Letters, he terrified the Angel in his Turn, who fled away crying out as he went, Happy art thou Moses, who knowest that of which the Angels are ignorant. They believe the Tables were of Sapphire, on which the Law was written; and that Moses was made rich by the Fragments only, that were taken from these Tables when they were polished, Exod. xxxiv. 1. They say moreover, that Moses put to Death the Accomplices of Korah, by putting a deadly Poison into their Censers, the Fume of which killed them. We have spoken of his Death before, and of the Fables that the Rabbins relate about it. The Petirath Mose of M. Gaulmin may be seen on this Head, and Sixtus Sinensis, Tom ii. l. v. Annot. 59, 61. and l. vi. Annot. 91.

Those that have compared the History of Moses with what is contained in the fabulous Histories of Bacchus, Mercury, and Musæus, have found a great many Resemblances, which make them of Opinion, that the Pagans had some Knowledge of the holy History, and that they had done Honour to their Deities, by ascribing to them such Things as belonged to Moses. M. Huet may be consulted in this Matter, in his Bibliotheca Evangelica.

The History of Moses was so famous for many Ages, in almost all the Countreys of the World, that it is no Wonder that Writers of different Nations have each represented it after his own Manner. The Orientals, the ancient Grecians, the Egyptians, the Chaldeans, the Romans, have all made made Additions to his History. Some of 'em have improved upon the Miracles that the Scripture relates concerning his Life; others have disguised his Story, by adding to it not only false, but mean and trifling Circumstances. This is in short what the Orientals have said about him[30]. Moses was born five hundred and six Years after the Flood, and lost his Father at a Month old. Valid King of Egypt, who then reigned, had married Assiah, the Niece of Amram Father to Moses, and Cousin-german to this Law-giver. This Alliance, though it procured Amram great Credit at Court, yet it could not remove the Uneasiness of Nagiah the Mother of Moses, who dreaded that Hatred that Pharaoh Valid had conceived against the Hebrews. She exposed her Son upon the Nile, in a little Box, which was brought by the Stream to the Foot of the King's Palace, where the Child was taken up, nursed, and educated at Court.

Here he lived till the Age of forty one Years, when he killed an Egyptian, and was forced to retire into the Country of Midian, where he married Zipporah, Daughter of Shobab or Jethro. At the End of some Years he took a Resolution to return into Egypt. At the River Aimon he found in his Way the Garment and Staff of a Prophet. No sooner had he put on the Garment, and took up the Wand, but his Hand became white and glistering like a Star. God then appeared to him, and gave him Orders to bring the Hebrews out of Egypt. The Arabians alluding to this, when they would intimate that a Man performs Miracles, or when a Physician, for Example, performs wonderful Cures, they say he has a Hand as white as Moses, or the Breath of the Messiah.

Moses appeared before Pharaoh, and told him the Commands he had received from God concerning the Israelites. The King required Miracles from him; for, says he, those are the proper Credentials of a Prophet. Moses then threw his Staff upon the Ground, which was immediately changed into a monstrous Dragon, which opening his Mouth, and fixing its Eyes earnestly upon the King, put him into a terrible Fright, and made him run away. He desired Moses to take away this Serpent: He took hold of it, and it returned to the Figure of a Staff again. Afterwards Pharaoh required other Miracles from him. Moses then shewed him his Hand, which was brown as the rest of his Body; but he had no sooner put it under his Arm, but he brought it out again as white as Snow, and as bright as a Star. The Orientals add many Particulars to what the Scripture tells us of the Magicians of Pharaoh, which may be seen under the Articles JANNES and JAMBRES.

The Greek and Latin Authors have proceeded in a Manner just contrary to this. As the Jews and Orientals generally have enlarged the Number of Moses's Miracles, and magnified his Exploits, so the others have extenuated them, or made them doubtful by a Mixture of Fable. Manetho says P, for Example, that Moses was a Priest of Heliopolis, called Osarsiph, who being at the Head of a Company of Lepers, and other diseased Persons, whom King Amenophis had a Mind to drive out of his Kingdom, he revolted against the King, and fortified himself with his People in the City of Avaris, or Typhon. This new Commander made a Beginning by making his Followers swear Obedience to him; then he gave them Laws, which consisted chiefly of such Points as these; that they should not worship the Gods, that they should not refrain from eating such Things as passed for sacred in Egypt, and that they should not make any Alliance with any other People, but only with such as would espouse their Cause. After this Osarsiph changed his Name for that of Moses.

He sent Ambassadors to the Shepherds whom King Themutis had drove out of Egypt, and who were withdrawn to Jerusalem, to persuade them to enter into Confederacy with them, and to join their Forces together against King Amenophis. The Shepherds were very well pleased at this Invitation, and with great Diligence repaired to the City Avaris, to the Number of two hundred Thousand Men. King Amenophis got together an Army of three hundred Thousand Men, but instead of fighting with the Rebels, he retired into Ethiopia, where he found a Protection, the King of that Country being in Alliance with him. The Rebels having no longer any Thing to fear, dispersed themselves all over Egypt, and there committed a Thousand Outrages, not only against the Men, but also against the sacred Animals, killing, burning, and destroying where-ever they came. At the End of thirteen Years, King Amenophis joining his Troops with those of the King of Ethiopia, he poured at once upon the Rebels, and drove them as far as to the Frontiers of Syria. Thus was the Story of Moses related by Manetho.

[Just. l. xxxvi.] Justin was no better informed. He tells us that when Joseph was sold by his Brethren, and carried into Egypt, he there soon insinuated himself into the King's Favour, by Means of the magick Art, in which he was very expert. Besides which he had the Knack of interpreting Dreams, and had it not been for him, all Egypt had died for Hunger. For he foretold a great Famine that happened, the Distress of which was prevented, by hoarding up all the Corn of Egypt for several Years, by his Advice. Moses was his Son, and Inheriter of all his Secrets. But besides his Knowledge, he was valued likewise for the extraordinary Beauty of his Person. But the Egyptians being much vexed with Leprosies, and fearing this Evil might be farther communicated, they consulted the Gods about it, who commanded that all those should be driven out of the Country who were infected with this Distemper; Moses therefore was driven out, and all the other Lepers. At going away, they stole the Gods of the Egyptians; who being desirous to recover them again, pursued the Lepers with Weapons in their Hands. But they were soon obliged by Tempests to return home again.

Moses therefore being at the Head of the Exiles, conducted them to the Country of Damascus, which was the Country of their Ancestors Abraham and Israel. They made themselves Masters of Mount Sinai, after seven Days marching and fasting. In Memory of this seventh Day they observed the Sabbath, and dedicated it to Fasting. And fearing lest the Leprosy, which still infested them, should make them odious to the neighbouring People, they resolved to have no Correspondence with any other Nation, which by Degrees became a Principle of their Religion. After Moses his Son Arrat, who was Priest of the Egyptian Gods, was created King of the Jews; from which Time the Royalty and the Priesthood have always been united in the same Person. This is what was related of Moses by Trogus, whose History Justin has abridged; in which there are almost as many Errors as Words. Under the Word JEWS may be seen some other Passages of the Ancients, who speak of Moses, and the Origin of the Hebrews.

Mother

MOTHER. This Word is sometimes used for a Metropolis, the capital City of a [2 Sam. xx. 19.] Country, or of a Tribe; and sometimes for a whole People. The Synagogue is the Mother of the Jews, as the Church is of the Christians. Isaiah says, l. 1. Where is the Bill of your Mother's Divorcement whom I have put away? That is, of the Synagogue. And St. Paul says, Galat. iv. 26. But Jerusalem which is above, is free, which is the Mother of us all. The great Babylon, the Heathen City of Rome, is called in the Revelations, the Mother of Harlots and Abominations of the Earth, that is, of Idolatry.

A Mother in Israel signifies a brave Woman, of whom God makes use to deliver his People. This Name the Scripture gives [Judg. v. 7.] to Deborah. Wisdom calls her Mater pulchræ dilectionis, the Mother of chaste Love. The Earth, to which at our Death we must all return, is called the Mother of all Men: Mater omnium. To the Day that [Ecclus. xl. 1.] they return to the Mother of all Things. Before a Child is able to call his Father or [Isai. viii. 4. 1 Sal. xxii. 10.] his Mother, before he can speak. Thou art my God from my Mother's Belly. I was thine before I was born.

Mountains

MOUNTAINS. Judæa was a mountainous Country, but the very Mountains were generally beautiful, fruitful, and well -cultivated. They bore Fruits, Olives, Vines, [Deut. xxxii. 13.] Pasturage. Moses says, that the Rocks of its Mountains produce Oil and Honey, by a Figure of Speech, which elegantly [Deut. viii. 7, 9.] shews their Fertility. He says elsewhere, that the Mountains of Palestine are the Heads of excellent Fountains, and that in their Bowels are Iron and Brass. And indeed we are informed by History, that heretofore there were very good Mines in Palestine and Mount Libanus. Aristeas in the History of the seventy Interpreters assures us, that these Mines were in Being down to the Empire of the Persians, and that then the Governors of this Province acquainting the King, that the Charges of working the Mines exceeded the Profit, they were left off. Moses desires earnestly of the Lord, that he might see these fine Mountains of Judæa and Libanus. Deut. iii. 25. Videbo montem istum egregium, & Libanum.

Here are the Names of the chief Mountains mentioned in Scripture, of each of which we say something in particular, under their respective Heads.

Mount Carmel near the Mediterranean Sea, between Dora and Ptolemais, Josh. xix. 26.

There are many other Mountains, which are famous only for having Cities on their Tops; as Hebron, Samaria, Nazareth, Gibeon, Shophim, Shilo, &c.

The Mountains of Judah are chiefly to the South of the Country belonging to this Tribe, inclining towards Idumæa.

The Mountains of Ephraim are spread through the whole Extent of this Tribe, except what is situated upon Jordan to the East, and upon the Mediterranean Sea to the West.

The Mountains of Gilead stretch out North and South, from Libanus, or Mount Hermon, as far as the Mountains of Seir, or of Idumæa.

The Mountains Abarim, Pisgah, and Nebo, make but one Chain of Mountains, stretching from East to West, from the Mountains of Gilead or Seir, far into the Plains of Moab, to the East of Jordan.

In the Article of Jerusalem may be seen what Mountains were in or near this City. The Hebrews frequently give to the [Gen. xlix. 26. Deut. xxxiii. 15.] Mountains the Epithet of Eternal, because they are as old as the World it self.

Some Philosophers have doubted, whether before the Deluge there were any Mountains in the World. They pretend that Mountains were first produced by the sinking and tumbling of Earth, caused by the Openings made by the Waters under the Earth in several Places, to overflow the Globe of the Earth. Then the Surface of the Earth being unequally raised and sunk by the Shocks and Motions that the Waters caused, Mountains and Vales must of Necessity be produced. This is the System proposed by the Author of Telluris Theoria Sacra: The Reader may consult what we have said before, upon the Article DELUGE.

Mourning

MOURNING. The Hebrews, at the Death of their near Friends and Relations, gave all possible Demonstrations of Grief and Mourning. They wept, tore their Cloaths, smote their Breasts, fasted and lay upon the Ground, went barefoot, pulled off their Hair and Beards, or at least cut them, and made Incisions upon their Breasts, or tore them [Levit. xix. 28. xxi. 5. Jerem. xvi. 6.] with their Nails. The Time of Mourning was commonly seven Days; but sometimes this was lengthened or shortened, according to the State or Circumstances in which they found themselves. Jesus the Son of Sirach says, the Days of Mourning are seven; and [Ecclus. xxviii. 16, 17. 1 Sam. xxxi. 13. Judith xvi. 24. Numb. xx. 3. Deut. xxxiv. 8.] elsewhere, My Son, let Tears fall down over the Dead, and begin to lament, as if thou hadst suffered great Harm thy self; and then cover his Body according to the Custom, and neglect not his Burial. Weep bitterly, and make great Moan, and use Lamentation as he is worthy, and that a Day or two, lest thou be Evil spoken of; and then comfort thy self for thy Heaviness. The Rabbins also admit of several Degrees in their Grief and Mourning. For the three first Days it was allowed to give up themselves to Tears, and to the most sensible Grief. The seven Days following their Trouble was more moderate. But if the Time of Mourning was extended to a whole Month, it was to be managed with a great deal of Moderation. The Mournings for Saul, Judith, and Herod the great[1], lasted but seven Days. Those for Moses and Aaron were prolonged to thirty Days. Josephus says[2], that a thirty Days Mourning ought to be sufficient for any wise Man, in the Loss of his nearest Relation, or his dearest Friend.

For the whole Time of their Mourning the near Relations of the deceased, as Father, Mother, Husband, Brother, Sister, Children, continued sitting in their Houses, and eat upon the Ground. The Food they took was thought unclean, and even themselves were judged impure; at least it was so before the Destruction of the Temple by the Romans. Their Sacrifices shall be unto them as the Bread of Mourners; [Hos. ix. 4. Ezek. xxiv. 17.] all that eat thereof shall be polluted, says Hosea. Their Faces were covered, and for all that Time they could not apply themselves to any Labour, nor read the Book of the Law, nor say their usual Prayers. They did not dress themselves, nor make their Beds, nor uncovered their Heads, nor shaved themselves, nor cut their Nails, nor went into the Bath, nor saluted any Body. [Prov. xxxi. 6, 7.] No Body spoke to them unless they spoke first. Their Friends commonly went to visit and comfort them, bringing them something to eat, according to that of the Proverbs: Give strong Drink unto him that is ready to perish, and Wine to those that be of heavy Hearts. Let him drink and forget his Poverty, (or Affliction) and remember his Misery no more.

Leo of Modena says[3], that after they come back from the Funeral, the Relations of the deceased sit down upon the Ground, and after they have taken off their Shoes, they have Bread, Wine, and hard Eggs set before them. In some Places they make a great Entertainment for the Relations, and those that assisted at the Funeral. Josephus says[4], that after Archelaus had kept a Mourning of seven Days, for his Father Herod the Great, he made a magnificent Treat for the People; and that it was a Custom among the Jews upon these Occasions, to make great Feasts for the Relations; which was very inconvenient to many Persons, who could not well bear that Expence. Antiently they set Bread and Meat at the Tombs of the Dead, that the Poor might have the Benefit of it, and might pray for the Repose of the deceased Person. The Reader may see our Dissertation upon the Funerals of the Hebrews, before our Commentary upon Numbers.

[Isai. xv. 3. Isai. xxii. 1.] Antiently in Times of publick Mourning, the Hebrews went up to the Roof, or upon the Platforms of their Houses, there to bewail their Misfortune. Through all the Cities of Moab, says Isaiah, They shall gird themselves with Sack-cloth; on the Tops of their Houses, and in their Streets, every one shall howl, weeping abundantly. And elsewhere, speaking to Jerusalem, he says; What aileth thee now, that thou art wholly gone up to the House-tops?

They hired Women to weep and mourn, and Players upon Instruments, as well at the Funerals of the Hebrews, as anciently among the Romans. But this Custom is not to be observed in the East, till after the Romans got footing there. They introduced also this Custom there. Persons in Years were carried to their Graves by Sound of Trumpet, as Servius says, and younger People by the Sound of the Flute. In St. [Matth. ix. 23.] Matthew we may observe a Company of Players upon the Flute, invited to the Funeral of a young Girl of twelve Years of Age. Among the Romans the Kings had fixed the Number of Players upon the Flute at Funerals; it was not allowed to have more than ten. The Rabbins have determined among the Hebrews, that a Husband could not have fewer than two at the Burial of his Wife[5], without reckoning the two He-mourners and the She-mourner that were hired, who were always to be there. If a Woman of Condition should marry a Man of inferior Quality, he was not to bury her according to his Condition, but according to hers. For according to the Rabbins[6], the Wife ascends with her Husband, but she descends not with him, even at her Death.

[Rom. xii. 15. Luke vii. 32. Matth. xi. 17.] All those that meet a Funeral Procession, or a Company of Mourners, out of Civility were to join them, and to mingle their Tears with those that wept[7]. St. Paul seems to allude to this Custom, when he says; Rejoice with them that do rejoice, and weep with them that weep. And our Saviour in the Gospel; The Men of this Generation are like unto Children sitting in the Market-place, and calling one to another, and saying, We have piped unto you, and ye have not danced; we have mourned to you, and ye have not wept. When Jesus Christ was led away to his Crucifixion, the Women of Jerusalem followed him, and made great [Luke xxiii. 27.] Lamentations: When the Daughter of Jephthah was devoted by her Father to be sacrificed, she went with her Companions upon the Mountains, to make her Lamentations for her own Death, and for being obliged to leave the World before she was [Judg. xi. 38.] married. A Custom which was afterwards observed in the Country, where the young Women used to go upon the Mountains, to bewail the Virginity of Jephtha's Daughter. In Palestine and in Syria, the Women go out also into the burying Places at certain Times, there to mourn for the Death of their near Relations.

The Habit or Suit of Mourning among the Hebrews is not fixed either by the Law or by Custom. We only find in Scripture, that in these Circumstances they used to tear their Garments. A Custom that is still observed to this Day, but they only tear a small Part of it, and that only for Form's Sake. We see also that in Times of Mourning they cloathed themselves in Sack-cloth, or Hair-cloth, that is, in coarse or ill made Clothes, of brown or black Stuff[8]. At this Day, that they may not become ridiculous, they wear Mourning after the Fashion of the Countries they [Levit. xi. 29.] live in, without being constrained to it by any Law.

Mouse

MOUSE, or Rat. In Greek and Latin, Mus, in Hebrew Gnachbar, or Acbar[1]. This little Animal is known by every Body. Moses has declared it to be unclean, which insinuates that it was eaten sometimes. And in Truth 'tis affirmed, that the Jews were so oppressed with Famine during the Siege of Jerusalem by the Romans, that they were compelled to eat Dogs, Mice, and Rats[2]. And Isaiah reproaches the Jews with eating [Isai. lxvi. 17.] the Flesh of Mice, and other Things that were impure and abominable. The Rabbins[3] say, that one of the Reasons why the Law has forbid the eating of Mice, is, because their Flesh causes the Loss of Memory. And hence it comes to pass, as they say, that Cats have no Memory. Herodotus a imputes the Ruine of the Army of Sennacharib to Mice. These Creatures, he says, having gnawed the Leather of their Bucklers one Night, and the Strings of their Bows, Sennacharib was obliged to retire. 'Tis known what Spoil was made by Mice in the Fields of the Philistines, after this People had brought into their Countrey the Ark of the [1 Sam. v. 6, 7, &c.] Lord; and the Resolution that was then taken by the Lords of the Philistines, to send back the Ark with Mice and Emerods of Gold, as an Attonement for the Irreverence they had committed, and to avert from their Land the Vengeance that pursued them. The Assyrians that besieged Bethulia, when they saw the Hebrews come out of the City in Order of Battle, compared them to Mice, saying, See the Mice are coming forth out of their Holes, Judith xiv. 12. Vulgat.

Mouth

MOUTH. We have observed upon the Verb to adore, that to kiss ones Hand, and to put it to ones Mouth, was a Mark of Adoration. The Hebrews, by Way of Pleonasm, often are used to say; he opened his Mouth, and spoke, sung, cursed, &c. They say also, that God opens the Mouth of the Prophets, that he puts Words into their Mouth, that he bids them speak and say what he inspires to them. To inquire of the Mouth of the Lord, [Josh. ix. 14. Exod. iv. 15.] is to consult him. God says, that he will be the Mouth of Moses and of Aaron. We will call the Damsel, and enquire at her Mouth; let us know what Rebecca thinks of the [Gen. xxiv. 57. 2 Sam. xvii.] Matter. Let us hear what is in the Mouth of Achitophel; let us consult him about this Affair.

To open the Mouth, is often used by Way of Emphasis, instead of speaking aloud, boldly, and freely, 1 Sam. ii. 1. Dilatum est os meum super inimicos meos, says Hannah [Psal. cvi. 42. Psal. lxxiii. 9.] the Mother of Samuel. Ezek. xxiv. 27. In die illa aperietur os tuum, loqueris, & non silebis And Isaiah lvii. 4. Super quem dilatasti os. And in a contrary Sense, to shut the Mouth, to impose Silence, is a Mark of Humiliation and Affliction. Omnis iniquitas oppilabit os suum. And Psal. xxxvii. 14. Factus sum sicut mutus, non aperiens os suum, & non habens in ore suo redargutiones. To set their Mouth against the Heavens, is when they speak arrogantly, insolently, and without the Fear of God.

[Exod. xiii. 9.] God appoints, that his Law may be always in the Mouth of his People, that the Israelites may commune frequently with one another about it. He forbids them so much as to pronounce the Name of strange Gods; [Exod. xxiii. 13. Gen. iv. 11.] neque audietur ex ore vestro. God says, that the Earth opened her Mouth, to receive the Blood of Abel. The Hebrews generally say; to cause to pass by the Mouth of the Sword, whereas we say, the Edge of the Sword. To speak Mouth to Mouth, is an usual Way of speaking among the Hebrews, which we [Numb. xii. 8. Heb. Numb. xxii. 28. Judg. xviii. 19. Wisd. viii. 12. Isai. lii. 15. Esdr. ix. 12. Esth. xiii. 17. xiv. 9. Dan. iii. 51. Judith. xiii. 25. Eccles. viii. 2. 1 Sam. xv. 24.] render by Face to Face. Moses tells us, that God opened the Mouth of Balaam's Ass, that is, he made him speak to his Master. To lay one's Hand upon one's Mouth, signifies to keep Silence out of Respect, Admiration, or Fear. To fill from one Mouth to the other, from one Extremity to the other; as a Sack that is full from the Bottom to the Top. Shut not up the Mouths of those that praise thee; let them not be oppressed, or prevented from publishing thy Praise. The Scripture often says, that God does what he barely permits, or even what he foretels shall be done. With one Mouth, is with one common Consent. To observe the Mouth of the King, is to hear his Words with Attention. To walk by the Mouth of any one, is to be obedient to his Orders. To transgress against the Mouth of the Lord, is to disobey his Commands. You shall be justified by your own Mouth, you shall be condemned out of your own Mouth, by the good or ill Use of your own Tongue.

[Hos. vi. 5.] Hosea says, that the Lord has put the People to Death by the Words of his Mouth. Occidi eos in verbis oris mei. That is to say, that he foretold Death or Captivity to them by the Mouth of his Prophets. Isaiah [Isai. xi. 4.] says of the Messiah; He shall smite the Earth with the Rod of his Mouth, and with the Breath of his Lips shall he slay the wicked. These Expressions denote the absolute Power of God, and that it requires only one Breath to destroy his Enemies. The same Prophet [Isai. lix. 2.] says; He hath made my Mouth like a sharp Sword. And St. Paul says, that the Word of the Lord is like a[1] two-edged Sword. All these Ways of speaking are very energetical to express the sovereign Authority of God, as well over the Mind as the Body.

From the Abundance of the Heart the Mouth speaketh, says Jesus Christ. Our Discourses are the Eccho of the Sentiments of our Hearts. 'Tis not what enters into the [Matth. xv. 11.] Mouth that defileth the Man; 'tis neither Meat nor Drink that makes us unclean in [2 Tim. iv. 17.] the Sight of God. St. Paul says, that he was delivered out of the Jaws of the Lion, that is, he had escaped the Cruelty of Nero. Metite in ore misericordiæ, says Hosea; that is, take Care that you may reap in Proportion to your Mercies, and the Alms that you have bestowed. This Expression in ore, or ad os, often signifies, pro ratione, proportione servatâ. For Example, They shall take of their Neighbours according to what shall be wanting for the eating of the Lamb, Exod. xii. 4. You shall redeem it according to the Number of the Years; ad os multitudinis annorum, Levit. xxv. 16. You shall distribute their Lot according to the Report of the Deputies; ad os visitatorum, Numb. xxvi. 54, &c.

Mulberry-Tree

MULBERRY-TREE, in Latin Morus. The Author of Psalm lxxviii. at Verse 47, says, that among other Plagues with which the Lord visited Egypt, he destroyed their Vines with Hail, and their Mulberry-trees with Frost. [So the Vulgate; the English Translation in our Bibles reads Sycomore-trees. [Heb.]] The Hebrew Word made use of in this Place, according to the Generality of Interpreters, signifies Sycomores. He killed their Sycomore-trees with Frost, or great Hail-stones. The Sycomore is frequent in Egypt, and has a Leaf near resembling that of a Mulberry-tree, and Fruit something like Figs; hence the Word Sycomore, from Sycos a Fig or Figtree, and Morus a Mulberry-tree. The Hebrew Word Skikamah is evidently the Radix of Sycaminus, which signifies also a Sycomore.

It is said in the first Book of the Maccabees [1 Macc. vi. 34.] , that the young King Antiochus Eupator coming into Judæa with a powerful Army[1], in which were a good many Elephants; those that had the Care of these Animals shewed them the Blood of Grapes and Mulberries, that they might provoke them to fight. The Elephant of its own Nature is not at all cruel; to make him fierce he must be vexed, urged, made drunk, or shewed some Blood, or something like Blood. We read in the third Book of the Maccabees, that to provoke the Elephants to tread under Foot, or under their Knees, those Jews of Egypt that Ptolemy Philopator had a Mind to put to Death, they gave them to drink a medicated Wine, to intoxicate their Brain, and to stifle that Sentiment of Pity and Compassion that is natural to them. It must indeed be allowed, that we do not find in any profane Author, that they used to shew these Creatures the Juice of Grapes or Mulberries, in Order to make them fierce. Plutarch[2] and Seneca[3] tell us, that Bulls are provoked by seeing red Colours, and Elephants by seeing white. But we cannot doubt of what is here related in the Maccabees; and since Experience shews us, that there are few Animals but what are provoked at the Sight of Blood, or even at the Sight of any lively red Colour, as Vallesius[4] affirms; why may not the same happen to Elephants also?

Mule

MULE, An Animal produced between two Animals of different Species, a Horse and a She-Ass, or an He-Ass and a Mare.

There is great Likelihood that the Jews did not breed Mules, because it was forbid them to couple together two Creatures of different Species, Levit. xix. 19. Thou shalt not let thy Cattle gender with a divers Kind. [2 Sam. xiii. 29. xviii.

9. 1 Kings i. 33, 38, 44. x. 25. xviii. 5, &c.] But they were not forbid to make Use of 'em. Thus we may observe, especially since David's Time, that He and She-Mules were common among the Hebrews: Formerly they used only He and She-Asses.

Some[1] have thought, that Anab Son of Zibeon, one of the Posterity of Seir[2], being in the Desart, had found out the Manner of breeding Mules, by coupling together Animals of different Kinds. This Opinion has been much espoused by the Ancients. But St. Jerome, who takes Notice of it in his Hebraical Questions upon Genesis, does however translate, that Anah found hot Waters in the Desart, as he was feeding the Asses of his Father Zibeon. The Greek Translators have preserved the Hebrew Word Jamim. The Syriac says, he found a Fountain. Others believe that Jemim or Jamim signifies a sort of People that Anab found, whom he set upon and defeated. These Jemims might perhaps be the same as the Emim, mentioned by Moses, Deut. ii. 10, 11.

Multiplication

MULTIPLICATION. We find in Scripture several Examples of a miraculous Multiplication of several Species of Food. That for Instance performed by Elijah in Favour of the Widow of Zarephath, whose Meal and Oil was so multiplied or increased, that from a small Quantity which she had at first, it became sufficient for her self and Son, and for her Guest Elijah, during the whole [1 Kings xvii. 10, 11.] Time of a grievous Famine. The second Example of this Kind of Multiplication is that of Elisha, in Favour of a Widow, who had [2 Kings iv. 1, 2, &c.] been the Wife of a Prophet: She being pursued by her Husband's Creditors, addressed her self to Elisha for Relief. He asked her what she had in her House; she answered, she had only a little Oil. Elisha bid her borrow of her Neighbours what empty Vessels she could, and fill them up with Oil, then sell as much as would pay her Creditors, and she and her Son to live upon the rest. This she did, and the Event answered the Promises of the Prophet. The Oil did not cease to run, as long as she had any Vessels to receive it. The same Prophet multiplied twenty Barley-Loaves that were brought him, so as to be sufficient for the feeding of an hundred Prophets that were gathered together, with some Remainder afterwards.

THE EXPIATION OF A MURDER COMMITTED IN THE OPEN FIELD THE AUTHOR WHEREOF IS UN-

[2 Kings iv. 42.] We read in the New Testament, that Jesus Christ fed five Thousand Men, without reckoning Women and Children, with only five Barley-Loaves and two Fishes; so that [Matth. xiv. 17, &c. John vi. 5, &c. Matth. xv. 32.] there remained over and above twelve Baskets full. At another Time he satisfied four Thousand Men, besides Women and Children, with seven Loaves and a few small Fishes. St. Austin[1] compares this Multiplication of the Bread by Jesus Christ, to that which God brings to pass every Day, in a Manner not less to be admired, of a few Grains of Seed, which produce an immense Quantity of Fruits and Grains, for the Support of Men and other Creatures. But these natural Miracles being familiar to us, we give little Attention to 'em; and therefore God has reserved to himself the exerting of this miraculous Power, to awaken our Attention, and to make us admire his Works. Quia miracula ejus assiduitate viluerunt, ita ut penè nemo dignetur attendere opera Dei mira & stupenda in quolibet seminis grano; secundum suam ipsam misericordiam, servavit sibi quædam quæ faceret opportuno tempore, præter usitatum cursum ordinemque naturæ, ut non majora; sed insolita videndo stuperent, quibus quotidiana viluerunt. We are entirely ignorant of the Manner by which this Multiplication was effected; whether it be by a new Creation, or by a sudden Change of the Parts of the adjacent Matter; or lastly by a sudden and imperceptible Transportation of Parts of the same Nature, which joined themselves to those that were already in the Hands of the Apostles, and so augmented their Quantity. St. Austin[2] and St. Jerome[3] believed, that the Multiplication of the Loaves was performed in the Hands of Jesus Christ; St. Chrysostom, Leontius, and Euthymius, in the Hands of the Apostles. But St. Hilarius would not decide the Question.

Murder

[Numb. xxxv. 28] MURDER. Voluntary Murder was always punished with Death, but involuntary Murder among the Hebrews was only punished by Banishment. Cities of Refuge were appointed for involuntary Manslaughter, whither they might retire, and continue in Safety, till the Death of the High-priest. Then the Offender was at Liberty to return to his own City and his own House, if he pleased. But as for the voluntary Murderer, he was put to Death without any Remission, and the Kinsman of the murdered Person might kill him with Impunity. Money [Ibid. 27. Ibid. 31. Exod. xxi. 14.] could not redeem his Life, he was dragged away even from the Altar, if he had taken Refuge there.

When a dead Body was found in the Fields, of a Person that had been slain by a Murderer unknown, Moses commanded, [Deut. xxi. 1, 2,—8.] that the Elders and Judges of the neighbouring Places should resort to the Place, and examine what City was nearest to it. The Elders of this City were to take a Heifer, which had never yet bore the Yoke, and were to lead it into some rude and uncultivated Place, which had not been plowed or sowed, where they were to cut the Throat of the Victim; after which the Priests of the Lord, with the Elders and Magistrates of the City, were to come near the dead Body, and washing their Hands over the Heifer that had been slain, they were to say: " Our Hands have not shed " this Blood, nor have our Eyes seen it " shed. Lord be favourable to thy People " Israel, and impute not to us this Blood, " which has been shed in the midst of our " Countrey." This whole Ceremony may inform us, what Idea they had of the Heinousness of Murder, and how much Horror they conceived at this Crime; and also the Fear they were in, that God might take Vengeance for it on the whole Countrey: And of the Pollution that the Countrey was supposed to contract, by the Blood that was spilt in it, unless it were expiated, or revenged upon him that was the Occasion of it; if he should happen to be discovered.

Murmuring

MURMURING. A Complaint made for some Wrong pretended to have been received. St. Paul forbids all Murmuring, which was so fatal to the Israelites that murmured in the Wilderness. Neither murmur ye, as some of them murmured, and were destroyed of the Destroyer. And the Wise-man, Therefore beware of Murmuring, [Wisdom i. 11.] which is unprofitable, and refrain your Tongue from Backbiting; for there is no Word so secret that shall go for nought, and the Mouth that belyeth slayeth the Soul. And indeed God severely punished the Hebrews that murmured in the Desart. He was more than once upon the Point of forsaking them, and even of destroying them, had not Moses stood in the Gap, and appeased his Anger by earnest Prayer. They murmured at The Graves of Lust, and God sent them Quails for Food; but hardly was this Meat out of their Mouths, but the Wrath of the Lord was kindled against them, and he destroyed three and twenty [Numb. xi. 33, 34. Ps. lxxviii. 30.] Thousand of them. They murmured again after the Return of the Spies, that were sent to explore the promised Land; and the Lord punished them by depriving them of the Happiness of ever seeing that Land, and condemned them to die in the Wilderness. They were again punished for murmuring [Numb. xiv. 30, 31, &c.] again, by the winged Serpents that God sent against them, which killed a great Number of them. The Murmuring of Miriam, the Sister of Moses, was punished [Numb. xxi. 4, 5, 6, &c.] by a Leprosie that seized her whole Body, and obliged her to abide seven Days without [Numb. xii. 1, 2, 3, &c.] the Camp. Lastly, the Murmuring and Rebellion of Korah, Dathan and Abiram, was chastised in a still more terrible Manner: The Earth opening and swallowing up the Authors of the Sedition, and Fire consuming their Accomplices.

Musach

MUSACH. This Term signifies literally a Veil or Covering [Numb. xvi. 3, &c.] , or a Work of cast Metal[1]. There is a great Variety of Opinions concerning the proper Signification of Musach of Judah, that Manasseh caused to be uncovered at the Approach of the King of Babylon; and of the Musach of the Sabbath that Ahaz caused to be turned towards the Temple, for Fear of the King of Assyria. Some have thought it was a Veil, that covered the Courts of the Temple; others that it was a Tent, wherein the Priests rested themselves in the Temple, when their Week was out; others that it was a Chest wherein they threw their Offerings for the Repairs of the Temple. Our Opinion is, that it was the Scaffold of Brass made by Solomon, and placed in the Temple, upon which he stood [2 Chron. vi. 13.] upon Festival [1 Cor. x. 10.] Days. The same Name was given to the Scaffold upon which a Priest ascended on great Solemnities, to read the Law to the People.

[2 Kings xi. 4.] Abaz fearing that King Tiglath-pileser should come to Jerusalem, and take away this Scaffold, which was very valuable both for its Matter and Form, he caused it to be taken away from its Place, and put into some secret Part of the Temple. Manasseh upon a like Occasion tore off the Plates of Brass with which it was covered. The High -priest Jehoiada, desiring to have young Joash acknowledged as King, caused Guards to be set about him in the Musach that was in the Temple. The Prince was seated upon the Scaffold, and the Guards placed round about.

Musick

MUSICK. The antient Hebrews had a strong Inclination to Musick and musical Instruments. They used it in their Ceremonies of Religion, in their publick and private Rejoycings, at their Feasts, and even in their Mourning. We have in Scripture Canticles of Joy, of Thanksgiving, of Praise, of Mourning; Epithalamiums, or Songs composed on the Occasion of some famous Marriages; as the Song of Songs, and Psalm xlv, which are thought to have been composed to celebrate the Marriage of King Solomon. Also mournful Songs, as those that David composed upon the Death of Saul and Abner, and the Lamentations of Jeremiah upon the Death of Josiah; Psalms to celebrate the Accession of a Prince to his Crown, as Psalm lxxii. Deus judicium tuum Regi da. Songs of Victory, Triumph, and Thanksgiving, as that which Moses sung after passing the Red-Sea, that of Deborah and Barak, and some others. Lastly, the Book of Psalms is an ample Collection of different Pieces of Musick, composed upon all Sorts of Subjects by inspired Authors. We shall say nothing here of the Hebrew Poetry, nor of the Nature of the Verse of these divine Hymns, because we shall speak of it elsewhere. See Poetry.

[Gen. iv. 21.] Musick is very antient in the World. Moses tells us of Jubal, who lived before the Deluge, and was the Father or Master of those who played upon the Kinnor, and the Hugab. Now the first of these manifestly signifies the Harp, and the other the antient Organ, that is, a kind of Flute composed of several Pipes of a different Bigness, joined to one another. Laban complains that his Son-in-Law Jacob had left him, without bidding him farewell, and without giving him an Opportunity of sending him away, with Mirth and with Songs, [Gen. xxxi. 27.] with Tabret and with Harp. Moses having passed over the Red-Sea, composed a Song, and sung it with the Men, while Miriam his Sister sung it with Dancing, and playing upon Instruments, at the Head of the Israelitish [Exod. xv. 1,—20. Numb. x. 2.] Women. This Legislator caused Silver Trumpets to be made, to be sounded upon solemn Sacrifices, and on religious Festivals. David, who had a great Taste for Musick, seeing that the Levites were numerous, and were no longer employed as formerly, in carrying the Boards, the Veils, and Vessels of the Tabernacle, its Aboad being fixed at Jerusalem; he appointed a great Part of 'em to sing and play upon Instruments in the Temple.

SOLOMONS BRASEN SCAFFOLD,According to the dimensions described in 2.Chr. 6.13. Vol. II. T.

Asaph, Heman, and Jeduthun were the Chief of the Musick of the Tabernacle under David, and of the Temple under Solomon. Asaph had four Sons, Jeduthun six, and Heman fourteen. These twenty four Levites, Sons of the three great Masters of the Musick of the Temple, were at the Head of twenty four Bands of Musicians, which were very numerous, and served in the Temple by Turns. Their Number there was always great, but especially at the great Solemnities. They were ranged in Order about the Altar of Burnt-Sacrifices. Those of the Family of Kohath were in the Middle, those of Merari at the left, and those of Gershom's Family on the right Hand. As the whole Business of their Lives was to learn and practise Musick, it must be supposed that they understand it perfectly well; whether it were vocal or instrumental Musick. The Lord had abundantly provided for their Maintenance, and nothing could hinder them from being perfect in their Art, and compleat Masters of it.

The Kings also had their particular Musick. Asaph was chief Master of Musick to King David. He was, as the Scripture says, A Prophet at the King's Hand. And [1 Chron. xxv. 2. Vulgat.] Barzillai said to David[1], Can I hear any more the Voice of singing Men and singing Women? Even in the Temple, and in the Ceremonies of Religion, Female Musicians were admitted as well as Male, who generally were the Daughters of the Levites. Heman had fourteen Sons and three Daughters, [1 Chron. xxv. 5.] who all understood Musick. The ninth Psalm is addressed to Benaiah, Chief of the Band of young Women that sang in the Temple. Ezra in his Enumeration of those whom he brought back with him from the Captivity, reckons up two Hundred singing [Ezra ii. 65. Nehem. vii. 67.] Men and singing Women. The Chaldee Paraphrast upon Chap. ii. v. 8. of Ecclesiastes, where Solomon says that he gat Singing-Men and Singing-Women, understands it of singing Women of the Temple. In the first Book of Chronicles xv. 20. it is said, in the Hebrew, that Zechariah, Aziel, and Shemiramoth, presided over the seventh Band of Musick, which was that of the young Women.

As to the Nature of their Musick, we can judge of it only by Conjecture, because it has been a long Time lost, and out of Use. But this is very probable, that it was only a Mixture of several Voices, of which all sung together in the same Tune, every one according to his Strength and Skill; and that there was not among them those different Parts, and that Combination of several Voices and Tunes, which constitute our Concerts, or compounded Musick. It is very probable also, that generally the Voices were accompanied by the Instrumental Musick. But if we may draw any Conclusions in Favour of the Excellence of their Musick, from its wonderful Effects, its Magnificence, Majesty, and the fine Sentiments contained in their Songs; we must allow that their Musick was very excellent and perfect. Every one knows, that David by his Skill upon the Harp used to dispel the melancholy Vapours to which Saul was subject, and drove away the Evil Spirit that disturbed him. The same Saul, having sent Messengers to apprehend David, who had withdrawn himself to Naioth in Ramah, and was there in the midst of a Company of Prophets; the Messengers had no sooner heard the Sound of the Instruments of the Prophets, who were there singing and playing, but they were immediately transported (as it were) by a divine Enthusiasm, and began to do the same themselves. Saul sent a [1 Sam. xvi. 23. 1 Sam. xix. 23, 24.] second and a third Company after them, who did in the same Manner. Lastly this Prince came thither himself, was seized in the same Manner by the divine Spirit, and began to have all the Motions of those that are inspired, even before he came to the Place where the Prophets were assembled. The Prophet Elisha finding himself a little disturbed, caused a Minstrel to be sent for to calm his Spirits, and to put him into a Temper fit to receive the Impression of the divine Spirit. The Reader may have Recourse to [2 Kings iii. 15.] our Dissertation upon the Musick of the Hebrews, at the Beginning of the second Tome upon the Psalms.

The Musical Instruments of the antient Hebrews are, perhaps, what has been hitherto least known, of any Thing in the Text of the holy Scriptures. The Rabbins themselves know no more in this Matter, than such Commentators as were least acquainted with the Affairs of the Jews. One can hardly read without Pity and Contempt, what they generally say upon certain unknown Terms, that are found in the Titles of some of the Psalms, and which at all Adventures they take for Instruments of Musick. Such are for Example, the Words Neginoth, Sheminith, Nebiloth, Shiggaion, Gittith, Muth-labben, Michtam, Aijeleth, Shahar, Shothannim, Alamoth, &c. But if we take a nearer View of this Matter, we shall find that the Hebrews had a much smaller Number of musical Instruments, and which may all be reduced to one of these three Heads. 1. Stringed-Instruments. 2. Wind-Instruments, or several Sorts of Flutes, and 3. different Sorts of Drums or Tabours.

Stringed-Instruments were the Nebel[2], the Psaltery, or Psanneterim; and probably these three Instruments were much the same Thing. They have some Relation to the Harp and the antient Cithara, or the Hashur[3], that is to say, an Instrument with ten Strings. Both of 'em were pretty near of the Figure of a Capital Δ; but the Psalterion or Nablium was hollow above, and was played upon below; whereas the Cithara, or Instrument of ten Strings, was played upon above, and was hollow below. Each of 'em was played upon with a Bow, and with the Fingers.

The Chinnor[4], or antient Lyra, had sometimes three, sometimes six, and sometimes nine Strings. These Strings were strained from Top to Bottom, and sounded upon a hollow Belly that was at Bottom. It was played upon with the Fingers, or with a Bow.

The antient Symphony, or Dulcimer, was an Instrument very nearly approaching to our old one.

The Sackbut, or Sambuca, was a stringed Instrument, which we believe was very near of the Form of the modern Psaltery. And these are all the stringed Instruments, that we find mentioned in Scripture.

There may be also several Sorts of Trumpets and Flutes, of which it is very difficult to ascertain the exact Form. What is most observable of this Kind, is the antient Organ, called in Hebrew, Huggab[5], which is probably nothing else than those antient Flutes, composed of several Pipes of unequal Thickness and Length, which gave an harmonious Sound when they were blown in, by moving them successively under the lower Lip.

The Drums were of several Sorts. The Hebrew Word Tuph[6], from whence comes Tympanum, is taken for all Sorts of Drums, Tabors, or Kettle-Drums. The Word Tzaltzelim[7] is commonly translated in the Septuagint, and in the Vulgate, by Cymbala, which was an Instrument of Copper, of a very shrill Sound, made in Form of Caps, which were held in each Hand one, and struck against each other. Later Interpreters by Tzaltzelim understand the Sistrum, which was an Instrument formerly much used in Egypt. It was of an oval Figure, or a Semicircle extended in Form of a Belt, crossed by some Brass Rods or Wires that moved in Holes, in which they were stopped by their Heads or Knobs.

The Hebrew Text speaks of an Instrument called Shalishim[8], which the Seventy have translated by Cymbala, and St. Jerome by Systra. 'Tis found only in one Place of Scripture, viz. 1 Sam. xviii. 6. The Word Shalishim should insinuate, that it was of a triangular Form, and might very well be that antient triangular Instrument, in which were several Rings moved about with a Stick, and which gave a shrill Sound.

Lastly, there is Mention made of Metzilothaim[9] which was an Instrument of Copper, and gave a sharp and shrill Sound. 'Tis commonly translated by Cymbala, but others translate it by Tintinnabula, or little Bells. The Prophet Zechariah says[10], that the Time should come when they should write upon the Metziloth [or Bells] of the Horses, Holiness to the Lord: Which may incline one to think, that this Word signifies a Bell; since we know that formerly they used to put Bells upon Horses that went to Battle, in Order to accustom them to Noise. We have treated of the Instruments of Musick of the antient Hebrews, before the second Volume of the Commentary upon the Psalms. We have also said something of each of the principal Instruments under their respective Articles.

Mustard

[Matth. iii. 31, 32.] MUSTARD, Sinapi. Jesus Christ compares the Kingdom of Heaven to a Grain of Mustard-Seed, which is the least of all Grains, and which being sown upon good Land, becomes a great Tree; so that the Birds of the Air come and sit upon its Branches. This would seem to be incredible, if we did not know, that in Palestine there grew Plants and Shrubs, very much larger than in most other Countries. The Talmuds of Jerusalem and Babylon make Mention[1], that one Simon had a Stock or Stem of Mustard, which grew so high and strong, that a Man might climb up into it without breaking it. Mention is there made also of another Mustard Plant, which had three Branches, one of which served as a Shade to some Potters, who worked under it in the Summer. This Branch alone, as they say, afforded three Barrels of Mustard.

Myrrhe

MYRRHE, Myrrha, in Hebrew, Mor[1], a Sort of Gum, which comes from a Shrub that is common in Arabia, of about the Height of five Cubits, of a hard Wood, the Trunk of which is defended by Thorns. The Scripture distinguishes two Sorts of Myrrhe; one is Myrrha electa, literally, Myrrhe of Liberty, which distils of it self, and without Incision. This Sort is the best of all. Pliny[2] speaking of the Tree that produces Myrrhe, says, Sudant sponte, priusquam incidantur, stacten dictam, cui mella praefertur. This is the Myrrhe which is also called Stacte, the other is simple and common Myrrhe. It was employed in Perfumes, and embalming dead Bodies, to prevent their Corruption. The Magi that came from the East, to worship our Saviour at Bethlehem, made him a Present of Myrrhe.

[Matth. ii. 11. Mark xv. 23.] Mention is made in the Gospel of Myrrhatum Vinum, Wine mingled with Myrrhe, which they offered to Jesus Christ at his Passion, to take from him, as 'tis thought, the too quick Sence of Pain. Among the Hebrews they were used to give to those that were executed, such Sorts of stupifying Liquors[3]. Some think that the Myrratum Vinum of St. Mark, is the same as the Vinum felle mixtum, the Wine mingled with Gall, mentioned by St. Matthew; but others distinguish between them. They gave our Saviour Wine mingled with Myrrhe, out of a Sentiment of Compassion, to take away from him a too lively Sense of Pain: But the Soldiers out of mere Cruelty and Inhumanity, mixed Gall with the Wine they offered him; for which Reason he refused to drink it. Or lastly, St. Matthew writing in Syriack, made Use of the Word Marra, which signifies Myrrhe, Bitterness, or Gall. The Greek Translator may have taken it for Gall, and St. Mark for Myrrhe. But however, the Vinum Myrrhatum was in much Esteem among the Antients. Pliny says[4], Laudatissima apud priscos vina erant, Myrrhae odore condita. The Laws of the twelve Tables forbad to pour it upon the Dead. Ne murrhata potio mortuo inderetur.

Myrtle

MYRTLE, in Latin, Myrthus, in Hebrew, Chadas, is taken for the Shrub that bears the Myrtle Flowers, and for the Flower it self, and for the Perfume that is extracted from thence. Myrtetum is a Place planted with Myrtles. This Shrub was common in Judaea. Ezra[1] sent the People into the Fields to fetch Myrtle-branches, Palm, and Olive-branches, to make Tents at the Feast of Tabernacles.

Mystery

MYSTERY. A Word which comes from the Greek, Mysterion, and which in this Language signifies properly a Secret. And this is derived from Myo, I shut up, and Stoma, the Mouth, as much as to say, our Mouths should be shut about these Matters. Or it may be derived from the He brew, Satar, to hide, whence Mystar, a Thing concealed. Denudare amici mysteria, desperatio animæ, says the wise Man, Ecclesiasticus xxvii. 16. When a Man has betrayed the Secret of his Friend, he is unworthy of any Credit for the Time to come. Ei, qui revelat mysteria, & ambulat fraudulenter, — ne commiscearis. Have no Correspondence with him that betrays the Secrets of his Friends, and who walks deceitfully, Prov. xx. 19.

All Religions true or false have their Mysteries, that is, certain Things that are not to be divulged, or exposed indifferently to every Body; certain Secrets, which are known only to those who have been initiated into that Religion. The Pagans had their Mysteries, but they were Mysteries of Iniquity, shameful Mysteries, that were concealed only because they would have rendered their Religion contemptible, ridiculous, and odious. If Men of Sense and Honour had known what was practised in the secret Mysteries of certain false Deities, they would have abhorred them. Daniel discovered the Secrets of the Babylonian Priests, who made the People believe, that Bel could eat, and that the Dragon was a God. The sacred Books often speak of the infamous Mysteries of Astarte, Adonis, Priapus, wherein a Thousand infamous Actions were committed, and where the most shameful Crimes were concealed under the Veil of Religion. Baruch speaks of Prostitutions that [Baruch vi. 42, 43.] were practised in Honour of Venus at Babylon. The whole Religion of the Egyptians was mysterious. But these pretended Mysteries were invented afterwards, to conceal the Folly and Vanity of it. They could not vindicate, for Example, the Adoration that they paid to Brutes but by saying, that the Gods had sometimes concealed themselves under these Shapes. In the Maccabees Mention is [1 Macc. vi. 7. 2 Macc. vi. 7.] made of the Mysteries of Bacchus, and of the Ivy that was imprinted upon every one that was initiated therein, and of the Garlands of Ivy that were wore by those that assisted at these Ceremonies. Asa King of Juda would [1 Kings xv. 13.] not suffer the Queen his Mother to continue to preside over the Mysteries of Priapus. No Doubt can be made but that they gave mysterious and secret Reasons for the Worship that was paid to Moloch, and for the human Sacrifices that were offered to him. 'Twas perhaps a perverse Imitation of Abraham's intended Sacrifice of his Son Isaac. The Phœnicians assign a Reason not unlike this, for those cruel Sacrifices that they made to Hercules and to Saturn. See Porphyry in Eusebius's Preparatio Evangelica.

The Religion of the Jews was full of Mysteries. The whole Nation was a Mystery, according to St. Austin[1]. It represented the People of Christ, and the Christian Religion. Whatever happened to them, whatever they put in Practice, all that was commanded or forbidden them, [1 Cor. x. 11.] was figurative according to St. Paul. Their Sacrifices, their Priesthood, their Purifications, their refraining from certain Sorts of Food, included Mysteries which have been explained by Jesus Christ and his Apostles. The Passage over the Red-Sea was a Symbol of Baptism. The brazen Serpent was a Mystery that represented the Cross and Death of Christ. Sarah and Hagar, Isaac and Ishmael, denoted the two Covenants. The Tabernacle and its Vessels insinuated the Worship that God was to receive in the Christian Church. The Priesthood of Aaron has been admirably explained by St. Paul of the Priesthood of Jesus Christ, and of that of his Church. St. Barnabas has unfolded the Secrets contained in the Prohibition of certain Foods. Jesus Christ himself has discovered the Mystery to us, of Jonas's being confined for three Days in the Whale's Belly. And that of lifting up the Brazen Serpent in the Wilderness. That of Manna that represented the Sacrament of his Body and Blood. That of the Union of Adam and Eve, which contained the Mystery of the Christian Marriage. That of the Temple of Jerusalem, to be destroyed and rebuilt in three Days, prefigured his Death and Resurrection. The Reprobation of the Jews, and the Adoption of the Gentiles, was intimated in an hundred Passages of Scripture; for Example, by Agar and Sarah, by Ishmael and Isaac, by Ephraim and Manasseh, by Saul and David, by David and his Brethren, by Absalom and Solomon, and even by Moses and Aaron, who were not permitted to enter into the Land of Promise.

The Prophecies concerning the Person, the Coming, the Characters, the Death and Passion of the Messiah, are to be found in a Multitude of Places in the Old Testament, but after a figurative and mysterious Manner. The Actions, the Words, the Life of the Prophets, were a continual and general Prophecy, which was concealed from the Eyes of the People, and sometimes from the Prophets themselves, and was not explained and discovered, till after the Birth and Death of Jesus Christ; and these Mysteries were dispensed in so wonderful an Œconomy, and by so wise a Providence, that the first served as a Foundation for the second, and the succeeding gave new Light to those that went before. They still improved in Clearness and Evidence, and the Holy Ghost dispensed them by Measure, and in due Degrees. Daniel is more explicite than the Prophets before him; Haggai, Zechariah, and Malachi, speak of the Coming, of the Death, and of the Priesthood of Jesus Christ, and of the Calling of the Gentiles, after a more plain and distinct Manner than the other Prophets before them.

The Mysteries of the Christian Religion, as the Incarnation of the Word, his hypostatical Union, with his human Nature, his miraculous Birth, his Death, Resurrection, Ascension, his real Presence in the Eucharist, the Predestination and Reprobation of Men, the Grace of Jesus Christ, and the Manner of its Operation in our Hearts, the Virginity of the Virgin Mary, both before and after her bringing forth, the Resurrection of the Dead: In a Word, the Articles of Faith contained in the Apostles Creed, and the Mysteries revealed to us both in the Old and New Testament, are the Objects of the Faith of all true Christians.

The Word Mystery is also taken for Secrets of an higher Order, and which are Supernatural; as those the Knowledge of which God has reserved to himself, and of which he has sometimes communicated the Knowledge to his Prophets and Friends. Thus Daniel gives to God the Name of Revealer of Mysteries: Dominus Regum, & revelans mysteria. He tells King Nebuchadnezzar, that there is none but God that reigns in Heaven, who can reveal hidden Mysteries, and Things to come. And our Saviour says to his Disciples in the Gospel of St. Matthew, that they are happy because God has revealed to them the Mysteries of the Kingdom of Heaven. St. Paul often speaks of the Mystery of the Gospel, of the Mystery of the Cross of Christ, of the Mystery of Christ which was unknown to former Ages, of the Mystery of the Resurrection to come, &c. Mystick Babylon, the great Harlot, had written upon her Forehead, Mystery, to shew that she did not represent any particular City, nor any Woman, but a corrupted and idolatrous People.

Lastly, the Word Mystery in the Greek is equivalent to Sacramentum in Latin. It expresses the Sacraments and Mysteries of the Christian Church, and chiefly the Eucharist, which is the most sacred and the most sublime of all our Mysteries. In Scripture Sacramentum is put barely for a Secret[2], a Thing that is hidden: But it is often put for Mystery in the New Testament. God has made known unto us the Mystery of his Will; his Incarnation, his Coming, his Gospel; Sacramentum voluptatis suæ. St. Paul says, that the Mystery of the Vocation of the Gentiles was revealed to him; and speaking of Christian Marriage, he says, it is a great Mystery in Jesus Christ and his Church. Sacramentum hoc magnum est, (the Greek says Mysterium magnum) ego autem dico in Christo & in Ecclesiâ.

These then were called Mysteries, the Doctrine of the Gospel, the Tenets of Christianity, and the Sacraments of the Church; not only because they included Secrets which had not been known, if the Son of God and his Holy Spirit had not revealed them to Believers, but also because they were not revealed indifferently to every Body. The Advice of Jesus Christ to his Apostles was in this Case put in Practice; Give not that which is holy unto the Dogs, neither cast ye your Pearls before Swine. They preached the Gospel only to those, who seriously desired to be instructed in it; nor did they presently discover to 'em all the Mysteries of Religion, but in Proportion as they became capable to receive them, and when they had intirely resolved to be baptized. The Preachers in their Sermons, and the Ecclesiastical Writers in their Books, did not fully express themselves upon all the Mysteries.

They said enough to be understood by the Faithful, but the Pagans could not comprehend their Discourses. This wise Precaution continued a long while in the Church. The Pagans also put in Practice the same Reserve, in Respect of many of the shameful and ridiculous Mysteries of their false Religion. But the Secrecy that was observed concerning our Mysteries, was chiefly founded upon their superior Excellence and Sublimity, which made them inaccessible to the human Understanding, unless it was assisted by the Light of Faith.

Mystick

MYSTICK. The mystical Sense of the Scriptures is that which is derived from the Terms or Letter of the Scripture, after and besides their literal Signification. For Example, Babylon signifies literally a City of Chaldæa, the Habitation of Kings that were Persecutors of the Hebrew, and overwhelmed in Idolatry and Wickedness. According to the mystical Sense, Babylon signifies a corrupted World, Sinners, wicked Persons persecuting good Men. St. John in the Revelations gives the Name of Babylon to the City of Rome, then Pagan and an Enemy to the Truth. So Jerusalem is literally put for Jerusalem a City of Judæa; but mystically it signifies the heavenly Jerusalem, which is the Habitation of the Saints. The Word Serpent as to the Letter, signifies a venomous Reptile; and in a mystical Sense it signifies the Devil, the old Serpent that tempted Eve.

Naaman (III)

III. NAAMAN, General of the Army of Ben-hadad, King of Syria; he was in great Credit in the Court of the King his Master, because by his Means the Lord had saved Syria. Naaman had in his House a young Israelitish Woman, who happened to say to her Mistress, "Would to God "that my Lord had been with the Prophet "Elisha, who is at Samaria; he would "soon have cured him of his Leprosie." For Naaman was a Leper, and there was then no natural Remedy found out for this Distemper. Naaman having heard these Words, went immediately to Ben-hadad, and desired Leave of him to go to Samaria, to see the Prophet Elisha. The King consented to it, and writ a Letter by him to the King of Israel in these Terms. "When "you shall have received this Letter, you "will know, that my Desire is you should "cure Naaman the General of my Army "of his Leprosie k." Jehoram King of Israel, Son of Ahaziah, having received this Letter, rent his Clothes and said, "Am "I a God, that I can kill and make alive?" You see how Ben-hadad seeks a Pretence to fall out with me. But Elisha being informed of what had happened, sent Word to Jehoram; "Let "this Man come to me and he shall know "that there is a Prophet in Israel." Naaman came therefore with this Chariot and Horses, and stopped at the Door of Elisha's House; whether it were out of Respect to his Person, or that having the Leprosie he was impure, and not fit for the Conversation of sound Persons. Elisha without going out of his House sent to tell him, that he must go wash himself seven Times in Jordan, and he should be cured. Naaman being very angry, began to go his Way, saying, "I thought he would have "come out to me, that he would have "called upon the Name of his God, that "he would have touched me, and so have "cured me. Have we not at Damascus "the Rivers Abana and Pharpar[1], that "are better than all the Rivers of Israel, "that I may wash in and be healed?" As he was turning away in great Wrath, his Servants said to him; "Had the Prophet "enjoined you some hard Thing, you would "readily have obeyed him; how much "rather should you do it, when he only "bids you wash and be clean? Naaman was persuaded, went to Jordan, washed himself seven Times, and was perfectly cured.

Then he came back again to the Man of God, and told him; "Now I know "certainly that there is no other God but "the Lord: I intreat you to receive a Present at my Hand." But Elisha would not take any Thing from him, how importunate soever he was. Naaman seeing that he could not prevail with him, said to him; I beseech you then to permit me to carry home with me, two Mules Loading of the Earth of this Country; for from henceforward I shall offer Sacrifice to no other God, but the God of Israel. Elisha readily permitted him, seeing his great Faith and Regard for the Lord, which made him think that the Earth of Syria was defiled, and that he could not offer any Sacrifices agreeable to God, but upon Earth that was holy, and taken out of the Land[2] of Israel. This Piece of Devotion is antient among the Jews, and even among Christians. Benjamin de Tudela says, that the Jews of Nahardea, in the Kingdom of Persia, built their Synagogue with Earth and Stones, that were fetched on Purpose from Jerusalem. We are assured that the Empress Helena, Mother of Constantine the Great, caused a great Quantity to be brought to Rome, which she put in the Church of the Holy Cross, surnamed in Jerusalem. St. Austin[3] and Gregory of Tours[4] may supply us with several other Examples of the same Kind.

But to return to Naaman; speaking to Elisha, he added these Words. In this Thing the Lord pardon thy Servant, that when my Master goeth into the House of Rimmon to worship there, and he leaneth on my Hand, and I bow my self in the House of Rimmon: When I bow down my self in the House of Rimmon, the Lord pardon thy Servant in this Thing. And he said unto him, go in Peace. This Passage has given Occasion to many Scruples. The greatest Part of Commentators are of Opinion, that Naaman having sufficiently declared he intended to worship the God of Israel only, he asks Leave from Elisha to continue those external Offices to his Master Ben-hadad, that he had been used to render him, when he entered into the Temple of Rimmon; but not to adore Rimmon, whose idolatrous Worship he now abhorred: And that Elisha suffered him to continue to accompany the King his Master into the Temple of this Idol, provided however that he should pay him no Worship. The Rabbins pretend, that a Proselyte of Habitation, such as Naaman was, was not obliged to refrain from Idolatry out of the Land of Israel; and that if he should fall into the Worship of false Gods in a strange Land, this would not be imputed to him as a Fault.

Others[5] in great Numbers translate the Hebrew[6] by the Time past, in this Manner. In this Thing the Lord pardon thy Servant, that when my Master went into the House of Rimmon to worship there, and he leaned on my Hand, and I bowed my self in the House of Rimmon: When I bowed down my self in the House of Rimmon, the Lord pardon thy Servant in this Thing. And he said unto him, go in Peace. Where it may easily be perceived, that Naaman does not ask Leave to accompany his Master, when he shall go hereafter into the House of Rimmon, but he asks Pardon for having done it heretofore. He mentions only this Sin, and asks Pardon for it, because Idolatry in some Measure includes all other Crimes; and he chiefly insists upon this, in the Declaration that he makes to the Prophet, that from henceforward he would only worship the God of Israel. We have treated on this Matter at full Length in a particular Dissertation before our Commentary on the second Book of Kings, and in the Supplement to the same Book, p. 127.

at the End of our last Tome upon the New Testament.

Naaman returned into his own Country very joyful at the Answer given him by the Prophet; but hardly was he got out of Sight, or had gone the Length of one Hundred and twenty Feet[7], but Gehazi displeased that his Master would take nothing from Naaman, runs after him to ask him for something. Naaman seeing him, presently alights from his Chariot, and asked him what he wanted with him. Gehazi tells him, My Master has sent me to acquaint you, that two young Men of the Sons of the Prophets are just now come to him from Mount Ephraim; he desires you to give him a Talent, and two Changes of Raiment for them. The Talent (of Silver) is worth of our Money about 342 Pounds Sterling. Naaman answered him; you had better take two Talents, and constrained him to receive them, and also sent two of his Servants to carry them for him. Towards Evening he took the two Talents into the House, and sent back Naaman's Servants. Gehazi then coming to attend Elisha, the Prophet asked him where he had been. Gehazi answered, that he had not been out any where. But Elisha said to him, Went not mine Heart with thee, when the Man turned again from his Chariot to meet thee? You intend to buy Fields, and Vines, and Olive-trees with this Money, but you shall also have the Leprosie of Naaman, which shall cleave to you and your Race for ever. And immediately Gehazi became all over white with the Leprosie. See Gehazi. The Scripture after this makes no further Mention of Naaman.

Nabal

NABAL, a very rich but very churlish Man, of but little Understanding, of the Tribe of Judah, and of the Race of Caleb, whose ordinary Dwelling was probably at Maon, one of the most southern Cities of Judah, and who had a great Number of Flocks upon Mount Carmel, not far from Maon. This Carmel is very different from the other Mount Carmel, upon the Coast of the Mediterranean Sea, between Dora and Ptolemais. Whilst David was out of Favour with Saul[1], he was obliged to withdraw into the Wilderness of Paran, and near to Carmel; where he always took great Care, that none of his Followers should do Nabal any Injury, but rather that they should assist his Shepherds and Herdsmen as much as they could. Being therefore informed that Nabal was come thither to shear his Sheep, he sent ten young Men of his Company to him, to make his Compliments to him, and to ask him civilly for something to refresh himself and Followers. But Nabal answered them, " Who is " David, and who is the Son of Jesse? " We are pestered every Day with Servants " that run away from their Masters. Shall " I take the Flesh of my Sheep, and the " Provisions I have brought for my own " Servants, and shall I give it away to " Strangers?" The Men that David had sent went back, and acquainted him with Nabal's churlish Answer.

Then David in Anger caused four Hundred of his People to arm themselves, and went with a Resolution to put Nabal and all his Family to the Sword. But in the Interim one of Nabal's Servants having acquainted his Wife Abigail with what had passed, who was a very wise and prudent Woman; and told her also that David's People had been very useful to 'em while they were in the Desart of Paran, and that they well deserved that at least Nabal should not affront them, and that it was much to be feared that David, who had the Power in his own Hands, would soon take Revenge for this Insult. Abigail presently prepared Provisions and Refreshments, which she sent to David; and she her self got up upon an Ass, unknown to Nabal, and went to make Excuses to David. She met him coming with his Men armed, with a Resolution of putting the whole Family of Nabal to the Sword; but she found Means by her prudent Discourse so far to work upon him, that he gave Thanks to God for sending her to appease his Anger.

Abigail then returned to Nabal, and found him in his House making a Feast as it were for a Prince. His Heart swelled with Joy, and he had drank so much as to be quite drunk. Abigail said nothing to him till Morning; but after he had slept, she told him of the Danger he had been in. This Account had such Effect upon him, that he became as immovable as a Stone, and his Heart was so possessed with Fear, that he died of it in ten Days. David having heard of his Death, said; " Thanks " to the Lord, who has revenged me on " Nabal, for the outrageous Manner in " which he has treated me; and who has " not suffered me to revenge my self, for " the Injury that had been done me." Some Time after he sent to demand Abigail in Marriage, which she not refusing, he took her to Wife. Nabal in the Original signifies a Fool or Madman.

Nabatheans

[Isai. lx. 7.] NABATHEANS, or Nabathenians, Arabians Descendants from Nabajoth. Their Country is called Nabathæa, and extends from the Euphrates to the Red- Sea[1]. Not that the Nabatheans are the only Inhabitants of this vast Tract of Land, but they are the principal. Their chief Cities are, Petra the Capital of Arabia Deserta, Medaba, and some others. For the Country may be said to be intirely Desart, and the Nabatheans are at no Trouble in building Houses, or dwelling in Cites, nor any of the other Inhabitants of Arabia Deserta. They look upon this as a kind of Servitude and Baseness, to be tied down to the Earth. The wandering Manner of Life that they lead, with their Wives, Children and Cattle, and the Liberty they enjoy without being accountable to any Body, appears to them to be one of the greatest Blessings of Life. Their chief Substance consists in Cattle. Isaiah promises Jerusalem, that the fat Rams of Kedar and Nebaioth should be brought into the Temple of the Lord, and offered upon his Altar.

The Nabatheans are hardly known in Scripture, but from the Time of the Maccabees. During the several Wars that the Jews maintained against the Syrians, and while almost all the other Nations about them were against the Hebrews, the Nabatheans alone shewed them Friendship. Judas Maccabæus going to the Assistance of his Brethren in the Country of Gilead, was very well received by the Nabathites[2]. Some Time after[3] Jonathan Maccabæus sent his Brother John to the Nabatheans, to conduct and deposite with them the heavy Baggage of his Army, which was an Incumbrance to him; but the Inhabitants of Medaba, or Nadabatha, took John as he went, slew him, and seized his Carriages. Diodorus Siculus[4] places among the Nabatheans the Lake Asphaltites, the Palm-trees and Gardens of Balm that are near there, and the City of Petra. Their Country extended Northward as far as Libanus. Dionysius the Geographer places the Nabatheates at the Foot of Libanus. Josephus says[5] that Jonathan Maccabæus being in the Country of Emath, and having drove his Enemies beyond the River Eleuthera, he penetrated into Arabia, beat the Nabatheans, and came to Damascus. Epiphanius[6] says, that the Ebionites came chiefly out of the Country of the Nabatheans, and from Paneas.

Nablum

NABLUM, in Hebrew, Nebel[1], an Instrument of Musick among the Hebrews. The Seventy and the Vulgate translate it sometimes by Nablum, and at other Times by Psalterion, or Lyra, or even Cithara. The Nablum was a stringed Instrument, very near of the Form of a Δ, which was played upon by both Hands, and with a kind of Bow. It sounded by Means of a Belly that was hollow above, and was touched below. Our Dissertation may be read, concerning the Instruments of Musick of the antient Hebrews, before the second Tome of the Commentary upon the Psalms.

NABONASSAR, King of Babylon, the same as Baladan, Berodach, or Merodach-baladan, Isai. xxxix. 1. and 2 Kings xx. 12. He is also called Belesis, or Belessus, in Agathias and Alexander Polyhistor. But lastly he is most known by the Name of Nabonassar, given him by Hipparchus, Ptolemy, and Censorinus. He reigned fourteen Years at Babylon, from the Year of the World 3257, to 3272, and had Nabius for his Successor. The Epocha or Æra of Nabonassar, so famous among Chronologers, falls upon the Year 3967 of the Julian Period, 3257 from the Creation of the World, 747 Years before the Vulgar Æra, and 743 Years before the Birth of Christ. Naboth

NABOTH, an Israelite of the City of Jezreel, who lived under Ahab King of the Ten Tribes, and had a fine Vineyard in Jezreel, near the King's Palace[1]. This Prince required of him, that either he would sell him his Vineyard, in Order to make a Kitchen Garden of it, or that he would accept of a better Vineyard instead of it. But Naboth answered him, God forbid that I should sell the Inheritance of my Fathers[2]. This Answer provoked Ahab, and returning into his House, he threw himself upon his Bed, turned towards the Wall, and refused to eat. Jezebel his Wife coming to him, asked him what was the Matter? Which he acquainting her with, she replied, Surely your Authority, I see, is great in Israel. Rise and eat, and set your Heart at Rest; I'll take it upon my self, to give you Naboth's Vineyard. At the same Time she writ Letters in Ahab's Name, sealed them with the King's Seal, and sent them to the Elders of Jezreel, where Naboth lived.

The Contents of which Letters were these. Publish a Fast, make Naboth sit among the Chief of the People, suborn against him two Sons of Belial, or two false Witnesses, who may depose, that Naboth has blasphemed against God and the King. The Text has it, that Naboth has blessed God and the King; but it is agreed, that to bless is here put for to curse, as likewise in several other Passages. See Job i. 5. ii. 9. The holy Text, out of Respect, avoids even the Mention of the Word Curse, when it is to be applied to God. The Matter was performed as the Queen had ordered it, Naboth appeared among the chief Men of Jezreel, was accused of having uttered injurious and blasphemous Words, both against God and the King, was presently condemned, taken without the City, and stoned.

These corrupt Judges presently sent Word to Jezebel that Naboth was dead, and that being found guilty of High-treason, all his Goods were forfeited to the King. Jezebel immediately went to the King, and bid him take Possession of Naboth's Vineyard, for he was dead. Ahab immediately departed from Samaria, and came to Jezreel to take Possession of Naboth's Estate. But the Lord commanded the Prophet Elijah to give him the Meeting, and to say to him; Have you then put Naboth to Death, and have you seized upon his Inheritance? But hear what the Lord says; in the same Place that the Dogs licked the Blood of Naboth, shall they also lick your Blood. If Ahab dies in the City, he shall be eaten up by the Dogs; and if he dies in the Country, he shall be devoured by the Birds of the Air. Jezebel shall also be eaten up of the Dogs in the Field of Jezreel. These Threats of the Prophet had some Effect upon Ahab, for he humbled himself, and put on Sack-cloth; but his Repentance was not sincere enough to repair the Evil he had committed. His Punishment was respited for a while, but not revoked. See the Articles of AHAB and JEZEBEL; and 2 Kings ix. x.

Moses forbids the Israelites to alienate their Lands, except on the utmost Necessity, Levit. xxv. 23, 24. And even then he permitted them to redeem them continually: He ordered moreover that in the Sabbatical Year, and the Year of Jubilee, every one should re-enter upon their Inheritance, which could not have been in this Case, if Naboth had parted with his Vineyard to the King. Lastly, it was a kind of Infamy for an Israelite to sell the Lands of his Fathers. Naboth therefore chose rather to expose himself to the King's Resentment, than to do so shameful a Thing unworthy of a Man of Honour. See St. Ambrose, l. iii. de Officiis, c. 9. The NACHON. Mention is made of the Floor of Nachon in the second Book of Samuel, vi. 6. So that Nachon must be the Name of a Man, who is known by no other Passage of Scripture, except that when the Oxen which brought the Ark were arrived at his Threshing-Floor, they began to stumble; this put the Ark in Danger of being overturned, which made Uzzah put his Hand to it to hold it up. But for this Piece of officious Irreverence, the Lord struck him dead. Others translate the Hebrew[1] by the prepared Floor, the Floor of Obed-edom, which was near, prepared to place the Ark therein. The first Book of Chronicles, xiii. 9. reads the Floor of Chidon, instead of the Floor of Nachon. The Chaldee has only in the Place prepared. This Place, wherever it was, either was in Jerusalem, or very near to Jerusalem, and the House of [2 Sam. vi. 10. Levit. ix. 24.] Obed-edom, which was in this City.

Nahash (I)

I. NAHASH, or Naas, King of the Ammonites. He came upon Jabesh-Gilead a Month after the Election of Saul to be King of Israel[1]. The Hebrews of Jabesh finding themselves not strong enough to resist Nahash, said to him, capitulate with us, and we will be Subjects to you. Nahash answered them; The Terms I intend to allow you are these, to pull out every one's right Eye, and to make you a Reproach in Israel. Perhaps his Intention in this was, to make them unserviceable in War, and uncapable of making Use of the Bow. The Elders of Jabesh answered him, Grant us a Truce of seven Days, and if in that Time our Brethren do not come to our Relief, we will surrender our selves upon your Conditions. They sent therefore to Gibeah, where Saul resided, and their Messengers declared the Distress that Jabesh was in, before all the People; who no sooner had heard of it, but they fell a-weeping. But Saul happening to return just then out of the Fields, where he had been to take Care of his Oxen, and seeing the People to weep thus, he enquired into the Reason of it. They then acquainted him with the Message they had received from the Inhabitants of Jabesh, at which being moved by the Spirit of God, he cut his two Oxen in Pieces, and sent them by Express through all the Coasts of Israel; telling them, that so should the Cattle of all those be treated, who did not come presently to follow Saul and Samuel.

The People struck with Consternation, appeared all at the Place appointed to a Man; and Saul taking a Review of his Army, found he had three hundred Thousand Israelites, without reckoning the Men of Judah, who were thirty Thousand. Then Saul sent back the Messengers to Jabesh-Gilead, and bid them acquaint those that sent them, that to Morrow when the Sun should be in its full Strength they should be releived. The Messengers returned, but took Care to conceal the Success of their Expedition from Nahash. On the contrary they told him, that to Morrow we will surrender our selves into your Hands, and then do with us as you please. In the mean Time as soon as it was Evening, Saul took all his Army over Jordan; and marching all Night, he came by Break of Day to the Camp of the Ammonites, who expected no such Thing. This might be about the fourth Day of the Cessation granted to Jabesh.

He divided his Army into three Bodies, and charged the Ammonites with so much Fury, that he intirely routed them. Those that escaped were only a few Straglers, and not so much as two of 'em could be found together. Thus was this War finished at once, and Josephus[2] says, that Nahash himself was killed in the Battle.

But however this be, Nahash being newly dead[1], David sent to make his Compliments of Condolence to Hanun his Son and Successor. But instead of returning this Civility, he affronted and insulted David's Ambassadors, which drew a War upon him, as is mentioned under the Article HANUN.

Nahum

NAHUM, the seventh of the twelve lesser Prophets, a Native of Elkoshai[1], a little Village of Galilee, whose Ruins were still in Being in the Time of St. Jerome. However there are some[2], who think that Elkoshai is rather the Name of his Father, and that the Place of his Birth was Begabor, or Bethabara, beyond Jordan. Heretofore they used to shew the Tomb of this Prophet at a Village called Bethogabre, now called Giblin, near Emmaus. The Chaldee calls him Nahum of Beth-koshi[3], or of Beth-ketzi: But the Situation of this Place is as much unknown as of that of Elkoshai. The particular Circumstances of Nahum's Life are altogether unknown. His Prophecy consists of three Chapters, which make up but one Discourse, wherein he foretels the Destruction of Niniveh. He describes it in so lively and pathetick a Manner, that he seems to have been upon the Spot, to declare it to 'em.

Opinions are divided as to the Time in which he prophesied. Josephus[4] will have it, that he foretold the Fall of Niniveh one Hundred and fifteen Years before it happened, which will bring the Time of Nahum to that of King Abaz. The Jews[5] say, that he prophesied under Manasseh: Clemens Alexandrinus[6] puts him between Daniel and Ezekiel, and consequently during the Captivity. But we are inclined to be of St. Jerome's Opinion, that he foretold the Destruction of Niniveh[7] in the Time of Hezekiah, and after the War of Sennecharib in Egypt, mentioned by Berosus[8]. Nahum speaks plainly of the taking of Noamon, a [Nahum iii. 8.] City of Egypt, of the Haughtiness [Nahum ii. 13. Nahum ii. 11. i. 9. 11. 13. 15.] of Rabshakeh, of the Defeat of Sennecharib; and he speaks of 'em as Things that were passed. He supposes that Judah was still in their own Country, and that they there celebrated their Festivals. He speaks of the Captivity, and of the Dispersion of the Ten Tribes. All these Marks convince us, that Nahum cannot be placed before the fifteenth Year of Hezekiah, since the Expedition of Sennecharib against this Prince was in the fourteenth Year of his Reign.

And as the taking of Niniveh foretold by him, cannot be the first Siege of this Place, which happened under Sardanapalus a long Time before; (that is, in the Year of the World 3257) it must be necessarily understood of the second Siege of the same City, formed by Nabopolassar and Astyages, in the Year of the World 3378, before Christ 622, before the Vulgar Æra 626, which comes to the sixteenth Year of King Josiah, under whom St. Jerome places the Destruction of Niniveh. Tobit says, that this City was taken by Nebuchadnezzar and Ahasuerus, giving the Name of Nebuchadnezzar to Nabopolassar, and to Astyages that of Ahasuerus.

This Prophet gives us a fine Description of the Destruction of Niniveh. He says that this City should be ruined by a Deluge of Waters, which should overflow it, and demolish [Nahum i. 8. ii. 6. 8.] its walls. Diodorus Siculus and Athenæus relate[9], that during the Time that this City was besieged by Belesis, and by Arbaces under Sardanapalus, the River Tigris swelled in such a manner, that it overthrew twenty Furlongs of the Walls of Niniveh. But as the Siege here mentioned by Nahum happened after the taking of Niniveh under Sardanapalus, it must needs be, that the same Thing happened to Niniveh at the second and last Siege under Nebuchadnezzar and Astyages. Probably the Besiegers at this second Siege determined the Course of the Waters, and brought on the same Fate to the City, which had been so favourable at the first Siege.

Nahum thus describes the March of the Troops against the City. “ The Bucklers “ of these Warriors cast forth Flames of “ Fire, they themselves are clothed in Purple, the Bridles of their Horses sparkle “ as they march to fight, their Chiefs are “ like those whom Wine makes intrepid. “ In the City all is in Confusion; their Chariots are perplexed, they break in the “ Streets as they drive against one another. “ The Fury, Rage, and Despair, with “ which they are transported, make their “ Eyes flame like Lamps, and their Faces “ seem to dart out Thunder and Lightning. They encourage one another to “ fight, by the Remembrance of so many “ brave Soldiers, which Nineveh had produced. They shall make vain Attempts “ to defend themselves, to mount upon “ their Walls, to prepare their Engines; “ the Gates of the Tigris are unlocked, its “ Banks are burst open, its Bridges are “ thrown down, the Temple is demolished to its very Foundations. Nineveh lies “ all under Water like a great Lake, its “ Citizens fly away; it cries out, stop, stop, “ but no Body returns. O ye Conquerors, “ plunder its Silver, pillage its Gold, its “ Riches are infinite, its Vessels and costly “ Furniture are inestimable. Nineveh is “ taken, is overthrown, is torn to Pieces. Nothing can be seen there but “ Men whose Hearts melt with Fear, “ whose Knees tremble, whose Bodies “ faint away, whose Countenances are “ ghastly and disfigured.

“ Where is now that Den of Lions? “ Where is the Nursery of young Lions? “ That Cave where the Lion retired with “ her Young, where no one came to disturb her? I came to you, says the Lord “ of Hosts, I shall burn your Chariots, and “ convert them to Smoke. The Sword “ shall destroy your young Lions. I will “ take from you what you have taken from “ others, and the insolent Voices of your “ Ambassadors shall be heard no more. “ Wo to thee, thou City of Blood, full of “ Rapine, of Robbery and Injustice. I “ hear already the Whips which sound “ from afar, the Wheels which hurry on “ with a great Noise, the Horses that “ proudly neigh, the Chariots that fly like “ a Tempest, and the Horses that rush “ with full Speed. I see the Swords glitter, the Darts sparkle, a Multitude of “ Men fallen by their Swords, a bloody “ and cruel Defeat, a Slaughter that has “ no End, Heaps of Bodies fallen upon “ each other, &c.” See Nineveh afterwards.

By this Sketch the Reader may judge of the Stile of Nahum, of the Liveliness of his Figures, of the Force of his Expression, and of the Boldness of his Drawing. I cannot be persuaded, that any Thing like it is to be met with in profane Authors. The Time of his Death is not known. The Greek Meneologies, and the Latin Martyrologies, place his Festival on the first of December. Petrus Natalis however places it on the twenty fourth of the same Month, which he says was the Day of his Death; without acquainting us from whence he had learned this Circumstance.

[Exod. xxxiii. 5.] NAKEDNESS, Nudity. These Terms, besides their ordinary and literal Meaning, sometimes stand for being deprived of Succour, or disarmed. For Example, after the worshipping of the Golden Calf, the Israelites found themselves naked in the midst of their Enemies. God had quitted them, and withdrawn his Protection from them. He took Vengeance of their Perfidy by the Hands of the Levites, who killed twenty three Thousand of them. And the Day following, when Moses went up to Mount Sinai, God said to him; Bid the People put off their Ornaments, their Cloaths, their usual Arms; Jam nunc depone ornatum tuum, the People obeyed, Nullus ex more indutus est cultu suo.

[Exod. iii. 5.] The Nakedness of the Feet was a Token of Respect. Moses put off his Shoes when he came near the burning Bush. The greatest Part of the Commentators are of Opinion[1], that the Priests served in the Tabernacle with their Feet naked, and afterwards in the Temple. In the Enumeration that Moses makes of the Habit and Ornaments of the Priests, he no where mentions any Dress for the Feet. The Thalmudists[2] teach, that if they had but stept with their Feet upon a Cloth, a Skin, or even upon the Foot of one of their Companions, their Service would have been unlawful. That as the Pavement of the Temple was of Marble, the Priests used to incur several Inconveniencies in the Time of their Attendance, because of the Nakedness of their Feet; to prevent which in the second Temple, there was a Room in which the Pavement was warm, that they might come there to warm their Feet. Also the frequent Ablutions appointed them in the Temple seem to insinuate, that their Feet were naked.

There are some also that maintain, that the common Israelites might not enter into this holy Place, till they had first put off their Shoes, and cleaned their Feet. To this Purpose are applied these Words of [Eccles. v. 1. Levit. xix. 30. Matth. x. 9, 10.] Ecclesiastes, Keep thy Foot when thou goest to the House of God. Take Care that your Feet be clean. Rabbi Solomon, upon these Words of Leviticus, Ye shall keep my Sabbaths, and reverence my Sanctuary, understands the Obligation of appearing before the Lord with naked Feet. Maimonides says expressly[3], that it was never allowed to enter the House of God upon the holy Mountain with Shoes on, or with a Staff, or with their ordinary Cloaths on, or with dirty Feet. Some think our Saviour alludes to this Custom, when he says to his Disciples, Provide neither Gold nor Silver nor Brass in your Purses. Nor Scrip for your Journey, neither two Coats, neither Shoes, not yet Staves. For the Labourer is worthy of his Hire. The Turks still observe to this Day not to enter into their Mosques, till after they have washed their Feet, and their Hands, and till they have put off the outward Covering of their Legs. The Christians of Ethiopia enter not into their Churches except with their bare Feet[4]. The Indian Brachmans have the same Respect for their Pagods. Solinus says[5], that no one can enter into the Temple of Diana of Crete, till he has made his Legs bare. Juvenal says[6], that even the Jews kept their Sabbaths with naked Feet.

Exercent ubi festa mero pede Sabbatha

Reges. The Nakedness of the Feet is sometimes put in Scripture for that Nakedness that Modesty forbids: With-hold thy Feet from being [Jerem. ii. 25. Jerem. xiii. 26] unshod, says Jeremiah. Take Care of discovering your Feet, or of falling into a shameful Action. And elsewhere, Therefore will I discover thy Skirts upon thy Face, that thy Shame may appear. The Feet express what [Lam. i. 9. Levit. xx. 19.] Modesty would conceal. Sordes ejus in pedibus ejus, & aqua pedum.

To uncover the Nakedness of any one, commonly is put for a shameful and unlawful Conjunction, or an incestuous Marriage. [1 Sam. xix. 24. Isai. xx. 2, 3. 1 Cor. iv. 11. 2 Cor. xi. 27. Job xxvi. 6. Hebr. iv. 13.] Ignominiam carnis suæ nudavit. And Ezekiel xvi. 37. Nudabo Ignominiam tuam. And again, Eras nuda & confusione plena.

Nakedness is sometimes put for being ill clad. Saul continued naked all Day long in the Midst of the Prophets; that is, having but few Cloaths on, or, as one may say, in his Shirt. Isaiah receives Orders from the Lord, to go naked; that is to say, cloathed as a Slave, and half naked Thus it is recommended to cloath the Naked, that is, such as have very bad Cloaths on. St. Paul says, that he was in the Cold, in Nakedness; that is, in Poverty, and the [Rom. viii. 35. Gen. ii. 25. iii. 7.] want of Rayment.

Naked is put for discovered, known, manifest. So Job, Hell is naked before him. The Sepulchre, the Place wherein the Souls of Men are reserved, is naked and uncovered to the Eyes of God. He pierces thro' the Depth and Darkness of it. St. Paul says in the same Sense; Neither is there any Creature that is not manifest in his Sight; but all Things are naked and opened unto the Eyes of him with whom we have to do.

The Nakedness of Adam and Eve was unknown to them before they sinned. They were not ashamed at it, because Concupiscence and irregular Desires had not yet made the Flesh rebel against the Spirit; and their Nakedness excited no Disorder in their Imaginations, nor any Thing that was irregular or contrary to Reason. They were exempt from whatever Indecency might happen among us, upon the Occasion of the Nakedness of the Body. The brute Creatures are under no Apprehension of Shame at the Nakedness of their Bodies, and it gives us no Offence, because there is nothing irregular in it, or contrary to Order.

Some Interpreters translate the Text of Moses[7], Adam and Eve were wise, or crafty; for the Hebrew Word Harom has sometimes this Signification. But it is plain from the Sequel of Moses's Discourse, that he meant it of bodily Nakedness; for he says, that to hide their Nakedness they made themselves Aprons of Fig-Leaves. 'Twas believed by the Pagans[8], that in the golden Age all Men went naked.

Name

NAME. The Name of God. See JEHOVAH before. The Name without any other Addition, signifies the Name of the Lord, which was not pronounced out of Respect. For Example, And the Israelitish [Levit. xxiv. 11.] Woman's Son blasphemed the Name. If any one blasphemed the sacred Name, he was taken out of the Camp, and all those that had heard him put their Hands upon his Head, and the whole People stoned him. Thus was expiated the Blasphemy of the Name.

The Name of God often stands for God himself, his Power, or Majesty. Adjutorium nostrum in nomine Domini. Our Assistance, or Strength and Hope is in the Name of God, in his Goodness, Power, &c. His Name only is more effectual than a whole Army. The Hebrews believe that Moses, that Jesus Christ, and the Prophets, performed their Miracles by pronouncing the Name of God, the true Pronunciation of which being known to them, though at this Day (they say) it is intirely forgot.

To invoke the almighty Name of God, to serve in the Name of God, to bless in the Name of the Lord, to build an House in the Name of the Lord; in all these Expressions the Name is put for the Lord himself.

[Exod. xx. 7.] To take the Name of God in vain, is to swear falsly, or without Occasion, and to mingle the Name of God in our Discourses, or our Oaths, either falsly or rashly, or wantonly, or unnecessarily, or presumptuously. God forbids to make Mention of the [Exod. xxiii. 13.] Names of other Gods. He would not so much as have them named, or their Names pronounced. 'Tis doing them too much Honour to swear by their Names, and to take them as Witnesses to what we say or affirm, as if they were really something. The Gods of the Heathen are nothing at all, therefore the Israelites were to shew nothing but Contempt for them. The Hebrews hardly ever pronounced the Name Baal; they disfigured it for Example, by saying Mephibosheth or Meribosheth, instead of Mephibaal or Meribaal; where Bosheth signifies something shameful or contemptible. Instead of saying Elohim, they said Elilim, Gods of Filthiness.

To give a Name is a Token of Command and Authority. The Father gives Names to his Children, to his Slaves, to his [Gen. ii. 20.] brute Creatures. It is said in Genesis, that Adam gave a Name to his Wife, and to all the Animals, and that the Name he gave them became their true Name. God changed the Name of Abram, Jacob, and Sarai. All which expresses his absolute Dominion over all Men, and his particular Benevolence towards those, whom he receives more especially into the Number of his own. Hence it was that he gave a Name, even before their Birth, to some Persons whom he appointed, and who belonged to him in a particular Manner. So he gave a Name to Jedediah, or Solomon Son of David, to the Messiah, to John the Baptist, &c.

God speaking to Moses, promises he will send his Angel before him, to introduce him into the Land of Promise; and says, that he has put his Name in this Angel: For [Exod. xxiii. 21.] my Name is in him. He shall act, he shall speak, he shall punish in my Name; he shall bear my Name, he shall be my Ambassador, he shall receive the same Honours as belong to me. And in Effect, the Angel that spoke to Moses, that appeared to him in the Bush, that gave him the Law upon Mount Sinai, speaks and acts always as God himself; and Moses always gives him the Name of God. Thus says the Lord, and the Lord spake to Moses, saying.

[Exod. xxxiii. 12.] To know any one by his Name, I know thee by Name, expresses a Distinction, a Friendship, a particular Familiarity. The Kings of the East had very little Communication with their Subjects; they saw them but seldom, and hardly ever appeared in publick. So that when they knew any one of their Servants by Name, that they vouchsafed to speak to them, to call them, and to admit them into their Presence, it was esteem'd as a very great mark of Favour. None but such Officers as saw the King Face to Face, had this great Privilege conferr'd upon them.

[Numb. xvi. 2.] Those that in the Assemblies were call'd by their Names, per Nomina vocabantur, were the principal of the People, the Heads of Tribes, or of the great Families; or or who had some great Imployment or particular Dignity.

[Isai. xlii. 1. xlv. 4.] On these Occasions they called thus; for Example, Aaron and his Posterity, Hus and his Family, Caleb and those under him, and so of others. They call'd by their Name only the first and chief of the People. I have called thee by thy Name, may also signify, I have appointed thee by Name to this Office; I have changed your Name, to shew that I took you into my Service; as Nebuchadnezzar gave new Names to Daniel and his Companions, when he took them into his Service. God speaking of the fixed Place where his Tabernacle should be set up, or of the Place where his Temple was to be built, calls it The Place which the Lord shall choose to place his Name there. That [Deut. xiv. 23. xvi. 2.] there his Name should be called upon, and that that Place should be called the House or Temple of the Lord. That this place should have the Honour of bearing the Name of the Lord, of being consecrated to his Service, and dedicated to his Worship. All these Expressions shew the utmost Veneration which the Hebrews had for whatever in any wise belong'd to God.

[Josh. vi. 27.] Name is often put for Renown or Reputation. The Name of Joshua became famous over all the Country. And God said [2 Sam. vii. 9.] to David, when he reproached him with the Crime he had committed with Bathsheba, I have made thee a great Name, like unto the Name of the great Men that are in the Earth. I have given you Ho nour and Reputation, equal to that of the greatest of Monarchs.

[Psal. ix. 5. Ruth iv. 5, 10, &c.] To raise up the Name of the Dead, is said of the Brother of a Man departed this Life without Children, when this Brother marries the Widow of the deceased, and revives his Name in Israel, by the Means of the Children which he may beget. These are deemed to be the Children of the Deceased, and make his memory alive again. In a contrary Sense to this, to blot out the Name of any one, is to exterminate his Memory; to extirpate his Race, his Children, Works or Houses, and in general whatever may cause his Name to live up on the Earth. Thou hast destroy'd the wicked, thou hast put out their Name for ever and ever. That their Names may be blotted out of the Book of Life, that they may be no more mentioned, no more than those that are dead and buried. The Name of the Wicked shall rot. It shall stink, [Prov. x. 7.] and if it be at all remembered, it shall be only with Abhorrence and Detestation.

[Jerem. xiv. 14, 15. xxvii. 15, &c. Isai. iv. 1. Ezek. xvi. 15. Matth. vii. 22.] When Isaiah describes a Time of Calamity and Disgrace in Israel, wherein men should become very scarce, he says; In that Day seven Women shall take hold of one Man, saying, we will eat our own Bread, and wear our own Apparel; only let us be called by thy Name, to take away our Reproach. Be pleased to take us for Wives, and let us be called your Spouses. Invocetur nomen tuum super nos. The Lord complains in Ezekiel, that his Spouses (Judah and Israel) are become Prostitutes, tho' they bore his Name; that they have defil'd his holy Name, which they bore as his Spouses, by those Abominations, and by that Idolatry, to which they had abandon'd themselves. Fornicata est in nomine meo.

God often complains that the false Prophets prophesy'd in his Name. Jesus Christ says in the Gospel, that in the Day of Judgment many shall come and say, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesy'd in thy Name, and in thy Name have cast out Devils, and in thy Name done many wonderful Works? [Mark ix. 40.] Elsewhere he says, whosoever shall give a Cup of cold Water in his Name, shall not lose his Reward; and he that receives a Prophet or a just Man, in the Name of a Prophet or just Man, shall receive a Recompence in Proportion to his good Intention. In [Matth. x. 41.] all these Instances the Word Name is put for the Person, for his Service, his Sake, his Authority.

So many Names of Men is sometimes put [Rev. iii. 4. Rev. xi. 13. Vulg.] for so many Heads or Persons. For Example Thou hast a few Names even in Sardis, which have not defiled their Garments. And elsewhere, Occisi sunt in terræ motu nomina hominum septem millia. Seven thousand Men perished in the Earthquake.

Nanæa

[1 Macc. vi. 1, 2, 3, &c.] NANÆA. When Antiochus Epiphanes went into Persia,[1] with a Design to enrich himself at the Expence of the People, or rather to plunder the Temples of that Country, of what Gold and Silver he could find; he came to Elymais, where there was a famous Temple dedicated to Anais or Nanæa, the Goddess of the Country. He pretended that he would marry the Goddess, that he might have the better Title to the Riches in the Temple, by Way of Dowry. The Priests shew'd him all the Treasures of the Temple; but when afterwards he would enter in to take Possession of them, they opened a secret Door of the Temple, or a Hole that was in the Ceiling, and shower'd down upon him and his Attendants, such a shower of Stones, that they were overwhelmed with them. After which the Priests hew'd them in Pieces, cut off their Heads, and threw them out. Thus it is related in the second Book of the Maccabees.

But the first Book of the same History tells us, that Antiochus having heard there was a very rich Temple at Elymais, marched to this City with a Design to take and plunder it; and that the Citizens being informed of this Design, rose in a Body against him, and obliged him to retire to Babylon. To reconcile these two different Accounts, it may be supposed, that Antiochus came to Elymais, and went into the Temple of Nanæa with a Design to pillage it. But the Priests and Inhabitants rising in its Defence, this Prince was obliged to retreat as well as he could, after having lost some of his People, who had ventured too far into the inner Parts of the Temple. This happened in the Year of the World 3840, before Christ 160, and before the vulgar Æra 164.

Authors that mention this Temple of Elymais, are not agreed about the Goddess that was worship'd there. Polybius and Diodorus Siculus think it was the Goddess Diana, or the Moon. Appian maintains that it was Venus. Polybius calls her Venus of Elymais. Others believe it was Cybele, or the Mother of the Gods. But the most common Opinion is, that it was Diana, the same that Strabo calls Anais, or Anaitis. It was a Virgin Goddess, because Antiochus pretended to espouse her; and Plutarch relates, that King Artaxerxes being desirous to take away the beautiful Aspasia from his Son, being in love with her himself, devoted her to a perpetual Virginity in honour of Anais of Ecbatana. z 2 Macc. i. 13 14. Vide & 1 Macc. vi. 1, 2, &c.

Naomi

NAOMI, or Noemi, Wife of Elimelech. They were obliged to retire into the Land of the Moabites, upon Occasion of a Famine in Judea; where Elimelech dying, Naomi settled and disposed of her two Sons in marriage, Mahlon to Ruth, and Chilion to Orpah. These two young Men dying also, and leaving no Children, Naomi took a Resolution of returning into Judea. Her two Daughters-in-Law were desirous of returning along with her, but she dissuaded them from it, telling them she should have no Opportunity of settling them in her own Country. Orpah was prevailed with to stay behind, but Ruth would needs go along with [Ruth i. 1, 2, 3, &c.] her to Bethlehem. When they came thither, the report was soon spread in the Neighbourhood, and the People came to bid her welcome. She told them, that they must no longer call her Naomi, that is Fair, but Mara, which is Bitterness. For the Lord, says she, has heap'd trouble upon me. I went away full, but the Lord has brought me back empty and desolate.

One day as Ruth went out to glean in the Fields, she happened to come in the Fields of Boaz, who encouraged her to follow his Reapers, and made her eat among his Harvesters. At her return Home, Naomi informed her, that Boaz was her near Kinsman; and she brought it about at last, that Boaz married Ruth, as mention'd before under the article of Boaz, and will be taken notice of under Ruth. By this Marriage Ruth had a Son call'd Obed; upon which the Women of Bethlehem again congratulated Naomi, saying, Blessed be the Lord, who has not permitted that your Family should remain without a Successor, and who has given you a Person to be the Comfort of your Life, and the Support of your old Age. [Ruth iv.] The exact Time is not known, in which this History of Ruth and Naomi happen'd; but we know that between the time of the Marriage of Salmon with Rahab of Jericho, and the Birth of David, are three hundred and sixty six Years, which are filled up only with these three Persons, Boaz, Obed and Jesse. So that each of these must have lived very long to fill up this Space.

Naphtha

[Dan. iii. 46. Vulg.] NAPHTHA, a Sort of Bitumen found about Babylon. Daniel says, that they heated the Furnace, in which Shadrach, Meshach and Abednego were to be cast, with Naphtha, Pitch and other combustible Matter. 'Tis thought that Noah made use of Naphtha or Bitumen, to secure the outside of the Ark, and that the Walls of the Tower of Babel were cemented together with a Sort of Mortar, in which Naphtha was a chief Ingredient. We are assured that Naphtha is so subtle and inflammable a Substance, that it even attracts the Fire to it, when it comes to a certain distance. Strabo[1] says, that it cannot be quenched by common Water. Pliny relates,[2] that Medea burnt a Woman, against whom she had conceived a Jealousy, by giving her a Crown dipt in Naphtha, which took Fire as soon as she approached the Altar, in order to sacrifice.

Naphtha is a kind of Petrol or Rock-Fruit, which is to be found in several Parts of the World, sometimes of one Colour, and sometimes of another, according to the Nature of the Rock, or of the Soil that produces it; sometimes more Liquid, sometimes less, always very inflammable, sulphurous, clammy. The Word Naphtha is derived from the Chaldee or Hebrew Noph or Naph, to drop or distil, because it runs or drops as Bitumen, says Pliny[3]. It is got in great Quantities from certain Springs, which are near the City Hit in Chaldæa.[4] It is also found in the Mountains of Farganah, in the Province of Trantoxane. To distinguish Naphtha from Pitch, the Turks call it Black -Mastick. There is a Kind which is called rocky, Naphtha Petræa, because it distils from the Rocks. 'Tis found in the Duchy of Modena, running from a Rock in a certain Mountain. There is some also about Ragusa; and even in several Provinces of France, as Auvergne, &c. The Naphtha of France is soft as Pitch, liquid, black, of an ungrateful scent. That of Italy is a Kind of Petrol, or a clear Oil, sometimes White, sometimes Red, sometimes Yellow, sometimes Green, and sometimes Black. Isaac Vossius has wrote a Dissertation upon the antient and modern Naphtha.

Naphtali

NAPHTALI, or Nephtali, the sixth Son of Jacob by Bilhah, Rachel's Hand-Maid. The Word Naphtali comes from the Hebrew Phatal, which signifies to struggle, to strive, to wrestle, to supplant. When Rachel gave him this Name, she said,[1] With great Wrestlings have I wrestled with my Sister, and I have prevailed. " I have " strove with her after the Manner of " wrestlers, who endeavour to throw one " another down; I have made great Ef- " forts and at last have obtained the Victory." We know but few of the Particulars of the Life of Naphtali. His Sons were Jahzeel, Guni, [Gen. xlvi. 24.] Jezer and Shillem. The Patriarch Jacob, when he gave his Blessing to his Son Naphtali, [Gen. xlix. 21.] said to him; Naphtali is a Hind let loose; he giveth goodly Words. Most of the Rabbins and Commentators apply this to Barak, who was of the Tribe of Naphtali, and who having at first shew'd the Fear of a Hind, by refusing to march against the Canaanites, unless the Prophetess Deborah would go along with him; afterwards shewed that he imitated the [Judg. iv. 5.] Swiftness of a Hind in pursuit of the Enemy. He signalized his Eloquence also in that sublime Canticle he composed with Deborah, to give Thanks to God for their Victory.

The Septuagint give another Explication to this Text of Genesis,e Naphthali is as a Tree that puts forth young Branches, the Shoots of which are fine. This Sense seems to me as good at least as that which is commonly follow'd. Jacob commends the great Fertility of Naphtali, and the Beauty of his Race. Naphtali had but four Sons, and yet at the coming out of Egypt his Tribe made up fifty three thousand four hundred Men able to bear Arms. Moses in the Blessing he gave to the [Deut. xxxii. 23.] same Tribe, says, O Naphthali, satisfied with Favour, and full with the Blessing of the Lord, possess thou the West and the South. [The Vulgate reads it, The Sea and the South, and the Hebrew will admit of either Interpretation.] That is, the Sea of Gennesaret, which was to the South of the Inheritance of this Tribe. His Soil was very fruitful in Corn and Oil. His Limits were extended into upper and lower Galilee, having Jordan to the East; the Tribes of Asher and Zebulun to the West, Libanus to the North, and the Tribe of Issachar to the South.

The Tribe of Naphtali encamped in the Wilderness on the North-side of the Tabernacle, between the Tribes of Dan and Manasseh. [Numb. ii. 25, 26, 27, &c.] After the Division that Joshua made of the Land of Promise, the Children of Naphtali did not destroy all the Canaanites that they found in the Country, but contented [Judg. i. 33.] themselves with making them tributary. The Naphtalites being on the Frontiers to the North, were first invaded, and first made Captives by the Kings of Assyria.[2] Isaiah foretold to them, that they should see the Light of the [Isai. ix. 1.] Messiah, and should be first illuminated by the Light of the Gospel. And indeed our Saviour preached oftener and longer in Galilee, and particularly in the [Matth. iv. 13, 15.] Tribe of Naphtali, than in any other Part of Judea. In the Testament of the twelve Patriarchs may be read several Circumstances of the Life of Naphtali, and some Prophecies ascribed to him: But this Book is accounted apocryphal, and is of no Authority among the Learned.

Naplouse

[John iv. 20.] NAPLOUSE, in Greek Neapolis. 'Tis the same as Sechem, a famous City in the Province of Samaria; or at least Naplouse was very near the Place of Sechem. When the Emperor Vespatian rebuilt Shechem, he gave it the Name of Flavia, which was the Name of his own Family. It had also the Name of Neapolis, or the new City, from whence is formed the Name Naplouse, which it bears to this Day. It was heretofore an episcopal Seat; now it is the Head of a little Government bearing its Name. The Persian Geographer says, that Naplouse was one of Adams Oratories. We know that the Inhabitants of Shechem boasted, that the ancient Patriarchs had worshiped upon their Mountain. In Monte Hor adoraverunt Patres nostri. In the 583 Year of the Hegira, or 1205 of Jesus Christ, the famous Saladin, after taking of Tiberias, made himself Master of Shechem and Samaria. Narcissus

NARCISSUS. St. Paul in his Epistle to [Rom. xvi. 11. Phil. iv. 22.] the Romans, says, Greet them that be of the Houshold of Narcissus, which are in the Lord. This Passage cannot prove that Narcissus was a Christian, any more than that in the Epistle to the Philippians, in which he salutes those that are of Cæsar's Houshold, that is probably those of Nero's Family. Origen[1] pretends, that this Expression, the Houshold of Narcissus, proves that this Family was not all Christian. Grotius thinks that Narcissus was a Pagan, but others will have him to have been a Christian. But as these maintain him to have been Narcissus, the famous Freed-man of Claudius the Emperor, they must certainly be mistaken, since this Narcissus was never a Christian, and besides he was dead some Years before St. Paul wrote his Epistle to the Romans. The Pseudo-Ambrosius says,[2] that some Copies make Narcissus to have been a Priest, and that if St. Paul does not salute him, 'tis because perhaps he then happened to be absent. The Greeks say he was Bishop of Athens, and a Martyr, give him the Title of an Apostle, and place him in the Number of the seventy Disciples.[3] Baronius has accordingly inserted him in the Roman Martyrology, on 31 of October.

Nasi

NASI, or Nashi, that is, Prince.[1] The Hebrews give this name to the Heads of the Tribes of the great Families, and even to the Princes of the People. At this Day it is in a Manner appropriated to signify the Chief, the President, the first Judge of the Sanhedrim. Simon Maccabeus was honoured with the same Title, after he had rescued himself out of his dependance upon the Greeks. He has the Name of Nasi upon his Medals. The Prince or the Nasi of the Sanhedrim, was the Depository of the Oral Law or Tradition, which Moses, according to the Rabbins, had entrusted with the seventy Elders, who made up this Assembly. Those that are of Opinion, that the Sanhedrim has always subsisted since its first Institution by Moses, must also make the Dignity of the Nasi as antient as this; but those that maintain the Sanhedrim to be much more modern, hold also that the Office of Nasi is of no longer Date. Some will have Esdras to have first introduced this Office, and that he annexed it to the Family of David. When Hillel came from Babylon, under the Reign of Herod, about thirty Years before Jesus Christ, he exercised this Function with great splendour. After the Destruction of Jerusalem, this Name of Prince was changed into that of Patriarch, or Head of the Captivity. 'Tis necessary to know their Titles, in order to understand the Language of the Rabbins, and of such Authors who have treated of the Republick or other Affairs of the Jews.

Nathan (II)

II. NATHAN, a famous Prophet of the Lord, who appeared in Israel in the Time of King David, and had a great share in the Confidence of this Prince. His Country is unknown, as also the Time in which he began to Prophecy. The first Time the Scripture speaks of him, is on Occasion of the Design David had, to build a Temple to the Lord.[1] This Prince discovered his Intention to Nathan, who not questioning but so pious a Resolution must proceed from God, told him he might go on to execute what his Heart had prompted him to do. But the Night following the Lord spoke to Nathan, and ordered him to acquaint David, that hitherto he had had no fixt Temple in Israel, nor had he required any; that the Honour of building him one, did not belong to David, but was reserved for his Son and Successor; but however, that David and his House might be assured of his gracious Favour and Protection.

Several Years after,[2] when David [2 Sam. xi. 3.] transgress'd with Bathsheba, and was the Occasion of the Death of Uriah, by the Sword of the Children of Ammon; the Lord sent Nathan to this Prince, to reprove him for his Sin. Nathan acquitted himself of this duty in a very wise and prudent Manner, by telling him a fictitious Story of a rich Man, who having many Flocks and Heards of his own, yet would take by force a Lamb belonging to a poor Man, which was the only one he had; and this he did to entertain a Friend, who then happened to come to see him. David had no sooner heard Nathan's Story, but he cry'd out with great Vehemence, The Man that has been Guilty of this unjust Action is worthy of Death; he shall restore the Lamb fourfold. Then Nathan told him, that he was the Man, and thus says the Lord concerning you. I have anointed you King of Israel, and have delivered you out of the Hands of Saul; and if these may seem but small Matters, I was going to add many other Things to them. Why therefore have you despised my Words? You have taken by force the Wife of Uriah the Hittite, and him have you slain by the Sword of the Ammonites. Therefore the Sword shall not depart from your House. I shall create you Troubles and Calamities, even from your own Family. I shall take your Wives from before your Face, and give them to another, who shall defile them before the face of the Sun: For tho' you have done this Thing in secret, yet I shall take Vengeance for it before the Eyes of all Israel, and before the Face of the Sun.

David then acknowledged his Sin to the Prophet, crying out, I have sinned against the Lord. Nathan to comfort him, assured him, that the Lord had mitigated his Punishment, and that he himself should not die. But because he had given Occasion to the enemies of the Lord to blaspheme, his Son that was born of Bathsheba, that should surely die. The Thing presently happened, as Nathan had foretold, which shews that David did not receive this Reproof till about a Year after his Sin. David's Repentance however was so sincere and compleat after this Fall, that the Lord did not omit to comfort him by fresh Assurances of his Favour. Bathsheba had a second Son, who was called Solomon, and the Lord sent Nathan again to David[3] ordering him to call the Name of the Child Jedidiah,[4] that is, beloved of the Lord. 'Twas probably on this Occasion, that God declared to David, that Solomon should be his Successor; that it should be he that should build him a Temple, and should be the Heir of those Promises which had been before made to him. See 2 Sam. vii. 12, &c.

David being now arrived at a great great Age,[5] Adonijah his Son began to take upon him the State and Equipage of a King, and to form a Party that might acknowledge him for King, in Opposition to the Interest of his Brother Solomon. At the Head of this Party were Joab the General of the King's Troops, and Abiathar the High-Priest: But neither the High-Priest Zadok, nor the Prophet Nathan, nor the Body of the Army were in this Interest. It happened one Day that Adonijah gave a splendid Entertainment to those of his own Faction, at which Nathan conceiving some Jealousy, immediately repaired to Bathsheba the Mother of Solomon, and bid her, at the Peril of her own Life, and that of her Son, to follow the counsel that he should give her. " Go presently to " King David, and say to him; O my " Lord the King, have you not sworn to " me, that Solomon my Son should succeed to the Crown? Why then does Adonijah reign? While you are saying this " to him, I will come in, and confirm " what you say." Bathsheba put this Advice in Execution, and while she was yet speaking to the King, Nathan comes, and being admitted into the King's Presence, he thus accosts him. " O my Lord the King, " have you appointed Adonijah to be your " Successor, and is he to sit upon your " Throne after you? Have you not often " declared to me, that Solomon should be " your Successor?" Then David caused Zadok the High-Priest, and Benaiah the Son of Jehoiada to be sent for, and commanded them, with the Prophet Nathan, to anoint Solomon King of Israel. They then made Solomon to ride upon the King's Mule, and having conducted him to the Fountain of Gibon, they consecrated him King of Israel there, with the universal Acclamations of all the Populace.

The Time and Manner of Nathan's [1 Chron. xxix. 29.] Death are not known. The Chronicles give us to understand, that Gad and Nathan had writ the History of David. The same Prophets had also regulated with David the Order and Disposition of the Ministers of the Temple. Lastly that Nathan and Abijah of Shilo had writ the History of [2 Chron. ix. 29. 1 Kings iv. 5.] Solomon. Under the Reign of Solomon we find Mention made of Azariah and Zabud Sons of Nathan, who had considerable Employments at Court; but whether this was Nathan the Prophet is not said.

St. Epiphanius in his Lives of the Prophets, relates a Story taken from some apocryphal Book, in which it is said, that Nathan knowing by Inspiration that David was upon the Point of committing Adultery, he set out immediately for Jerusalem, hoping to prevent it. But the Devil found Means to delay him by the way, having placed before him a dead Man quite naked. Nathan out of a Sense of Humanity, thought himself obliged to stay and bury him, when in the mean Time David committed this Crime. Eupolemus in Eusebius[6] makes Nathan an Angle of the Lord, when he says, that the Angel called Dianathan told David, that God did not think fit he should build a Temple to him.

Nathanael (VIII)

VIII. NATHANAEL, a Disciple of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ.[1] Philip meeting with Nathanael, told him; we have found the Messiah promised by Moses and the Prophets, who is Jesus of Nazareth, Son of Joseph. Nathanael ask'd him, Can any thing good come out of Nazareth? Philip bid him come and see. Jesus seeing Nathanael coming towards him, says, There's an Israelite indeed, without Artifice or Disguise. Nathanael asked him, How can you know me? Jesus answered him, Before Philip called you, I saw you under the Fig-Tree. ('Tis believed that Jesus saw him in Spirit, as he was praying in secret under this Fig-Tree, and begging of God the Manifestation of the Messiah.) Nathanael then said to him, Master, thou art the Son of God, and the King of Israel. Jesus answered him, dost thou believe, because I saw thee under the Fig-Tree? Thou shalt see much greater Things than these. John xxi. 2.

Many have thought that Nathanael was the same as St. Bartholomew, as we have taken notice under the Article of Bartholomew; and if it be so, as it is very likely, we should not distinguish one from the other. The Evangelists, who mention St. Bartholomew, say nothing of Nathanael; and St. John, who mentions Nathanael, takes no Notice of St. Bartholomew. We read at the End of St. John's Gospel, that our Saviour after his Resurrection manifested himself to St. Peter, St. Thomas, to Nathanael and the Sons of Zebedee, as they were busy fishing in the Lake of Gennesareth. We know no others Circumstances either of the Life or Death of this Holy Man. There are some[2] that believe he was the Bridegroom at the Marriage of Cana in Galilee.

Nature

NATURE. In Scripture Stile the Word Nature is used for the natural Course of Things established in the World. For Example, [Judg. xix. 24. Rom. i. 26.] a Crime is said to be against Nature, because it is contrary to the Method establish'd by the Creator, for the Propagation of Mankind. Obsecro ne scelus hoc contra Naturam operemini in virum. And St. Paul [Rom. xi. 24.] says, to ingraft a good Olive-Tree into a wild Olive, is contrary to Nature, or the settled Order of Nature is thereby in some [Gal. ii. 15. Eph. ii. 3.] measure violated and inverted.

Nature is also put for birth. We who are Jews by Nature; that is, Jews by birth, and not Gentiles. And to the Ephesians; We were by Nature the Children of Wrath.

Nature also denotes common Sense, natural Instinct, the Light which God imparts to all at their Creation. Doth not even Nature [1 Cor. xi. 14.] it self teach you, that if a Man have long Hair, it is a Shame to him?

The Nature of Animals is whereby they are distinguished from other Creatures, and from one another. Every Nature of Beasts, Birds, Serpents and other Animals, has been [James iii. 7.] tamed and subdued by human Nature.

St. Peter informs us, that Jesus Christ [2 Pet. i. 4.] has made us Partakers of the divine Nature; he has merited for us the Character of Children of God, by the Assistance of his Grace, he has made us capable of eternal Happiness.

Nazareans

NAZAREANS. At the first Appearance of Mahomet, there were many Jews in Arabia, where they were so powerful, that they were in Possession of several Castles, wherein they commanded as Princes. Benschonah observes in the Life of Mahomet, that in the third Year of the Hegira, or 625 of Jesus Christ, Mahomet made War against several Princes of Arabia, and having subdued them, he made Slaves of them and their Subjects. The Year following he gave Battle to the Nazareans or Nadareans, who were Jews; he defeated a great Number of them, and forced the rest to abandon their Country, and to retire into that of Caibar. After which Time he had frequent Dealings with them, but at last he gave them Quarter, and granted them Letters of Safe-Guard and Protection. These Nazareans may well enough be of those Nazareans, or Judaizing Christians, who appeared in the first Ages of Christianity. We know that before Mahomet's Time there was a great Number of Jews and Christians in Arabia.

Nazareth

NAZARETH, a little City in the Tribe of Zebulun, in lower Galilee, to the West of Tabor, and to the East of Ptolemais. Eusebius says it is fifteen Miles from Legion towards the East. This City is much celebrated in the Scriptures, for having been the usual Place of the Residence of Jesus Christ, for the first thirty three [Luke ii. 51.] Years of his Life. 'Twas there our Saviour became incarnate, where he lived in Obedience to Joseph and Mary, and from whence he took the Name of a Nazarean. After he had begun to execute his Mission, he preached there sometimes in the Synagogue. [Luke iv. 16.] But because his Countrymen had no Faith in him, and were offended at the Meanness of his Original, he did not many [Matth. xiii. 54, 58.] Miracles there, nor would he dwell therein. So he fixed his Habitation at Capernaum for the latter Part of his Life. The City of Nazareth was situate upon an [Matth. iv. 13.] Eminence, and on one Side there was a Precipice, from whence the Nazareans one Day had a Design of throwing down our Saviour, because he upbraided them [Luke iv. 29.] with their Incredulity.

St. Epiphanius says,[1] that in his Time Nazareth was only a Village, and that to the Reign of Constantine it was inhabited by Jews alone, exclusive of all Christians. Adamnanus, a Writer of the seventh Age,[2] says, that in his Time there were two great Churches to be seen at Nazareth, one in the midst of the City, built upon two Arches, in the Place where our Saviours House had stood. Under the two Arches now mentioned, was a very fine Fountain, which furnish'd Water to the whole City, and from whence Water was drawn also by the Help of a Pully, for the Use of the Church above. The second Church of Nazareth was built in the Place where the House stood, wherein the Angel Gabriel revealed to the Virgin Mary the Mystery of our Lord's Incarnation. This is what Adamnanus says upon this Matter. Villibrode, in the eighth age,[3] speaking of the same Church of Nazareth, says, that the Christians were often obliged to redeem it with Money from the Pagans, who otherwise threatened to demolish it. Phocas who wrote in the twelfth age says, that as soon as one enters into Nazareth, one finds the Church of St. Gabriel, under which is a little Vault, wherein is the Fountain near which the Angel first spoke to Mary. It may be here observed, that the orientals[4] thought the Angel first spoke to Mary near a Fountain, and afterwards in her own House. Phocas adds, that in the same City there is a very handsome Church, which was heretofore the House of St. Joseph. We are assured that the Church of Nazareth, or of the Incarnation, which we have mentioned before, and which is supported by two Arches, is still in being to this Day.

Now all that is hitherto related in this Matter, will by no Means agree with the famous Translation of the House of the Virgin Mary; which in 1291, is pretended to have been removed by the Assistance of Angels,[5] from the City of Nazareth into Dalmatia; from whence it was carried four Years after, beyond the Gulph of Venice, into the Diocese of Recanati, in the Borders of Ancona, and set upon the Land of a Lady named Lauretta; from whence the Church that was found there, obtained the Name of our Lady of Lauretto. But the Situation of this holy House being in a Wood, to which it was dangerous to resort, because of Robbers, it was a third Time transported at the Distance of half a League from thence upon a Hill; and once more it was carried from thence to the Place where it stands at present. It is very probable, that all these different Translations were no other than so many different Buildings, made upon the model of the Church of Nazareth; just as in several Places Sepulchres have been built, upon the Model of that at Jerusalem.

NAZARITE, or Nazarean. This Term may signify, 1st, One that is of Nazareth, or any Native of this City. 2d, This Name was given to Jesus Christ and his Disciples; and commonly it is taken in a Sense of Derision and Contempt, in such Authors as have written against Christianity. 3d. It has been taken for a Sect of Hereticks call'd Nazareans. 4th, For a Nazarite, a Man that has laid himself under the Obligation of a Vow, to observe the Rules of Nazaritesbip; whether it be for his whole Life, as Sampson and John the Baptist; or only for a Time, as those mentioned in Numbers vi. 18, 19, 20. Amos ii. 11, 12. Lastly, [Gen. xlix. 26. Deut. xxxiii. 16.] the Name Nazarite in some Passages of Scripture denotes a Man of particular Distinction and great Dignity in the Court of some Prince. But we must speak of these several Sorts of Nazarites something more distinctly.

The Name of Nazarene belongs to Jesus Christ, not only because of his having lived the greatest part of his Life at Nazareth, and because this City has always been consider'd as his Country, but also because the Prophets had foretold, that he should be call'd a [Matth. ii. 23.] Nazarene. And he came and dwelt in a City call'd Nazareth, that it might be fulfill'd which was spoken by the Prophets, he shall be call'd a Nazarene. We find no particular Place in the Prophets, in which it is said that the Messiah should be called a Nazarene; and St. Matthew only quotes the Prophets in general. Perhaps he would insinuate, that the Consecration of the Nazarites, and the great Purity of which they made Profession, was a Type and a sort of Prophecy of those of our [Numb. vi. 18, 19.] Saviour; or else that the Name of Nazir or Nazarite, given to the Patriarch Joseph, was a Prophecy which was to be fulfill'd in the [Gen. xlix. 26. Deut. xxxiii.

16.] Person of Jesus Christ, of whom Joseph was a Figure. Lastly, St. *Jerom*1 was of Opinion, that St. Matthew here alludes to that Passage of Isaiah xi. 1. and lx. 21. And there shall come forth a Rod out of the Stem of Jesse, and a Branch (in Hebrew, Nezer,) shall grow out of his Roots. This Branch or Nezer, and this Rod, are certainly intended to denote Jesus Christ, by the general Consent of all the Fathers and Interpreters.

Nazarean, when it is put for the Hereticks known by this Name, denotes Christians converted from Judaism, whose chief Error consisted in defending the Necessity or Expediency of the Works of the Law, and who obstinately adhered to the Practice of the Jewish Ceremonies. The Name of Nazarenes at first had nothing odious in it, and it was often given to the first Christians. The Fathers frequently mention the Gospel of the Nazarenes, which differs nothing from that of St. Matthew, which was either in Hebrew or Syriack, for the Use of the first Converts, but was afterwards corrupted by the Ebionites. These Nazarenes preserved this first Gospel in its primitive Purity. Some of them were still in being in the Time of St. Jerom[1], who does not reproach them with any Error. They were very zealous Observers of the Law of Moses, but had the Traditions of the Pharisees in very great Contempt. Nazarite, when put to signifie those under the antient Law, who made a Vow of observing a more than ordinary Degree of Purity[2], denotes a Man or Woman, who engage themselves by a Vow to abstain from Wine and all intoxicating Liquors, to let their Hair grow without cutting or shaving, not to enter into any House that was polluted by having a dead Corps in it, nor to be present at any Funeral. And if by Chance any one should have died in their Presence, they began again the whole Ceremony of their Consecration and Nazaritesbip. This Ceremony generally lasted eight Days, sometimes a Month, and sometimes their whole Lives. When the Time of their Nazaritesbip was accomplish'd, the Priest brought the Person to the Door of the Temple, who there offer'd to the Lord a He-Lamb for a Burnt-Offering, a She-Lamb for an expiatory Sacrifice, and a Ram for a Peace-Offering. They offer'd likewise Loaves and Cakes, with Wine necessary for the Libations. After all this was sacrificed and offer'd to the Lord, the Priest or some other shaved the Head of the Nazarite at the Door of the Tabernacle, and burnt his Hair, throwing it upon the Fire of the Altar. Then the Priest put into the Hands of the Nazarite the Shoulder of the Ram roasted, with a Loaf and a Cake, which the Nazarite returning into the Hands of the Priest, he offer'd them to the Lord, lifting them up in the Presence of the Nazarite. And from this Time he might again drink Wine, his Nazaritesbip being now accomplished.

As to those that were perpetual Nazarites, as were Sampson and John the Baptist, it appears that they were consecrated to their Nazaritesbip by their Parents, and continued all their Lives in this State, without drinking Wine, or cutting their Hair.

Those that made a Vow of Nazaritesbip out of Palestine, and could not come to the Temple when their Vow was expired, contented themselves with observing the Abstinence required by the Law, and after that cutting their Hair in the Place where they were; as to the Offerings and Sacrifices prescribed by Moses, which were to be offered at the Temple, by themselves, or by others for them, they deferred this till they could have a convenient Opportunity. Hence it was, that St. Paul being at Corinth, and having made the Vow of a Nazarite, he had his Hair cut off at Cenchrea, a Port of Corinth, and put off the satisfying the rest of his Vow, till he should arrive at Jerusalem. See Acts xviii. 18.

When a Person found he was not in a Condition to make a Vow of Nazariteship, or had not Leisure to perform the Ceremonies belonging to it; he contented himself by contributing to the Expence of the Sacrifices and Offerings of those, that had made and fulfill'd this Vow: And by this Means he became a Partaker in the Merits of such Nazariteship. Josephus[3] in order to magnifie the Zeal and Devotion of Herod Agrippa King of the Jews, says that he caus'd several Nazarites to be shaven. Maimonides[4] says, that he that would thus partake in the Nazariteship of another, went to the Temple, and said to the Priest, " In such a Time such an " one will finish his Nazariteship; I intend to defray the Charge of his Tonsure, either in Part, or in the Whole". When St. Paul came to Jerusalem, in the [Acts xxi. 23, 24.] Year of Christ 58, the Apostle St. James the lesser, with the other Brethren, said to him, That to quiet the Minds of the converted Jews, who had been inform'd that he every where preach'd up the entire abolishing of the Law of Moses; he ought to join himself to four of the faithful, who had a Vow of Nazariteship upon them, and contribute to the Charge of the Ceremony at the shaving of their Heads; by which the new Converts would perceive, that he continued to keep the Law, and that what they had heard of him was not true.

Nazarite, when made use of to express a Man exalted to great Dignity, as it is said of the Patriarch Joseph, that he was a Nazarite among his Brethren; I say, Nazarite in this Sense is variously understood. [Gen. xlix. 26. Deut. xxxiii. 16. Vulgat.] Some think it signifies one who is crown'd, chosen, separated, distinguish'd. Nezer in Hebrew signifies a Crown. The Seventy translate this Word by, a Cheif, or by, him that is honour'd. We think that Nazir was a Name of Dignity, in the Courts of the Eastern Princes. Even at this Day in the Court of Persia[5], the Nezir is the Superintendant General of the King's House-hold, the chief Officer of the Crown, and the High Steward of his Family, Treasures, and Revenues. In this Sense Joseph was the Nezir of the House of Pharaoh.

Nazir

[Gen. xlix. 26.] NAZIR[1], or Nezir. The Patriarch Jacob, in his last Blessing that he gave to his well-beloved Son Joseph, says thus to him, The Blessings of thy Father have prevailed above the Blessings of my Progenitors, unto the utmost Bound of the everlasting Hills. They shall be on the Head of Joseph, and on the Crown of the Head of him that was separate from his Brethren: Or, as the Nazir of his Brethren. The same Word Nazir signifies a Crown, or he that is crown'd, distinguish'd, honour'd, separated, chosen. In the Eastern Countries[2] Nezir is a Name of Dignity. It signifies the Superintendant General of the Court of the King of Persia, the first Officer of the Crown, the great Steward of his Houshold, Revenues, and Treasures. He has the Inspection of the other Officers of the King's House, of his Table, Guards, and Pensions. 'Tis very like what the antient Persians call'd the King's Eyes.[3] Moses also gives to Joseph the Name of Nazir, speaking of the Tribes of his two [Deut. xxxiii. 16.] Sons Ephraim and Manasseh.

Neah

NEAH, Nea, or Noa, a City of the Tribe of Zebulun. Josh. xix. 13.[1]. I suspect it to be the same as Neve, mention'd in the Itinerary of Antoninus, six and thirty Miles from Capitolias: But I must own, the Manner of writing Noa or Neah is not very favourable to this Conjecture. Neaman

NEAMAN, or Neeman, the same as Naaman. This Word signifies in general, a great Officer of a Prince's Houshold. Literally it signifies the faithful, in which Sense it is sometimes taken in Scripture. It is said, for Example[1], that Moses is the faithful Servant, the Neaman in the House of God. In the first Book of Samuel the Lord says he will raise a Neeman in his House; and quickly after all Israel knew, that Samuel was this faithful Servant, this Neeman. David was Neaman and Son-into Law King Saul. Job says, that the Lord when he pleases takes from the Neemans their Eloquence, and from old Men their Wisdom.

NEARIAH, or Naariah, the fifth Son of Shechaniah. He was one of those who, at the Head of five hundred Men of the Tribe of Simeon, went to attack the Remnant of the Amalekites in Mount Seir, where they defeated them, and dwelt in their Country when they had conquer'd it. [1 Chron. iii. 22. iv. 41.] The Time of this Expedition is not known.

Nebachas

NEBACHAS, a God of the Hivites. 2 Kings xvii. 31. 'Tis not known who this God was. Literally it may stand for Nebo the Seer, the Oracle of Nebo. The Rabbins, followed by several Commentators, think, that Nebachas had the Shape of a Dog, something like Anubis of the Egyptians.

Omnigenúmque Deúm monstra & latrator Anubis.

Virg. Æneid. 6.

Nabac in Hebrew signifies to bark. To support the Opinion of those, who will have Nebachas to signifie a Dog, it may be observed, that the Orientals had a great Veneration for a Dog. I shall not repeat what I have already said concerning the Egyptians, among whom there were whole Cities that worship'd this Animal. Oppida tota canem venerantur. The Magians, at the Report of Herodotus[1], differ in this from the Egyptian Priests, that the Egyptians kill no Animal, except what they sacrifice to their Gods: Whereas the Magians slay all kind of Animals, excepting only Men and Dogs. They even think it a meritorious Act to kill great Numbers of Reptiles, Serpents, and other such Creatures. They sacrificed a Dog to Hecate, who is the Moon, and this Animal was consecrated to her. There was also a Dog in the Mysteries of Mitras, or the Sun; and in a Sacrifice to this Deity, represented in an ancient Bas-releif, there is seen a Dog licking up the Blood of a Bull. 'Tis said, that Zoroaster inserted among his Rules of Charity, that Dogs were to be protected and loved. The Persians exposed dead Bodies to Dogs, before they buried them, thinking it to be a Token of Happiness, to be drawn about by Dogs. This Animal is the Symbol of Fidelity and Vigilance; yet I do not know that any one has advanced, that Dogs were worship'd any where else but in Egypt.

Nebo (IV)

IV. NEBO, an Idol of the Babylonians. Bel boweth down, Nebo stoopeth, says Isaiah xlvi. 1. The Word Nebo comes from a Root that signifies to prophesy, and therefore may stand for an Oracle. There is some Probability, that Bel and Nebo are but one and the same Deity, and that Isaiah has made use of these as synonymous Terms. The God Bel was the Oracle of the Babylonians. The Name Nebo or Nabo is found in the Composition of the Names of several Princes of Babylon; as Nabonassar, Nabopolassar, Nebuchadnezzar, Nabuzardan, Nabusesban, &c. The Seventy instead of Nebo read Dagon[1]. The Chaldeans worship'd a God that they call'd Odacon.

Nebuchadnezzar (I)

I. NEBUCHADNEZZAR, Nebuchadrezzar, Nabuchodonosor, &c. King of Assyria, otherwise called Saosduchin, began to reign at Nineveh in the Year of the World 3335, before Christ 665, before the vulgar Æra 669. In the twelfth Year of his Reign, and in the Year of the World 3347, this Prince in a set Battle overcame Arphaxad King of the Medes in the Plains of Ragau. Then Nebuchadnezzar sent to all the Inhabitants of Cilicia, Damascus, Mount Libanus, Phœnicia, Judea, and all the other Nations adjoining to them, as far as Ethiopia, to require of them to acknowledge him as King, and to submit to his Empire. But all these People sent back his Ambassadors with Disdain, and slighted his Menaces. Nebuchadnezzar enraged at this, swore by his Throne that he would [Judith ii. 1, 2, &c.] be revenged for this Affront[1]; and in the thirteenth Year of his Reign he assembled the chief Officers of his Army, and acquainted them with the Resolution he had taken, of bringing the whole Earth into Subjection to his Government. He appointed Holofernes his Generalissimo, gave him his Instructions, put large Sums of Money into his Hands, and sent him away at the Head of a powerful Army, to reduce all those Nations that would not acknowledge his Empire. The Success of this War has already been mentioned under the Title Holofernes. Nebuchadnezzar, otherwise Saosduchin, had Saracus or Chynaladan for his Successor, in the Year of the World 3356, before Christ 644, before the vulgar Æra 648.

Nebuchadnezzar (II)

II. NEBUCHADNEZZAR, otherwise Nabopolassar[1], Father of Nebuchadnezzar the Great, whose Name is so much celebrated in Scripture. Nabopolassar was a Babylonian, and Saracus King of Assyria gave him the Command of his Army. He made a League with Astyages, otherwise called Abasuerus, who thereupon gave his Daughter Amyitis in Marriage to Nebuchadnezzar Son of Nabopolassar. Therefore Abasuerus and Nabopolassar having joined their Forces, made an Insurrection against Saracus King of Nineveh, besieg'd him in his capital City, took him Prisoner, and upon the Destruction of the Assyrian Monarchy raised up two Kingdoms; that of the Medes possessed by Astyages, or Abasuerus, and that of the Chaldeans, or of Babylon, founded by Nabopolassar, in the Year of the World 3378, before Christ 622, and before the vulgar Æra 626. Nabopolassar died in the Year of the World 3399, before Christ 601, before the vulgar Æra 605; and left the Kingdom of Babylon to his Son Nebuchadnezzar the Great, whom we are going now to mention.

He is called Nabuchodonosor in the Greek of Tobit, the last Chapter to the End; and Nabopolassar in Alexander Polyhistor quoted in Syncellus.

Nebuchadnezzar (III)

III. NEBUCHADNEZZAR, Son and Successor of Nabopolassar, succeeded to the Kingdom of Chaldea in the Year of the Word 3399, before Christ 601, before the vulgar Æra 605. Some time before this, Nabopolassar had taken him as a Partner in the Kingdom, and sent him to recover Carchemish, which had been conquered from him four Years before, by Necho King of Egypt. Nebuchadnezzar having been succesful in this Expedition, marched against the Governor of Phœnicia, and [2 Chron. xxxvi. 6.] against Jehoiachim King of Judah, who was a Tributary to Necho King of Egypt. He took Jehoiachim, and put him in Chains, in order to carry him Captive to Babylon; but on farther Thoughts he left him in Judea, under the Condition of paying him a large Tribute. He took away several Persons of the first Quality from Jerusalem; among others, Daniel, Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah, all of the Royal Family, whom the King of Babylon caused to be brought up in [Dan. i. 1, 2, 3, &c.] his Court, in the Language and in the Learning of the Chaldeans, that they might be employed at Court.

Nabopolassar dying about the End of the Year of the World 3399, before Christ 601, before the vulgar Æra 605: Nebuchadnezzar, who was then either in Egypt or Judea, made haste to Babylon, and left to his Generals the Care of bringing to Chaldea the Captives he had taken in Syria, Judea, Phenicia, and Egypt[1]; for according to Berosus, he had subdued all these Countries. He distributed these Captives into several Colonies, and in the Temple of his God Belus he deposited the Sacred Vessels of the Temple of Jerusalem; and the other rich Spoils he had taken from his Enemies.

Jehoiachim King of Judah continued three Years in Fealty to King Nebuchadnezzar, but then being weary of paying Tribute to the Chaldeans, he threw off their Yoke, and would not acknowledge them any longer[2]. The King of Chaldea did not think fit to march in Person against him, but sent Troops of Chaldeans, Syrians, Moabites, and Ammonites, who harras'd all Judea. This War continued three or four Years[3]; in which at last Jehoiachim was besieged and taken in Jerusalem, put to Death, and his Body thrown to the Birds of the Air, according to the Predictions of the Prophet Jeremiah. [Jer. xxii. 18, 19. xxxvi. 30.] See JEHOIACHIM.

In the mean Time Nebuchadnezzar being then at Babylon, in the second Year of his Reign, had a very mysterious Dream[4], in which he saw a Statue made up of several Metals, having a Head of Gold, a Breast of Silver, the Belly and Thighs of Brass, the Legs of Iron, and the Feet half of Iron, and half of Clay: A little Stone coming of its own Accord from the Mountain, struck against the Statue, and broke it to Pieces. The King having had this Dream, which gave him a great deal of Uneasiness, afterwards had so far forgot it, that he could not recover the least Notion of it. He ordered all his Diviners and Interpreters of Dreams to be sent for, but none of 'em could tell him either the Dream or the Interpretation. Nebuchadnezzar being then in Wrath, pronounced a Sentence of Death against them all, which was going to be put in Execution, when Daniel was informed of it. He went immediately to the King, and desired him to respite the Sentence a little while, and he would endeavour to satisfie the King's Desire. Daniel address'd himself to God, who in the Night revealed to him the King's Dream, and also the Interpretation.

The Day following Daniel went to Arioch, who had Orders to put to Death all the Diviners of Babylon, and told him that he was then ready to satisfie the King's Desire concerning the Dream in Question. The Prophet was admitted to Nebuchadnezzar's Presence, and told him, that it was from the God of Heaven, and not from the Wise-men of Babylon, that he was to expect the Interpretation of his Dream. He then informed him what his Dream was, as is above related; to which he added this Explication. You are the King of Kings, and the most puissant Monarch in the whole World. 'Tis you that are represented by the Golden Head of the Statue. After you there will arise a Kingdom inferior to yours, represented by the Breast of Silver; and after this another inferior to the former, which is denoted by the Belly and Thighs of Brass. After these three Empires, which are those of the Chaldæans, Persians, and the Greeks, there will arise a fourth, denoted by the Legs of Iron, and which represents the Empire of the Romans. Under this last Empire God will raise a new one, which shall be of greater Strength, Power, and Extent than all the others. This is that of the Messiah, represented by the little Stone coming from the Mountain, and overthrowing the Statue.

When Nebuchadnezzar had heard this Explication, he prostrated himself to the Ground, and worshipped Daniel; and commanded that Sacrifices and Incense should be offered to him. He acknowledged that the God of Daniel was the God of Gods, and the Lord of Kings, who only knew the most hidden Things, and reveals them when he pleases. Then the King raised Daniel to great Honour, made him noble Presents, set him over all the Wise -men of Babylon, and gave him the Government of that Province: At his Request he granted to Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego the Oversight of the Works of the same Province of Babylon.

Jehoiakin, or Jechoniah, King of Judah having revolted against Nebuchadnezzar[5], this Prince marched against him with an Army, and besieged him in Jerusalem. Jehoiakin was forced to surrender himself, and submit to the King of Babylon's Mercy. But this Prince took him with his chief Officers, and led him Captive to Babylon, with his Mother, his Wives, and the best Workmen of Jerusalem, to the Number of ten Thousand Men. From the rest of the Country he took away also seven Thousand Men bearing Arms, with a Thousand Smiths and Carpenters. Among the Captives were Mordecai the Uncle of Esther, and Ezekiel the Prophet. Lastly, he took away all the Vessels of Gold which Solomon had made for the Use of the Temple, and whatever valuable Things were to be found in the King's Treasury. Instead of Jeconiah, Nebuchadnezzar set up Mattaniah his Uncle by the Father's Side, to whom he gave the Name of Zedekiah.

When Zedekiah had continued faithful to Nebuchadnezzar for nine Years[6], being then weary of Subjection, he revolted against him, and entered into a Confederacy with the neighbouring Princes, that he might oppose him with the greater Security. The King of Babylon came into Judæa with a powerful Army, and having reduced the chief Places of the Country, he laid Siege to Jerusalem. But Pharaoh Hophra, or Vaphres, coming out of Egypt to the Assistance of Zedekiah, Nebuchadnezzar raised the Siege for some Time, went to meet the King of Egypt, overcame him in Battle, and forced him to retire into his own Country. After which he returned to the Siege of Jerusalem[7], and was three Hundred and ninety Days before the Place, before he could take it. But at last, in the eleventh Year of Zedekiah, and in the Year of the World 3416, before Christ 584, and before the Vulgar Æra 588, the City was taken. Zedekiah attempted to make his Escape, [2 Kings xxv. Jerem. xxxiv. lii.] but he was taken and brought to Nebuchadnezzar, who was then at Riblah in Syria. The King of Babylon condemned him to dye, caused his Children to be put to Death in his Presence, and then bored out his Eyes, loaded him with Chains, and sent him to Babylon. Nebuzar-adan, the General of the Chaldæan Troops, took Care of Jeremiah, according to the Orders he had received from the King, and left him at full Liberty to go where he pleased. Then setting Fire to the City and Temple, he brought to Babylon all the Captives he had got during the War. He left Gedaliah in the Country, as Governor to the small Remains of the People, [2 Kings xxv. 11, 12, &c. Jerem. xxxix. 10, 11. xl. 5, 7, &c.] whom the Sword, and other Miseries of War had yet spared.

Three Years after the Jewish War, Nebuchadnezzar came to besiege the City of Tyre[8], which Siege held for thirteen Years. But during this Interval of Time, he made War also with the People bordering upon the Jews, as the Sidonians, the Moabites, the Ammonites, and Idumæans; and these he treated much as he had done the Jews [Jerem. xlviii. xlix Ezek. xxv.] before. Josephus says[9], that these Wars happened five Years after the Destruction of Jerusalem, and consequently in the Year of the World 3421, before Christ 579, before the Vulgar Æra 583. The City of Tyre was taken in the Year of the World 3432, before Christ 568, before the Vulgar Æra 572. Ithobaal, who was then King of it, was put to Death, and Baal succeeded him. The Lord as a Reward to the Army of Nebuchadnezzar [Ezek. xxix. 17,] , which had lain down so long before this Place, gave up Egypt also to them, and all its Spoils. Nebuchadnezzar came into this Country, and made an easy Conquest of it, because then they were divided by civil Wars among themselves; he enriched himself with the Booty he had taken, and returned with all his Army in Triumph to Babylon, bringing along with him a vast Number of Captives[10].

Nebuchadnezzar being now at Peace in Babylon, applied himself to the adorning, aggrandizing, and enriching the City with magnificent Buildings. 'Twas then he undertook those famous Gardens, which were supported by Arches, and which have been esteemed as one of the Wonders of the World. Several also have ascribed to him the Walls of Babylon, though many Authors have given the Honour of this Work to Semiramis. Berosus and Abidenus may be consulted, as they are cited in Josephus[11]. About this Time[12] Nebuchadnezzar had a Dream of a great Tree, very tall, and loaden with Fruit. On a sudden an Angel descending from Heaven, commanded that the Tree should be cut down, that the Branches, Leaves, and Fruit should be beat down, but that the Trunk and the Root should be preserved in the Earth, that it should be tied with Chains of Iron and Brass, that it should dwell among the Beasts of the Field, and that for seven Years it should be in the Condition of the Brutes, feeding upon the Herbs of the Field, and exposed to the Dew of Heaven. The King sent for all the Diviners in the Country, none of which could explain his Dream to him. Then Daniel coming to him, informed him, that this Dream let him know what was to happen to himself. 'Tis you, says Daniel to him, that are represented by the great Tree: You are to be brought low, to be reduced to the Condition of a Brute, and to be driven from the Society of Men. But when you have been for seven Years in this State, and when you shall have acknowledged that all Power is derived from Heaven, you shall be restored to your first Condition. Wherefore break off thy Sins by Righteousness, and thine Iniquities by shewing Mercy to the Poor, if it may be a lengthening of thy Tranquility.

A Year after[13], as Nebuchadnezzar was walking in his Palace at Babylon, he began to say within himself, " Is not this Babylon the Great, which I have built in the " Greatness of my Power, and in the " Brightness of my Glory?" But hardly had he pronounced these Words, but a Voice was heard from Heaven, telling him, that he should be deprived of his Kingdom, driven from the Company of Men, and be reduced like a brute Beast to eat the Herbs of the Field. This Threatning was immediately executed upon him; for he fell into a Distemper or Distraction, which so altered his Imagination, that he thought himself to be metamorphosed into an Ox. He took up the Inclinations and Manners of this Creature; and after having been seven Years in this State, God opened his Eyes, he acknowledged his Dependance; and his Understanding was restored to him[14]. He again recovered his Royal Dignity, and continued to reign with the same Splendor as formerly[15]. This is what he acknowledges himself, in a Decree which he published sometime after, upon the Occasion we shall now relate.

Nebuchadnezzar's Repentance was neither solid nor sincere. For the same Year of his Restoration, he caused a golden Statue to be set up, whose Height was sixty Cubits, and Breadth six Cubits; and this he erected in the Plains of Dura, in the Province of Babylon. And having appointed a Day for the Dedication of this Statue, he assembled all the principal Officers of his Kingdom; and published by an Herald, that all his Subjects should adore this Image, when they heard the Sound of the Instruments of Musick, on Penalty of being cast into a burning fiery Furnace, to all those that should disobey these Orders. As soon as the Solemnity was begun it was observed, that the Jews, and especially the three Companions of Daniel, would not bend the Knee, nor worship the King's Image; of which Piece of Contumacy he was quickly informed. Nebuchadnezzar therefore commanded Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego to be called to him. Daniel probably was absent. He asked them why they presumed to disobey his Orders; to which they replied, that they neither feared the Flames, nor any other Penalty; that the God, whom only they would worship, knew how to preserve them; but if the Lord should not think fit to deliver them out of his Hands, yet however they would obey him rather than Men.

At these Words the King caused them to be bound, and to be thrown into the Furnace, with all their Cloaths; and the Furnace being vehemently heated, the Flame consumed the Men that cast them in; but it spared Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego. The Angel of the Lord came down from Heaven, and divided the Flames, making a fresh Breeze in the Middle of the Furnace, and a pleasant Dew: So that the Fire did not so much as touch them, or gave them the least Uneasiness. Then these three Men glorified God, and called upon all his Creatures to join with them in his Praise. Nebuchadnezzar seeing this Miracle, was much astonished at it. He got up on a sudden, and said to his Nobles; " Did we not cast three Men " into the Fire, and from whence is it " that I see four Men walking in the midst " of the Flames? And the fourth is like " the Son of God." Then Nebuchadnezzar approaching towards the Mouth of the Furnace, called the three Hebrews by their Names, who presently came out of the Furnace in perfect Health, to the great Astonishment of the whole Court. Nor could they find that their Cloaths were so much as singed, nor had the Smell of Fire passed on them.

Then Nebuchadnezzar gave Glory to the God of Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego. He acknowledged his Power and Majesty, and ordained, that whoever should utter any blasphemous or injurious Words against the Lord, the God of the Hebrews, should be put to Death, and his House converted into a Dunghil. He exalted the three Hebrews to great Dignity in the Province of Babylon, and made a Decree, in which he declared the Greatness of the God of the Hebrews, and related what [Dan. iv. 1, 2, 3, &c.] had happened to him after his Dream, in which he had seen the great Tree, which was cut into Pieces by the Command of God, as above related.

Nebuchadnezzar died this same Year, being the Year of the World 3442, before Christ 558, before the Vulgar Æra 562, after having reigned three and forty Years[16]. Megasthenes quoted by Eusebius[17] says, that this Prince having ascended to the Top of his Palace, was there seized with a Fit of divine Enthusiasm, and cried out, " O Babylonians, I declare to you a Misfortune, " that neither our Father Belus, nor Queen " Baltis, have been able to prevent. A " Persian Mule shall one Day come into " this Country, who, supported by the " Assistance of your Gods, shall bring you " into Slavery. He shall be assisted by " the Mede, the Glory of the Assyrians. (This Persian Mule is Cyrus, who was born of a Mother that was a Mede, and a Persian Father. The Mede who assisted Cyrus was Cyaxares, or Darius the Mede.) Nebuchadnezzar added, " Would to God " this Conqueror might perish in the " Depths of the Sea, or in some dismal " Wilderness where no Human Creature " sets his Foot, that we may not see the " Evils with which we are threatened. " And would to God that I my self had had " a happier Fate before this had come into " my Mind." At saying which he disappeared. 'Tis doubted whether these Words, He disappeared, are to denote his Death, or only his Flight and Retreat, which followed his Metamorphosis into an Ox. The Name Neb-

Nebuchadnezzar or uchadonosor[18] in the Chaldæan Tongue may signifie, a Treasure defended by the God Nebo.

Persian Authors relate,[19] that Laborasb, the fourth King of Persia, of the Dynasty of the Caianides, who succeeded Kaikhostrot, made great Conquests in the East, and afterwards carry'd his victorious arms to the western Parts of his Empire. For he sent into Palestine one of his Generals call'd Raham, and surnamed Bakhtalnassar, that is to say, The Happiness of Victory, from which the Hebrews have formed the Name Nebuchadnezzar, and the Greeks that of Nebuchadonosar, under the Conduct of whom all Syria was reduced to his Obedience. The King of Judah, of the Race of Solomon, who then reigned at Jerusalem, refusing to submit himself, was attacked by Raham, who beat the Jews, took the City of Jerusalem, sack'd and intirely destroy'd it, after which he returned into Persia, loaded with rich Spoils, and accompanied by an almost infinite Number of Prisoners.

Other Historians give to Nebuchadnezzar the Name of Gudarz, and say he was Lieutenant-General to King Loborash; who having spent the greatest Part of his Life in the most western Parts of the Empire, was almost unknown to the Hebrews and the Arabians; while Gudarz, called also Raham, or Nebuchadnezzar, acquired a very great Reputation, tho' he was but the Subaltern or Lieutenant-General of Loborash's Army. But all are agreed about his great Valour and martial Exploits, and maintain, that King Loborash was cotemporary with the Prophets Jeremiah, Daniel, and Esdras. It would be undoubted very difficult to reconcile all this with what the Scripture informs us of, concerning Nebuchadnezzar, whom it always represents as one of the greatest Kings of the World.

It may not be amiss to add a Word here, concerning the Metamorphosis of this Prince into an Ox. There are many Opinions about this Matter. Origen[20] believed the Thing to be impossible, and has turned it into an Allegory. Bodin[21] thought that Nebuchadnezzar was really changed into a Bull, and did not only lose the Shape and Sentiments, but even the Soul of a Man. But others maintain[22], that this Change was only in his Body and outward Form, but not in his Soul; the King preserving his Reason in the midst of his Misfortune, as Apuleius during his Change into an Ass, and like those Italians mentioned by St. Austin[23], who after they had tasted some Cheese that was given them by some Magicians of the Country, were immediately changed into Beasts of Burden, and then after a certain Time recovered their own Shape again, and returned to their first Condition. Some Rabbins have pretended, that the Soul of Nebuchadnezzar quitted the Body of that Prince, and gave Place for a Time, to that of an Ox, which communicated its Sentiments to him, and imparted to his Body the same Motions, the same Taste, the same Inclinations as may be observed in Oxen. Others have acknowledged in Nebuchadnezzar[24] only a vitiated imagination, and in his Subjects a Kind of Fascination of the Eyes, which made both believe that Nebuchadnezzar was changed into an Ox, and had the Figure of one, tho' really there was no such Thing. Pretty like the Story of the young Woman that was brought to St. Macair[25], whom her Parents took to be changed into an Heifer, when there was nothing in it; and St. Macair undeceived them by removing the Delusion that had affected their Eyes.

The most received Opinion is[26], that by the Effect of the Power of God, Nebuchadnezzar fell into a black Melancholy, and in his Frenzy he imagined that he was become an Ox. As in the Disease called a Lycanthropy, a Man is persuaded that he is changed into a Wolf, a Dog, a Cat; a Change which only takes Place in his distempered Brain, and in his own heated Imagination, since those that are about him perceive no such Change in his outward Figure; but only in his Inclinations, his Motions, his Behaviour. So that he howls and bites like a Wolf, eats raw Meat, runs into the Fields, and avoids the Society of Men.

Thus Nebuchadnezzar imagining that he was become an Ox, grazed upon Herbs like a Brute, butted with his Horns, let his Hair and Nails grow, low'd, went naked, and imitated all the external Actions of an Ox. His People being astonished at such a Change, bound him as Mad-men or Ideots are used to be bound[27]; but at last he escaping out of their Hands, fled into the Fields, living there naked like an Ox, exposed to the Dew of Heaven, and to the other Inclemencies of the Weather, so that his Hair grew like the Feathers of an Eagle, and his Nails like the Claws of a Lion. Nothing more than this is required, to account for all that the Scripture says of Nebuchadnezzar. There was nothing miraculous in this, except the foretelling of this Distemper, its Approach and its Conclusion, which happened just at the Time that the Prophet had foretold.

A Question is moved concerning the Duration of this Disease. Some, as Theodoret maintain[28], that the Persians distinguishing their Years into two Seasons, Winter and Summer, the seven Years of Nebuchadnezzar must be reckoned in this Manner, which will therefore reduce it to the Space of three Years and an half. Dorotheus[29], and the spurious Epiphanius[30], affirm, that in Truth God had condemned Nebuchadnezzar to a seven Years Habitation with the Brutes, but that at the Instances of Daniel, the seven Years were reduced to seven Months. The false Epiphanius adds, that as Daniel did not cease to foretel to the great Men of Chaldæa, that Nebuchadnezzar should again ascend the Throne, and as the Courtiers disbelieved and derided these Predictions, in Order to convince them he obtained of God by his Prayers, that this Time might be shortened. Others maintain, that the Prince we are speaking of, was changed into an Ox for the Space only of twenty one Months. They explain these Words of Daniel, Donec septem tempora mutentur super eum, of seven Times the Space of three Months. For Tempus according to them is a quarter of a Year, or three Months. Peter Comestor makes it but seven Months, which he thus divides. For the first forty Days Nebuchadnezzar continued in his Phrenzy as a Mad-man; in the forty Days following he bewailed his Offences, and for the last forty Days he recovered by Degrees from his Infirmity. Yet according to the Counsel he had received from Daniel, he did not omit to remain for seven Years in the Exercise of Repentance; eating nothing but Herbs and Pulse, as an Atonement for his Pride and Folly.

But we need seek no other Interpreter for Daniel, but Daniel himself. It is certain that this Prophet by Tempus, means nothing else than an Year. For Example, to denote the Space of three Years and an half, he says, Tempus & tempora & dimidium temporis [Dan. vii. 25. Rev. xii. 14.] ; we find the same Way of speaking in the Revelations, and in the same Sense.

Nebushasban

NEBUSHASBAN, or Nabusesban, one of the Generals of Nebuchadnezzar's Army. He went with Nebuzar-adan to take Jeremiah out of Prison; and to recommend him to Gedaliah. Jer. xxxix. 13.

Nebuzar-Adan

NEBUZAR-ADAN, or Nabuzardan, General of Nebuchadnezzar's Armies, and the chief Officer of his Houshold. He managed the Siege of Jerusalem, and made himself Master of the City, while Nebuchadnezzar was at Riblah in Syria[1]. Nebuzar-adan sent Zedekiah to him thither, with the chief of the Captives; and having plunder'd the City and the Temple, he set them on fire, and reduced them to Ashes. He took away all the consecrated Vessels of the Temple, and broke in pieces the brazen Sea, the two great Pillars, and all the other Vessels that could not be carried [Jer. xxxix. 11.—14. xl. 1.—6.] away whole. Afterwards he gathered together all the Captives at Ramah, and there finding Jeremiah and Baruch, he suffer'd them to go where they pleased, according to the King's Order. The other Captives he carried to Babylon, leaving Gedaliah in the Country, there to govern the miserable Remains of Judah. Some have thought that Nebuzar-adan gave Jeremiah the Ark of the Covenant, the golden Candlestick, the Tables of Incense, and of the Shew-bread, and that this Prophet hid them in a Cave of Mount Nebo, in the Land of Moab. But in this Opinion there is nothing but what is very uncertain. See our Dissertation at the Beginning of the first Book of the Maccabees, wherein we enquire whether or no the Ark of the Covenant was in the second Temple.

Four Years after Jerusalem was taken[2], while Nebuchadnezzar was engaged at the Siege of Tyre, Nebuzar-adan brought to Babylon seven hundred and forty five Captives more, so that the Country was left in a manner desolate. He afterwards marched against the Ammonites, took their capital City, laid waste their Country, and brought their King and Princes Captives to Babylon. From this Time the Scripture makes no farther mention of Nebuzar-adan.

Necessity

NECESSITY. This Word is taken, not only for that Need of several Things in which we may be found, but also for the Perplexity, Trouble, or Disquiet we may be in, whether we be afflicted inwardly, or assaulted by our Enemies outwardly, or in Irresolution, Difficulty, &c. It sometimes answers to the Hebrew Word Zarah, Angustia [Judg. xi. 7.] , and to Mezucah, coarctatio. St. Jerome has often put into the Vulgate the Word necessitas, to express a Thing that must be done immediately. But especially in the Psalms necessitates is put for angustiæ. In [Wisd. xviii. 21.] the Book of Wisdom it is said of Aaron, restitit iræ, & finem imposuit necessitati; he caused the dreadful Plague to cease, with which God had visited his People, upon the Occasion of the Rebellion of Korah. And [Wisd. xix. 4.] elsewhere, ducebat illos digna necessitas; the Egyptians were urged, as it were, into their Calamity, by a kind of fatal Necessity, of which, by their Hardness of Heart they had render'd themselves worthy.

St. Paul often speaks of the Necessities of the Saints, or of the new Converts, who were in a true and real Poverty.

The Word necessary does not always denote an absolute Necessity, but a Necessity of Decency, or of Duty, or meerly something useful and advantageous. For Example, necesse est ut veniant scandala; It must needs be that Offences come; God suffers them to come, and makes them subservient [Tob. xii. 3.] to his Glory. And in Tobit, Quia acceptus eras Deo, necesse fuit ut tentatio probaret te. It was necessary, it was expedient that you should be proved by Temptation. And in St. Luke, I have bought a [Luke xiv. 18.] piece of Ground, and I must needs go and see it: It is convenient that I go to see it.

Necho

NECHO, or Nechao, King of Egypt. This Prince carried his Arms as far as the Euphrates, and conquer'd the City of Carchemish. He is known not only in Scripture, but by Herodotus. This Historian says[1], that Necho was Son of Psammeticus King of Egypt, and having succeeded him in the Kingdom, he raised great Armies by Land, and set out great Fleets as well upon the Mediterranean Sea as the Red Sea; that he gave Battle to the Syrians near the City of Migdol, obtained the Victory, and made himself Master of the City of Cadytis. But Cadytis, says he, is a great City that belongs to the Syrians of Palestine. The Learned are not agreed about this City Cadytis. Some will have it to be Cades in Arabia Petrea; others Jerusalem, which they say is call'd Cadyta or Cadytis, the Holy City, because of its Temple. Others say it is the City Cedes in Galilee, in the Tribe of Naphtali. There is the same Difficulty about Magdalum or Migdol. See its Article.

The Scripture acquaints us with the whole Expedition of Necho in all its particulars. This Prince having drawn out his Army into the Field[2], to make War with the Assyrians or Babylonians, and to take the City of Carchemish, otherwise call'd Cercusium, upon the Euphrates; Josiah King of Judah, who was a Tributary to the King of Babylon, march'd to oppose his Passage. Necho, who had no Designs against him, sent to tell him, " What " have I to do with you King of Judah? " 'Tis not against you that I am come " forth, but against another People, against " whom the Lord has commanded me to " make war. Leave off therefore to set " yourself against me, for fear the Lord " should punish you for your Resistance. 'Tis thought that[3] Necho had received an Admonition from Jeremiah, to march against Carchemish. But Josiah would not hear the Remonstrances of Necho, but gave him Battle at Megiddo, where he re-

Matt. xviii. 7. ceived the Wound of which he died. The People of Jerusalem set up Jehoahaz or Joachaz for King of Judah, and Necho soon pass'd forwards, without making any longer Stay in Judea.

But at his Return from his Expedition, which was very successful, he halted at Riblah in Syria; and sending for Jehoahaz King of the Jews, he deposed him, loaded him with Chains, and sent him into Egypt. Then coming to Jerusalem, he set up Eliakim or Jehoiakim in his Place, and exacted the payment of one hundred Talents of Silver, and one Talent of Gold [Jerem. xlvi. 2.] from the Country. Jeremiah acquaints us, that the City of Carchemish was taken from Necho by Nabopolassar King of Babylon, in the fourth Year of Jehoiachim King of Judah; so that Necho did not enjoy his Conquest above four Years. Josephus adds[4], that the King of Babylon pursuing his Victory, brought under his Dominion all the whole Country, which is between Euphrates and Egypt, excepting Judea. Thus Necho was again reduced within the Limits of his own Country.

Necromancy

NECROMANCY[1], Magick, or the Black Art, which consists in raising the Ghosts of those that are deceased. The Scripture speaks at length of the Appearance of Samuel to Saul, when this Prophet was raised by the Witch of En-dor. See 1 Sam. xxviii. 7. The Word Necromancy is not to be met with in Scripture, but Moses forbids the Israelites to have Recourse to Diviners, or those that consult the Dead[2]. Non inveniatur in te, qui quærat à mortuis veritatem. The Enchantress that raised up Samuel is call'd Baalath-ob i, the Mistress of Ob. The Word Ob is known in Scripture, to express a Diviner, a Magician, a Necromancer, and those People that speak in their Bellies, and thereby deceive the Simple, making them believe that the Dead speak to them out of the Earth. Your Voice shall be as that of an [Isai. xxix. 4. Heb.] Ob, which speaks out of the Bottom of the Earth, says Isaiah speaking to Jerusalem. You shall groan, you shall not dare to speak out, but with an obscure and hollow Voice, as if it came out of the Ground. This sort of Necromancers were condemn'd [Levit. xx. 6. Deut. xviii. 11.] to Death by the Law of Moses; and Saul in pursuance of this Law had drove them out of the Country. But it may be seen by the Books of the Kings and [2 Kings xxi. 6. xxiii. 24. 1 Chron. x. 13. 2 Chron. xxxiii. 6.] Chronicles, that they were but too frequent afterwards, and that the Law was but very ill observed in this Article, as in many others.[3]

The Rabbins think that the Necromancers make use of the Bones of the Dead, in making their Invocations, and chiefly of the Skull. They offered Incense to it, and did not leave off calling upon the Ghost, till the Dead appeared to them, or till some Demon taking the Shape of the Dead, presented himself to them, and spoke to them. In the History of the Pythoness of En-dor, we do not find that she used any thing else but Words. Several have been of Opinion, that in the Art of the Necromancers there was nothing on their Part but Trick and Jugling, or at most but an Illusion of the Devil; and that the Spirits of the Dead were never really raised. Some even believe, that Samuel appeared neither to Saul nor the Witch; but that this Sorceress abused the Credulity of this Prince, and the Perplexity wherein he was, to persuade him that Samuel had really appeared, and had spoken to him. On this Head may be read our Dissertation concerning the Appearance of Samuel to Saul, at the Beginning of the Commentary upon the Books of Samuel and Kings, and the Authors we have there quoted.

Nehemiah

NEHEMIAH, or Neemias, Son of Hachaliah, was born at Babylon during the Captivity. He was, according to some[1], of the Race of the Priests, but according to others[2] of the Tribe of Judah and the Royal Family. Those who maintain the first Opinion, support it by a Passage in the [2 Macc. i. 18. 21.] Maccabees, where it is said, that Nehemiah the Priest offered Sacrifices. Jussit Sacerdos Nehemias aspergi sacrificia aquâ. And in Esdras x. 10. he is reckon'd in the Number of the Priests. Signatores fuerunt Nehemias, Sedecias, Saraias, &c. Hi Sacerdotes. But those who believe that he was of the Race of the Kings of Judah, say, 1st, That Nehemiah having govern'd the Republick of the Jews for a considerable time, there is great Probability he was of that Tribe of which the Kings always were. 2dly, Nehemiah mentions his Brethren Hanani, and some other Jews, who coming to Babylon during the Captivity, acquainted him with the sad Condition of their Country. 3dly, The Office of Cup-bearer to the King of Persia, to which Nehemiah was promoted, is a further Proof that he was of an illustrious Family. 4thly, He excuses himself from entering into the inner Part of the Temple, probably because [Neh. vi. 11.] he was only a Laick. Should such a Man as I flee? And who is there that being as I am, would go into the Temple to save his Life?

As to what is said in the Maccabees, where he is mentioned as a Priest, it may be answer'd, that the Greek Text does not affirm him to be a Priest[3], but only that Nehemiah gave Orders to the Priests to perform their Functions. As to what is said of his signing among the Priests, this he might do in Quality of Governor of the Jews, which gave him at least an equal Rank with the Priests. Lastly, the Name of Nehemiah is found in no Catalogue, nor in any Genealogy of the Hebrew Priests.

The Scripture often gives him the Name of Tirshatha[4], that is to say Cup-bearer; for he had this Employment at the Court of Artaxerxes Longimanus. He had an exceeding great Tenderness for the Country of his Fathers, tho' he had never seen it; and one Day, as some Jews newly come from Jerusalem acquainted him with the miserable Estate of that City, that its Walls were beat down, its Gates burnt, and that the Jews were become a Reproach among all Nations; he was sensibly affected with this Relation, he fasted, prayed, and humbled himself before the Lord, that he would be favourable to the Design he had then conceived, of asking the King's Permission to rebuild Jerusalem[5]. The Course of his Attendance at Court being come, he presented the Cup to the King, according to Custom, but with a sad and dejected Countenance. The King entertained some Suspicion at it, as thinking he might have some evil Design. But Nehemiah discovering the Occasion of his Disquiet, Artaxerxes gave him Leave to go to Jerusalem, and to repair its Walls and Gates; but however, on this Condition, that he should return to Court at a Time appointed. Letters were made out, directed to the Governors beyond the Euphrates, with Orders to furnish him with Timber necessary for covering the Towers and Gates of the City, and the House of Nehemiah, who was appointed Governor of Judea.

[Neh. ii. 11, 12, 13, &c.] Nehemiah arrived at Jerusalem with his Letters and full Powers, but was there three Days before he acquainted any one with the Occasion of his Journey. On the Night of the third Day he went round the City, and viewed the Walls, that he might know what Condition they were in. After this he assembled the chief of the People, produced his Commission and Letters, and exhorted them to undertake the repairing of the Gates and Walls of the City. He found every body ready to obey him, and immediately he began the Work. The Enemies of the Jews were jealous of these prosperous Beginnings, and only scoffed at them at first; but afterward seeing that the chief Breaches were repaired, they made use of Stratagems and Threats to deter Nehemiah from his Undertaking, and even attempted to make him away. The Jews that dwelt without informed Nehemiah of it; and to keep himself on his Guard against their Attempts, he ordered Part of his People to stand to their Arms behind the Walls, while [Neh. iv. 7, 8, &c.] the others carried on the Work, having also their Arms near them, in case of an Alarm. His Enemies seeing their Design discovered, durst not make use of violent Methods, but had recourse to Craft and Stratagem, endeavouring to draw him into an Ambuscade set for him in the Fields, where they pretended [Neh. vi. 1, 2, 3, &c.] they would finish their Dispute at an amicable Conference. But Nehemiah gave them to understand, that the Work he had begun required his personal Attendance, and therefore he could not come to them. He sent the same Answer to four several Messages, that they sent one after another on the same Subject.

Sanballat, the chief of the Enemies of the Jews, together with his Associates, wrote word, that a Report was spread the Jews were building the Walls of Jerusalem, only with a Design to make it a Place of Strength, to support them in an intended Revolt; that it was said also that Nehemiah had suborned false Prophets to favour his Designs, and to encourage the People to chuse him King; that to stop the Course of these Rumours he advised him to come to him, that they might confer together, and take such Resolutions as should be found convenient. Nehemiah gave himself no Trouble on this Account, but returned for Answer, that all those Accusations were false, and made at random. About the same time he discovered, that a false Prophet, call'd Shemaiah, had been corrupted by his Enemies, and that some of the chief of the City were secretly in Confederacy with them. Yet all this did not discourage him. He went on with his Work, and happily compleated it in two and fifty Days after it had been begun.

[Neh. vi. 8.—15.] Then he made a Dedication of the Walls, of the Towers, and of the Gates of Jerusalem, with the Solemnity and Magnificence that such a Work required. He separated the Priests, the Levites, and the Princes of the People into two Companies, one of which walked to the South, and the other to the North, on the top of the Walls. These two Companies were to meet at the Temple. The Procession was accompanied with Musick both vocal and instrumental. When they were all come to the Temple, they there read the Law, offered Sacrifices, and made great Rejoycings. And [Neh. viii. 12.] as the Feast of Tabernacles happen'd at the same time, it was celebrated with great Solemnity. Nehemiah observing that the Compass of the City was too large for its Inhabitants, ordered that the chief of the Nation should there fix their Dwelling; and caused them to draw Lots, by which a tenth Part of the whole People of Judah were obliged to dwell at Jerusalem.

[Neh. xi.] Then he applied himself to the reforming of such Corruptions, as had crept into the Administration of publick Affairs. He curb'd the Inhumanity of the great ones, who held in a State of Slavery and Subjection the Sons and Daughters of those that were poor or unfortunate, keeping their Lands in Possession, which these poor People had been obliged either to mortgage or sell to them.

Another Abuse there was, which Esdras had in vain attempted to redress, that they had contracted Marriages with strange and idolatrous Women. Nehemiah undertook to dissolve these Marriages, succeeded in it, and sent away all such Women as had been taken against the express Command of the Law. [Neh. ix.] Having likewise observed, that the Priests and Levites were obliged to take Refuge wherever they could, and so the Ministry of the Temple was not attended or performed with that Decency it ought, because they did not receive the Revenues that the Law had appointed for their Subsistence; he obliged the People punctually to pay the Ministers of the Lord what was due to them, and enjoined the Priests and Levites duly to attend on their respective Duties, and to discharge their [Neh. xiii. 10, 11, &c.] Functions. He enforced the Observation of the Sabbath, which had been much neglected at Jerusalem, and would not permit Strangers to come in to buy and sell, but kept the Gates of the City shut up all that [Neh. xiii. 15, 16, &c.] Day. And to perpetuate as much as was possible these good Regulations which he had newly established, he engaged the chief Men of the Nation solemnly to renew the Covenant with the Lord. This Ceremony was performed in the Temple, and an Instrument was drawn up, which was signed by the principal Men, both Priests and People[6].

[2 Macc. i. 19, 20, 21, &c.] We read in the Books of the Maccabees, that Nehemiah sent to search for the Holy Fire, which before the Captivity of Babylon the Priests had hid in a dry and deep Pit; but not finding any Fire there, but instead thereof a thick and muddy Water, he sprinkled this upon the Altar; whereupon the Wood which had been sprinkled with this Water, took fire presently, as soon as the Sun began to appear. Which Miracle coming to the Knowledge of the King of Persia, he caused the Place to be encompass'd with Walls where the Fire had been hid, and granted great Favours and Privileges [2 Macc. ii. 13, 14.] to the Priests. 'Tis recorded in the same Books, that Nehemiah erected a Library, wherein he placed whatever he could find, either of the Books of the Prophets, of David, and of such Princes as had made Presents to the Temple. Lastly, he returned to Babylon, according to the Promise he had made to King Artaxerxes, about the thirty-second Year of this Prince[7]. From thence he returned again to Jerusalem, where he died in Peace[8], having governed the People of Judah for about thirty Years.

The second Book[9], which in the Latin Bibles bears the Name of Esdras, in the Hebrew has the Name of Nehemiah prefix'd to it. This Author speaks there almost always in the first Person; and at first reading one would think that he had writ it Day by Day, or had set down whatever occur'd in his daily Transactions. But if we read it with due Attention, we may observe here several Things, which could not have been written by Nehemiah. For Example, Memorials are quoted, wherein were registred the Names of the Priests in the Time of Jonathan the Son of Eliashib, and even to the Times of Jeddoa or Jaddus, who lived under Darius Codomannus, and under Alexander the Great. It is therefore very probable, that Nehemiah wrote the Memoirs of his Government, which are cited in the second Book of the Maccabees, Inserebantur [2 Macc. ii. 13.] autem in descriptionibus & commentariis Nehemiæ hæc eadem, and that it is from these Memoirs in the main, that this Book has been compiled. See our Preface to the second Book of Esdras, wherein we enquire at large into this Affair.

Neighbour

[Gen. xxiv. 41. Gen. xi. 3, 7.] NEIGHBOUR. Propinquus or proximus signifies near Relations, Countrymen, those of the same Tribe, Neighbours, and in general, all Men that are linked together by the Bonds of Humanity,and whom the Law of Charity requires, that we should consider as Friends and Relations. We shall alledge Examples of all these Significations. Cum veneris ad propinquos meos; says Abraham to Eliezer: When you shall arrive at my Relations, my Kindred. Dixit alter ad proximum suum. One said to another, one Neighbour to another. [Levit. xxv. 25.] Si voluerit propinquus ejus redimere; if his Neighbour, he that is of the same Tribe, and of the same Family, has a [Josh. xx. 5. See Matth. v. 43. and Luke x. 29. Psal. lxxxiv. 10. cxliv. 18. Judg. vii. 13.] mind to redeem the Field that was sold.

Propinquus is us'd in this Sense through the whole Book of Joshua: Quia ignorans percussit proximum. He kill'd a Man at unawares. Narrabat aliquis somnium proximo suo. One Soldier related his Dream to his Comrade.

At the Time of our Saviour, the Pharisees had restrained the Word Neighbour to signifie those of their own Nation only, or their own Friends; being of Opinion, that to hate their Enemy was not forbidden by their Law. But our Saviour informed them, that the whole World were their Neighbours, that they ought not to do to another, what they would not have done to themselves, that they ought to love all Men as themselves, and that this Charity ought to be extended even to their Enemies. Thus he overthrew the false Maxims of the Pharisees, and brought back the Precept of universal Charity to its first Intention. See Luke x. 29.

God is a Neighbour to those who fear him, and call upon him. He gives them Tokens of his Presence and Protection. Putasne Deus è vicino ego sum, & non Deus de longe? Am I a God at hand, and not a God afar off? Am I one of those Gods that Men have made not above two Days [Jerem. xxiii. 23.] ago? Am not I an eternal God? Otherwise, I am a Neighbour-God, that sees every thing, knows every thing, and not an absent or distant God.

Neomenia

NEOMENIA. This Word comes from the Greek[1], and signifies the first Day of the Month. 'Tis known that the Hebrews had a particular Veneration for the first Day of every Month, and Moses appointed certain peculiar Sacrifices for this Day. But [Numb. xxviii. 11, 12. 1 Sam. xx. 5. & 18.] he gave no Orders that it should be kept as an Holy Day. Nor can it be any where proved, that the ancient Jews observed this as a Precept: 'Twas a Festival of mere voluntary Devotion. It appears that even from the Time of Saul they made on this Day a Sort of Family-Entertainment and Rejoycing, since David ought then to have been at the King's Table, and Saul took it amiss that he did not attend. Moses insinuates, that besides the national Sacrifices that were then constantly offer'd, every private Person made his particular Sacrifices of Devotion. The Beginning of the Month was proclaimed by Sound of Trumpet, which was performed at the [Numb. x. 10. Numb. x. 10. Levit. xxiii. 24.] offering of the solemn Sacrifices. But the most celebrated Neomenia of all others was that at the Beginning of the Civil Year, or first Day of the Month Tizri. This was a Sacred Day, on which no servile Labour was performed; on this they offer'd particular Burnt-Sacrifices, and sounded with the Trumpets of the Temple. In the Kingdom of the ten Tribes, the most sober among the People used to assemble sometimes at the Houses of the Prophets, to hear their Instructions. The Shunamite, who entertained Elisha, having a Mind to go to see this Prophet, her Husband said to her; Why do you go to him to Day, since it is neither the Sabbath nor the [2 Kings iv. 23. Isai. i. 13, 14. Ezek. xlv. 17. Vide & 1 Chr. xxiii. 31. & 2 Chron. viii. 13. Judith viii. 6. Ezek. xlvi. 1, 2.] New-Moon? Isaiah declares, that the Lord abhors the New-Moons, the Sabbaths, and the other Days of the Festivals and Assemblies of those Jews, who in other Things neglected the Observation of his Laws. Ezekiel says, that the Burnt-Offerings that were used to be offered on the Day of the New-Moon, were provided at the King's Expence, and that on this Day was to be opened the Eastern Gate of the Court of the Priests. Judith kept no Fast on Festival Days, or on the New-Moon. The modern Jews keep the Neomenia only as a Feast of Devotion, which every one may observe, or not, as he pleases[2]. They think it rather belongs to the Women than the Men. The Women forbear from Work, and they indulge a little more on this Day than on others. In the Prayers of the Synagogue, they read from Psalm 113, to 118. They bring forth the Role of the Law, and read therein to four Persons. They call to Remembrance the Sacrifice, that on this Day used to be offered in the Temple. On the Evening of the Sabbath which follows the New-Moon, or some other Evening following, when the New-Moon first appears, all the Jews assemble together, and make a Prayer to God, calling him the Creator of the Planets, and the Restorer of the New-Moon; then raising themselves towards Heaven, they ask of God that they may be preserved from all Misfortunes; then after making Mention of David, they salute each other, and so separate.

Spencer[3] has made a long Dissertation upon the Neomenia, in which he shews very well, that the Gentiles have heretoforehonoured the first Day of the Month, out of Veneration to the Moon. He would conclude from hence, that the Hebrews have borrowed this Practice from strange and idolatrous People. But he by no Means proves this, and it is much more probable that it is from the Hebrews that other Nations have copied; or rather, that without any Design of imitating the Hebrews, they have thought fit to honour the Moon at the beginning of the Month, at her first Appearance. The Worship of the Moon has been very common among all idolatrous Nations.

Neophyte

NEOPHYTE, or Novice. This Word comes from the Greek[1], and literally signifies, newly sown, or planted. This Name was given to new Converts to Christianity, or to those that were newly baptized. St. [1 Tim. iii. 16.] Paul advises, that a Novice should not be made a Bishop, for Fear, says he, lest being lifted up with Pride, he fall into the Condemnation of the Devil. As Lucifer, who at the beginning of his Creation being puft up with those eminent Qualities he saw himself possessed of, became proud and insolent, and was therefore suddenly precipitated into Hell[2]. A Man that finds himself so suddenly exalted in Dignity, easily flatters himself, and persuades himself he has more real Worth than others, and that there is great Occasion for his Service, because he has been so hastily called to a superior Employment. Hence comes Presumption and Pride, and then the Judgment of God, who always humbles the Proud.

Nero

NERO. The Emperor Nero is not to be found by Name in Scripture; but he is expressed by his Title of Emperor, and by his Surname Cæsar. For to him it was that St. Paul appealed, when being seized in the Temple of Jerusalem[1], he was sent to Cæsarea to Felix the Governor of Judæa, who there kept him two Years in Prison, and afterwards left him to Festus his Successor in the Government of that Province, who having a Design of delivering him up to the Jews, St. Paul was obliged to appeal to Nero[2]. He was therefore carried to Rome, and arrived there in the Month of February, in the 60th Year of Jesus Christ. There he continued two Years, preaching the Gospel with great Freedom, till he became famous even in the Emperor's Court, in which were a good [Philip. iv. 22. i. 12, 13.] Number of Christians. He salutes the Philippians in the Name of the Brethren who were of the Houshold of Cæsar, that is, of Nero's Court. We have no particular Information how he got clear of those Accusations that were exhibited against him by the Jews; whether he appeared before Nero, or whether his Enemies the Jews dropt their Prosecutions; but this is certain, that he was set free in the 62d Year of Jesus Christ. He returned to Rome in the 65th Year of Jesus Christ, in the 11th and 12th of Nero; and having, as 'tis said, made a Proselyte of a Concubine of this Prince, he was seized and put in Prison by his Orders. He appeared before him, and was forsaken by every Body on this important Occasion: [2 Tim. iv. 16, 17.] But God delivered him at this Time out of the Mouth of the Lion. He appeared before him a second Time, and was condemned to be beheaded in the 66th Year of Jesus Christ. The Apostle St. Peter was also apprehended, and put to Death by the Orders of the same Prince, and at the same Time as St. Paul. Nero is reckoned as the first Persecutor of the Christian Church; and the Persecution he raised against it in the 64th Year of Christ, is reckoned as the first Persecution by the Roman Emperors. Nero, the most cruel and most savage of all Men, as also the most wicked and depraved, began his Persecution against the Christians on Pretence of the burning of Rome, of which every one thought himself to be the Author. He endeavoured to throw all the Odium on the Christians[3], of which they were first seized who were known publickly as such, and by their Means many others were discovered. They were condemned to Death, and even insulted at their Sufferings. Some of 'em were sewed up in Skins of Beasts, and then exposed to Dogs to be torn in Pieces. Others were nailed to Crosses, others perished by Flames, and were lighted up in the Night Time, to serve as Torches to the People. Nero gave Leave to make Use of his own Gardens, to be the Scene of all these Cruelties. From this Time they began to publish Edicts against the Christians, and a great Number of Martyrs were found in Nero's Reign, from the Year 64, especially in Italy[4]. We have already mentioned the Deaths of St. Peter and St. Paul, which were consequent of this Persecution; which probably continued to the Death of Nero, in the 68th Year of Christ, and the 14th of this Emperor, who killed himself the Ninth or Eleventh of June. I shall not enter upon the Particulars of Nero's Life and Actions, but shall confine my self to what concerns the Christian Religion only, and what may properly belong to a Dictionary of the Bible. The Revolt of the Jews from the Romans happened about the 65th and 66th Years of Christ, and the 12th and 13th of Nero. The City of Jerusalem making an Insurrection in the Year 66, Florus there slew three Thousand six Hundred Persons, and thus began the War. A little while after those of Jerusalem killed the Roman Garrison. Cestius upon this came to Jerusalem, in Order to suppress the Sedition; but he was forced to retire after having besieged it for about six Weeks, and was routed in his Retreat the 8th of November, in the 66th Year of the vulgar Æra. About the End of the same Year Nero gave to Vespasian the Command of his Troops against the Jews. This General carried on the War in Galilee, and in the rest of Judæa, during the 67th and 68th Years of Christ, and the 13th and 14th of Nero. But Nero killing himself the 14th Year of his Reign, the City of Jerusalem was not besieged till after his Death, in the 70th Year of Christ, and the 1st and 2d of Vespasian.

Nethinims

[Josh. ix.] NETHINIMS. This Word comes from the Hebrew Nathan to give. The Nethinims were Servants who had been given up and dedicated to the Service of the Tabernacle and Temple, to perform the meanest and most laborious Services therein, as the carrying of Wood and Water thither. At first the Gibeonites were appointed to this Office. Afterwards the Canaanites that surrendered themselves, and whose Lives were spared, were consigned to the Performance of the same Duties. We read in [Ez. viii. 20.] Ezra, that the Nethinims were Slaves devoted by David, and the other Princes to the Ministry of the Temple; and elsewhere, that they were Slaves given by [Ez. ii. 58.] Solomon: The Children of Solomon's Servants. And we see in the Book of Kings, that this [1 Kings ix. 20, 21.] Prince had subdued the Remains of the Canaanites, and had constrained them to several Servitudes; and it is very probable he gave a good Number of them to the Priests and Levites, for the Service of the Temple. The Nethinims were carried into Captivity with the Tribe of Judah, and there were great Numbers of them towards the Coasts of the Caspian Sea, from whence Ezra [Ez. viii. 17.] brought some of them back. At the Return from the Captivity, they dwelt in the Cities [Ez. ii. 17.] appointed for them. There were some of 'em also at Jerusalem, who inhabited that Part of the City called Ophel. Those who returned [Nehem. iii. 26. Ezr. viii. 20. Ezr. ii. 58.] with Ezra were to the Number of two Hundred and twenty; and those that followed Zerubbabel made up three Hundred ninety two. This Number was but small in Regard to the Offices that were imposed on them; so that we see afterwards they instituted a Solemnity called Xylophoria, in which the People carried Wood to the Temple with great Ceremony, to keep up the Fire of the Altar of burnt Sacrifices z.

New

NEW. It is put for extraordinary or unusual. The Lord has chose a new Method of making War; Nova bella elegit [Judg. v. 8. Numb. xvi. 30.] Dominus, says Deborah in her Song. If the Lord make a new Thing, and the Earth open her Mouth, and swallow them up, you shall thereby know that they have blasphemed the Lord. And the Author of [Wisd. xv. 3.] the Book of Wisdom, speaking of Manna says, that the Hebrews tasted a new kind of Food; Novam gustaverunt escam. God gave them miraculous Bread. And speaking [Wisd. xix. 11.] of the Quails he says, Viderunt novam creaturam avium.

God promises a new Heaven and a new [Isai. lxv. 17. lxxi. 22.] Earth, at the Time of the Messiah; that is, an universal Renovation of all Things, a Change of Manners, Sentiments, and Actions, through the whole World, under the Reign of the Messiah. This Passage is also understood of what is to happen to the Heaven and the Earth at the End of the World. There will be seen a new Heaven and a new Earth; not that the Heaven and the Earth that now are will be annihilated, or change their Nature; but the Air, the Earth, and the Elements will be more perfect, or at least we shall be of a Nature that will no longer be subject to those Vicissitudes and Alterations, that we now suffer by Means of these Elements.

God also promises to his People a new [Ezek. xi. 19. xviii. 31. xxxvi. 26.] Covenant, a new Spirit, a new Heart; and this was fully accomplished at our Saviour's coming.

A new Hymn, a new Song; Things of this Kind generally please the more, when they have the Character of Novelty.

God says he is going to create a new [Jerem. xxxi. 22.] Thing upon the Earth, a Woman shall compass a Man, which is understood of the Conception [Matth. ix. 17.] and Birth of the Messiah. Several of the Moderns understand it otherwise. I am going to do a new Thing in Israel: Hereafter Women shall seek Men in Marriage.

Our Saviour says by Way of Proverb, that new Wine should not be put into old Bottles; by which he intended to insinuate, that his Apostles should not be oppressed by difficult Observances, before they should be fortified by the Reception of the Holy Ghost.

Nicanor (I)

[2 Macc. viii. 9. 2 Macc. xiv. 12.] I. NICANOR, Son of Patroclus, he returned from Rome along with King Antiochus Epiphanes, and had a great Share in his Favour[1]. The Author of the second Book of Maccabees says, that he was the Master of the Elephants. He was sent into Judæa the first Time[2], in the Year of the World 3839, by Antiochus Epiphanes, or rather by Lysias, who governed the Kingdom in the Absence of Antiochus, who was then gone into Persia. Nicanor therefore was sent into Judæa with Gorgias, to stop the great Progress then made by Judas Maccabeus. He thought himself so sure of Victory, that he pretended to pay[3] the two Thousand Talents that the King owed the Romans for Tribute, with the Money that should arise from the Sale of the Jewish Slaves. And at the same Time sent to the Cities on the Sea-Coast, to invite Merchants to come and buy such Slaves as he should make by this War, promising to give them four Score and ten for one Talent.

Nicanor and Gorgias being therefore arrived in Judæa with a powerful Army, in Order to exterminate the Jews, and to distribute their Country to Strangers, according to the Commands that Antiochus Epiphanes had left with them at his Departure for Persia; Judas Maccabæus had Intelligence of it, and assembling together about seven Thousand of his Troops, he exhorted them to fight bravely, and not to fear the Multitude of their Enemies, but to call to Mind the Wonders that God had heretofore done in Favour of their Fathers, by defeating the Army of Sennecharib, and again in the Defeat of the six Score Thousand Gauls or Galatians.

[1 Macc. iii. 46, &c.] Having thus encouraged them to stand up in the Defence of their Laws and Country, Jerusalem being then in the Possession of idolatrous Nations, they came to Mispah, which had been a Place of Prayer and Devotion to Israel before the Temple was built. There they fasted, clothed themselves with Sack-cloth, covered their Heads with Ashes, tore their Clothes, and implored the Help of the Lord; and Eleazar Brother to Judas read something to them out of the Book of the Law. Then Judas appointed his Officers, nominated Tribunes, Captains, and Decurions, each to command the Body that was committed to them, under the Command of general Officers. Lastly, he began his March, came and encamped at Emmaus, and gave Orders to his People to prepare themselves to fight the Day following.

[1 Macc. iv. 1, &c.] Gorgias imagining he might then surprize Judas by Night, and cut his little Army in Pieces, set out towards Evening with a Detachment of five Thousand Foot, and a Thousand chosen Horse; and taking some Deserters or apostate Jews for his Guides, who were well acquainted with the Country, he marched directly to the Hebrew Camp. But Judas having had Intelligence of his March, decamped in the middle of the Night; and taking Advantage of the Absence of Gorgias, who was a General of good Experience, he advanced to attack the Body of the Enemy's Army then at Emmaus. Gorgias in the mean Time coming to Judas's Camp, and finding it forsaken, thought he had took to his Heels, and began to pursue him into the [2 Macc. viii. 22.] Mountains. But Judas distributing his Army into four Bodies, gave the Command of fifteen hundred Men to each of his three Brothers, Simon, Joseph, and Jonathan; and having given them the Watch-word, the Assistance of God, he put himself at the Head of three Thousand Men, set upon Nicanor, killed him above nine Thousand Men, and routed his whole Army.

I see nothing in antient History more noble [Observations upon the Rout of Nicanor by Judas Maccabeus.] and more admirable than the Speeches and Harangues that the Generals used to make to their Troops, to raise their Courage, and to excite them either to conquer or to dye. This Method, which was so effectual from the Mouth of a General, but more so from the Mouth of a King, continued down to the sixteenth Century. The Harangues of Henry the Great are remarkable in his History[4]. The best are those that are shortest, and those wherein, in few Words and with an Energy of Style, they put their Soldiers in Mind of their former Victories, their own Reputation, the Good and the Glory of their Country, which they have committed to their Care, and the Vices and Defects of their Enemies, &c. But why is so good a Custom lost? 'Tis because the greatest Part of our modern Generals are wanting in this Laconick Eloquence, which becomes them so well, and makes them so fit for their Employments.

[2 Macc. viii. 18.] In the Harangue that Judas Maccabæus makes here to his Soldiers, he forgets nothing that may raise their Courage, and excite their Hopes of Victory. He puts in Practice that powerful Battery of Religion, which of all others is that which most moves and affects the Heart. And when it is urged by so brave a Warrior as Judas was, the Hopes of conquering are infinitely increased, and especially in the Hearts of a People who had a natural Aversion for all the Enemies of their Religion. Judas sets before them the Impieties and Sacrileges of their Enemies, who had dared to prophane the most sacred Place: For they (said he) trust in their Weapons, and Boldness; but our Confidence is in the Almighty God, who at a Beck can cast down both them that come against us, and also the World. He puts them in Mind of the Assistance that God had vouchsafed to their Forefathers, the Defeat of Sennecharib's Army, and concludes by a much later Victory, which was so extraordinary, that Commentators are not a little puzzled to find it in History, and they rely only upon some Conjectures, which seem to be a little strained.

Father Calmet says, " That " it is very probable the Matter here mentioned was some Enterprize of the Gala- " tians upon Babylonia, which having had " no Consequences, has been neglected by " Historians, who seldom take Notice of " the Incursions of an Enemy, when they " are not connected to some other Events, " which appear worthy to be recorded in " History." But he must allow me to reply, that there is no Historian, how much soever he may epitomize, that could omit so surprizing an Action, since Judas in his Harangue takes Notice, that with the Assistance of Heaven six Thousand Jews[5] had killed six Score Thousand Galatians in one Battle. Could an Historian be capable of omitting to register so remarkable an Event? Yet History makes no Mention of it, which is still a greater Wonder, than that six Thousand Men should kill six Score Thousand.

[1 Macc. iii. 38, 39, 40. 1 Macc. iii. 55.] This War of Antiochus at first filled the Jews with Terror and Consternation. Their Hope and Trust were much more in the Providence of God, and in the Ability of their General, than in their own Strength, which was so disproportionate to that of the Enemy. But this Speech of Judas had such an Effect upon the Hearts of his Soldiers, that being animated with Courage and Resolution, they were ready to die for their Laws and Country.

Lysias, the Regent of the Kingdom during the Absence of King Antiochus Epiphanes, who was gone for Persia, made Choice of Ptolemy Son of Dorymini, and Nicanor and Gorgias, who were Men of great Power and Friends to the King. These he sent upon this Expedition, with an Army of forty Thousand Foot, and seven Thousand Horse. He appointed them to march into Judæa, and to destroy the whole Country, according as the King had left Orders. They set out therefore with all their Troops, and came to encamp at Emmaus in the Plain. Judas being informed that the Design of Antiochus was to exterminate the whole Jewish Nation, easily foresaw the Difficulties he must undergo to prevent it. The Number and Valour of his Enemies, and the Experience of their Generals, put him into a Consternation; but nevertheless he took Measures that were worthy of himself. To remove his Fears, he established an exact Discipline among his Troops, he introduced the same Orders that David had done in his Reign. He ordained Captains over the People, even Captains over Thousands, and over Hundreds, and over Fifties, and over Tens. However brave and undaunted an Army may be, and whatever Skill and Experience the General may have, yet without Order and Discipline all his Hopes will be disappointed. Hitherto it should seem as if the Maccabees had opposed only their own Valour, and their Dexterity in the Disposition of their Troops, to the superiority or Numbers of their Enemies; but now good Discipline, together with the Ingenuity and Capacity of the Jewish Generals, make Amends for their want of Strength. To which must be added their Confidence in the Protection of God, and then the Victory becomes assured to them. Such they thought it to be, they went to meet their Enemy, and the two Armies approached very near to each other in the Plain of Emmaus.

Gorgias knowing that the Jews were resolved either to conquer or to dye for their Religion and Country, aimed at surprizing them by Night, thinking to come upon Judas at unawares, and to cut his little Army in Pieces by Favour of the Darkness. He set out therefore the Evening before, at the Head of a Body of five Thousand Foot, and a Thousand chosen Horse, and marched directly to the Camp of Israel. Judas having Intelligence of his Enemy's Design, did not lose a Moment, but decamped in the Middle of the Night, to take Advantage of Gorgias's Absence, whose Skill and Courage he was well aware of, and drew towards Emmaus by a silent March. Gorgias thinking him to be still in his Camp, approaches towards it, and finding it forsaken, thought the Jews had betook themselves to Flight. He seeks for them in the Mountains, but in vain, not once dreaming that they were approaching nearer to his own Camp.

[2 Macc. viii. 22.] Here Judas arrives, and Nicanor being surprized by so extraordinary an Adventure, and by the Boldness of the Enemy, does not know what to think of Gorgias's Undertaking, imagining he might have been defeated. However at the Sight of the Jews he comes out of his Camp, sets his Troops in Order of Battle, and ranges them according to the Method of the People of Asia, which was the same as that of the Greeks; that is, the Infantry in the Center, and the Cavalry at the Wings of the Army.

As for Judas Maccabeus, he divided his Army into several Corps, and gave the Command of them to his Brethren Simon, Joseph, and Jonathan, each having under him fifteen Hundred Men. That is, he divided his Army into four Bodies, as appears by the Book of [1 Macc. iv. 6.] the Maccabees, being himself at the Head of three Thousand Men. We may observe that he here follows his usual Method, which is to fight in separate Bodies, in the Front of the Line, and to a very great Depth.

Of all the Battles which the Maccabees have fought, I see none accompanied with more Ceremony or Precaution than this.

Dddd And indeed it must be allowed, that the Safety of the Jews depended upon it, so numerous were the Forces of their Enemies, and their Chiefs were so good Soldiers as might well strike a Fear and Terror into them. But the General of the Jews, by his Prudence and Skilfulness, surmounted all these Obstacles. And by the Help of the Almighty, they slew above nine Thousand of their Enemies, and wounded and maimed the most Part of Nicanor's Host, and so put [2 Macc. viii. 24. 2 Macc. viii. 35.] all to Flight. And Nicanor, putting off his glorious Apparel, and discharging his Company, came like a fugitive Servant through the Mid-land into Antioch, having very great Dishonour for that his Host was destroyed.

Nicanor returned into Judæa about four Years afterwards, when Demetrius Soter, Son of Seleucus, was come back into Syria, and had ascended the Throne of his Ancestors. Alcimus, who had then bought the High Priesthood, asked some Forces of the King, that he might be put in Possession of this Dignity. Demetrius gave him Bacchides with some Troops, who placed him by Force of Arms in the Exercise of the Priesthood. But Judas taking the Field, and gathering his Soldiers together, obliged Alcimus to withdraw, and to go once more to desire Assistance from Demetrius[6]. This Prince then sent Nicanor into Judæa, with [1 Macc. vii. 26. 27, &c.] Orders to destroy all those that should dispute his Commands.

At first he endeavoured to get Judas into his Power by Stratagem, pretending to treat of Peace with him in a personal Conference out of the City. Judas came to the Place appointed, but perceiving they had a Design to secure him, he withdrew in Time, and would hear no more of any Accommodation after that. Then he marched against Nicanor with his Army, and gave him Battle at Capharsalama. Nicanor had about five Thousand Men killed upon the Spot, and the rest fled to Jerusalem. He came thither also himself, where he turned to Ridicule the burnt Offerings that were offered there for the Kings of Syria, treated the Priests with Contempt, and threatened at his Return to burn the Temple, if they did not deliver Judas into his Hands.

Then he departed, and came to encamp about Bethoron, where he received a Reinforcement of Syrian Troops. Judas also drew near with his Army, and encamped at Adarsa, four Miles from Bethoron. The Battle was fought the thirteenth Day of the Month Adar, when Nicanor's Army was intirely routed, and himself slain in the Fight. His Soldiers seeing him fall, threw down their Arms, and betook themselves to flight. They cut off Nicanor's Head, and his right Hand, which he had sacrilegiously stretched out against the Temple; these the Jews brought, and hung them up in the Sight of Jerusalem, and ordered that for the future, this Day should be celebrated as a Festival to all Israel. Such was the End of Nicanor. He died in the Year of the World 3843, before Christ 157, before the Vulgar Æra 161.

The second Book of the Maccabees relates more at length this last Expedition of [2 Macc. xiv. 12, 13, &c.] Nicanor against Judæa; it says that this General came into Judæa with Orders to take Judas alive, to disperse those who had taken up Arms with him, and to settle Alcimus in the High-priesthood. His Arrival put all the Country into a Consternation. Nicanor came to encamp near the Castle of Dessau, in the Neighbourhood of a Town called Essaus, the Situation whereof is not known. Simon the Brother of Judas had a Skirmish with the Enemies Army, in which he had the worst. However Nicanor, who knew the great Valour of Judas and his Men, sent Messengers to him to treat of Peace. The Negotiation was pretty long, but at last it was agreed, that Judas and Nicanor should have an Interview in a certain Place in the Field, in Order to conclude this Treaty. The Conference was held accordingly, and they agreed upon Terms. Nicanor and Judas lived together afterwards in good Intelligence at Jerusalem, and Nicanor dismissed his Troops, which now were useless to him. He even commenced a Friendship with Judas, desired him to marry, and to think of leaving Children.

But this good Correspondence was soon disturbed by Alcimus, who could not bear to see Judas invested with the High-priesthood, to the Exclusion of himself. He therefore went to wait on Demetrius at Antioch, and accused Nicanor of betraying the Interest of the King and Kingdom, in Confederacy with Judas Maccabæus. The King exasperated by these Calumnies, wrote to Nicanor, telling him that he was much offended with his taking Judas into his Friendship, and ordered him to send him in Chains to Antioch. Nicanor was much grieved at receiving these Orders, but not being able to evade the Execution of his Masters Commands, he was seeking an Occasion to lay Hands on Judas. But he soon perceived this Change of Nicanor's Conduct, and to prevent him he retired from Jerusalem with some of his People. Nicanor seeing that Judas had made his Escape, fell in a Rage, and coming into the Temple, he commanded the Priests to produce Judas to him. It availed nothing that the Priests assured him, even with an Oath, that they knew nothing of him. He stretched his Hand forth towards the Temple, and told them; If you do not put Judas into my Hands, I will eraze the Temple to its very Foundations, I will overturn the Altar, and consecrate the Place to the God Bacchus.

At the same Time he went out of the Temple, and some wicked people brought him an Accusation against a venerable old [2 Macc. xiv. 37, 38, &c.] Man call'd Razis, whom they call'd the Father of the Jews, who led a vertuous and unblameable Life, in great Abhorrence of all the Abominations of Paganism. Nicanor sent five hundred Men to seize him. Razis seeing that he could not escape from them, smote himself with a Sword, and running with Violence, threw himself from the Top of his House in the midst of the People. As he was yet alive, he raised himself, and getting upon a sharp Stone, he pull'd out his own Bowels out of his Body, and throwing them with both his Hands among the People, he died in the midst of his Enemies, who could not forbear admiring his great Intrepidity. See what is said in the Article RAZIS.

After this, Nicanor being inform'd that Judas was in the Country of Samaria, he resolved to go and attack him on the Sabbath Day. He march'd by the sound of Trumpet, and with singing Songs of Victory, and gave Battle to Judas, who had no other Defence but the Assistance of the Lord of Hosts. The Army of Nicanor was routed, and there were thirty five thousand kill'd upon the Spot: And when the Fight was over, it was found that Nicanor was fallen among the Dead. Upon which they could not forbear to shout for Joy. Judas commanded that his Head and Hand, with the Shoulder, should be cut off; and being arrived at Jerusalem, he assembled the People and Priests in the Temple, and shewed them the Head and Hand of their Enemy. He also shewed it to the Syrians that were in the Citadel. Then he caused the Tongue of this Wretch to be cut off, for having utter'd Blasphemies against the Lord, and cutting it into small Pieces, he gave it to be devour'd by the Fowls of the Air. The Head was hung up on the Top of the Citadel, and the Hand was fastened to a Gibbet over against the Temple. It was decreed by the general Consent of all, that this Day should be celebrated by a particular Festival through all Generations, in Commemoration of this Defeat of Nicanor.

Nicanor (II)

[Acts vi. 5, 6, &c.] II. NICANOR, one of the seven first Deacons, who were appointed at Jerusalem[1] soon after the Descent of the Holy Ghost, upon occasion of the Division among the Believers into two Parties, those that spoke Greek, and those of Palestine, who spoke Hebrew or Syriac. The first complain'd that their Widows were neglected, in the Distribution of their daily Necessaries. To remedy this Evil the Apostles chose seven Persons, of the Number of which was Nicanor, to attend the Tables, and to make an equal Distribution of the daily Alms. Nothing particular is known of Nicanor. The Roman Martyrology says, that he obtained the Crown of Martyrdom the 10th of January, in the Island of Cyprus. The Greeks keep his Feast on the 27th of August, with that of the Saints Procorus, Timon, and Parmenas. Dorotheus says he was put to Death with many others the same Day as St. Stephen; which insinuates that he suffer'd Martyrdom at Jerusalem, and not in Cyprus. His Name is found in the Menæa on the 28th of December.

III. NICANOR, or Nicator. Demetrius Nicator, King of Syria, ascended the Throne in the Year of the World 3854, before Christ 146, before the Vulgar Æra 150. He reigned ten Years, but always in Trouble, because of the several Competitors that disputed the Kingdom with him. See DEMETRIUS.

Nicaule

NICAULE. This is the Name that Josephus[1] gives to the Queen of Sheba, who came to visit Solomon[2], and to try if his Wisdom was as great as it had been represented to her. See 1 Kings x. 1, 2, &c. and 2 Chron. ix. 1, 2, 3, &c. Josephus will have it, that this Princess was Queen both of Egypt and Ethiopia, and cites Herodotus as speaking of Queen Nicaule. But Herodotus[3] speaks only of Niconis Queen of Egypt, and not of Nicaule, nor does he say any thing of her pretended Journey to Jerusalem. We shall relate here what the Scripture informs us concerning the Queen of Sheba, without deciding whether she was called Nicaule, as Josephus pretends. Solomon's Fame being spread all round about, the Queen of Sheba, or as Jesus Christ calls her in the Gospel, the Queen of the South, came to make him a Visit. She [Matth. xii. 42. Luke xi. 31.] was probably Queen of that Part of Arabia fœlix, which was inhabited by the Sabeans, and where Women us'd to govern.

————————Medis levibusque Sabæis Imperat hic Sexus, Reginarumq; sub armis Barbariæ pars magna jacet[4].

This Queen came to make a Trial of the Wisdom of Solomon by Riddles and Enigmatical Questions, which were then of frequent Use among those that pass'd for wise Men. She arrived at Jerusalem with an Equipage suitable to her Dignity. She brought with her a great Quantity of Spices, of Gold, and of precious Stones; and being introduced to King Solomon, she proposed to him whatever she had conceived in her Mind. Solomon satisfy'd her in all things that she enquired after; and seeing the great Wisdom of this Prince, the Magnificence of his Court, and the Sumptuousness of his Table and Attendants, she was quite astonished, and own'd to Solomon, that what she had been Witness of was much beyond what had been told her. She made him a Present of six score Talents of Gold, and of a vast Quantity of Perfumes and precious Stones. The King on his Part gave the Queen of Sheba whatever she desired, without reckoning the Presents he made her with a Royal Magnificence; after which she returned to her own Kingdom. This is what the Books of the Kings and Chronicles tell us, of this Journey of the Queen of Sheba to Jerusalem.

Josephus[5] adds to these several other Circumstances, which he had received perhaps from the Traditions of the Jews. He says, that Nicaule Queen of Egypt and Ethiopia, brought by the Reputation of Solomon's Wisdom, came to Jerusalem with a Retinue proportionable to her Magnificence. She proposed to the King several very difficult Questions, in which he gave her immediate Satisfaction, with a great deal of Facility. The Sumptuousness of his Palace call'd the Forest of Libanus, the exact Order, the Neatness and Magnificence with which he was served at Table, the Pomp and Majesty that shone forth in the Temple at the Offering of the Sacrifices, and the rest of his Grandeur, fill'd her with Admiration and Astonishment. He adds, that she made him a Present of twenty Talents of Gold, whereas the Scripture says six Score; and that she gave him the Plant of Balm, which is so valuable, and which became afterwards so famous in Judæa.

Michael Glycas says[6], that one of the Means made use of by this Queen, to prove the Wisdom of Solomon, was to dress up young Children in the same Manner, both Boys and Girls, and to present them to Solomon, to try if he could distinguish them at Sight. The King bid them wash their Faces, and so distinguished the Boys from the Girls, by their robust Manner of performing this Action, whereas the Girls did it tenderly and effeminately.

The Ethiopians think the Queen of Sheba was of their Country, and that she returned big with Child of a Boy that she had by Solomon. When this Child was of an Age to learn, she sent him to Solomon to be instructed, who brought him up as his Son. He took great Care of him, provided the ablest Masters for him, and then sent him back to his Mother, to whom he succeeded in the Kingdom. The Kings of Ethiopia pretend to be descended from Solomon by this young Prince, whom they call Menilebec or Meilic; and they reckon four and twenty Emperors of this Family down to Basilides, who reigned about the middle of the seventeenth Age. Ludolph's History of Ethiopia may be consulted, Lib. 2. c. 3, 4, 5, 6, 7.

The Arabians give the Name of Balkis[7] to the Queen of Sheba, who came to visit Solomon. They say she was Queen of Arabia, of the Posterity of Jarab Son of Cahthan, and that she reigned in the City of Mareb, the Capital of the Province of Sheba. Her Father was Hadhad Son of Scharbabil, the twentieth King of Jemen, or Arabia fælix. The Histories of those People are full of the Actions and fabulous Stories concerning the Journey of this Princess to Solomon's Court, and of her Marriage with this Prince. As also concerning the Bird Hudhud, which we call a Lapwing, and which Solomon made use of to perform Journeys into Arabia, and to bring him Dispatches from thence.

Niches

[Amos v. 25, 26.] NICHES. It is said in the Prophet Amos, that the Israelites in their Peregrination in the Wilderness, bore the Tabernacle of their Moloch, and Chiun their Images, the Star of their God, which they made to [Acts vii. 43.] themselves. St. Stephen in the Acts upbraids them with the same. 'Tis thought with great Probability, that Moloch, and those other Pagan Deities, that they carried with them in the Desart, were carried in Niches upon Mens Shoulders, or upon cover'd Carriages, as we know the Heathen heretofore carried their Idols in Procession, or in publick Marches. There are some that believe that those Silver Temples of the Goddess Diana[1], which were made and sold at Ephesus, were also these Niches, or portable Temples, for the Devotion of Pilgrims. We must here a little farther illustrate this Piece of Antiquity. The Custom of carrying the Images of the Gods under Tents, and in cover'd Litters, came originally from the Egyptians. Herodotus[2] speaks of a Feast of Isis, wherein her Statue was carried upon a Chariot with four Wheels, drawn by her Priests. The same Author speaking of one of their Deities, says, they carried it from one Temple to another, inclosed in a little Chappel made of gilt Wood. Clemens of Alexandria[3] speaks of an Egyptian Procession, wherein they carried two Dogs of Gold, an Hawk, and an Ibis. The same Father quotes the Words of Menander[4], who rally'd those vagrant Divinities, that could not continue in one Place. Macrobius says[5], that the Egyptian Priests carried the Statue of Jupiter of Heliopolis upon their Shoulders, as the Gods of the Romans were carried in the Pomp of the Games of the Circus. Philo of Biblos relates[6], that they us'd to carry Agrotes, a Phenician Deity, in a cover'd Nich upon a Car drawn by Beasts.

The Egyptian Priests[7] placed Jupiter Ammon upon a little Boat, from whence hung Plates of Silver, by the Motion of which they formed a Judgment of the Will of the Deity, and from thence they made their Responses to such as consulted them. The Egyptians and Carthaginians, as Servius reports[8], had little Images, which were carried upon Chariots, and gave Oracles by the Motion that they communicated to those Carriages. The Gauls, as we are told by Sulpicius Severus[9], carried their Gods abroad into the Fields, cover'd with a white Veil. Tacitus speaks of an unknown Goddess, who resided in an Island of the Ocean[10]. They keep for her a cover'd Chariot, which none dares approach but her Priest. When he says that the Goddess is enter'd therein, two Heifers are harness'd to it, who draw the Chariot where they think fit, and then bring it back into her Grove. They wash the Chariot, and the Veils that cover it, and then they drown the Slaves that were employed in that Service. Here therefore are Examples of Gods carried in Niches and in Chariots.

We must yet give some Examples of little Temples of Metal. Diodorus Siculus speaks of two small Temples of Gold. There was one at Lacedemon, which was all of Brass, and therefore was call'd Chalcoteichos, or the House of Brass. Victor in his Description of Rome gives Instances of some of the same Metal in this City; but I should rather think, that the little Temples of Diana of Ephesus, which were made and sold by Demetrius the Silversmith, were either Models in little of the Temple of this Goddess, or Niches wherein the Goddess herself was represented.

Nicodemus

[Joh. iii. 1.] NICODEMUS, a Disciple of Jesus Christ, a Jew by Nation, and by Sect a Pharisee. The Gospel calls him a Ruler [Joh. iii. 10. Joh. iii. 2, 3, &c.] of the Jews, and our Saviour gives him the Name of a Master of Israel. When our Saviour began to manifest himself by his Miracles at Jerusalem, at the first Passover that he celebrated there after his Baptism[1], Nicodemus made no doubt but that he was the Messiah, and came to him by Night, that he might learn of him the Way of Salvation. Jesus told him, that no one could see the Kingdom of Heaven, except he should be born again. Nicodemus taking this in the literal Sense, made answer, How can a Man that is old, be born again? Can he enter a second Time into his Mother's Womb? To which Jesus reply'd, If a Man be not born again of Water and the Spirit, he cannot enter into the Kingdom of God. That which is born of the Flesh is Flesh, and that which is born of the Spirit is Spirit. Nicodemus asks him, How can these Things be? Jesus answered, " Are you a Master of Israel, and are you ignorant of these " Things? We tell you what we know, " and you receive not our Testimony. If " you believe not common Things, and " which may be called earthly, how will " you believe me if I speak to you of heavenly Things? No body has ascended " into Heaven, but the Son of God, who " came down from thence. And just as " Moses lifted up the brazen Serpent in " the Wilderness, so must the Son of Man " be lifted up on high. For God has so " loved the World, that he has given his " only Son, so that no Man who believes " in him shall perish, but shall have eternal Life.

After this Conversation Nicodemus became a Disciple of Jesus Christ, and there is no doubt to be made, but he came to hear him, as often as our Saviour came to Jerusalem. It happen'd on a Time, that the Priests and Pharisees had sent Officers to seize Jesus[2], who returning to them, made their Report, that never Man spoke as he did; to which the Pharisees reply'd, " Are you also of his Disciples? Is there " any one of the Elders or Pharisees that " have believed in him? Then Nicodemus thought himself obliged to make answer, saying, Does the Law permit us to condemn any one before he is heard? To which they reply'd, Are you also a Galilean? Read the Scriptures and you will find, that never any Prophet came out of Galilee. After this the Council was dismiss'd. At last Nicodemus declared himself openly a Disciple of Jesus Christ[3], when he came with Joseph of Arimathea to pay the last Duties to the Body of Christ crucify'd, which they took down from the Cross, embalm'd, and laid in the Sepulchre.

Nicodemus received Baptism from the Disciples of Christ, but it is uncertain whether before or after his Passion. The Jews being informed of this, deposed him from his Dignity of Senator, excommunicated him, and drove him from Jerusalem[4]. 'Tis said also, that they would have put him to Death, but that in Consideration of Gamaliel, who was his Uncle or Cousin-German, they contented themselves with beating him almost to Death, and plundering his Goods. Gamaliel convey'd him to his Country-House[5], and provided him with what was necessary for his Support; and when he dy'd, he buried him honourably near St. Stephen. His Body was discovered in 415, with those of St. Stephen and Gamaliel, and the Latin Church pays Honour to all three together, on the third of August.

There is still extant an Apochryphal Gospel under the Name of Nicodemus[6], which in some Manuscripts bears the Title of the Acts of Pilate. But it is very certain this is not what is cited by the Ancients under the Name of the Acts of Pilate which he sent to Tiberius, being only a modern Piece, full of Fables and Absurdities, and which deserves no Consideration. At the End of this spurious Gospel are read these Words which are sufficient to shew its Falsity. In the Name of the Holy Trinity here end the Acts of our Saviour Jesus Christ, which were found at Jerusalem by Theodosius the Great in the Pretorium of Pontius Pilate, in the publick Acts which were written in the nineteenth Year of the Emperor Tiberius, and the seventeenth Year of Herod, Son of Herod, King of Galilee, the eighth Day before the Kalends of April, which is the twenty-third Day of March, in the Year of the two hundredth and second Olympiad, under the chief Priests Joseph and Caiphas. Which was brought to the Form of a History by Nicodemus, and written in Hebrew after the Crucifixion and Passion of our Saviour.

Nicolas of Damascus (I)

I. NICOLAS of Damascus, a Peripatetick Philosopher, Poet, and Historian, who took the Surname of Damascus, because he was a Native of this City. He liv'd in the Time of Augustus, a little before the Birth of Jesus Christ, and had a great Share in the Favour of this Emperor, and also of Herod the Great, King of the Jews, who employed him in several Affairs of Consequence, of which he always acquitted himself very honourably. Josephus[1] often quotes his History; and in several Places he accuses him of disguising the Truth, in favour of Herod[2], to whom he had devoted his Pen. He wrote a general History, and Josephus quotes something from it, which he had said of Antiochus Epiphanes. Suidas reckon'd only eighty Books of the History of Nicolas of Damascus. Josephus[3] cites the 124[4], and Athenæus reckons as far as 144. He composed several other Works. Henry of Valois publish'd at Paris in the Year 1634, in Greek and Latin, the Collection made by Constantine Porphyrogenetus, of the several Works of Nicolas of Damascus. These Collections belong'd to Mr. de Peiresch, who had procured them to be bought in the Isle of Cyprus.

Nicolas (II)

[Acts vi. 5.] II. NICOLAS, one of the seven first Deacons. He was a Proselyte of Antioch, that is to say, converted from Paganism to the Religion of the Jews. Afterwards he embraced Christianity, and was one of the most zealous and most holy amongst the first Christians; so that he was chosen for one of the seven first Deacons of the Church of Jerusalem. His Memory has been tarnish'd in the Church by a Blemish, from which it has not been possible to clear him hitherto. Certain Hereticks were called Nicolaites from his Name; and tho' perhaps he had no Share in their Errors, nor their Irregularities, yet he is suspected to have given at least some Handle to them. This is what the Ancients inform us in this Matter[1]. He had a Wife who was very handsome, and in Imitation of those that aim'd at a great Degree of Perfection, he left her to live in a State of Continence. St. Epiphanius says, that he did not persevere in this Resolution, but took his Wife again, and in order to justify his Conduct, he advanced Principles that were contrary to Truth and Purity. He plunged himself into Irregularities, and gave Beginning to the Sect of the Nicolaites, to that of the Gnosticks, and to several others, who following the Bent of their Passions, invented a thousand different sorts of Crimes and Wickednesses.

St. Epiphanius is supported in this by St. Irenæus[2], Tertullian[3], St. Hyppolitus[4], St. Hilary[5], St. Gregory of Nyssa[6], St. Philaster of Bressa[7], St. Jerom[8], Cassian[9], Gregory the Great[10], Pacian, Pope Gelasius, Gildas, and several Moderns, who say[11] that Nicolas the Deacon was Head and Author of the impious and infamous Sect of the Nicolaites.

But Clemens Alexandrinus[12], more ancient than Epiphanius, expresses much Esteem for Nicolas, and relates the Affair quite otherwise. The Apostles, says he, having made some Reproaches to Nicolas, as being too jealous of his Wife, he caused her to come before them all, and declar'd that any one might espouse her that pleas'd. This Declaration, which he made in pure Simplicity, and without due Reflection, was only designed as a Proof of the little Attachment and Passion he had for his Wife; and in reality, as St. Clement adds, I have been informed he never cohabited with any other Woman. And as for his Son and his Daughters, who lived very long, they always remained in perfect Virginity. But such as were glad to use the Pretence of his Authority, vindicated themselves by what he had done, in order to abandon themselves to all sorts of Irregularity.

These Hereticks grounded themselves, as the same Clement reports[13], upon a Word that Nicolas let fall, that the Flesh ought to be abused. By which he meant nothing else, but that we ought to suppress our Inclinations to Sensuality and Concupiscence, and to mortify the Passions, and the Impetuosities of the Flesh; whereas these Disciples of Pleasure explained these Words according to their Sensuality, and not according to the Meaning of this Apostolical Man. Eusebius[14] having related, that the Nicolaites gloried in having Nicolas the Deacon as the Author of their Sect; he confutes them by bringing at length this Passage of Clemens Alexandrinus. Theodoret[15] does the same thing, and declares himself still more openly for the Sentiment of Clemens. For excusing the Permission of Nicolas; by which he allowed any one to marry his Wife, he says that the Deacon had in reality no Inclination to permit it, but only intended by this voluntary Offer, to confute those that had raised a murmuring against him. St. Austin[16], Victorinus Petaviensis[17], Isidorus, and the Council of Tours acquit him likewise. The Apostolical Constitutions[18], and the interpolated Letters of St. Ignatius the Martyr[19], affirm that the Nicolaites falsly assume this Name. This is what is said in his Vindication.

Cassian says[20], that some distinguish Nicolas the Founder of the Sect of the Nicolaites, from Nicolas one of the seven first Deacons. Probably he would hint at the Author of the Apostolical Constitutions, who says that the Nicolaites unjustly skreen themselves under the Authority of Nicolas one of the first Deacons. Jesus Christ, in the Revelation of St. John, in two Places condemns the Actions and the Doctrine of the Nicolaites. He says he hates them, he makes it a Merit in the Bishop of Ephesus that he abhors them, and reproaches the Bishop of Pergamus that some of his Church adhered to their Doctrine. In all these Passages St. John does not insinuate the least Thing that may seem to excuse Nicolas, nor to clear him from the Accusation of his being the Author of the Sect of the Nicolaites; and we see that no Christian Church has ever paid any Honour to the Memory of Nicolas, which is a great Circumstance against him.

Nicolaites

NICOLAITES, or Nicolaitans. Besides what we have already said concerning this Sect and its Author, we may add here, that the Nicolaites were frequent in Asia from the End of the first Age of the Church; since Jesus Christ expressly condemns them himself, in the Revelations. St. Irenæus says[1], that Adulteries, and the Use of Meats offer'd to Idols, were held as indifferent Things among them. Victorinus Petaviensis says, that they eat these Meats after having exorcised them, and forgave Fornicators eight Days after their Offence. Theodoret says, that the two distinguishing Characters of this Heresy were Libertinism and Folly. St. Epiphanius[2] gives a long Account, both of their infamous Actions, and their extravagant Opinions concerning God and the Creation. St. Austin says[3], that they have their Women in common, and make no Scruple to conform to all the Pagan Superstitions. They tell a Number of Fables about the Creation and Disposition of the World, intermingling many barbarous Names of Angels and Princes, to amaze their Auditors; tho' to People of Understanding they are rather Subjects of Mirth than Terror. Through all their Disguises it is easy to perceive, that they hold, the World was not created by God, but was the Work of certain Powers whom they feign with an insupportable Temerity, or whom they take for granted from the Credit of others, with a Credulity not less to be blamed.

St. Irenæus[4] calls them a Branch of the Gnosticks, and says, it was against them that St. John wrote his Gospel. Clemens Alexandrinus[5] says, they had a certain Book on the Authority of which they rely'd,and by which they imputed to God himself the infamous Actions they committed. They continued but a very little Time, according to Eusebius[6]; at least the Name of Nicoalites did not continue long: But their Errors were adopted by other Sects, and Tertullian says[7], that the Cainites espoused them. The Nicolaites were revived again under the Reign of Lewis the Debonaire, about the Year 852, as Sigebert of Gemblours says in his Chronicon; and again in the eleventh Age, under Pope Urban II. The Nicolaites were certain Priests, Deacons, and Subdeacons, who maintained that Marriage was allow'd them. They were condemned by the Council of Placentia in the Year 1095. Hæresis Nicolaitarum, id est, incontinentium Subdiaconorum, Diaconorum & præcipue Sacerdotum, irretractabiliter damnata est, &c.[8]

I. NICOPOLIS, a City of Epirus, upon the Gulph of Ambracia, where St. Paul pass'd his Winter in the Year 64 of the common Æra. He sent word to Titus, who was then in Crete, to come to him thither. Some [Tit. iii. 12.] are of Opinion[1], that the City of Nicopolis, where St. Paul intended to spend his Winter, was not that of Epirus, but that of Thrace, upon the Borders of Macedonia, near the River Nessus.

Niddui

NIDDUI[1]. A Hebrew Word that signifies separated, excommunicated. This was (say they) the lesser sort of Excommunication in use among the Hebrews. He that had incurr'd this, was to withdraw himself from his Relations, at least at the Distance of four Cubits. It commonly continued a Month. If it was not taken off in a Month, it might be prolonged for sixty or even ninety Days. But if within this Term the excommunicated Person did not give Satisfaction, he fell into the Cherem, which was a second sort of Excommunication; and thence into the third Sort, call'd Schammatha, the most terrible of all. Niger [Acts xiii. 1.] NIGER, surnamed Simon, of whom mention is made in the Acts of the Apostles. He was a Prophet and Teacher, and was one of those who laid their Hands on Saul and Barnabas, for the Execution of that Office to which the Holy Ghost had appointed them. [Luke xxiii. 26.] Some believe 'tis he that is called Simon the Cyrenian, who carried the Cross of Christ to Mount Calvary[1]: But the only Proof for this Opinion is a Similitude of Names. St. Epiphanius[2] speaks of one Niger among the Seventy Disciples of our Saviour. The Church makes no mention of Simon Niger in its Offices, nor in its Martyrologies.

Night

[Gen. i. 5.] NIGHT. The ancient Hebrews began their artificial Day in the Evening, and also ended it the next Evening[1]; so that the Night preceeded the Day, whence it was said, Factum est vespere & mane dies unus. They allowed twelve Hours to the Night, and as many to the Day. The Hours of the Day and those of the Night were not equal, but only in the Equinox. At other Times, when the Hours of the Night were long, those of the Day were short; and contrarywise, when the twelve Hours of the Night were very short, as it happen'd at Midsummer, the Hours of the Day were long in Proportion.

[Psal. xvii. 3.] Night is put for the Time of Affliction and Adversity. Thou hast proved mine Heart, thou hast visited me in the Night, thou hast tried me; that is, by Adversity and [Isai. xxi. 12.] Tribulation. And Isaiah, the Morning cometh, and also the Night. The Morning is come, and behold the Night; we expected Peace, and we are overwhelmed with Troubles and Disasters.

Night is also put for the Time of Death. [Joh. ix. 4.] The Night cometh wherein no Man can work. 'Tis Christ that speaks to us. I must fulfil the Duties of my Mission while it is Day, and while I am yet alive. And St. Paul says, that the Day of the Lord comes as a Thief in the Night. 'Tis thought the End of the World, and the Day of Judgment, will come in the Night-time[2].

Children of the Day, and Children of the Night, in a moral and figurative Sense, denote good Men and wicked Men, Christians and Gentiles. The Disciples of the Son of God are the Children of Light. They belong to the Light, they walk in the Light of the Gospel-Truths; they shine as the Stars, by the Brightness and Exemplariness of their Lives. On the contrary, the Children of the Night walk in the Darkness of Ignorance and Infidelity, [Jer. xxv. 3. xxvi. 5. xix. 19. xliv. 4.] and they perform only Works of Darkness. Ye are all the Children of the Light, and the Children of the Day; we are not of the Night, nor of Darkness.

We have observed elsewhere, that the ancient Patriarchs, as also the Heroes in the Heroical Ages, rose very early in the Morning, and even by Night, before the break of Day. Whence it is, that to rise in the Night to do any Business, is put for being careful and diligent. God says, that he rises early to call his People, by the Voice of his Prophets; that is to say, that he has omitted nothing that might reform them. The Reader may consult what we have before said upon the Article DARKNESS.

Niglissor

NIGLISSOR, or Niglisar, or Neriglissor, or Neriglissoror, the Successor of Evilmerodach in the Kingdom of Chaldea. Josephus speaks of Niglissor in two Places, and this is what he says of him, in the Tenth Book of his Antiquities, chap. 12. p. 350. Evil-merodach being dead, after he had reigned eighteen Years, Niglissor his Son succeeded to the Kingdom, and having reigned forty Years, he died, and left his Kingdom to Laborosoarchod his Son. He reigned but nine Months, and had Balthasar for his Successor, whom the Babylonians call Naboandel. Cyrus, and Darius King of the Medes, made War against him, &c. In the First Book against Appion, p. 1045. he cites the Historian Berosus, who speaks of him thus in his Third Book. After the Death of Nebuchadnezzar, Evil-merodach his Son succeeded him in the Kingdom of Chaldea. Evilmerodach having given himself up to all sorts of Irregularities and Debaucheries, was treacherously kill'd by his Brother-in-Law Niriglissor, after he had reigned two Years. His Assassin usurped his Throne, and held it for two Years. After his Death his Son Laborosoarchod ascended the Throne, tho' he was but a Child, and reigned only nine Months. His Courtiers made him away, because he appeared to have evil Inclinations. Those that put him to Death having consulted together, resolved to translate the Government to a Babylonian call'd Nabonides. In the seventeenth Year of his Reign came Cyrus to attack Babylon, &c.

Lastly, Megasthenes quoted by Eusebius[1], says, that Nebuchadnezzar having disappeared from among Men, had Evilmerodach for his Successor, who was treacherously kill'd by his Brother-in-Law Niriglissor, and who left a Son named Labassoarach, who ended his Life also by a violent and tragical Death. After his Death they set upon the Throne Nabannidoch, who was not of the Family, nor did he belong to it in any Manner. Cyrus having made [1 Thess. v. 5.] himself Master of all Babylon, gave Nabannidoch the Government of Carmania.

'Tis indeed not very easy to reconcile these various Accounts. Josephus seems only to have followed Berosus; for the Scripture says nothing either of Niglissor, or Laborosoarchod, or Nabonides, but only of Nebuchadnezzar, of Evil-merodach, and Belshazzar. Thus Usher endeavours to set this to rights. Nebuchadnezzar dies in the Year of the World 3442. Evil-merodach succeeds him, and is kill'd in 3444 by Neriglissor, who succeeds. He dies in 3448, and Laborosoarched succeeds him. He holds the Empire but nine Months, and has Balshazzar for Successor, who is called Nabonides by Berosus, Labynites by Herodotus, and Nabannidoth by Abydenus. Berosus and Ptolemy allow him seventeen Years Reign at Babylon. Several skilful Interpreters believe, that the Reason why the Scriptures mention only Nebuchadnezzar, Evil-merodach, and Balshazzar, is, because these only were lawful Heirs to the Crown of Chaldea, the others being only Usurpers and Intruders. But I doubt much of the Sufficiency of this Reason. The Scripture, as well as other Histories, mention indifferently lawful Kings and Usurpers, those of the Royal Family, and those that are not. The Laws of History do not require, that the Historian should judge of the Rights of Princes, but record their Actions and Successions.

M. Du Pin[2] has proposed a System, to reconcile sacred and prophane History, concerning the Succession of the Princes now mentioned. After Nebuchadnezzar, who reigned forty three Years, succeeded his Son Evilmerodach, who reigned two Years compleat, and begun upon the third Year. This, says he, is the same as Balshazzar, so often called the Son of Nebuchadnezzar in Daniel[3]. It is to be observed, that the Name Evil-merodach is not to be found in this Prophet, which may confirm the Conjecture that makes Evilmerodach and Balshazzar the same Person. Evil-merodach is kill'd by Neriglissor his Brother-in-Law, who reigns four Years. He may still pass for the Son of Nebuchadnezzar the Great, as being his Son-in-Law, and having marry'd his Daughter. Laborosoarchod his Son reigned nine Months, and was kill'd by a Conspiracy of Babylonian Nobles, who set up in his stead one of the Conspirators, named Nabonides, being sixty two Years old; a Babylonian indeed, but a Mede by Descent, and Son of Abasuerus. He is called Nabonides by the Babylonians, but Darius by the Medes. He reigned seventeen Years.

But this System is incumber'd with great Difficulties. 1*st*, Because it confounds Evil-merodach with Balshazzar. 2dly, Because it confounds Nabonides with Darius the Mede. 3dly, Lastly, it reconciles Josephus neither with Scripture, nor with Berosus, especially in that Duration of eighteen Years; which this Historian assigns to Evilmerodach, and in that of forty Years, which he allows Niglissor. So that it must be own'd to be absolutely impossible, to reconcile Things so directly contrary to each other, and to extricate Historical Facts that have so great a Degree of Perplexity.

Nile

NILE, a River of Egypt, which has its Fountain in the upper Ethiopia. 'Tis said it proceeds from two Springs, or from two Eyes, which are distant from each other about twenty Paces, and each of the Bigness of a Cart-wheel. The largest of them is worship'd by the Inhabitants of the Country, who are Idolaters. Its Depth is something more than five and twenty Palms, and the other Spring is about sixteen Palms deep. At something above three Days Journey from the Fountain-Head, the River is wide, and deep enough to carry Vessels. Having received another River called Jama; the Nile pursues its Course westward, for above five and twenty or thirty Leagues from its Head, where it winds about to the East, and falls into a great Lake, which probably is that of Zaire. At its coming out of this Lake, it makes several Windings towards the South. It waters the Country of Alata, from whence it precipitates itself between Rocks of fourteen Fathom high, with a terrible Noise, and with such thick Vapours, that at a Distance they may be taken for real Clouds. After having water'd several Kingdoms to the East, it continues its Course so far into the Kingdom of Goiam, that it comes within a Day's Journey of its Source. Thence it takes a Tour round about, and runs towards Phezolo and Ombarea. Then it winds about again, and from the East to the North, having cross'd several Kingdoms and Provinces, it falls into Egypt at the Cataracts, which are Waterfalls made by meeting with steep Rocks, of the Height of two hundred Feet. The Water of the Nile falling from these Rocks, causes a dismal Noise, which may be heard three Leagues off. It falls with so much Violence, that it makes a kind of Arch, under which it leaves a broad Way, where Travellers may pass without being wet.

At the bottom of these Rocks the Nile returns to its usual gentle Pace, with which it flows through the Plains of Egypt. Its Channel, according to Villamont, is about a League broad. Being come below Memphis, at eighty Miles from Grand Cairo, it is divided into two Arms, which make a kind of Triangle, whose Base is at the Mediterranean Sea, and which the Greeks call the Delta, because of its Figure Δ. These two Arms are again divided into others, which discharge themselves into the Mediterranean, whose Distance from the top of the Delta is about twenty Leagues. As to the Number of the Branches of the Nile, the Ancients have commonly reckon'd them seven. Septemplicis ostia Nili. Ptolemy makes them nine, others but four, others eleven, and others again fourteen. Lastly, others maintain, that there are no more than the Mouths of Damietta of Bozell, and of the two Canals, one of which passes by Alexandria, and the other is very small.

Several have thought that the Nile was the Gibon, one of the four Rivers mention'd by Moses, as flowing by the Terrestrial Paradise. But this Opinion is not to be supported, since the Euphrates and the Tigris, which are certainly two of the four Rivers, are too far from the Nile ever to have a common Source with it. Yet the Inhabitants of the Kingdom of Goiam call this River Gihon even to this Day. The Abissins call it Ab Euchi, or the Father of Rivers. The Negroes give it the Name of Tami. Homer, Diodorus Siculus, and Xenophon testify, that its ancient Name was Egyptus, and Homer[1] mentions it by no other Name. Diodorus[2] says, that it took the Name of Nilus only since the Time of a King of Egypt call'd by that Name. Pliny[3] relates the Opinion of King Juba, who affirm'd that the Nile had its Source in Mauritania, that it appear'd and disappear'd in different Places, first hiding itself under Ground, and then shewing it self again; that in this Country it was call'd Nigir, and in Æthiopia it had the Name Astapus; that about Meroe it was divided into two Arms, of which the right was called Astusapes, and the left Astaborus; and lastly, that it obtained the Name of Nile only below Meroe.

The same Pliny[4], Plutarch[5], Dionysius the Geographer[6], and some others testify, that it had also the Name of Siris. Dionysius says, that the Ethiopians call it Siris, and that after it comes to Siena, it has the Name of Nilus. 'Tis probable, that the Name Siris comes from the Hebrew Word Sibor, which signifies Trouble; and that Nilus comes from the Hebrew, Nahal, which signifies River or Torrent. In Scripture the Nile has seldom any other Name but the River of Egypt. Joshua[7] and Jeremiah[8] express it by the Name Si*hor*, or the River of troubled Water. What hast thou to do in the Way of Egypt, to drink the Water of Sihor? says Jeremiah. The Greeks give it the Name of Melas, which also signifies black, or troubled. And indeed Travellers inform us, that the Water of this River is generally something muddy, but it is easily fined by throwing into it some Almonds or skinn'd Beans. Servius explaining that Verse of Virgil[9], where speaking of the Nile he says:

Et viridem Ægyptum nigrâ fœcundat arenâ, observes that the Ancients called the Nile Melo: Nam antea Nilus Melo dicebatur. Melo in Hebrew signifies full, which may well agree with the Nile, because of its great Floods, which continue for about six Weeks, and during this Time overflow all Egypt in the greatest Heat of the Summer.

Diodorus Siculus[10] observes, that the most ancient Name by which the Grecians have known the Nile, is Oceanus. It had also the Name of Aigle, afterwards of Ægyptus, and lastly of Nilus, from King Nileus. The Ægyptians paid divine Honour to the Nile, and called it Jupiter Nilus[11]: Te propter nullos tua tellus postulat imbres, Arida nec fluvio supplicat herba Jovi.

[Isai. xi. 15. Ez. xxix. 3, 4, &c.] 'Tis perhaps for this, that in the Prophets the Lord sometimes threatens to smite the River of Egypt, to dry it up and kill its Fishes; as it were to shew the Egyptians the Vanity of their Worship, and the Impotence of their pretended Deity.

[2 Chron. vii. 8. Isai. xxvii. 12.] When the Scripture points out the Limits of the Land of Promise, it often puts the River or the Stream of Egypt for its more southerly Limits. From the entering in of Hamath, unto the River of Egypt. Or, from the Channel of the River (Euphrates) unto the Stream of Egypt. Some Interpreters[12] not being convinced that the Country of the Israelites could extend to the Nile, have imagin'd that the Stream of Egypt was a Stream that fell into the Mediterranean Sea, between Rhinocorura and Gaza, which is called in Scripture the River of the Wilderness. [Amos vi. 14.] But it is certain, that the Land of Promise was to reach as far as the Nile. Joshua shews it plainly, Josh. xiii. 3. and xv. 4. compared with 1 Chron. xiii. 5. And this is what we have endeavoured to prove in our Commentary upon Josh. xiii. 3. We find the Name Nilus but once in the Latin Version of the Scripture, Isai. xxiii. 3. In aquis multis semen Nili; in the Hebrew, semen Sihor.

The Eastern Writers speak of the Fountains and Course of the Nile in something a different Manner from what we have described above. The Reader perhaps may not be unwilling to find here what they say of it[13]. There are two Rivers in Africa that bear the Name of Nile, and which have the same Source, in sixteen Degrees of South Latitude in Ethiopia, or in the Country of the Abyssins. There at the Foot of the Mountain called the Mountain of the Moon, are found ten Fountains, five of which make a great Lake, and the other five another Lake. Each of these two Lakes produce three Rivers, which being united together, form a very great Lake, out of which issue the two Niles we spoke of before. The City of Thomi is situate on the Banks of this great Lake, just under the Equinoctial Line, where there is an Idol or Image called Mesnah. Soiouti has given us the Figure of this Source in his Book called Caukeb-al-Raoudhah.

The first of these two Rivers is called Nil -Mesr, that is to say; the Nile of Egypt, and the second Nil-Soudan, or the Nile of the Negroes. This runs westward, and discharges itself into the Dark Sea; for so the Arabians call the Atlantick or Western Ocean. This Nile of the Negroes is the River which at this Day we call the Niger, or the Senega. It empties itself over-against the Island which the Arabians call Ulil, and is not distant from it above a Day's Sailing. All the Habitations of the Negroes are ranged along this great River.

As to the Nile of Egypt, the Arabian Geographer whom we follow here allows it but four Arms, which divide themselves in lower Egypt, and of which three disembogue themselves into the Sea of Syria, or the Mediterranean. The fourth is lost in a Lake of Salt Water, which the Greeks call Maris, otherwise Maria or Mareotis, distinct from the Lake Mœris, with which the Nile has no other Communication, but by an artificial Canal. The three Arms mentioned by this Geographer are evidently the Canopick, which is the nearest Alexandria; the Sebenetick, or Heracleotick, as yet but little known; and the Pelusiack, upon which is built the City Pelusium, or Damietta. The other Arms of the Nile which the ancient Greek and Latin Writers take notice of, are at present so obliterated, that it is almost impossible to distinguish them.

The Arabians and other Orientals often give the Nile the Name of a Sea, and the Surname or Epithet of Faidh, which is in common also to the Euphrates, because these two Rivers by their overflowing increase the Fertility of the Countries they pass through. They also give it the Name of Mobarek, as well because of the Fruitfulness it occasions to the Land, as that Fecundity it is thought to procure to the Women.

When the Nile overflows only to the perpendicular Height of twelve Cubits, a Famine necessarily follows in Egypt; nor is the Famine less certain, if it should exceed sixteen Cubits, as Pliny says[14]; so that the just Height of the Inundation is between twelve and sixteen Cubits. The Arabian Author of a Book, which gives an Account of the Nilometry, or Measures of the Nile, from the first Year of the Hegira, till the 875th, that is, from the Year of Christ 622 to 1497, says in like manner, that when the Depth of the Channel of the Nile is fourteen Fathom, an Harvest may be expected that will amount to one Year's Provision; but if it increases to sixteen, the Corn will be sufficient for two Years; less than fourteen makes a Scarcity, and more than eighteen make a Famine.

The Nilometer is a Pillar erected in the middle of the Nile,upon which are mark'd the Degrees of the Ascent of the Water. There were several of these in different Places of the Nile. At this Day there is one in the Island, where the Nile is divided into two Arms, one of which passes to Cairo, and the other to Gizah. Mr. d'Herbelot takes notice of several others, built or repaired by several Kailifs. The Antients have preserved the Memory of the Nilometer in their Monuments. See Antiquity explain'd, Tom. III. p. 185. Heretofore they kept the Measure of the swelling of the Nile in the Temple of Serapis, like a sacred Relick; and the Emperor Constantine had it transported to the Church of Alexandria. The Pagans then affirmed, that the Nile would not overflow any more, and that Serapis being provoked, would be revenged of Egypt, and would cause a Sterility there. But however the Nile overflowed, and ascended to its usual Height the Years following.

The Nile overflows regularly every Year in the Month of August, in the higher and middle Egypt, where this overflowing is necessary, because it hardly ever rains there. But in the lower Egypt the Flood is less sensible and less necessary, because it frequently rains there, and the Country is sufficiently water'd. It is less sensible, because they make fewer Dikes there, or Receptacles for the Water, and the Inundation spreading it self equally through all the Country, does not rise higher than a Cubit through the whole Delta. Whereas in higher and middle Egypt, where it rains very seldom, they have made high Banks at a League distance, in the midst of which there are deep Canals, to receive the Waters of the River. They make a breach in these Dikes by the Authority of the Bacha, and when a Country is sufficiently water'd, the Dike is stopt up there, and open'd in another Place; and thus the whole Land of Egypt is successively water'd, as it were a Garden. The Egyptians have often Contentions among one another, Village against Village, to strive which shall have the first Distribution of the Waters; and when the Overflowing comes as they desire, they celebrate a great Festival all over the Country.

There have been great variety of Opinions, concerning the Cause of the Overflowing of the Nile. Some have imputed it to the Nitre with which this River is impregnated, and which Causes its Overflowings, by the vehement Fermentations, during the violent Heat of the Summer. This is the Notion of Mr. De la Chambre, who has wrote purposely on this Subject. But at present it is but little doubted, that it is occasion'd by the great Rains, which fall in Ethiopia in the Months of June, July, and August, which are the Winter-Months in that Country. And Father Jerome Lobo pretends, that no one can doubt of it, who has dwelt in Ethiopia as he has done. The Soil there is extremely dry and spungy, and soaks up the Rain for a long Time: But when it is glutted, it disgorges the Waters on all Sides; and these Waters added to those which fall from Heaven, supply the Nile with all that quantity of Water, which it distributes through all the Land of Egypt. These Waters carry along with them much Mudd and Sullidge, which very much contributes to fatten and enrich the Land.

[Isai. xviii. 1. 2.] When the Waters are withdrawn, the Culture of the Land is very easy. The Seed is cast upon the dry Mudd, and with very little Tillage, it produces in great Plenty. Herodotus says[15], that the Egyptians turn their Hoggs into their Fields, and that these Animals treading the Seed into the Ground with their Feet, exempt the Husbandman from the Trouble of his Labour. By this may be explain'd what Isaiah says, concerning the Nile and Egypt. Woe to the Land shadowing with Wings, which is beyond the Rivers of Ethiopia. That sendeth Ambassadors by the Sea, even in Vessels of Bulrushes upon the Waters, saying; Go ye swift Messengers to a Nation scattered and pealed, to a People terrible from their Beginning hitherto, a Nation meted out and trodden down, whose Land the Rivers have spoiled. The Mudd which the Nile brings is Earth which it tears up from the Banks in its Course; which same Mudd covering the Landmarks and furrows of the Fields, obliges the Proprietors to have recourse to the Line and the Measuring-Rod, to measure out their Lands and Inheritances every Year anew. The Soil of Egypt being very light and sandy, it is impossible but that the Waters must take away a great quantity of it along with them.

Nimrah

[Jerem. xlviii. 34. Isai. xv. 6. Hieronym in If. xv. 6. Numb. xxxii. 3.] NIMRAH, or Nemra, a City of the Tribe of Gad, or rather of Reuben, to the East of the Dead Sea. Eusebius upon the Word Nebra says, that there is a large Village in Batanea call'd Nabara. I make no doubt but that Nemra, Nimra, Nimrim, Nemrim, and Beth-nemra, are the same City. Jeremiah speaks of Nimrim and its pleasant Waters. Isaiah also makes Mention of the Waters of Nimrim. St. Jerom says, that Nimrim is situated upon the dead Sea, and that its Name Nimrim comes from the Bitterness of its Waters, which have contracted this quality only since the Desolation of this City, as had been denounced by the Prophets Isaiah and Jeremiah.

Nimrod

[Ezek. xxxii. 30. Gen. x. 8, 9.] NIMROD, or Nembrod, Son of Cush, a mighty Hunter before the Lord, as the Scripture says of him. He began to make himself powerful upon the Earth, and gave Occasion to the Proverb, as Nimrod, the great Hunter before the Lord. His hunting was not only exercised on Wild Beasts, but he made use of it also to subdue Men, to take them, to put them to Death, or to reduce them under his Dominion. Ezekiel gives the Name of Hunters to all Tyrants. The Foundation of the Empire of Nimrod was at Babylon; and tis very probable he was one of the most eager Undertakers of the Building of the Tower of Babel, and that continuing there after the Dispersion of Mankind, he built Babylon in the same Place, or near this famous Tower. From thence he extended his Dominion over the neighbouring Countries, and reigned at Erech, Accad, and Calneh, in the Land of Shinar. What we have said upon each of these Places may be seen under their particular Articles.

Moses adds: Out of that Land went forth Asshur, and builded Nineveh, and the City Rehoboth, and Calah, and Resen between Nineveh and Calah: the same is a great City. This Bochart understands still of Nimrod, and translates the Hebrew in this manner. From this Place he went

[1] Abenezra, Kimchi, vide et Grot. out to go into Assyria, where he built Nineveh, Rehoboth, Calah, and Resen. That is to say, that when Nimrod had establish-ed the Beginning of his Empire at Babylon, and in the Land of Shinar, he advanced towards Assyria, and there built powerful Cities, to serve as so many Fortresses; to keep the People in Subjection to his Dominion. The Scripture informs us of no more than this concerning Nimrod.

[Gen. xiii. 13. Gen. xxxviii. 7.] Some Rabbins [1] take in a good Sense what is said of this Monarch, that he was a mighty Hunter before the Lord, saying he had a particular Address and Dexterity for Hunting, and what Game he took he offer'd to the Lord. It must be own'd that these Words before the Lord is commonly taken in good Part, as an Exaggeration of the good Qualities of any one; but in this Place the greatest Number of Interpreters take it in a bad Sense, in the same Manner as when it is said of the Men of Sodom, that they were great Sinners before the Lord. Peccatores coram Domino nimis. As also of Er the eldest Son of Judah, that he was a very wicked Man before the Lord. Nequam in conspectu Domini.

Some have confounded Nimrod with Belus, the Founder of the Kingdom of Babylon, and with Ninus, the Founder of that of Nineveh: but both these are much later than Nimrod. Prophane Authors have embellished the History of Bacchus, with several Circumstances taken from that of Nimrod. For example, the Name Nebrodeus or Nebrodus, given to Bacchus, is evidently derived from Nembrod or Nimrod, tho' the Greeks will have its Original from a Goat-Skin, with which they pretend Bacchus was cloathed. The Name Bacchus may also be derived from Bar-chus, the Son of Cush, because Nimrod was indeed the Son of Cush. The Greeks give to Bacchus the Name of Hunter, just as Moses gives to Nimrod. The Expeditions of Bacchus into the Indies are formed upon the Wars that Nimrod made in Babylonia and Assyria. Nimrod in Hebrew signifies a Rebel. To him is imputed the first Invention of that idolatrous Worship paid to Men.

The History of Nimrod is dress'd up with Fables by the Persian Authors m. Some confound him with Zohac, the first King of the Dynastie of those Princes that reign'd immediately after the Deluge. Others will have Nimrod to be the same as Caicacus, the second King of the second Persian Dynastie, call'd that of the Cainaides. The Persian Historians make him to have reign'd above an hundred and fifty Years, and affirm, that he contrived the rash Atm Bibl. Orient. p. 668. tempt of scaling Heaven: which is taken from what the Scripture relates concerning the Children of Noah, that they undertook to build a Tower, the Top of which should reach to Heaven. The Author of the Book call'd Malem tells us also this Story. When Nimrod saw that the Fire, in which he had caus'd Abraham to be cast, did him no Damage, he resolved to ascend into Heaven, that he might see that great God, that Abraham reveal'd to him. 'Twas in vain that his Courtiers endeavoured to divert him from this Design; he was resolved to accomplish it.

At the same Time he gave Orders for the building of a Tower, that might be as high as possible. They worked upon this for three Years together, when he went up to the Top, and was much surprized to see himself as far from Heaven, as when he was upon the Ground. His Confusion was much increased, when they came to inform him the next Morning, that his Tower was fallen to the Ground. He commanded then that another should be built, that might be stronger and higher than the former; but this met with the same Fate. Then he took a ridiculous Resolution, of making himself be carried to Heaven in a Chest or Box, by four of those monstrous Birds, which the antient Eastern Authors call Kerkes, and of which they make Mention in their Romances.

Nimrod therefore had those Birds taught to carry the Box, and then putting himself into it, he wandered and flew for some Time in the Air; but at last the Kerkes dashed him so violently against a Mountain, that his Box was quite overset by the Shock. This Accident did not make him grow wiser, for he still continued to persecute the Saints, and the Worshippers of the true God. For this Reason God took away from him the greatest Part of his Subjects, by the Division that he sent among them, and by the Confusion of Tongues. Those that still continued firm to him were almost all killed by a Cloud of Flies that God sent amongst them. He himself was tormented for four Years by one of those Insects, which entering into his Brain, gave him such exquisite Pain, that he was forced to have his Head beat with a Mallet, that he might obtain some Rest.

'Tis supposed that Moses makes Nimrod the immediate Son of Cush. The Persians make him to be Son to Canaan, and Brother to Cush. Eutychius, Patriarch of Alexandria, says, that Nimrod was the first Author of the Religion of the Magians, and of the Worshippers of Fire.

Nineveh

NINEVEH, the Capital City of Assyria, founded by Ashur Son of Shem, or by Nimrod Son of Cush; for in the Text of Moses, Gen. x. 11. De terrâ illâ egressus est Assur, & ædificavit Nineven, according to some has Relation to Nimrod[1], who was mentioned before; so that it ought to be read: De terrâ illâ (Babylonia Nemrod) egressus est in Assyriam, & ædificavit Niniven. However this be, yet it must be owned, that Nineveh was one of the most antient, the most famous, the most potent, and largest Cities of the World. It is very difficult exactly to assign the Time of its Foundation; but it cannot be long after the building of Babel. It was situate upon the Banks of the Tigris, and in the Time of the Prophet Jonas, who was sent thither under Jeroboam the second, King of Israel[2], and, as we judge, under the Reign of Pul, Father of Sardanapalus, King of Assyria; Nineveh was a very great City, its Circuit being three Days Journey. Diodorus Siculus[3], who has given us the Dimensions of it, says it had one Hundred and fifty Stadia in Length, four Score and ten Stadia in Breadth, and four Hundred and four Score Stadia in Circuit; that is, to reduce these Measures to our own, it was about seven Leagues long, taking the League at three Thousand Paces, about three Leagues broad, and eighteen Leagues round. Its Walls were an hundred Feet high, and so broad, that three Chariots could drive abreast upon 'em. Its Towers, of which there were fifteen Hundred, were each two Hundred Feet high.

[Jonas iv. 11.] Diodorus Siculus places it upon the Euphrates, but all others agree that it was upon the Tigris. Some place it to the West, and others to the East of this River. At the Time of Jonas's Mission thither, it was so populous, that it was reckoned to contain more than six Score Thousand Persons, who could not distinguish their right Hand from their left; which is generally explained of young Children, that had not yet attained the Use of Reason. So that by this Reckoning, there ought to have been then in Nineveh more than six hundred Thousand Persons.

Nineveh was taken by Arbaces and Belesus, in the Year of the World 3257, before Christ 743, before the vulgar Æra 747, under the Reign of King Sardanapalus[4], in the Time of Abaz King of Judah, about the Time of the Foundation of Rome. It was taken a second Time by Astyages and Nabopolassar, from Chinaladan King of Assyria, in the Year of the World 3378, before Christ 622, before the vulgar Æra 626. After this Time Nineveh no more recovered its former Splendor. It was so intirely ruined in the Time of Lucianus Samosatensis[5], who lived under the Emperor Adrian, that no Footsteps of it could be found, nor so much as the Place where it stood. However it was rebuilt under the Persians, but was destroyed again by the Saracens about the seventh Age. See Marsham's Canon. Egypt. sæculo xviii. Tit. Nini excidium, and Usher, upon the Years of the World 3257 and 3378.

Modern Travellers say, that the Ruines of ancient Nineveh may still be seen on the Eastern Bank of the Tigris, and that on the opposite Side may be seen the City of Mozul or Mozil, which many do not distinguish from Nineveh. Prophane Histories tell us, that Ninus was the first founded Nineveh; but Scripture, which is infinitely of better Authority, assures us it was Assur, or Nimrod, as we have said in the Beginning of this Article. The sacred Authors make frequent Mention of Nineveh. Those Kings Tiglath-pilneser, Sennecharib, Shalmanezzar, and Esar-haddon, famous for the Evils they brought upon the Hebrews, reigned at Nineveh. Tobit lived in this City. Nahum and Zephaniah have foretold its Ruin in a very particular and pathetick Manner[6], which [Tob. xiv. 4. Matt. xi. 41. Luk. xi. 32.] Tobit had also foretold. 'Tis known what Jonas did at Nineveh, and the signal Repentance of the Ninevites, which is even commended in the Gospel.

Nisan

NISAN, a Month of the Hebrews, answering to our March, and which sometimes takes from February or April, according to the Course of the Moon. It was made the first Month of the sacred Year, at the coming [Exod. xii. 2.] out of Egypt. Mensis iste principium mensium; primus erit in mensibus anni. It was the seventh Month of the civil Year. In Moses it is called Abib. The Name Nisan is only since the Time of Ezra, and the Return from the Captivity of Babylon. I shall here take Notice of the principal Things observed by the Jews in this Month.

The first Day is the Neomenia. A Fast for the Death of the Children of Aaron, Lev. x. 1, 2, 3.

On the tenth Day was celebrated a Fast for the Death of Miriam the Sister of Moses; and every one provided himself with a Lamb for the Passover. On this Day the Israelites passed over Jordan under the [Josh. iv. 19.] Conduct of Joshua.

On the fourteenth Day in the Evening they sacrificed the Paschal Lamb, and the Day following, being the fifteenth, was held the solemn Passover, Exod. xii. 18, &c.

The sixteenth they offered the Sheaf of the Ears of Barley, as the First-fruits of the Harvest of that Year, Levit. xxiii. 9, &c.

The twenty-first was the Octave of the Passover, which was solemnized with particular Ceremonies.

The twenty-sixth the Jews fasted in Memory of the Death of Joshua. On this Day they began their Prayers to obtain the Rains of the Spring.

On the twenty-ninth they call to Mind the Fall of the Walls of Jericho.

NISROCH, or Nesroch, a God of the Assyrians. Sennecharib was killed by two of his Sons, while he was paying his Adoration to his God Nisroch in his Temple[1], 2 Kings xix. 37. 'Tis not known who this God Nisroch was. The Seventy call him Mesrach, Josephus calls him Araskes. The Hebrew of Tobit published by Munster calls him Dagon.

The Name of this Deity may be traced in the Words Sarac, and Sargon, Kings of Assyria. And perhaps Sarac is also the same as Sarak. But nothing of this will inform us who this God Nisroch was.

Nitocris

NITOCRIS. Herodotus[1] speaks of Queen Nitocris, Mother to King Labynetus, from whom Cyrus took Babylon. But as the Scripture tells us, that the King from whom Babylon was conquered by Cyrus, was Belshazzar King of Babylon, Son or Grandson to Nebuchadnezzar, we must of Necessity allow, that Nitocris was Queen to Nebuchadnezzar the Great, and the same as Amyt Daughter to Astyages King of the Medes. This Princess is celebrated by Herodotus as an Heroine. While the King her Son abandoned himself to his Pleasures, and thought of nothing else but his Diversions, she took the Burthen of the Government upon her, and did all that human Prudence could do, for the Security of the Empire. She compleated with incredible Diligence the Works that Nebuchadnezzar had left unfinished, and particularly the Walls of the City, and Keys of the Rivers. And while they were employed on these Works, and had turned the Course of the Euphrates in Order to furnish these Keys, she caused a subterraneous Gallery to be built in the midst of the Channel of the River, to maintain a Communication with a Castle on the other Side, by a Passage under the Waters of the River.

In the last Year of Belshazzar's Reign, [Dan. v. 1, 2, 3, &c.] while Babylon was besieged by Cyrus, Belshazzar made a sacrilegious Feast for his Wives and Concubines, at which he prophaned the holy Vessels of the Temple of Jerusalem; when there appeared upon the Walls of the Room, over against the Candlestick, a Hand that wrote these Words, Mene, Mene, Tekel, Upharsin. The Sight of this Prodigy put the King and all his Company into a great Consternation. Nitocris the Queen-mother no sooner heard of what had happened, but she went into the Hall, and told the King, that there was a Man in his Kingdom called Belteshazzar, who under the Reign of King Nebuchadnezzar had approved himself to be the most skilful of the Magi of Chaldæa, and was made the Head of them, that if he were sent for he would truly explain the Vision that so much troubled the King. Daniel was presently sent for, who gave the King the Explication of it, as may be read under his Article.

Nitre

[Prov. xxv. 20.] NITRE. A sort of Salt, or of Salt-petre, very common in Palestine, Arabia, and Egypt. The Hebrews call it Nether, and make Use of this Word to express a Salt proper to take Spots out of Cloaths, and even from the Face. The wise Man says, As he that taketh away a Garment in cold Weather, and as Vinegar upon Nitre; so is he that singeth Songs to an heavy Heart. That is to say, Musick is as serviceable in dispelling Sorrow, and in restoring a chearful Temper, as Nitre dissolved in Vinegar is useful in taking away Blemishes from the Face, or from Cloaths. They always dissolved the Nitre in Vinegar when they applied it to this Use. See the Commentary upon Prov. xxv. 20. Jeremiah[1] speaking to his People under the Image of a faithless and abandoned Spouse, has these Words: For though thou wash thee with Nitre, and take thee much Soap, yet thine Iniquity is marked before me, saith the Lord God. Thou art too much polluted in my Eyes ever to be made clean. This Passage proves the Use that was made of Nitre, to purifie from outward Spots and Blemishes.

No

[Nahum vi. 8.] NO, or No-ammon, a City of Egypt, which St. Jerom always translates by Alexandria. But it is rather the City of Diospolis in the Delta, between Busiris to the South, and Mendesium to the North. See Jeremiah xlvi. 25. Ezek. xxx. 14, 15, 16. Nahum iii. 8. See what is said of Diospolis and Thebes.

No-ammon signifies the Habitation of Ammon. Several are of Opinion, that Ammon is the same as Ham the Son of Noah, who, as they say, fixed his Dwelling in Egypt.

Noachidæ

NOACHIDÆ. This is the Name that is given to the Children of Noah, and in general to all Men that are not of the chosen Race of Abraham. The Rabbins[1] pretend, that God gave Noah and his Sons certain general Precepts, which contain according to them, the natural Right which is common to all Men indifferently, and the Observation of which alone will be sufficient to save them. After the Law of Moses, the Hebrews would not suffer any Stranger to dwell in their Country, unless he would conform to the Precepts of the Noachidæ. In War they put to Death without Quarter all that were ignorant of them. These Precepts are eight in Number.

I. Precept. de Judiciis. Obedience is due to Judges, Magistrates, and Princes.

II. De cultu extraneo. The Worship of false Gods, Superstition, and Sacrilege are absolutely forbidden.

III. De maledictione nominis sanctissimi. As also cursing the Name of God, Blasphemies, and false Oaths.

IV. De revelatione turpitudinum. Likewise all incestuous and unlawful Conjunctions or Copulations; as Sodomy, Bestiality, Crimes against Nature.

V. De sanguinis effusione. The Effusion of the Blood of all Sorts of Animals, Murder, Wounds, and Mutilations.

VI. De rapina. Theft, Cheats, Lying, &c.

VII. De membro animalis viventis. The Parts of an Animal still alive are not to be eaten, as was practised by some Pagans. Arnob.[2] Caprorum reclamantium viscera cruentatis oribus dissipant.

Maimonides says, that the first six of these Precepts were given by Adam, and the seventh was added by Noah. Some Rabbins add to these the following Precepts. The Rabbi Chavina. The Prohibition of drawing out the Blood of a living Animal, in Order to drink it. The Rabbi Chidea. The Prohibition of mutilating Animals. The Rabbi Simeon. The Prohibition of Magick and Sorceries. The Rabbi Eliezer. The Prohibition of coupling together Animals of a different Species, and of grafting Trees. This is what is found in Authors concerning this Matter; but what inclines us much to doubt of their Antiquity, is, that no Mention is made of these Precepts, either in Scripture, or in Onkelos, or in Josephus, or in Philo; and that neither St. Jerome, nor Origen, nor any of the antient Fathers have known any Thing of them.

Noah

NOAH, or Noe, Son of Lamech, was born in the Year of the World 1056, before Christ 2944, before the vulgar Æra 2948. Amidst the general Corruption into which all Mankind was fallen at this Time, Noah found Favour in the Eyes of [Gen. vi. 8. &c.] the Lord. And God seeing that all Flesh had corrupted their Ways, said to Noah[1]; " The End of all Flesh is resolved upon " before me; the Earth is filled with the " Iniquities of Men, and I will destroy " them from the Face of the Earth. Make " an Ark of Wood hewed and smoothed; " you shall divide it into little Chambers, " and harden it within and without with " Pitch and Bitumen. It shall be three " Hundred Cubits long, fifty wide, and " thirty high. It shall have three Floors " of Chambers, and you shall make a " Door in the Side[2]. For I shall bring " upon the Earth the Waters of a Deluge, " and I shall destroy all the Animals which " are under Heaven and upon the Face " of the Earth. I will make a Covenant " with you, and will preserve you from " this general Devastation. You shall go " into the Ark, you, your Wife, your " three Sons, Shem, Ham, and Japheth, and " their three Wives with them. You shall " take with you into the Ark a Couple of " every kind of Animals, a Male and Female, of the Number of those Animals " that are impure; and seven Couples of " pure Animals, Male and Female; and " you shall carry into the Ark what Provisions are necessary for your own Support, and for the Animals that shall be " in the Ark with you.

Noah performed whatever the Lord had commanded him; and in the Year of the World 1656, before Christ 2344, before the vulgar Æra 2348, God caused all the Animals to come to Noah, that he might place them in the Ark; after which he ordered him to go in himself, with his Wife, his three Sons, and their Wives, and when they were all entered, he shut the Door on the outside; and presently the Waters of the Deluge began to fall upon the Earth. Noah was then six Hundred Years old. The nineteenth Day of the second Month of this same Year, the Fountains of the great Abyss of Waters were broke open, and the Cataracts of Heaven were opened, and the Rain fell upon the Earth for forty Days and forty Nights. The Waters increased in such a Manner, that they were raised fifteen Cubits above the Tops of the Mountains; and they continued upon the Earth for an hundred and fifty Days without either rising or falling; insomuch that whatever had Life upon the Earth, or in the Air, was destroyed, except such Animals as were with Noah in the Ark.

But the Lord remembring Noah[3], sent a Wind upon the Earth, which caused the Waters to diminish; so that on the seventeenth Day of the seventh Month, the Ark rested upon the Mountains of Armenia, or Ararat, as it is in the Hebrew. 'Tis believed that this is the Mountain Ararat near the City Erivan. The tenth Day of the tenth Month, the Tops of the Mountains began to appear; and after forty Days Noah let go the Raven, who went out of the Ark, and returned according to the Hebrew[4], or returned not according to the Septuagint and the Vulgate; or he went out, and went and came, flying about the Ark, and alighting upon its Roof. Afterwards he sent forth the Dove, which not finding a Place to set his Foot, returned into the Ark again. Seven Days after he sent it out again, and it returned in the Evening, bringing in its Mouth a Branch of an Olive -tree, having green Leaves upon it, which the Tree had brought forth since the assuaging of the Waters. He stayed yet seven Days longer, and then he uncovered the Roof of the Ark; and observing the whole Surface of the Earth was dry, he received Orders from the Lord to go out of the Ark, with all the Animals that were therein. He therefore came out in the six Hundred and first Year of his Age, and the twenty seventh Day of the second Month.

Then he offered as a burnt Sacrifice to the Lord one of all the pure Animals that were in the Ark; and the Lord accepted of his Sacrifice, and said to him: " I will " no more pour out my Curse upon the " whole Earth, and will no more destroy " all the Animals as I have now done. I " give you Power over all the brute Creation, and I [Gen. ix. 1, 2, &c.] deliver them to you to eat " thereof, as you eat the Herbs and Fruits " of the Earth. I except only the Blood, " the Use of which I forbid you. Increase " and multiply. I shall make a Covenant " with you, and engage my self no more " to send an universal Deluge upon the " Earth; and as a Memorial of my Promise, I shall set my Bow in the Clouds, " which shall be as a Pledge of the Covenant I make with you.

Noah being an Husbandman, began now to cultivate the Vine; and having made Wine and drank thereof, he unwarily made himself drunk, and fell asleep in his Tent, and happened to uncover himself in an indecent Posture. Ham the Father of Canaan having observed him in this Condition, made himself Sport with him, and acquainted his two Brothers with it, who were without. But they instead of making it a Matter of Sport, turned away from it, and going backwards they covered their Father's Nakedness, by throwing a Mantle over him. Noah awaking and knowing what Ham had done, said, that Canaan the Son of Ham should be accursed, that he should be a Slave of Slaves in Respect of his Brethren. 'Tis thought he had a Mind to spare the Person of his Son Ham, for Fear the Curse might light upon the other Children of Ham[5], who had no Part in this Action. He cursed Canaan by a Spirit of Prophecy, because the Canaanites his Descendants were hereafter to be rooted out by the Israelites. Noah added, let the Lord the God of Shem be blessed, and let Canaan be the Servant of Shem. And he was so in Effect, in the Person of the Canaanites subdued by the Hebrews. Lastly Noah said, Let God extend the Possession of Japheth; let Japheth dwell in the Tents of Shem, and let Canaan be his Servant. This Prophecy had its Accomplishment, when the Grecians, and afterwards the Romans, being descended from Japheth, made a Conquest of Asia, which was the Portion of Shem.

But Noah lived yet after the Deluge three Hundred and fifty Years; and the whole Time of his Life having been nine Hundred and fifty Years, he died in the Year of the World 2006, before Christ 1994, and before the vulgar Æra 1998. He left three Sons, Shem, Ham, and Japheth, of which Mention will be made under their Articles; and according to the common Opinion, he divided the whole World amongst them, in Order to repeople it[6]. To Shem he gave Asia, to Ham, Africa, and Europe to Japheth. Some[7] will have it, that besides these three Sons, he had several others. The spurious Berosus gives him thirty, called Titans, from the Name of their Mother Titæa. They pretend the Teutons or Germans are derived from a Son of Noah called Thuiscon. The false Methodius also makes Mention of Jonithus or Jonicus, a pretended Son of Noah. The Scholastick History of Peter Comestor may be seen, l. i. c. 37. and Tostat upon Genesis. We have spoken already under the Article NOACHIDÆ, of the Precepts that the Rabbins pretend were given by Noah to his Sons and their Descendants.

[2 Peter ii. 5.] St. Peter calls Noah a Preacher of Righteousness, because before the Deluge he was incessantly preaching and declaring to Men, not only by his Discourses, but by his unblamable Life, and by the building of the Ark, in which he was employed six Score Years, that the Wrath of God was ready to pour upon 'em. But his Preaching had no Effect, since when the Deluge came, it found Mankind plunged in their old Enormities, and busied in nothing less [Matth. xxiv. 37.] than in appeasing the Vengeance of God. We find among the Verses of the pretended Sybils, a Piece intitled, A Description of Mankind before the Deluge, and Noah's preaching to them. Theophilus of Antioch[8] seems to believe, that the Name Deucalion, who is the same as Noah, comes from the Greek Deute, and Calein, come and call; because Noah speaking to Men before the Deluge, used the Words, Come, God calls you to Repentance.

From these people are derived the Canaanites from these sprang the Philistines and Capthorims A GENEALOGICAL TREE OF NOAH'S DESCENDANTS FROM WHOM ARE DERIVED ALL THE NATIONS OF THE EARTH SINCE THE DELUGE. Gen. x. Vol. II B b

[1 Pet. iii. 18, 19, 20.] The same St. Peter says, For Christ also hath once suffered for Sins, the just for the unjust, (that he might bring us to God) being put to Death in the Flesh, but quickened by the Spirit: By which also he went and preached unto the Spirits in Prison; which sometime were disobedient, when once the long Suffering of God waited in the Days of Noah, while the Ark was a preparing, wherein few, that is eight Souls, were saved by Water. Several of the antient Fathers[9] have taken these Words literally; as if Jesus Christ after his Resurrection, had really preached to those Men, who before the Deluge were disobedient to the Preaching of Noah; that he had delivered some of those that were the least wicked, who believed in him, and were converted. Others[10] by the Word Prison understand the Body, which is as it were the Prison of the Soul. Others will have it, that Jesus Christ by his Spirit, with which Noah was replenished, preached by the Mouth of this Patriarch to the Unbelievers before the Deluge, whose Souls were then in the Prison of the Body, but who at the Time that St. Peter wrote were in the Prison of Hell. The Commentators may be consulted for the other Interpretations that are given to this Passage.

The Eastern People[11] had a Notion, that Noah received Orders from God to take the Body of Adam, and put it in the Ark, to preserve it from the Waters of the Deluge; and that when he found himself near his Death, he called his Son Shem to him, trusted him with this Depositum, and bid him carry it to Melchisedech the Priest of the most High, that they two might bury it in such Place as the Angel of the Lord should shew them. Shem went therefore to Melchisedech, and they buried Adam upon Mount Calvary, which is the Middle of the Earth. This is a Prayer which, 'tis said, Noah repeated every Day while he was in the Ark. " O Lord, thou art truly great, and there is nothing so great " as that it can be compared to thee. " Look upon us with an Eye of Mercy, " and deliver us from this Deluge of Waters. I intreat this of thee for the Love " of Adam thy first Man, for the Blood " of Abel thy Saint, for the Righteousness " of Seth whom thou hast loved. Let us " not be reckoned in the Number of those " who have disobeyed thy Commandments, but still extend thy merciful Care " to us, because thou hast hitherto been " our Deliverer, and all thy Creatures shall " declare thy Praise, Amen.

[Gen. vi. 9.] Several learned Men have observed, that the Pagans have confounded Saturn, Deucalion, Ogyges, the God Cœlus, or Uranus, Janus, Protheus, Prometheus, Vertumnus, Bacchus, Osiris, Vadimon, and Nisuthrus, with

Noah. Concerning this the Reader may see M. Bochart, Geograph. Sacr. l. i. c. 1. M. Huet. de concord. Rat. & Fidei, l. ii. Grot. de verit. Relig. Christ. l. i. *Natalis Comes. Also several Writings have been ascribed to Noah. Some Hebrews have thought, that Moses quotes a Work composed by Noah, when he says, These are the Generations of Noah. And elsewhere, Now these are the [Gen. x. 1.] Generations of the Sons of Noah. The false Berosus ascribes also a Book to him, Of the Secrets of natural Things; and the Cabalists maintain, that this Book was stole from Noah by his Son Ham, and given to Mizraim. W. Postel speaks of it in the Title of his Book called, De originibus, seu de varia ac potissimum orbi Latino ad hanc diem incognita, aut inconsiderata historia, &c. Ex libris Noachi & Hanachi, &c. Lambecius in his Catalogue of the Emperor's Library, speaks of a Book with this Title: The Method which was revealed to the Prophet Noah by the Angel of the Lord, to discover sixteen Figures, proper to foretel what shall come hereafter. But all these are justly ranged in the Class of Fables and Impostures. There is no Proof that Noah ever wrote any Thing, much less that any Thing of his is preserved to our Times.

The Wife of Noah is called Noriah by the Gnosticks[11]; Barthenos or Bathenos by Epiphanes[12]; Noema or Tethiri, by some antient Rabbins[13]. But this has as little Certainty, as what we now mentioned of Noah's Works.

We find in the Arabic Explication of Genesis, imputed to St. Hippolytus, and printed in the second Tome of his Works, p. 38. Edit. Fabricii, that the Wife of Shem was called Nahalath Mahnuk, that of Ham, Zetdkath-nabu, and that of Japheth, Arathkah. The Mussulmen give Noah the Title of Father, and of Chief of those that were sent by God, or of all the Prophets. They[14] call him also Al-negi, he that was saved himself, and saved others. They add, that he was sent of God to preach Repentance to Men, and to teach the Unity of the Deity, and that he could only convert four Score Persons, who were saved with him in the Ark. That when he began to work upon this famous Vessel, all that saw him derided him, and said; You are building a Ship, if you can bring Water to it, you will be a Prophet as well as a Carpenter. But he made Answer to these Insults, You laugh at me now, but I shall have my Turn to laugh at you. You will learn at your own Cost, that there is a God in Heaven who punishes the wicked.

Ebn-abbas says, that Noah being perplexed about the Figure that he should make the Ark of, God revealed to him, that it must have the Shape of the Belly of a Bird, and that he must make Use of the Timber of a Tree called in Arabic, Sag, which is the Platanus of the Indies. He presently planted it, and in twenty Years it was big enough to furnish the Materials for this whole Vessel, great as it was. It was built in two Years Time, it had three Floors, the highest was for the Birds, the lowest for the wild and tame Beasts, and the Middlemost for Mankind.

When the Time of the Deluge was come, the Oven began to boil up, and to run over. For they affirm, that Noah had succeeded by Inheritance to that Oven, that Eve had made Use of to bake her Bread, and that at the Times of God's Vengeance it begins to pour out great Floods of running Water. This Oven, called in Hebrew, Tannour, is different from our common Ovens; for it has its Opening at Top, and is generally of Stone or Clay. The Fourscore Believers entered with Noah into the Ark, and none but Canaan the Son of Ham refused to enter. Some of 'em think that Noah went on Board at Confab, near the Mouth of the Tigris in the Persian Gulf; others at the Place where Babylon was afterwards built.

After the Ark had gone round the World, during the Space of six Months[15], God gave his Commands to the Earth, saying, Earth swallow up the Waters; Heaven, drink up those that thou hast poured out. The Water then began immediately to diminish, the Orders of God were performed, the Ark stopped upon the Mountain of Girudi, and this Voice was heard from Heaven, Cursed are the Wicked.

They think that Noah came out of the Ark on the tenth Day of the first Month of the Arabian Year, called Meharram; and that this Patriarch instituted a Fast on that Day, which they still observe, in Commemoration of the Deliverance from the Waters of the Deluge. Then Noah was appointed of God as a new Adam, to re-people the whole World. All Nations derive their Original from his three Sons. Shem was the Father of the Hebrews, the Arabians, the Persians, the Syrians, and the Greeks, Japheth of the Scythians, the Moguls, the Getæ, the Tartars, the Chinese, the Turks, the Hyperboreans, of Gog and Magog. Ham is the Father of the Indians, the Africans, the Blacks, and all the People of the South.

Besides these three Sons of Noah, the Orientals have given him a fourth, called Maghestcn, unknown to the sacred Books of the Hebrews. They say moreover, that God sent Books to Noah, which signifies, according to their Way of speaking, that when he died he left ten Volumes behind him, in which he wrote down the Revelations, and all the Commands he had received from God. But these Books, if ever they were at all in Being, are now lost. 'Tis said there is a Monastery in Mesopotamia, called Deir Abouna, the Monastery of our Father, near which there is a Castle, where a great Sepulchre is to be seen, which the People of the Country say belonged to the Patriarch Noah:

And the Persian Geographer mentions a Place in Arabia, in the most eastern Province of this Country, which bears the Name of Ardh-nough, which falls in very well with the Opinion of those, who will have the Ark to have been built at Confab, of which we have now spoken.

The Fable of Deucalion and his Wife Pyrrha[16], is manifestly invented from the History of Noah. Deucalion by the Advice of his Father built an Ark, or a Vessel of Wood, in which he put all Sorts of Provisions necessary for Life, and entered into it with his Wife Pyrrha. This was to secure them from a Deluge, that drowned almost all Greece. All the People almost of this Country were destroyed, none escaped but those that took Refuge upon the Tops of the highest Mountains. As soon as the Flood was over, Deucalion came out of his Ark, and found himself upon Mount Parnassus. There he offered Sacrifices to Jupiter, who sent Mercury to him, to know what he desired. He requested him that he might become the Restorer of Mankind, which Jupiter granted him. He and Pyrrha were ordered to cast Stones behind them, which were immediately changed into so many Men and Women.

The Pagans struck Medals to preserve the Memory of this famous Event[17]. On one may be seen the Head of the Emperor Philip, and on another that of Septimius Severus Pertinax, and upon the Reverse of both, an Ark, or oblong square Vessel, in which appeared Deucalion and Pyrrha, or if you please, Noah and his Wife. Without also are seen a Man and Woman, and above the Ark two Birds, one of which brings a small Branch of Olive in its Claws. These Medals were struck at Apamea of Phrygia, where it is thought that Noah's Ark rested. See APAMEA before, and what is observed upon Noah's Ark, and the Deluge.

Nodab

NODAB, a Country bordering upon [Gen. iv. 16. בארץ נוד 1 Chron. v. 19.] Iturea and Idumea, but now unknown. We read in the Chronicles, that the Tribe of Reuben, assisted by those of Gad and Ma nasses, had a War against the Hagarites, the Jeturites, and the People of Nephith and of Nodab, in which the Israelites had the Advantage. But the Time and the other Particulars of this War are unknown.

Nohestan

NOHESTAN. This is the Name which in the Time of Hezekiah King of Judah[1], was given to the Brazen Serpent, that Moses had set up in the Wilderness, and which had been preserved by the Israelites to this Time. The superstitious People having made an Idol of this Serpent, Hezekiah caused it to be burnt, and in Derision gave it the Name of Nobestan; as if he should say, this little brazen Serpent. For in Hebrew, Nabas, or Nachasch, signifies a Serpent, and that of Brass. Even to this Day, in the Church of St. Ambrose at Milan, they shew a brazen Serpent, which they pretend to be the very same that Moses set up in the Wilderness. But 'tis very well known from the History of Hezekiah, that this was broke to Pieces in his Time. For the Brazen Serpent erected by Moses, see Serpent, and Punon, which is thought to be the Encampment where Moses set up the Brazen Serpent.

[Josh. xi. 2. xii. 23.] NOPHET, Josh. xvii. 11. and elsewhere, is taken for a Canton or a Province. In the Place of Joshua, where the Vulgate reads[1] Tertia pars urbis Nopheth, the Hebrew has only Tertia pars Nopheth, the third Part of the Canton called Nophet. This Canton was round about Dor, and two thirds of it was possessed by the Tribe of Zebulun, and one third by that of Manasseh.

Nose

NOSE. Nasus, Nares. The Hebrews [2 Sam. xxii. 9.] commonly place Anger in the Nose. There went up a Smoke out of his Nostrils. And in [Deut. xxix. 20.] Moses, The Anger of the Lord and his Jealousy shall smoke against that Man. Also [Psal. xviii. 8.] in the Psalms, There went up a Smoak out of his Nostrils. And Job, Out of his [Job. xli. 11.] Nostrils goeth Smoke. The antient Greek and Latin Authors speak pretty much after the same Manner e. Thus Persius, Disce, sed ira cadat naso, rugosaq; sanna.

And Plautus,

Fames & mora bilem in naso conciunt.

The Eastern Women in several Places put golden Rings to one of their Nostrils. Solomon alludes to this Custom when he [Prov. xi. 22.] says, As a Jewel of Gold in a Swines Snout, so is a fair Woman without Discretion. [Ezek. xvi. 12.] And Ezekiel, And I put a Jewel on thy Forehead [Heb. Nose,] and Ear-rings in thine Ears and a beautiful Crown upon thine Head.

They also put Rings in the Nostrils of [2 Kings xix. 28.] Oxen and Camels, to guide them by. I will put my Hook in thy Nose, and my Bridle in [Job. xl. 21. Vulg.] thy Lips. And Job; Nunquid ponis circulum in naribus ejus, aut armillâ perforabis maxillam ejus?

Nothing

NOTHING, Nihilum. Nothing is sometimes put by Way of Opposition to Body, Solidity, or Mass. It is also put for Vacuity, and for what is not sensible. Job says, He [Job. xxvi. 7.] stretcheth out the North over the empty Place, and hangeth the Earth upon nothing, upon the Vacuum. And Isaiah, that God [Isai xl. 22. Vulg.] spreads out the Heavens as nothing, extendit tanquam nihilum cœlos; he extends them [Wisd ii. 2. Vulg.] in the Air, in invisible Spaces. The Wise-man says, we are born of nothing, and in some Sense shall return to nothing again. Ex nihilo nati sumus, & post hoc erimus tanquam non fuerimus. We shall disappear from the Face of the Earth, as if we had never been there. And Isaiah says, Behold [Isai. xli. 24.] ye are of nothing, and your Work of nought; an Abomination is he that chooseth you.

Idols are often called Nothings, Non-entities. [Amos vi. 13.] Ye which rejoice in a Thing of nought. And Esther, O Lord, give not thy [Esther xiv. 11.] Sceptre unto them that be nothing; deliver not over thy People to those Gods that are [1 Cor. vii. 4.] nothing. And St. Paul, we know that an Idol is nothing in the World.

To bring to nothing, that is, to exterminate, to destroy, utterly to root out any Thing. Thus in the Psalms, Ad nihilum deductus est in conspectu ejus malignus. And again, Ad nihilum deduces omnes gentes. And elsewhere, Ad nihilum deduces tribulantes nos.

Number

NUMBER. This Word is sometimes taken to signifie a small Number, such as is easy to reckon, and sometimes it signifies the contrary. We are but few in Number, says Jacob to his Sons, when Gen. they had assaulted Shechem. The Letter xxxiv.

of the Hebrew is, Ego autem viri numeri, Deut. I being few in Number. And Moses says, iv. 27.

Job. Ye shall be left few in Number among the xvi. 23. Heathen. And Job, when a few Years are Psal. come, or according to the Hebrew Years of cv. 12. Number. And the Psalmist, When they were but a few Men in Number; or literally, Men of Number.

[Psal. cxlvii. 4.] Number sometimes stands for a great Number, or a Multitude. Thus, He telleth the Number of the Stars, or their Multitude, [Eccles. ii. 3.] as the Septuagint and Vulgate translate it. Solomon says, Quo facto opus est sub sole, numero dierum vitæ suæ.

[Rev. xiii. 17, 18.] The Number of the Beast, or the Number of the Name of the Beast, in the Revelations, stands for the numerical Value of the Letters that compose his Name.

In Psalm lxxi, (according to the Hebrew) the Prophet says, that he knows not the Numbers thereof. The Septuagint and Vulgate read, nescio literaturam, or according to the most antient Latin Copies, nescio negotiationes. They read in the Greek, Pragmascius, instead of Grammascius. But this is the Signification of the Hebrew. My Mouth shall daily declare thy Justice, and the Favours that thou hast done me, because I know not the Number thereof, or they are innumerable. Otherwise, I will publish every Day the Salvation thou hast procured for me; and though I am ignorant of Letters, or am not learned, I shall not cease to consider thy Power.

Numbers

NUMBERS. The Book of Numbers is the third of the Pentateuque. The Hebrews call it Vajedabber[1], and he spoke, because in the Hebrew it begins with these Words. Some Jews call it Bemiddebar g in the Desert, because it includes the History of what passed during the thirty-nine Years of the Israelites journeying in the Wilderness. Lastly, the Greeks, and after them the Latins, call it the Book of Numbers, because the three first Chapters contain the numbering of the Hebrews and Levites, which e —— Ἀνὰ ῥῖνας δέ οἱ ἤδη Δειμὺ μῆδος περϋτυψε. The People having departed from Sinai on the twentieth Day of the second Month of the second Year after their coming out of Egypt[2], went to the Wilderness of Paran, and thence to Kadesh, from whence they sent Commissioners to view the Land of Promise. At their Return the People were discouraged, and fell into Murmuring and Discontent; for which God condemn'd them to die in the Desart, and swore they should not enter into the Land which he had promised to their Fathers. Thus after having continued a good while at Kadesh-barnea, they returned back again; and having journey'd for thirty-nine Years in the Wilderness, they arrived at last at the Plains of Moab, beyond Jordan. All that happen'd during this Interval is to be read in the Book of Numbers. There are found the Wars of Moses with the Kings Sehon and Og, and that of the Midianites, to punish them for sending their Daughters into the Camp of Israel, and thereby tempting the People to Fornication and Idolatry. We there read of several Laws given by Moses during these thirty-nine Years, and of the many Murmurings of the Israelites, and the several Punishments which the Lord inflicted on them for the same.

Numisma Census

NUMISMA CENSUS, or the Tribute- Money. We read in St. Matthew, that the Disciples of the Pharisees and the Herodians, came to tempt Jesus, and ask'd him if it were lawful to pay Tribute to Cæsar, or not. But Jesus knowing their Malice, said to them; Ye Hypocrites, why tempt ye me? Shew me a Piece of the Money, with which the Tribute is paid: Ostendite mihi numisma census. Now 'tis enquired, what piece of Money this was? and of what Tribute our Saviour here spoke? As to the first of these Questions, the Gospel informs us, that this Piece of Money had upon it the Image and Inscription of Cæsar, or the Roman Emperor. Cujus est imago hæc & superscriptio? Dicunt ei, Cæsaris. 'Twas therefore a Piece of Money of the Roman Emperor that then reign'd, that is, of Tiberius, or of one of his Predecessors. As to the other Question about the Tribute, there is great Probability that it was a Capitation, or a Tax to be levied at so much a Head. Appian says[1], that the Jews paid the Capitation; and Ulpian assures us[2], that in the Provinces of Syria, all the Males from the Age of fourteen Years, and all the Females from twelve, till they were sixty-five Years old, were obliged to pay this Tribute or Capitation. And this is the proper Signification of the Census.

NUTTS, a Fruit well known and very common. It is said in Exodus[1], that the Branches of the Golden Candlestick were to be adorned with three Cups or Bowls in form of Nuts , and that between each Cup or Bowl there should be a Knop and a Flower. But the Hebrew Text reads, three Cups which produce Almonds, that is to say, as a Flower of an Almond-Tree, from the midst of which came forth the Branch of the Candlestick as the Fruit comes forth from the midst of the Flower. The only Passage in which mention is made of Nuts, is that in the Song of Solomon[2]. I went down into the Garden of Nuts, or of Nut-Trees.

Nycticorax

NYCTICORAX, an Owl, Scritch-Owl; and literally, a Night-Raven. Nyx in Greek signifies Night, and Corax a Raven. This Bird is prohibited by the Law[1]; but in Leviticus the Hebrew Word Shalak is translated by Mergulus, a Plungeon or Diver; and in Deuteronomy, an Owl; but its true Signification is a Diver. In Deuteronomy there are some Changes of Place of the Words in the Vulgate, and in those of the Septuagint; which is the Reason we cannot be sure what Hebrew Word is to answer to Nycticorax, which is found in[2] the Septuagint and in the Vulgate, Deut. xiv. 17, 18. But in Leviticus the Septuagint read Nycticorax, and the Vulgate Bubo, for the Hebrew Word Cos, which is explain'd of a Pelican, an Hawk, or an Owl. The same Word Cos we meet with in Psal. ciii. 7. where the Septuagint and the Vulgate have Nycticorax. But Bochart thinks[3], 'tis rather the Onocrotalus, which is a kind of Pelican, having a great Pouch under its Beak, and at the upper Part of its Throat. This Pouch is of such a Magnitude, as to contain a whole Child, which has sometimes been found in it, sometimes only a Hand and an Arm, or a Foot and a Thigh. This Bird is common in Egypt, and about Gaza in Palestine. The Hebrew Word Cos signifies a Cup, or a Vessel to drink out of. A Word which may also be us'd to signify the great Pouch of the Onocrotalus mention'd before. This is a solitary Bird as well as the Owl[4], call'd Avis [Coloss. iv. 15.] solitaria in the same Passage of the Psalms.

Oath

OATH. God has prohibited all false [Lev. xix. 12. Exod. xx. 7. Deut. vi. 13. Jer. iv. 2. Exod. xxiii. 13.] Oaths, and all useless and customary Swearing: But when Necessity and the Importance of the Matter requires it, he allows us to swear by his Name, but not in the Name of any false Gods, or in the Name of inanimate Things; whether on Earth, or in Heaven, or by the Stars, or by the Life of any Man whatever. Our Saviour, who came into the World not to destroy the Law, but to fulfil it, forbids all kinds of Oaths; and [Matt. v. 33.] the primitive Christians understood and observed this Command in a literal Sense, as [O.] may be seen from Tertullian, Eusebius, St. Chrysostom, St. Basil, St. Jerom, &c. However, it must be acknowledg'd, that neither the Apostles nor Fathers have absolutely condemn'd Swearing, or the Use of Oaths upon any Occasion, and all Subjects. There are Circumstances wherein we cannot morally be excus'd from it. But we never ought to swear but upon urgent Necessity, and to do some considerable Good by it. We ought to live with such Integrity and Veracity, as not to need to have Recourse to an Oath to confirm what we say, but that our Word may be look'd upon as good as an Oath: Nor must we ever swear but with a strict Regard to Justice and Truth. He had a numerous Family, says the Scripture, because the Lord blessed him; and this is the Occasion of this Blessing. When David tranferr'd the Ark of the Covenant to the City of Jerusalem, Uzzah having rashly laid Hands on the Ark[1], which he thought to be in danger of falling, was smitten of God, and died upon the Spot. David terrified at this Accident, durst not remove the Ark into the Place he had provided for it in his own House, but set it up in the House of Obed-Edom, which was near the Place where Uzzah had been struck dead. But the Presence of the Ark not only created no Temporal Misfortune to the Family of this Levite, but on the contrary the Lord heap'd upon him all sorts of Blessings; which encouraged David some Months after, to remove it to the Place he had appointed for it. Afterwards Obed-Edom and [1 Chron. xv. 18. 21. 2 Sam. vi. 10.] his Sons were assigned to the keeping of the Doors of the Temple. Obrizum

OBRIZUM. The Gold call'd Obrizum is often mention'd in Scripture. For Example, 2 Chron. iii. v. Laminas auri obrizi. Job xxviii. 15. Non dabitur aurum obrizum pro sapientia. And xxxi. 24. Si obrizo dixi, fiducia mea. And Isai. xiii. 12. Pretiosior erit vir auro, & homo mundo obrizo. And Dan. x. 5. Renes ejus accincti auro obrizo. Pliny says[1], that they call Obrizum the Gold that has been several times purify'd in the Fire. Auri experimento ignis est ut simili colore rubeat quo ignis; atque ipsum obrizum vocant. But the Hebrew Text, which is translated by Obrizum, is not always the same. For in the Passage quoted out of the Chronicles, the original Text[2] only reads good Gold, and the Septuagint pure Gold. In Job xxviii. 15. Chetem of Ophir, or fine Gold of Ophir. And c. xxxi. he says only Chetem, which signifies fine or purify'd Gold. And in Isai. xiii. 12. I will take a Man more precious than the Phaz, and than the fine Gold of Ophir. And in Daniel, his Reins were girded with the pure Gold of Ophaz. But the Gold of Ophir and the Gold of Phaz or Ophaz, is probably that which was brought from the Country of Ophir, and the River Phasis, or Phison in Cholchis. Abriz in Arabick or Persian signifies fine Gold without Mixture, which the Greeks and Latins call Obrizum.

OBSCURE. We have already spoke of Obscurity as it is put for Adversity, under the Words Night and Darkness. An obscure, dark, or sad Countenance is oppos'd to a serene and open one. Jesus Christ upbraids the Pharisees, that they had obscure or sad Aspects[1] when they fasted. And in [Nah. xi. 10.] Nahum, speaking of the Destruction of Nineve it is said, Facies omnium ut nigredo ollæ. Their Faces were as black as a Pot. The Hebrew says, as if they had black'd their Faces with Soot. Some Travellers affirm[2], that by way of Mourning the Orientals daub their Faces with the black of a [Joel xi. 6.] Kettle. Joel makes Allusion to this Custom, Omnes vultus redigentur in ollam. And Isai. xiii. 8. Facies combustæ vultus eorum. And Ezek. xx. 47. comburetur or nigrescet omnis facies, ab austro usque ad aquilonem.

[Psal. cxlii. 3.] Obscure Places denote the Grave. Collocavit me in obscuris, sicut mortuos sæculi. In [Ps. lxxiii. 21.] another Psalm we read, Repleti sunt qui obscurati sunt terræ domibus iniquitatum: which some understand of the obscure Places of Prisons, wherein Tyrants often keep the Weak and Unfortunate, because the obscure of the Earth, the poor Israelites are reduced to Captivity in the Houses of the Babylonians. Solomon speaks of the obscure, the Poor, as oppos'd to the Great and [Prov. xxii. 23.] Rich. Vidisti virum velocem in opere suo? coram regibus stabit, nec erit ante ignobiles. The Hebrew says, coram obscuris.

In great Calamities, 'tis said the Sun was obscur'd, and the Moon cover'd with Darkness. [Matt. xxiv. 24 Luke xxiii. 45.] Nahum says, Non est obscura contritio tua. Your Wound is not conceal'd. The Hebrew says, it is not bound up or closed. [Nah. iii. 10.] Jeremiah speaking of the Gates of Jerusalem, Portæ ejus corruerunt & obscuratæ sunt in terra; or according to the Hebrew, they are languishing and cover'd with Mourning upon the Earth. The Gates are put for the City.

The Obscurity of the Heart and of the [Rom. i. 21. Eph. iv. 18.] Mind, according to St. Paul, are put for the wilful Ignorance and Hardness of the Jews.

Observation

OBSERVATION.To observe the Commandments of the Lord, his Laws, his Solemnities, his Covenant, &c. are Expressions that occur very frequently in Scripture. Observa eum, & audi vocem ejus[1]. Observe him, and hear his Voice. The Hebrew says, be upon your Guard in his Presence, and fear him. You shall not observe Dreams v. The Hebrew is not known. Some translate it by, you shall use no Sorcery; others, you shall cast no Nativities; or you shall not enchant the Eyes, or you shall use no Auguries by the Flight of Birds.

Observare custodias. To keep guard in the Temple, at the Gate of a Prince, in a [1 Sam. ii. 22.] Camp, or even to keep watch over a Flock that lye out in the Field. It is said that the Sons of Eli debauched the Women that kept guard in the Tabernacle. Quæ observabant ad ostium tabernaculi.

[Eccl. viii. 2. Eccl. xi. 4.] To observe the Mouth of any one, to be a Spy upon his Words, in order to surprize him. The Babylonians observed Daniel, that they might have an Opportunity to accuse him to the King. The Pharisees observed Jesus Christ, and endeavoured to catch him in his Discourses. Solomon advises to observe the Mouth of the King, to keep his Ordinances, to be obedient to his Commands. Elsewhere he says, that he that observes the Winds shall not sow. St. Paul [Gal. iv. 10. Ezek. xxiii. 4, 5.] reproves the Galatians for observing Days and Months, who imitated the Jews in their superstitious Distinction of Days. Ezekiel says, that he that does not observe himself, or takes not care of himself, shall [Ps. cxxx. 3.] die by the Sword. If thou Lord shouldst mark (or observe) Iniquities, O Lord, who shall stand? If thou shouldst enter into a rigorous Observation of our Faults, who can bear such a Scrutiny, who can stand such an Enquiry?

Obsession of the Devil

OBSESSION of the Devil. Obsession is distinguish'd from Possession of the Devil in this; that in Possession the evil one enters into the Body of the Man, and leaves him not, whether he is always tormenting and disturbing him, or whether he does it only by Fits and Intervals. On the contrary Obsession is, when without entering into the Body of the Person, he besieges him without, and torments him, pretty much like a troublesome Guest, who follows and teazes a Man, from whom he is resolved to get some Advantage. Examples of Possession and Obsession are known both in Story and in Holy Scripture.

[1 Sam. xvi. 23.] In the Class of Obsessions should be placed, I think, what the Books of Samuel tell us about Saul, who from time to time was disturbed by an evil Spirit, and who was greatly comforted by the Sound of the Musical Instruments, which David play'd upon before him. And I think we must put in the same Class the Demon Asmodeus, who put to Death all the Husbands of [Tob. iii. 7, 8, 9.] Sarah the Daughter of Raguel. This evil Spirit properly obsess'd this young Woman, [Matt. iv. 24. xvii. 14.] but did not display his Malice but only against those that would have marry'd her. Young Tobias deliver'd her from this Obsession, by the Means of the Liver of the Fish which he burnt in the Chamber where the evil Spirit exercised his Power. There is great Probability that those mention'd in the Gospel, who were[1] particularly tormented about the Full and Change of the Moon, were rather obsess'd than possess'd.

Both Possessions and Obsessions by the evil Spirit are justly look'd upon as Punishments sent by the Justice of God, either to punish Sins committed, or for having delivered themselves up to the Power of the Devil, or to exercise the Virtue and Patience of good People. For it is known, that there have been Persons obsess'd, who have liv'd in a very innocent Manner before Men.

Marks of Obsession are there; to be lifted up into the Air, and afterwards to be thrown down with Violence against the Ground, without being hurt; to speak strange Languages that the Person had never learn'd; at the time of Obsession not to be able to come near Holy Things, or the Sacraments, but to have an Aversion to them, not to endure to hear them mention'd, to know and foretel secret Things, to perform things that exceed the Person's ordinary Strength, to say or to do Things which the Person would not or durst not say or do, if he were not externally moved to it; if the Dispositions of his Body, of his Health, of his Constitution, of his Inclinations, have no natural Proportion to what he is seen to do by the Strength of the Obsession. If the best Remedies avail nothing, if the Patient suffers violent Contorsions of his Limbs, which afterwards are brought to their natural State without Violence or Struggle. All these Symptoms, or some Part of them, may seem to determine, that the Person is really obsess'd of the Devil.

The Church prescribes no other Remedy against this sort of Evils, but Prayer, good Works, and Exorcisms: But it does not disallow natural Means, which may be made use of, to calm the Humours, and to remove the ill Temper of the Body of the Patient; for Example, Melancholy, Sorrow, black Humours, Gall, Want of Transpiration, Obstruction of certain Parts, and whatever may corrupt, thicken, or sour the Blood and the Juices. Thus we find that Musick relieved Saul in a Fit of his Distemper. We have Experiments of the like Cure effected by Herbs, Fumigations, Essences. But it belongs to Physicians to enter into a farther Discussion of these Matters. See the Universal Dictionary under the Title OBSESSIONS: And the Reader may also consult what we shall say hereafter of Possessions of the Devil.

Occasion

OCCASION. We call Occasion a Circumstance of Place, or Time, or of the [2 Cor. v. 12.] Disposition of a Person, to perform any thing. St. Paul says to the Corinthians, [4] We give you occasion to glory on our behalf. Elsewhere he says, Sin taking Occasion by [Rom. vii. 8, 11.] the Commandment, wrought in me all manner of Concupiscence. Thus the Law or Commandment is not the Cause, but the Occasion of Sin and Prevarication, since it rais'd a Desire of doing what was forbid. Nitimur in vetitum.

Occasion also is often put for Pretence. He that seeks for Occasions, or a Pretence, to put away his Wife. Samson sought an [Deut. xxii. 14. Judg. xiv. 4.] Occasion against the Philistines. When the King of Israel received a Letter from the King of Syria, requiring of him to get Naaman cured of his Leprosy, he thought that this Prince was only seeking a Pretence [2 Kings v. 7.] to make War against him. Videte quod occasiones quærat adversum me. He that has a mind to forsake his Friend seeks [Prov. xviii. 1. 1 Thes. ii. 5.] Occasions says the Wise Man. The Hebrew is different from this. He that is separated or dissipated, seeks according to his Desire. He that lives in Dissipation, wanders in his Desires, and is meddling with every thing. Otherwise by joining it with what goes before, he that shuts his Lips passes for a Man of Understanding; he is sought for eagerly when he is absent. St. Paul appeals to the Thessalonians as Witnesses, that among them he never sought for Occasions or Pretences to enrich himself by Flattery, or otherwise. Neque in occasione avaritiæ.

II. ODED, a Prophet of the Lordx, who being at Samaria, when the Israelites of the ten Tribes returned from the War with their King Pekah, and brought Captives with them two hundred thousand of the People of Judah; he went to meet them, and said to them: " You have seen that the Lord the God of your Fathers was in Wrath against Judah, he has delivered them into your Hands, and you have slain them very inhumanly; so that your Cruelty has ascended even to Heaven. And more than this, you would make Slaves of the Children of Judah, who are your Brethren, and would add this Sin to the many others you have committed. Therefore now hear the Counsel that I give you. Send back these Captives, lest the Lord should pour out his Anger against you ". Some of the chief of Samaria joined themselves with Oded, and told them, that they should not bring their Captives into the City; for why (said they) would you fill up the Measure of your old Offences, and draw upon us the dreadful Anger of the Lord?

The Israelites then moved with these Remonstrances, released all the Captives they had taken; and the principal Men of Samaria took care of them, gave them Cloaths and Food, and other necessary Assistances. After which they furnished them with Horses, because the greatest Part of them were so tired and exhausted, that they were not able to walk. Thus they conducted them to Jericho, which was in the Confines of the Land of Judah. This is all that is come to our Knowledge, concerning the Prophet Oded.

Offerings

OFFERINGS. The Hebrews had several kinds of Offerings, which they presented at the Temple. Some were Free-will Offerings, and others were of Obligation. The First-Fruits, the Tenths, the Sin -Offerings were of Obligation; the Peace-Offerings, Vows, Offerings of Wine, Oil, Bread, Salt, and other things, which were made to the Temple, or to the Ministers of the Lord, were Offerings of Devotion. The Hebrews called all Offerings in general Corban[1]. But the Offerings of Bread, Salt, Fruits and Liquors, as Wine and Oil, which were presented to the Temple, they call'd Mincha[2]. The Sacrifices are not properly Offerings; they are not commonly included in this Name.

The Offerings of Grain, Meal, Bread, Cakes, Fruits, Wine, Salt, Oil, were common in the Temple. Sometimes these Offerings were alone, and sometimes they accompanied the Sacrifices. Honey was never offered with the Sacrifices, but it might be offered alone, in the Quality of First-Fruits. Now these were the Rules that were observed in the presenting of those Offerings call'd in Hebrew, Mincha[3], or Korban Mincha: In the Septuagint, Offerings of Sacrifice, and the same in St. Jerome, oblationem sacrificii. There were five Sorts of these Offerings. First, Fine Flour or Meal. Secondly, Cakes of several Sorts, baked in an Oven. Thirdly, Cakes baked upon a Plate. Fourthly, Another Sort of Cakes, baked upon a Gridiron, or Plate with Holes in it. Fifthly, The First-Fruits of the new Corn, which were offered either pure and without Mixture, or roasted or parched in the Ear, or out of the Ear.

The Cakes were kneaded with Oil-Olive, or fry'd in Oil in a Pan, or only dip'd in Oil after they were bak'd. The Bread offer'd to be presented upon the Altar, was to be without Leaven; for Leaven was never offer'd upon the Altar, nor with the [Levit. ii. 11, 12. See Lev. ii. 2, 13. Numb. xv. 4, 5.] Sacrifices. But they might make Presents of Common Bread to the Priests and Ministers of the Temple.

The Offerings now mention'd were appointed in Favour of the poorer Sort, who could not go to the Charge of sacrificing Animals. And even those that offer'd living Victims were not excused from giving Meal, Wine, and Salt, which was to go along with the greater Sacrifices. And also those that offer'd only Oblations of Bread, or of Meal, offer'd also Oil, Incense, Salt, and Wine, which were in a manner the seasoning of it. The Priest in waiting received the Offerings from the Hand of him that offer'd them, laid a Part of them upon the Altar, and reserved the rest for his own Subsistence. That was his Right as a Minister of the Lord. Nothing was burnt quite up but the Incense, of which the Priest kept back nothing for his own Share.

When an Israelite offered a Loaf to the Priest, or a whole Cake, the Priest broke the Loaf or the Cake into two Parts, setting that Part aside that he reserved to himself, and broke the other into Crumbs, pour'd Oil upon it, Salt, Wine and Incense, and spread the whole upon the Fire of the Altar. If these Offerings were accompany'd by an Animal for a Sacrifice, it was all thrown upon the Victim, to be consumed along with it.

If these Offerings were the Ears of new Corn, either of Wheat or Barley, these Ears were parched at the Fire, or in the Flame, [Levit. ii. 14, 15.] and rubb'd in the Hand, and then offer'd to the Priest in a Vessel; over which he put Oil, Incense, Wine, and Salt, and then burnt it upon the Altar, first having taken as much of it as of right belong'd to himself.

The greatest Part of these Offerings were voluntary, and of pure Devotion. But when an Animal was offer'd in Sacrifice, they were not at Liberty to omit these Offerings. Every thing was to be supply'd that was to accompany the Sacrifice, and which served as a seasoning to the Victim. There are some Cases in which the Law requires only Offerings of Corn, or Bread; for Example, when they offer'd the First-Fruits of their Harvest, whether they were offer'd solemnly by the whole Nation, or by the Devotion of private Persons.

As to the Quantity of Meal, Oil, Wine, or Salt, which was to go along with the Sacrifices, I cannot easily see that the Law had determin'd it. Generally the Priest threw an handful of Meal or Crumbs upon the Fire of the Altar, with Wine, Oil, and Salt in Proportion, and all the Incense. All the rest belong'd to him, the Quantity depended upon the Liberality of the Offerer. I observe in more Places than one, that Moses appoints an Assaron, or the tenth Part of an Ephah of Meal, for those that had not wherewithal to offer the appointed Sin-Offerings. See Levit. v. 11. xiv. 21. In the solemn Offerings of the First-Fruits for the whole Nation, they offer'd an entire Sheaf of Corn, a Lamb of an Year old, two Tenths or two Assarons of fine Meal mix'd with Oil, and a Quarter of an Hin of Wine for the Libation.

OFFERINGS OF THE FIRST FRUITS CARIED TO THE TEMPLE OF JERUSALEM.

[Lev. xxiii. 10, 11, 12, &c. Numb. v. 15.] In the Sacrifice of Jealousy, when a jealous Husband accused his Wife of Infidelity, the Husband offer'd the tenth Part of a Satum of Barley-meal, without Oil or Incense, because it was a Sacrifice of Jealousy, to discover whether his Wife was guilty or no.

The Offerings of the Fruits of the Earth, of Bread, of Wine, Oil, and Salt, are the most ancient of any that have come to our Knowledge. Cain offer'd to the Lord of the Fruits of the Earth, the First-Fruits of his Labour. Abel offer'd the Firstlings of his Flocks, and of their Fat. The Heathen have nothing more ancient in their Religion, than these sorts of Offerings made to their Gods[4]. They offer'd clean Wheat, Flour, and Bread.

Primitias Cereri sarra refecta dabant.

Numa Pompilius, who first gave Laws, and established the Religion of the Romans[5], taught them to offer to the Gods, Fruits, Corn, Meal, or the Crumb of Bread with Salt, Wheat roasted or parched. Numa instituit fruge Deos colere, & molâ salsâ supplicare, atque, ut author est Hemina, far torrere. Before the Use of bloody Sacrifices they offer'd only Corn[6].

Ante Deos homini quod conciliare valeret,

Far erat, & puri lucida mica salis.

Theophrastus observes[7], that among the Greeks Meal mix'd up with Wine and Oil, which they call Thylemata, was the Matter of the ordinary Sacrifices of the Poor.

The Difference between the Offerings of Meal, Wine, and Salt, with which the Greeks and Latins accompany'd their bloody Sacrifices, and those that the Hebrews made use of in their Temple, consisted chiefly in this, that the Hebrews cast these Oblations upon the Flesh of the Victims, being already offer'd and put upon the Fire, whereas the Greeks put them upon the Head of the Victim whilst alive, and just going to be sacrificed. See LIBATION before.

Og

[Deut. iii. 11.] OG, King of Bashan, or of that Part of the Land of Promise which is beyond Jordan, between the Mountains of Gilead to the East, Jordan to the West, Libanus and Mount Hermon to the North, and the Brook Jabok to the South. Og was a Giant, of the Race of the Rephaims. We may judge of his Stature by the Length of his Bed, which was preserved for a long time in the City of Rabbath, the Capital of the Ammonites. It was nine Cubits long, and four Cubits broad; that is, fifteen Feet, four Inches and an half long, and six Feet ten Inches broad. The Rabbins say, that Og was one of those ancient Giants that liv'd before the Flood, and that he saved himself from the general Destruction, by getting on the top of the Roof of the Ark, wherein was Noah and his Sons: That Noah furnished him with Provisions, not out of Compassion to him, but that the Men that came after the Deluge might see how great the Power of God was, who had destroyed such Monsters from the Earth.

In the War he made with the Israelites, he lifted up, (say the Rabbins) a Mountain of six Miles in Breadth, in order to throw it on the Camp of the Israelites, and to squeeze them all to pieces at once. But God had so provided, that the Ants had made the Mountain hollow just in that Place where he had put his Head; so that the Mountain fell in upon the Neck of the Giant; presently his Teeth grew in such an extraordinary Manner, and penetrated into the Mountain, that he could by no Means disengage himself. So that Moses striking him upon the Heel, kill'd him without any Difficulty. This is what the Rabbins say. See the Targum of the Son of Uziel upon Gen. xiv. 13. and Numb. xxxv. 21. and the Exercitations of P. Morin, p. 325. l. 2. Exercit. 8. cap. 2. They say the Stature of this Giant was so prodigious, that Moses, who according to them was six Elns high, took a Hatchet of the same Length, and yet was forced to make a Leap of six Elns high, only that he might reach to strike the Ancle of Og's Foot. In the Decree of Gelasius, which condemns several Apochryphal Books, there is one condemn'd which bore the Name of the Giant Ogias, who had lived before the Deluge, and whom the Hereticks say to have fought against the Dragon.

But let us leave these Dreams, and come to what the History tells us of this famous Giant. Moses says[1], that after having conquer'd Sihon King of the Amorites, he advanced towards the Country of Bashan, wherein King Og reigned: That this Prince marched against him, and advanced as far as Edrei with all his Subjects; that giving them Battle, Og was conquer'd and put to Death, with his Children and all his People. Moses put them all to the Edge of the Sword, without sparing one of them, and took Possession of his Country. Og and Sihon were the only Persons that withstood Moses. Their Country was given to the Tribes of Gad, Reuben, and to half the Tribe of Manasseh.

Old

OLD, ancient. We say the Old Testament, by way of Contradistinction to the New. Moses was the Minister of the Old [Heb. ix. 19, 20.] Testament, of the Old-age of the Letter; but Jesus Christ is the Mediator of the New [Heb. ix. 15.] Testament, or of the New Covenant, which consists not of the Letter, but of the Spirit.

[Rom. vi. 5.] The old Man, the old Adam, in a moral Sense, is what we derive from corrupted Nature, and which we ought to crucify with Jesus Christ, that the Body of Sin may die in us; vetus homo noster simul crucifixus est, ut destruatur corpus peccati. In another Passage the Apostle enjoins us, to put off the old Man with his Deeds, and to put on the new Man, which is renewed in Knowledge after the Image of him that created him. And again elsewhere, we are to put off the old Man which is corrupt according to the deceitful Lusts.

The old Leaven, is Concupiscence, and an Adherence to the literal and ceremonial Observances of the Law. St. Paul advises; [1 Cor. v. 8.] Let us keep the Feast, not with old Leaven, neither with the Leaven of Malice and Wickedness; but with the unleavened Bread of Sincerity and Truth. Jesus Christ expresses almost the same thing, when he [Luk. v. 37.] says, that no Man putteth new Wine into old Bottles, else the new Wine will burst the Bottles, and be spilled, and the Bottles shall perish.

Hannah, the Mother of Samuel, says in [1 Sam. ii. 3.] her Canticle; Recedant vetera de ore vestro. Let the old Reproaches of Barrenness, which you made to me formerly, be now quite banish'd from your Mouths.

The old Fruits and the new, which succeed close after one another, and which are mentioned in Levit. xxv. 2. xxvi. 10. and in the Canticles, vii. 13. represent a very great Abundance. You shall have so much, that to make room for the new you shall be obliged to throw away the old.

Olive-Tree

OLIVE-TREE. There are two kinds of Olive-Trees, the wild and natural, and those that require Care and Culture. St. Paul distinguishes these in his Epistle to [Rom. xi. 24.] the Romans. Tu ex naturali excisus oleastro, & contra naturam insertus es in bonam olivam. The wild and uncultivated Olive-Tree he calls natural; naturalis oleaster. The cultivated Olive-Tree is of a moderate Heighth, its Trunk is knotty, its Bark smooth, and of an Ash-colour, its Wood is solid and yellowish, the Leaves are oblong, and almost like those of the Willow, of a green Colour, dark on the upper Side, and white on the under Side. In the Month of June it puts out white Flowers that grow in Bunches. Each Flower is of one Piece, widening upwards, and dividing into four Parts. After the Flower succeeds the Fruit, which is also oblong and plump. It is first green, then pale, and lastly black, when it is quite ripe. In the Flesh of it is inclos'd a hard Stone, full of an oblong Seed. The wild Olive differs from this, in that it is smaller in all its Parts.

When Noah sent forth the Dove out of the Ark, it brought back to him a small [Gen. viii. 11.] Olive-Branch with its Leaves; which was a Token to the Patriarch, that the Waters of the Deluge were sunk away. Solomon in the Temple of Jerusalem made Cherubims [1 Kings vi. 23, 33. Col. iii. 9. Job xv. 33.] of the Wood of the Olive; and Gates that parted the Sanctum from the Sanctuary, of the same Wood. Eliphaz in Job compares a wicked Man to a Vine which sheds its Blossoms in the Spring, and to an Olive whose Flowers fall before their Season, and consequently brings no Fruit. The sacred Writers often make use of Similes taken from the Olive.

Olives

[1 Kings xi. 7.] OLIVES. The Mount of Olives was situated to the East of the City of Jerusalem, and parted from the City only by the Brook Kidron, and by the Valley of Jehoshaphat, which stretches out from the North to the South. 'Twas upon this Mount that Solomon built Temples to the Gods of the Ammonites and of the Moabites, out of Complaisance to his Wives who were Natives of these Nations. Hence it is that the Mount of Olives is call'd the 1451.

Mountain [Acts i. 12.] Mountain of Corruptiong. Josephus says, that this Mountain is at the Distance of five Stadia (or Furlongs) from Jerusalem[1]; which make six hundred and twenty five geometrical Paces; or the length of a Sabbath-Days Journey, says St. Luke. The Mount of Olives had three Summits, or was composed of three several Mountains, ranged one after another from North to South. The middle Summit is that from whence our Saviour ascended into Heaven. 'Twas upon that towards the South that Solomon built Temples to his Idols. The Summit which is most to the North is distant two Furlongs from the middlemost. This is the highest of the three, and is commonly called Galilee[2].

In the Time of King Uzziah[3] the Mount of Olives was so shatter'd by an Earthquake, that half of the Earth that was on the Western Side, fell down, and rolled four Furlongs or five hundred Paces from thence, towards the Mountain which was opposite to it on the East; so that the Earth block'd up the Highways, and covered the King's Gardens. The Modern Travellers may be read on this Point, and particularly John Cotovic, p. 261. to know the Modern State of the Mount of Olives.

This Mountain is become the Object of the Veneration of Christians, since from hence our Saviour ascended into Heaven. Eusebius assures us[4], that in the Place of the Ascension, which is the highest of the Mount of Olives, there was a Cavern, where there was a constant Tradition that our Saviour enter'd, to communicate to his Disciples some of his most sacred Mysteries; whether by these Words may be understood the Holy Eucharist, which he gave them before he ascended into Heaven, or the Repast he took with them, of which mention is made Acts i. 4. or lastly, whether he means any particular and secret Instructions, which he imparted to them in this Place. The Fathers[5] inform us, that when our Saviour ascended into Heaven, he left his Footsteps imprinted upon the Earth ; that they were to be seen in their Time, and always subsisted, tho' the Faithful continually carried away the Ground from this Place, by way of Devotion. [Zech. xiv. 4.] Thus is literally accomplished what Zechariah had said, And his Feet shall stand in that Day upon the Mount of Olives. 'Tis added[6], that the Empress Helena having caused a magnificent Church of the Ascension to be built, in the midst of which was this Place, when they would have paved it with Marble as the rest, they never could do it; every thing that was put there by way of Ornament removed of its own accord, so that they were forced to leave it as it was. Even to this Day is seen the Impression of our Saviour's Left Foot, sunk into the Rock more than three Fingers Breadth; and they say the Stone, wherein was the Impression of his Right Foot, was taken away at the Time of the Crusado, and placed in a Temple, which at present is one of the principal Turkish Mosques, where it is thought it may still remain: For the Christians have not Liberty to enter therein to inform themselves: St. Jerom[7] in more Places than one speaks of a great Cross, that was set up upon the Mount of Olives, and which might be seen afar off. The same Father assures us[8], that when they had a Mind to shut up the Cave which answered to the Place where our Saviour ascended into Heaven, they could never accomplish their Design. For which reason they were forced to leave this Place free and open. It must needs be, that the Impressions of our Saviour's Feet must sink deep into the Mountain, and that the Christians must very nicely have observed the Place, since the tenth Roman Legion encamping upon this Mountain[9], at the Siege of the City by Titus, could not efface these sacred Footsteps, nor erase them out of the Memory of the Faithful.

Olympiad

OLYMPIAD, a Space of four Years. The Greeks commonly compute Time by Olympiads. They began to reckon in this Manner chiefly from the 27th Olympiad, in which Chorœbus was Victor; so that it was but one hundred and eight Years after their first Establishment by Iphitus. Before this Time they kept no exact Register of the Names of the Conquerors at the Olympick Games; and 'tis thought that Timæus was the first Historian who inserted the Years of the Olympiads into his History. Timæus liv'd in the Age of Ptolemy Philadelphus. After him Eratosthenes and Polybius followed the same Method. But before them the Greek Historians were not very careful to express the Dates of their Chronology. On this Head may be be seen Marsham's Canon. Ægypt. Sæcul. 15.

The Olympic Games, which were celebrated at Elis every four Years, with a vast Concourse of all the People of Greece, began in the Year of the World 3120, before Christ 880, before the Vulgar Æra 884. But generally the Beginning is taken only from the twenty-eighth Olympiad, wherein Chorœbus was Conqueror, in the Year of the World 3228, before Christ 772, before the Vulgar Æra 776. This is properly the Epocha of the Historical Times among the Grecians; for before that their History had a great Mixture of Fable[1]. The Term Olympiad is not found in Scripture, in the Sense in which we use it; but it is of so great Use in Matters of Chronology, that we could not but treat of it here. In the Books of the Maccabees the Æra made use of is that of the Seleucidæ, or of the Greeks, which begins in the Spring of the Year of the World 3692, according to the first Book of the Maccabees; or at the Autum of the same Year, according to the second Book of the Maccabees. See under the Articles of the YEAR of the Greeks, or of the ÆRA of the OLYMPIAN. Jupiter Olympicus. The Grecians often gave to Jupiter, and to their other Gods, the Surname of the Places where they had famous Temples dedicated to them, and where they were chiefly worshipped. So he was called Jupiter Idæus, because of Mount Ida where he was educated. Cretensis, because of the Island Crete where he was born, and where his Sepulchre was to be seen. Jupiter Capitolinus, because of the Temple he had in the Capitol at Rome. Jupiter Fulminator, because of the Thunder he was thought to dispense. Jupiter Hospitalis, because he presided over Hospitality; and so of the rest. Antiochus Epiphanes having prophaned the Temple of Jerusalem, caused the Statue of Jupiter Olympicus to be set up there, where it remained [2 Macc. vi. 2.] for three whole Years[1], till Judas Maccabeus took it away from thence, and restored the Worship of the Lord. 'Twas this Idol that Daniel called the Abomination that maketh desolate to be set up. At the same time the same Jupiter was set up in the Temple of Mount Gerizim in the Country of Samaria, but under the Name of Jupiter Hospitalis. See 2 Macc. vi. 2. Josephus says[2], that the Samaritans offer'd of their own accord to consecrate their Temple of Gerizim to Græcian Jupiter.

Olympian

Omri (I)

I. OMRI, or Amri, General of the Army of Elab King of Israel. Being at the Siege of Gibbethon, and hearing that his Master Elab was assassinated by Zimri, and that this Murderer had usurped his Kingdom; he immediately raised the Siege of Gibbethon, and being elected King by his Army, he march'd against Zimri, set upon him at Tirzah, whither he had retir'd, and press'd so hard upon him, that he forc'd him to burn himself and all his Family, in the Palace wherein he had shut up himself. Zimri reigned but seven Days, and died in the Year of the World 3075, Seleucidæ. before Christ 925, before the Vulgar Æra 929.

After the Death of Zimri all Israel was divided into two Parties. Half of the People acknowledged Omri for King, and the other half adhered to Tibni the Son of Gineth. This Division continued for four Years; and when Tibni was dead, all the People united again in the Person of Omri, who was owned as King of all Israel, and reigned twelve Years. That is, six Years at Tirzah, and six at Samaria.

Till then Tirzah had been the chief Place of Abode of the Kings of Israel. But when Omri made a Purchase of the Hill of Shomeron[1], for the Sum of two Talents of Silver; that is of our Money six hundred and eighty four Pounds seven Shillings and six Pence. He there built a new City, which he called Samaria, from the Name of the first Possessor Shemer or Shomer; and there he fix'd his Royal Seat. From which Time Samaria was always the Capital of the Kingdom of the ten Tribes.

Omri did Evil before the Lord, and his Crimes still exceeded those of his Predecessors. He walk'd in all the Ways of Jeroboam the Son of Nebat. He died at Samaria in the Year of the World 3086, before Christ 914, before the Vulgar Æra 918. His Successor was Ahab, who still exceeded him in all Kinds of Wickedness.

Onan

ONAN, Son of Judah, and Grandson of the Patriarch Jacob. Judah having given a young Woman named Tamar to his eldest Son Er for a Wife, Er died without leaving any Children behind him. Judah then caused his second Son Onan to marry Tamar, that he might revive the Name of his Brother, and raise Successors to him. But Onan seeing that the Children that might be born to him would be deemed to belong to his Brother, by an abominable Action prevented Tamar from becoming a Mother. This was so displeasing to the Lord, that he caused him to die[1]. The Kind of his Death is unknown, but there is great Probability that he was smote by some extraordinary Malady. The Testament of the twelve Patriarchs, a Book very much Apochryphal, says that Onan lived a Year with Tamar without consummating his Marriage; and that Tamar making her Complaints of this to Judah, he expostulated with Onan about it, who following the Counsel of his Mother who was a Canaanite, and who had no Affection for Tamar, hinder'd her from being a Mother by the Commission of a detestable Action. This was the Occasion of his being struck to Death in an unusual Manner.

Onesimus

ONESIMUS, a Phrygian by Nation, a Slave to Philemon, and lastly a Disciple of the Apostle St. Paul. This is what we find concerning him. Onesimus having run away from the House of his Master, and also having robb'd him of something[1], went to Rome about the Year 61 of the common Æra, while St. Paul was there in Prison the first time. As Onesimus knew him by Reputation, for his Master Philemon was a Christian, he took care to find him out, acquainted him with what he had done, own'd his Flight to him, and did him all the Service that Philemon himself could have done him, if he had been at Rome. St. Paul brought him to a Sense of the Greatness of his Crime, disposed him to the receiving of the Gospel, instructed him, converted him, baptized him, and soon after sent him back to his Master Philemon with the Letter that we have among St. Paul's Epistles, and which is acknowledged as canonical by all the Christian Church.

It may pass for a Master-piece of Eloquence in the persuasive Kind. There St. Paul has Recourse to all the Considerations that Friendship, Religion, Piety, and Tenderness can inspire, to reconcile a Servant to his Master. He mingles even Prayers with Authority, and Praises with Recommendations; and makes a Parallel between Onesimus become a Christian and Child of God, with the same Onesimus an evil Servant and a Fugitive. This Letter had all the good Success he could desire. Philemon not only received Onesimus as a faithful Servant, but rather as a Brother and a Friend. A little time after he sent him back to Rome to St. Paul, that he might continue to be serviceable to him in his Prison. And we see that after this Onesimus was employed to carry such Epistles as the Apostle wrote at that Time. He carried, for Example, that which was written to the Colossians, while St. Paul was yet in his Bonds, in the Year of Christ 62.

From this Time Onesimus's whole Employment was in the Ministry of the Gospel. The Apostolical Constitutions[2] acquaint us that St. Paul made him Bishop of Berea in Macedonia. The Martyrologies give him the Title of Apostle, and say that he ended his Life by Martyrdom. The Roman Martyrology mentions him as being made Bishop of Ephesus by St. Paul after Timothy. Others add, that it was he whom Ignatius the Martyr speaks of, as being Bishop of Ephesus in the Year of Christ 107: But this Opinion has no solid Proof to support it[3]. The same Martyrology places his Feast upon the 16th of February, and says, that having succeeded Timothy in the Bishoprick of Ephesus, and having been charged by him with the preaching of the Gospel, he was taken into Custody and sent to Rome, where he was stoned for his Faith in Jesus Christ. His Body was buried there, but was afterwards taken up and carried to the Place where he had been Bishop. The Greeks celebrate his Feast on the 15th of December.

Onesiphorus

ONESIPHORUS, of whom mention is made by St. Paul, in his second Epistle to Timothy, cap. i. v. 16. He came to Rome in the Year of Christ 65, while St. Paul was in Prison there for the Faith, and at a Time when almost every one had forsaken him[1]. He arrived there from Asia, where he had already been very serviceable to the Church; and having found St. Paul in Bonds, after that he had sought him for a long time, he often assisted him to the utmost of his Power. For which Reason the Apostle wishes all sort of Benedictions both on himself and his Family. The Greeks place his Festival on the 29th of April and the 8th of December. On the 29th of April they make him Bishop of Colophon in Asia; and on the 8th of December they make him Bishop of Cesarea, without distinguishing which Cesarea they mean. They place him in the Order of the seventy Disciples, and seem to ascribe Martyrdom to him. The Roman Martyrology on the 16th of December says he suffered Martyrdom on the Hellespont,where he went to preach the Gospel along with Porphyrius: That having been apprehended by the Command of the Proconsul Adrian, and carried into a Temple dedicated to Idols, there to offer Incense to them, which he courageously refused to do; he was cruelly whip'd with Rods, and then tied to a Horse's Tail, and drawn about till he expired.

Onias (II)

II. ONIAS, Son of Simon the Just, High Priest of the Jews, did not immediately succeed his Father, who died in the Year of the World 3711, because of his Minority. Eleazar his Uncle by the Father's Side succeeded Simon the Just, and held the High-priesthood for near thirty Years. He died in the Year of the World 3744, and had for his Successor, not Onias II. his Nephew, who was lawful Heir to this Dignity, but Manasseh his Great Uncle, who was established in 3745, and died in 3771. Then Onias II. at last enjoyed the High-priesthood, and held it from the Year of the World 3771, to 3785, before Christ 215, before the Vulgar Æra 219. Josephus says[1], that this Onias was a Man of a mean Spirit, and so sordidly covetous, that he had like to have lost his Country by it. For the High Priests his Predecessors having been us'd to pay out of their own Money the Tribute that the Country was to pay to the King of Egypt, and which was but twenty Talents, that is, about six thousand eight hundred and-forty four Pounds of our Money, taking the Talent at three hundred forty-two Pounds three Shillings and nine Pence apiece; he refus'd to continue this Custom.

Ptolemy Euergetes King of Egypt incens'd against Onias, sent a Messenger to him with Threats, that if he did not speedily pay what he ow'd to the King's Treasury, he would give up Judea to his Soldiers, and send thither other Inhabitants instead of the Jews. The People were terrified at these Threats; but the Avarice of the High Priest still made him insensible. Josephus Nephew of Onias, and Son of one Tobias, and of a Sister of the High Priests, obtained Leave of him to go in his Name, and in the Name of the People, to make their Remonstrances to the King of Egypt. Josephus coming to Court, knew so well how to work upon the Tempers of the King and the Queen, that he obtained from them all he desired. He took to farm the King's Tributes in Palestine and Syria, and gave as much again as any other offer'd.

Onias II. had for Successor Simon II. his Son, raised to the High Priesthood in 3785. There are some that think that 'tis Onias II. whose Commendation is given by Jesus the Son of Sirach, and whom he calls Simon in the first Chapter of his Book. They will also have it to be him, to whom the Lacedemonians writ the Letter mentioned by Josephus in Book xii. c. 5. of his Antiquities. But others with more Reason refer it to Onias III. of whom we shall now speak.

Onias (III)

III. ONIAS, Son of Simon II. High Priest of the Jews[1], was established in the Priesthood in the Year of the World 3805, before Christ 195, befor the Vulgar Æra 199. Josephus the Historian relates the History of the Succession of Onias III. in a Manner very different from the Relation of it in the second Book of the Maccabees. For thus this Author represents it[2]. The High Priest Simon had three Sons, Onias III. Jason or Jesus, Onias, otherwise Menelaus. Onias III. at his Death left a Son under Age called Onias. As he was not capable of exercising the High-priesthood, King Antiochus Epiphanes conferred it upon Jason the Brother of Onias III. But he did not long enjoy it, for falling into Disgrace with this Prince, he dispossessed him of the Priesthood, and gave it to Menelaus, otherwise called Onias. So that the three Sons of Simon the Just successively enjoyed this Dignity; but the two last were in Possession of it to the Exclusion of Onias IV. Son of Onias III. to whom it belong'd by Right of Succession. This is what Josephus relates in this Matter.

The second Book of the Maccabees tells it in a very different Manner. It says it was [2 Macc. i. ii iii. iv.] under the Pontificate of Onias III. that the History of Heliodorus happened, who having been sent by King Seleucus to fetch away the Treasure at the Temple of Jerusalem, was hindered from it by the Angels that came to the Assistance of the Jews[3]. In Consequence of which Onias having been accused to the King of Syria, by one named Simon, as a Traytor to his Country, and Author of the Disturbances that happened at Jerusalem when Heliodorus came thither; he thought fit to make a Journey to Antioch, there to vindicate himself to the King, and to disprove the false Suggestions that had been raised against him. While this was doing King Seleucus died, and his Brother Antiochus Epiphanes succeeded him, at his Return from Rome[4]. Then Jason Brother to Onias came to Antioch, offered Money to Epiphanes for the High-priesthood, and obtained it. He then returned to Jerusalem while Onias continued at Antioch, deprived of his Dignity, nor could he obtain Justice from the King.

Three Years after a Jason having sent Menelaus Brother of Simon to Antioch, (it may be observed he does not call him Brother of Jason, or of Onias) to carry Money to the King, and to consult him in some Affairs of Importance; Menelaus insinuated himself into the King's good Graces, and obtained the sovereign Priesthood from him, for which he gave three Hundred Talents above what Jason had given. Jason being thus deprived of this Dignity, was obliged to retire into the Country of the Ammonites. But as Menelaus was not able to pay what he had promised the King so soon as was expected, his Brother Lysimachus was substituted to this Office. In the mean while Antiochus Epiphanes being obliged to depart in Haste for Cilicia, to suppress the Rebellion of some Cities that had there revolted, he left as Governor at Antioch one Andronicus, who corrupted by the Money given him by Menelaus, put to Death Onias III. the lawful High-priest of the Jews.

Thus is this Matter related by the Author of the second Book of the Maccabees[5]. Menelaus being informed that the King was departed for Cilicia, came to Antioch with some Vases of Gold which he had stole from the Temple at Jerusalem, and with the Money that he had raised by the Sale of some other Vessels at Tyre, and the neighbouring Cities. He offered one Part of these Vessels to Andronicus, to whom the King had left the Government of the Country, to prevail with him to remove Onias III. out of the Way, who was continually reproaching him with the Sacrilege he had committed, in stealing the Vessels of the Temple. In the mean Time Onias kept himself in the Asylum of the Grove of Daphne, fearing that his Enemies might make some Attempt upon his Life, after having deprived him of the Dignity of the High-priesthood. Andronicus came himself to Daphne, spoke to Onias, promised with an Oath that no one should do him any Harm, drew him out of his Place of Refuge, and then most inhumanly and basely slew him. The unjust Death of so holy a Man filled with Indignation, not only the Jews, but even the Pagans themselves; and as soon as the King came back from Cilicia, they made their Complaints to him of this Murder. The King, though naturally but little inclined to favour the Jews, could not refrain from Tears, remembring the Wisdom and the Moderation that were always conspicuous in Onias. He caused Andronicus to be stripped of the Purple he wore, made him walk in Disgrace through the Streets of Antioch, and ordered him to be put to Death in the same Place where he had killed Onias. Thus the Lord brought upon him that Punishment he had so justly deserved.

There are few Persons to whom the Scripture gives greater Praises than to Onias III. 'Tis thought to be to him that Areus King of the Lacedemonians wrote the Letter which is to be seen in the first Book of the Maccabees in these Words[6]. Areus King of the Lacedemonians to Onias the High-priest, greeting. It is found in Writing, that the Lacedemonians and Jews are Brethren, and that they are of the Stock of Abraham. Now therefore since this is come to our Knowledge, you shall do well to write to us of your Prosperity. But we have given Reasons that make it doubtful whether this Letter was written to Onias III. It is more probable it was sent to Onias I. See the Article LACEDEMON.

Jonathan Maccabæus sending Ambassadors to Rome in the Year of the World 3860, ordered them at their Return to make Lacedemon in their Way, and to renew the Alliance with the Lacedemonians, in the same Manner as they had done with the Romans[7]; and in the Letter he wrote[8] to the Lacedemonians, he recites that of King Areus. Josephus also gives it intire[9], but changes the Terms and Manner of Expression. As to the Relation of the Lacedemonians and the Jews, the Article of the Lacedemonians may be consulted, and the Dissertation we have composed on this Subject, before the first Book of the Maccabees. See the Character which the Author of the second Book of the Maccabees gives to the [2 Macc. iii. 1, 2, 3.] High-priest Onias III. Now when the holy City was inhabited with all Peace, and the Laws were kept very well, because of the Godliness of Onias the High-priest, and his Hatred of Wickedness. It came to pass that even the Kings themselves did honour the Place, and magnifie the Temple with their best Gifts: Insomuch that Seleucus King of Asia, of his own Revenues, bare all the Costs belonging to the Service of the Sacrifices. See also what is said of him in the second Book of the Maccabees, Ch. xv. v. 12, 13, &c. where Onias appeared to Judas Maccabæus, accompanied by the Prophet Jeremiah, who presented a Sword to Judas.

Onias (IV)

IV. ONIAS, Son of Onias III. of whom we have now treated, who never enjoyed the High-priesthood. The Ambition of his Uncles Jason and Menelaus, and the Injustice of the Kings of Syria, always kept him from it. However he had always flattered himself with the Hopes of obtaining it, till the Death of his Uncle Menelaus: But when he saw that Menelaus was put to Death[1], and that Antiochus Eupator had appointed as a Successor to him Alcimus or Jacimus, who was indeed of the Race of Aaron, but not of the Family of Onias; and that Lysias Regent of the Kingdom of Syria, had advised the King no longer to continue the High-Priesthood in this Family[2]: Onias IV. soon perceiving that he had no longer any Thing to hope for in this Affair, took Refuge in Egypt[3] with Ptolemy Philometor, where having insinuated himself into the good Opinion of this Prince, and of Cleopatra his Queen, he obtained from them a Permission to build a Temple to the true God, in the Prefecture of Heliopolis[4]. This Temple was called Onion, and we shall speak of it in a particular Article. See ONION.

Josephus in his second Book against Apion, p. 1064, says that Ptolemy Philometor and Cleopatra his Queen, placed so great Confidence in Onias and in Dositheus, both Jews, that they intrusted them with the Command of their Army. And after the Death of King Philometor, Cleopatra being desirous to secure the Kingdom to her Son, who was the lawful Heir of Philometor, and Ptolemy Euergetes, otherwise called Physcon, opposing this Settlement; the Queen made Use of Onias IV. to make War against him. Onias advanced towards Alexandria with a small Army of Jews, and appeased a Sedition that had been raised in that City. But Ptolemy having compelled the Queen to marry him, put to Death all those that were in the Interest of the young Prince, and killed him in the Arms of his Mother the very Day of their Marriage, in the very midst of the Solemnity. 'Tis not said whether Onias was put to Death on this Occasion, but the Thing is very probable.

Onias (V)

V. ONIAS, Called otherwise Menelaus, whom Josephus[1] makes to be Son to Simon the just, and Brother of Onias III. spoken of before, and whom the second Book of the Maccabees makes to be Brother to a certain Simon of the Tribe of Benjamin, an Enemy and Accuser of Onias III. This Menelaus, or Onias V. was created High-priest in the Year of the World 3832, and was put to Death in 3842, before Christ 158, before the vulgar Æra 162. This is what the Scripture informs us about this High-priest[2]. Jason the Usurper of the High-priesthood having sent Menelaus to Antioch, to carry Money to King Antiochus Epiphanes, and to know his Answer to some important Queries; Menelaus managed the King's Temper so dextrously, that he got into his Confidence, and obtained the High-priesthood for himself, exclusive of Jason, upon an Offer of three Hundred Talents more than Jason had sent for it. And then having received the King's Orders, he returned to Jerusalem puffed up with the new Dignity that had been conferred upon him. As for Jason, he was forced to withdraw into the Land of the Ammonites.

But Menelaus not being very punctual to send to the King the Money he had promised him, though Sostratus the Governor of the Castle had urged him to the Payment of it; they both received a Summons to appear before the King[3], when the King conferred the High-priesthood on Lysimachus the Brother of Menelaus. In the mean Time Antiochus having been obliged in great Haste, to go to quell an Insurrection of some Cities in Cilicia, Me- Menelaus took the Opportunity of his Absence, to endeavour to put his Affairs on a better Footing. He engaged Andronicus on his Side, who had been made Governor of Antioch in the Absence of the King, and prevailed with him to put to Death Onias III. who had loudly accused Menelaus with taking away the precious Vessels of the Temple, selling some, and giving away others to procure Abettors to his Pretences. Andronicus, who had received a Part of these Vessels, treacherously put Onias to Death, as we have before related. But at the Return of Antiochus he was accused and convicted of this Crime, and put to Death in an ignominious Manner, as he well deserved.

As for Menelaus, he supported himself yet for some Time. Lysimachus, to whom Antiochus Epiphanes had given the High-priesthood[4], having by the Counsel of Menelaus committed many Disorders, and Violences in the Temple; the People mutinied, and several of his Attendants were wounded, some slain, and himself was killed upon the Spot. Menelaus was accused as the Author of these Disorders. But Antiochus coming to Tyre, Menelaus by a large Sum gained to his Interest Ptolemy Son of Dorimenes, who had then much Credit at Court. So by his Means he not only escaped the Death he deserved, but even obtained the Condemnation of the Deputies sent by the Jews, to accuse him before Antiochus. He returned to Jerusalem more insolent than ever[5], increasing in his Malice, and continually endeavouring to lay Snares for his Fellow Citizens. In the Interim, when Antiochus was gone into Egypt, and a Report was spread of his Death; Jason the false High-priest, of whom we have already spoke, took a Thousand Men along with him, and came to lay Siege to Jerusalem. He took it, and forced Menelaus to retire into the Citadel where the Syrians kept Garrison. But the Report of Antiochus's Death being afterwards found false, Jason was obliged to withdraw, and Menelaus was again re-established at Jerusalem with new Authority[6], which he made no other Use of but to distress the Citizens.

After the Death of Antiochus Epiphanes[7], his Son Antiochus Eupator, under the Conduct of Lysias the Regent of the Kingdom, marched at the Head of his Troops against Jerusalem. Menelaus was then in the Army, and by a Spirit of Dissimulation pretended to intercede with Eupator in Favour of the Jews his Countrymen, flattering himself that he should soon recover his Authority at Jerusalem. But Lysias having acquainted Eupator, that Menelaus was the Cause of all the Troubles of Judea, the King caused him to be apprehended, and secured till his Return[8]. Then being come to Berea, he was carried to the Top of a Tower of fifty Cubits high, wherein had been brought together a great Quantity of Ashes, and from the Top of which nothing but a great Precipice could be seen. From hence Menelaus was thrown down, and died miserably; being suffocated in the Ashes, which served him both for a Grave and a Tomb.

Onias (VI)

VI ONIAS. A certain upright Man that lived in Judæa[1] at the Time that Aristobulus made War with Hyrcanus, Prince and High-priest of the Jews. He had heretofore by his Prayers obtained Rain from Heaven, in the Time of a great Drought; and seeing a civil War begun among the Jews, he retired into a Solitude. While Aretas King of the Arabs, who was of Hyrcanus's Side, was besieging Aristobulus in Jerusalem, the Jews that were in the Camp of Aretas went to seek out Onias, and desired him to curse Aristobulus and all his Party, and to devote them to all Sort of Misfortunes. He excused himself a long Time, but forced at last by their Importunities, he set himself in the midst of them, and put up this Prayer to God. " O Lord God of the Universe, " since those among whom I am are thy " People, and since those they fight against " are thy Priests; I beseech thee to hear " neither Party, in those Prayers that they " shall address to thee against their Bre-" thren". At which Words some of the Jews there present overwhelmed him with Stones.

Onion

ONION. This is the Name that was given to the Temple built by Onias IV. in Egypt, about the Year of the World 3854, before Christ 146, before the vulgar Æra 150. Onias IV. of whom we have spoke above, retiring into Egypt about the Year 3842[1], found Means so to insinuate himself into the Esteem of Ptolemy Philometor and Cleopatra his Queen, that he had their intire Confidence, even so far as to give him the Command of their Troops. Onias taking the Advantage of this Favour, asked Leave of the King to build a Temple in Egypt, after the Model of that at Jerusalem[2], and therein to settle Priests and Levites of his own Nation. What determined him to undertake this Work was chiefly a Passage of the Prophet Isaiah, [Isai. xix 18, 19.] who more than six Hundred Years before had foretold, that the Lord should one Day have a Temple in Egypt, and that by Means of a Jew, who should build it there.

Josephus does not quote the Words of Isaiah, but it is not doubted but it is the following Passage. In that Day shall five Cities in the Land of Egypt speak the Language of Canaan, (which is the same as the Hebrew Tongue) and swear to the Lord of Hosts[3] One shall be called the City of Destruction. (or of Cursing, or of Heres, or the Sun, Heb.) In that Day shall there be an Altar to the Lord in the Midst of the Land of Egypt, and a Pillar at the Border thereof to the Lord. And it shall be for a Sign, and for a Witness unto the Lord of Hosts in the Land of Egypt.

'Twas thus that Onias explained himself in the Memorial he presented to King Ptolemy. "While I was employed in War for your Service, along with the Jews whom I commanded, and therefore had Occasion to pass through many Provinces, I observed that the Jews had particular Temples in Cœlo-Syria, in Phœnicia, and in the City Leontopolis situated in the Nome of Heliopolis in Egypt; which is by no Means convenient, since this Multitude of Temples may create several Divisions among them, just as the Difference of Worship and the Number of Temples create Schisms among the Egyptians. Having therefore found in the Fortress called Bubastus, the Desart a very proper Place, replenished with good Materials and sacred Animals[4]; I beseech your Majesty to grant me an antient ruinous Temple that is there, and which is dedicated to no Deity; to permit me to purifie this Place, and there to build a new Temple to the God of the Jews, after the Model and according to the Proportions of that at Jerusalem, so that the Jews which are in Egypt may there keep their religious Assemblies, and by this Means may preserve a perfect Union among themselves, and therefore may be more disposed to obey you, and to be employed in your Service. For the Prophet Isaiah has foretold heretofore, that there should be a Temple consecrated to the Lord in Egypt, and has foreshewn many other Things on the same Subject."

The King and the Queen having seen this Request of Onias, granted him the Permission he desired; but it was in such Terms, as sufficiently shewed they would not take any Thing upon themselves, that might be contrary to the Law of God in this Affair. They told him in their Answer, they could hardly be persuaded that God could approve having a Temple in a Place so impure, and infested with noxious Animals; but since he assures them that the Prophet Isaiah had foretold this should be, they were willing to allow of it, without pretending however to authorize the Violation of the Law of God, and the Sin that might be incurred by this Action. Onias having received this Permission, built at Bubastus a Temple, after the Model of that at Jerusalem, but not so large or magnificent. He found also Priests and Levites as little scrupulous as himself, who engaged themselves in the Service of this Temple, and who observed the same Ceremonies there, as were performed in the Temple of Jerusalem. This is the Description that Josephus gives us of the Temple Onion, in the Seventh Book of his History of the Jews[5]. The Place where it was built is one Hundred four Score Furlongs from Memphis, that is to say, about four Leagues, taking three Thousand Geometrical Paces for a League. This Canton is called the Nome of Heliopolis; and the Temple to be seen there has a Tower like that of Jerusalem[6], of sixty Cubits high, and built with very large Stones. The Altar is of the same Structure as that at Jerusalem. Onias adorned this Temple with the Gifts and precious Monuments that the Liberality of the Jews of Egypt supplied him with; but instead of the Candlestick which was in the Temple of Jerusalem, he hung up a golden Lamp, which enlightened the Onion. All the Circumference of the Temple was inclosed with a Wall of Bricks, with Gates of Stone work. King Philometor endowed it with large Revenues and much Land, for the Support of the Priests, and to supply the Necessities of the holy Place. The Jews and Priests of Jerusalem could not see this Temple without Concern, and it was always a Subject of Division between the Jews of Egypt, and those of Palestine.

After the Ruine of the Temple of Jerusalem[7] by the Romans, there was Reason to fear, that the Jews being drove out of their Country might retire into Egypt, and assembling together in the Temple Onion, might take Occasion to make a new Revolt. For which Reason Lupus Governor of Alexandria, and Prefect of Egypt, having given an Account to Vespasian of what had passed concerning the Assassins which had withdrawn out of Judæa into Egypt; this Prince gave him Orders to demolish the Temple[8]. But Lupus satisfied himself with shutting it up, about the Year 73 of the common Æra, about two Hundred and twenty six Years after its Foundation. Paulinus, who succeeded him a little after, took away all the Ornaments and Riches that were therein, caused all the Doors to be shut up, and would not suffer any Exercises of Religion to be performed in it. Such was the End of the Temple Onion.

עיר החרם*Gnir Hacherem, Civitas Anathematis*. Aquila, Sym. Theodoret, and the Vulgate have read עיר החרס*Gnir Hacheres Civitas Solis*. And perhaps it was this that suggested to Onias, to build or consecrate this Temple in the Canton of Heliopolis.

I suppose he means those Animals that the Egyptians dare not kill, because they were consecrated to some Egyptian Deities; as Serpents, Crocodiles, the Ibis. They possessed the whole Country of Bubastus the Desert, and consequently this Place was uncultivated and deserted.

Onkelos

ONKELOS, the famous Author of the Chaldee Paraphrase upon the Pentateuque. The Jews pretend that Onkelos was a Gentile by Birth and Religion, and that he was converted to Judaism while Hillel was alive, who lived some Time before our Saviour. His Paraphrase is without Dispute the best, the most sensible, and the most literal, of any that we have from the Jews; and it were to be wished that he had explained all the Hebrew Books of the Old Testament, as he has done the Pentateuque. Father Morin shews, that this Paraphrase is much more modern than the Jews gave out. He thinks it to be before the Talmud of Babylon, and after the Talmud of Jerusalem. St. Jerome knew nothing of it, and 'tis very likely it was composed since the Time of this Father.

Some Jews have pretended, that Onkelos was Son to the Emperor Titus; others that he was this Emperor's Nephew, and the Son of his Sister. Others think that the Author of the Paraphrase that bears Onkelos's Name, was more antient than he whom they would have to have been Titus's Nephew. This, they say, was a great Necromancer, who being desirous to become a Proselyte, raised the Ghosts of Titus, of Balaam, and of Jesus Christ, to propose Questions to 'em, and to obtain Answers from them concerning several Things. Lastly, other Rabbins have maintained, that Onkelos the Paraphrast was the same as Aquila, the famous Greek Interpreter of Scripture. But F. Morin, who acquaints us with all these Particulars, has very well confuted them in his Exercitations upon the Bible, l. ii. Exercit. 8. c. 6.

These are the Reasons that have induced them to believe, that Onkelos was the same as Aquila of Pontus. First the Similitude of Names; for Onkelos and Aquila, or Akilas, are the same Name. Secondly, Aquila as well as Onkelos, was a Proselyte. Thirdly, each of 'em lived at the same Time; that is, about one Hundred and fifty Years after Christ. But to these three Reasons it may be answered; first, that the Difference of the Names of Onkelos and Aquila is sufficient to make them two distinct Persons. Secondly, that the Character of a Proselyte given to Onkelos is not well grounded. Thirdly, that the Time in which Onkelos lived is very different from that of Aquila. For this last lived in the second Century of the Christian Church, whereas Onkelos lived in the Time of Hillel, which was some Time before Jesus Christ. 'Tis true, it is said he lived till after the Death of Gamaliel the Grandson of Hillel, who died eighteen Years before the Destruction of Jerusalem; but however this is far enough from the Time of Aquila. It is true that the Author of Bereshith Rabba wrote a Rabbinical Commentary upon Genesis, and some Rabbins after him talk of the Targum of Aquila; but this Targum is nothing else but the Greek Version of Aquila. Targum in general may be taken either for a Version, or a Paraphrase.

The Targum of Onkelos has always been in great Esteem amongst the Jews. Elias Levita says, that the Jews think themselves obliged to read a Section of the Law every Week in their Synagogues, which is the Lesson of the Week. They read this Section twice, the first Time in the Hebrew Original, and the second Time in the Targum, that is, in Chaldee; and for this they make Use of the Targum of Onkelos. Thus it was read in his Time, that is, in the Beginning of the sixth Century. Hence it was, according to the Observation of the same Author, that this Targum was so well known among them, while the others were very scarce; insomuch that it was not easy to find a Copy of the other Targums in a whole Province, whereas those of Onkelos were very common.

As to what Father Morinus says, that the Targum of Onkelos was not composed till after the Talmud of Jerusalem; the Reasons he assigns only prove, that some Additions had been made to Onkelos's Text, and that some Words had been inserted. But as to the Body of the Work, it cannot be doubted, but that it was wrote about the Time of Jesus Christ. St. Jerome's Silence about this Matter is but a negative Argument, which is of no great Validity. He might not have known it, tho' it were then in being; and he might have known it, and yet neither quote it, nor make any Mention of it.

In many Copies of the Bible, the Jews inserted the Text of the Targum of Onkelos after that of the Bible; and put the same Musical Notes to it, which are in the Hebrew Original; so that it may be read with a kind of Chanting in their Synagogues, at the same Time as the Original, and to the same Tune.

Tho' Onkelos generally follows his Original Word for Word, very closely and in a just Manner; yet however he explains some Passages of the Original which he thought required it. For Example, in most of the Passages of Scripture, wherein the Name Jehovah is found[1], he puts the Word Memra, Verbum Jehovah, the Word of Jehovah; and he distinguishes Memra from Pitgama, which signifies Discourse, ascribing to it even all the Actions of the supreme Deity. 'Tis to this Memra that they ascribe the Creation of the World; 'twas he that appeared to Moses upon Mount Sinai, and gave him the Law. 'Twas to him that Jacob made his Vow, saying: If the Word shall conduct me, and bring me back to the House of my Father, then he shall be my God. 'Twas the same Word that appeared to Abraham in the Plain of Mamre. 'Twas he whom Jacob appealed to as a Witness, between himself and Laban, &c. See the Article MEMRA before.

Onocentaurus

ONOCENTAURUS, a fabulous Animal, supposed to be a Compound of a Man and an Ass. It has the Body of a Man, and the Thighs and Legs of an Ass. St. Jerome makes Use of the Word Onocentaurus in Isaiah[1]: Occurrent Dæmonia Onocentauris. The Demons and the Onocentaures shall meet in the Ruines of the Country of Edom. The Hebrew Text has, the Ziims shall meet with the Jims; which may be thus translated, The Fishers shall there meet with Islands, or the Country shall be laid under Water and forsaken[2].

Ælian, l. vii. c. 9. speaks of Onocentaures. It was half Man and half Ass, as the Centaur was half Man and half Horse. Onocentaure comes from two Greek Words, Onos an Ass, and Centauros a Centaur.

Onocrotalus

[Levit. xi. 18. Kaath.] ONOCROTALUS. Moses puts it among the impure Animals, Levit. xi. 18. The Hebrew reads Kaath, which comes from a Root that signifies to vomit. The Seventy [and the English Version] have translated it by Pelican. This Bird, when it has filled its Stomach with Oysters with their Shells, disgorges them, and takes out the Oysters, when by the Heat of the Stomach the Shells are opened. As for the Onocrotalus; 'tis a Bird much like a Pelican, but which has a Crop or Purse below its Beak, or at the Beginning of its Throat, which is so large, as that sometimes a little Child has been found in it entire. It is called in Hebrew Cos, which signifies a Cup or Dish. See the Article NYCTICORAX.

Onycha

ONYCHA, or Onyx. This Word is found in two different Senses in Scripture. It is put for the odoriferous Nail or Shell, and for the Stone named Onyx. According to the Force of the Etymology, Onyx signifies a Nail of the Finger or Toe. The Hebrew Word Shecheleth[1], which St. Jerome after the Seventy translates by the aromatick Shell or Nail, is by others understood of Laudanum, or Bdellium. But the greatest Part of Commentators explain it by the Onyx, or the odoriferous Shell, which is a Shell like to that of the Shellfish called Purpura. The Onyx is fished for in watry Places of the Indies, where grows the Spica Nardi, which is the Food of this Fish, and what makes its Shell so aromatick. They go to gather these Shells when the Heat has dried up the Marshes. The best Onyx is found in the Red-Sea, and is white and large. The Babylonian is black and smaller. This is what Dioscorides says of it.

OPHEL. We find by Scripture, that at Jerusalem was a Wall and Tower of[1] Ophel. Jotham King of Judah made several Buildings on the Wall, or within the Wall [2 Chron. xxvii. 3. 2 Chron. xxxiii. 14] of Ophel, Manasseh King of Judah built a Wall to the West of Jerusalem and the Fountain Gibon, beyond the City of David, from the Fish-gate as far as Ophel. At the Return from the Captivity, the Nethinims dwelt at Ophel; which gives [Nehem. iii. 26. xi. 21.] Room to guess, that this Wall and Tower were in the Neighbourhood of the Temple, since the Nethinims ought to be at Hand, to be ready at all Times to do their Duty therein. In Micah[2] there is Mention made of the Tower of Ophel: And thou, O Tower of the Flock, the strong Hold of the Daughter of Zion. The Hebrew says, And thou, Tower of the Flock, Ophel, Daughter of Zion, though some translate Ophel by Bulwark, or strong Hold. There was at Jerusalem a Sheep-gate, and a Tower of Ophel. Josephus[3] speaks of Ophlas, which is the same as Ophel; and it seems to me, by what he says of it, that it must be near the Temple.

Ophir (I)

I. OPHIR, Son of Joktan. Moses says, [Gen. x. 26.— 30.] that the Dwelling of the Sons of Joktan was extended from Mesha to Sephar, a Mountain of the East. We think Mesha to be Mount Masius in Mesopotamia; and that Mount Sephar is the Country of the Sepharvaites, or Saspires, which divided Media from Cholchis. The Scripture does not acquaint us who were the Descendants of Ophir, nor what particular Province was peopled by him between Mesha and Sephar; but it cannot be doubted that the Country of Ophir, whatever Country that was, was that which was peopled by the Posterity of Ophir Son of Joktan.

Ophir (II)

II. OPHIR, a Country much celebrated in Scripture, and about which the Criticks have proposed a great Number of Conjectures. 'Tis agreed with great Reason, that this is the Country that was peopled by Ophir the Son of Joktan, of whom we have now made Mention; and Moses lets us know, that the thirteen Sons of Joktan dwelt from Mesha to Sephar, a Mountain of the East. But as Mesha and Sephar are Places as much unknown as Ophir it self, there was a Necessity of taking another Method to discover the Country of Ophir. All the Passages have been examined in which Mention is made of this Country, and it has been observed, that the same Ships that went to Tharshish, went also to Ophir[1]; that these Ships set out from Ezion-geber, a Port of the Red-Sea; that three Years were required for Solomon's Fleet to make the Voyage of Ophir; that this Fleet returned freighted with Gold, Peacocks, Apes, Spices, Ivory, and Ebony[2]; lastly, that the Gold of Ophir was in more Esteem than any other Gold mentioned in Scripture, and that the Country of Ophir more abounded with Gold than any other that was then known. By these Tokens they have undertaken to search for Ophir, but almost all the Interpreters have taken different Ways.

Josephus says[3], that the Country of Opher is in the Indies, and that it is called the Gold Country. 'Tis thought he means Chersonesus Aurea, known now by the Name of Malacca, a Peninsula opposite to Sumatra. Lucas Holstenius[4], after many Enquiries, thinks we must fix upon India in General, or at the City of Supar in the Island of Celebos. Others place it in the Kingdom of Malabar, or of Ceilon, or in the Isle of Tapobrana, so famous among the Antients. Bochart has laboured to support this Opinion. Eupolemus[5] has placed Ophir in the Island Durphe in the Red-Sea. Masseus believed it was Pegu, and 'tis said the Peguans pretend to be descended from those Jews, that Solomon sent to work the Mines of this Country. Lipenius, who has composed a particular Treatise concerning the Country of Ophir, places it beyond the Ganges, at Malacca, Java, Sumatra, Siam, Bengal, Pegu, &c. Others[6] have sought for the Country of Ophir in America, and have placed it in the Island called Hispaniola. Christopher Columbus, who first discovered this Island in 1492, was used to say he had found the Ophir of Solomon. He saw there deep Caverns, which went under Ground for above sixteen Miles, from whence he thought Solomon might have dug up his Gold. Postel and some others have placed it in Peru, a Country famous for its vast Quantity of Gold. Others have searched for it in Africa. They say that the Inhabitants of Melinda or Sofala, on the Eastern Coast of Ethiopia, have it by Tradition, and even have Books which affirm, that Solomon every three Years sent his Fleet thither, to fetch Gold, which is in great Plenty there. John Dos Santos relates, that in Monomotapa there is a Mountain called Fura, where there are excellent Mines; that upon the same Mountain there is an old Castle, which by Tradition is said to have been the Habitation of the Queen of Sheba; and that this Country is the real Ophir. Others place it at Angola, upon the Eastern Coast of Africa; others at Carthage, though this City was not built till a long Time after Solomon. Others have placed it in Spain.

Grotius[7] guesses, that Solomon's Fleet did not perhaps go to the Indies, but only to a Port of a City of Arabia, by Arrian called Aphar, by Pliny Saphar, by Ptolemy Sapphera, and by Stephanus Saphinira. This City was situated upon the Coasts of Arabia that were washed by the Ocean. That the Indians brought their Merchandizes thither, and that Solomon's Navy went thither to bring them home. Huetius in his Dissertation upon the Navigation of Solomon, says the Land of Ophir was upon the Eastern Coast of Africa, which the Arabians call Zanguebar; that the Name Ophir was given more particularly to the small Country of Sophala, which is upon the same Coast; that Solomon's Fleet went out of the Red-Sea, and from the Harbour of Ezion-geber, entered into the Mediterranean Sea by the Canal of Communication which joined the two Seas; that it doubled the Cape of Guadarfay, and coasted along Africa to come to Sophala: That there was found in Abundance whatever was brought to Solomon by this Voyage.

But we have shewn in our Dissertation upon the Land of Ophir, printed before our Commentary upon Genesis, that the Canal of Communication between the Red-Sea and Mediterranean, was not finished till a long Time after the Age of Solomon. See also Marsham, Canon Ægyptiac. Sæcul. 15.

Geropius Becanus and Bivarius, suppose Solomon's Fleet not to depart from the Red- Sea, but from the Mediterranean. They pretend that the Port of Ezion-geber was upon the Sea last mentioned. They say that Ezion -geber, according to Scripture, was in [1 Kings ix. 26. 2 Chron. viii. 17.] Idumea; that Idumea bordered upon the Mediterranean; that upon this Sea is found Gaston-gabria in Strabo, and Beto-gabria in Ptolemy; which City is probably the same as Ezion-geber. True it is, that the Scripture places the City of Ezion-geber upon the Red-Sea, or according to the Hebrew the Sea of Zuph: But they pretend that this Name may express in General the Sea of Limits, which will as well agree to the Mediterranean as to the Red-Sea. Hornius[8] does not disapprove this Opinion; but it is easy to confute it by two or three Arguments.

The Sea of Zuph is never taken but for the Red-Sea. Zuph signifies Rushes or Sea Moss.

Ezion-geber was upon the Gulph of Elath, upon the Red-Sea. This can admit of no Difficulty.

Idumea might extend as far as the Mediterranean Sea in the Time of Ptolemy the Geographer; but in the Time of Solomon, and a great while after, it extended into Arabia Petrea, towards Elath and Ezion-geber. The Abbot de Choisy[14] is much inclined to the Opinion of those that would place Ophir in the Kingdom of Siam. In this Kingdom and round about it are found all those Things, that Solomon's Navy went to fetch from Ophir; and the Voyage is long enough for three Years, between this Place and Ezion-geber.

But we have taken a new Course in Quest of the Country here inquired for. We think that Ophir the Son of Joktan, with his Brethren, peopled the Countries that lie between the Mountain Masius and the Mountains of Saphar, which are probably those of the Tapires or Saspires, towards Armenia, Media, and the Sources of the Tigris and Euphrates; for we do not pretend at this Day to assign the Limits of those Countries. We shall content our selves with pointing out pretty near where the Place was. Eustathius of Antioch[9], as well as we, places Ophir in Armenia. The Emperor Justinian divided Armenia into four Parts, and one of these Parts was called Sophara. Strabo puts upon the Phasis a People called Sarapenes[10]. Quadratus speaks of the Obarenians[11] upon the River Cyrus; and Pliny the Suarni, situated between the Caspiæ Portæ, the Gordian Mountains, and the Euxin Sea. The Gold of Pharvaim, or of Sepharvaim, is the same as the Gold of Ophir[12]. An S has often been added to the Beginning of Words to shew their Aspiration; and the Septuagint sometimes reads Sophir for Ophir. Sepharvaim has much Relation to Mount Saphar mentioned by Moses. Perhaps to this will be replied these three Things. First, that in the Country where we place Ophir all the Things are not to be found, that Solomon fetched home by his Fleet. Secondly, that this Country does not border upon the Sea, nor could there be any passing thither with a Fleet. Thirdly, that this could not be a three Years Voyage. But I answer, that the Fleet of Solomon in its Voyage of three Years, that is, which returned the third Year after its Departure, stopped at several Harbours, in each of which it took in such Things as were necessary. It took in Apes, Ebony, and Parrots upon the Coasts of Ethiopia. It took in Gold at Ophir, or at the Place of Traffick, whither the People of Ophir resorted. It might also find Ivory there, or if you please in some of the Ports of Arabia, where also it might be supplied with Spices in great Quantity: For this Fleet, after its Departure from Ezion-geber, might trade to both Sides of the Red-Sea, upon the Coasts of Arabia and Ethiopia; it might even visit the Parts of Ethiopia which are beyond the Straits, when it had entered into the Ocean. Thence it might coast between the two Sides of Arabia which are washed by the Ocean, and might pick up whatever Curiosities were to be found in those Countries. Thence it entered into the Persian Gulph, and might visit all the Places of Trade on both the Shores of this Sea, and thence run up the Tigris or Euphrates, as far as these Rivers were navigable.

The Antients tell us the Names of several Places of Traffick upon the Tigris and Euphrates, which were heretofore famous, before they had raised Banks upon the Tigris, or made Out-lets in the Euphrates, which afterwards interrupted the Navigation of those Rivers, or made it more difficult. Strabo may be perused upon this Head, in the first Book of his Geography, in more Places than one. The Gerræans, who dwelt upon the Shores of the Persian Gulph, used to go up the Euphrates with their Floats as far as the City of Thapsacus. Thus though the Countries we mention were not Maritime, yet they might go to 'em by Sea, by going up the Tigris or Euphrates, as we have said. And though it should be true, that Ophir was situated upon neither of these Rivers; yet if it were within Reach so as that Goods might be brought thither from them, it would be sufficient to justifie our Hypothesis. Lastly, though it might be true that three Years were more than enough to perform this Voyage; 'tis very possible that about thirty Months might be employed in it, that is, two Summers and one Winter, by supposing, as is very probable, the Fleet stopped at several Ports to make a trading Voyage, by selling or exchanging their Merchandize for what they wanted.

Before the Reign of David the Hebrews

Vid. 1 Kings ix. 26. 2 Chron. viii. 17. 1 Kings xi. 15, 16. 1 Chron. xviii. 13. did not much apply themselves to Trade by Sea. The Canaanites or Phœnicians were then in Possession of all the Commerce of the Mediterranean; and as the Hebrews had little or no Territory on the Shore of this Sea, and nothing at all on the Ocean, it is not to be wondered at that they did not think of making Sea Voyages. Besides, from Joshua's Time to David, they had hardly any Enjoyment of Peace, so that they were not in any Condition of applying themselves to Navigation. But after David had made a Conquest of Idumæa, and was become Master of Elath, and of Ezion-geber upon the Red-Sea[13]; he considered the Advantage that their Situation afforded for the Trade of the Ocean. He set out Fleets, and it is very probable, that from their Voyages he obtained the three Thousand Talents of Gold that he bequeathed to the building of the Temple. Tria millia talenta de auro Ophir, —— ad deaurandos [1 Chron: xxix. 4.] parietes templi.

After the Death of his Father, Solomon continued the same Traffick to Ophir from whence his Fleet in one Voyage alone brought four Hundred and fifty Talents of [2 Chron. viii. 18. 2 Chron. viii. 17.] Gold. He improved and carried to Perfection what his Father had begun at Elath and Ezion-geber. He went in Person to these Cities, ordered Ships to be built there, caused those two Harbours to be fortified, and gave the necessary Orders, not only that the Trade of Ophir might be effectually carried on, but also might be extended to such other Places, to which the Red-Sea opened him a Passage. And in Order to furnish the Cities of Elath and Ezion-geber with Inhabitants that might be qualified to carry on his Designs, he brought thither from the maritime Places of Palestine, as many Seafaring People as he possibly could, especially Tyrians, with whom his good Friend and Ally King Hiram supplied him in great Numbers. This was the chief Source of those immense Riches that King Solomon acquired, in which, as well as in Wisdom, he exceeded all the Kings of his Time, having made Silver as common at Jerusalem as the Stones in the Street.

Solomon's Successors the Kings of Judah, who had Idumæa to their Share, still carried on this Traffick. They made Use of the Port of Ezion-geber, down to the Times of Jehoshaphat. But this King having here prepared a Fleet to go to Ophir, in Conjunction with Ahaziah King of Israel, and this Fleet being there destroyed, it sunk a great Part of the Reputation of this Harbour. At the Entrance of this Haven there was a Chain of Rocks, upon which the Fleet was driven by the Winds when it attempted tempted to go out of the Port, and was there dashed to Pieces. This Storm was raised by the express Appointment of God, to punish Jehoshaphat for entering into a League with the idolatrous King of Israel. The Year after Jehoshaphat fitted out another Fleet from the Port [See 1 Kings xxii. 49. 2 Chron. xx. 36, 37.] of Elath, to go to Ophir, and would not let Ahaziah have any Share in the Undertaking.

Under Jehoram, Son and Successor of Jehoshaphat, the Idumæans revolting against Judah [2 Kings viii. 20, 22.] , obtained their Liberty, and the Kings of Judah lost the Cities of Elath and Ezion-geber, by the Help of which they had carried on their Trade to Ophir. But Uzziah or (Azariah) King [2 Kings xiv. 22. 2 Chron xxvi. 2.] of Judah having recovered Elath at the Beginning of his Reign, fortified it a new, peopled it with his own Subjects, and restored the Trade of Ophir, which was continued to the Reign of Ahaz. Then Rezin King of Damascus surprized Elath, drove out the Jews that were settled there, put Syrians in their Place, with a Design of carrying on the Trade to Ophir, and the South-Sea, to his own Advantage. But the Year following Tiglath-pileser made a Conquest of Elath from Rezin, and preserved the Property of the Trade to himself. After this Time the Affairs of the Jews would no longer allow them to think of Ophir, or of extending their Commerce by Sea. Nor do I so much as find the Name mentioned in their Books, which were written after the Captivity of Babylon.

Upon this whole Matter may be consulted, either the Authors above cited, the Commentators upon the first Book of Kings, Ch. ix. and our Dissertation upon the Land of Ophir before our Commentary upon Genesis.

Ophlias

OPHLIAS, or Oblias. This is a Name that was given to St. James Minor. Eusebius, Epiphanius, the false Abdias[1], Nicephorus, read Oblias; others Joblias, others Ophlias. The Learned are not agreed about the Signification of the Word. Some would have it read Hosleam[2], the Strength of the People. Others[3] Hapleam, the Tow-er of the People. Others[4] Chablia, the Pilate of the People. I conceive that Ophlia was the real Name given to this holy Apostle. The Grecians have put B instead of ph, because in their Tongue B is pronounced with an Aspiration, pretty much like a φ. In Michah iv. 8. there is Mention made of Ophel. Et tu turris gregis nebulosa filiæ Sion. The Hebrew is, Et tu turris gregis, Ophel filiæ Sion. Ophel is spoke of, 2 Chron. xxxiii. 14. as of a Part of the Walls of Jerusalem. The Nethinims had their Dwelling there, as it appears from Nehem. iii. 26. Ophlia literally signifies, the Eminency or Fortress of God; and Ophelam, the Fortress of the People. See OPHEL.

Ophni

OPHNI, a City of the Tribe of Benjamin[1]. This is probably the same as Gophni or Gophna. For in Hebrew the Letter ע*Hain* is often pronounced as a G. But Gophna, according to Josephus, was about fifteen Miles from Jerusalem, towards Naplouse or Shechem[2]. Elsewhere he saysk, it was five Miles from Geba, or Gabaa. Josephus often speaks of Gophna, and of the Toparchy of Gophna, and all he says agrees very well with the Position of Eusebius. For Example, he says that Vespasian having subdued the Country of Gophna, brought also Bethel and Ephraim into Subjection[3]. He says in another Place[4], that Titus advancing from Samaria towards Jerusalem, passed by Gophna.

Oracle

ORACLE. St. Jerome commonly translates by Oraculum, what in many other Places he calls Propitiatorium. The Hebrew Word Caphoreth[1] comes from the Verb Caphar, which signifies to expiate, to pardon Sins, to cover, to harden any Thing. This Word may be rendered by a Covering; and indeed it was the Cover of the Ark of the Covenant, or of the sacred Chest in which the Laws of the Covenant were shut up. At the two Ends of this Cover were two Cherubims of massy beaten Gold, which stretching out their Wings forwards towards each other, formed a kind of Throne, upon which they conceived the Lord to sit. Hence it comes that they invoked him sometimes by this Name. Qui sedes super Cherubim. And perhaps by translating Caphoreth. by Propitiatory, [or Mercy-Seat] it may be insinuated, that from thence the Lord hears the Vows and Prayers of his People, and pardons them their Sins. And by translating it Oracle they would shew, that 'twas from thence he manifested his Will and Pleasure, and gave Responses to Moses.

Oracle is also taken for the Sanctuary, or for the Place wherein the Ark of the Covenant was deposited. The Hebrew Word is Dabir, and the Septuagint have preserved this Term[2]. Aquila and Symmachus have rendered it by Chrematisterion, which signifies an Oracle. The Chaldee, the House of Propitiation. But Dabir properly signifies an Oracle.

Oracle is also put for the Oracles of false[3] Gods. Ezekiel says[4], that the King of Babylon coming towards Judea, and finding himself upon a cross Way, consulted his Teraphims, and mingled his Arrows, to know if he should march against Jerusalem, and that the Jews derided him, and look'd upon him as one that in vain consults an Oracle.

The Hebrew says literally, as a Man that in vain exercises Divination or Magick. The most famous of all the Oracles of Palestine was that of Baal-zebub King of Ekron, which the Jews themselves often went to consult. There were, also Teraphims, as that of Micah mention'd in [Judg. xv. 1, 5. xviii. 14, &c. Judg. vii. 27.] the Book of Judges, the Ephod made by Gideon, and the false Gods adored in the Kingdom of Samaria, which had their false Prophets, and consequently their Oracles; whether these Oracles were really delivered by the Assistance of the Devil, or that the Priests and false Prophets imposed upon the People, making them believe they were inspired, though they only spoke by their own seducing Spirit.

Among the Jews we may distinguish several sorts of real Oracles. They had first Oracles that were delivered vivâ voce, as when God spake to Moses Face to Face, [Numb. xii. 8.] and as one Friend speaks to another. Secondly, Prophetical Dreams sent by God; as the Dreams which God sent to Joseph, and which foretold his future Greatness. Thirdly, [Gen. xxxvii. 5, 6.] Visions; as when a Prophet in an Extasy, being neither properly asleep or awake, had supernatural Revelations. Fourthly, the Oracle of Urim and Thummim, which were [Numb. xii. 6. Joel ii. 28.] accompanied with the Ephod or the Pectoral worn by the High Priest, and which God had endued with the Gift of foretelling Things to come. This Manner of enquiring of the Lord was often made use of, from Joshua's Time to the Erection of the Temple at Jerusalem. Fifthly, after the building of the Temple they generally consulted the Prophets, who were frequent in the Kingdoms of Judah and Israel. From Haggai, Zechariah, and Malachi, who are the last of the Prophets that have any of their Writings remaining, the Jews pretend that God gave them what they call Bathcol, the Daughter of the Voice, which was a supernatural Manifestation of the Will of God, which was performed either by a strong Inspiration or internal Voice, or else by a sensible and external Voice, which was heard by a Number of Persons sufficient to bear Testimony of it. For Example, such was the Voice that was heard at the Baptism of Jesus Christ, saying, This is my beloved Son, &c. [John xiv. 16.] In the Christian Church the Gifts of Prophecy and Inspiration were very common; and God has permitted, that since the Birth of his Son the greatest Part of the Heathen Oracles are fallen into Contempt, and have been put to silence. Our Saviour has promised to his Church his perpetual Assistance, that the Holy Ghost should not forsake it, and that he would be in the midst of those that should assemble together in his [Matt. iii. 17. Matt. xvi. 8.] Name. He has said that the Gates of Hell should never prevail against her. Relying upon these Promises, we think the Church is infallible in her Decisions and in her Oracles, concerning the Truth of Points of Faith, as being enlightned and directed by the Holy Ghost .

Much has been wrote upon the Subject of Oracles, for some time last past, and the Learned have been much divided in this Matter. Some have ascribed to Demons all the Oracles of Antiquity; others have imputed them to the Knavery of the Priests, and lastly, others have pretended that there were several kinds of Oracles: Some were Illusions and Tricks of the Devil, others were the Effects of the Juggling and Contrivance of the Priests. The Scripture affords us Examples of all these sorts of Oracles. Balaam at the Instigation of his own Spirit, and urged on by his Avarice, fearing to lose the Recompence that he was promised by Balak King of the Moabites, suggests a diabolical Expedient to this Prince, of making the Israelites to fall into Idolatry and Fornication, by which he assures him of a certain Victory, [Numb. xxxi. 16.] or at least of a considerable Advantage against the People of God.

[1 Kings xxii. 21; &c.] Michajah the Son of Imlah, a Prophet of the Lord, says, that he saw the Almighty sitting upon his Throne, and all the Host of Heaven round about him; and the Lord said, who shall tempt Ahab King of Israel, that he may go to War with Ramoth-gilead, and fall in the Battle. One answer'd after one Manner, and another in another. At the same time an evil Spirit presented himself before the Lord, and said, I will seduce him. And the Lord ask'd him how? To which Satan answered, I will go and be a lying Spirit in the Mouth of his Prophets. And the Lord said, Go, and thou shalt prevail. This Dialogue clearly proves these two Things, First that the Devil could do nothing by [Deut. xiii. 1.] his own Power; and secondly, that with the Permission of God, he could inspire the false Prophets, Sorcerers, and Magicians, and make them deliver false Oracles. The Number of false Prophets was always very great in Israel. The true Prophets of the Lord continually inveighed against them. These Deceivers spoke in the Name of the Lord, though the Lord had not sent them. Moses forewarns that false Prophets and Dreamers should arise in Israel, who would foretell Things to come, and that their Predictions should be verified by the Event. It cannot be doubted, but that among other Nations, Barbarians and Idolaters, the Devil had still a greater Power, and a greater Number of Disciples. It cannot therefore be doubted, but that the Devil uttered many Oracles by their Mouths.

Baal-zebub the God of Ekron was in great Reputation for delivering Oracles, since Ahaziah King of Israel, having had a Fall through the Lattice of his House, and [2 Kings i. 2, 3.] being dangerously wounded, sent to consult this false Deity, and to know whether he should recover from his Bruises. But Elijah received a Command from God to meet the Messengers of Ahaziah, and to say to them, Is there no God in Israel, that you must go to consult Baal-zebub the God of Ekron? Therefore thus saith the Lord: You shall not rise again from the Bed on which you lie, but you shall surely die. This was an Oracle of the Lord, by which he prevented that of the Devil.

The Idol Bel, which was worshipped at Babylon[5] as a living, eating, and drinking God, very probably also gave out Oracles. At least it had been easy to have perswaded the People of this, since they and their King believed, that this Idol eat and drank up every Night what had been offer'd to him the Day before.

We read in Scripture, that some Families of the Tribe of Dan seeking a Settlement out of their own Country, sent out some upon the Discovery, to find a proper Place for them to dwell in. These Messengers [Judg. xviii. 5, 6, 7.] pass'd by the House of one call'd Micah, who had in his Service a young Levite, to take Care of his Domestick Chapel, and to consult a superstitious Figure that he had made. The young Levite answer'd them boldly; Go in Peace; before the Lord is your Way, wherein ye go. They went and succeeded according to their Wishes. Can we say, that this Levite was inspired of God, and that he pronounced this Oracle from him? This is hardly probable, and it is much more likely, that he made this Answer from himself, or that he was moved by a lying Spirit.

It cannot be denied that the Pagans addres'd themselves to their Idols, to receive [Hos. iv. 12. Wisd. xiii. 16, 17.] Oracles from them. They had therefore sometimes Responses from them; for can there be any so senseless as to ask, where they know it is absolutely impossible to receive an Answer? The Prophet Hosea reproached the Israelites with consulting their wooden Idols, and acknowledges at the same time, that this Staff returned them an Answer. My People asketh Counsel of their Stocks, and their Staff declareth unto them. They consulted wooden Idols, and made Auguries concerning the future, by mingling certain Arrows or Wands together. See Ezek, xxi. 21. The Author of the Book of Wisdom says, that when a Man had cut down a Tree from the Forest, after he had taken from it wherewithal to warm himself, he makes an Idol of the Remainder, which he is so foolish as to consult about his most important Affairs, and addresses himself to the Trunk of a Tree, which is not capable of hearing him. De substantia sua, & de filiis suis, & de nuptiis, votum faciens inquirit, &c.

[Hab. ii. 19. Psal. cxiv. 5. cxxxv. 16.] Habakkuk testifies the same thing. Wo unto him that saith to the Wood, Awake; to the dumb Stone, Arise, it shall teach. The Psalmist, in that Passage wherein he says, that Idols have a Mouth, and yet speak not, Ears and yet hear not, &c. proves that the Heathen had the Simplicity to consult them, as if they had been animated and capable of Sense, of Discourse, hearing and answering. For, as was said before, whole Nations would not have addres'd themselves to a Stone, to have received Answers from it, had they not had some Experience, that at sometimes it had given them Answers.

As to the Hebrews, who lived in the midst of these idolatrous People accustomed to receive Oracles, to have Recourse to their Diviners, Magicians, and their Interpreters of Dreams, what Temptation would they not have been under to imitate these Practices, these Impieties and Superstitions, if God had not provided against it, by affording them certain Means of knowing some future Events, in their most urgent Necessities, by having Recourse to the Lord, to his Priests and Prophets. Thus when Moses had forbid the Israelites to consult Magicians, Witches, Enchanters, and Necromancers, he promised to send them a Prophet of their own Nation, who should instruct them, and discover the Truth to [Deut. xviii. 10, 11, &c.] them. The Lord thy God will raise up unto thee a Prophet from the midst of thee, of thy Brethren like unto me; unto him ye shall hearken.

And these Oracles of Truth had no necessary Connexion either with Time or Place, or any other Circumstance, or with the personal Merit of the Person by whom they were uttered. The High Priest cloath'd with the Ephod and Pectoral gave a true Answer, whatever was the Merit of his Life. Sometime he gave an Answer without knowing clearly himself what was the Subject of the Question he was consulted about. Caiphas pronounces an Oracle relating to Jesus Christ, whom he hated, and whose Destruction he desired, and an Oracle which he understood not himself. For he [John xi. 49,50, 51.] says, Ye know nothing at all, nor consider that it is expedient for us, that one Man should die for the People, and that the whole Nation perish not. To which is added, and this spake he not of himself, but being High Priest that Year, he prophesied that Jesus should die for that Nation. And when the High Priest Ahimelech was consulted by David, he gave him an Answer though [2 Sam. xxi. 13. xxii. 15. Mic ii. 11.] David did not plainly acquaint him with the Occasion of his Journey. Micah says, that the Heads thereof judge for Reward, and the Priests thereof teach for Hire, and the Prophets thereof divine for Money, yet nevertheless the Prophets declared the Truth to them. At the Day of Judgment many will say to Jesus Christ, Lord, Lord, [Matt. vii. 22.] have we not prophesy'd in thy Name, and in thy Name have cast out Devils, and in thy Name have done many wonderful Works? Yet for all this he will say to them, I never knew you.

The Fathers inform us, that at the coming of the Messiah, all the Oracles of the Heathens were struck dumb. It is plain, that after the preaching of the Gospel, and ever since, the Empire of the Devil is very much contracted and weakened, and that the most famous Oracles are insensibly fallen into Contempt. The Light of Faith has opened the Eyes of the converted Pagans, and the Evidence of the Miracles of the Apostles and first Christians, has brought into Discredit the false Miracles and Impostures of the Priests of the Pagan Deities. But it must be allowed, that this Silence of the Oracles did not happen all at once, and that a good while after our Saviour's Time there were still Impostors, who gave out pretended Oracles, and the Devil still uttered them in the Temples of their [Rev. xiii. 5, 6, 13, 14, 15.] Idols. St. John in his Revelations, describing the Persecution of the Church which was to happen under Julian the Apostate, speaks of the Signs, Wonders, and Delusions, which this Deceiver and his Accomplices should produce to the World, to prevail with Men to worship the Image of the Beast, and to entice them to Idolatry.

OREB, one of the Princes of the Midianites, who was kill'd with Zeb, another Prince of the same People. While Gideon pursued the Army of the Midianites, he sent Word to the Men of Ephraim, that they should secure the Passes of the Jordan, that the Midianites by Flight might not return into their own Country. The Ephraimites therefore guarding the Passes, took the two Chiefs of the Midianites, and kill'd Oreb at the Rock of Oreb, and Zeb at the Wine-press of Zeb. Some think that Oreb, or the Rock of Oreb, was a Village, or at least that from this Time one was begun to be formed there. Eusebius and St. Jerom speak of a little Place called Araba, three Miles from Scythopolis, towards the West; and Herman Vanderhart thinks it was there that the Orebim dwelt, who fed the Prophet Elijah concealed near the Brook of Cherith. ORION. A Constellation in the Heavens just before the Sign Taurus. The Hebrew Word Chesil signifies, according to the ancient Hebrews, that Star of the second Magnitude which Astronomers call the Scorpions Heart. It appears at the beginning of the Autumnal Equinox, and forebodes Cold or Frost. Virgil give it the Epithet of nimbosus Orion. It also marks out the West. Hence it comes that the Seventy upon Job ix. 9. and Theodotion upon Amos, v. 8. translate it by vesperum.

Ornan

ORNAN, or Araunah, or Araniah, a Jebusite, to whom belonged the Soil or Area, upon which Solomon built the Temple of Jerusalem. While the Lord was provoked against David, who had taken the Number of the People, this Prince perceived the Angel of the Lord standing over the Floor of Ornan, holding in his Hand a naked Sword, and threatning Jerusalem. Then David and all that were with him fell upon their Faces; and the Angel of the Lord bid the Prophet Gad to give Notice to the King, that he should transport himself to the Floor of Ornan, and there erect an Altar, and sacrifice to the Lord. David presently obey'd; and Ornan, who was then threshing Corn in his Floor with his four Sons, perceiving the Angel, was seised with Fear and hid himself. After which Ornan seeing the King come towards him, he went to meet him, and prostrated himself before him. David said to him, " Let me have the Place of your " Threshing-Floor, that I may there build " an Altar to the Lord, that he may cease " to smite the People. Ornan reply'd, that the King might dispose as he pleased of his[1] Threshing-floor, and that he would also furnish Oxen for a Burnt-sacrifice, Wood for the Fire, and Corn for the Offering that was to accompany the Sacrifice. But David answered him, that he did not intend to receive any thing gratis, but that he would pay him the full Value of his Floor. He therefore gave him six hundred Shekels of Gold for the Ground. In the second Book of Samuel it is said, that [2 Sam. xxiv. 24.] David bought the Oxen and the Floor of Ornan for the Sum of fifty Shekels of Silver. This may be reconciled by supposing that at first he only bought the Floor and the Oxen, for which he gave fifty Shekels of Silver; but that afterwards having bought the whole Inheritance of Ornan, he added six hundred Shekels of Gold more to the Price. It may be seen under the Article ARAUNAH, which is the same as Ornan, what we have already said concerning him. Josephus calls him Orphona, Antiq. l. vii. c. 3.

Osiris

OSIRIS, a famous God of the Egyptians, which was said to be the Son, the Brother, and the Husband of the Goddess Isis. The Name Osiris is not read in the sacred Scriptures, but we can hardly be excused from taking notice of it here, that it may not be confounded with the Persons that are mentioned in Holy Writ; and besides there is Reason to believe, that the Hebrews paid divine Worship to this Deity in the Wilderness. Now this is what is said of Osiris. He was Son of Jupiter and of Niobe, the Daughter of Phoroneus. He reigned at first in Argos, but being discontented with his Subjects, he left his Crown with his Son Ægialeus, and pass'd into Egypt. There he reigned with great Equity and Mildness, and compiled very good Laws for his Subjects. He married Io, whom the Egyptians call Isis. 'Tis said he was pull'd in pieces by his Enemies, and that his Wife Isis gathered all his Parts together, buried them honorably, and procured divine Honours to be paid to her Husband. 'Tis pretended he was transformed by the Gods into an Ox, according to the Principles of the Metempsychosis; and that it is he whom the Egyptians adored under the Name of Apis and Serapis. Hence proceeds the great Veneration that the Egyptians testified for a Bull, and the Worship of the Golden Calf by the Israelites in the Desart, and by the Subjects of Jeroboam in the Kingdom of the Ten Tribes. Hence the Images of Osiris with Horns, or with the Head of an Hawk, or of a Wolf, or of a Serpent, because it is pretended he was the Sun. There are Authors that believe the Worship of Cows, still common in the Indies, and in some other Places of the East, is derived from the Honours paid by the Egyptians to Osiris and Isis.

They gave the Name of Osiris to the Nile, and paid divine Honours to it, as being the Author of all the Fertility of Egypt. 'Tis said Osiris taught the Egyptians Agriculture, and many other useful Arts, which made him so much honoured by them. Hellanicus says, that the proper Name of this God was Arsaphes, and that the Priests gave him that of Osiris. Pliny confounds Osiris, Pan, Serapis, and Ammon. Sir John Marsham thinks, that Osiris is Menes or Ham. Vossius takes him for Mizraim the Son of Ham, and Father of the Egyptians. He has been taken for the Sun, for the Planet Jupiter, for Apis, for Athys, for Adonis, for Pluto, for Titan, for Apollo, for Mithras, for Typhon, for the Ocean, &c.

The Egyptians admitted of two Principles in the World, one good, and the other bad. In the good Principle they acknowledg'd three things, one of which had the Quality and Office of Father, the other of Mother, and the third that of Son. The Father was called Osiris, the Mother Isis, and the Son Orus. These three Deities were acknowledged in the good Principle. The bad Principle was Typhon. Osiris was in the World what in Man is called Reason and Thinking. Typhon was in the Place of those Passions which are contrary to Reason. In the human Body the good Temperament proceeded from Osiris, but Diseases and Indispositions proceeded from Typhon as their Cause. In Heaven and in the Elements, good Order and Regularity of Motion represented Osiris; and whatever was contrary to this good Order was the Image of Typhon. This, according to Plutarch, was the Notion that the Egyptians had of the Deity. Perhaps all this may be a new Invention; but however that is, 'tis probably according to this Notion, that Osiris and Isis were the Father and Mother of all Things, that the Heathen ascribed to Osiris the Properties of almost all the Gods, and to Isis those of all the Goddesses.

It is very probable that the Deities which the Children of Israel carried along with them in the Wilderness, and which Amos reproaches them with, were Isis and Osiris. But ye have born the Tabernacle of your Moloch; according to the Letter of your King, and Chiun your Images, the Star of your God, which ye made to yourselves. The King of Heaven was the Sun, or Osiris; the Star which the Egyptians and almost all the Eastern People adored, was the Moon. The Sun and Moon were the Gods of Happiness and good Fortune. They were good Principles, the chief Objects of the Worship of the Orientals, as Vossius imagines. Osiris and Isis were the same thing as Gad and Meni, to whom the Hebrews paid an idolatrous Worship, as to the two Principles of Good. See their Articles.

Ossifraga

OSSIFRAGA, a kind of Eagle, whose Flesh is forbid in Lev. xi. 13. under the Name of Gryphon. The Ossifraga, or Ospray[1], is thus called, because it breaks the Bones of Animals, in order to come to the Marrow. 'Tis said to dig up Bodies in Church-yards, or Burying-places[2], to eat what it finds in the Bones, which has been the Occasion that the Latins called it Avis bustaria, and the Persians, Ustukhan-khour, the Bone-eater. By the French it is called Orfraye, and by the English, Osprey.

The Arabians and Persians also call it Humai, and say it is the most innocent of all Birds, because it does no Harm to any Animal, and only feeds upon dead Bones.

Aristotle says, that the Ossifraga is the greatest of Eagles, except those of Germany. Its Plumage is of an Ash-colour, approaching towards white. Pliny says, that is produced by the Sea-eagle, which ingenders with all Birds of Prey. She does not only feed her own Young, but those also that any other Eagle has forsaken. Her Sight is but weak, which is contrary to the Nature of other Eagles.

This is the Description that Aldrovand gives us of the Ossifraga. Its Beak is exceeding crooked, and in the Place where it is hooked, it is two Fingers broad, and about an handful long. Its Colour is like brown Horn, drawing towards dark-blue. The opening of its Beak is about a Hands breadth, the Tongue is like that of a Man, and broad at the End, and on the two Sides it has two Hooks made like Fish-hooks. Its Head and Neck are covered with long narrow Feathers, and from its Chin hang down small Hairs like a Beard. The Ground of its Plumage is diversify'd by three Colours, whitish, dark, and ruddy; the great Feathers are of a brown Colour, a little inclining towards Chesnut. The twelve Feathers of its Tail are a little reddish, and spotted with black and white. Its Legs are covered with dark Feathers a little ruddy, so that there remains but a small Part of the Legs uncover'd of about two Fingers breadth. This Part that is uncovered is of a very fine yellow. Its Talons are black and shining. Aldrovand says, this Bird only feeds upon Fish; so that it must be very different from the Ossifraga here mentioned. But indeed, the whole that is said of the Ossifraga, or Bone-eater, seems to be very fabulous.

The Osprey called in Latin, Strix, is of the Bigness of a moderate Duck. Its Head is thick and round, and it is covered before with small fine Feathers, set round in a Circle. It has large Eyes, the Ball large and black, the Iris or Circle between the White and the Apple of the Eye, of a pale yellow, contrary to what is common to others, which generally have it more covered and more glowing; its Beak is crooked, and of the Colour of brown Horn. All the Ground of its Plumage is of a rusty Colour, diversified with brown Spots. Its Legs are hairy down to the Nails of its Pounces, like the Feet of an Hare. Its Talons are very black, and a little crooked; and the Claws of its Feet are divided like those of a Roe-buck.

Ostrich

OSTRICH in Latin, Struthio. 'Tis often mentioned in Scripture. Moses forbids the Use of it to the Hebrews[1]. Interpreters are not agreed about the Signification of the Hebrew Word Jaanah[2], which the Seventy, St. Jerom, Aquila, Symmachus, and Theodotion have rendered by Ostrich. Several of the Moderns take it for the Owl, Ulula. We have proposed some Conjectures upon Isai. xiii, 21. to prove it is the Swan. See Job xxx. 29. Isai. xxxiv. 13. xliii. 20. Jerem. l. 39. Lam. iv. 3 Mic. i. 8.

We find in Job xxxix. 13. another Hebrew Word Rhenanim, which is translated Ostrich. Others take it for a Peacock, But able Interpreters[3] apply the Word Noza[4] to the Ostrich, which is read in the same Verse. And this is the Opinion we have followed in the Commentary upon Job, The Marks which Job ascribes to the Noza agree very well to the Ostrich.

This Animal is ranged among Birds. It is very large, has very long Legs, its Wings very short, the Neck about the Length of four or five Spans. The Feathers of its Wings are in great Esteem, and are used as an Ornament for Hats, Beds, Canopies. They are stained of several Colours, and made into very pretty Tufts. Their Plumage is white and black; the Females have a Mixture of grey, black and white. They are hunted by way of Course, for they never fly; but they use their Wings to assist them in running more swiftly.

Xenophon relates, that the Army of young Cyrus found many Ostriches near the Euphrates; that they chased them with the swiftest Horses in the Army, but could never overtake them. 'Tis said also, that when they find themselves pursued, they take up Stones between their cloven Claws, which they throw at those that follow them, with as much Violence as the strongest Man could do,

'Tis said that the Ostrich digests Iron, but this is only a popular Error. 'Tis true indeed that it swallows bits of Iron or of Brass, if they are thrown to it, or if it meets with them, in the same manner as other Birds will swallow small Stones or Gravel; not to feed themselves with them, but to assist in digesting and comminuting their Food. In the Stomach of an Ostrich, which was dissected by the Academy of Sciences, they found upwards of seventy French Farthings, most of which were worn, scratch'd, and three Parts consumed away, probably by rubbing against each other.

There is a prodigious Quantity of Ostriches in Ethiopia. The Ostrich lays her Eggs in the Month of June, upon the Ground, covers them with Sand, and then forsakes them. Afterwards the Sun hatches them. 'Tis probably upon this Account, that they are made the Symbol of Cruelty [Jer. iv. Lam. iii. Job xxxix. 13, &c.] and Forgetfulness. Jeremiah says, Even the Sea-Monsters draw out the Breast, they give suck to their young ones. The Daughter of my People is become cruel, like the Ostriches in the Wilderness. Job at length sets forth the Cruelty and Forgetfulness of the Ostrich in these Words, Gavest thou the goodly Wings unto the Peacocks, or Wings and Feathers unto the Ostrich? Which leaveth her Eggs in the Earth, and warmeth them in the Dust. And forgetteth that the Foot may crush them, or that the wild Beast may break them. She is hardned against her young ones, as though they were not hers; her Labour is in vain without Fear. Because God hath deprived her of Wisdom, neither hath he imparted to her Understanding. What time she lifteth up herself on high, and scorneth the Horse and his Rider.

Here is in short almost all that we are told of the Ostrich. It lays its Eggs upon the Ground, hides them under the Sand, and the Sun hatches them. All this is not incredible. We know that in Egypt they hatch a vast Quantity of Eggs every Day in Ovens made on Purpose, and heated to a certain Degree of Heat. As the Ostrich is extreamly large and heavy, it would break its Eggs if it were to sit upon them like other Birds. She therefore hides them in the Sand, watches them, and hatches them as we may say with her Eye, according to Vansleb[5]. The Male and Female stay with them alternately, and while one of them goes to seek its Provision, the other does not leave Sight of them. However, if either of them should be driven away, or go too far from their Nest, they could not find their Eggs again. And 'tis probably this that has given Occasion to what is said of their Cruelty and Forgetfulness.

Among that great Number of Eggs that the Female lays, (for we are told that she brings ten, twelve, fifteen, or twenty,) it seldom happens but that some of them miscarry. The Ostrich breaks these, and with the Worms that are bred from thence, she feeds her Young. Lastly, Job says, that God has deprived the Ostrich of Understanding. This is justify'd by what is related of this Bird. She suffers herself to be taken by a Man cover'd with the Skin of an Ostrich[6], who puts his Arm into the Skin of the Neck of the Animal, lifts it up on high, and imitates the Motion of the Head. Others say[7], that when she is pursued by the Hunters, she hides her Head in the Sand, continues there, and thinks herself secure. Pliny says, that she thrusts her Head in the Bushes, and there remains as if her whole Body were well concealed. Lastly, they say that she is naturally deaf[8], which does not a little contribute to her Stupidity.

She lifteth up herself on high, and scorneth the Horse and his Rider. The Ostrich is very lofty; they made a Dissection of an Ostrich at the Academy of Sciences, which was seven Foot and an half high, from the top of the Head to the Ground. Pliny says[9], that she exceeds in Stature the Heighth of a Man on Horseback. As to its Swiftness it is agreed, that there are few Horses that can overtake them by fair Running. We have mentioned before the Adventure that Xenophon speaks of.

Moses forbids the Use of Ostriches Flesh, at least our Translators will have it so. It is certain they eat them in Peru, and in Africa, where they are common. Marmol acknowledges, that their Flesh has an ill Scent, and is sticky, especially that of the Thighs; yet they eat of it however. When the People of Numidia take young ones, they rear them, make them fat, and lead them in Flocks into the Desart to feed. And when they are fat, they kill them and salt them. The Ethiopians also eat their Eggs, and take them for delicious Food These Eggs are generally of the Bigness of a large Bowl, and some not so big. The Ethiopians are said to make Cups of the Egg-shells. Pierius affirms, that they even make Caps of them, which they wear and value very much.

The Scripture speaks of the Ostrich in several other Places, but it is doubted whether the original Word really signifies this Bird or no. See the Commentators upon Isai. xiii. 21. xxxiv. 13. xliii. 20. Jer. l. 39. Mic. i. 8.

Othniel

OTHNIEL, or Othoniel, Son of Kenaz, of the Tribe of Judah. The Scripture says, that Othniel was Brother to Caleb. Othoniel filius Cenez, frater Caleb junior But from hence arise some Difficulties. First if Caleb and Othniel had been Brothers, Othniel could not have married his Niece Achsah the Daughter of Caleb. Secondly, the Scripture never assigns to Caleb and Othniel the same Father: It always names Kenaz as Father to Othniel, and Jephunneh as the Father of Caleb. Lastly, Caleb must be much older than Othniel, since he gave Othniel his Daughter Achsah in Marriage. Thus it seems much better to suppose Kenaz and Jephunneh to be two Brothers, and that Othniel and Caleb were Cousin-Germans, and in this Sense to be nearly related, or Brothers, according to the Language of Scripture. Thus Achsah being but second Cousin in respect of Othniel, he might marry her without doing any thing contrary to the Letter of the Law.

Caleb having received his Portion in the Mountains of Judah[1], in the midst of a Country that was possessed by Giants of the Race of Anak, after he had taken the City of Hebron, he advances towards Debir, otherwise called Kirjath-sepher, and declares; I will give my Daughter Achsah in Marriage to him that shall take Kirjath-sepher. Othniel took it, and had Achsah to Wife. But at the time that the Bride was brought home to her Husband with the usual Solemnity, Othniel moved his Wife Achsah to ask of her Father Caleb a Piece of watry Land, that was near and above another dry Field that Caleb had given him. By the Hebrew Text it should seem, that it was Achsah that desired Othniel to ask this of Caleb, However this be, it is plain, that Achsah made the Request, which was granted by Caleb.

After the Death of Joshua the Israelites not giving themselves the Trouble to exterminate the Canaanites, that were then in the Land, and not having continued in their Fidelity to the Lord, he delivered them over to Chushan-Rishathaim King of *Mesopotamia*b, to whom they continued in Subjection for eight Years. Then they cry'd to the Lord, who raised them up a Deliverer in the Person of Othniel the Son of Kenaz, who was fill'd with the Spirit of God, and judged Israel. He came into the Field, and gave Battle to Chushan- Rishathaim, beat him,and deliver'd Israel[2]; and the Country was at Rest for forty Years[3]. After this Othniel dy'd, but the precise Year of his Death is unknown.

Owl

OWL, called in Latin, Bubo, Ulula, Noctua, Nycticorax; it is often taken for the same as Scritch-Owl, as a Bird of the same Kind, that is, one that flies by Night, and lives in Darkness. Moses places the Owl among unclean Birds. When Isaiah speaks of Babylon reduced to a Wilderness, he says [Lev. xi. 17. Deut. xiv. 17. Isai. xiii. 22. Ps. cii. 7.] that the Owls shall make Answer to one another. Finally, the Psalmist says, that in his Affliction he was as the Owl sitting alone on the House-top. But Interpreters are not agreed about the Signification of the Hebrew Words that are translated by Bubo, Ulula, Nycticorax, Noctua, and Passer. For which see the Commentators.

They reckon several Species of Owls. This Bird has its Head like a Cat, and large sharp Claws. It catches Mice like a Cat; its Eyes cannot bear the great Light of the Sun. Other Birds hate it, and pursue it; and in return the Owl hunts and eats the lesser Birds. Its Cry is mournful and dismal. It passes for a Bird of ill Omen. It was consecrated to Minerva, and upon this Account it was honoured by the Athenians, who represented it upon their Medals. 'Tis said at this Day to be in great Esteem among the Tartars. The French Word Hibou, an Owl, is derived from the Latin Word Bubo, of the same Signification; or from the Chaldee, Ibbou[1], signifying the same thing.

If the Owl be view'd before, it has something of an hideous Aspect. Its Head is round, large sparkling Eyes, a terrible Countenance, large Ears, its Beak is hard and crooked, of a blackish Colour. The Colour of his Plumage is tawney, a Mixture of white and red, very agreeably diversify'd. There are of three Sizes; the large ones are as big as a Capon, the middle-siz'd are as big as a Wood-pigeon, and the smaller Sort about the Bigness of an ordinary Pigeon.

The horned Owl is of two Kinds, according to Aldrovand, a larger and a smaller. The larger Sort has its Plumage more ash-colour'd and more whitish, and the smaller is more dun, and of a rusty Colour.

The great Owl is likewise of two Sorts, that is, of a larger and of a smaller Kind. The great Owl has neither Horns nor Ears; but to make amends, it has a kind of Crown composed of very fine soft Feathers, which encompasses all its Face. Its Beak is white and very sharp, as also its Pounces. Its Back is of a Lead-colour, mark'd with white Spots. Its Breast and Belly are whitish, with pretty large black Spots interspersed. Its whole Body is cover'd with so large a Quantity of Feathers, that they make it appear as big as a Capon, though, when pluck'd, it is no bigger than a Chicken. It swallows a Mouse or a little Bird all at once; but after it has digested the Flesh, it vomits up the Feathers and the Bones in a round Ball, as the Halcyon gives up the Bones and the Remains of the small Fishes it swallows.

The lesser Owl resembles the great one in almost every thing; but it is smaller, and is hardly of a larger Size than a Dovehouse Pigeon. Its Eyes are extreamly black, its Bill is white and short; the Breast, Belly, fore part of the Wings, the under part of the Belly and Thighs are covered with ash-colour'd Feathers. The Legs and Claws stick out with dun or reddish Hair. It has two Claws before, and two behind, which are armed with black Nails, very strong and sharp.

Oyl

OYL. It is known that the Hebrews anointed themselves all over with Oyl, but especially their Head: That they anointed their Kings and High Priests. See what is said on Article UNCTION.

Isaiah calls an Eminence or Vineyard [Isai. v. 1. Isai. x. 27.] that was fruitful and fat, a Horn the Son of Oyl: Vinea facta est dilecto meo in cornu filio olei. And elsewhere he says, that God would make to putrify the Yoke of the Israelites, by the Quantity of Oyl that he would pour thereon. Computrescere faciam jugum in facie olei. He would take from it all its Roughness and Hardness. The High Priest Jesus and Prince Zerubbabel are [Zech. iv. 14. Job xxix. 6.] called Sons of Oyl, that is, each of them had received the sacred Unction. Job speaking of the Condition of his first Posterity, says, that the Rocks were then Fountains of Oyl to him.

The Oyl of Gladness, Psal. xliv. 8. ole*um*[1] lætitiæ, and oleum gaudii, Isai. lxi. 3. was the perfumed Oyl with which they anointed themselves upon Days of Rejoycing and Festivity. Moses says, that God [Deut. xxxii. 13.] made his People to suck Oyl and Honey out of the Rocks. That is to say, that in the midst of dismal Desarts, he abundantly provided them with all things not only [Matt. vi. 17.] necessary but agreeable also. Our Saviour enjoins us, that when we fast we should anoint our Heads, and wash our Faces; that we may avoid all Suspicion of Ostentation [Hab. iii. 17.] in our Fasting. Mentietur opus olivæ, says Habakkuk; the Olive-Trees shall fail to bring forth Fruit. The foolish Virgins in the Gospel took no Oyl with them, to replenish their Lamps. See [Matt. xxv. 8. James v. 14.] LAMP. St. James gives Orders; Is any sick among you, let him call for the Elders of the Church, and let them pray over him, anointing him with Oyl in the Name of the Lord. See EXTREAM UNCTION.

Ozias

OZIAS, Son of Micha, of the Tribe of Simeon. He was the chief of the City of Bethulia, when it was besieged by Holofernes[1]. He vigorously supported the Siege against this General, and received Achior into his House, who had been driven from the Camp of the Assyrians. Ozias finding that Bethulia was reduced to great Necessity for want of Water, and that the People mutiny'd against him, and accused him of the Miseries to which they were reduced; he promised to surrender the City in five Days, if God did not send them Relief within that Time. Judith being informed of this Resolution, sent to speak with Ozias and the principal Men of the City, made them a prudent Remonstrance upon their seeming to prescribe a Time to the Lord, in which he must succour them, encouraged them to Patience, and without discovering her Design, she told them she would go out in the Night, and that they should suffer her to go out without inquiring into her Design. Ozias therefore being at the Gate of the City, he open'd it to Judith, and waiting for her Return, and the Success of her Undertaking, he continued in the City, praying with the People, that it would please the Lord to deliver them. Their Prayers were heard; Holofernes was put to Death by Judith, Bethulia delivered, and the Assyrian Army routed. See HOLOFERNES and JUDITH.

Pacorus

PACORUS, Son of Orodes King of the Parthians, entering into Syria at the Head of a powerful Army, went to besiege Cassius in Antioch. But Cassius so bravely defended himself there, that Pacorus was forced to raise the Siege[1]. He went then and sate down before Antigonine, which was not far from thence; but the Parthians were so little skill'd in the Art of attacking Places, that they were disappointed here also, and obliged to quit the Siege[2]. Cassius then lay in Ambush for them, into which they fell, and were intirely routed. The Remainder of them turn'd back, and repass'd the Euphrates.

Pacorus came back again over the Euphrates after the Death of Julius Cæsar, along with Labienus[3], who had been sent by Brutus and Cassius to the Court of the King of Parthia, to desire Assistance from him. After the Defeat of these two confederate Generals, Labienus continued among the Parthians, till the Aradians, the Palmyreneans, and the Tyrants or little Kings of Syria invited them to their Assistance, against the Tax-gatherers that oppress'd them. Pacorus with his Troops reduced all Syria and Phœnicia, but it was not possible for him to subdue Tyre, where-in the Ruins of the Roman Army had taken Shelter.

Having taken Sidon and Ptolemais[4], he sent a Detachment into Judea, with Orders to set Antigonus the Son of Aristobulus upon the Throne. This Party was commanded by his chief Cup-bearer, who was call'd Pacorus as well as himself. Antigonus had promised the Parthians a thousand Talents, and five hundred Jewish Women; and having got some Troops together, he enter'd into Judea, supported by the Parthians that attended him. He subdued the first that made any Opposition to him, and pursued them directly to Jerusalem, into which he enter'd, and entrenched himself in the Temple. Herod and Phasael, who supported the Interests of Hyrcanus, took Possession of the Palace.

The Feast of Pentecost being come, the two Parties began to treat of an Accommodation, to prevent that Disorder which the Confluence of such a Multitude of Strangers was likely to produce. Antigonus proposed to Herod and Phasael, to take for Arbitrator of the Difference the chief Cup-bearer Pacorus, who was incamp'd near the City; in which they acquiesced. He therefore entered Jerusalem with his Troops, and persuaded Hyrcanus and Phasael to appear before Barzapharnes, who was Governor of Syria for the Parthians, in hopes to obtain some Regulations that might be beneficial to the Province. Thither they went conducted by Pacorus, who then returned to Jerusalem.

When Barzapharnes thought that Pacorus might be got back to Jerusalem, he arrested Phasael and Hyrcanus, and laid them in Irons. Pacorus had Orders to do the same by Herod; but he got some Notice of the Design, and made his Escape to Massada. The Parthians plunder'd Jerusalem, set Antigonus upon the Throne, and delivered up to him Phasael and Hyrcanus in Chains. Phasael put himself to Death, and Antigonus caused Hyrcanus's Ears to be cut off, to make him incapable of performing the Functions of the High-priesthood. After which he delivered him again to the Parthians, who carried him along with them beyond the Euphrates.

The Parthians did not long hold the Kingdom of Syria. Ventidius General of the Roman Troops having beaten their Armies, obliged Pacorus to return back over the Euphrates[5]. The Year after Pacorus having again got a great Army together, came again into Syria[6], but was there beaten and kill'd by Ventidius.

Palestine

PALESTINE. This Name may be taken either in a more general or more limited Sense. Palestine taken in a limited Sense stands for the Country of the Philistines or Palestines, which took up that Part of the Land of Promise which was extended along the Mediterranean Sea,from Gaza southwards as far as Lydda to the North. It seems that the Seventy were of Opinion, that the Hebrew Word Philistiim signified Strangers, since they generally translate it by Allophyli[1], Strangers, or Men of another Tribe.

When the Word Palestine is taken in a more general Sense, it signifies the whole Country of Canaan, the whole Land of Promise, as well beyond as on this side Jordan; though pretty frequently it is restrained to the Country on this side that River: so that in the later Times the Words Judea and Palestine were synonymous Terms. We find also the Name of Syria Palestina given to the Land of Promise, and even sometimes this Province is comprehended in Cœle-Syria, or the Lower Syria. Herodotus[2] is the most ancient Writer we know, that speaks of Syria-Palestina. He places it between Phenicia and Egypt. See Reland. Palestinæ, l. i. c. 7, 8. See also what we have said upon the Word JUDAH.

Moses speaks of Palestine as of the best and finest Country of the World, as of a Land flowing with Rivers of Milk and Honey. Profane Authors also speak of it much in the same Manner. *Heca*tæus[3] who had been brought up with Alexander the Great, and who wrote in the Time of the first Ptolemy, mentions this Country as very fruitful and well-peopled, an excellent Province, that bore all Kinds of good Fruit. Pliny[4] gives us a like Description of it; he says that Jerusalem was not only the most famous City of Judea, but even of the whole East. He describes the Course of the Jordan, as of a delicious River; he speaks with Advantage of the Lake of Genesareth, of the Balm of Judea, of its Palm-Trees. Tacitus[5], Ammianus Marcellinus, and most of the Ancients, who had Occasion to mention Palestine, have spoke of it with the same Commendations.

The Mahometans[6], who could not but know it much better than most others, speak of it in a very extravagant Manner, which proves however its exceeding great Fertility. They tell us, that besides the two principal Cities of the Country, which are Elia and Ariba, that is Jerusalem and Jericho, there were in this Province a thousand Villages, each of which had many very fine Gardens. That the Grapes were so large, that five Men could hardly carry a Cluster of them, and that five Men might hide themselves in the Shell of one Granate. That this Country was anciently inhabited by the Giants of the Race of Amalek, who were of a very extraordinary Size.

Notwithstanding all these Testimonies of the Ancients, we find People very incredulous as to the Fruitfulness of the Holy Land. Travellers that go to visit it, generally speak after a Manner, that is but little to its Advantage. The Country, they say, appears to be dry and barren, is but ill water'd, and has but few cultivated Plains. Strabo[7] is one of the Ancients who speaks of it with most Contempt. He says that this Province is so barren, that it moves no body's Envy, and that there is no need of fighting for it, in order to obtain it, and that Jerusalem stands upon a dry and barren Spot.

St. Jerome[8] was an Eye-witness of it, and very well acquainted with those Qualities which the Scriptures ascribe to it. He says that Palestine is full of Mountains, that Dryness and Drought are very common here, that they had only Rain-water, which they caught, and preserved in Cisterns, which supplied to them the Want of Fountains. But the same St. Jerome elsewhere speaks of the Fertility of Palestine with great Advantage, and owns that there was no other Country that could dispute with it in point of Fruitfulness. The Modern Travellers that speak of the present Sterility, do not deny but that it still preserves some Footsteps of its antient Fecundity in some Places, where are found all sorts of Fruits almost without any Culture. In other Places the Herbs grow with great Profusion, and to an extraordinary Height. If the Mountains of some Plains are barren, 'tis because they are but little cultivated for want of Inhabitants. How many other Countries, heretofore renown-ed for their Fertility, are at this Day reduced to barren and dreadful Wildernesses?

Pallium

PALLIUM, is taken in Scripture, First, for an upper Garment. Secondly, for any sort of Stuff or Covering. For Example, the Curtains of the Tabernacle which Moses made in the Wilderness, are called Pallium[1]. Ut unum pallium ex omnibus sagis fieret. They made a great Veil or Covering of all the Curtains of Goats-hair, that covered the Tabernacle. And at their Decampments they wrapped up the Ark and the Table of Shew-bread, and other Things, in the costly Veil of the Colour of Sky-blue. Involvent hyacinthino pallio, &c. The Sword of Goliah was laid up in the Tabernacle, folded up in a [Numb. iv. 7, 8. 1 Sam. xxii. 9. 1 Cor. xi. 10.] Veil. Involutus pallio post Ephod.

The Pallium, or the Cloak, in Hebrew Mahil, was a Garment belonging to both Men and Women. When Rebekkah saw her future Spouse Isaac at a distance, she presently cover'd herself with her Cloak[2], or Veil. The Hebrew Word is Zaiph, which signifies a Veil with which Women us'd to cover their Head and Face. The Spouse in the Canticles says, that the Watchmen of the City had found her, and took away her Veil or Cloak[3]. The Hebrew Word Redid signifies a costly Veil, which was peculiar to Women. It may be derived from the Hebrew Word Radah, to govern, and then it will have the same Signification as potestas, which St. Paul orders that Women should wear upon their Heads. Debet mulier potestatem habere super caput propter Angelos[4]. This Veil, this Power, is the Token of the Authority of the Husband over the Wife. Ruth also wore a Veil or Mantle[5], into which Booz put six Measures of Barley, and the Scripture gives it the Name of Mitpheat, different from those we took notice of before.

As to the Pallium or Cloak of Men, it appears from Scripture every where, that they wore it over their Coat, and that it was not cut. It was a plain piece of Cloth, or of other Matter, which they folded about them in several Manners, as Occasion requir'd, and according to the present Circumstances. It was lapp'd about them backwards and forwards on all Sides; they folded it about their Heads, or their Shoulders, they fastned it at their Breast, or on their Shoulder, or about their Neck with a kind of Clasp. The Wife of Potiphar pull'd off Joseph's Cloak. The Sons of Noah took a Cloak, and going backward, they covered their naked Father with it. The Hebrews at their quitting Egypt had not Time to bake their Bread, but carried the Dough along with them in their Cloaks. When Saul had a mind to stop Samuel, who [1 Sam. xv. 27.] was going away from him, he took him by the Cloak and tore it. The Prophet Abijah [1 Kings xi. 2).] tore the Cloak he had on into twelve Pieces, to intimate the future Separation of the ten Tribes from that of Judah. When Elisha gathered up Elijah's Cloak, he roul'd it up into a kind of Staff; wherewith [2 Kings xi. 13.] he struck the Waters of Jordan, and divided them into two Parts.

The Matter of their Cloaks was commonly Wool, or Leather, or some other Stuff of Value. When Joseph was made Governor of Egypt, he was cloathed with the finest Cotton, or with some fine Linnen Cloth[6]. At the Solemnity of bringing the Ark to Jerusalem[7], David wore a Cloak of fine Linnen. When Mordecai was advanced to Honour by King Ahasuerus, he wore a Robe of fine Cloth, or of Silk of a [Esth. viii. 15.] purple Colour. Amictus serico pallio atque purpureo. The false Prophets and Hypocrites wore Cloaks of Hair-cloth, to make themselves reverenced for their seeming Austerity of Life, pretending thereby to imitate the Lives of the true Prophets. The Cloak was a kind of Badge of Dignity. When the [Zech. xiii. 4.] Witch of Endor was consulted by Saul, she pretended to see a venerable Man appear, cloathed with a Robe or Cloak. To distinguish the Hebrews from other Nations, even by their Habits also, God commanded them to wear Tufts or Fringes of blue or hyacinth at the four Corners of [Num. xv. 38. Deut. xxii. 12.] their Garments, and a Border or Galloon of any Colour, Breadth, or Matter, at the Hembs of their Garments. Jesus Christ himself wore these Fringes to his Cloak, as appears from Matt. ix. 20. Si tetigero tantum fimbriam vestimenti ejus, salva ero, said the Woman with the Issue of Blood. Our Saviour upbraided the Pharisees, who out of Affectation wore large Fringes at the Bottom of their Cloaks, or longer Tassels than ordinary at the Corners of their Garments. Magnificant fimbrias. Matt. xxiii. 5.

That the Modern Jews may not make themselves ridiculous by the Singularity of their Habits, they have left off wearing these Tufts and Fringes outwardly at the Hembs of their Cloaks. But under their Cloaths they have a Piece of square Silk or Linnen, with four little Tufts at the four Corners. This kind of Garment is double; one Part is put before, and the other behind, and the two Pieces are fastned by Strings which reach to the two Shoulders[8], and which they call Harbacanephoth, the four Wings, or the four Corners. This is their ancient Cloak reduced to a smaller Size. In the Scripture frequent mention is made of the Wings of the Cloak, which probably were nothing else than the four Corners of which we have been speaking. Saul tore off the Wing of Samuel's Cloak, and David cut off the Wing of Saul's Cloak in the Cave.

Palm

PALM, Palmus, a Measure of four Fingers Breadth, or of 337/89 Inches[1]. It is called in Hebrew Tophach[2]. Also the Hebrew Word Zereth[3] is often translated by Palmus, and in Greek by Spithame, though it signifies a Half-cubit, and contains three ordinary Palms; which ought to be observed, that two Measures so unequal may not be confounded. St. Jerom sometimes translates Tophach by four Fingers, and sometimes by a Palm; but he always renders Zereth by Palmus, and the Septuagint by Spithame. Goliah was in Heighth six Cubits and a Zereth, that is to say, six Cubits and an half, making eleven Feet one Inch and something more[4]. We find in Isaiah an Expression that proves the Zereth, or Palm, to signify the Extent of the Hand from the End of the Thumb to the End of the little Finger. *Quis mensus est pu*gillo aquas, aut cælos palmo ponderavit? Who hath measured the Waters in the Hollow of his Hand, and meted out Heaven with the Span?

Palm-Tree

PALM-TREE. This was a Tree very common in Palestine. The Hebrews called it Thamar, and the Greeks Phœnix[1]. The finest and best Palm-Trees were about Jericho and Engeddi. There were many also along the Banks of the Jordan, and towards Scythopolis. Jericho is sometimes called the City of Palm- [Deut. xxxiv. 3.] Trees. Besides Dates the Palm-Tree produces also a kind of Honey, which was little inferior to the common Honey[2]; and they likewise drew a Wine from it, which was much used in the Eastern Countries. St. Chrysostom and Theodoret think it was this Palm-Wine that Moses mentions by the Name of Sicera. See SICERA afterwards.

It is said in Job xxix. 18. Vulgat. Sicut palma multiplicabo dies. I shall multiply my Days as the Palm-Tree. Some Ancients read, I shall live as long as the Phœnix, But the Hebrew has[3], I shall multiply my Days as the Sand. We have taken notice above, that the Greek Word Phœnix signifies a Palm-Tree; it is also put for a Phœnix or a Phenician. See our Dissertation, upon this Passage, printed before the Commentary upon Job.

The Palm, or a Branch of the Palm-Tree, is a Symbol of Victory, and was carried before the Conqueror in Processions and Rejoycing for having obtained a Victory. They also used to [1 Macc. xiii. 51. 2 Macc. x. 7. John xii. 13. 1 Macc. xiii. 37. 2 Macc. xiv. 4.] send a golden Branch of a Palm-Tree to the Kings of Syria, as a kind of Tribute or Present. This they call baina in Greek. They also offered them in the Temple of Jerusalem. I conceive that all these Customs were derived from the Greeks; for I can find nothing of them in the Old Testament before the Maccabees.

The City of Palms[4] is Jericho, as may be seen by the second Book of Chronicles; the Palm-trees of the Plain of Jericho are famous throughout the whole Scripture, and even in profane Authors. In the Temple of Jerusalem Solomon caused Pillars or Pillasters to be made, in the Form of Palm-trees; probably in Imita- 1 Kings vi. 29, &c.
tion of the Egyptians, who had such Pillars in their Temples[5].

Palm-trees from the same Root produce a great Number of Suckers, which form upwards a kind of Forest by their Spreading[6]: Procerioribus sylva, arbore ex ipsâ. 'Twas under a little Wood of Palm-trees of this Kind, that the Prophetess Deborah [Judg. iv. 5. Ps. xcii. 12.] dwelt between Ramah and Bethel. 'Twas probably to this Multiplication of the Palm-tree, that the Prophet makes Allusion when he says; The Righteous shall flourish like a Palm-tree. [Eccl. l. 14.] And Ecclesiasticus represents the Priests, the Sons of Aaron, round about the High-priest Onias, as so many young Palm-trees, that proceed from the Root of an old Palm-tree.

[Jer. x. 5.] Jeremiah says, speaking of the Idols of the Heathen which were carried in Procession, that they were made in the Shape of Palm-trees: In similitudinem palmæ fabricatæ sunt. The [Cant. vii. 7. Cant. v. 11.] Spouse in the Canticles is compared to a Palm-tree as to Stature. Statura tua assimilata est palmæ. This was a noble Comparison. The Palm-tree is upright and tall. The Antients, before the Art of Carving was carried to its Perfection, made their Images all of a Thickness, strait, having their Hands hanging down and close to their Sides, the Legs joined together, the Eyes shut, with a very disagreeable Attitude, and not unlike to the Body of a Palm-tree. Such are the Figures of those antique Egyptian Statues that still remain. 'Twas the famous Architect and Carver, Dedalus that set their Legs at Liberty, opened their Eyes, and gave them a freer and easier attitude[7].

The Spouse in the Canticles compares the Hair of her Lover to the Fruit of the male Palm-tree, and to the Blackness of the Raven. Comæ ejus quasi elatæ palmarum, nigræ quasi corvus. The Palm-tree produces its Leaves, or if you please its Hair, at the Top of its Trunk: Coma omnis in cacumine, says Pliny[8]. The Male Palm-tree makes the Female fruitful, by Means of a Flower which is inclosed in its Fruit. 'Tis this Fruit of the Male Palm-tree which in Greek is called Elatæ[9]. The Comparison of a Head of Hair to the Branches of the Palm-tree is so much the more just, as these Leaves turn round like Curls, and their Extremities hang down towards the Ground. They are long, double, and strait like a Sword; its Flowers are fastened by a very small Stalk, they grow in Clusters, and resemble those of Saffron, except that they are smaller and white.

Palmyra

PALMYRA, a City of Syria built by King Solomon. In Hebrew it was called Tadmor or Thamor[1]. It was situated in a Wilderness of Syria, upon the Borders of Arabia deserta, inclining towards Euphrates. Josephus[2] places it two Days Journey from the upper Syria, one Days Journey from the Euphrates, and six Days Journey from Babylon. He says there is no Water any where else in the Wilderness, but in this Place. At this Day there are to be seen vast Ruines of this City. There was nothing more magnificent in the whole East. M. Halifax gives us a Description of it, which M. le Brun has inserted at Pag. 342 of his Voyages. There are still found a great Number of Inscriptions, the most of which are Greek, and the others in Palmyrenian Characters. Nothing relating to the Jews is seen in the Greek Inscriptions; and the Palmyrenian Inscriptions are intirely unknown, as well as the Language and the Characters of that Country. Albufeda places it to the East of Emesa, three Days Journey from this City, and three Days from Salamis. Alazizi reckons fifty nine Miles from Tadmor to Damascus.

The City of Palmyra preserved the Name of Tadmor to the Time of the Conquests of Alexander. Then it had the Name of Palmyra given it[3], which it preserved for several Ages. About the Middle of the third Century it became famous, because Denatus and Zenobia his Queen made it the Seat of their Empire. When the Saracens became Masters of the East, they restored its antient Name of Tadmor to it again, which it has always preserved since. Its Situation is just the same as that of Ammon in Lybia, being in the midst of Deserts; for it is built in a kind of Island in the main Land, in the midst of an Ocean of Sand, and surrounded by sandy Deserts on all Sides. Its Situation between two powerful Empires, that of the Parthians to the East, and that of the Romans to the West, exposed it often to the utmost Danger in their Quarrels. But in Time of Peace it soon recovered it self again, by the Trade it had with both the Empires. For the Caravans of Persia and of the Indies, which now unload at Aleppo, then used to stop at Palmyra. From thence they carried the Merchandizes of the East, which came to them by Land, to the Ports of the Mediterranean, from whence they were spread through all the West; and the Merchandizes of the West returned to them again after the same Manner. The Caravans of the East carried them along with them at their Return.

It is surprizing that History gives us no Account, neither when, nor by whom Palmyra was reduced to the Condition it is in at this Day.

Palsie

PALSIE, Paralysis. This Distemper is a Preclusion or Stoppage of one or more of the Limbs, which deprives them of Motion, and makes them useless to the Patient. There are some Palsies that are very painful, and others not so much, from the Nature of the Humours that cause them. Our Saviour cured several Paralyticks by his Word alone. See Matth. iv. 24. viii. 6. ix. 2. Mark ii. 3, 4, &c. Luke v. 18, &c. The sick Man that was lying near the Pool at the Sheep-market, for thirty-eight Years was a Paralytick, John v. 5. The Word Paralytick is derived from the Greek Word Paraluo, which signifies to resolve or relax; as if it was to shew, that the Palsie is a Relaxation of the Nerves. But it may be produced by other Causes.

Pan

PAN. The God Pan is not known in the sacred Books. But it is pretended[1] that the Heathen have taken many Circumstances of the Life of Moses, and applied them to the God Pan. This false Deity was represented with Horns, like Moses; he carried a Wand in his Hand; he was the God of the Shepherds, of Hunters, of the Country People, as Moses was Head of a People of Shepherds, of Labourers, and of Country Men. Pan taught Apollo the Art of Divination, and that of playing upon the Flute. Moses gave to his Brother Aaron the Oracle of Urim and Thummim, and appointed the Levites to play upon Instruments in the Tabernacle of the Lord. Pan, we are told, commanded Armies, and formed Sieges; Moses was at the Head of a prodigious Army of Israelites. Pan upon the Mountains of Arcadia was in great Danger of being starved with Hunger, if he had not found *Ce*res,then who was seeking her Daughter Proserpine, and who furnished him with Provisions, and saved his Life.

The Scripture sometimes speaks of the Worship that the Hebrews had paid to shaggy Goats[2]. They shall no more offer their Sacrifices unto Devils; the Hebrew says, They shall no more offer their Sacrifices to Goats. 'Tis known that the Egyptians worshipped the Goat in the City and Canton of Mendes. Herodotus[3], Strabo[4], and Diodorus Siculus[5] give Testimony to this; Strabo also says, that they worshipped the God Pan, and a living Goat. What Moses adds, that they should no longer sacrifice to Goats, after whom they have gone a Whoring, agrees to that impure and abominable Worship which was paid to that shameful Deity. Prostitutions, the most contrary to Nature, were there exercised; and such was the God Pan of the Greeks, or the Mendes of the Egyptians. He was generally represented with the Body and Head of a Man, and the lower Parts from the Thighs downwards were those of a Goat, having a Staff in his Hand, and Horns upon his Forehead.

Ecclesiastical Authors[6] have thought, that at the Birth of Jesus Christ, the God Pan, or the Demon which was adored under his Name, then died, or rather that his Power was then at an End. 'Tis thus that Eusebius explains himself. " It is " worth while to take Notice of the Time, " at which the Devil died. It happened " under the Reign of Tiberius, during " which the holy Scripture relates, that " Jesus Christ lived, and began to drive " out Devils, and to expel them from human Society, insomuch that some of " them threw themselves at his Feet, and " intreated him not to cast them into that " Hell that was ready to receive them. " Therefore you see here the determined " Time for the Expulsion of Demons, " which had never been driven out before.

This is all founded upon a Notion that some of the Antients had entertained, that after a certain Time the Demons might die; and upon a Story of Plutarch's[7], that some Merchants that were making a Voyage at Sea, heard a Voice crying out to them, that the great Pan was dead. But there is no Need to vouch for the Truth of this Piece of History, or much less for that Opinion that makes the Demons or Demi-gods mortal; this may be concluded on, that after the Birth and Death of our Saviour, the Empire of the Devil, and the Errors of Paganism, very sensibly declined, and at last are come to an intire Dissolution.

His Father Herod had a good while before built a magnificent Temple there to the Honour of Augustus[2]. Lastly, young Agrippa changed the Name of Cesarea into that of Neronias, in Honour of Nero[3]. In the Time of William of Tyre it was called Belinas, Hist. l. xv. Some make a Doubt whether Paneas be the same as Dan. Eusebius and St. Jerome make a manifest Distinction[4], since they affirm that Dan is four Miles from Paneas on the Road to Tyre. But most Writers confound them together, and St. Jerome himself says[5], that Dan or Leshem was afterwards called Paneas. It was situate about the Place where Jordan issues out of the Ground; for this River has its Source in the Lake called Phiala, an Hundred Furlongs from Paneas. See the Article JORDAN before.

Paper

PAPER, Papyrus. The Papyrus is a Plant or kind of Bulrush, which grows in Egypt upon the Banks of the Nile. The Egyptians applied it to several Uses, as to make Baskets, Shoes, Cloaths[1], little Boats to swim in upon the Nile[2], and Paper to write on. 'Tis also said, that the Part of the Papyrus that is near the Root, is good to eat[3]. Isaiah[4] speaks of a kind of Vessel or little Bark of Paper, made in Form of a Head, wherein the Egyptians put a Letter, by which they gave Notice to the People of Biblos of the Discovery of the God Adonis, whom they bewailed as dead. They put this Machine upon the Mediterranean, and made the People believe that it came of it self in the Space of seven Days to Biblos, upon the Coasts of Phœnicia, which was more than four Score Leagues from Egypt[5]. The Hebrew Word Gome, made Use of by Isaiah, signifies a Rush or Reed; and Moses makes Use of the same Word to denote the Materials of that little Ark, in which his Parents exposed him upon the Banks of the Nile[6].

As to the Writing-paper made Use of by the Antients, it was very different from that in Use amongst us, and was composed of the Leaves of the Papyrus now mentioned, from whence it has the Name of Paper. This was their Manner of working it. The Trunk of the Papyrus is composed of several Leaves or Films, placed one over another, which were peeled off, and separated with a Needle. They were afterwards stretched out upon a wet Table, to the Length and Breadth of the intended Leaf of Paper. Over the first Layer of the Leaves of Paper they put some thin Past, or only some of the muddy Water of the Nile a little warmed, upon which they spread a second Layer of the Leaves of the Papyrus. Then they let it dry by the Sun. The Leaves that are nearest the Heart of the Plant are the finest, and make the most valuable Paper. Of this they made the finest Sort of Paper, called Papyrus Augusta, because of the Emperor Augustus. The Leaves that were next before these made a Paper not so fine as the former, which was called Papyrus Julia, because of the Empress Julia. Lastly, the Emperor Claudius having invented another Kind coarser than the former, this had the Name of Papyrus Claudia. This whole Matter may be seen fully treated of in Guillandinus.

[Isai. viii. 1. Jerem. xxxvi. Exek. ii. 9. iii. 1, 2, 3. 2 Kings xxii. 11. Job. xxxi. 35, 36.] There is great Probability that 'tis this Paper of Egypt, which is expressed in several Passages of [the Vulgate] Scripture by the Words Charta and Liber; and that the antient Volumes were only Egyptian Paper. The Use of Vellum and Parchment was introduced very late[7]. 'Twas the Kings of Pergamus that brought them first into Use, being constrained thereto by pure Necessity. For the Kings of Egypt having forbid the Transportation of Paper out of the Kingdom, those of Pergamus were compelled to make Use of the Skins of Beasts prepared to write upon, and to compose the Library they were collecting, in Imitation of that of the Ptolemys. Of this Egyptian Paper they made Books of two Sorts; some in Rolls made of several Skins sewed together End to End, and only written on one Side; others were several Leaves bound together one after another, and both Sides written upon, in the Manner of our ordinary Books. Yet I doubt much whether the Thing were so or no. I no where find that they made long Rolls of mere Paper. This Matter was not solid enough no firm enough to be sewed thus together from End to End. It is much more probable, that these Rolls were made of Skins or of Vellum, as they are now made. Diodorus Siculus[8] relates, that the Persians formerly wrote their Registers upon Skins; and Herodotus[9] speaks of the Skins of Sheep and Goats made Use of by the antient Ionians to write upon. The Prophets Isaiah, Jeremiah, and Ezekiel, expressly mention these Rolls. The Book of the Law that was found in the Time of Hilkiah was also very probably wrote upon Vellum; as also was that which is mentioned by Job in these Words. O that one would hear me! behold my Desire is, that the Almighty would answer me, and that mine Adversary had written a Book. Surely I would take it upon my Shoulder, and bind it as a Crown to me.

We must therefore admit, that the King of Pergamus only improved the dressing of Skins, and caused them to be prepared in so convenient a Manner, that he had no longer any Occasion for the Paper of Egypt. And indeed Vellum is of much better Use than the Egyptian Paper. All the most antient Manuscripts we have, whether Greek or Latin, are wrote upon Vellum, and there hardly remains any Thing of the Egyptian Paper in our Archives, but some old Titles, and they are almost worn out and gone to Decay. Vossius thinks the Use of Vellum was much more antient than the Kings of Pergamus[10].

Lastly, as to the Paper that we make Use of at this Day, and which is composed of Linnen Rags, macerated and beaten to a Pulp, and then spread and reduced into thin Leaves, or Sheets; the Use of this is not very antient. It is not expressly mentioned by any that we know of, before the Time of Petrus Venerabilis, Abbot of Cluny, who lived about five Hundred Years ago[11]. So that we cannot understand of this Kind of Paper, what is mentioned by the Scripture under the Name of Charta. Our Dissertation upon the antient Books may be seen, which is printed before our Commentary upon Genesis.

Parable

PARABLE[1]. This Word is formed from the Greek Parabole, which comes from the Verb Paraballein, signifying to compare Things together, or to make a Parallel or Similitude of them with any Thing else. In Scripture are often confounded Comparison, Simile, Parable, the sententious Manner of speaking by Proverbs, Sentences, or Similitudes. What we call the Proverbs of Solomon, which are moral Maxims and Sentences, are by the Greeks called the Parables of Solomon. And when St. Jerome would express the poetick and sententious Style of the false Prophet Balaam, he says he began to speak in a Parable. Assumptâ [Numb. xxiii. 7. 18, &c. Job. xxvii. 1. xxix. 1.] parabolâ, dixit. And in like Manner when Job makes Answer to his Friends, 'tis said he began to take up his Parable: Assumens parabolam suam, dixit. The parabolical, enigmatical, figurative, and sententious Way of speaking was the Language of the Eastern Sages and learned Men; and nothing was more insupportable than to hear a Fool utter [Prov. xxvi. 7.] Parables. The Legs of the Lame are not equal; so is a Parable in the Mouth of Fools.

[2 Sam. xii. 2, 3, &c. 2 Sam. xiv. 2, 3, &c. Judg. ix. 7, 8, &c.] The Prophets made Use of Parables, to give a stronger Impression to Prince and People, of the Threatnings or of the Promises they made to 'em. Nathan reproves David under the Parable of a rich Man that had taken away and killed the Lamb of a poor Man. The Woman of Tekoah, that was hired by Joab to reconcile the Mind of the same Prince towards his Son Absalom, proposed to him the Parable of her two Sons that fought together in the Field, and one of which having killed the other, they were going to put the Murtherer to Death, and so to deprive her of both her Sons at once. Jotham, Son of Gideon, proposed to the Men of Shechem the Parable of the Bramble of Libanus, whom the Trees had a Mind to choose for their King. The Prophets often reprove the Infidelity of Jerusalem under the Parable of an adulterous Wife. They describe the Violence of such Princes as are Enemies to the People of God, under the Representations of Lions, Eagles, Bears, &c.

[Matth. xiii. 10. Isai. vi. 9.] Our Saviour in the Gospel seldom speaks otherwise to the People but in Parables. He made Use of 'em to verify the Prophecy of Isaiah, who foretold, that the People should see without knowing, and hear without understanding, and should continue in their Blindness and Hardness of Heart, in the Midst of the Instructions they should receive. St. Jerome[2] observes, that this Manner of instructing and speaking by Similitudes and Parables was very common among the Syrians, and especially among the People of Palestine. It is certain that the antient Sages made Use of this Stile, if I may so say, even to Affectation.

There are some Parables in the New Testament which are supposed to be true Histories. As that of Lazarus and the wicked rich Man, that of the good Samaritan, who found on the Road to Jericho the Man wounded by Thieves, that of the Prodigal Son. There are others in which our Saviour seems to allude to some Points of the History of those Times; as that wherein it is said, that a King went into a far Country, there to receive a Kingdom. This may hint at the History of Archelaus, who after the Death of his Father Herod the Great went to Rome, to receive from Augustus the Confirmation of his Father's Will, by which he had the Kingdom of Judæa left to him.

Lastly, the Word Parable is sometimes used in Scripture in a Sense of Reproach and Contempt. God threatens his People to scatter them among the Nations, and to make them a Parable or a Fable to the People. He says he will make his Temple [2 Chron. vii. 20.] a Parable to all People, if Israel does not continue faithful to him[3]. When any one would express a Nation hated of God, and which has suffered the utmost Degree of his Anger, he shall say, May you become like to the Israelites!

Paracletus

PARACLETUS, a Comforter. In Greek, Paracletos[1], or Paraclitus, according to another Pronunciation of the Word by changing the Eta into an Iota. This Word signifies one that exhorts, defends, comforts, that prays or intercedes for another. The Name Paracletus is commonly given to the Holy Ghost, and our Saviour himself has often given it him. Jesus Christ calls him the Comforter, or Paracletus, [John xiv. 16.] when he says, And I will pray the Father, and he shall give you another Comforter, that he may abide with you for ever. [1 John ii. 1.] And St. John the Evangelist says, we have an Advocate (in Greek, Paracletus) with the Father. And this Advocate, this Paracletus, this Defender, this Mediator, is Jesus Christ the Righteous, who is the Propitiation for our Sins. But as is said before, the Name Paracletus is chiefly ascribed to the Holy Ghost. See St. John xiv. 26. xv. 26. xvi. 7.

Παράκλητος, derived from παρακαλέω, exhortor, consolor, defendo, intercedo.

Paradise

PARADISE. This Word comes from the Hebrew, or rather from the Chaldee, Pardes[1], of which the Greeks have made Paradisos, and the Latins, Paradisus. According to the Force of the Original, it should properly signifie an Orchard, a Plantation of Fruit-trees, and sometimes a Forest. This Word is found in three Places of the Hebrew Text of the Old Testament. First in Nehem. ii. 8. where Nehemiah desires King Artaxerxes, that Letters may be made out for him to Asaph the Keeper of the King's Forest, that he might have what Timber was necessary for the Buildings he was about to undertake. In this Place Paradisus is put for a Forest of Trees fit to build with. Secondly, Solomon in Ecclesiastes ii. 5. says, he made him Gardens and Paradises, or Orchards. Thirdly, in the Song of Solomon, iv. 13. he says that the Plants of the Spouse are as an Orchard of Pomegranates, or a Paradise. The Greeks have acknowledged that the Word Paradisus came to them from the Orientals, or Persians, who gave the Name of Paradise to their Fruit-gardens, and their Parks, where they kept all Sorts of wild Creatures. Xenophon and other Greek Authors often made Use of this Word in this Sense.

The Septuagint make Use of the Word Paradisus[2] when they speak of the Garden of Eden, which the Lord planted at the Beginning of the World, and placed Adam and Eve therein: And this famous Garden is commonly known by the Name of the Terrestrial Paradise. There have been many anxious Enquiries about its Situation. Some have thought[3] that it never existed at all, and that whatever is said of it in Scripture ought to be taken allegorically. Others believed[4] it was out of the Confines of this World. Others have pretended[5] that it was only in the Beginning, or before the Creation of other material Beings. It has been placed in the third Heaven, in the Orb of the Moon, in the Moon it self, in the middle Region of the Air, above the Earth, under the Earth, in a distant Place concealed from the Knowledge of Men, in the Place which is now possessed by the Caspian Sea, under the Arctick Pole, and to the utmost Southern Regions.

There is hardly any Part of the World, in which it has not been sought for; in Asia, in Africa, in Europe, in America; in Tartary, upon the Banks of the Ganges, in the Indies, in China, in the Island of Ceilon, in Armenia, under the Equator; in Mesopotamia, in Syria, in Persia, in Babylonia, in Arabia, in Palestine, in Ethiopia, where the Mountains of the Moon are; near the Mountains of Libanus, Antilibanus, and Damascus[6]. M. Huet places it upon the River that is produced by the Conjunction of the Tigris and Euphrates, which now is called the River of the Arabs; between this Conjunction and the Division made by the same River, before it falls into the Persian Sea. He puts it upon the Eastern Shore of this River, which being considered (says he) according to the Disposition of its Channel, and not according to the Course of its Stream, was divided into four Heads, or four different Openings. These four Branches make four Rivers; two upwards, which are Tigris and Euphrates, and two below, which are Pison and Gibon. The Pison, according to him, is the Western Channel, and the Gibon is the Eastern Channel of the Tigris, which discharges it self into the Persian Gulph. 'Tis said that M. Bochart was pretty much of the same Opinion, as may be gathered from some Passages in his Writings[7].

A MAP of the TERRESTRIAL PARADISEaccording to the AUTHOR'S SCHEME.

A MAP of the TERRESTRIAL PARADISEdraught of it

Other skilful Men have placed the terrestrial Paradise in Armenia, between the Sources of the Rivers Tigris and Euphrates, Araxis and Phasis, which we take to be the four Rivers described by Moses. Euphrates is expresly mentioned; the Hiddekel is the Tigris, which is still called Diglito. The Phasis is Pison, in which the Resemblance of the Words is apparent. The Gibon is the Araxes. Araxes in Greek signifies rapid or impetuous, just as Gibon in Hebrew; and there is no River known in the World more rapid than the Araxes. The Land of Eden was in this Country, as far as can be judged by some Traces of it, that are to be found in the holy Scriptures. The Land of Cush is the antient Scythia situate upon the Araxes. Havilah is plainly Cholchis, a Country very famous for its Gold. Our Commentary upon Gen. ii. 8. may be consulted, where we have endeavoured to establish this Hypothesis by all the Proofs that we could gather. Travellers that have visited this Country give sufficient Testimony of its great Fruitfulness, and there is still a Tradition among the Inhabitants, that the earthly Paradise was in their Province.

[Ecclus. xliv. 16] The Author of Ecclesiasticus says, that Enoch being found agreeable to God was translated into Paradise. Henoch placuit Deo, & translatus est in Paradisum, ut det gentibus pœnitentiam. The Latin Fathers, who have read the Word Paradise in the Text of the Vulgate, thought that this Patriarch was transported into Paradise, that is, into Heaven according to some[8] or into the earthly Paradise according to others[9]. But the Greek Fathers, who have not read the Word Paradisus in the Greek Text of Ecclesiasticus, have not determined the Place to which Enoch was translated[10]. St. Jerome has often put the Word Paradisus into the Vulgate, in Imitation of the Septuagint; but it is not to be found in the Hebrew Text of the Old Testament, except in the four Places that we have mentioned in the Beginning. Generally he translates the Hebrew Word Gan by Paradisus; but Gan only signifies a Garden, whether it be understood of a Kitchen-garden, an Orchard, or a Park.

In the Books of the New Testament the Word Paradise is put for a Place of Delight, where the Souls of the blessed enjoy [Luke xxiii. 43.] everlasting Happiness. Thus Jesus Christ tells the Penitent Thief upon the Cross, To Day shalt thou be with me in Paradise, that is, in the State of the Blessed And St. Paul speaking of himself in the third Person says, [2 Cor. xii. 4.] I knew a Man that was caught up into Paradise, and heard unspeakable Words, which it is not lawful for a Man to utter. Lastly, Jesus Christ in the Revelations says, To him [Rev. ii. 7.] that overcometh will I give to eat of the Tree of Life, which is in the midst of the Paradise of God: Where Allusion is made to the Tree of Life that grew in the terrestrial Paradise. The Jews commonly call Paradise the Garden of Eden; and they imagine, that at the coming of the Messiah they shall here enjoy an earthly Felicity, in the midst of all Sorts of Delights; and till the Resurrection and the coming of the Messiah, they think their Souls shall abide here in a State of Rest

Paradise Terrestrial

PARADISE TERRESTRIAL. The Orientals think[1], that the Terrestrial Paradise was in the Island of Serendib, or Ceilan; and that when Adam was drove out of Paradise, he was sent to the Mountain of Rakoun in the same Island, two or three Days Journey from the Sea. The Portuguese call this Mountain Pico de Adam, or the Mountain of Adam, because it is thought that this first of Men was buried under this Mountain, after he had lived in Repentance an Hundred and thirty Years.

The Mussulmen do not believe that the Paradise, in which Adam was placed after his Creation, was at all Terrestrial, but that it was raised up to one of the seven Heavens; and that it was from this Heaven that Adam was thrown down into the Island of Ceilan, where he died after having made a Pilgrimage into Arabia, where he visited the Place appointed for the building of the Temple of Mecca. They say also[2], that when God created the Garden of Eden, he created there what the Eye had never seen, the Ear has never heard, and what has never entered into the Heart of Man to conceive. That this delicious Garden has eight Doors, whereas Hell has but seven, and that the Porters which have the Care of them are to let none enter before the Learned, who make a Profession of despising earthly Things, and of desiring those of Heaven.

The same Orientals reckon[3] up four Paradises in Asia. First about Damascus in Syria. Secondly, about Obollah in Chaldæa. Thirdly, about the Desert of Naoubendigian in Persia, in a Place called Scheb-Baovan, watered by the Nilabe. And lastly in the Isle of Ceilan, or Serendib, of which we have spoke before.

We may perceive from hence, that the Opinion which places the terrestrial Paradise about Damascus, and near the Sources of the Jordan, is no novel Opinion, nor is it peculiar to European Writers. Heidegger in the Life of the Patriarchs, Mr. le Clerc, Father Abram, and Father Hardouin, both Jesuits, have maintained this Opinion. Father Hardouin has lately published his Hypothesis on this Subject in a copious Manner in his new Pliny; and he has owned to me, that he had much to object against it, and much to say in its Vindication. The Reader may consult this Author himself, for the Limits of this Dictionary do not allow me to enlarge too much on this Article.

Paralipomena

PARALIPOMENA. This Name is given to two Historical Books of the Scripture, which the Hebrews call[1] Dibrejamim, the Words of Days, Diaries or Journals. Others cite these Books by the Name of Chronicles[2]. The Name Paralipomena is taken from the Greek, and signifies Things omitted; as if these Books were a kind of Supplement to inform us what had been omitted, or too much abridged, in the Books of Kings, and the other Books of Scriptures. And indeed we find in them many Particulars which are not to be met with elsewhere. But it must not be thought that these are the Records or Books of the Acts of the Kings of Judah and Israel, so often referred to in the Books of the Kings and of the Chronicles themselves. Those antient Registers were much more extensive than what we have here, and the Books of Chronicles themselves refer to these original Memoirs, and make long Extracts from them.

The Author of these Books is unknown. Some have thought it to be the same as the Author of the Books of Kings; but if this were true, whence is that Variety in the Dates, in the Narratives, in the Genealogies, in the proper Names? Why these Repetitions of the same Things, and very often in the same Words? The Hebrews commonly ascribe the Chronicles to Esdras, who they say composed them after the Return from the Captivity, assisted by Zechariah and Haggai, who were then alive. This Opinion is proved, first from the Similitude of Style, from the Recapitulations and general Reflections which are sometimes made upon a long Series of Events. Secondly, the Author lived after the Captivity, since in the last Chapter of the second Book he recites the Decree of Cyrus, which granted their Liberty to the Jews. Besides he carries the Genealogy of David down to Zerubbabel, who was the Head of those that returned from the Captivity. Thirdly, there are certain Terms and Expressions found in these Books, which they think to be peculiar to the Person and Times of Esdras.

But if these Marks seem to prove for Esdras being the Author of these Books, here are others that seem to prove the contrary. First, the Author continues the Genealogy of Zerubbabel as far down as the Twelfth Generation. But Esdras did not live late enough for that. Secondly, in more Places than one he supposes the Things, of which he makes Mention, to be then in the same Condition as they were, for Example, before Solomon, and before the Captivity[3]. Thirdly, he that wrote these Books was neither a Contemporary nor Original, but a Compiler and Abridger. He had before him a great Number of antient Memoirs, Genealogies, Annals, Registers, and other Pieces, which he often quotes, and sometimes gives Extracts from, and sometimes only the Substance of them. Sometimes he inserts large Fragments from them, without changing any Thing, and without taking the Trouble to reconcile disagreeing Matters. From hence it is that we sometime find the Genealogy of the same Person given more than once.

It seems to us that his chief Design was exactly to exhibit the Genealogies, the Rank, the Functions, and the Order of the Priests and Levites; that at the Return from the Captivity they might the more easily assume their several Ranks, and re-enter upon their Ministries. He had also in View to shew, how the Lands had been distributed among the Families before the Captivity, that at the Return from Babylon each Tribe, as far as was possible, might obtain the ancient Inheritances of their Fathers. The Author quotes old Records by the Name of ancient Things. He recites four several Rolls or [1 Chron. iv. 22.] Numberings of the People, one taken in the Time of David, another in the Time of Jeroboam, the third in the Time of Jotham, and the fourth in the Time of the Captivity of the ten Tribes. He speaks elsewhere of the Numbers taken by Order of King David, and which Joab did not finish. Hence we may see the extreme Accuracy affected by the Jews in their Genealogies and Historical Monuments.

The Commentators have pretty much neglected the Books of Chronicles, induced thereto by a false Persuasion, that they contained few Things but what had been illustrated in the Books of Samuel and the Kings. But true it is, as St. Jerome observes[4], that these Books contain a very great Number of important Things for the Explication of Scripture, and that all the Scriptural Traditions are contained therein. Omnis traditio scripturarum in hoc continetur; and that it is deceiving our selves to imagine, that we have any Knowledge of the Holy Books, if we are ignorant of these. Absque illo, si quis scientiam scripturarum sibi voluerit arrogare, seipsum irrideat[5]. Finally he advances, that in the Chronicles we may find the Solution of an infinite Number of Questions, that concern the Gospel. Innumerabiles Evangelii explicantur quæstiones.

No body disputes the Authority or Canonicalness of the Chronicles. The ancient Hebrews made but one Book of them[6]; but in the modern Hebrew Bibles they have two Books as well as we. There are a good Number of Variations, as well in Facts as Dates, between the Books of Kings and those of the Chronicles, which may be seen explained and reconciled in the Commentators. The first Book contains a kind of Recapitulation of the sacred History, by Genealogies, from the beginning of the World to the Death of David, which happened in the Year of the World 2289, before Christ 1711, before the vulgar Æra 1715. The second Book contains the History of the Kings of Judah, and Part of those of Israel, from the beginning of Solomon only, in the Year of the World 2290, to the Return from the Captivity of Babylon, in 3468, before Christ 532, before the Vulgar Æra 536. See our Preface to the Books of Chronicles.

Paran

PARAN, El-paran, or Pharan, a Desart of Arabia Petrea, to the South of the Land of Promise, and to the North-East of the Gulph Elanitis. Chedor-laomer and his Allies coming to make War with the Kings of Pentapolis, ravaged the Country as far as the Plains of Paran[1]. Hagar being sent away from the House of Abraham, retired into the Wilderness of Paran, where she lived with her Son Ishmael[2]. The Israelites having decamped from Sinai, came into the Desart of Paran[3]. 'Twas from hence that Moses sent out Spies, to bring Intelligence concerning the Land of Promise; and consequently [Numb. xiii. 3. Numb. xiii. 26.] Kadesh is in the Wilderness of Paran, since it was from Kadesh these Men were sent. Moses seems [Deut. xxxiii. 2.] to place Mount Sinai in the Country of Paran when he says, that the Lord appeared to the Israelites upon the Mount of Paran. Habbakuk seems to say the same [Hab. iii. 3.] thing: Deus ab Austro veniet, & sanctus de monte Pharan. When David was persecuted by Saul, he withdrew into the Wilderness of Paran, near Maon and Carmel. Hadad Son of the King of Edom [1 Sam. xxv. 1, 2. 1 Kings xi. 18.] was carried when a Child into Egypt. Those that conducted him came from the Eastern Parts of Idumea (or Edom) into the Country of Midian, from thence into the Country of Paran, and then into Egypt. The greatest Part of the Habitations of this Country were dug in the Rocks[4], and 'twas there that Simon of Gerasa gathered together all that he took from his Enemies.

Paran was a City of Arabia Petrea, situate at three Days Journey from the City of Elab or Ailat towards the East[5]. 'Twas this City that gave Name to the Desart of Paran.

Paranymphus

PARANYMPHUS. This Word, according to the Force of the Greek Paranymphos, signifies, he that is near the Bridegroom, the Friend of the Bridegroom, he that performs the Solemnities of the Wedding, and conducts the Bride to the Bridegroom. The Rabbins say[1], that the principal Office of the Paranymphus was, to observe that the Bridegroom and Bride committed no Fraud in relation to the Blood, which was the Mark of the Bride's Virginity, of which Moses speaks, Deut. xxii. 14. for fear the Bridegroom should conceal the Linnen whereon the Blood appeared, or that the Bride should foist a false one upon him. John the Baptist says, that there is a great Difference between the Bridegroom and the Paranymphus. The Bridegroom is he that has the Bride, and for whom the Marriage is made; the Paranymphus, or the Friend of the Bridegroom, is contented to perform the Orders of the Bridegroom, and rejoyces to obey him. Qui habet sponsam sponsus est; amicus autem sponsi, qui stat & audit eum, gaudio gaudet propter vocem sponsi. Among the Grecians[2] the Paranymphus kept the Door of the Nuptial Bed, and had the Care and Management of the Feast, and all the other Rejoycings. There are some that think the Architriclinus mentioned in the Gospel at the Solemnity of [John ii. 8.] the Marriage of Cana was the same as the Paranymphus. Gaudentius Brixiensis assures us[3], from the Tradition of the Ancients, that commonly the President of the nuptial Feast was chosen from among the Priests, that he might take care nothing was transacted contrary to the Law, or against the Rules of Decency. 'Twas he that regulated the Order of the Officers, and the whole Disposition of the Feast. See the Article of MARRIAGE.

PARASANG. A sort of Measure or Length of Way, among the Persians. A Parasang had thirty Stadia or Furlongs, or three thousand seven hundred and fifty Paces, according to Herodotus[1]; or forty, or even sixty Stadia, according to Strabo n. Pliny observes[2], that the Measure of a Parasang was not regular among the Persians. Parasceue PARASCEUE is a Greek Word which signifies Preparation. The Jews gave the Name of Parasceue to Friday, because being [Exod. xvi. 23. xxxv. 2, 3.] not allowed on the Sabbath to prepare their Food, they provided the Day before. St. John says, that Friday on which our Saviour [John xix. 14, 31, 41.] suffered was the Preparation of the Passover, because the Passover was to be celebrated the Day following. St. Matthew marks out the [Matth. xxvii. 62.] Sabbath Day by these Words: The Day that followed the Parasceue. All the Evangelists observe, that they were in a great Hurry to take down Christ from the Cross, and to put him in the nearest Tomb, because it was the Evening of the Parasceue, and that the Sabbath was to begin immediately after the setting of the Sun, or the rising of the Stars.

Parents

PARENTS. This Word is properly said of the Father and Mother, but is extended also to all others that are related by Blood, especially in a direct Line upwards. The [Exod. xx. 12.] Scripture commands Children to honour their Parents; that is, to obey them, to succour them, to have an inward and outward Respect for them, to give them all sorts of Assistance that Nature, and their and our Circumstances shall require. This is the Extent and Signification of the Word to honour. Christ in the Gospel condemns that corrupt Explication that the Doctors of the Law gave to this [Matth. xv. 5, 6.] Precept; teaching that a Child was then disengaged from the Obligation of supporting his Parents, and giving them necessary Assistance, when he said, It is a Gift by whatsoever thou mightst be profited by me. As if they had said, I am no longer Master of my own Estate, it is consecrated to the Lord: But you will have your Share in the Merit of the Offering. See the Article CORBAN before.

Marriages among Parents and Relations were forbid within certain Degrees.

A Man was not allowed, for Example, to marry, First, his Mother; Secondly, his Mother-in-Law; Thirdly, his Sister by Father or Mother; Fourthly, his Granddaughter; Fifthly, the Daughter of his Father's Wife; Sixthly, the Sister of his Father or Mother; that is, his Aunt; Seventhly, the Wife of his Unkle by the Father's Side; Eighthly, his own Daughter-in-Law. Ninthly, the Wife of his Brother, or his own Sister-in-Law. Tenthly, It is forbid an Hebrew to marry at one Time or successively the Mother and the Daughter, the Mother and the Grand-daughter, or the Sister of his own Wife while she is alive. Here are four Verses that include all the Degrees of Relation now mentioned.

Nata, soror, neptis, matertera, fratris & uxor,

Et patrui conjux, mater, privigna, noverca, Uxorisque soror, privigni nata, nurusque, Atque soror patris conjungi lege vetantur.

Parius Lapis

PARIUS LAPIS, or Parium Marmor, a white Marble of much Esteem, which was called Parium, because it was got in the Isle of Paros, one of the Cyclades in the Archipelago. It is said in the Chronicles[1], that David had prepared a vast Quantity of Parian Marble for the building of the Temple; and in Esther[2], that the Pavement of the Place where King Abasuerus made the famous Feast for his Nobles, was paved with Emeralds and Parian Marble. 'Tis well known that the Marble of Paros was of an excellent Whiteness, and that the greatest Part of the most beautiful Works of Antiquity were made of this Marble. Josephus says[3], that the Temple of Jerusalem was built with great Stones of white Marble; so that at a Distance this vast Pile of Building appeared like a Mountain of Snow. The Seventy had probably the same Notion, when they rendered the Hebrew Word Sis, or Sais, or Shish, by Parian Marble; and St. Jerome has followed them in this. But we must own, that the Stone of Sis or Shish is intirely unknown to us. We cannot tell whether it is a Marble or a precious Stone. David mentions it in the Enumeration that he makes, of the precious Stones he had collected for the Works of the Temple; though we do not perceive the Use that Solomon employed it to; unless he made Use of it to adorn the Vessels of the Temple, or perhaps for some Ornaments of the High Priest.

As to the Passage in the Book of Esther, we read there Shish, or Sis, as in the Book of Kings; and the Septuagint and St. Jerome have in like manner rendered it by the Marble of Paros; but other Interpreters render it by plain Marble. I should rather think it to be a sort of precious Stone unknown to us, than a kind of Marble. The Ancients sometimes made Pavements, wherein were set very valuable Stones. Eò deliciarum pervenimus, ut nisi gemmas calcare nolimus, says Seneca[4]. And Apuleius thus describes the Pavement of the Apartments of Psyche: Pavimenta ipsa lapide pretioso cæsim diminuto, in varia pictura genera discriminabantur.

Part

[Psal. xvi. 5. Ps. cxlii. 5.] PART, Portion. The Lord is the Portion of mine Inheritance. Thou art my Refuge and my Portion in the Land of the Living. And on the contrary, Israel is the Part or Portion of the Lord, his peculiar [Deut. xxxii. 9.] People. The Lords Portion is his People, Jacob is the Lot of his Inheritance. But with this Difference, that God makes and constitutes the Happiness of his People, but his People cannot contribute any thing to his Happiness or Glory.

[Job xx. 29. Psal. lxiii. 10. Psal. xi. 6.] Part or Portion also signifies Recompence, or Correction. This is the Portion of a wicked Man from God, and the Heritage appointed unto him by God. They shall be a Portion for Foxes. Upon the Wicked shall reign Snares, Fire, and Brimstone, and an horrible Tempest; this shall be the Portion of their Cup. This is their Part or Portion, and the just Punishment of their Iniquity. The Lord shall appoint him his Portion with the Hypocrites. God will treat him as he does the Hypocrites.

Part or Portion is also used for the Share that a Son may claim in the Inheritance of [Luke xv. 12. Eccl. ii. 10. Eccl. iii. 22.] his Father. Father, give me the Portion of Goods that falleth to me. And Solomon, This was my Portion of all my Labour. And elsewhere, There is nothing better than that a Man should rejoice in his own Works; for that is his Portion.

Parthians

PARTHIANS, are the same as the ancient Persians. They were called Persians in the Time of the Prophets, and Parthians in our Saviour's Time. The Name Persians in Hebrew Paraschim, signifies Horsemen. The proper Name of the Persian Nation is Ælam. Probably they had the Name Peraschism given them, because of their great Inclination to Horsemanship, which continues to this Day. Neither Moses, nor any other of the sacred Writers, make any [Ezek. xxvii. 10.] mention of the Persians till towards the Time of Cyrus. Ezekiel puts the Persians among the Troops of the King of Tyre. He [Ezek. xxxviii. 5. Acts ii. 9 Judith xvi. 10.] also put some of them in the Army of Gog Prince of Magog. Judith said, that the Persians admired her Courage. Daniel often speaks of the King of the Persians, who was to destroy the Chaldean Monarchy. From the Time of Cyrus the Persian Name is known in Scripture. The Name of Parthians is only read in the Acts of the Apostles, where they appear as if distinct from the Elamites, tho' they make originally but one People. See the Article ÆLAM before Elymais was the Capital of Ælam, and Susa the Capital of the Persians. The first Epistle of St. John in several Manuscripts has the Title of the Epistle to the Parthians.

Partridge

PARTRIDGE. The Partridge is a Bird very good to eat, whose Flight is low, and of little Compass. The grey Partridges are the more common, but the red ones are the larger. There are white Partridges in the Alps, which have hairy Feet. St. Austin says[1], that the Partridge is a quarrelsome Animal, and loves Contention. In order to catch it, the same Inclination is made use of, that moves it to quarrel; by which Means it throws itself greedily into the Nets of the Fowler. Perdix nimis contentiosum animal, notum est quanta aviditate ipsius contentionis currat in laqueum. He compares Hereticks to them, who are greedy of Dispute, always striving for Victory to lead away the Simple. He applies to them this Passage of Jeremiah, As [Jer. xvii. 11.] the Partridge sitteth on Eggs, and hatcheth them not, so he that getteth Riches, and not by Right, shall leave them in the midst of his Days, and at his End shall be a Fool. St. Ambrose[2] and St. Jerome a inform us, that the Partridge carries away the Eggs of another Partridge, and sits upon them as her own; but when she has hatched them, and the young ones are able to flie, they flye away, and follow the Voice of their true Dam. Commentators explain it after the same Manner. See Vatablus, Sanctius, Munster, Tirinus, Menochius, &c. But it will be difficult to give good Proofs of this from such Authors as treat of Natural History.

[Eccl. ix. 30.] The Septuagint reads, The Partridge cry'd, it gathered together what it had not produced. Upon which Theodoret observes[3], that Fowlers make use of tame Partridges, by which they catch others; and doubtless this is what St. Austin means when he says, that the Partridge is taken by his Obstinacy, in pursuing the tame Partridge into the Net. Elian observes the same thing[4], as also the Author of Ecclesiasticus, Like as a Partridge taken and kept in a Cage, so is the Heart of the Proud; and like as a Spy, watcheth he for thy Fall. The tame Partridge makes as it were its Sport and Diversion of the Destruction of other Partridges.

Some translate the Hebrew of Jeremiah after this Manner[5], The Partridge lays many Eggs, but does not hatch them all. Because she makes her Nest upon the Ground, and is therefore often obliged to quit her Eggs, for fear of Cattle, Dogs, or Sportsmen, which chills her Eggs, and makes them unfruitful. Rain and Moisture also may spoil them, and sometimes the He-Partridge breaks them.

Others think that the Hebrew Word Kore, here translated a Partridge, rather signifies a Cuckow; Kore signifies that which cries, and the Cuckow is little known but by its crying. 'Tis said not to sit upon its own Eggs, but to lay its Eggs in other Birds Nests. This agrees well enough with what is said by Jeremiah. Nothing is more uncertain than the Signification of the Hebrew Names of Birds. We have no other Proof that the Hebrew Word signifies a Partridge, but the Testimony of the Septuagint, who thus translate it. Bochart thinks it rather signifies a Woodcock, Rusticula.

Passion

[Acts i. 3.] PASSION. This Word has several Significations, very different from one another. First, it signifies the Passion or Suffering of Jesus Christ. To whom also he shewed himself alive after his Passion. It is also put for the Sufferings of the Saints.[1] Magnum certamen sustinuistis passionum. Ye have suffered great Afflictions.[2] Et non sunt condignæ passiones hujus temporis ad futuram gloriam. Secondly, it signifies [Rom. i. 26.] shameful Passions, passiones ignominiæ, to which they are given up, whom God abandons to their own Desires. And the [Rom. vii. 5.] Passions of Sin, passiones peccatorum, which act in our Members, to bring forth the Fruit of Death. Passover

PASSOVER, or Pascha. This Word in Hebrew signifies Passage. The Jews pronounce it Pesach. Some have thought to derive it from the Greek Verb pascho, patior, I suffer; as if in Allusion to the Passion of Jesus Christ; but its true Etymology is from the Hebrew Verb pasach, to pass, to leap or skip over. They gave the Name of Passover to the Festival which was established in Commemoration of the coming forth out of Egypt[1], because the Night before their Departure, the destroying Angel who put to Death the First-born of the Egyptians, passed over the Houses[2] of the Hebrews without entering therein, because they were marked with the Blood of the Lamb, which was kill'd the Evening before, and which for this Reason was called the Paschal Lamb.

P 3 5 3 THE JEWISH PASSOVER. Vol. II Ee

This is what God ordained concerning [Exod. xii.] the Passover of the Jews. The Month of the coming forth from Egypt[3] was look'd upon from this Time to be the first Month of the Sacred or Ecclesiastical Year, and the fourteenth Day of this Month, between the two Vespers, that is, between the Sun's Decline and his Setting; or rather according to our manner of reckoning, between Two a-clock in the Afternoon and Six a-clock in the Evening at the Equinox, they were to kill the Paschal Lamb, and to abstain from leavened Bread. The Day following being the fifteenth, counting from Six a-clock of the foregoing Evening which concluded the fourteenth, was the grand Feast of the Passover, which continued seven Days. But 'twas only the first and the seventh Day that were solemn. The Lamb that was kill'd ought to be without any Defect, a Male, and yean'd that Year. If no Lamb could be found, they might take a Kid. They kill'd a Lamb or a Kid in every Family; and if the Number of those that lived in the House was not sufficient to eat a Lamb, they might join two Houses together.

With the Blood of the Paschal Lamb they sprinkled the Door-posts and Lintel of every House, that the destroying Angel at the Sight of the Blood might pass over them, and save the Hebrew Children. They were to eat the Lamb the same Night that followed the Sacrifice; they eat it roasted, with unleavened Bread, and a Sallad of wild Lettices. The Hebrew says literally, with bitter Things, as suppose Mustard, or any thing of this Nature to give a Relish. It was forbid to eat any Part of it raw, or boiled in Water, nor were they to break a Bone; but it was to be eaten intire, so much as the Head, the Feet, and the [Exod. xii. 46. Numb. ix. 12. John xix. 36. Numb. ix. 13.] Bowels; and if any thing remained to the Day following, it was thrown into the Fire. They that eat it were to be in the Posture of Travellers, having their Reins girt, their Shoes on their Feet, their Staves in their Hands, and eating in a Hurry. But this last part of the Ceremony was but little observed, at least it was of no Obligation, but only upon that Night they came forth out of Egypt. For the whole eight Days of the Passover no leavened Bread was to be used; and whoever should eat any, was threatned to be cut off from his People. They kept [Exod. xii. 16.] the first and last Day of the Feast, yet so as that it was allowed to dress Victuals, which was forbidden on the Sabbath-day.

The Obligation of keeping the Passover was so strict, that whoever should neglect to do it was condemned to Death. Exterminabitur anima illa de populis suis. But those who had any lawful Impediment, as a Journey, Sickness, or any Uncleanness, voluntary or involuntary; for Example, those that had been present at a Funeral, or by any other Accident had been defiled, were to defer the Celebration of the Passover till the second Month of the Ecclesiastical Year, or to the fourteenth Day of the Month Jiar, which answers to April and May. 'Twas thus the Lord ordered Moses, upon the Occasion of the Enquiry of some Israelites, who had been obliged to pay their last Offices to some of their Relations, and who being thus polluted, were not capable of partaking of the Paschal Sacrifice. We see an Example of the Execution of this Law under Hezekiah[4]. This holy King having resolved to cause a solemn Passover to be celebrated by all his Subjects, it was remonstrated to him, that the Priests had not had Leisure to purify themselves in so great a Number, as was necessary for this Solemnity. Therefore it was resolved that the Celebration of it should be put off till the Month following, when it was celebrated accordingly.

We may add to what has been said above concerning the last Passover, that the Oriental Christians[5], and especially the Syrians, insist, that on the Year that Christ died the Feast was celebrated on the thirteenth of the Month Adar, being Saturday, and that it began at the Conclusion of the Friday before; and that our Saviour forestall'd it by a Day, and celebrated it on the Friday, beginning from the Evening of the Thursday before, because he was to suffer on the Friday. Calvisius also places the same Passover on the Saturday the fourth of April, in the thirty-third Year of the Vulgar Æra, the thirty-fifth of Jesus Christ, which falls in the 344th Year of Alexandra.

The Ceremonies with which the modern Jews celebrate their Passover, are such as these[6]. The Feast continues a Week, but the Jews that live out of Palestine extend it to eight Days, according to an ancient Custom, by which the Sanhedrim sent two Men on purpose to observe the first Appearance of the new Moon, and immediately to give Notice of it to the chief of the Council. For fear of failing in what they ought to do, they[7] kept two Days of the Festival. One was called dies latentis lunæ, and the other dies apparentis lunæ. So that the two first Days of the Passover, and the two last also are solemn; insomuch that on these two Days they were not to labour, or treat of any Business. But it is allowed to prepare Victuals, and to remove from Place to Place, whatever they have occasion for. For the four intervening Days it is only forbid to work; but they may manage their Money, and these Days are distinguished from Working-days only by some particular Things.

During the eight Days of the Feast, the Jews eat only unleavened Bread, and it is not allowed them so much as to have in their Custody any Leaven or Bread leaven'd. And the better to observe this Rule, they examine all over the House with a very scrupulous Care, to take away whatever may have any Ferment in it. For this End they search into all the Holes and Corners of their Apartments, their Boxes and Repositories, and then having well cleared their Houses, they cause them to be white-wash'd; and they either furnish them with Goods that are quite new, or with such at least for that Day. If they have been used before, and are made of Metal, they make them pass again through the Forge, and polish them. At Evening before the Vigil of the Feast, the Master of the House searches all the House over, to see if he can find any leavened Bread. Towards eleven a-clock the Day following, they burn Bread, to shew that the Prohibition of leavened Bread is then begun; and this Action is accompanied with a Form of Words, declaring that they have no Leaven in their Custody, at least that they believe so, and have used their utmost Care that it may be so.

Presently after they set about making unleavened Bread, which they call Mazzoth; and make enough of it to serve all the eight Days of the Feast. They take care that the Flour they use has not been wet, or warm'd, for fear it may have been fermented. They make it into large and thick Cakes, of different Figures; and that they may not rise, they bake them immediately in the Oven, and when they take it out, they keep it with great Cleanliness. Some make their Cakes with Eggs and Sugar, for Persons that are nice and sick; these they call Mazza aschiras, that is to say, rich Cake without Leaven.

On the fourteenth Day of Nisan the First-born of every Family are used to fast, in Memory of what happen'd the Night following, when God smote the First-born of Egypt. At Evening they go to Prayers, and at their Return they sit down to Table, which is prepared in the Day-time, and as well furnished out as their Circumstances will allow. And in order to observe the Command, that the Lamb must be eaten with unleavened Bread, and with bitter Herbs, they have in a Dish, or in a Basket, some Part of the Lamb or the Kid ready prepared with bitter Herbs, such as Sellary, Succory, or Lettuce, and a little Plate of Sauce. This Basket, and this little Equipage, is to put them in mind of the Lime and the Bricks that their Ancestors were forced to make in Egypt; and holding Glasses of Wine in their Hands, they tell of the Hardships their Forefathers endured there, and of the Wonders that God performed to deliver them from thence. Lastly, they return Thanks to God for these Mercies, and repeat Psal. cxii. Benedic anima mea Domino, & omnia quæ intra me sunt nomini sancto ejus, and those that follow, beginning with Hallelujah; after which they go to Supper. When they have supp'd, they go on to say and sing the rest of these Psalms, and other Thanksgivings proper for the Day; and then go to Bed. The Day following they do the same things over again.

The Morning Prayers are the same as those which are said upon other Festivals, unless they add what is peculiar to this, with the Psalms before-mentioned, from cxii, to cxviii. inclusive. They take the Roll of the Pentateuque out of the Chest, and read as far as the twelfth Chapter of Exodus, which contains the Institution of the Passover; and what is contained in the eighteenth Chapter of Numbers, relating to the Sacrifices proper to this Feast. Then the Prayer Mussaph; and afterwards they read out of the Prophets whatever has any Relation to what has been read out of the Pentateuque[8]. Then after Dinner they make a Commemoration of the Festival, and they give a Blessing for the Prince under whose Dominion they live, and pray to God that he would preserve him in Peace and Happiness, and that his Undertakings may be prosperous, that his Dominions may be enlarged, and that he may cherish their Nation. According to that Advice of Jeremiah, Seek the Peace of the City, whither I have caused you to be carried away Captives, and pray unto the Lord for it; for in the Peace thereof shall ye have Peace.

The same Things are put Practice the two following Days. This Festival is concluded by the Ceremony Habdala, or Distinction. This Ceremony is performed at the closing of the Sabbath-day, at which Time the Master of the House pronounces certain Words, and certain Benedictions, to desire that every thing may succeed well the Week that is coming. At going out of the Synagogue they go to eat leavened Bread for the last Time.

From the second Evening of the Passover they reckon nine and forty Days to the Feast of Weeks, or Pentecost. And from the Day after the Passover they reckon thirty three Days, during which they nei-ther marry, not cut out new Cloaths, nor cut their Hair, nor celebrate any publick Rejoycing; but they spend this Time in a kind of Mourning, because of a great Mortality which happened as they say, a-mong the Disciples of the Rabbin Akiba. The thirty-third Day is kept with Joyful-ness, and is observed as a Festival, because on this Day the Mortality ceased. This Day is called Lag, because the two Hebrew Letters L and G stand for 33, according to their numerical Value.

The Rabbins inform us of other Parti-culars, which are omitted by Leo of Mo-dena. As for Example; that if any one neglects to remove the Leaven out of his House, he incurs the Penalty of the Whip. He that eats it by Mistake, and without knowing of it, is to pay a Fine. They may either burn the Leaven that they find, or reduce it to Crumbs, and cast it into the Water. When the Women have made their unleavened Bread, they take great Care that it may not grow sour, they make haste to set it in the Oven, that it may not have Time for that, they sprinkle Water over it to keep it from burning. Some carry their Scrupulosity so far, as not to name the Word Leaven before their Chil-dren, for fear they should have a mind to it; in like manner, as they do not call Pork by its Name[9], that they may not make it too well known.

To search the more narrowly for lea-vened Bread, they light a Candle at Noon-day, and examine every Hole and Corner, to discover the least Crumb of leavened Bread; and that the Matter may not seem to be either affected or ridiculous, they hide a bit of Bread in some Corner, of which they make the Discovery with great Joy. When all this is over, the Master of the House reserves so much leavened Bread as may suffice for his Family to the fourteenth of Nisan, and burns the rest, saying, that all the leavened Bread in his House, as well what he has found as what he has not, may become as the Dust of the Earth, and come to nothing. They are careful in choosing the Wheat or Barley that is to be used in making the unleavened Bread; and they take all possible Caution to hinder it from growing sour, or fermenting, whether be-fore or after the Grinding. They take care of the Bag it is put in, and will not carry it to the Mill on any Horse's Back, that it may not heat. They mingle neither But-ter nor Salt, nor Oil with the unleavened Bread, for fear they should cause any Fer-mentation. It must be a Jew that is to knead it, and the most famous Rabbi's have not disdained to take this Trouble upon them.

While the Temple was in being the Jews sacrificed a Lamb in the Temple, be-tween the two Evenings, that is, after the Noon of the 30th of Nisan, from about Two a-clock to Six in the Evening. Each private Person brought them to the Tem-ple, and there slew them; then they of-fered the Blood to the Priests, who poured it out at the Feet of the Altar. The Per-son himself, or the Levite upon this Oc-casion, might cut the Throat of the Vic-tim, but the Effusion of the Blood at the Foot of the Altar was appropriated to the Priest alone. Philo says P, that at this Feast the Levite, and even a Jewish Layman, might perform the Priests Function; which is to be understood in the Sense we have now explained it.

On the Vigil of the Feast the Matron of the Family sets out the Table in the neatest Manner She can; on which are set two unleavened Cakes, two Pieces of the Lamb, a Shoulder roasted, to put them in mind that God delivered them with a stretched-out Arm. The other Piece is boiled, in Memory of the Sacrifice. To this they add, as is said[10], some small Fishes, because of the Leviathan; a hard Egg, because of the Bird Ziz; some Meat, be-cause of the Behemoth. (The Leviathan, the Behemoth, and the Ziz, are three Ani-mals appointed for the Feast of the Elect in the other Life.) Nuts and Pease for the Children, to provoke their Curiosity to ask Reasons for this Ceremony. They have a kind of Mustard that has the Ap-pearance of Mortar, which was heretofore made of Dates, and dried Figs, and at present is made of Chesnuts and Apples, to represent the Labour of making Bricks: They call it Charoteth[11]. The Father of the Family sits down to Table along with his Children and Slaves; because on this Day all are free. Being sat down, the chief of the Family takes of the bitter Herbs about the Bigness of an Olive, which he dips in the Charoteth, eats it, and distri-butes to the rest.

When they have done eating, they withdraw a little from Table, and then a young Lad, whose Business it is to give out the[12] Hymn, proposes several Questions concerning the Original of these Ceremonies. Why on this Night they must eat none but unleavened Bread? Why they make use of none but bitter Herbs? &c. They sit again to the Table, and the Father of the Family explains the History and the Ceremony of the Paschal Lamb, and of all the Ceremonies that accompany it. He concludes with Prayer, and by exhorting the rest to pray for the Restoration of Jerusalem, and of the ancient Sacrifices, that they may there eat the Paschal Lamb, and make God propitious to them by his Blood. He gives Thanks to the Lord, for having procured their Ancestors such a glorious Deliverance. When Prayer is ended, he washes his Hands, and taking one of the unleavened Loaves, he breaks it and blesses it. He does not bless the other Loaves upon the Table, because that Night they are to be contented with a little bit of Bread. For it is the Bread of Affliction, Bread appointed for Slaves and miserable Wretches.

He mingles this Bread with the bitter Herbs, and the Charoseth, and eats it, praising God for having given this Ordinance to his People. Then he takes a bit of the Lamb, which he eats, giving Thanks to God in the same Manner. Afterwards he takes another little bit of Bread, and then he must eat no more. But they drink a third and a fourth Cup of Wine, in which some Water is mix'd. They thunder out Psalms and Thanksgivings, while this Action is performing. Heretofore, and before the Destruction of the Temple, the Paschal Lamb was to be intirely roasted; but at present they think it is not allowed them to make use of the Lamb either intirely roasted, or intirely boiled; because that would be to offer Sacrifices, and to eat them out of Jerusalem and the Temple. But they roast one Part of it, and boil another, or they take away a Part of the Animal, that it may not be intire, and so cannot pass for a Sacrifice.

To fix the Beginning of the Lunar Month, and consequently of the Feast of the Passover, which was celebrated on the 14th Day of the Moon of March, the Rabbins inform us[13], that their Ancestors placed Centinels upon the Tops of Mountains, to observe the Moment of the Appearance of the new Moon, and that as soon as they had seen it, they ran in all haste to give notice to the Sanhedrim, who dispatch'd Messengers to the neighbouring Cities, to inform them that the Neomenai was begun. But it is very likely that the ancient Jews never made use of these Precautions, being subject to such great Inconveniencies, especially as to distant Cities: And we can observe no Footsteps of this either in Josephus or Philo, and much less in Scripture. Besides it appears to us as certain, that the old Hebrews did not use Lunar Months, which overthrows this whole System of the Rabbins. See the Articles MONTHS and YEARS.

[1 Cor.v.8.] As to the Christian Passover, it was instituted by Jesus Christ, when at the last Supper he eat with his Apostles, he gave them his Body to eat, and his Blood to drink, under the Species of Bread and Wine; and when the Day after he gave up his Body to the Jews, who condemned it to Death, and caused it to be crucify'd by the Hands of the Executioners. The Paschal Lamb that the Jews kill'd, tore to pieces, and eat, and whose Blood preserved them from the Hand of the destroying Angel, was only a Type and Figure of our Saviour's Death and Passion, and of his Blood spilt for the Salvation of the World. This Passover is celebrated every Year with great Solemnity in the Christian Church, the Sunday after the fourteenth of the Moon of March, or Easter-day; but it ought to be celebrated in Sincerity, in Innocence, and in Truth, which are represented by Bread without Leaven. There is offered the holy Sacrifice of the Altar, which is the Memorial as well as the Substance of that which Jesus Christ offered upon the Cross, and of which the Sacrifice of the Paschal Lamb was only the Symbol. Every Day the same Sacrifice is repeated in a great many Places; so that we may say the Church celebrates the Christian Passover every Day .

Even from the Beginning there was a Diversity of Sentiments, and of Practice, about the Celebration of this Passover. From the Time of St. Polycarp the Churches of Asia kept the Passover, or Easter-Day, on the fourteeth Day of the Moon of March, whatsoever Day that might happen upon, in Imitation of the Jews; and the Romish Church kept it, as they do still, on the Sunday that followed the fourteenth Day of the Moon of March. Polycarp came to Rome in the Pontificate of Anicetus, and conferred with him upon this Subject; but neither of them being able to persuade the other to depart from their Custom, they thought they ought not to disturb the Peace of the Church about a Matter that was meerly of Custom. The Dispute upon this Subject growing warm under the Pontificate of Pope Victor, about the Year 188, the Asiaticks continued obstinately fix'd to their Practice, and Polycrates Bishop of Ephesus, with the other Bishops of Asia, having writ to the Pope a long Letter to support their Opinion, Victor sent Letters through all the Churches, by which he declared them excommunicate. The other Churches did not approve of this Rigour of Victor, and notwithstanding his Sentence, they continued united in Communion with those who still went on to keep Easter on the fourteenth Day of the Moon of March.

Things continued in this Posture till the Council of Nice, held in 325, with this Difference however, that the greatest part of the Churches of Asia were insensibly fallen into the Practice of the Romans, and no longer kept Easter-Day on the fourteenth Day of the Moon of March, but on the Sunday following. The Council of Nice made a general Determination, which ordained, that all the Churches should celebrate Easter- Day on the Sunday that followed the fourteenth Day of the Moon of March; and the Emperor Constantine caused this Decree to be published through the whole Roman Empire. Those that continued in their old Practice, notwithstanding this Decree, were look'd upon as Schismaticks in the Church, and had the Name of Quartodecimans given them, or Partisans of the fourteenth Day; and in Greek they call'd them Tessares-decatites. The Ecclesiastical Histories may be consulted for this, to which this Affair properly belongs. 'Tis a famous Question among Commentators, whether or no our Saviour kept the Legal and Jewish Passover the last Year of his Life. Some have thought that our Saviour did not keep the Passover the last Year of hisLife, but that the Supper he eat with his Disciples on the Thursday Evening, when he instituted the Sacrament of his Body and Blood, was an ordinary Meal, where there was no Paschal Lamb eaten. Others have said[14], that our Saviour had anticipated the Passover, that he kept it the Thursday in the Evening, and the other Jews only on the Friday. Others have advanced that the Galileans kept the Passover on Thursday, as Jesus Christ did; but that the other Jews kept it on Friday. Lastly, it is the most general Opinion of the Christian Church at this Day, as well Greek as Latin, that our Saviour kept the Legal Passover on the Thursday Evening, as well as the rest of the Jews.

The Evangelists St. Matthew, St. Mark, and St. Luke, seem favourable enough to the Opinion which would have it, that he kept the Passover on the Thursday Evening, as also the other Jews. But we must own, that St. John seems to contradict it, since he says that Jesus being at Table with his Disciples, [John xiii. 1, 2, &c.] before the Feast of the Passover, when Jesus knew that his Hour was come,&c. And afterwards when the Jews had led Jesus to Pilate, that he might condemn him and put [John xviii. 28.] him to Death, he observes, that they themselves went not into the Judgment-Hall, lest they should be defiled, but that they might eat [John xix. 14.] the Passover. Lastly, he says, that Friday was the Preparation of the Passover, and that the Saturday following was the great [John xix. 31.] Day of the Feast, the Sabbath-day, for that Sabbath-day was an high Day; and why so, if not because it was the Passover? And 'twas for this that the Friday before was the Parasceue, or Preparation of the Passover, which was to be celebrated the Day following.

In the Dissertation upon our Saviour's last Passover, which we have published before our Commentary upon St. Matthew, we have endeavoured to shew, that our Saviour did not celebrate the Passover the last Year of his Life; at least that the Jews did not celebrate it but upon Friday, the Day of his Death, and that he died upon Calvary at the same Hour that the Jews offered the Paschal Sacrifice in the Temple; so that the Substance and the Shadow coincided, and were executed at the same Time as it were by Concert. We have quoted several of the Ancients who have thought as well as we, that the true Day of the legal Passover fell this Year upon the Friday, the Day on which our Saviour suffered. For this Opinion may be consulted Tertullian against the Jews, c. 8. Hilarius Diaconus, or the Author of the Questions upon the Old and New Testament, qu. 55. p. 63. and qu. 94. p. 83. t. 3. oper. This Question also may be seen fully discuss'd by F. Lamy, and by M. Toynard; and to examine this Matter to the Bottom, all those should be consulted that have handled this Question both Ways; M. de Tillemont, F. Hardouin, and the Commentators upon St. Matthew and St. John.

The Word Pascha is taken, First, for the passing over of the destroying Angel. Secondly, for the Paschal Lamb. Thirdly, for the Meal at which it was eat. Fourthly, for the Festival instituted in Memory of the coming out of Egypt, and the Passage of the destroying Angel. Fifthly, for all the particular Victims that were offer'd during the Paschal Solemnity. Sixthly, for the unleavened Bread that was eat for the whole eight Days of the Passover. Seventhly, for all the Ceremonies that preceded and accompanied this Solemnity.

Pastophoria

PASTOPHORIA. This Word is originally Greek. 'Tis derived from Pastos or Pastus, which signifies one of those great Veils of several Colours, which was at the Gates of Temples, especially in Egypt. The Priests that had the Care of lifting up or drawing this Veil, were called Pastophori, and the Apartments near the Temple where they lodged were called Pastophoria[1]. The most ancient Greek Interpreters of Scripture, writing in Egypt, have often made use of the Word Pastophoria, to signify the Apartments that were along the Courts of the Temple. Instead of which St. Jerome uses the Word Thalanis taken from Symmachus, or Gazophylacia taken from Aquila. In the Temple of Jerusalem there were two Courts, surrounded with Galleries, and all round about were several Lodging-Rooms for the Priests, and to lay up Wood, Wine, Oyl, Salt, Meal, Spices, Vestments, valuable Vessels, and Provisions necessary for the Sacrifices, Lamps, Incense, as also for the Support and Maintenance of the Priests. The Word Pastophoria is not found in the Latin Text of the Scripture, only in the first Book of Maccabees iv. 38. 57. But it is often met with in the Septuagint, and answers to the Hebrew[2] Lishca, Sochen, Miselah, and Salechet. It is mentioned also in the first Book of Esdras, vii. 59. ix. 1.

Clemens Alexandrinus[3] describing the Temples of the Egyptians, says, that after having pass'd through magnificent Courts, you are conducted to a Temple, which is at the farther end of these Courts, and then a Pastophorus gravely lifts up the Veil which is at the Door, to shew you the Deity within, which is nothing but a Dog or a Cat, or some other Animal. These Pastophori carried also the Shrine or the Niche of these ridiculous Divinities, [Amos v. 26. Acts vii. 43.] when they were carried in Procession. Apuleius[4] speaks of the Pastophori that carried the Syrian Goddess. Such also were those idolatrous Israelites, who in the Desart carried the Niche of the God Moloch. The Word Pastophorium has pass'd from the Pagans to the Christians. They have given the Name of the Pastophorion to the Apartments that were joining to the great Churches[5]. Let the Church be oblong, turned towards the East, having Apartments (pastophorias) on the two Sides, and let it be something of the Form of a Ship.

Pathmos

[Rev. i. 9.] PATHMOS, an Island of the Ægean Sea, one of the Sporades, whither the Apostle and Evangelist St. John was banished, in the Year of Christ, or of the common Æra 94. 'Twas in this Island that he had his Revelations or Apocalypsis. The greatest Part of Interpreters think, that he writ them in the same Place, during the two Years of his Exile; but others think, that he did not commit them to Writing, till after his Return to Ephesus. The Island of Pathmos is between the Island of Icaria and the Promontory of Miletus. Nothing has done it more Honour, than to have been the Place of the Banishment of St. John. 'Tis now called Patino, or Pactino, or Patmol. Its Circuit is five and twenty or thirty Miles. It has a City called Patmos, with a Harbour, and some Monasteries of Greek Monks. They shew you a Cave, where they pretend St. John writ his Revelations.

Pathros

PATHROS, or Phaturis, a City and Canton of Egypt, of which the Prophets Jeremiah [Jerem. xliv. 1, 15. Ezek. xxix. 14. xxx. 14. Isai. xi. 2. Gen. x. 14. Gen. x. 14.] and Ezekiel make mention. We do not very well know its Situation, though Pliny[1] and Ptolemy the Geographer speak of it by the Name of Phaturis, and it appears to have been in Upper Egypt. Isaiah calls it Pathros, and 'tis the Country of the Pathrusim, the Posterity of Mizraim, of whom Moses speaks. Ezekiel threatens them with an entire Ruin. The Jews retired thither notwithstanding the Remonstrances of Jeremiah, and the Lord says by Isaiah, that he will bring them back from thence.

Patience

PATIENCE, patient. The Patience of Job is commended, who, in the midst of the Misfortunes which God permitted him to be [James v. 11. 1 Pet. iii. 20.] afflicted with, did not utter one Word that denoted Impatience. The Patience of God, which invites us to be converted, and delays to punish us, is another kind of Patience. 'Tis the Effect of his Mercy, and of his infinite Power, who does not hasten his Vengeance, because 'tis always in his Power to inflict it when he pleases. The Patience [Ps. ix. 19. Ps. lxx. 5.] of the Poor, which shall not be lost; Patientia pauperum non peribit in finem. And, Thou art my Patience and my God. Tu es patientia mea, Domine. This is another thing; for Patience in this Place rather signifies Hope and Expectation. The Hope which the Poor has placed in God, shall not [Matth. xxviii. 26. Luke xviii. 7. Luke viii. 15.] be in vain. Patientiam habe in me, & omnia reddam tibi. Have Patience with me, stay yet a little while, give me Credit for a few Days, and I will pay you all. Fructum afferunt in patientia. They bring forth Fruit with Patience. They must wait till the Time comes.

Patriarchs

PATRIARCHS. This Name is given to the antient Fathers, chiefly to those that lived before Moses, as Adam, Lamech, Noah, Shem, Phaleg, Heber, Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, Judah, Levi, and the other Sons of Jacob, and the Heads of the twelve Tribes. The Hebrews call them Princes of the Tribes, or Heads of the Fathers, Roshe Aboth. The Name Patriarch come from the Greek Word Patriarcha, which signifies Head of a Family. 'Tis by an Extention and Imitation of the Name of the first Fathers of the Old Testament, that in the Christian Church the Name of Patriarch is given to the Bishops of the first Churches of the East, as Antioch, Alexandria, Jerusalem, and Constantinople; as also to the first Founders of Religious Orders, as St. Basil, St. Bennet, St. Austin, &c.

After the Destruction of the Temple of Jerusalem by the Romans, and the Dispersion of the Jews, as a Consequence of it, that unfortunate Nation was without King, without Temple, without Sacrifices, without Altar, without Priests, without Ephod, without any solemn Exercise of their Religion. For as to what was still kept up in their Synagogues, it was but the Shadow of a Part of what was before performed in their Temple. They offered neither Offering nor Sacrifice, there was no Altar of Incense, none of Shewd Basnage, History of the Jews, t. 2. l. 4. c. 3. bread, no Candlestick, no Altar of Burnt-offerings. Even the Sacerdotal Families were so confounded with the rest, that they could no longer be distinguished. Even the Tribes and great Families themselves were involved in the utmost Disorder and Confusion.

Yet notwithstanding this Disorder, as well those Jews that continued in Palestine, as those that inhabited beyond the Euphrates, endeavoured to preserve some Form of Government among themselves, especially as to what relates to their Ecclesiastical Polity. Those of Judea chose them a Head, to whom they gave the Name of Patriarch. And those beyond the Euphrates gave their Chief the Title of Prince of the Captivity. The first governed the Jews that dwelt in Judea, Syria, Egypt, Italy, and the Provinces of the Roman Empire. The second had under his Jurisdiction all those that inhabited in Babylonia, Chaldea, Assyria, and Persia.

The Jews[1] make a great Difference between the Patriarchs of Judea, and the Princes of the Babylonish Captivity. These they call Rabbana, and the others Rabban. This last Name is as it were a Diminutive of the former. They pretend that the Princes of the Captivity descended in a direct Line from David by the Males; whereas the Patriarchs descended only by the Females. But this has very little Foundation, and they would be hard put to it to give their Proofs. However, we shall here insert what they say of it. There is much greater Probability, that the Patriarchs who resided at Tiberias, or at Japhne in Palestine, were rather of the Race of Levi than of that of David. Their Functions had relation to the Decision of Cases of Conscience, and to the Explication of the Law. This rather belongs to Priests and Levites, than to Laicks. Besides which they took Cognizance of the important Affairs of the Nation, they presided in the Synagogues, they raised certain Tributes to defray the Expences of their Visitations, and they had Officers under them, who pass'd through the Provinces, to take care of the Execution of their Orders.

If the Jews may be believed, it must be allowed, that the Establishment of Patriarchs was before the Destruction of the Temple an hundred Years. For they reckon that Hillel surnamed the Babylonian, because he came out of that Country, at his Arrival at Jerusalem was consulted about the Celebration of the Feast of the Passover, which in that Year fell upon a Saturday; that they were so well pleased with his Answer, that they made him Patriarch of the Nation, and that his Posterity rity succeeded him down to the fifth Century of the Christian Church, in which the Patriarchs of Judea were abolished.

But what gives Reasons to doubt of this pretended Antiquity of the Patriarchs of Judea is this, that neither the Scripture, nor Philo, nor Josephus make any mention of it; and that neither the Asmonean Princes, nor Herod the Great or his Successors, nor the High Priest, who were at Jerusalem, would have suffered them in Palestine with that Plenitude of Power which the Rabbins invest them with. The interfering of Jurisdiction, and the Jealousy between the two Powers, must often have happened, and History could not but have taken notice of it. Lastly, the Contradictions and Differences which are to be found among the Jewish Authors, who have given us the Succession of these pretended Patriarchs that preceded the Destruction of the Temple, is a farther Proof of their being suppositious. These Patriarchs are only known among the Rabbins that are posterior to the Talmudists, and consequently too modern to give any Credit to a thing of this Nature.

This is the List of the Patriarchs of Palestine, such as is given us by the Rabbins.

Hillel the Babylonian. 2. Simeon his Son. 3. Gamaliel Son of Simeon. 4. Simeon II. Son of Gamaliel.
Gamaliel II. Son of Simeon.
Simeon III. Son of Simeon II. 7. Judah Son of Simeon III. 8. Gamaliel III. Son of Judah.
Judah II. Son of Gamaliel III. 10. Hillel II. Son of Judah. 11. Judah III. Son of Hillel II. 12. Hillel III. Son of Judah. 13. Gamaliel IV. Son of Hillel.

David Ganz in his Chronology intituled Tzemach David; that is to say, the Offspring of David, reduces this Genealogy to ten Persons, and reckons them thus:

Hillel the Babylonian. 2. Rabban Simeon his Son. 3. R. Gamaliel Ribbona. 4. R. Simeon Son of Gamaliel. This is probably the same who ought to be reckon'd as the first Patriarch, who was established under the Government of Adrian.
Rabban Gamaliel, Son of Simeon. 6. R. Jetruda, the Prince.
Hillel the Prince, his Son.
Rabban Gamaliel the elder.
R. Simeon III. 10. R. Judah Nasi, or the Prince.

Paul

[Acts xxii. 27, 28. Acts xxvi. 4, 5. Acts xxii. 3.] PAUL, before-named Saul; he was of the Tribe of Benjamin, a Native of Tarsus in Cilicia, a Pharisee by Profession; first a Persecutor of the Church, and afterwards a Disciple of Jesus Christ, and Apostle of the Gentiles. 'Tis thought he was born about two Years before our Saviour, supposing that he lived sixty-eight Years, as we read in a Homily which is in the Sixth Tome of St. Chrysostom's Works[1]. The Ebionites[2] related several Particulars of the Education, of the Family, and of the Conversion of St. Paul; but they do not deserve to be set down here. He was a Roman Citizen, because Augustus had given the Freedom of the City to all the Freemen of Tarsus, in Consideration of their firm Adherence to his Interests. His Parents sent him early to Jerusalem, where he studied the Law at the Feet of Gamaliel a famous Doctor. He made very great Progress in his Studies, and his Life was always blameless before Men; being very zealous for the whole Observation of the Law of Moses. But his Zeal carried him too far; he persecuted the Church, and insulted Jesus Christ in his [1 Tim. i. 13.] Members; and when the Protomartyr St. Stephen was stoned, Saul was not only consenting to his Death, but he even stood by and took care of the Cloaths of those that [Acts vii. 58, 59.] stoned him; stoning him as it were by Proxy, and by the Hands of others. This happened in the thirty-third Year of the common Æra, some time after our Saviour's Death.

At the Time of the Persecution that was raised against the Church, after the Death of St. Stephen, Saul was one of those that shewed most Violence in distressing the Believers. [Gal. i. 13. Acts xxvi. 11.] He enter'd into their Houses, and drew out by Force both Men and Women, loaded them with Chains, and sent[3] [Acts viii. 3. xxii. 4.] them to Prison. He even entered into the Synagogues, where he caused those to be beaten with Rods that believed in Jesus Christ, compelling them to blaspheme the Name of the Lord. And having got Credentials from the High Priest Caiaphas, and the Elders of the Jews, to the chief Jews of Damascus, with Power to bring to Jerusalem all the Christians he should find [Acts ix. 1,2,3, &c.] there, he went away full of Threats, and breathing nothing but Blood. But as he was upon the Road, and now drawing near to Damascus, all on a sudden about Noon he perceived a great Light to come from Heaven, which encompass'd him and all those that were with him. This Splendor threw them on the Ground, and Saul heard a Voice that said to him, Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me? 'Twas Jesus Christ that spoke to him; to whom Saul answered, Who art thou, Lord? And the Lord reply'd to him, I am Jesus of Nazareth whom thou persecutest; it is hard for thee to kick against the Pricks. Saul all in Consternation ask'd, Lord what is it that thou wouldest have me do? Jesus bid him arise and go to Damascus, where the Will of the Lord should be revealed to him.

Saul then rose from the Ground, and though his Eyes were open, yet he could not see at all; but his Companions led him by the Hand, and brought him to Damascus, where he continued three Days without the Use of his Sight, and without taking any Nourishment. He lodg'd at the House of a Jew named Juda. On the third Day the Lord commanded a Disciple of his named Ananias, to go to find out Saul, to lay his Hands upon him, and to cure his Blindness. And as Ananias made Excuses, saying that this Man was one of the most violent Persecutors of the Church, the Lord said to him, Go and find him, because this Man is an Instrument that I have chosen, to carry my Name before the Gentiles, before Kings, and before the Children of Israel; for I will shew him how many things he must suffer for my Name. Ananias went therefore and found Saul, laid his Hands upon him, and restored him to his Sight; then rising, he was baptized, and fill'd with the Holy Ghost. After this having eaten, he recovered his Strength, and continued some Days with the Disciples that were at Damascus, preaching in the Synagogues, and proving that Jesus was the Messiah.

Having preached for some time at Damascus [Gal. i. 17.] , he went from thence into Arabia, probably into the Neighbourhood of Damascus, being then under the Government of Aretas King of Arabia; and having remained there for a little while, he returned to Damascus. where he began again to preach the Gospel. The Jews could not bear to see the Progress that the Gospel made here; and so resolved to put him to Death; and they gained to their Side the Governor of Damascus, who was to apprehend him, and to deliver him to them. Of this Saul had early Notice, and knowing that the Gates of the City were guarded Night and Day, to prevent him from making his Escape, he was let down over the Wall in a Basket[4]. And coming to [Acts ix. 26, 27. Gal. i. 13.] Jerusalem to see St. Peter, the Disciples were fearful of having any Correspondence with him, not believing him to be a Convert. But Barnabas having brought him to the Apostles, Saul related to them the Manner of his Conversion, and all that had followed in consequence of it. Then he began to preach both to the Jews and Gentiles, and spoke to them with such Strength of Argument, that not being able to withstand him in Reasoning, they resolved to kill him. For this Reason the Brethren brought him to Cesarea of Palestine, from whence he came, probably by Sea, into his own Country Tarsus in Cilicia.

There he continued about five or six Years, from the Year of Christ 37, to the Year 43; when Barnabas coming to Antioch by the Order of the Apostles, and there having found many Christians, went to Tarsus to see Saul, and brought him with [Acts xi. 20,25, 26.] him to Antioch, where they continued together a whole Year, preaching to and instructing the Faithful. During this Time [Acts xi. 27,28,&c.] there happened a great Famine in Judea, and the Christians of Antioch having made some Collections to assist their Brethren at Jerusalem, they made choice of Paul and Barnabas to go thither with their Offering. They arrived there in the Year of Christ 44, and having acquitted themselves of their Commission, they returned again to Antioch. They had not been there long but God warned them by the Prophets he had in this Church, that he had appointed them to carry his Word into other Places. Then the Church betook themselves to fasting and praying, and the Prophets Simeon, Lucius, and Manaen laid their Hands on them, and sent them to preach whither the Holy Ghost should conduct them. And it was probably about this Time, that is, about the Year of Christ 44, that Paul being wrapt up into the third Heaven, saw there ineffable things, and which were above the Comprehension [2 Cor. xii. 2, 3, 4. Acts xiii. 4, 5, 6.] of Man.

Saul and Barnabas went first into Cyprus, where they began to preach in the Synagogues of the Jews. When they had gone over the whole Island, they there found a certain Jewish Magician called Bar -jesus, who was with the Proconsul Sergius Paulus. This Proconsul having heard of Paul and Barnabas, sent to invite them to him, desiring to hear the Word of God. Bar -jesus did all he could to hinder the Proconsul from embracing the Christian Faith. Then Saul being filled with the Holy Ghost, and looking earnestly upon this Man, said to him; O thou that art filled with all Deceit, thou Child of the Devil, and Enemy to all Righteousness, wilt thou never cease to pervert the Ways of the Lord? Now the Hand of the Lord shall be upon thee, and thou shalt become blind for a certain Time. The Effect immediately followed the Words of Saul, and the Proconsul having seen this Miracle, became a Convert to the Faith. Many think[5] that St. Paul then first began to bear the Name of Paul, which St. Luke always gives him afterwards, in Memory of this Conversion of Sergius Paulus, which God had now brought to pass by his Means. Asterius[6] believes he changed his Name at his Conversion in the City of Damascus. St. Chrysostom[7] will have this Change to be made at his Ordination, and when he received his Mission at Antioch. Others say[8], he took the Name of Paul, which is a Latin Name, only when he began to preach to the Gentiles, and especially to the Romans. Lastly, many[9] think that he went by the Names both of Saul and Paul for his whole Life, in Imitation of many other Jews, who had one Name in Hebrew, and another in Greek or Latin. But if this were so, how comes it then, that neither St. Paul himself, nor St. Luke, nor any other Author, has given him the Name of Saul after the Conversion of Sergius Paulus, but that all universally agree to call him Paul? The Conversion of this Proconsul happened in the City of Paphos, in the forty-fifth Year of Christ.

From the Isle of Cyprus St. Paul and his Company went to Perga in Pamphylia[10], where John Mark, Barnabas's Cousin, left them to return to Jerusalem. Making no Stop at Perga, they came to Antioch in Pisidia, where going into the Synagogue, and being desired to speak, St. Paul made them a long Discourse, by which he shewed that Jesus was the Messiah foretold by the Prophets, and declared by John the Baptist; that he had been unjustly put to Death by the Malice and Jealousy of the Jews, and that he rose again the third Day. They heard him very attentively, and he was desired to discourse again on the same Subject the next Sabbath -Day; and several followed them, both Jews and Proselytes, to receive particular Instructions more at Leisure.

[Acts xiv. 1,2,3,&c.] On the Sabbath-Day following almost all the City came together, to hear the Word of God. But the Jews seeing this Concourse of People, were moved with Envy at it; and opposed themselves with Blasphemy to what St. Paul said. Then Paul and Barnabas told them boldly: You indeed are the first to whom the Word of God is to be declared, but since you reject it, we shall carry it to the Gentiles, as the Lord has commanded us. And all those who had been predestined to eternal Life believed in Jesus Christ, and the Word of the Lord prevailed exceedingly in that Country. The Jews not being able to bear this happy Progress of the Gospel, raised a Persecution against Paul and Barnabas, and drove them away from thence. Then Paul and Barnabas shaking off the Dust of their Feet against them, came from Antioch in Pisidia to Iconium. Being come thither, they preached in their Synagogue, and converted a greater Number both of Jews and Gentiles, and God confirmed their Mission by a great Number of Miracles. In the mean time the unbelieving Jews having incensed the Gentiles against Paul and Barnabas, and threatning to stone them, they were obliged to retire to Lystra and Derbe, Cities of Lycaonia, where they preached the Gospel.

At Lystra there was a Man called Æneas, who had been a Cripple in his Feet from his Mother's Womb. This Man fixing his Eyes upon St. Paul, the Apostle bid him rise and stand upon his Feet. He presently rose up and began to walk. The People seeing this Miracle cry'd out, that the Gods were descended among them in the Shape of Men. They called Barnabas, Jupiter; and Paul, Mercury; because of his Eloquence, and being the chief Speaker. The Priest of Jupiter's Temple brought also Garlands and Bulls before the Gate, intending with the People to offer Sacrifices to them. But Paul and Barnabas tearing their Cloaths, and casting themselves into the Middle of the Multitude, cried out to them, Friends, what do you do? We are Men as well as your selves, and we are preaching to you to turn away from these vain Superstitions, and to worship only the true God who has made Heaven and Earth. But whatever they could say, they had much ado to restrain them from offering Sacrifices to them.

In the mean time some Jews of Antioch in Pisidia and of Iconium, coming to Lystra, animated the People against the Apostles. They stoned Paul, and drew him out of the City, thinking him to be dead. But the Disciples gathering together about him, he rose up among them, entered again into the City, and the Day after left it to go to Derbe. And having here preached the Gospel also, they returned to Lystra, to Iconium, and to Antioch of Pisidia[11]. Passing throughout Pisidia, they came to Pamphilia, and having preached the Word of God at Perga, they went down into Attalia. From hence they set sail for Antioch in Syria, from whence they had departed a Year before. Being arrived there, they assembled the Church together, and told them the great Things God had done by their Means, and how he had opened to the Gentiles a Door of Salvation; and here they continued a good while with the Disciples.

St. Luke does not inform us of the Actions of St. Paul from the 45th Year of Christ to the Time of the Council at Jerusalem, which was held in the 50th Year of Christ. There is great Likelihood, that it was during this Interval, that St. Paul preached the Gospel from Jerusalem to Illyricum, as he informs us in his Epistle [Rom. xv. 19. Rom. x. 10.] to the Romans; and this without making any Stay in those Places, where others had preached before him. He does not acquaint us with the Particulars of these Journeys, nor with the Success of his Preaching; but he says in general, that he had suffered more Labours than any other, and had endured more Prisons. He was often very near Death itself, sometimes upon the Water, sometimes among Thieves. He run great Dangers, sometimes from the Jews, and sometimes among false Brethren and perverse Christians; he was exposed to great Hazards, as well in the Cities as in the Desarts. He suffered Hunger, Thirst, Nakedness, Cold, Fastings, Watching, and the Fatigues inseparable from long Journeys, which were undertaken without any Prospect of human Succour, in this very different from the good Fortune of others who lived by the Gospel, who received Subsistance from those to whom they preached it, and who were accompanied always by religious Women, who minister'd to them in their necessary Occasions. He made it a Point of Honour to preach gratis, working with his Hands that he might not be chargeable to any 1 Cor. ix. one; for he had learn'd a Trade, as was 1. —15. usual among the Jews, which Trade was to make Tents of Leather, for the Use of [Acts xviii. 3.] those that go to the Wars.

'Twas during this Course of his Preaching, that he received five times of the Jews [2 Cor. xi. 23. —27.] thirty-nine Stripes with a Whip: For 'twas a Custom among them not to exceed this Number of Stripes. Moses had forbidden to give above forty Blows. He tells us also, that he had been twice beaten with Rods by the Romans; that he had thrice suffered Shipwreck, that he had pass'd a Night and a Day in the Deep, which is differently interpreted. Some think that he was actually a Night and a Day at the bottom of the Sea[12], God having there miraculously preserved him, as Jonas heretofore in the Whale's Belly. Others will have it[13], that he was hid for a Night and a Day at the bottom of a Well, after the Danger he was in at Lystra, where he had been stoned. Others[14] explain it by saying, that at Cyzicus he was put into a Prison call'd Bythos, or the Deep; for this is the Term made use of by St. Paul, without adding Sea to it, as is done in the Vulgate. But the greatest part of the Fathers, as St. Chrysostom, Theodoret, Oecumenius, [2 Cor. xi.] Ambrosiaster, Thomas, and several Moderns explain it by saying, that after a Shipwreck St. Paul was a Day and a Night in the open Sea strugling against the Waves, and this Opinion seems the most reasonable. The Greek Word Buthos, when it is put by itself is commonly taken for the bottom of the Sea, or for the open Sea. But St. Paul had suffered all this before the Year of Christ 58, at which Time he wrote his second Epistle to the Corinthians.

[Acts xv. 1, 2, 3.] St. Paul and St. Barnabas were at Antioch when some Persons coming from Judea, pretended to teach, that there was no Salvation without Circumcision, and without the Observation of the other Legal Ceremonies. Epiphanius[15] and Philaster[16] say, that he that maintained this was Cerinthus and his Followers. Paul and Barnabas withstood these new Doctors, and it was agreed to send a Deputation to the Apostles and Priests at Jerusalem, about this Question. Paul and Barnabas were deputed, and being arrived at Jerusalem, they reported to the Apostles the Subject of their Commission. Some of the Pharisees that had embraced the Faith asserted, that the Gentiles that were converted ought to receive Circumcision, and to observe the rest of the Law. But the Apostles and Priests assembling to examine into this Matter, it was by them decreed, that the Gentiles who were converted to Christianity, should not be obliged to submit to the Yoak of the Law; but only to avoid Idolatry, Fornication, and the eating of Things strangled and Blood.

St. Paul and St. Barnabas were then sent back to Antioch with Letters from the Apostles, which contain'd the Decision of the Question, and the Resolution of that August Assembly. The Apostles also deputed Jude surnamed Barsabas, and Silas, who were principal Brethren, to go to Antioch with Paul and Barnabas, to give their Testimony also of what had been decreed at Jerusalem. Being arrived at Antioch they assembled the Faithful, read them the Apostle's Letter, and comforted them, by acquainting them that it had been resolved to discharge them from the Yoke of the Ceremonial Law. Silas thought fit to continue at Antioch, but Jude returned back to Jerusalem. All this passed in the fifty-first Year of Christ, according to the Vulgar Æra. Some Time after St. Peter also coming to Antioch, and joyning himself to the converted Gentiles, he lived with them without Scruple; but it happening that some Brethren coming thither from Jerusalem, he separated himself from the Gentile Converts, and did no longer eat with them. Upon this St. Paul publickly censured him for this Conduct, which indeed was blameable, and his Example might have been of dangerous Consequence.

[Galat. ii. 1, —— 16. Galat. ii. 2, 3, &c.] St. Paul, in this same Journey to Jerusalem, declared publickly to the Faithful there, the Doctrine he preached among the Gentiles; and besides he discoursed of it in private among the chief of them, in the presence of Barnabas and Titus. St. Peter, St. James, and St. John, with whom he had these Conversations, could find nothing either to be added or amended, in so pure and sound a Doctrine and Demeanour. They saw with Joy the Grace that God had given him; they acknowledged that he had been appointed the Apostle of the Gentiles, as St. Peter had been of the Circumcision. They concluded, that Paul and Barnabas should continue to preach among the Gentiles, and only recommended to them, to have Care concerning the Collections for the Poor; that is to say, to exhort the converted Christians among the Gentiles, to assist the faithful Brethren in Judea, who were in Necessity, whether it were because they had sold and distributed their goods, or because they had been taken away from them. We shall see in what follows how diligent St. [Heb. x. 34.] Paul was to acquit himself of this Commission.
